【It must be because Kim Dokja intervened. Even so, this story can't be considered official history.】

【Official history. Do you think that story is just unofficial history?】

【Yes. It's just a game to satisfy one Recorder.】

Asmodeus laughed at Bicheonhori's words.

【You're talking like you're not a Recorder.】

【Didn't you say that? The Anonymous Recorders have started reading the Time Fault.】

Asmodeus's teeth glowed white in the darkness.

【If more Recorders like that record, that record could become the official history.】

Asmodeus muttered as he gazed into the distant abyss.

【I wonder what the King of Fear thinks.】

A legend flowed from the pitch-black darkness.

The ghouls who didn't know how to scream rushed in. Athena's shield emitted light, and Artemis' arrows traced a trajectory. Apollo's heat burned the ghouls, and Dionysus, drunk, tore the flesh of the deceaseds.

Still, the ghouls were not afraid. As many ghouls fell to the Constellations' attacks, more ghouls were added.

Athena muttered as if she was fed up.

[I'm sick of it.]

Five minutes, ten minutes, fifteen minutes.

As time passed, the Constellations also began to take a hit little by little. The wounds on the limbs of the Constellations gradually increased due to the incarnations who did not fear death. It was possible because there was a 'Giant legend' that suppressed the Constellations' power.

[Giant legend 'Starlight-Eating Darkness' continues its storytelling.]

Tsutsutsut!

Blood flowed ceaselessly from the Blood Demon that drew on excessive probability. A lump of story spilled onto the floor.

Die. You damned Constellations.

The Blood Demon was laughing even as he felt his stories shatter into pieces.

He thought that he just needed to do a little more. Even if there were Narrative-grade Constellations, or even if they were the 12 great gods of Olympus, they couldn't defeat him here underground.

Greed flashed through the Blood Demon's eyes as he watched the Constellations gradually becoming more and more vulnerable.

What if he could get his hands on their incarnations? If only he could turn them into zombies.

[What a shame.]

With Athena's admiration, the pure white relic created a semicircular flash barrier centered on the four Constellations.

[Absolute Defense Zone.]

'Immortal Zone' that lasts for 10 seconds.

It was the ability of Athena's relic 'Aegis'.

The Blood Demon laughed.

"Are you trying to stall for time? It's useless."

He had been through more than half of Seoul Station, but if he pushed on like this, he would be the one who would win anyway.

"I will kill you guys and take your bodies. Then I will break through the Last Scenario. I will destroy the ark and go over the 'Final Wall'. So, I will make a wish at the end of that scenario."

The Blood Demon thought.

There is no need to regress anymore. His wish will come true in this Round.

"I will meet my sister once again—"

Blood spurted from the Blood Demon's right chest. His body shook and rolled around on the floor. His heavy breathing was mixed with blood.

Dududududu!

Bullets flying from somewhere were indiscriminately firing at the undead guarding him.

He thought that it couldn't be possible as he watched the ranks of undead collapsing. His undead couldn't be defeated by a mere bullet. Because the 'incarnation' who could do such a thing had already died a long time ago.

That's why when that being appeared at the end of the battlefield, the Blood Demon could only mutter stupidly.

"Armed Fortress Lord?"

The Armed Fortress that approached from behind the Constellations, crushing the station.

He couldn't believe it. The once Third Evil, the Armed Fortress Lord Gong Pildu, had been killed by Cheon Inho. So what on earth was he seeing now?

"What the heck."

It wasn't just Gong Pildu.

There were figures walking towards Gong Pildu.

"Steel Sword Emperor… Maritime Admiral… Even the Delusion Demon? How—"

He couldn't believe it.

The dead tyrant's companions were there.

[The Constellation, 'One Who Stabbed His Own Eye', descends on Earth!]

Athena was indignant.

[You're late, Oedipus.]

[I'm sorry.]

Oedipus, his eyes shining brightly, looked at the Blood Demon in the darkness. Then, a voice with a terrible laugh flowed out.

[Why are you so surprised? Do you think we didn't know about your abilities? Your grand legends are of no use against the 'incarnations'. That's why we brought these guys here specially.]

"That can't be."

[What are you denying, you foolish villain.]

"I saw it clearly. The Armed Fortress Master! The Steel Sword Lord! The Maritime Admiral! I saw them all die clearly. But how..."

[Do you think only the 'Evil Sophist' knows how to use the 'Deceased Summoning Technique'?]

The Blood Demon looked at the approaching incarnations with bewildered eyes.

[Who do you think gave that skill to humans in the first place?]

"Even if you guys had that skill…!"

According to the Blood Demon's memory, Gong Pildu and Lee Hyunsung were not in a condition that could be revived even with [Deceased Summoning]. That's because they were literally torn to pieces and killed.

"You guys, what on earth did you do?"

Lee Hyunsung and Gong Pildu's bodies were briefly visible in the darkness. Countless incisions were sewn onto their skin from head to toe.

The Blood Demon's shoulders trembled.

Those crazy Constellations had collected the fragments of the torn incarnations for this moment. In order to bring them back to the hell of this scenario once again.

[Oh, actually, I worked hard to save your younger sibling too.]

"What?"

[The head just couldn't be restored.]

In Oedipus's grasp was the corpse of a child hanging without a head. Familiar arms and legs. The same ones he had seen in his dream just ten minutes ago.

A strange roar burst from the Blood Demon’s throat that was neither a scream nor a roar. How long did that roar last? At some point, the sound suddenly stopped, and a strange silence filled the underground.

"You guys."

The Blood Demon’s eyes, burning red, were gleaming at the Constellations.

"From now on, not a single one of you will return alive."

---

"So this is what you came here for."

Yoo Joonghyuk, who had listened to my story to the end, looked at me with a dumbfounded expression.

"Of course. Why would I take such a risk?"

Since I invaded the Blood Demon's stronghold, I had been aiming for the Blood Demon and the Constellations' advance.

It was possible because I had already checked all the Blood Demon's skills, souls, and legends through [Character List].

"The Blood Demon must have activated 「Starlight-Eating Darkness」 by now."

A gigantic legend, 「Starlight-Eating Darkness」.

A terrifying gigantic legend that halved the power of the Constellations underground.

I wondered how a Blood Demon could have gotten such a legend, but when I searched my memory, it seemed to be a gigantic legend that the Blood Demon had obtained by interfering with something when the <Underworld> was destroyed due to Cheon Inho's sowing of discord.

Yoo Joonghyuk's eyes lit up as he listened to the story.

"The Blood Demon might as well have a chance of winning."

"As long as the Myth-grade Constellations don't descend."

"Even if the Final Scenario had begun, there’s no way the cowardly Myth-grade would just leave the ark."

I think so too. The Constellations that attacked the Blood Demon’s stronghold were probably the remnants of Olympus's legends or great men.

"Still, it’s not a situation to be optimistic about. After all, they’re also Constellations that have reached the 'Final Scenario'. They’ve lived so long that their minds have hardened, but we should never overlook their power."

Then Ye Hyunwoo, who was listening to the conversation from the side, asked.

"Then which side do you think has the upper hand? The Blood Demon or the Constellations?"

"In my opinion…"

The moment I was about to answer, a bright light rose from Anna Croft's entire body. Kim Anna's soul had finally succeeded in settling down.

I called out to 'Anna Croft of the 41st Round' from the same world line as me.

I smiled at her as she slowly opened her eyes and opened my mouth. If [Deceased Summoning] had been successful, she would understand what I was saying.

"Kim Anna-ssi, welcome back to the 40th Round of this mess."

Anna Croft did not smile at my playful greeting. She slowly blinked her eyes as if she knew what she had to do, and stared at me. The 'Eyes of the Great Devil' were swirling in her eyes.

「Future Sight.」

She had already begun to read the future of this Round.

"Come."

At the same time, the iron door shook violently. The startled Ten Evils stood up from their seats, and Yoo Joonghyuk prepared for battle.

I asked Anna.

"Who is here?"

Anna didn't answer. Judging from the way she frowned, she seemed to be suffering from the aftereffects of possessing a body.

When I sent a signal to Yoo Joonghyuk with my eyes, he stood in front of the iron gate, raising his spirits.

Perhaps because of the reassurance that the tyrant was on the same side as them, the other Ten Evils' expressions seemed much more relaxed.

Kyung Sein muttered.

"Yeah. The tyrant is on our side, so what are we afraid of? What if Zeus comes—"

I watched the situation while holding onto Ye Hyunwoo's neck, who was already preparing to disappear.

Yoo Joonghyuk said.

"The Ki-moon formation is being dismantled."

It's not being broken, but dismantled? If that's the case, then the one opening the iron gate and coming in right now...

"As expected..."

With a squeak, the iron door opened. A single figure appeared in the flickering light.

"Blood Demon."

He was covered in blood, and with his right arm missing, he was glaring at me with a menacing gaze.

I asked with a grin.

"Did you enjoy the dumplings?"

The fact that the Blood Demon had appeared here meant that he had killed the Constellations and had his subordinates surround this place.

I had to buy some time until Anna could find the answer through [Future Sight].

"Cheon Inho."

A voice as if blood was boiling flowed from the Blood Demon's throat.

I took a step back and said.

"No, would you like to talk for a moment? Come on, calm down…"

However, the Blood Demon staggered toward me, then knelt down in front of me. Then he looked up at me.

He had an expression on his face that I had never seen before.

It seemed like he was grateful, it seemed like he was laughing at me, it seemed like he was angry at me… and it seemed like he was sympathizing with me.

The Blood Demon spoke as if he was calming down all those emotions.

"You are now the last of humanity."

With a slap, the Blood Demon's head fell to the ground. Something had cut off the Blood Demon's neck.

In that unrealistic scenery, I slowly raised my head. A shiver ran down my spine.

A skill that could kill a Blood Demon-level master with a single swing.

I knew what this skill was. A wounded swordsman who trained and trained again with the sword, and eventually reached the pinnacle of swordsmanship, created a finishing move.

"Instant Kill."

The moment I raised my head, a flash of light flashed before my eyes.

I felt time slowing down. It was too late to use [Incite]. The moment the distant feeling came over me, a man in a pitch-black coat was standing before my eyes.

"Step back."

A loud explosion and a bouncing, straight shot.

Tsk tsk tsk.

A spark bursting out fiercely.

Yoo Joonghyuk's penalty, 「Curse of the Stars」, had been activated.

「When Yoo Joonghyuk fights against an incarnation, his level is reduced to one-tenth.」

A group of Constellations could be seen walking from afar. Athena, Apollo, Artemis, Dionysus. Four out of the Twelve Gods of <Olympus> were there.

The Constellations approached, killing the corpses that had gone mad after the Blood Demon died one by one.

And the incarnations that stood guard over them.

Yoo Joonghyuk was looking at the incarnations with eyes that could not read his expression.

From Lee Jihye, who had just used Instant Kill on me, to Lee Hyunsung, Gong Pildu, and even Kim Namwoon.

Looking at their appearances, which were all piled up like old dolls, it was clear what had happened.

The damn Constellations had revived them with [Deceased Summoning].

[What a strange thing, Supreme King, how did you come back to life? Your soul must have already left this world line?]

A subtle strangeness flashed through Apollo's eyes.

[Take him to Hermes. It might be worth studying.]

At the same time, the four incarnations surrounded Yoo Joonghyuk.

"You idiots. Come to your senses."

The four incarnations did not respond to Yoo Joonghyuk's threats.

Judging from their appearances, it seemed that they had not been revived with a simple [Deceased Summoning]. Perhaps they had used a high-level brainwashing skill, or they had already summoned and transplanted a destroyed soul.

In either case, it was the worst possible situation.

[Supreme King, these are your comrades. You know very well that no matter what you do, you cannot win.]

"…"

[If you surrender now, I will give you a chance to board the ark with us.]

A chance to board the ark.

Apollo was making a proposal to Yoo Joonghyuk right now. To him, a mere incarnation, they will give him the same 'qualification' as the Constellations in the Last Scenario.

Of course, the answer was set.

"I refuse."

The power of a Transcendent bloomed from his entire body.

Yoo Joonghyuk jumped forward in an instant and swung his Hwangcheon-wolguk toward the front.

"No matter how many times I regress, I will never ride the same ship as you guys."

The formation guarded by the four incarnations collapsed after only drawing a single trajectory. It was an unbelievable power to have displayed only one-tenth of his power.

After all, that Yoo Joonghyuk was a madman who broke through the encirclement of the great Constellations and killed Ares even without Hwangcheon-wolguk.

"Lee Hyunsung. If you block, you'll die."

Lee Hyunsung's front was cut wide by the Hwangcheon-wolguk's blade that shot out like a flash. I felt strange at his movements, completely unaware that he had once been his comrade.

I know. That's Yoo Joonghyuk. This situation wasn't the first time. Even so, I felt strange seeing that guy.

"Evil sophist. There's no time. The tyrant is overdoing it. He can't last long against the incarnations."

My mind was complicated as I listened to Ye Hyunwoo's advice. What can I do now? What can I do to 'properly' save that Yoo Joonghyuk?

That's when Anna Croft muttered from behind.

"Staging."

Staging?

"Get out!"

Along with Yoo Joonghyuk's shout, a hail of bullets swept across the front. A few bullets grazed my side, causing a dizzying pain.

These were Gong Pildu's bullets that had reached the Final Scenario.

Yoo Joonghyuk swung his spear and protected his party while taking the bullets head-on.

Suga-gak!

Lee Jihye and Kim Namwoon's sharp blades cut Yoo Joonghyuk's arms and legs.

Boom! Lee Hyunsung’s heavy fist struck Yoo Joonghyuk’s stomach.

Even as he let out a gasp, Yoo Joonghyuk didn’t take a single step back.

Not a single step.

"Cheon Inho."

That single step was so heavy that I realized a little late that he had called me.

The moment our eyes met, I realized what Yoo Joonghyuk was thinking. The terrible thoughts I was having right now were also Yoo Joonghyuk's thoughts.

"Use 「Staging」."

Actually, I knew. Even before I heard Anna Croft’s words, I knew what I had to do now.

That’s because the memories of death that came to my mind clearly the moment I saw Lee Hyunsung, Gong Pildu, Lee Jihye, and Kim Namwoon again.

That’s right.

Right now, those people in front of me—

"They’re all people you’ve killed."

They all died 'once' at the hands of Cheon Inho.

849 Episode 45 Ten Evils (7)

"Cheon Inho! That's it! Use 「Staging」!"

It seemed that Ten Evils had belatedly come to the same realization as Yoo Joonghyuk.

"There must be a story that you got from defeating those guys!"

There is.

There must have been stories inside me that I was afraid to even recall.

[Story, 'Destroyer of the Underworld', is wriggling inside you.]

[Story, 'Jester of Hell', awaits your choice.]

[Story, 'Star Mocking Feast', awaits your mockery.]

Stories, all of which were created by piling up terrible evil deeds.

Stories are memories. The incarnations that died during their creation.

[Stories await your reenactment.]

I hesitated. Was it really okay to reenact these stories here?

While I hesitated, Oedipus's order was given.

[The rest, except for the Supreme King, die.]

The incarnations that had taken over Yoo Joonghyuk's defense began to launch a full-scale offensive.

Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body was stricken by Lee Jihye and Kim Namwoon's consecutive attacks, and Yoo Joonghyuk's face turned pale every time Lee Hyunsung's [Mt. Taesang Smash], which took advantage of the gap, struck.

On top of that, Gong Pildu's [Magic Turret] poured out without a hitch.

[Indeed.]

Oedipus was watching us from behind the armed fortress, with the four Constellations.

To be honest, it was a bit disappointing. Apollo and Artemis are one thing, but Athena is the goddess of justice... Damn, she came to judge the Ten Evils, so it isn't strange?

But isn't it a bit strange that Dionysus is involved? I didn't think the Constellation would be in this situation.

Upon closer inspection, Dionysus's eyes were dull as if he had lost interest. He continued to sip the wine in his left hand with empty eyes. If you think about it, not all Dionysus are the same as the 1,864th Round. He must have gone through a lot on his way to the Final Scenario.

Apollo added in a nonchalant voice.

[Those who seem useful, leave their heads.]

It seems that there was quite a bit of trouble in the fight against the Blood Demon, and the Constellations including Apollo looked a little tired.

In that case, we still have a chance.

I looked back at the Ten Evils and said.

"I won't use the staging."

I looked at the Ten Evils' frightened faces one by one and continued.

"We have to show that we can win without relying on the power of staging."

In the first place, if the Ten Evils don't surpass <Kim Dokja's Company>, they won't be able to see the end of the 40th Round.

In short, if they can defeat them without using 'staging', they will be eligible to see the final chapter of the scenario.

[The master of the 'Time Fault' is very interested in your judgment.]

[The 'King of Fear' agrees with your decision.]

The Ten Evils gaped at my decision as if it was ridiculous.

Yoo Joonghyuk also glanced back in the middle of the fight, and Anna Croft, who had been continuing her prophecies one by one, stared at me with strange eyes.

The two seemed to be surprised by my decision in a slightly different sense.

Kyung Sein shouted as if she was frustrated.

"Why are you going back when there is an easy way?"

Her question was valid.

But.

"The easy way is not always the right way."

You shouldn't use staged scenes. What should I say? For a fundamental reason, I didn't want to recreate the stage of those stories.

Yoo Joonghyuk, who was pushed to the back with a thud, stood next to me.

"What are you planning?"

The guy's eyes were burning brightly as if he had read my mind.

"If you care about me, then just leave it at that. I've already experienced the deaths of my comrades dozens of times."

"Of course."

This kind of pain must certainly be familiar to Yoo Joonghyuk.

But does that mean it’s okay to say that it’s not pain?

"It’s just that I don’t want to use it. It’s no fun if I win easily."

I smiled brightly as I dodged the flying sword.

Maybe Cheon Inho used 'Staging' in the 40th Round. And that’s what the 'Evil Sophist' wanted.

But I had no intention of unconditionally following the rules of the 40th Round.

I’ll do it my way.

Even if I lose here, I won’t use the method of digging up Yoo Joonghyuk’s scars.

Ye Hyunwoo nodded as if he understood the situation and opened his mouth.

"I see. I’ll disappear now."

"Ye Hyunwoo."

I asked while holding onto Ye Hyunwoo’s arm.

"Don’t you want to see the end of the scenarios?"

"That kind of thing—"

"How long are you going to 'disappear'? If I die here, do you think you'll be okay after returning with [Deceased Summoning]?"

"But you can't win against those guys. We're not on the same level."

"On the same level? Are you really running away because of that?"

I looked back at the four incarnations engaged in a fierce battle with Yoo Joonghyuk and said.

"You can run away if you want. But you've run away many times so far."

I continued speaking to Kang Ilhun, Lee Dansu, and Kyung Sein who were watching us.

"Will you be like that even in the Last Scenario?"

Some characters are born as villains and die as villains. That's because there was no room for them to change. The writer didn't leave any sentences for them. It had to be that way in the main story.

But what about this world line?

The three of them looked at each other to see what they were thinking. Their wavering eyes crossed.

Lee Dansu was the first to speak.

"What do you want from us?"

"Even if you die again, I will revive you as much as I want. So please save me this time."

I explained the plan through [group chat]. As expected of the Ten Evils, they quickly understood my plan.

—As expected, it was a plan created by the 'Evil Sophist'.

Once again, [Mt. Taesun Smash] exploded. Now, Yoo Joonghyuk, who had reached his limit, was being pushed back.

The moment Lee Hyunsung, who did not miss the opportunity, was about to activate [Mt. Taesun Smash] again.

"Kang Ilhun"

Kang Ilhun ran towards Lee Hyunsung at the same time as my signal.

"Wow! Why is Zeus in a place like that!"

[Character, 'Kang Ilhun', activates his exclusive skill 'Rumor Lv.???'!]

The startled incarnations looked back for a moment. Of course, there was nothing there.

Lee Hyunsung, enraged, turned around and ripped Kang Ilhun's neck off.

Kang Ilhun's neck, flying through the air, shouted.

"Now!"

The moment Lee Hyunsung belatedly noticed something was wrong and looked around, a voice was heard from below.

"You're late, Steel Sword Emperor."

Dozens of 'traps' were set up in a split second.

Traps are not very effective against the deceased. However, if there are dozens of traps instead of just one, it's a different story.

A suffocating gas trap burst out around Lee Hyunsung. Lee Hyunsung's body, which had stepped on more than ten traps in an instant, began to petrify rapidly.

"Hahaha! This is a trap made from the legend of Medusa! Even if you are the Steel Sword Emperor, you won't be able to move for five minutes with this..."

Lee Hyunsung, who had been frozen with a thud, stretched out his right arm with all his might. Lee Dansu, who had been letting his guard down, was pierced in the chest in vain.

"Bam..."

Two of the Ten Evils died in order to subdue Lee Hyunsung alone. However, there was no time to hesitate. There were still three enemies left.

"Ah, no. I'm different from other guys. I can never fight them!"

Kyung Sein instinctively recognized the 'strong' and stepped back, her legs shaking. Lee Jihye and Kim Namwoon were approaching her, emitting wild fighting spirit.

Kyung Sein's judgment was right. If we confronted them now, Lee Jihye's [Instant Kill] would immediately cut off her head.

But what if we did this?

"Kyung Sein."

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', is activated!]

"From now on, 'Lee Jihye' and 'Kim Namwoon' are weaker than you."

A fierce spark flew before her eyes. [Incite], whose power was further strengthened by [Strengthening Sentences].

Kyung Sein groaned as if in pain.

Changing the target of [Insect Massacre] through [Incite].

If I did this to a story, which wasn't even a skill, the story could easily get twisted and her body could explode. Nevertheless, Kyung Sein accepted my [incite].

[The story of the 'Insect Massacre' is distorted!]

[An abnormal discrepancy occurs in the story!]

Kyung Sein laughed amidst the bright sparks of probability.

"I feel like I'm the main character."

Kyung Sein ran out at a fast pace and engaged in a close fight with Lee Jihye and Kim Namwoon.

Kyung Sein's bare fist landed on Lee Jihye's side, and her sweeping kick struck the Delusion Demon's stomach.

A mere Ten Evils were engaged in a duel with the 'Maritime Admiral' and the 'Delusion Demon'.

Of course, it was only a short-term trick to gain some time, but that was exactly what we needed.

[Supreme King! Where did the Supreme King go?]

The quick-witted Oedipus shouted. A shadow of anxiety flashed across his eyes. Soon, the bastard pointed at me with his finger and screamed.

[Kill him! Kill the Evil Sophist! It's over if we just kill him!]

Gong Pildu's [Magic Turret] was aimed at me. Oedipus' judgment was indeed accurate.

In the end, everyone here was the ones I revived with [Deceased Summoning].

The moment I die, they will also rapidly lose their vitality.

But.

"That's the same for you too."

The moment Oedipus, with his eyes wide open, turned around, there was 'The Disappearing One' Ye Hyunwoo and Yoo Joonghyuk.

Yoo Joonghyuk's Hwangcheon-wolguk, imbued with terrifying transcendence, emitted light.

Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship.

Deadly Swordsmanship.

Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship's secret technique arranged with spear technique.

Iljeom Breaking the Sky.

A storm of strong energy swept through the entire platform along with Oedipus' scream.

I lay face down on the floor and waited for the aftershock to pass. Not long after, a message came to my ear.

[The Constellation, 'One Who Stabbed His Own Eye', has left the scenario.]

Oedipus, who had suffered a terrible blow, finally left the scenario.

Following this, with a creaking sound, Yoo Joonghyuk's colleagues who had been summoned with [Deceased Summoning] knelt down one by one and collapsed. The souls that had been forcibly injected were leaving their bodies.

Gong Pildu's Armed Fortress collapsed, and then the Delusion Demon Kim Namwoon fell.

Lee Jihye and Lee Hyunsung were looking somewhere without falling until the very end.

At the end of their gaze, a man was standing.

"Rest. I will confirm the end of this world."

Only after hearing Yoo Joonghyuk's words did the two close their eyes as if they were relieved.

"We... won?"

In the meantime, Ye Hyunwoo muttered by my side, and Kyung Sein, who was sitting on the dusty ground nearby, shouted.

"Euhahahahaha! Euhahahahaha! How is it? this is the Ten Evils! You sons of bitches!"

And then applause was heard from somewhere. Beyond the collapsed Armed Fortress, four Constellations were walking.

[It was a story enough to be included as a 'tale' in the ark.]

They were the four Constellations, including Apollo.

At the same time, a bright light flashed, and Yoo Joonghyuk shouted.

"Be careful!"

Yoo Joonghyuk ran forward and swung his spear at the flying beam of light, but the beam missed Yoo Joonghyuk's spear at a strange angle.

I looked into whose skill it was.

「Mysterious Tracking Arrow.」

It was the specialty of Artemis, one of the Twelve Gods of <Olympus>. The three arrows that flew in hit Kyung Sein, who was catching her breath, and Ye Hyunwoo, who was standing next to me.

And the last one.

Psshh.

I held back a scream and sat down on the floor. Bloody stories flowed out from my pierced thigh.

Apollo said that he liked the sight of us.

[But every story has an end.]

They didn't seem intimidated at all even after seeing Yoo Joonghyuk's divine power that killed Oedipus with one blow.

No matter how strong Yoo Joonghyuk was, there were four of the Twelve Gods on the other side. And unlike before, there was no 「Darkness That Eats Starlight」 that suppressed the Constellations.

[Kill the tyrant.]

With the signal, the four Constellations disappeared from sight. Almost at the same time, Yoo Joonghyuk's divine form also disappeared. A rough cracking sound rang out in the air, and a wave of magical power that seemed to rip through the eardrums burst out. Occasionally, fragments of stories fell to the ground. It was evidence that a fierce battle was taking place somewhere unseen.

[Supreme King! Is this all you can do? Hahaha! Try to entertain us a little more!]

Yoo Joonghyuk was under the 「Curse of the Stars」. However, even if his level increased against the Constellations, his opponents were four Narrative-grade Constellations.

I recalled the way Cheon Inho had fought in my head.

Could I do the same? If I moved now, could I subdue those Constellations together with Yoo Joonghyuk?

"Cheon Inho, you can run away now."

Ye Hyunwoo, who was holding the holed ship, touched my shoulder.

"Give up the Supreme King. If even the Evil Sophist dies, humanity is finished."

[You can't win.]

As if he had eavesdropped on our conversation, Apollo's message came through the light that was aiming at us.

[Here, there are Myth-grade Constellations in the ark! Now, neither 'Final Tong' nor 'Divine Spirit of the Other World' can help you! No matter what you do, there is no way to deal with them!]

Myth-grade Constellations. The moment I heard that name, my heart sank like lead. The only ones blocking us now were Narrative-grade Constellations.

If the Narrative-grade is like this, how can we deal with the Myth-grade?

[With the stories you have accumulated, you will never reach the 'End of the Scenarios'. Did you think you were gods just because you were lucky enough to drop a few Constellations?]

I saw Yoo Joonghyuk's body falling from the sky.

The white-hot Apollo was looking at me.

[The last human on the small planet. You fought well enough.]

Maybe the 40th Round's Cheon Inho's battle wasn't over until here.

Maybe he died in front of the ark without seeing the end.

「Then what is the meaning of 'rewriting' this story?」

That's when Anna Croft's voice came from behind me.

"Head."

When I turned my head absentmindedly, Anna Croft's gaze was directed somewhere.

There lay the dead head of the Blood Demon.

A strange thought suddenly occurred to me. Why on earth did the Blood Demon come all the way here?

If he had been betrayed by the Constellations anyway, if he had known that he was destined to die—

「Why did he come all the way here to die in front of me?」

I suddenly raised my head and looked at the warehouse. According to my memory, the Blood Demon had spent his entire life collecting treasures from this warehouse.

「This warehouse, isn't it a little small?」

I picked up the Blood Demon's head that had fallen to the ground. Then, the Blood Demon's head seemed to be speaking to me.

Think about it, there's a reason he came here to find me and died.

Yoo Joonghyuk, who had landed on the ground, jumped up while howling like a wild beast. Yoo Joonghyuk's eyes, glancing at me, were telling me something. Now he could barely hold on.

[You who live for a mere hundred years, how dare you look down upon the sky of Constellations!]

A being who lives for a mere hundred years.

At that moment, a voice came to mind. It was the voice of the Blood Demon.

「"What do you think a being who lives for a mere hundred years would have to do to break a Constellation?"」

My head was throbbing and hurting.

「"It would take a many great people to join forces."」

「"That's impossible, you Evil Sophist."」

「"Can't you do it?"」

I thought as I recalled the conversation flowing in my head.

「"There's no need for only living people to join forces, right?"」

If my hypothesis was correct,

"Yoo Joonghyuk. Just hold on a little longer."

As if it heard me, a loud noise rose from the distant sky.

I dragged my injured leg and walked somewhere while holding the Blood Demon's head.

Artemis sensed something strange and shot an arrow at me. I heard someone behind me taking the arrow instead of me.

Without looking back, I continued walking toward the end of the warehouse.

There was a small safe there. A dark-colored safe, a safe that had been bothering me since a while ago but I had not found a way to open it.

I sat down in front of the safe, and a faint light flowed out from it.

[Confirming the legend embedded in the retina.]

I brought the Blood Demon's head to it. Then, the dead Blood Demon's head opened its eyes as if it had come back to life.

[Confirming the owner's legend.]

A subspace portal opened before my eyes.

I realized it instinctively.

I see, this portal is—

"Cheon Inho, take the Prophet."

Ye Hyunwoo, who had two holes in his upper body from Artemis' arrows, pushed Anna, who still had difficulty moving, to me.

My body began to be sucked into the portal along with Anna, who collapsed.

Maybe he thought this was the end, Ye Hyunwoo looked at me for a moment. Then he smiled at me for the first time.

"Thank you for bringing us here."

The moment I was about to call his name, Apollo's flash of light exploded.

The sound of something burning. A cruel scream echoed.

The other space swallowed all that tragedy and closed the portal.

As I gasped for breath and got up, I felt the cold floor.

"Anna Croft, are you here?"

Anna Croft groaned and nodded at my voice.

"The hidden warehouse of the Blood Demon."

The moment I reached out to the empty space, a light came on in the ceiling. Almost at the same time, lightning flashed in my head.

「"Cheon Inho."」

That was the last day of the <Underworld>.

It was a conversation between Cheon Inho and the Blood Demon.

「"Even if I use my 'story', it won't be able to turn all humans into undead."」

「"Hmm? Is that so?"」

Listening to the conversation flowing in my head, I slowly looked around the warehouse. It was a space that was almost the size of a stadium.

「"Some bodies have such strong thoughts that my 'King of the Dead' can't resurrect them. Especially the ones you mentioned—"」

Thousands of heads and torsos that had been 'preserved' were hanging all over the warehouse.

「"Hmm. That doesn't matter. Collect them for the future."」

A trembling slowly rose from the tips of my feet. I gradually quickened my pace and examined the heads. Soon enough, familiar faces appeared one by one.

「"There may come a day when they change their minds and revive to save the world."」

I stopped in front of the heads that were all too familiar. The heads of the Transcendents that the Blood Demon had failed to turn into corpses were on display there.

Some heads were too small, and some too large. There were also heads that still had the same ferocious expressions from their lives.

Some made me feel like crying, but I held it in. This was because I thought of the people who were watching me like this somewhere.

"Are you watching?"

I reached out my trembling hands toward the heads hanging on the wall.

"If you are watching."

I don't know if this is the right way to resolve this Fear or not. However, this was the way I chose.

A way to 'properly' save Yoo Joonghyuk.

I will safely finish the 40th Round and protect the Fear Realm.

I muttered while holding the heads of Cheok Jungyeong and Kyrgios.

And at that moment.

"Masters. Please help me."

The last sentence of this world began to be written in my head.

850 Episode 46 Big Joke (1)

Yoo Joonghyuk opened his eyes in the darkness. No, strictly speaking, it wasn't darkness. It was just that his eyes were covered with a blindfold, so he couldn't see ahead.

He felt firm restraints on his limbs, and no matter how much he tried, they wouldn't come off, so it was at least a restraint device made of a metal called stories.

'Is this how it ended up?'

Yoo Joonghyuk bit his lips tightly and checked his physical fatigue. Judging from his condition, it seemed like at least a week had passed since he passed out.

After catching his breath, he tried to recall the memories that were coming to him here and there. Fortunately, the memories of the last moment when he lost consciousness were clear.

「[Hahahaha! In the end, you were abandoned by your colleagues, Supreme King!]」

Apollo's despicable laughter.

The moment when he was directly hit by the attacks of the four Narrative-grade Constellations, the memory of his defense breaking and missing the Hwangcheon-moongeuk. The dazzling portal that opened in the warehouse and the image of Cheon Inho disappearing into it. He didn’t know where Cheon Inho went. He might have gone to another dimension, or he might have gone to the secret place hidden by the Blood Demon. He just hoped that he survived safely, no matter where he went.

However, he also had a feeling that even if he survived safely, he wouldn’t be able to save him. Because,

'We’ve finally come to the ark.'

This was the residence of the Myth-grade Constellations of the 'Final Scenario'. It was the 'Final Ark'.

Just by breathing quietly, he could feel the immense power of the Myth-grade Constellations located somewhere beyond this room.

"Is this it?"

What would happen if he failed a task in the Fear Realm? Even though he had already experienced over forty regressions, Yoo Joonghyuk didn’t know much about the Fear Realm. Sometimes they just disappear, and sometimes they become a 'Fear' that resides in the Fear Realm. In particular, the more powerful the incarnation, the more likely they are to turn into a powerful 'Fear' if they fail.

If that's the case now, he would be at least a 'Disaster-level Fear'; or a monster greater than a 'Natural Disaster-level Fear'.

Then, Cheon Inho would tease him, saying, "Oh my. You've truly become a 'Natural Disaster-level Fear King'."

If he's not lucky enough, he'll end up being killed by the master who came to defeat him.

Then this round will be over.

'Still, there were a lot of things that happened.'

He felt regretful when he thought it was the end. He thought that he would finally be able to see the end of the scenarios this time.

More than anything, it seemed possible if that guy who possessed Cheon Inho was there.

'That guy.'

The guy who suddenly appeared in the 41st Round. The guy who fed him dirt, dumplings, and kept saying strange things. The guy who didn't reveal his name.

He had questions he wanted to ask that guy.

Why on earth did you, who are not even Cheon Inho, come to this world line?

Who on earth are you?

Why did you become my colleague?

Why on earth do you always have that expression on your face as if you are atoning for something?

That was when he felt someone's presence.

Yoo Joonghyuk calmly gathered his thoughts and opened his mouth.

"Who are you?"

There was no answer. All he could feel was a terrible alcohol smell.

Yoo Joonghyuk, who had been silent for a moment, asked again.

"Are you the God of Wine and Ecstasy?"

Someone took off his blindfold along with the pungent smell of alcohol.

[Yes, it's me.]

Dionysus, holding a bottle of wine in one hand, was grinning before his eyes.

[Unfortunately, you survived, Supreme King. It would have been better for you if you had just died.]

"What are you here for?"

[Well, do I need a reason to visit a friend?]

Friend?

Yoo Joonghyuk's indifferent eyebrows twitched. "I've never been friends with you."

At that, Dionysus snickered. Dionysus, who had been blowing his whistle briefly, burped softly and answered.

[I had a few friends who liked you. They're all dead now. Friends of friends are my friends.]

Yoo Joonghyuk thought of the dead Constellations belonging to <Eden> and <Emperor>. Maybe some of them were friends with Dionysus.

[The Constellations will come to dissect you soon.]

"Why are you telling me that?"

[Because we're friends.]

"<Olympus> seems to treat friends like this."

[When Hermes comes, you'll definitely die and be torn to pieces. Your soul and every piece of your stories will be completely disintegrated. So—]

After saying that, Dionysus took another sip of his drink and walked around the room for a while, carrying his luggage like a scholar.

[Explain why I should save you.]

"What?"

[I'm giving you one last chance. One last chance to survive.]

Yoo Joonghyuk didn't understand.

He originally knew that the 'God of Wine and Ecstasy' was an oddball even within <Olympus>.

But why is he suddenly bringing up this topic? Is it a trap?

But is there a reason to set up such a trap?

"Why would you do something like that? Are you thinking of betraying <Olympus>?"

[I'm getting a little bored.]

Dionysus shrugged his shoulders with his characteristically bored expression and leaned against the wall where Yoo Joonghyuk was restrained.

[Honestly, don't you think it's pathetic?]

"..."

[The Constellations have no intention of clearing the scenario. They have no intention of checking the Final Wall, and they've long since forgotten their curiosity about this world. They're just thinking about boarding the ark and escaping to another world line. Because I'm so scared of destruction coming.]

Dionysus muttered as he looked into the distant sky.

The sky of the <Star Stream> was not visible in this room. Maybe that's why he could keep saying these things.

[Everyone is scared. They're afraid that this 'stage' we enjoy will really end. They're afraid that all the history we've enjoyed, all the status we've had, will disappear in vain with just one wall being torn down.]

Maybe it was because he had never seen Dionysus this honest before. Yoo Joonghyuk listened to him in silence.

[But you guys were different. Honestly, I was impressed by you a week ago.]

The moment he heard that story, Yoo Joonghyuk thought of Cheon Inho's words.

「"Even if nothing changes in the story, it means that the person reading the story can change."」

Maybe the Dionysus in front of him was like that too.

A strange heat was rippling in Dionysus's eyes.

[No matter how I looked at it, it was a fight that you couldn't possibly win. There was no chance of winning.]

"..."

[Tell me, why are you guys fighting so hard?]

Yoo Joonghyuk thought as he looked at Dionysus.

「How would that guy answer?」

Yoo Joonghyuk thought for a moment and then spoke as if he were that guy.

"To save the world."

[World? What is a world? All of humanity is dead, right? Your comrades, and the people you cared about are all dead. Regressor Yoo Joonghyuk. Why haven't you left this world line yet?]

"Dionysus. If you're curious about the 'end of everything,' release me right now."

[Huh?]

"The end of this world line has already been decided. You guys are going to lose anyway. And the last one to survive is that damn 'Star-Deceiver' Cheon Inho."

In fact, even Yoo Joonghyuk doesn't really know what the end of this world line is. Still, he talked nonsense like that.

Because that's what he would have said.

[What does that mean?]

And his strategy was very effective.

[Hermes said something similar. The end of this world line is already decided. Tell me straight. What on earth does that mean?]

"If you want to hear more—"

The moment he said that, a commotion was heard from outside the door.

[Damn. I have to hide for a moment.]

Dionysus's body transformed into a crude wine bottle and was placed on a nearby table. It was a perfect hiding that even hid the Constellation's status.

Then a group of Constellations appeared. They were the Historical-grade Constellations under Hermes.

The Constellations were sharing a square table, and in the center of the table was Hermes's head wearing a black blindfold.

How much time had passed like that? Hermes opened his mouth.

[This is strange. Are you really the 'Supreme King'?]

Hermes continued to ask after a pause.

[According to the 'regression' mechanism that I know, you cannot return here with 'Deceased Summoning'. We have tried several times but failed. Who are you? Where did you come from?]

"I am Yoo Joonghyuk."

At that moment, a faint mechanical sound and sparks flowed over Hermes's head. Then Hermes' expression changed subtly.

[Amazing. You are really Yoo Joonghyuk.]

It seemed that he had activated some kind of skill to verify that Yoo Joonghyuk's words were true.

[So, can we finally learn about the 'End of Everything'?]

"The End of Everything? What does that mean?"

[The prophecy of the three Moirai Sisters. Have you already forgotten?]

The moment he heard those words, fragments of memories flashed through his head.

The words of prophecy vaguely rose above the traces of memory erased by the 'Story Imprint'.

「Incarnation Yoo Joonghyuk. Everything in this universe will end forever in your 'next regression'.」

He had definitely heard that prophecy before.

However, he couldn't quite recall why he had heard that prophecy and what exactly it meant.

Hermes continued to speak.

[Cooperate with us, Yoo Joonghyuk. Every Constellation in this sky has a duty to stop the desires of all things. We must know why that prophecy came down and what it means.]

"Unfortunately, I also don't know what that prophecy means."

[Don't lie. You knew back then. You definitely—]

"I've lost my memory."

A faint mechanical sound was heard once again, and Hermes, who confirmed the fact, was shocked and blurted out,

[What the heck...]

"I told you. I don't know anything."

[There's nothing I can do. I'll open your head. We'll search for your memories in your subconscious.]

"Wasn't that your intention from the beginning?"

Yoo Joonghyuk added with a sneer.

"Even if you open my head, you won't find the answer you want. My memories are not passed down through my head, but through my soul."

Then Hermes smiled brightly.

[I already know that much. Don't worry. This time, I plan to borrow the power of the Nebulae and extract your soul.]

"What?"

He had never had his soul captured by anyone before. The Giant Nebulae had never tried to capture him so deliberately.

Extracting his soul.

Is that possible?

If it were really possible, then maybe it would be possible here.

Wouldn't it be possible to find a way to stop his regression?

But if that really happens, what will happen to his 41st Round?

"Wait."

Before Yoo Joonghyuk could stop him, Hermes's subordinates moved.

[Open the head and extract the soul.]

The scalpel made of story metal drew a clean trajectory, aiming for his head.

And the next moment.

Bang!

With a pleasant metallic cracking sound, the scalpel made of story metal broke in half.

[Exclusive trait, 'Stone Head', is activated.]

[Your head cannot be destroyed by physical force.]

Hermes opened his mouth in surprise.

[Supreme King, what on earth did you do?]

"I didn't do it."

Yoo Joonghyuk muttered, not even realizing that he was snickering.

"It was done by a guy who is good at making dumplings."

[I don't know what you're talking about.]

The view in the room slowly darkened. He felt the vast amount of stories that had been stored inside the ark gather around Hermes.

[The joke ends here. The Myth-grade Constellations are watching.]

Yoo Joonghyuk sank to his core.

No matter how strong his mind was, if the Myth-grade Constellations were to carry the probability of a giant nebula, there was no way it wouldn’t split.

But then.

—Hey.

Dionysus, who had turned into a wine bottle, spoke.

—Something quite interesting happened outside just now.

Then, with a thud, the ark shook violently. Hermes groaned in confusion, and emergency lights flashed all over the ark.

[Anyone! Who on earth would dare—]

It was obvious who had done it.

Yoo Joonghyuk became anxious because he knew who would do it.

'That guy can’t do it alone.'

No matter how great he was, even if the Ten Evils were with him, attacking the ark with just those members was no different from committing suicide.

—I don't know where they got those things from. This is why the <Star Stream> is fun.

The next moment, a screen that the Constellations were watching appeared in front of Yoo Joonghyuk.

—Is that the 'world' you were trying to protect?

What happened?

There were beings that could never exist in this 'Time Fault'.

Famous voices could be faintly heard.

"Isn't this the first time that all the generals have been possessed at once?"

"Surprisingly, such healthy incarnations remained?"

There were also transcendental beings whose faces he only knew.

"This is really, I don't know what kind of trouble I'm having because I've got the wrong disciple."

There was also a man with a ferocious face that he had once aimed for.

"If you have a bad disciple, the master will suffer."

There was also a small man with a strength that he could not help but acknowledge.

And there was a giant being standing at the center of them.

The moment he saw that face, Yoo Joonghyuk's heart swelled without him knowing it. Her brightly shining eyes stared at him beyond the screen.

"But even if he is a worthless disciple."

Captain of the Second Division of the Transcendent Alliance, Sky Breaking Namgung Minyoung.

"Once a disciple, always a disciple."

His master came to save him.

851 Episode 46 Big Joke (2)

The Constellations of the ark, who had received the emergency alarm, began to descend to the ground all at once.

[Foolish guys.]

The first thing that caught my eye was the Historical-grade Constellation at the forefront, shouting and swinging their greatsword.

It was a Constellation belonging to the Argo Expeditionary Force, the giant gate <Olympus>.

[How dare you know where this is—]

That was the extent of the advice he was allowed to give. The Constellation's incarnation was split in two by the sword of the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

The indignant Historical-grade Constellations each radiated anger and fell to the ground like shooting stars.

"Shoot."

At the signal of the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, the Transcendent Constellations lined up at the rear all aimed their bows at the sky.

[Mortals!]

The Constellations that had been emitting their fierceness in the air along with the tiresome mortal rhetoric exploded in the sky.

Super strong mana.

A bundle of arrows with the stories of the Transcendents added, far superior to [Strong Mana]. The arrows of the Transcendents, who had already experienced countless wars like this, were accurate and sharp.

[What the—]

The Constellations that descended confidently were hit by arrows before they could even set foot on the ground, and their fates were sealed.

The Constellations that were lucky enough to land were also unable to block the single sword of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

[Kwaaaaah!]

Although they were Historical-grade Constellations, they were Constellations that were considered great wherever they went. Those Constellations were being cut off by a single sword.

A few of the quick-witted Historical-grade sensed something was wrong and lifted their bodies.

[Where are you going?]

But the Twelve Gods, including Apollo, had already arrived there.

As Apollo lightly blew off the heads of the Historical-grade Constellations that were running away, the Historical-grade Constellations who changed their positions again shouted loudly.

[The Twelve Gods have arrived!]

[Everyone, wake up! The enemy is just an incarnation!]

But before their battle line could be fully formed, the order of the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint was given once again.

"Cut it."

"It's going to happen anyway."

Cheok Jungyeong stepped forward, grumbling. His entire body, which had taken a stance with his sword, began to condense a huge amount of fighting spirit.

The moment the Constellations, feeling a sense of crisis, were about to utter a warning.

One Sword Cuts Thousands.

The Constellations in the battle line were split in half. Literally cutting a thousand with one stroke, a flawless and perfect swordsmanship.

Although the opponents were Constellations, so he couldn't really cut a thousand, dozens of Constellations died with that one cut.

Some Constellations muttered in amazement at Cheok Jungyeong's incredible power.

[I know, this is ridiculous...]

[Get out of the way.]

In the end, the Twelve Gods who couldn't stand it anymore stepped forward. They also had an intuition. The humans in front of them had power that even the Narrative-grade Constellations couldn't look down on.

Apollo glared at Cheok Jungyeong and asked.

[You must have been destroyed during 'The Last Dragon', so how did you come back?]

Cheok Jungyeong smirked and then showed off his hidden status without holding back.

[The Constellation 'Goryeo's First Sword' reveals his status.]

Even the Narrative-grade Constellations' expressions hardened at the general-level aggression that was encroaching on the area. Cheok Jungyeong said.

[I always wanted to test it. How strong is that great 'Olympus Twelve Gods' level?]

Cheok Jungyeong's whole body simultaneously swelled with the power of a Constellation and transcendence.

Third Captain of the Transcendent Alliance, Goryeo's best swordsman Cheok Jungyeong. With the strongest incarnation body in history, he was one of the few beings in this world who possessed the power of both a Constellation and transcendence.

Apollo said with a sullen voice.

[Do you really have to fight with us? Aren't you a Constellation after all?]

[You have to pay the price for making my only disciple suffer by using that Constellation's modifier.]

[Disciple? Who are you talking about?]

[A guy who makes dumplings well.]

Cheok Jungyeong jumped at that signal. Almost at the same time, a bright artificial sun rose behind Apollo's back. A blazing heat that would burn the earth swept over, but Cheok Jungyeong merely laughed as if it was ridiculous.

[As rumored, you hang a toy on your head.]

[What?]

[It seems that you haven’t inherited the position of Sun God from Helios yet?]

Was that a reversal? The enraged Apollo let out a rippling corona. The flame of the corona was carried directly onto Apollo’s bow.

[You arrogant bastard. I’ll burn you so you never come back to life.]

Apollo, aiming at the ground, released the bowstring. The arrows shot out with swirling flames soon scattered into hundreds and thousands of strands and struck the ground like lightning. The Transcendents who had been shooting the most powerful magic groaned and fell to the ground.

"Shoot again!"

But the Transcendents were persistent. Each and every one of them had entered 'transcendence' after intense training. They would not back down from such a small blow.

Apollo snapped his fingers in the air, and a huge wall rose up around the ark.

[The story, 'Walls of Troy', begins!]

It was once a wall built by Apollo and Poseidon to protect Troy.

The Transcendents groaned at the thickness of the wall, which could even repel the powerful Mashi with enormous destructive power.

"How could this—"

This was the history built by the Twelve Constellations.

Apollo's sun, burning brightly above the wall, looked down on the bewildered humanity.

[Foolish humans. You can't win…]

[That obvious threat pattern hasn't changed for hundreds of years.]

Apollo stepped back in shock at the words of advice he heard right next to him.

When did it start? Cheok Jungyeong was standing right next to him.

[Shut up!]

A furious Apollo once again let go of his bow.

As Cheok Jungyeong twisted his body slightly to avoid the fire, the artificial sun's intense heat poured down onto the castle walls.

Cheok Jungyeong laughed.

[This is the perfect toy to put in the introduction of that rich guy.]

Cheok Jungyeong's three swords spit fire. From the two swords to the three swords. Cheok Jungyeong's secret technique, which cut mountains and seas, split the castle walls and struck Apollo's sun.

Kudududududud!

The Historical-grade Constellations caught in the aftermath screamed.

The artificial sun, split in half, lost its light as sparks flew.

Apollo, standing in front of the shattered artificial sun, muttered in vain with soot all over his body.

[This is ridiculous… How could my sun…]

Apollo's expression showed fear for the first time. He hurriedly turned around and shouted.

[What are you all just watching? Hephaestus! Athena! Artemi—]

With a thud, Cheok Jungyeong's sword pierced his heart.

Apollo's incarnation collapsed.

At the same time, the Constellations waiting behind him, each with their own powers, rushed at Cheok Jungyeong.

[The Constellation, 'Speaker of Justice and Wisdom', reveals her own status!]

[The Constellation, 'Blacksmith of the Volcano', reveals his own status!]

[The Constellation, 'Pure Moonlight Hunter', reveals her own status!]

Three Constellations of Olympus… He deflected Artemis' arrows, blocked Hephaestus's hammer, and aimed for Athena's Aegis whenever he saw an opening.

The Constellations gaped in frustration at the fierceness of Cheok Jungyeong, who fought fiercely against three of the Twelve Divine seats.

At that moment, a Constellation appeared at the end of the broken Trojan walls. The air in the area changed slightly, and a lightning-like spell struck the battlefield.

[Olympus is in a terrible state.]

The moment the spell fell, the expressions of the Constellations and Transcendents changed. The faces of the Constellations turned gray, and the faces of the Transcendents became covered in darkness. It couldn't be otherwise. The Constellations that had just appeared were beings who could change the atmosphere of this battlefield.

If there were Twelve Divine seats in <Olympus>, there were Eight Locapalas in <Vedas>. The only 'Lokapala' who survived until the final scenario, and the only Constellation that claims to be the strongest among them.

[Children of <Olympus>. Do you need this body's help?]

Indra, the 'God King of Thunder'

Except for the Three Gods of <Vedas>, the most powerful being had just appeared at the entrance of the ark.

Indra, who had been laughing lightly with both arms spread out, landed on the bottom of the wall and asked.

[Is there a human who dares to face me?]

He was confident that there would be no being who could face the God King of Thunder, not even another Constellation.

However, there was a Transcendent that had been waiting for him to come forward.

Indra looked at the Transcendent that was the size of a fist in front of him.

[What is this little rat?]

However, when that little rat pulled out his sword, Indra was unconsciously taking a battle stance. Indra frowned in surprise.

'This body is tense?'

The smallest Transcendent in the world. He thought he had heard that name somewhere.

A dwarf from a remote planet who goes around talking crazy about how the smallest things are the greatest.

[Is that so, you.]

Second Captain of the Transcendent Alliance, Kyrgios Rodgraim, the Paradoxical White-Blue.

"Let's get started right away."

As soon as he finished speaking, the two beings' bodies disappeared. For a moment, it seemed as if everything had been turned into a vacuum, and all sounds disappeared, before a terrifying thunderbolt exploded in the air. A storm of lightning that raged on without stopping.

Every time Kyrgios' [All-in-One] and Indra's [Thunderstorm] collided, the scenery of the night sky changed.

[The Constellation, 'God of Thunderbolt', activates the stigma 'Eye that Watches Over All'!]

The Constellations let out a gasp of astonishment.

The [Eye that Watches Over All]. It was the stigma that Indra used when he drew out his true power.

[Is Indra serious about that small Transcendent?]

A thousand eyes opened one by one on Indra's entire body, which had swelled up in the sky.

According to mythology, the moment all of his thousand eyes opened, Indra's incarnation could fully use the power of his true body.

It would have been suicide to give Indra time to fully manifest his power now.

However, Kyrgios waited for Indra. Indra let out a strange laugh as if he had noticed Kyrgios' feelings.

[You arrogant bastard. Do you really want to fight me?]

A thousand eyes glowed on Indra's entire body. The sacred relic, the Vajra, he had taken out spun around violently, and a [Heavenly Thunderstorm] of a different scale than before poured down. A blow that could completely destroy the surface of any planet and turn the entire area into an ocean.

In the face of that overwhelming thunder, Kyrgios stood alone.

"From the perspective of the universe, it was just a dusty incident."

With a calm voice, Kyrgios's stigma, the 'Pure White Paradox', let out a loud cry.

Baekcheong-mun.

Visionary art.

It was a technique that Kyrgios had never taught anyone. To be exact, it was the secret art of Baekcheong-mun that no one could learn.

Creation Island.

With a sound like a big bang, a dot appeared in the pitch-black thunderstorm. And in the next moment, the entire space-time collapsed around the dot.

A single flash that destroyed the rules of the sky, that flash brightly colored the entire sky, and then the light went out. Indra's dark clouds evaporated in an instant, and pitch-black rain began to fall all over the area. And.

[Oh my God.]

Indra's gigantic incarnation was revealed in the scattered raindrops. More than half of the thousand eyes that Indra boasted of were burning black or bursting.

A moment later, Indra, who had lost his balance, began to fall.

[Indra was defeated?]

The Constellations were speechless at the shocking sight of the leader of <Lokapala> being defeated.

Of course, Kyrgios was not safe either. He had to give up one of his arms to defeat Indra, who was at full power, and he suffered major injuries to his back and chest. Even so, the fact that he was able to subdue Indra with only those wounds was an absurdity.

Even if the current leaders of the Transcendent Alliance were the strongest Transcendents, it would have been difficult for them to put up such a good fight against the leader of <Lokapala>.

Nevertheless, there were two reasons why it was possible.

One was that the incarnation they possessed was the 'best body' based on the difficulty level of the 'Final Scenario'.

And the second was.

[The proficiency of all skills has greatly increased due to the effect of consuming 'Murim Dumplings'!]

A 'buff' that allows all the abilities contained in that body to be expressed to the highest level is applied.

Kyrgios looked around the battlefield.

It was to find the arrogant disciple who had gifted him this body.

How many times had he looked around?

A slender doll was seen running towards somewhere beyond the pouring meteors.

Before he knew it, Cheok Jungyeong, who was standing next to Kyrgios, was also looking at the same scenery.

"He really is a strange guy. Isn't he?"

"The one person who created this miraculous scenery where all of humanity gathered to fight against the Constellations in the night sky."

His disciple was finally entering the ark to confirm the conclusion of this 'Time Fault'.

852 Episode 46 Big Joke (3)

Anna Croft cheered up several times while watching the stars falling from the sky.

In fact, she had seen the scenery of stars falling several times, and it wasn't particularly shocking. Moreover, her dream was to make all the Constellations in the sky fall and welcome the 「Perfect Night」.

That's why she threw herself into <Asgard> and became the representative fire ship of the castle gate.

To make the Constellations fall, you have to use the power of the Constellations.

That was the answer she came up with after reading the future. Maybe that's why.

She couldn't take her eyes off the scenery of the sky now.

The destruction of the night sky without borrowing the power of the Constellations. She had never thought that she could achieve that dream with pure human power.

'Cheon Inho, is this the final chapter you dreamed of?'

The worst villain she knew.

She couldn't understand why the man who was the enemy of humanity more than anyone else did such a strange thing at the end.

"Cheon Inho."

When she called his name, the slender man on her back shuddered slightly.

Was he having a nightmare? Or was there a bad memory contained in that name?

"Cheon Inho, we're here. The ark is coming soon."

"..."

"Your plan has been completed."

A shooting star fell from the air once again. She, who was activating [Future Sight], muttered as she dodged the flying debris.

"You have to get up now. My [Future Sight] has its limits. I can't read all the futures."

"..."

"Cheon Inho."

The man still didn't move.

Anna Croft hesitated for a moment and then asked.

"Are you... really Cheon Inho?"

In fact, Anna Croft knew. This man couldn't be Cheon Inho.

The worst villain she knew couldn't be this man.

Her intuition—the 'Eyes of the Great Demon' testified to that.

So who was he? Anna Croft hesitated for a moment before opening her mouth again. It was the name the man had once told her.

"Kim Dokja."

When she called that name, the man shuddered once again. And Anna, who had called that name, bit her lips without realizing it.

Why? It was because she had a strange feeling the moment she called that name.

[Gaaaaaaaaa!]

Indra howled in the air.

Anna Croft, who suddenly came to her senses, hurriedly looked around. She saw the Constellations that had discovered them during the confusion, screaming loudly.

[They're entering the ark!]

[Don't be fooled!]

She had finally been caught. The [Future Sight] that was activating in real time was once again warning her of the danger right before her eyes.

She ran while carrying Cheon Inho. The ground exploded and arrows flying in grazed her cheeks. Sometimes, she was caught in the storm of strong energy shot by the Transcendental Constellations.

But she was a Prophet. As long as people called her a Prophet, she had to do her part. It was also a reward for the man who summoned her to this battlefield.

She ran and ran. Now, there were less than ten meters left until the ark.

[The Constellation, 'God of Wine and Ecstasy', descends to the Earth!]

And then there was a Narrative-grade Constellation blocking her way.

Dionysus, the God of Wine and Ecstasy.

The strongest of the Twelve Gods, the direct descendant of Zeus, who made her shiver just by looking at him.

The moment he stared at her, holding the bottle of wine with a languid face, the power of [Future Sight] suddenly stopped.

"Ah."

Anna Croft struggled like someone hanging from the edge of a cliff.

Just a little more.

She couldn't see the future. How could she get away from that Constellation?

[You want to go inside?]

Dionysus asked as if it were a joke. She knew he wouldn't let her in. Anna Croft nodded anyway.

[If you go in, you'll die? You know who's inside, right?]

"Still, we have to go in."

[Why?]

"Because that's the right ending for this world line."

[Really? What on earth is that 'right ending'?]

"I don't know either."

[You don't know?]

Instead of answering, Anna Croft felt the body temperature of the man hanging on her back. He was probably the only one who knew what it was.

"Cheon Inho, get up."

When was the last time she gambled with a future that she couldn't see?

"You can call me Kim Anna. Get up quickly."

Anna Croft carried Cheon Inho with one hand and pulled out her dagger with the other.

One moment is enough. She just has to use all her strength to create a single moment of emptiness. Then she might be able to throw Cheon Inho into the ark. The moment Anna Croft, who had made up her mind, summoned her strength.

"Enough with the joking."

A man in a pitch-black coat appeared behind Dionysus.

The man reached out his hand to Anna Croft, who was staggering in surprise.

"Come up."

Anna Croft blankly looked up at Yoo Joonghyuk, then hesitated and reached out her hand to him.

"You're alive, Supreme King."

Yoo Joonghyuk's large, strong hand grabbed her wrist and pulled her up onto the ark in one breath.

Anna, who was barely able to catch her breath, looked back and forth between Yoo Joonghyuk and Dionysus and asked.

"But why are you with that person? You didn't decide to side with <Olympus> now, did you?"

"Have you ever seen such a future?"

She had never seen such a future. And the man in front of her would have regressed if he had to, and he wouldn't betray his companions in such a way.

Yoo Joonghyuk glanced at Dionysus with his characteristically indifferent eyes and said.

"It's just that guy's whim."

Dionysus shrugged his shoulders and smirked as if responding to his words.

It was an incident that Anna couldn't quite understand. She knew that Dionysus was an eccentric god, but no matter what, they were Zeus's enemy.

However, Yoo Joonghyuk seemed to not care about that.

"If it's a trap, then we can just kill him then."

"You make the choice, and we'll handle it together?"

Anna Croft let out a light sigh and her heart started beating again.

She didn't know why. Was it because the agitator, the tyrant, and the Prophet had all gathered in one place?

「Maybe this moment could be a rehearsal for the ending of the 41st Round.」

Anna Croft couldn't help but think that way, even though she knew it was a somewhat unrealistic thought.

However, Yoo Joonghyuk looked at the man on her back as if he didn't care about Anna Croft's thoughts and asked.

"What happened to that guy?"

"Let's talk while we move."

"Follow me."

Yoo Joonghyuk already seemed to know where the 'Story Core' was. Maybe Dionysus had given him the relevant information.

"Is that Constellation accompanying you?"

"He won't interfere. He promised me that. More importantly, you didn't answer my question."

"Cheon Inho..."

Anna Croft added, trying her best to make her explanation sound as nonsensical as possible.

"This happened while making dumplings."

"Dumplings?"

"Do you know about the food called Murim dumplings?"

Yoo Joonghyuk nodded.

"How many did he make?"

"About a thousand."

Yoo Joonghyuk's expression hardened. With just that explanation, Yoo Joonghyuk completely understood the situation.

"So that's why it ended up like this."

At a glance, Cheon Inho's complexion was pale. Anna Croft also looked at Cheon Inho and answered.

"He repeated the same thing all week. He made dumplings, performed [Deceased Summoning], and fed them to the survivors."

"So that's how the Transcendents became like that."

"Here, just in case, he asked me to give you one too."

Yoo Joonghyuk received a Murim dumpling from Anna. The dumpling made from memory still steamed as if it had just been made. It seemed like this was probably the thousandth dumpling he had made.

Yoo Joonghyuk asked while holding the dumpling.

"So what's his next plan?"

It was good that he brought the Transcendents, and it wasn't bad that he had infiltrated the ark.

The problem was just now. The 'Myth-grade Constellations' waiting for them inside the ark. The Narrative-grade Constellations struggling outside were strong, but if they didn't have a plan to deal with the Mythical Constellations, they had no chance of winning.

But Yoo Joonghyuk wasn't worried. That guy would have thought of a plan somehow.

"I don't know."

"What?"

"He never told me about the next plan."

Yoo Joonghyuk glared at Anna with a look of disbelief.

"I'll wake him up right now."

Yoo Joonghyuk reached out to the nape of Cheon Inho's neck, where he was sleeping, but stopped. When did it start? Dionysus, who had been following him, disappeared from sight.

Yoo Joonghyuk heard a faint warning in his ear.

[I'm sorry, but I can't help you this time. It's a bit different from when it was Hermes.]

That's when Anna Croft's eyes turned red.

"Yoo Joonghyuk."

However, before she could even utter a warning, the future came rushing over them.

"Supreme King! Run away!"

Blood flowed out of her eyes as she cried out desperately.

However, even Yoo Joonghyuk couldn't move this time. He couldn't even move his heels, making resistance itself impossible. Yoo Joonghyuk knew several Constellations with this kind of presence.

And he also understood exactly who this power belonged to.

"Zeus."

The moment he mentioned that name, Yoo Joonghyuk felt as if an unprecedented power was tearing him apart.

Even Anna Croft, who was standing next to him, gasped and collapsed.

"We have to run away! Now!"

But that was not possible. For a brief moment, Yoo Joonghyuk looked back on his past lives.

He had seen Zeus's incarnation several times before. He knew very well that he was strong. He had almost died several times, and actually died several times.

But even though he had fought Zeus several times, Yoo Joonghyuk had never experienced the true power of the Constellation called 'Zeus'.

「This was a true 'Myth-grade Constellation'.」

A presence that subdued all living things.

The Myth-grade Constellation was revealing all of its presence toward the invaders of this ark. This was the power of Zeus, the apex of the three gods of Olympus, the Seat of Lightning.

[Foolish.]

The moment he heard the incantation, he felt like his breath would stop.

[You came to seek death on your own feet.]

He who had fought fiercely against the four Narrative-grade Constellations couldn't move a finger this time.

Yoo Joonghyuk realized what Zeus was trying to do with all his might.

An invisible giant hand was wrapping around his head. He felt his skull, which couldn't be opened even with a metal smelt, crack open with a crack.

Zeus was trying to open his head and take out his soul.

Kukukukukukukuku!

Yoo Joonghyuk's soul was currently in Baehu Seong's possession, and Zeus was now coveting his soul, even going against that ownership.

Using the power of other Myth-grade Constellations, he was trying to figure out his secret by consuming all the enormous probability accumulated in the Last Ark.

[Why don't you die?]

Zeus' thoughts could be heard here and there amidst the sparks of probability that were fiercely surging.

[Why do the world lines reorganize around you?]

[Dokkaebi, Constellation, incarnation, everything in this universe—]

The great question of the Myth-grade Constellation rang out in his head as if it were going to burst.

[What do they exist for?]

The next moment, the entire landscape changed.

Yoo Joonghyuk looked back at the landscape, powerlessly crouching down.

There was a snowfield there.

A vast snowfield that stretched on endlessly.

When he looked back, his footsteps were clearly visible on the snowy path.

Yoo Joonghyuk somehow felt like he knew where this place was.

This place… Yes.

This place was his inner self.

The next moment, as if pitch-black night was approaching, a giant hand's shadow fell over the center of the snowfield.

[Finally.]

Zeus's voice filled with joy.

The secret of this world was about to be revealed by the determination of the Myth-grade Constellation.

The moment when the secret contained in his soul was finally revealed to the world.

Tsutsutsutsutsut! A huge wall of strings appeared over the distant snowfield. At the same time, the shadow of a hand approaching him collided with the wall. The next moment, a violent spark exploded as if he had been electrocuted.

[The exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', is strongly activated!]

853 Episode 46 Big Joke (4)

It was a plan that was carefully planned.

What would I have done if I were Kim Dokja? Or what would I have done if I were Cheon Inho?

No.

I am neither of them, so maybe I could be both.

With such an arrogant thought, I 'imagined' their strategy and created the plan.

The first step of the plan was to bring the 'Transcendent Alliance' to the Time Fault.

Introduce all the Transcendents that were revived with [Deceased Summoning] into them.

Of course, just infusing the Transcendents into their incarnation bodies wouldn't make them available right away.

Even if the Blood Demon had managed the Transcendents' bodies well, it was impossible for them to fully use their previous life's abilities after being revived.

To make up for that penalty, I started making 'Murim Dumplings'.

[The story fragment, 'Murim Dumpling Recipe', begins its storytelling!]

['Authentic Murim Dumpling' is complete!]

[Your Martial Arts Dumpling completion level is as follows.]

Completion level: ★★☆☆☆

Overall: A dumpling with a decent variety. When consumed, 'Skill Proficiency' increases.

Right after reaching a certain level of proficiency, the 'Murim Dumpling' I made had different buffs depending on its completion level.

For example, the effect of the low-grade 'Murim Dumpling' is 'Skill Proficiency Increase'.

Even though it is a low-grade product, the increase is quite large, so even if you feed them one, most Transcendents can recover a considerable level of skill.

Of course, there were some who ate several of them.

[Well done, disciple.]

They were the leaders, including Cheok Jungyeong.

They could emit dozens of times more power than other Transcendents, and they ate dozens of times more. Especially when Kyrgios ate five dumplings the size of his torso, I couldn’t help but be astonished.

"You’ve got some pretty useful skills."

I don’t know how much memory I used while making dumplings like that.

「"Writer-nim! Hehe, how have you been? It’s nothing else…"」

「"Writer-nim, I’m sorry, but this work…"」

「"Writer-nim ■■■. So here…"」

Most of what I used were the memories of the human 'Lee Hakhyun'. They're miserable, but they're the most useless memories in this world. Because they're useless, they're paradoxically the most useful memories now.

[You have completed the 'Authentic Martial Arts Dumplings'!]

I thought that if I ate the dumplings I made by trickery, my martial arts dumpling proficiency would go up, but unfortunately, that didn't happen.

Did they notice that my mind was slowly going crazy every time I made dumplings? The masters who had come back to life often spoke to me.

[Disciple, your eyes are open. And aren't they burst?]

"If you stab, your mind will become clearer. Make dumplings with the same mind as stabbing."

Although their words were not very helpful, I listened to them. I hoped that I might get a clue to transcendence.

[With this body, I might be able to test out the 'False Sword' I'm developing. By the way, what will I cut with the False Sword? Ahem, disciple. Would you like to discuss the 'False Sword' with me?]

"The smallest things are the greatest. But since big and small ultimately depend on the perception of existence, the being that can freely control that cognitive realm can be said to be the greatest."

Honestly, I didn't really understand what they were saying, but I could feel that they were trying to tell me something.

So I listened to them diligently and made dumplings.

Maybe I listened to it too much, since sometimes strange dumplings came out.

[You completed the 'Academic Martial Arts Dumplings'!]

I even tasted the dumplings as a test and collapsed.

Anna Croft said this while wiping my face, which had been suffering from a high fever all night.

"Cheon Inho. You know, but if you complete this operation, you might not be you anymore."

"Of course."

I realized it after making about 100 dumplings. Maybe by the time the story of this Fault ends, I'll have forgotten a lot about myself.

But that didn't matter.

"Original humans become no longer themselves over time."

"What do you mean?"

"Memories will disappear even if you stay still."

If memories are going to disappear anyway, wouldn't it be better to use them for something meaningful?

[Congratulations! Your proficiency in 'Murim Dumpling Recipe' has increased!]

...

And so, the moment came when I revived my last incarnation with [Deceased Summoning].

Chuk Jungyeong, who was watching the summoning technique from the side, asked.

"Is it over now?"

"Yes. Except for one person."

The last target of [Deceased Summoning] was not the Transcendent Alliance's Transcendent.

Cheok Jungyeong tilted his head and asked.

"Hmm, this is my first time seeing that person?"

She is one of the strongest incarnations I know. I might fail, but I'm going to try.

I looked at her face with my eyes closed, then quietly called her name.

"Heewon-ssi."

What kind of person was Jung Heewon in the 40th Round?

Judging from the fact that she was in the Blood Demon's warehouse, she must have been a strong incarnation here too. Maybe she lived here as a 'Mad Butcher'.

Unfortunately, her soul did not respond to [Deceased Summoning].

However, I felt a strange sense of comfort just knowing that she had struggled with all her might in a place I didn't know.

So for the remaining two days, I made dumplings to feed the Transcendents.

Luckily, I got a five-star rating. I also succeeded in completing the dumplings.

| |
| Completion: ★★★★★Overall: The ultimate martial arts dumplings. |

I made them while I was in a daze, so I forgot what memories I put into them, but I thought they were okay.

I handed the last dumpling to Anna Croft, who was waiting nearby.

"Give this to Yoo Joonghyuk. He'll need it."

Anna Croft, who took the dumplings from me, asked.

"People won't know what you threw away to make these."

"So what if they don't know?"

"Why did you do this? After all, this world line is just a virtual world line restored by the 'Time Fault'."

I know that too. This world is just a virtual world line created by the 'Evil Sophist' based on his experiences.

"Because I have to show this story to the King of Fear."

"Why is that important?"

"Because that's how we can prevent the End."

"Is that all?"

I looked up at the ceiling for a moment.

[The 'King of Fear' is waiting for your story.]

A message that sounded as if it had been waiting.

I spoke as if responding to the message.

"I hope the King of Fear likes this story."

"What does it mean that he likes this story?"

"Kim Anna-ssi. Why do you think the 'Fear Realm' exists?"

"Even my [Future Sight] can't tell me that much."

Why does the 'Fear Realm' exist?

When I first came here, I thought simply.

Since the Second Kim Dokja said he likes sad things, he might have a hobby of collecting discarded materials. That's why he created this space to collect things that couldn't be told.

But is that all?

He is also Kim Dokja. Kim Dokja who loves stories the most in this world. Such a Kim Dokja would not be satisfied with simply collecting materials.

"Perhaps everything in this 'Fear Realm' is a dream that the 'King of Fear' is having."

The probability that this 'Fear Realm' is maintained is 'Second Kim Dokja' himself.

In order to maintain this huge layer of imagination, he would have to use the power of the 'Oldest Dream'.

However, he can only dream, but he can't make stories. So someone has to make stories for him.

Perhaps that must be why the 'Recorders of Fear' are gathered here.

They provide reading material for the King of Fear here, and they are receiving something in return.

If so, then so are we.

Even if this 'Time Fault' is a virtual worldline, if this world is still a dream dreamed by fragments of the 'Oldest Dream'—

"Even if this story is fake, the story we are getting could be real."

"Wait a minute, what is your plan?"

"Yes."

I answered with a grin.

"I will hunt the 'Mythical Constellations' here."

That was my second operation.

The so-called 'Mythical Constellation hunting plan'.

"However, no matter how many Transcendent Constellations you gather, if you fight them head-on, there is no chance of winning."

"I will not fight them head-on."

In order to deal with them, I have to set up a 'stage'. A place where I can become the most powerful, and a stage where they have no choice but to enter voluntarily.

「Let's lure the Mythical Constellations to Yoo Joonghyuk's 'inner self' to hunt them.」

---

[Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint 'Stage 3' is activated!]

[The exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', is strongly activated!]

In order for this operation to succeed, at least three conditions were necessary.

「One, the Myth-grade Constellations, including Zeus, must want Yoo Joonghyuk's soul.」

This wasn't difficult.

Because I believed that Yoo Joonghyuk's [Regression] ability and the Constellations curious about the secrets of this world would definitely fall into this trap.

「Two, Yoo Joonghyuk must think of me at the right moment.」

Recalling each other is a prerequisite for activating [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint].

Since Yoo Joonghyuk always curses me inwardly, I believed that this condition would be no problem.

Lastly, three.

「The [Fourth Wall] I have to be able to harm the Myth-grade Constellations.」

In the end, the operation was half successful. Zeus suffered a huge shock that twisted more than 80% of his legends, but he safely escaped the [Fourth Wall].

It may have been because my [Fourth Wall] was weaker than Kim Dokja's, or maybe I underestimated the 'Myth-grade Constellation' too much.

Since the 'Dream Eater' was caught in this way, I thought it would be worth trying on Zeus too.

Still, there was some gain.

[You have achieved an unbelievable feat.]

[A new legend is sprouting for you!]

If I can just finish this scenario safely, I will be able to obtain the legend of defeating a 'Myth-grade Constellation'.

"You bastard."

I smiled at Yoo Joonghyuk, who was glaring into the air and growling.

—It's been a while.

"What on earth were you thinking...!"

—Yoo Joonghyuk, it's not over yet.

The [Fourth Wall] surrounding the surroundings dispersed, and at the same time, the snowy landscape began to disappear. Yoo Joonghyuk's consciousness returned to its original place.

The landscape of the ark appeared again in front of me, who had possessed by the guy with [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint].

[The Myth-grade Constellations of the ark are astonished at seeing you!]

[Some Myth-grade Constellations are shocked by the 'wall' they witnessed!]

The Myth-grade Constellations looked somewhat frightened after confirming the [Fourth Wall] I had, but Zeus, whose stories had been considerably damaged, seemed to have rolled his eyes.

[The Constellation, 'Lightning', is furious!]

[The Constellation, 'Lightning', endures the aftershock of probability and descends into the incarnation!]

The sky of the world line was going wild. The ceiling of the gigantic ark was dyed in various colors, and lightning struck the floor in a continuous stream.

[Many 'Myth-grade Constellations' advise the 'lightning Constellation' to exercise restraint!]

[Many 'Myth-grade Constellations' are curious about the identity of the 'wall'!]

[Some 'Myth-grade Constellations' warn that they should not act rashly until they find out the identity of the 'wall'!]

The problem is that Yoo Joonghyuk has not yet come to his senses.

Damn it. If this is going to happen, I have to move Yoo Joonghyuk myself—

[The character in question is refusing your control.]

No, he's refusing the 'First-Person Protagonist Point of View'? I've never heard of such a case before?

Fortunately, Yoo Joonghyuk quickly came to his senses and stood up, holding the Hwangcheon-wolguk that had fallen to the floor.

I shouted at Yoo Joonghyuk.

—Dumplings! Let's eat dumplings!

I saw the incarnation of Zeus approaching me from the opposite hallway. The incarnation of a great god made of lightning itself, so much so that just looking at it would make you lose your mind. One fortunate thing is that since he had exhausted his strength in the [Fourth Wall] earlier, the power Zeus can now exert is only this much.

However, even with this power alone, Zeus was showing strength that far surpassed Indra and Kyrgios.

That was the true god of lightning. Zeus, the king of the Twelve Gods of <Olympus>.

"I'll eat half."

—Eat it all, just like that!

Yoo Joonghyuk didn't listen. As if half a dumpling was enough to deal with Zeus right now.

[Half of the 'Ultimate Murim Dumpling' was consumed.]

A golden current began to surge through Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body.

"The Story Core is beyond the corridor that guy is blocking."

In other words, if he could just get past that Zeus, he could confirm the end of this scenario.

"What's the plan?"

Of course there is a plan. But will we succeed?

I took a deep, invisible breath and said.

—Yoo Joonghyuk.

Even if the content is lacking, I am also Kim Dokja. And of course, even if the number of rounds is lacking, this guy is also Yoo Joonghyuk. Even though we are lacking, we are also Kim Dokja and Yoo Joonghyuk. So there is no way that the main characters of the main story could not do it.

—As you know, I am not good at using my body.

"I know."

—So I will leave your body to you.

"What you are saying is obvious?"

My strategy was simple.

Like Kim Dokja in the main story, I would borrow Yoo Joonghyuk's power in the text through [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint].

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', begins its storytelling.]

[All the stories of the 'Demon King of Salvation' respond to you!]

An unusual spark began to fly from Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body.

Originally, to use this power, I had to control Yoo Joonghyuk's body and fight from the 'First-Person Protagonist Point of View'.

But right now, Yoo Joonghyuk is the one controlling the body.

—Become the Yoo Joonghyuk I imagine.

Slowly closing my eyes, the pages began to turn in my head.

"What?"

[Estimated the number of Rounds will be interpreted based on your reading level.]

Only once did Yoo Joonghyuk appear in the main story using the 'spear'.

Yoo Joonghyuk hesitated as he read my memories together.

"This martial art."

This was the power that Yoo Joonghyuk originally used in the '41st Round'.

—That's right.

Of course, it would have been impossible to overcome the situation with just this martial art.

However, the current Yoo Joonghyuk is the Yoo Joonghyuk who has reached the 'Final Scenario'.

What would happen if the current Yoo Joonghyuk, who is close to becoming the ultimate incarnation, uses this martial art with the Hwangcheon-wolguk?

When I thought of Yoo Joonghyuk in my head, Yoo Joonghyuk stood holding the spear as if he were reproducing my imagination.

「The specialty is the 'spear'.」

As if we were holding a spear together, at that moment, we were embedded in one story. This is the only spear technique that can be compared to [Breaking the Sky Sword] in this universe.

It is the martial art of a world that was destroyed long ago, and the strongest martial art that Yoo Joonghyuk can use now.

「Soul Killing Spear.」

Zeus came running with a thunderous storm. The great power contained in the spear shook with fierce sparks. The unbearable aftershock was already approaching. Yoo Joonghyuk, holding the spear of the Hwangcheon-moongeuk tightly, opened his mouth.

"You know that too, right?"

At that moment, I thought I knew what Yoo Joonghyuk was going to say.

"You only get one chance."

And damn it.

"Do you know that?"

At this moment, there was only one Kim Dokja who could take those words.

「I'm actually the second.」

The spear was fired, and it flew in a single trajectory.

854 Episode 46 Big Joke (5)

Strength and strength. Will and will. Stories and stories clashed.

It was a great clash of light that I had never seen before. Something flashed before my eyes, and my vision briefly blacked out and then came back.

Someone screamed. The sound of gasping for breath. The smell of something burning.

And when I opened my eyes again.

"Supreme King!"

I saw Anna Croft, who had been rolling around in the dust, reaching out her hand towards me.

What happened?

Stories poured out of Yoo Joonghyuk's mouth. I had an ominous feeling.

Damn it, did I fail?

"You succeeded."

As if he had read my mind, Yoo Joonghyuk answered calmly.

Zeus's lightning, which had spread like fog, dispersed, and an empty hole was visible in the air. The trace of the Soul Killing Spear tearing through space. Between the sparks of lightning that were flying, I saw Zeus's incarnation with one arm and side blown off.

[The Constellation, 'Seat of Lightning', received a great shock to his incarnation body!]

"Now."

With Yoo Joonghyuk's words, I released [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint]. As my soul returned to my body, sparks rippled throughout my body.

With strength in my aching muscles, I staggered toward the passage on the other side.

Zeus, who had found me like that, unleashed an electric shock with his half-remaining incarnation. Yoo Joonghyuk stepped forward and blocked the electric shock. Even as his skin burned black, the guy didn't take his eyes off me.

"Go quickly! I can't hold out for long!"

Of course. Even if he was half Zeus, he was still a Myth-grade. He wasn't someone Yoo Joonghyuk could face to buy time on his own. He was even protected by the 'Giant Nebula'. Anna Croft, standing next to Yoo Joonghyuk who was swearing with bloodshot eyes, joined in.

"Go, Cheon Inho."

If Anna Croft pushed herself that far, it must mean that she could somehow hold out with [Future Sight].

I immediately activated [Way of the Wind] and started running.

—No matter what happens in the middle, just keep running until the end. There is a power room at the end of the straight line.

I believed Yoo Joonghyuk's words and ran.

Indeed, when I reached the middle of the hallway, the surrounding scenery changed and a new world unfolded.

'The Last Ark' is a stage that gathers the 'Great Tales' of each Nebula. So it was inevitable that various worldviews would be mixed up.

While running through the hallway, I ran through Tartarus of the <Underworld>, ran through the Temple of <Olympus>, and crossed Bifrost of <Asgard>.

[Chase! Catch him!]

Soon after, Constellations chasing me appeared from somewhere.

Did they break through Yoo Joonghyuk and Anna Croft?

The sound of Zeus's lightning that could be heard from afar was also gradually getting closer. For a moment, my vision flashed, and someone pushed me away and took the lightning instead.

"Go, disciple."

When on earth did they enter the ark?

Cheok Jungyeong and Kyrgios were there.

"If you're my disciple, you can run faster than that."

I nodded at Kyrgios's words.

[The story 'Heir of the Eternal Name' begins its storytelling.]

As soon as Kim Dokja's story came to me, [Bookmark] was activated in my head. I immediately put 'Kyrgios Rodgraim' in the bookmark.

「Big and small ultimately depend on the perception of existence, so the existence that can freely control that cognitive realm is the greatest.」

['Bookmark' is activated!]

[Your understanding of the person in question is considerable!]

Is it worth listening to the difficult words so far?

[Your enlightenment increases due to the effect of 'Abstruse Murim Dumplings'!]

Or, it may be the effect of the strange dumplings I ate then.

[The level of the person in question is too high to fully reproduce the skill.]

[The level of the skill being activated is forcibly adjusted.]

Kim Dokja's main skill. Baekcheong's bright light soon covered my entire body.

[The exclusive skill, 'Full Personification Lv. 10', is activated.]

[Your current physical composition is different from that of the character.]

[Your current physical composition cannot use 'Full Electrification.]

[A powerful skill penalty is eating away at your body!]

I see. [Full Electrification] is a skill that only "dwarves" can use.

However.

[Your 'status' overcomes the skill penalty!]

If the caster's 'Strength' exceeds a certain level, even non-dwarves can temporarily use [Full Personification].

Kugugugugugu!

Even with destructive power several times its original value.

[Kuaaaaak!]

The Constellations that were blocking my path fell away like moths, burning.

[What, what is that!]

Since I had already exhausted my mental power with [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint], the time I could maintain [Full Electrification] was less than 10 seconds. However, I was able to move quite a distance in just those 10 seconds.

Kuduk.

Cheon Inho's knees buckled as he could not withstand the power of [Full Electrification]. The [Bookmark] disappeared. I limped on my injured knee and continued to run.

They were not swept away by the storm of [Full Electrification]. The Constellations began to rush toward me again.

I still couldn't see the power room.

What should I do? Should I use [Incite]? Or should I use [Bookmark] again? If not—

"Come to your senses. You who deceived the stars."

The man who said those words was an unexpected person. He supported me and walked about fifteen steps, then blasted the Constellations that were rushing toward me.

"If you die, the last of humanity will die too. Do you intend to make my efforts go to waste?"

He was the Blood Demon who had been resurrected by my [Deceased Summoning].

The Blood Demon's corpses that had entered the ark together rushed toward the Constellations.

Even as his arms flew away and his thighs burst, the Blood Demon did not give up and shouted.

"Go. Go and prove that humanity has survived until the end."

Then came the sound of the Blood Demon's corpses being torn apart. Lightning strikes continued to strike from the angry sky. At that moment, I thought that I could not avoid it this time.

"Evil Sophist."

This time, someone carried me. At the same time, the falling lightning lost its way and scattered.

"My ability here can only last 5 minutes."

Ye Hyunwoo, the 'Disappearing One'.

His skill of making existence disappear finally shone in the Last Scenario.

The Ten Evils that I had revived just before coming here were there.

Kyung Sein, who was guarding the path I had walked, shouting. Lee Dansu, who was setting up a trap. Kang Ilhun, who was spreading false rumors, saying, "Cheon Inho ran away in the opposite direction!"

Finally, a small door appeared at the end of the hallway.

Ye Hyunwoo, whose skill's duration had ended, put me down and said.

"It was a good thing I didn't disappear this time."

Leaving these words behind, Ye Hyunwoo fought against the Constellations with the remaining Ten Evils.

I looked at the backs of the Ten Evils for a moment.

Has Cheon Inho seen the same scenery as me? What is the guy who pushed me into this Fault thinking as he reads this story?

Soon, the cold handle felt in my hand.

[The 'Myth-grade Constellations' belonging to the final ark are astonished!]

The ecstatic smell of stories is felt as soon as the door is opened. The 'power source' that condensed the most dazzling stories of this world line was glowing yellow in the center of the room. It was the 'Story Core' that I had been looking for.

Without hesitation, I reached out to the Story Core.

[You have acquired the 'Story Core'.]

If I destroy this, the Last Scenario will end.

[Some 'Myth-grade Constellations' try to persuade you!]

[The Giant Nebula, <Asgard>, wants to offer you a chance to 'board the ark'!]

[The Giant Nebula, <Vedas>, offers you a piece of <Locapala>!]

The messages from the Myth-grade Constellations surged into my head.

"If I was going to stop here, I wouldn't have even started."

[Many 'Myth-grade Constellations' say that if you don’t stop right now…!]

I struck the Story Core with all my might. Perhaps because it was a condensed story, the core didn’t break easily.

I struck it, and struck it again.

The Story Core began to crack little by little.

[The Constellation, 'Lightning Seat', spews out his terrifying rage at you!]

Zeus's lightning bolt belatedly pierced through the engine room and exploded.

I laughed even as I felt the pain of my body burning.

"It’s too late, you son of a bitch."

The moment I struck the core for the last time, there was a sound of something breaking. The enormous story that the Constellations had gathered to cross world lines was released, and a pillar of light rose toward the sky.

[Someone has achieved the clear condition of the 'Last Scenario'!]

[The <Star Stream>'s probability changes drastically!]

[The entrance to the sealed wall opens!]

When I blinked again, I was in a completely different place.

A huge wall of text surrounded my eyes.

I realized where I was.

「He couldn't tell if it was his thoughts or a record written on the wall. However, what was certain was that everything he thought, said, and did was written on the wall in front of him.」

I had finally arrived.

「The 'Final Wall' was there.」

I slowly placed my hand on the wall and the [Fourth Wall] reacted.

[The Exclusive Skill, 'Fourth Wall', activates!]

[The 'Final Wall' accepts your presence.]

My body seemed to be seeping in like a fluid, and before I knew it, I was inside the wall.

I looked around, steadying my staggering body.

A room made up of dazzlingly glowing hologram monitors. It was a room I knew, a room I had experienced well.

「The 'Dokkaebi King' was there.」

It was dozens of times the size of an average dokkaebi. No matter how I looked at it, it looked extremely obese.

I wonder what it had been eating right before I came in.

The guy who had been chewing something in his mouth turned his huge head and looked at me.

[Huh? What is it.]

The eyes of the one who had watched the 'scenarios' the longest.

I was momentarily overwhelmed by that gaze and lost my words.

The Dokkaebi King slowly got up from his seat and stood in front of me with his belly rippling, then lowered his head and began to observe me.

[How did you get here? This is not a place you are allowed to be?]

The Dokkaebi King's large fingers touched my head. Even though my body would explode if I were crushed, I couldn't move a finger.

A spark lightly shot up and an interested expression appeared on the Dokkaebi King's face.

[Look at this. This isn't a normal worldline.]

With just one finger, the Dokkaebi King seemed to understand how I existed here.

[Using real life to create elaborate fakes. How could you… I see. You.]

With a small exclamation, the Dokkaebi King nodded.

[You are a being who 'can't help but do that'.]

I tried to open my mouth somehow. I tried to ask something.

But my lips wouldn't open. As if 'this story after this has all been decided', my body didn't move at all.

As if he had guessed my state, the Dokkaebi King smiled.

[Everything is already written, and is being written at the same time. You came to confirm the 'true ending' of this world line.]

The Dokkaebi King smiled kindly and handed me a story fragment.

[This is what you were looking for. Small and amazing star.]

And the moment I held the story, the stage of the world went dark.

[You have successfully cleared all the tasks of the 'Time Fault'!]

[All the 'Recorders of Fear' sigh at your amazing interpretation.]

[The 'Recorders of Fear' are discussing your interpretation reward.]

[The 'King of Fear' rises from the throne.]

[■■-level Fear, the 'Final Chapter' of the 'Evil Sophist' is playing.]

The old ending of the 40th Round began to be written on the 'Final Wall'.

855 Episode 46 Big Joke (6)

Since Lee Gilyoung visited the 'Recycling Center', there has been a slight change in the routine of <Kim Dokja’s Company>.

"The 41st world line circuit is unstable. It will probably be difficult to enter directly for the time being."

"So we won't be able to visit ahjussi in the future?"

Lee Seolhwa answered Shin Yoosung's question with a dark expression.

"Since Biyoo is in the process of restoring the circuit, there will be another chance."

<Kim Dokja’s Company> has been unable to enter the 41st world line in the form of 'Possession' for the time being.

The only connected circuit is the 'Sponsor Circuit' used by Yoo Sangah.

"Sangah-ssi, please refrain from exercising your authority as a sponsor if possible."

Yoo Sangah's circuit is the only channel through which <Kim Dokja’s Company> can currently influence the 41st world line. If even this passage is blocked, <Kim Dokja’s Company> will not be able to intervene in the '41st Round' at all.

"And Joonghyuk-ssi. You shouldn't sneak near the Void Curtain again. If you do that again... Joonghyuk-ssi?"

Yoo Joonghyuk, who had been by her side until a moment ago, was nowhere to be seen.

When Lee Seolhwa let out a light sigh, Yoo Sangah comforted her.

"Joonghyuk-ssi would have understood."

"Right?"

"He isn't that stupid."

Although he sometimes acts like a real fool, the two barely swallowed the gossip they knew about each other.

At that moment, the door opened and Lee Gilyoung and Lee Jihye came in. The 'kkoma Kim Dokja' was on top of Lee Gilyoung's head, and judging from his appearance, he seemed to have come from a short walk nearby.

Lee Gilyoung, who had been taking a quick look at the atmosphere, sat down on Han Sooyoung's laptop on the table and asked. "Noonas, is it serialized today?"

When Lee Seolhwa nodded, Shin Yoosung and Lee Jihye also gathered in front of the laptop.

The only hobby of <Kim Dokja's Company>, which recently lost the means to interfere with the 41st Round.

It was reading the story of the '41st Round' newly written in the manuscript file of 『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』 left by Han Sooyoung.

"Wow, it's real. The volume has increased again."

"Is Sooyoung unnie really serializing it?"

"I don't think so. The writing style is strangely different."

"Lee Gilyoung, do you know what her writing style is?"

"Don't ignore people, Shin Yoosung."

Shin Yoosung ignored Gilyoung's words and checked the subtitle of the newly serialized story.

"A Big Joke... What does it mean?"

"Someone must have told a really funny joke."

"How stupid. Is that really true?"

As Lee Gilyeong and Shin Yoosung were bickering, Lee Jihye grabbed their shoulders and said,

"Both of you, step aside. If you're not going to read, let me read."

"You don't read novels, do you?"

"Don't I read Soooyoung unnie's novels?"

The three of them sat with a small chair between them for a while, then soon started scrolling and turning the pages.

After reading several pages like that, the three of them let out a short breath and said,

"Ah, the story of Cheon Inho will come up soon."

"But does it make sense that Cheon Inho lived this long in the 40th Round? We also went through a lot of hardship and to get over the [Final Wall]."

"It will be revealed in the next chapter."

The three of them who were mumbling glanced at each other almost simultaneously and fell silent. Even without saying anything, they could tell that they felt the same way.

「Did Dokja-ahjussi always feel this way?」

As if he had heard that thought, the kkoma Kim Dokja who was on top of Lee Gilyoung's head came down on the table and put his hand on Han Sooyoung's monitor.

A light spark flew out of the laptop.

"Huh?"

Is it an error? Suddenly, the laptop's power blinked and the document was distorted.

Shin Yoosung was surprised to find that the font of a certain character’s name was broken.

"Hey, Lee Gilyoung. What did you press?"

"What did you say? Didn’t you break it?"

"Unnie, did you see that too? The last time he pressed the keyboard, Lee Gilyoung-"

Instead of answering Shin Yoosung, Lee Jihye stared blankly down at her own hands.

Lee Jihye slowly opened her mouth.

"That’s strange. Am I already getting presbyopia?"

Lee Seolhwa asked with a bitter smile.

"What are you talking about?"

"No, isn't that... a little strange? Are my eyes dim?"

"Dim?"

At that moment, Lee Seolhwa's expression changed. Yoo Sangah also had a very serious expression on her face.

Lee Jihye, who hadn't seen their expressions yet, tilted her head and muttered.

"Something about us... doesn't it seem a little blurry? Is it an illusion?"

The laptop blinked again and a new sentence appeared.

「And so, one of the extras who had no presence finally reached the end of the world.」

---

「And so, one of the extras who had no presence finally reached the end of the world.」

It was the story of a narrow-eyed man wearing a crimson coat.

「The world finally remembered his name.」

Some called him the 'Evil Sophist', and others called him the 'One Who Deceived The Stars'.

However, his real name, as given by the world, was one.

「His name is 'Cheon Inho'.」

Cheon Inho, who had cleared the Last Scenario, was almost out of breath. He had lost his right arm, his left leg showed his bone, and his cheeks were torn long enough to reveal the inside of his mouth.

Even so, he was smiling. As if smiling like that was the only way he could mock the world.

'How did I get here?'

It had truly been a long and arduous journey. If he were to explain everything that had happened during that time, it would take more than ten volumes of a historical novel.

Cheon Inho thought this and smiled bitterly.

As he slowly walked away from the crashed ark, a distant fog rolled in as if it were enveloping him.

'The Final Fog.'

Cheon Inho had also heard the name of this fog.

The fog seen in the memories of Myth-grade Constellations, the mysterious veil that envelops the area where all scenarios end. At the end of this veil, there must be a secret that the Star Stream has been hiding.

Cheon Inho walked and walked through the fog. How long had he walked like that? When he came to his senses, he realized that a huge obstacle was blocking his path.

It was a wall.

[The 'Final Wall' is looking at you.]

「The Final Wall. Cheon Inho repeated the name of the wall to himself.」

The moment he put his hand toward it, wondering what this was, the wall bounced him off with a strong spark. As if he had no right to touch it.

The moment Cheon Inho frowned and tried to say a word, a voice was heard from behind him.

[If you touch it again, you'll die this time.]

"..."

[What a strange guy. How did you get here?]

As Cheon Inho slowly turned around, a large dokkaebi looked down at him. The eyes that intuitively saw the beginning and end of a world were there. Cheon Inho looked up at his eyes and opened his mouth.

"Finally, we've met."

The dokkaebi's eyes flashed with a strangeness at the sight of him, who was not at all intimidated.

Cheon Inho added as if enjoying the strangeness.

"It's nice to meet you. The 'Dokkaebi King' of this world."

[You recognize me.]

"Wouldn't it be strange not to recognize you? Rather, you came and went in person before me and finally came to give me the final scenario reward."

[Final scenario reward?]

The Dokkaebi King rolled his large eyes as if he was wondering what that meant.

[You cleared the 'Final Scenario', didn't you?]

"Wouldn't you know since I've come this far?"

[No way...]

The Dokkaebi King hurriedly looked at Cheon Inho, examined something, and added.

[That's strange, that world line is already an 'abandoned' place?]

"Abandoned?"

[It means a world line that no one looks into, that has no value. And yet the scenarios are still continuing?]

Cheon Inho tilted his head with a puzzled smile as if he couldn’t understand that, and then asked back.

"Does it really matter whether someone looks into my story or not? I cleared all the scenarios you set."

[I can’t believe you cleared the scenarios normally.]

"If you really doubt it, why don’t you look into my stories?"

The Dokkaebi King hesitated for a moment and extended his thick finger. Soon after, Cheon Inho’s story began to be read with the tip of his thick finger.

And after a while,

[This… I can’t believe it. You…?]

The Dokkaebi King sighed with faint astonishment.

[How can you use the 'Great True Story' of the great castle gate in this way… Did you follow the 'Direct Sweep of the Oldest Dream'?]

Cheon Inho proudly spread his arms and nodded.

"I did use some tricks, but I guess you can believe that I cleared the Last Scenario now."

[Interesting, really interesting, and it's a shame, if the 'Oldest Dream' was still watching this world line...]

The Dokkaebi King was absorbed in something for a while, then looked at Cheon Inho and asked.

[What kind of reward do you want?]

"What kind of reward can you give me?"

[Anything.]

Anything.

Cheon Inho's expression filled with an inexplicable joy, as if he had been waiting for those words.

The Dokkaebi King continued to speak.

[If you want eternal life, I will give you eternal life. If you want endless wealth, I can give you endless wealth. If you want to become a god of a world, I can make it happen, and if you want to revive someone precious, I can revive them.]

"If I revive someone precious, is that person the same 'precious person' that I remember?"

[Yes. I will revive them exactly as they are in your memories.]

"That's right. Then I will just be getting a replica of the 'precious person' in my memories."

[You could think of it that way. Indeed, it's a thought worthy of someone who has come this far.]

The Dokkaebi King chuckled as if he was happy.

[Tell me what you want in return.]

"The reward I want is."

Cheon Inho took a deep breath and said.

"To get to meet 'Supreme King Yoo Joonghyuk' once again."

The Dokkaebi King's expression changed subtly.

[By Supreme King, are you referring to the 'Puppet of the Oldest Dream'?]

"The Constellations also call him that."

[Why do you want to meet him again?]

"I want to fight that guy again."

[Oh, such a romantic reason.]

"And after I beat him again, I'll say this."

A strange madness spread across Cheon Inho's expression.

"Look at this, I finally made it in the world where you failed."

The Dokkaebi King looked at Cheon Inho's face for a moment.

The Dokkaebi King's expression slowly distorted. Only after a moment did Cheon Inho only realize the meaning of that expression.

The Dokkaebi King was smiling.

[Little Incarnation, you will never meet him again. He was born different from you.]

"What does that mean?"

[Hmm… yes. Since you came this far, you are qualified to confirm 'that'.]

The Dokkaebi King stared into the air for a moment as if pondering something, then snapped his fingers.

[Look.]

With a light finger snap, sentences appeared before his eyes.

「Yoo Joonghyuk thought. This round will never fail. No, it must not fail. I cannot repeat the last round again. I will not repeat that despair, that sadness. In order to do that, first…」

Cheon Inho muttered as he watched the endless story in the air.

"What is this?"

[It’s a story.]

"I know that too. What I’m asking is—"

[A story that uses him as a 'character'.]

As the Dokkaebi King lightly extended his hand, the flowing sentences quietly lingered along his hand.

[To be more precise, it could be said to be the most important 'story' in this entire universe.]

The sentences danced around the Dokkaebi King, and were soon sucked into the [Final Wall].

[All the stories of this world line exist for the completion of that 'story'.]

"What on earth is that story?"

[You originally had no right to confirm that name… Well, what does it matter? This world line was abandoned anyway.]

The Dokkaebi King smirked as if nothing would change even if the likes of Cheon Inho found out the truth.

[Now, this is the truth of the universe you've been struggling to live in.]

When the Dokkaebi King's palm opened, there was a book there. A gust of wind blew from somewhere and turned the pages.

Cheon Inho began to read aloud the sentence written on the first page of the book.

"There are three ways to survive in a ruined world."

The moment he read that sentence, Cheon Inho was overcome by an inexplicable sense of discomfort. His instincts were warning him. He shouldn't read this story. It was the truth of a world he didn't need to know. Even so, Cheon Inho couldn't stop.

"I've forgotten some of them now. But one thing is certain. That is... the fact that you, who are reading this now, will survive."

Cheon Inho absentmindedly reached out and checked the title of the book. The name of the world he had lived in was written there.

『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』.

856 Episode 46 Big Joke (7)

Cheon Inho started turning the pages one by one. Even though it was his first story, he turned the pages easily.

It couldn't be otherwise.

Because the story contained all the scenarios he had experienced.

「It's a dokkaebi. Someone said that the moment it first appeared.」

The more he read, the more strange the feeling he had. Even though he knew that he had no choice but to read this story to the end, he felt like he would never be able to turn back once he finished it.

[Are you going to keep reading?]

The Dokkaebi King seemed to know that fact as well.

[After you finish reading it, you will never be able to return to the world you knew.]

"I wonder if I have a choice."

Cheon Inho answered with his characteristically squinted eyes. And then he began to read the story with his eyes even narrowed.

In the story, a man he knew well appeared.

A man who had been his rival throughout his life in this world. Only to kill him, to accomplish what he could not, Cheon Inho lived this life.

"Yoo Joonghyuk."

He wanted to mock his splendid justice, and he also wanted to prove that he could see the end of this world without such a noble life.

"That's funny. How many worlds have you led to destruction just to see the ending you want?"

He turned the pages with trembling hands. Cheon Inho’s shoulders quietly shook as he watched the 'Supreme King' he knew speak, act, and live there.

—Next time, it wouldn't be bad to have the Ten Evils as colleagues.

Because of Yoo Joonghyuk's words, he revived the Ten Evils and brought them in as his colleagues. He tried to prove that what was possible in the next round was possible in this round as well. He joined hands with the Constellations, deceived and betrayed them. He endured life while enduring plausible nicknames like 'Evil Sophist' and 'The One Who Deceived the Stars.'

It's okay to be a coward.

It was okay to be called evil.

Because that was him. He thought that if he could survive to the end and achieve the final victory, it wouldn’t matter, if he could prove himself that way, it would be good.

But what is this?

"Am I in this story?"

In front of the story with the seven-letter title, Cheon Inho felt like all his past stories were crumbling from the corners.

[You are.]

He didn’t need to hear the explanation from the Dokkaebi King. Because the moment he turned the page, his name appeared there.

「"I see. My name is Cheon Inho."」

Cheon Inho laughed.

Is this really 'me'?

What do you know about me?

How could you describe me like that, knowing who I am and what I'm thinking?

「I could see what was going on. Cheon Inho's smiling face was visible behind the people. His lips were speaking.」

'Choose.'

Will you share food and become a hero? Or will you monopolize food all by yourself and become a villain?」

"Ah, hahaha."

Is such a sloppy villain really 'me'? He turned the page over and over again, thinking that.

Finally, his eyes stopped at one sentence.

「"Huh, huh… Yes, you…"」

The guy couldn't finish his words. That was because Jung Heewon, who appeared from behind, pierced Cheon Inho's face from the crown down.」

Cheon Inho read his own death over and over again. It was a proper and accurate death.

Cheon Inho, who had been reading that sentence over and over with eyes full of disbelief, slowly raised his head.

"Is this all there is to my story?

[Yes.]

"This is not me."

[But it is you.]

"I am here."

[No, you are there.]

The Dokkaebi King spread his index and middle fingers toward the empty space. Then, a cigarette magically appeared between them.

The Dokkaebi King silently lit the cigarette and spoke.

[In this universe, only what is recorded becomes the truth. You here will not be recorded anywhere. No one wants your story, and no one wants to read it.]

The Dokkaebi King added, glancing at the book in Cheon Inho's hand.

[But that story is different. That story was chosen by the 'Oldest Dream' and was completed. Existing as a character written in that story is all the choices you have.]

"I decide how I will exist."

The Dokkaebi King looked down at Cheon Inho for a moment as if he felt sorry for him.

[Little incarnation. How much do you know about yourself? Do you remember your parents?]

"Of course, I know everything."

[Do you remember your parents?]

"You're asking the obvious. My parents—"

Cheon Inho stopped talking until that point. Why on earth couldn't he? The words that seemed like they would flow out like a stream of water stopped inside him.

「He didn't remember his parents.」

Following that, a shiver ran through his head like lightning.

And after a while, a single sentence appeared on a wall far away.

「Cheon Inho was an orphan.」

Was that his thought? Or was it a setting someone had just made up?

Cheon Inho pursed his lips in confusion.

"I don't have parents. Because I was an orphan."

[That's right.]

"Did you know?"

[Yes.]

"Because someone made me like that?"

[Yes.]

"Who is that?"

[This universe.]

Cheon Inho and the Dokkaebi King were silent for a moment. The two beings who lived different stories but were described in the same story stared at the darkness of the universe where the stars had gone out for a moment.

"Who is Kim Dokja?"

[The symbol of the 'Oldest Dream'.]

"Is he the 'main character' of this story?"

[Now the entire universe was reorganized around him.]

"What's the reason?"

[I don't know that either. I'm just a character in this story.]

"Why isn't the Supreme King the main character? How many times has that guy regressed?"

[1,864 times.]

"He acted so great to me, and then he regressed so many times before he finally got to the end?"

The Dokkaebi King did not answer.

Cheon Inho started to giggle. His laughter sounded sad, resigned, and filled with terrifying anger. Then, at one moment, Cheon Inho's laughter suddenly stopped.

"I have decided on a wish."

Cheon Inho stood up, holding the page he was reading tightly.

"I will end this universe."

[…]

"I will take revenge on the being who designed this universe, on that guy named Kim Dokja, and on the 'Oldest Dream' that dreams of this universe."

[I can't do that.]

"Didn't you say you would grant me anything?"

[Your request is beyond my ability to grant.]

"Is it okay to be just that?"

[Yes, that's all. All you and I can do is read the story to the end. And in that story, we can realize and accept how insignificant we are. You should be grateful that you have this opportunity. Most incarnations are not even given the chance to know the truth of the world.]

"Do you think I came all this way to know this truth?"

[But that's all you can know.]

"I once had a similar conversation with Hermes."

[Hermes?]

"He said that even if I reached the 'end of everything', I would never be able to see the scenery of the world I wanted. Because—"

The pages of the book were torn slightly by Cheon Inho's forceful hands.

"I'm not 'Supreme King Yoo Joonghyuk'."

A tale flowed out from the torn pages of the book.

A story not written in 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint'.

It was Cheon Inho's own tale.

「"Hermes, what does it mean that I can't see the end of the world?"」

During the conquest of <Olympus>, Cheon Inho accidentally connected to the joint network created by <Olympus>.

There, he came face to face with the artificial intelligence that controlled the network built by <Olympus>—or perhaps a new intelligence, as it were—Hermes, the true form of the 'Master of Skywalk'.

「[That's exactly right. Evil sophist. According to my 'Big Data', you won't be able to reach the end of the world even if you clear the final scenario.]」

「"So what does that mean?"」

「"[Because it's just written that way.]"」

「"It's written?"」

「[Have you heard of something called 'Revelation'?]」

Hermes told him about the true nature of the 'Revelation'. In this world, there is a huge 'wall' with all the sentences written on it, and all the Revelation flows out from that 'wall'.

「[But the Revelation has been cut off for a while now.]」

「"It's cut off? Why?"」

「[Probably because there is no reason for the 'Revelation' to exist in this world anymore.]」

The timing of the Revelation's disappearance was after the death of the Supreme King Yoo Joonghyuk. As if there was no need for any more sentences in the world where he disappeared.

「[Cheon Inho, I think this way. The Revelation is actually a complete story, and at the center of that story is 'Supreme King Yoo Joonghyuk.]」

Hermes's reasoning was correct. The result was the book he was holding in his hands right now.

「"Hermes. If you help me, Olympus will be destroyed. Why did you decide to help me?"」

「[Well. Maybe… I also got bored with the 'Revelation'.]」

Cheon Inho laughed while holding the end of the world that Hermes had wanted to see so much in his hand.

"I can't admit it."

[What are you talking about?]

Instead of answering, Cheon Inho looked at the huge wall they had turned away from.

The 'Final Wall' where all the Revelation was written.

"What is beyond that 'wall'? I will go beyond the wall."

[You can't go. You are a being that 'can't' do that.]

The Dokkaebi King let out a deep sigh and said.

[I understand your feelings, but your story ends here. You are destined not to be recorded on the 'Final Wall'.]

"Is that what you decided? Or is it what is written on the 'Final Wall'?"

Cheon Inho pulled out the sword at his waist with one arm. As the [Black Heavenly Sword] with its pitch-black blade let out a strange cry, the Dokkaebi King's expression hardened.

[Do I really have to decide your end like that?]

The Dokkaebi King waved his hand lightly as if he had already read all of his stories. Then, Cheon Inho's knees magically gave up with a 'thud'.

[You can't beat me.]

Cheon Inho's specialty was 'information warfare'.

Based on a tactical strategy. So it was natural that he couldn't use any force against the 'Dokkaebi King' he was seeing for the first time.

However, at that moment, with a slap, the 'Dokkaebi King's' finger was cut off.

[How—]

When the Dokkaebi King hurriedly looked around, Cheon Inho was already gone. When he turned around, Cheon Inho was dragging his knees and had reached the 'Final Wall'. It was the application of the ability of the Ten Evils, Ye Hyunwoo, the 'Disappearing One'.

"You didn't see it properly. How did I clear the 'Final Chapter'?"

A golden light flowed out from Cheon Inho's half-opened eyes.

[Exclusive attribute, 'New Intelligence', is activating.]

New Intelligence. The sum of big data created by <Olympus>. Hermes's exclusive attribute, which collects all the data in this world and makes a kind of [Future Simulation] based on the data possible. Cheon Inho repeated countless 'simulations' using the data collected by 'new intelligence'. Just like Yoo Joonghyuk repeated regressions, he also repeated simulations a hundred, a thousand, ten thousand times in order to clear 'just once'.

In this way, Cheon Inho found the only way to clear the final chapter, and was now here.

"I don't need to fight you. Because what I want—"

Cheon Inho's palm met the wall with a sound of tsutsutsu.

"It's beyond this."

With sparks flying fiercely, Cheon Inho felt the wall pushing him away. If this continued, his entire body would be burned black. Even though he knew this fact well, Cheon Inho did not take his hand off the wall.

[The exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', is activated!]

"Wall. I."

Because, he was the best 'instigator' in this world.

"The sentence written on the last wall."

With that declaration, Cheon Inho felt his body being sucked into the wall. The Dokkaebi King's screams faded away, and his body, which had turned into a story, instantly seeped into the wall.

「That's how 'Cheon Inho' became a part of the story.」

When he came to his senses again, he realized that he had entered the wall. His heart pounded, and he was out of breath with an unknown joy.

"I have come, Supreme King."

He would finally be able to meet Yoo Joonghyuk again. Or maybe he would be able to meet the being who dreamed of this damned world.

"Oldest Dream!"

But no one answered his voice. He slowly blinked his eyes and saw the surrounding scenery.

The endless snowfield spread out before his eyes.

Cheon Inho hesitated and carefully took a step. He took one step, then two.

There were no footprints left. As if he wasn't even worthy of leaving footprints in this world.

Cheon Inho quietly looked down at the snowfield and began to laugh.

"Is there really no one?"

A world of nothingness. Trapped in the margins beyond the walls where time and space do not exist, he walked through the world. He walked for a long time.

He walked for a day, two days.

Three days, four days. A week.

A month, two months.

A year. Two years. No, maybe,

「How long have I walked?」

In fact, isn't all of this a mirage? This is a world between sentences. A place where a hundred or a thousand years can pass with a single sentence.

Thinking like that, Cheon Inho,

「Everything just felt like a big joke.」

Was the Dokkaebi King right? Was this really his fate? Was this the end given to him, this terrible journey of quietly dying without being written down anywhere or remembered by anyone, just wandering around in search of a margin where he could be buried?

"Why."

Cheon Inho opened his eyes and looked up at the sky. In the midst of his deep sense of humiliation, Cheon Inho tried to say something for the last time.

"Isn't it me?"

But that was all he could say, and after saying those words, he realized that maybe that was really his desire.

Maybe he wanted to be the main character. Maybe that's why he wanted to meet the Supreme King again and make fun of this world. Maybe he wanted someone to dream of him as a villain.

So in fact.

「Maybe he also had a story he wanted to leave behind.」

The sky of the white night. It was then that a star twinkled in the distance.

The twinkling star exploded in a dazzling manner and scattered throughout the universe. How big must the star have been that the explosion could be seen from here?

But since it was so far away, that star must have exploded a long time ago.

He was already seeing the end of a star that no longer existed in the world. With that thought in mind, he vaguely reached out to the sky, and saw a few meteors flying from the direction where the star had exploded.

One of the meteors was flying straight towards Cheon Inho.

Cheon Inho was startled and took a step back. With a light noise, the meteor crashed not far from the snowfield.

Cheon Inho hurriedly approached the place where the meteor had fallen.

There was a small cradle there.

Cheon Inho knelt down and put his hand into the cradle.

「There was a newborn baby who seemed to have been born in a story.」

Cheon Inho slowly picked up the baby. Then the baby looked at him. He only received a glance, but at that moment, Cheon Inho felt his blurry self become clearer.

Only then did Cheon Inho realize who this baby was, and what he could give him.

「Thus, the 'One Who Deceived the Stars' finally reached the reward of the scenarios.」

Cheon Inho smiled and called the baby's name.

"Your name is Kim Dokja."

The baby smiled brightly.

857 Episode 47 King of Fear (1)

I couldn't come to my senses because so many shocking memories came rushing back at once. What on earth was I looking at?

[Trait, 'Record Repairer', activates.]

[The exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', activates!]

The only thing that allowed me to come to my senses was the trait and skill.

「Cheon Inho reached the 'end of the world'.」

The journeys I had seen in the '40th Round' began to be organized into sentences.

「He met the Dokkaebi King there and overcame the 'Final Wall'.」

In fact, that alone was an unbelievable achievement. Clearing the 'final scenario' in just one time, and without the help of Yoo Joonghyuk or the main characters. Even if he borrowed the power of the 'new intelligence', it was impossible.

And yet, Cheon Inho did it. Not as the main character or supporting actor, but as an extra.

What did Cheon Inho want to show?

Even without lofty ideologies or beliefs, if you have the goal of seeing the end of the scenario, did he want to show that you can do it even if you are not the main character?

What did he gain at the end of such a fierce life?

「What Cheon Inho encountered at the end of the world was a vast snowfield.」

I could tell where that place was. It was between the lines of sentences. A cold land where no story is written, where only one person's gaze exists.

Cheon Inho was the first to step there, and he discovered something at the end of that snowfield.

「Kim Dokja.」

The goosebumps running down my spine wouldn't stop.

Could it be? Was it Cheon Inho who raised 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'?

Even his memories didn't end there.

「"I see. You were abandoned here in return for loving that story so much."」

Cheon Inho's voice could be heard occasionally.

「"Don't worry. I won't abandon you."」

A blurry image flashed by. In that image, Cheon Inho was holding a child, and walking together while holding hands. It seemed like they were talking to each other.

The two looked up at the white night sky, saw falling stars, and walked while humming. Sometimes they laughed with similar expressions.

If I didn't know anything, it was a scenery that I would consider extremely beautiful.

「"Let's walk together."」

Then came the sound of sparks.

As memories became entangled, the last sentence I heard was this.

「"Until the day this world is destroyed."」

[■■Unexpected Fear, the final chapter of 'Evil Sophist' has been completed.]

[You have achieved a non-existent achievement!]

[You have acquired a new tale!]

[The <Star Stream> is incapable of determining the grade of the tale you have acquired!]

[The dokkaebis of the Management Bureau are astonished at your achievement.]

[The balance of the world line is shaken!]

When I came to my senses, I was sitting on the snowfield on the screen. I didn’t know why I was there. Instead, I saw familiar shoes that might explain it.

I called the name of the man without footprints.

"Cheon Inho."

I slowly raised my head, and a man with a familiar face was there.

"Did you raise 'Kim Dokja'?"

"You and he were quite the kids."

The face I had seen the most in this world. The eyes that had always met me through the screen door and the mirror were now 'really' looking at me.

When I stood up, our eye levels soon became the same.

Cheon Inho said, seeming to like that fact.

"You finally have a face that seems curious about the villain’s story."

I nodded honestly.

"I’m curious."

"Would you like to walk a little?"

We stood side by side and started walking through the snow-covered field. But since Cheon Inho's footprints were gone, when I looked back, it seemed like I had walked alone.

"The Kim Dokja you raised… is that the 'Kim Dokja' I know?"

"There are many Kim Dokjas in this worldline. The Demon King of Salvation, the Watcher of Light and Darkness, and…"

"You know who I'm talking about, right?"

Since Cheon Inho didn't answer and just laughed, I asked him as if I was teasing him.

"Is the Kim Dokja you raised the 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' that I know?"

"'Snowfield Kim Dokja'."

Cheon Inho added, seeming to find the nickname interesting.

"By any chance, when you say 'Snowfield Kim Dokja', are you referring to the 'Kim Dokja' who tore apart his own brother and dreamed of a new universe? Some call it the 49% Kim Dokja, that Kim Dokja."

It wasn't a story I wanted to hear so clearly.

Cheon Inho muttered, perhaps because my expression was funny.

"Oh, now that I think about it, you were 'one' of the 49% Kim Dokja."

"I—"

"But the Kim Dokja I raised was very different from you."

"..."

"You didn't want to be a Kim Dokja, so you were born with a different name, and you were able to receive your parents' love."

That's right. I had parents who loved me. It would be a lie if I said I had no misfortune in life, but I've never been as miserable as the 'Kim Dokjas' in the story.

"But the Kim Dokja I raised was different. He had no parents, and there was nothing to eat in this vast snowfield."

I paused for a moment and looked back at him.

"He grew up eating my stories."

Kim Dokja who grew up eating Cheon Inho's stories.

"He realized the truth of this world and understood the tragedy of this universe before any other Kim Dokja."

"Why on earth…"

"Why… Well, I don't know. I have something to say."

Cheon Inho looked up at the sky for a moment. The same sky in his memories was looking down at us.

"I only had stories like that to feed him."

"…"

"This universe made me like that, and I just raised the child as the universe made me."

There was a calm and composed voice.

I took ten deep breaths to keep myself from getting excited and opened my mouth.

"Is that your purpose? Are you using that guy to aspire for the Star Stream?"

Instead of answering, Cheon Inho walked away, leaving the house behind him. When I listened closely, he could hear him humming. It was the exact humming he had done in his memory.

"There was definitely a time when I hated everything in this universe."

"You mean not now?"

"Well, even if my current thoughts changed."

Cheon Inho seemed a little tired and exhausted as he said that.

"I wonder what that child who grew up eating my stories would be like."

"…"

"For the poor things that were left unread and abandoned, that child could destroy this entire universe."

The moment I heard those words, things came to mind.

『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』 and its characters. And <Kim Dokja's Company>.

My heart sank.

What if Kim Dokja, raised by Cheon Inho, inherited the hatred for them?

"I won't let that happen."

"..."

"I won't let this story end in tragedy for anyone."

Cheon Inho looked back at me.

He looked as if he had been waiting for me to say that.

"Of course it should. That way, another fun 'record' will be created."

"Help me."

Cheon Inho's steps stopped for the first time at my words.

"Are you asking for help from this body right now?"

"Yes."

Cheon Inho laughed loudly. It was an exaggerated laugh that made you wonder if a person could laugh that loudly.

"Have you forgotten who I am? I am the person who tried to destroy the world. I am the person who hated 'Kim Dokja' more than anyone else and resented this universe."

"But your goal is not to make the world ruined, right?"

"..."

"You just wanted to be recognized, right?"

"..."

"Yes, you are the only person who has lived as the 'One Who Deceived the Stars' and the Evil Sophist, the Master of the Ten Evils and the Rival of the Tyrant, the one and only 'Cheon Inho'."

Cheon Inho's mouth opened slightly.

I shot back as if I was shoving my words into his mouth.

"You just wanted to be written in this story with the main character. You hoped that someone would remember that you clearly existed in this story."

I wasn't him, but I understood his sadness. There were sentiments that I clearly felt while living through the Time Fault of the 'Evil Sophist'.

There are stories even in places that are not recorded. Life definitely exists even in places that no one's eyes reach.

I lived forgetting that extremely obvious fact even though I knew it.

"I am Kim Dokja who can write."

That's why I couldn't help but say those words. Even though I knew that the existence in front of me was the worst in the world, and even though I knew that my wrist could fly off if I grabbed his hand wrong,

"I can write your story."

I thought it was a suggestion worth making. If I could just gain Cheon Inho's power here, I wouldn't be afraid of anyone I had as an enemy in the future.

Cheon Inho looked at me for a moment as if he knew what I was thinking and said.

"That's a really sweet suggestion. But I can't accept that suggestion. It's all too late."

The emotion in his tone of voice, "It's too late," was so heavy that I didn't know what to say for a moment.

It's really too late.

And he had endured the years that made it so he could only say that.

Cheon Inho, with his arms wide open, continued speaking with a deep smile on his lips.

"And the story I wanted, you 'already' made it. It was such an impressive story."

"…"

"I didn't know you'd use the Ten Evils like that. I even less knew you'd revive the Supreme King and the Prophet, and possess the other Transcendents."

"That story—"

"I really like the ending you wrote. That's why I'm going to make the ending you made 'real' from now on."

"What is that—"

"Have you forgotten? I am also a 'Recorder of Fear'."

For a moment, a belated question crossed my mind.

Now that I think about it, why is Cheon Inho here? Why isn't he with 'Snowfield Kim Dokja', but instead, has become a 'Recorder of Fear' and is trying to meet the 'King of Fear' here?

"The 'Time Fault' managed by the Recorder of Fear becomes a story at the moment of resolution and is passed on to the owner of the Fear Realm. And the owner of the Fear Realm is..."

The moment Cheon Inho raised his head and looked up at the sky, I felt goosebumps without realizing it.

"I promised to give the power to change the record of the 'Final Wall' to the 'Recorder of Fear' who recorded the Great Fear."

With a ray of light, the sky was opening.

Cheon Inho said.

"King of Fear."

The trembling continued throughout my body.

Right now, something incredible was about to happen beyond that sky.

"You have brought the story I wanted here, so now it is my turn to grant your wish."

Before I could even stop him, light covered Cheon Inho.

A message was heard in my brightly colored vision.

[The 'King of Fear' answers the 'Evil Sophist'.]

[The 'King of Fear' provides the 'Evil Sophist' with probability.]

A huge probability that could change a world.

"Yes."

Cheon Inho, who had finally obtained that probability, extended his hand toward me.

"Let's 'rewrite' the world from now on."

---

I will rewrite the world.

The moment I met eyes with Cheon Inho who said that, I instinctively felt that I had to get out of here. However, I had no choice.

Just as Cheon Inho, who had obtained 『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』, had no choice but to read the story even though he knew the tragedy that would unfold, perhaps I was the same.

[Your synchronization level with the Recorder of Fear 'Evil Sophist' is very high.]

Maybe it is because I have also experienced the history of the 40th Round. So I also became curious. As a reader before a writer, what on earth does the extra Cheon Inho 'want to rewrite'?

"Kim Dokja."

The extra who had reached the end of the world called my name, and I raised my head in response.

His voice, filled with the power of merciless [Incite], declared.

"From now on, you are me."

The last thing I saw was the footprints of the one person we had walked together with.

"I am you."

My world disappeared.

---

Anna Croft opened her eyes under the flickering lights. As the cold breath rushed in, the vivid sense of 'being alive' finally woke up her whole body.

'The Room of Time Fault.'

As she got up, the memories of the '40th Round' she had experienced until the end of the war came flooding into her head. There, she participated in the Final Scenario with Cheon Inho and the Supreme King.

'I really reached the end of the scenarios.'

Cheon Inho... No, the words of the person possessing Cheon Inho were right.

Although it was a virtual world line, that experience was real.

With this, they gained the 'experience' of seeing the end of the scenarios.

[You have acquired a new tale!]

[You have acquired a share of a new Giant Tale!]

What she acquired this time was even a 'Giant Tale'. It seems that the name of the story hasn't been decided yet due to the delay in the <Star Stream> system, but it's a huge story that was obtained after seeing the end of the 'Last Scenario'.

If there's just this story, it wouldn't be impossible to see the end again in the 41st Round.

'It was worth coming to the Fear Realm.'

The biggest achievement is that she gained a small bond to face the Constellations together.

If she could carry out the scenario with Yoo Joonhyuk and Cheon Inho in the 41st Round...

Wait a minute, where did Cheon Inho go?

She looked around but couldn't see Cheon Inho.

The last thing she remembered was the back of Cheon Inho running to the ark's power room.

Could it be that Cheon Inho failed after that? But if he had failed, there's no way she could have safely returned to the 'Time Fault Room'?

"Cheon Inho?"

The moment she unconsciously muttered the name, dozens of pillars of light rose up nearby at once.

"Ah."

The Transcendents that had possessed themselves in the 40th Round were returning. She could barely breathe a sigh of relief. As expected, that Evil Sophist had finally succeeded in seeing the end of the 40th Round.

"Big. Damn. This time, I almost got really screwed."

"That was a really great adventure."

"Are there any of you who have gained new enlightenment?"

"That guy, the end, finally got it right."

Leaving behind the Transcendents chattering loudly here and there, Anna Croft went out to look for Cheon Inho in the gaps between the incarnations.

"Cheon Inho!"

Cheon Inho was nowhere to be seen. She tried to activate [Future Sight] in case something had happened, but the skill didn't work properly.

This had happened several times before. Especially in cases where 'Cheon Inho' was deeply involved, there were many cases where the future was strangely invisible. How long had she wandered like that? Soon, a familiar back figure came into view along with the newly appeared pillar of light.

"You're safe, Cheon Inho!"

The coat was redder than before.

The villain she was looking for was there. But why? The moment she grabbed Cheon Inho's thin shoulder, Anna Croft felt the balance of the world creaking. Suddenly, she felt uneasy and dizzy. The alarm bell that something was wrong rang incessantly in her mind.

But what on earth was wrong?

The Time Fault was safely cleared, and the Fear Realm had not yet come to an end.

But why...

"This is how it felt."

Why did she feel chills all over her body when she heard his voice?

"I really miss the air."

She instinctively tried to slap Cheon Inho's shoulder. But Cheon Inho grabbed her wrist faster than she could and asked.

"Prophet. What do you see in [Future Sight]?"

"…"

"Can’t you see anything?"

"You—"

"Of course. No 'Revelation' will work on this body anymore."

Anna Croft shook his hand hard and glared.

"You… who are you?"

"Don’t you know who I am? Haven’t you been calling out to me all this time?"

Anna Croft stepped back, her lips trembling.

It gave her goosebumps.

The sense of the prophet was speaking. She had foreseen exactly who the man before her was. But Anna Croft didn’t want to admit it.

Why, why now.

"Where did he, where did he go?"

"Him? Who?"

"The spirit that was inside your body—"

Anna Croft still didn’t know his name. She didn’t know the real name of the possessed person who had given her the nickname Kim Anna.

That’s why she had no choice but to say the name everyone called him.

"What happened to Kim Dokja?"

"Kim Dokja. You finally got to say that name."

Cheon Inho let out a big laugh as if he found that fact hilarious.

"Now I'm Kim Dokja."

"What did you say?"

"Open your eyes and look carefully, Anna Croft. Nothing has changed."

Then, a story began to be heard from somewhere.

「Anna Croft felt her heart gradually becoming calmer.」

Where did that sentence come from?

Anna Croft didn't know.

「Nothing has changed. Everything has just found its original place.」

The man in front of her was Cheon Inho.

Cheon Inho's soul had simply returned to Cheon Inho's body.

"Do you remember? We agreed to live together for the 41st Round. I came to keep that promise. You're doing well, and I'll help you do it."

It was just as Cheon Inho said. She just had to keep doing what she was going to do. She had to clear the scenario and fight the Constellations. That would be fine, but why.

"I—"

Anna Croft felt her vision waver without her knowing it.

Cheon Inho's expression became subtle upon seeing her.

The moment Cheon Inho tried to speak to her again, a voice with an unusual sense of authority was heard.

[Who are you?]

When she turned her head, Cheok Jungyeong was standing there.

[Where did my disciple go?]

The moment she heard Cheok Jungyeong's voice, Anna Croft's expression brightened. Maybe, if it was Cheok Jungyeong.

"You don't even recognize your disciple's face anymore?"

When Cheon Inho answered with his characteristically sly tone, Cheok Jungyeong approached him with brisk strides.

[You.]

His huge hand grabbed Cheon Inho's shoulder so tightly that it crushed it.

[You're not my disciple.]

An enormous sense of pressure began to weigh down Cheon Inho. A Constellation of the highest level, a Transcendental Constellation. It was the rank of the Third Division Captain of the Transcendent Alliance.

Surprisingly, Cheon Inho accepted the pressure without even batting an eyelash.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', begins its storytelling.]

The power of the story flowing out from his entire body was protecting him.

"This is difficult, Master."

Cheok Jungyeong, who was startled, expressed his status even more strongly, but the power of the story flowing out from Cheon Inho's entire body gradually began to grow as if to oppose Cheok Jungyeong.

There were a couple of earthquakes that shook the entire area, and the sparks flying out obscured the surrounding vision.

When the sparks disappeared along with the dust, an amazing sight unfolded there.

Third Division Captain Cheok Jungyeong was kneeling in front of Cheon Inho.

Cheon Inho, who was pressing down on Jungyeong's shoulder that was completely burnt black, looked around and said.

"Everyone, please remain quiet."

It was just a single word. At that single word, all the Transcendents were frozen and unable to move.

Anna Croft realized what kind of power Cheon Inho had just used.

「Incite.」

「Incite, which had reached its extreme, was chaining the Transcendents.」

With that, Anna Croft realized that Cheon Inho had regained his original strength from the previous Round.

Cheon Inho, the 'Evil Sophist' and the 'One Who Deceived The Stars'. Cheon Inho, who had seen the end of the world as the last human, had appeared in this 41st Round.

However, even his body was not enough to restrain all the Transcendents.

"Evil Sophist, have you regained your body?"

"God of Despair."

Chunghuh, the Commander of the Transcendent Alliance. And his escorts, Ryunard and Karlton, stood in front of Cheon Inho with a fierce aura.

Chunghuh shrugged his shoulders and said.

"I have no intention of fighting you."

"You were the one who started the trouble first, weren't you?"

"Well, I didn't do it on purpose."

Chunghuh took his hand off of Cheok Jungyeong's shoulder and touched his wrist.

Chunghuh clicked his tongue and said.

"If you've taken possession of that body, then it seems like you've achieved your goal. You should just leave this place."

"You're impatient, Commander. I haven't achieved my goal yet. And... Now is not the time for you to be stopping me."

With a thud, the door on the upper level of the Time Fault exploded.

A few panicked Transcendents stepped forward to resolve the situation.

"The door is broken!"

"Block it! If it's now, we can turn it back!"

The Outer Gods of the upper world were trying to break the Fault and cross the door.

Cheon Inho looked up at those Outer Gods and said.

"The End is not over."

The End that had been temporarily suspended while the 40th Round's story was in progress was continuing. And it was even more intense than before.

"The King of Fear is sad. Probably because he read my story."

"I'll take care of that."

"You can't enter the 'Big House', can you?"

"..."

"To stop the End, someone has to go and appease him. And right now, it seems like there's only one person here who has the qualifications to do so."

The God of Despair, Chunghuh, let out a light sigh and gave a light nod to the generals. Then, the generals made way for Cheon Inho.

Cheon Inho gave a light bow and started to climb the stairs installed in the corner of the Fault.

Chunghuh, who was watching Cheon Inho, said.

"The young man who used your body was a good friend."

"..."

"He really was a good friend."

"Is that so?"

Cheon Inho answered and turned his head to look at Anna Croft.

"Prophet, aren't you curious about the end of the Fear Realm?"

Cheon Inho smiled and extended his hand to Anna Croft, who was startled.

"Come, let's go meet the King of Fear together."

---

The books in the library were vibrating all at once. The letters fixed to the books were losing their places and popping out, and the stories over flowing from between the torn pages were flowing out.

The [Fourth Wall] was shaking.

"(This damn... Youngest! Answer me! Youngest!)"

First Kim Dokja—the Demon King of Salvation shouted while holding onto the shaking table. But no matter how many times he called, the Youngest wouldn't pick up.

It wasn't just that he wasn't picking up the phone, it was unclear whether he was alive or dead.

The name in the book in front of him was proof of that. All the spaces where the Youngest's name had been displayed had been filtered out, and now another name was trying to be written in that place.

Cheon ■ho

■ Inho

Cheon In■

It was clear what was happening.

He had to find the Youngest right away.

But no matter how much he shouted, his voice was just a sentence trapped in the [Fourth Wall]. It didn't reach the Youngest.

The anxious Kkoma Kim Dokjas were crying and screaming here and there. Fortunately, the Kkoma Kim Dokjas with self-esteem, including Gu Seonah, were trying to comfort them, but it was clear that if he just watched the situation like this, even the [Fourth Wall] would be destroyed.

The Kkoma Kim Dokjas' eyes looked up at him as if there was no other way.

Kim Dokjas sighed silently.

「(Guys.)」

As expected, there must be only one person who can help the Youngest right now.

So the Demon King of Salvation made up his mind.

「(Let's go outside and look around for a bit.)」

859 Episode 47 King of Fear (3)

Cheon Inho quickly walked up the stairs.

"Wait a minute, let's go together!"

Anna Croft, who had come to her senses, followed him.

There was no one who could stop Cheon Inho now. Even Cheok Jungyeong and the commander of the Transcendent Alliance condoned him. Now, it was best to at least watch what he would do.

"What is your... purpose?"

Anna Croft couldn't help but ask, even though she knew Cheon Inho wouldn't answer. But unexpectedly, Cheon Inho, who was climbing the stairs, smiled and turned around.

"My purpose is obvious, isn't it?"

Cheon Inho's purpose.

Anna Croft thought for a moment and then said.

"You hated this <Star Stream>, right?"

A man who hated the world of Constellations in a different way than Yoo Joonghyuk. If he had a purpose in this world, it would be only one.

"Do you intend to destroy this world?"

"Similar."

"Why do you have to do that? Haven't you already seen the end of the scenarios? Why are you trying to bring destruction to this world line?"

"I made this decision because I saw the end of the scenarios once."

"What do you mean?"

"Let me put it this way. 'There are things that can only be preserved if this world is destroyed'."

There are things that can only be preserved if the world is destroyed?

Anna Croft tilted her head in confusion and quickly followed him. How far up did she go? Finally, the stairs ended and a small door leading to the upper floor appeared.

Anna Croft unconsciously swallowed.

There was no nameplate or explanation on the door. However, even without an explanation, it was clear where this door led.

"Is there the 'Big House' beyond this door?"

She remembered hearing an explanation from her seniors in the Transcendent Alliance.

'Big house'. The place where the master of this Fear Realm resides.

"Yes."

"Have you ever met him?"

"Strictly speaking, this is my first time."

Cheon Inho opened the door with Anna Croft.

[Entering the 'Big House'.]

When he opened the door, a wide field spread out before him. No matter how one looked at it, it was a quiet empty space in the mountains that could be used as a campsite for middle and high schools. If this place was a 'Big House', then it seemed like the meaning of the word 'house' needed to be redefined.

"Hmm. So this was the 'Big House'."

"Do you know this place?"

"I've read it."

Cheon Inho frowned exaggeratedly as if he was sorry, then smiled.

"To make a place like this a 'home'... The memories of that picnic must have been very precious to him."

Picnic?

Before she could even ask what that meant, a terrible cry was heard from the sky.

【Gooooooooo.】

When she raised her head in surprise, there was a giant dragon without a head flying by. There wasn't just one of them. There was a three-tailed snake, and there were giant babies that I had seen in the End Zone of the Fear Realm.

"Oh my god."

No matter how she looked at it, Outer Gods that were on the level of a Natural Disaster were running around here and there.

However, the Outer Gods didn't show any particular hostility toward them. It was as if they knew that they were guests here.

Cheon Inho also looked around at the Outer Gods with a calm expression and started walking.

After walking about ten or twenty steps, a chair appeared on the other side of the field. The chair was facing the opposite direction of them.

Cheon Inho looked at the chair and muttered.

"Why is there an 'Absolute Throne' here of all places!"

"The Absolute Throne?"

"That’s the 'Absolute Throne' that appeared in Korea. The funny thing is… 'he' has never sat on that chair."

As he said that and took another step forward, a strong wind blew and someone stood in front of them.

A pitch-black shadow wearing a threatening helmet was there. Cheon Inho said while looking at the shadow.

"There is an old warrior guarding the King of Fear. It is just as I heard."

Then the warrior nodded and said.

[Go back. You cannot meet the 'King of Fear'.]

"Is that Kim Dokja's will? Did he decide for himself?"

[It doesn't matter either way, but tomorrow is the day when we will not let a guy like you into our 'home'.]

The shadow clashed his huge fists together as if he would forcefully send them back if they didn't listen.

Cheon Inho waved his hand lightly as if he had no intention of fighting.

"But he must be sad."

[It's because of you.]

"I made him sad, so I have a responsibility to appease him."

[You can't do it. Get out.]

The moment the fighter's fist, which he had slowly raised, was about to come down, Cheon Inho quickly said.

"I have a sequel to the story I'll tell him."

[I know you have a long tongue. I'm sorry, but it won't work on me. Because—]

At that moment, a vibration that seemed to shake the entire space was heard.

[The 'King of Fear' allows the incarnations who cleared the ■■-level Fear 'Evil Sophist' to meet him.]

The surprised fighter raised his head and muttered.

The fighter hesitated for a moment, then turned to the chair as if he was resentful, lowered his fist, and turned around.

In the end, as if he didn't even want to see the sight, the fighter said without even looking at Cheon Inho.

[Go away, damn it.]

Anna Croft asked as she passed by him.

"Who is that guy?"

"He's from another world line."

"If it's another world line..."

"A world line where the 'scenarios' ended. That person saw the end of the scenarios and surpassed the level of a Constellation. Just like I did."

When he looked back, the fighter was scribbling something in the air as if it was recording something. As if there was an invisible wall there.

"Is that person also a 'Recorder of Fear'?"

"No. Not everyone who clears the scenarios becomes a Recorder."

Cheon Inho added briefly after saying that.

"The story that person wants is already here."

The two walked past the fighter and to the place where the chair was.

The two stood side by side with the chair and looked at the scenery the chair was looking at.

A cliff spread out below the field.

Under that huge cliff, countless 'Time Faults' screens were spread out. It was literally a 'spectacular view' of Time Faults.

The most noticeable screen among them was the fault that Anna Croft knew well.

「[Using real life to create elaborate fakes. How could you… Oh, I see. You.]」

The screen of the '40th Round' where Anna Croft had stayed until then.

Cheon Inho, who had been staring blankly at the screen, opened his mouth.

"Do you like that story? 'King of Fear'."

Anna Croft looked around in confusion. However, there was no one who looked like the 'King of Fear' anywhere around her.

The moment she was about to ask Cheon Inho who she had greeted, a hallucination occurred as if all the lights in the house had gone out and come back on. It felt as if someone had turned all the lights in the house off and on at once.

When Anna Croft blinked her eyes feeling extremely dizzy, she was faced with a shocking scene.

"What is this."

The scenery of the area changed.

The ground that she had thought was a field was covered with squishy tentacles, and the screen on the cliff had turned into a giant eyeball. When Anna slowly turned her head with a dizzying sensation, she realized that something was sitting on the 'chair'. Her head didn't turn properly as if it had been pressed by scissors.

The 'King of Fear' was sitting on the chair covered with tentacles.

However, it was not in the shape of a 'person'. What was placed on the chair was a small pupa.

The pupa was beating like a small heart.

When Anna Croft looked at the pupa, the pupa also looked at Anna Croft.

The pupa said.

「I love things that are thrown away.」

Cheon Inho answered with a smile.

"I know."

「I love stories.」

"I know that too. That's the same for all Kim Dokjas."

「I hate being sad.」

"That's a lie. There is no Kim Dokja in this universe who loves sadness as much as you do."

「I hate being sad.」

"If even you hate sadness, there will be no Kim Dokja in this universe who will love sadness."

「I hate being sad.」

"You want to hear a happy story sometimes, too. Are you curious about the 'stories' of the 40th Round? There are quite a few happy stories left, and I can tell you if you want."

The pupa didn't answer. It was a positive silence.

"But there is one condition."

“Being who is more familiar with sadness than any other being in this universe.”

“I know what your greatest sadness is. You confined yourself here because you hated the strife between brothers, didn't you?”

「I...」

A new screen appeared on the cliff.

In the screen, two men wearing white coats stood.

Anna Croft knew the face of the man very well.

"Kim Dokja?"

At the same time as that question, the two Kim Dokjas swung their swords at each other.

「[You haven't forgotten, have you? You're no longer 51%.]」

「[You're not the 49% I knew, either.]」

「And the fight began.」

Anna Croft stared blankly at the screen.

Kim Dokja's story, torn into three pieces, was scattering into space.

「That day, the 'King of Fear' was born.」

She didn't know exactly what this story was about, but Anna Croft instinctively noticed something.

She was now witnessing the truth of this world.

And after a while, a man's face appeared on the screen. The filtering was on, so the man's face was hard to see, but it was a man in a white coat.

「"Second, please. I need your help. I need you to help me to end this fight."」

Then the screen changed and a snowy landscape appeared.

The man in the white coat standing there was speaking.

「"If you are really my 'brother', don't you know that helping me is the right thing to do?"」

A terrible tinnitus rang out.

Anna Croft instinctively covered her ears and sank to her seat.

The world was mourning. The Fear Realm was screaming.

Cheon Inho listened to the scream without any hesitation. Cheon Inho opened his mouth while blood was pouring out of both ears.

"I can solve that sadness. Now, I too have earned the qualification of being 'Kim Dokja'."

「Sadness」

"You don't have to choose anything."

「Sadness」

"I will dream the dream you deserved for you."

Cheon Inho took a step toward the chair and added with a smile.

"If you lend me your strength, this long fight will end. In the universe I dream of, neither the First, Second, Third, nor concepts like 49% or 51% are important."

Cheon Inho's entire body was overflowing with the power of [Incite].

"Everything in this universe will be dyed with equal 'Fear'. It will be a 'Big House' filled only with the things you loved."

The interval between the pupa's screams was getting faster and faster.

Anna Croft wanted to shout. She wanted to tell him to stop. But her mouth wouldn't open.

"I will make this entire universe a 'Fear Realm'."

At the moment when [Incite] reached its peak, Cheon Inho reached out his hand toward the pupa.

But the moment Cheon Inho's fingertips touched the surface of the pupa, his hand bounced off with a strong spark.

The 'King of Fear' had rejected him.

"Why?"

「The story isn't over yet.」

The moment Cheon Inho, startled, turned around, a fierce flash of wind passed over his head.

Golden hair was cut into small pieces in the air.

In the distance, a man he knew well was standing.

"Cheon Inho."

A unique, heavy low voice.

The moment he heard that voice, Cheon Inho couldn't help but laugh.

"I see. The most important 'afterword' remained."

Another incarnation that had completed the main task of the 40th 'Time Fault'. Just like Cheon Inho, a man who had earned the right to face the 'King of Fear' was there, aiming his spear.

"Did you choose that spear as a reward?"

The spear that had accompanied the end of the 40th Round, 'Hwangcheon-wolguk', shone brightly in Yoo Joonghyuk's hand.

"But you know, right? Now you can't beat me."

The power of stories began to bloom throughout Cheon Inho's body. His true status, which had brought down Cheok Jungyeong and made even the leaders of the Transcendent Alliance nervous, was revealed.

"Because the result of our 'stage' has already been decided."

[The story 'King Slayer' begins its storytelling.]

Cheon Inho had already defeated Yoo Joonghyuk in the 40th Round. And in a showdown between Transcendent beings, the power of 'staging' is truly absolute.

Even so, Yoo Joonghyuk did not back down. Rather, as Cheon Inho's momentum rose, bright stories bloomed throughout Yoo Joonghyuk's body.

"If I were alone, it might be like that."

The moment Cheon Inho opened his eyes in surprise, Yoo Joonghyuk took out half a dumpling from his bosom and bit into it.

"It was good that I saved half."

At the same time, pure white wings sprouted from Yoo Joonghyuk's shoulder and popped out.

[The story 'Demon King of Salvation' begins its storytelling.]

860 Episode 47 King of Fear (4)

Yoo Joonghyuk frowned while covering his pounding head.

[You ate the 'Ultimate Murim Dumplings'.]

The moment he ate the dumplings, memories exploded inside him.

It wasn't his memory.

It was definitely his voice, but it wasn't his words.

「"The first form of the Myeolhon Shinchang is similar to Breaking the Sky's slash or Baekcheong's stab. In the end, all techniques are about connecting a point and a point. In the process, cutting, stabbing, and destroying something, and forming some kind of relationship. Building a story."」

Yoo Joonghyuk realized. It was the realization he had gained in 'Another Round'.

「"If you use this spear to destroy someone's soul, keep it in mind. To destroy a soul is to destroy the story of its existence, which means to return its story to nothing.」

Just listening to the story, there was a change in his head.

The enlightenment he had gained in the 40th Round was being summoned again and was becoming the driving force for transcendence. The accumulated enlightenment was changing his body.

[Your level of transcendence is rising!]

Of course, not all memories were related to transcendence.

There were also memories of slightly different forms. For example, the memory of the guy who made this 'dumpling',

「"Author-nim, but who gave you your name?"」

His head started to throb again. At the same time, the story contained in the dumpling began to envelop his entire body.

[The story 'Demon King of Salvation' continues its storytelling.]

'Demon King of Salvation'.

Yoo Joonghyuk had heard that name before. Clearly, the Demon King who appeared in the final battle of the 'Recycling Center' had the same name.

Is that all? The guy who appeared in the Washington Dome also had the same modifier.

The Demon King of Salvation. What on earth is the Demon King of Salvation?

[The story 'Demon King of Salvation' roars!]

The story made a sound and latched onto his shoulder, transforming into a pair of wings. Despite being born from the Demon King's story, the wings were infinitely white and clean, like those of an archangel.

"Have you become an angel, Supreme King?"

Cheon Inho said as if mocking him. The guy lightly pulled out the sword he was wearing on his waist and aimed it at Yoo Joonghyuk. Then he added in a playful voice.

"Bam."

Yoo Joonghyuk reflexively lowered his head. An incredible magical wind swept past his earlobes. It seemed to be an attack using the skill of the returnee, Myung Ilsang. A technique that focuses condensed magical power on the tip of a sword and shoots it like a flash.

Yoo Joonghyuk answered in a blank voice.

"Your skills have improved, Cheon Inho."

The flash of light cut through the cliff of the 'Big House'. The image of their last battle was rising on the cliff of the Fault that had been cut away.

A crimson coat and a black coat.

On a night when the stars were falling, the 'Supreme King' and the 'Evil Sophist' had pointed their swords at each other with the fate of the world at stake.

"I miss it already. The fight back then was truly great."

"..."

"Now, show me. What you've been through. What stories you've told me. If you want to properly unravel your memories—"

"Where is that guy?"

"That guy? Who are you talking about?"

"You probably already know. The 'Real Cheon Inho'."

The real Cheon Inho. At that expression, a crack spread across Cheon Inho's expression.

"I don't know what you're talking about. I'm Cheon Inho."

"You're not the one who carried out the scenarios with me."

The fierce [Way of the Wind] unfolded.

In an instant, Cheon Inho, who had narrowed the distance by about ten meters, swung his 'Unbreakable Faith'.

A strike containing the secret of [Way of the Wind].

Yoo Joonghyuk said as he struck the flying wind blade with his spear.

"That technique is not yours."

"I know. It belongs to the Immutar Wolf."

"No, it is the technique that 'that guy' used."

As if to refute, Cheon Inho's sword strike struck from above again. The activated 'Blade of Faith' scattered strong energy.

"That sword is not yours either."

Yoo Joonghyuk's Hwangcheon-wolguk blocked the 'Unbreakable Faith'. The golden strong energy contained in the spear and the blue strong energy contained in the sword clashed, causing the storm to expand. With a loud bang, the two bodies were simultaneously thrown away from each other.

Cheon Inho said with a smile.

"It's mine. This sword, this technique, and the stories you and this body have built together."

The stories of the two people resonated. The stories that Yoo Joonghyuk and Cheon Inho had built together were stirring.

[The 'Giant Tale' whose name has not yet been decided is stirring.]

"It was truly an incredible story. Wasn't it?"

"…"

"How did you feel about seeing the end of the scenarios together? How did it feel to become a character in the 'story I created'?"

"…"

"Were you happy? Or were you upset that your position as the 'main character' was taken away?"

Cheon Inho's swordsmanship was getting faster and faster.

Yoo Joonghyuk responded, accelerating his spear strike to match the speed.

"I don't know what you're talking about."

Yoo Joonghyuk's [Self-defense], which had reached its peak, deflected Cheon Inho's blade.

"I see that you're crazier than last time."

Yoo Jung-hyuk's transcendence was also rising. Stage 1, Stage 2, Stage 3... Yoo Joonghyuk's power, which had grown strong enough to threaten the Constellations of Narrative-grade, was reflected in his spear.

Kuaaaaaaa!

The Mysterious Soul Spear shot out, scraping the space.

Cheon Inho, who narrowly avoided the attack, asked.

"I was curious. Why on earth did you choose a spear? Your main weapon has always been a sword. The only weapon that suits you is the 'Heaven Breaking Sword'. But why —"

"I decided to end this Round with a spear."

Cheon Inho licked his lips, as if he didn't like that answer.

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', is activated!]

"Wake up. Your weapon is the 'sword'."

A voice that contained the power of [Incite] that even brought down the Constellations of Narrative-grade. It was a command that no one could refuse.

[The story 'Demon King of Salvation' resists 'Incite'!]

But Yoo Joonghyuk endured the words. The story contained in the dumplings he ate made it possible.

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', is temporarily activated.]

Cheon Inho's eyes were filled with agitation.

"That skill—"

"Bring him back."

Yoo Joonghyuk, who had closed the distance with [False Flames], swung his spear once again. The spirit of the Soul Killing Spear in the play pressed down on Cheon Inho's 'Blade of Faith'.

Cheon Inho resisted, holding the hilt with both hands.

"Forget that friend now. He has now become a part of me. He was the one who decided to see the end of this world with me, with his name and existence gone."

"That can't be. How can you be sure?"

"Because he promised."

"Promise?"

"That guy."

Again, his temples throbbed and an old memory flashed through Yoo Joonghyuk's head.

「"As long as you don't give up on life, I'll keep writing about you."」

He unconsciously repeated the words in his memory.

"He said he'd write my story."

A moment of bewilderment flashed across Cheon Inho's face. It was a brief moment of carelessness. Yoo Joonghyuk's spear moved without missing the moment. With a 'push-shuuk' sound, the spear pierced Cheon Inho's shoulder. Cheon Inho stepped back, blocking the pouring story.

"He won't be able to write any more stories. His stories are all over."

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', begins its storytelling.]

"I know better what stories the Constellations want."

[The story 'Heir of the Eternal Name' continues its storytelling.]

"I'm stronger than him. I'm smarter than him, and I'm more perfect than him. The better you can fool the Constellations, the more helpful it can be to you. I—"

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name'…]

With a sound of tsutsutsu, sparks flew out from Cheon Inho's entire body.

"I, Kim Dokja—"

Whew, stories poured out of his mouth. The backflowing story was collapsing inside Cheon Inho.

When Cheon Inho frowned and raised his head, the story spoke.

[The story 'Heir of the Eternal Name' laughs loudly.]

"Shut up."

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', chuckles.]

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', chuckles.]

The story was going wild inside Cheon Inho.

Yoo Joonghyuk said as he looked at the scene.

"That guy could endure that story."

"..."

"He was a guy who struggled not to take the easy way."

Now, Yoo Joonghyuk was having a hard time realizing what that 'story' was.

The story that gave him great strength was actually the story that brought him the greatest tragedy. He always lived with that despair.

"You can't do it like that guy."

Cheon Inho swung his sword while screaming.

"I can do it too."

A red light shone above Cheon Inho's eyes.

"In the end, 'the only Kim Dokja' will become this body."

The stories flowing out of Cheon Inho's entire body gathered around the guy's shoulder, and soon began to evolve into crimson wings.

A figure that truly fit the description of 'Demon King'.

The senses of the Regressor were warning him. If he didn't kill him now, there would be no chance.

Yoo Joonghyuk ran with all his might using [Jujak Shinbo].

The first form of the Mysterious Soul Spear.

However, Yoo Joonghyuk stretched out his spear. In that moment, a huge amount of magical power exploded from Cheon Inho's entire body with a loud noise. Yoo Joonghyuk rolled around on the floor as if his entire body had been bombed.

"I told you."

The Demon King, with his wings spread wide, was speaking.

[The story, 'King's Slayer', begins its storytelling.]

[「Staging」 begins.]

"You can't beat me."

In the end, the 「Staging」 effect was activated.

The one who supported Yoo Joonghyuk, who was staggering, was Anna Croft, who had been observing the situation until then.

"Supreme King, you can't do this anymore. You know what kind of being Cheon Inho is now."

Yoo Joonghyuk shook off Anna Croft and said.

"Is your [Future Sight] saying that?"

"[Future Sight] doesn't work on that guy."

"Then there's a chance."

He also knew that there was no chance. Once 'Staging' was activated, the odds of him winning were close to zero. But the reason he didn't lose hope... maybe it was the influence of the 'dumplings' he ate earlier. In fact, memories of the dumplings were still coming back to him here and there. For example, among the memories, there was also this.

「"If you fight and come across a situation where there is no answer."」

The guy in his memory said in his characteristically playful voice.

「"Think of me as 'Kim Dokja'."」

Normally, he would not have responded to such a joke. But why? Today, Yoo Joonghyuk was different. Thinking that maybe there was something strange in the dumpling, Yoo Joonghyuk repeated the name in his mind.

'Kim Dokja.'

At that moment, Yoo Joonghyuk felt that his soul was connected to something.

And.

—Is the dumpling all digested?

A voice came into his head.

A voice he did not know. And yet, it was a voice that sounded infinitely familiar.

Yoo Joonghyuk asked that arrogant voice.

'Who are you?'

Then the voice answered.

—It's your friend's hyung.

'I have no friends.'

—Oh really, our Youngest only picks out things that will make him sad.

Yoo Joonghyuk thought for a moment and then replied.

'When you say 'Youngest', are you referring to the guy who possessed Cheon Inho?'

—Then, is there another Youngest?

Yoo Joonghyuk frowned silently.

He just remembered the name, and something possessed him.

There must have been something similar last time. While carrying out the 40th assignment of the 'Time Fault', 'that guy's' soul had inhabited him through a special method.

The guy had also possessed Cheon Inho's body, so he thought that perhaps he had possessed him in a similar way.

But this time, something was different.

He had clearly remembered that guy's name, so why was he possessed by a random being?

—Hey, relax! Relax and leave it to Hyung! I'll control and take care of it!

'I'll take care of my own fighting.'

—Hey, the 41st Round’s Joonghyuk is also Yoo Joonghyuk.

A voice that seemed somewhat detached but also joyful.

—But you, if you keep doing that, you’ll die.

As soon as the words left his mouth, a message came to mind.

[The 'curse' effect weakens your physical abilities!]

This 'staging' was created based on the story of him fighting 'Cheon Inho' while he was extremely weakened.

So it was natural that the 'staging' would lower his abilities.

'Help me not die.'

—What a shameless bastard.

'That guy would have done that.'

Cheon Inho was looking up at the sky with his wings spread in the distance. Yoo Joonghyuk could tell what was about to happen. Right now, Cheon Inho was trying to express the story he was most confident in.

「When all the stars close their eyes.」

When that story begins its storytelling, darkness will fall upon the world. If that happens, there's no way to defeat him.

—No, there is.

Along with Kim Dokja's voice, a message appeared in Yoo Joonghyuk's head.

['Ultimate Murim Dumpling' has been completely digested.]

As if he had been waiting for that message, Kim Dokja continued.

—If that guy really calls himself 'Kim Dokja'.

'The power of the stage is absolute. No matter how strong I become now—'

—I told you, you can win. Have you forgotten? You've killed 'Kim Dokja' before.

Yoo Joonghyuk looked up into the air with an expression that seemed to wonder what that meant.

'I've never killed that guy.'

—You probably won't have around now.

['Ultimate Martial Arts Dumpling' exclusive effect—'Prime' activates!]

—'You' in your 'prime' are different.

'Prime?'

[The story, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint', begins its storytelling.]

Pages turning in his head.

「Incarnation Kim Dokja will be killed by the person he loves the most.」

「In the gaze of countless stars pouring down from the sky, the story that would kill me was approaching one sentence at a time.」

「And finally, a sword pierced my heart.」

In the overwhelming feast of stories unfolding in his head, Yoo Joonghyuk felt the power of the distant stories overlapping over his incarnation body.

「"It's a really great story. Isn't it?"」

The Demon King of Salvation said.

—Now, let's hunt the 'Demon King' once again.

['Staging' begins!]

861 Episode 47 King of Fear (5)

Stage vs. Stage.

Yoo Joonghyuk was surprised that this tactic was possible.

[The story, 'King Slayer', fumbles around in confusion!]

Is it possible to cover up a 'stage' that has already occurred with another 'stage'?

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', continues its storytelling!]

Then the voice in his head—the Demon King of Salvation snickered.

—Actually, it was my first time doing it too. I wasn't sure if it would work or not.

But it worked.

Yoo Joonghyuk could clearly feel the power of 'Staging' rising from his entire body.

「In the gaze of countless stars pouring down from the sky, the story that would kill me was approaching one sentence at a time.」

It was a story from a worldline he didn't know. In that story, Yoo Joonghyuk killed Kim Dokja. To be exact, his colleagues including him killed Kim Dokja.

"Why did this happen?"

—Are you curious?

Yoo Joonghyuk frowned as if he didn’t like it.

What he didn’t like even more was the effect of the 'Ultimate Murim Dumpling'.

In fact, the effect itself was not a problem. It was an effect that literally made the incarnation of the target that was consumed into that of the prime of its prime.

The problem was the period of the 'prime of its prime' defined by the effect.

"Why is my prime in a different worldline?"

The 'Yoo Joonghyuk' in the story was weaker than he is now. He didn’t have the strength to match the Constellations, and his proficiency in Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship wasn’t at a high level.

Even so, the 'Ultimate Murim Dumpling' chose his prime as the 'Yoo Joonghyuk' in the tale.

Kim Dokja giggled as he read Yoo Joonghyuk’s mind.

—Well, that’s because it’s the most popular tale, right?

There was no need to ask who. Probably the Constellations. And the <Star Stream>. For some reason, the Constellations of that worldline liked this story, and thus provided probability.

[The probability of another worldline strengthens your body.]

Yoo Joonghyuk, who was instantly shot out with explosive angular force, thrust his spear. Cheon Inho, surprised by the spear strike of a different path than before, stepped back. With a deafening cracking sound, the blade of 'Unbreakable Faith' shook dangerously. Cheon Inho, who had activated 'Demon King', was pushed back.

The two stories faced each other as the red and white feathers fluttered around like a dance.

[The story, 'King Slayer', continues its storytelling!]

It was as if a wolf and a leopard were biting each other. The stories contained in the spear strike and sword strike constantly clashed and growled.

Cheon Inho muttered as if he was impressed.

"I didn't know you'd bring in a 'stage' from another world line. You'd use the fact that I became Kim Dokja like this."

"..."

"Is this the wisdom of the 'Demon King of Salvation' who descended upon you?"

As expected, Cheon Inho seemed to have noticed Kim Dokja's presence.

Cheon Inho added as if warning.

"Demon King of Salvation. This world is the '41st Round'. This is not the world line you lived in."

—His tongue is getting longer because it's disadvantageous, that bastard.

"Do you think you can continue to interfere with this worldline like that? There's not much chance left for you now."

—Hey, keep pushing.

"How long do you think this <Star Stream> will tolerate your chaos? Do you want to disappear like this?"

—Ignore it. If we push him to his limit now, we'll win.

With a 'tsutsutsu', a light spark flew from Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body.

[The connection to the exclusive skill 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint' is unstable.]

Cheon Inho's point was true. In fact, the [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint] used by the First Kim Dokja was infinitely unstable compared to the Youngest.

That was inevitable because he was a being inside the [Fourth Wall].

In fact, it was absurd for Kim Dokja inside the [Fourth Wall] to influence the scenario like this.

Nevertheless, the reason why the impossible was possible was because,

[The probability of the 'Fourth Wall' is moving.]

It was because the wishes of the kkoma Kim Dokjas inside the [Fourth Wall] existed.

All 'kkoma Kim Dokjas' are fragments of the 'Oldest Dream' to varying degrees.

So the dream they dream together becomes a kind of powerful probability.

Of course, since they were all quite young, he couldn't tell how long that kind of concentration would last...

—It's okay, so don't worry and fight.

The First Kim Dokja said in a fierce voice.

—As long as that guy doesn’t give up on being 'Kim Dokja', this 'stage' will be valid.

Cheon Inho was an extra who had always dreamed of being the 'main character'. So he could never miss this opportunity to get his hands on the main character’s name.

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', roars!]

So from Yoo Joonghyuk’s perspective, now was the crucial opportunity to kill the 'main character'.

[The story, 'King Slayer', is causing a ruckus!]

Story vs. Story. The conflicting stages began to fight each other.

Every time the stories clashed, wounds on Cheon Inho and Yoo Joonghyuk’s bodies increased.

As the situation of no victory continued, Cheon Inho’s narrow eyes narrowed even further.

[The story, 'When All the Stars Close Their Eyes', begins its storytelling!]

In the end, Cheon Inho took out another story. It was Cheon Inho’s main story for the 40th Round. 「When All The Stars Close Their Eyes」.

A pitch-black darkness began to fall like snow on the sky. Wherever the darkness fell, the light went out and the scenery collapsed.

Cheon Inho's nickname was 'The One Who Deceived the Stars'.

In the darkness where all the stars' gazes disappeared, he finally became complete.

The moment his vision was consumed by darkness, the blade grazed Yoo Joonghyuk's thigh and waist. Yoo Joonghyuk frowned as he adjusted his grip on his spear.

Yoo Joonghyuk had also suffered a crushing defeat from this story the last time they fought. Fortunately, from that experience, Yoo Joonghyuk knew how to destroy this story.

"Open your eyes. You damn Constellations."

Cheon Inho pretended to be surprised at Yoo Joonghyuk's voice.

"Oh, my, did you restore 'that story' through the Time Fault?"

Yoo Joonghyuk hadn't been just sitting around playing around during the 40th Round's Time Fault he experienced. Since his resurrection with [Deceased Summoning], Yoo Joonghyuk had been thinking about 'what kind of story' he would bring when he returned to the 41st Round.

And now, the story of the 40th Round was starting its storytelling once again in Yoo Joonghyuk's body.

[The story, 'King Who Leads the Stars', begins its storytelling.]

Yoo Joonghyuk's story, 'King Who Leads the Stars'. It was a story that burned the probability of the Constellations following him and illuminated the darkness of the world.

However, Cheon Inho opened his mouth as if he felt sorry.

"However, that 'story' only has meaning when there are Constellations following you."

"…"

"Have you forgotten, Yoo Joonghyuk, this is not the 40th Round. There is no Constellation following you."

Even the 'Fear Realm' was in an area where the Constellations' sight was blocked, and even if there was a Constellation that was on his side, there was no way it would be watching this scene right now.

However, Yoo Joonghyuk spoke in a low voice.

"There is one."

At the same time as he said that, light flowed out from somewhere. Surprisingly, the place where the light flowed out was Cheon Inho’s body.

Cheon Inho, startled, looked down at his body and muttered.

"How…"

"That guy is also a Constellation."

As if only one light was enough, Yoo Joonghyuk aimed his spear at the light.

"I can see it well now."

Yoo Joonghyuk’s spear, thrown quickly, pierced Cheon Inho’s thigh.

Cheon Inho swung his sword while holding onto his thigh in amazement.

"It’s no use! You can never kill me with such an imperfect 'stage'!"

Sparks rippled in the air once again. The sparks were particularly focused on Yoo Joonghyuk’s 'spear', and the reason was clear.

「And finally, a single sword pierced my heart.」

In the story of the 「Demon King of Salvation」, it was not a 'spear' but a 'sword' that killed Kim Dokja. Cheon Inho, who knew the truth, said mockingly.

"If you had used the sword as I advised, this wouldn't have happened."

"If you're going to criticize the flaws of the stage, then you're the same."

[The story, 'King Slayer', stutters its storytelling.]

Cheon Inho had the body of Cheon Inho, but he was claiming the identity of 'Kim Dokja'.

Because of that, Cheon Inho's 'King Slayer' was also not able to fully display its original status.

"Cheon Inho, do you want to defeat me?"

"Of course."

"There is a way for you to defeat me."

"Oh, I want to hear a trap."

"You just have to give up being Kim Dokja."

"..."

"Why aren't you answering? Didn't you want to defeat me?"

Yoo Joonghyuk thought.

Cheon Inho must have absorbed the soul of 'that guy' in some way and become stronger.

That's how he became 'Kim Dokja'.

Then what if, on the contrary, he could make him vomit out his soul?

"Didn't you say you wanted to be the main character? Is that all you're prepared for?"

"..."

"The 'Evil Sophist' I know wasn't just that kind of person. He set up mean and wicked traps, but he wasn't a coward who hid behind the name of another being. So—"

Yoo Joonghyuk said, swinging his spear lightly to widen the distance.

"The current you isn't even 'Cheon Inho'."

"What do you know?"

A voice that gnashed his teeth.

Cheon Inho's swordsmanship was filled with anger.

"You, who were born as the main character of a story from the beginning, you who endured life with a noble and sublime purpose, what do you know about those who were not chosen?"

"I don't know. I don't want to know."

Every time a light burst out in the darkness, a story flowed from the two of them. Amidst the resonating sounds of panting, the two swung their spears and swords at each other.

Without any understanding of each other, they simply used their weapons with the purpose of killing each other.

Cheon Inho laughed.

"In the end, I will win."

It was a laugh that seemed to indicate that his goal had been achieved simply by continuing this fight.

"How long do you think the Demon King of Salvation can help you?"

The power of 『Staging』 embedded in Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body was gradually diminishing.

"The protagonist of this world line has now changed. The story that the Constellations want to see has naturally changed as well. That story cannot protect you forever."

"..."

"Yoo Joonghyuk, be my comrade now. Then I will show you the end of this world."

That was when the 'King of Fear' reacted.

A large earthquake occurred throughout the 'Big House'. In the uneasy vision, the Outer Gods of the Fear Realm cried out once again. And then something began.

[The 'King of Fear' reacts strongly to the story in front of him!]

Thunder rumbled in the sky and a huge crack appeared. At the same time, a being appeared through the crack. He was a dokkaebi special agent dispatched to the 'Fear Realm' on behalf of the 'Management Bureau'.

[Wow, what is this—]

It was Bihyung. Bihyung looked back at Cheon Inho and Yoo Joonghyuk as if he was urgently trying to figure out the situation, and soon understood his mission.

[Constellations, opening an emergency temporary channel!]

Temporary. As soon as the channel was opened, starlight began to rush in through the cracks.

[Many Constellations have confirmed the 'Fear Realm'!]

[Nebula, <Eden>, checks the inside of the 'Fear Realm'!]

[Nebula, <Asgard>, checks the inside of the 'Fear Realm'!]

[Nebula, <Olympus>, checks the inside of the 'Fear Realm'!]

As the inside of the 'Fear Realm' hidden behind a veil was revealed, the 'Big House' was filled with scattered starlight.

[The Constellations of the Giant Nebulae are shocked!]

[The 'King of Fear' manifests his power.]

[No Constellation can use 'indirect messages' on the channel in this area.]

As if he would not tolerate interrupting this story, the sky was covered in silence.

As countless Constellations twinkled silently, Cheon Inho and Yoo Joonghyuk aimed their spears and swords at each other.

With a sound of tsutsutsutsu, the story that had been protecting Yoo Joonghyuk finally disappeared.

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', ends its storytelling.]

With that, Cheon Inho looked as if he was anticipating his victory.

"It's over now, Yoo Joonghyuk."

But the next moment, a star in the sky blinked.

It was a Constellation from <Eden>.

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', stutters its storytelling.]

Then another star twinkled. This time, it was a star from <Emperor>.

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', took its breath away.]

Again, another starlight twinkled. It was starlight flowing from the small and medium-sized Nebulae of the 'Absolute Evil' lineage.

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', continues its storytelling.]

The story began to tell another story, emitting even brighter light than before.

Cheon Inho stared at the sky with his eyes wide open in disbelief.

There was no way.

The story that Yoo Joonghyuk was currently holding was not from this worldline. It was not a story that the Constellations of this worldline enjoyed with joy or sorrow.

"No way—"

That meant that there were Constellations that wanted that story.

That meant that there were Constellations that wanted to reveal that story even if it meant burning themselves.

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', stares at the distant sky.]

Therefore, the story continues once again.

To prove that there are still Constellations in this universe that like this story.

862 Episode 47 King of Fear (6)

---

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', continues its storytelling.]

The story that blossomed from Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body was wrapped around his spear.

「That is the essence of the Mysterious Soul Spear.」

The Mysterious Soul Spear's strong energy that surpassed the realm was concentrated in the spear.

「The King Who Leads the Stars.」

The story, whose probability of the stars liking him was added, scattered dazzling light.

"Come, Supreme King."

Cheon Inho did not back down and prepared for the final battle. His body was strengthened by [Incite]. The blue aura of [Baekcheong-ganggi] dyed Cheon Inho's entire body in the color of Baekcheong. The Constellations in the sky were shining dazzlingly.

Cheon Inho stared at the Constellations for a short moment and smiled bitterly.

Cheon Inho's expression at that moment was.

「That's your choice.」

It seemed as if he was saying that.

Soul Killing Spear.

1st form.

Annihilation Spear.

Annihilation Spear is a martial art that recognizes the enemy as a 'Story' and strikes at the essence of that story. Among them, Annihilation Spear was a technique that attacked the shell of the story.

Not too fast or too slow, like piling up gentle sentences, the precise spear strike collided with Cheon Inho's [Baekcheong-ganggi]. Cheon Inho's solid story, built up with [Incite], was pushed back little by little, and soon began to scatter into pieces.

Soul Killing Spear.

2nd form.

Extermination Spear.

Yoo Joonghyuk did not stop.

If Annihilation Spear broke the shell of a story, Extermination Spear was a technique that broke the skeleton of that story.

The blade of 'Unbreakable Faith' seemed to bend greatly, and then a story burst out from various parts of Cheon Inho's body that had received the spear strike. Even so, Cheon Inho desperately swung his sword and resisted. Lonely and desperately, Yoo Joonghyuk deflected the sword strike and continued his spear strike.

Soul Killing Spear.

3rd form.

Extinction Spear.

If the Annihilation form was a technique that broke the framework of the story, the third form, the Extinction form, was a technique that penetrated the essence of the story.

A strong spark flew from Yoo Joonghyuk's muscles that had contracted with all their might. Cheon Inho shouted as if he was making a last desperate effort. A strike that squeezed all the magical power in his body overflowed from the tip of the sword of 'Unbreakable Blade'.

The magical power that the dragon's heart emitted.

Before the third form was even ready, Yoo Joonghyuk was pushed back ten steps by a swift counterattack.

The one who stopped Yoo Joonghyuk from being pushed back was Anna Croft, who had been saving up strength.

"We must finish this, Yoo Joonghyuk." As Yoo Joonghyuk nodded, Anna Croft's magical power transmitted from his back added strength to Yoo Joonghyuk's Extinction spear.

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', roars!]

[The story, 'King Slayer', roars!]

The two stories clashed at the same time to compete for a single stage.

And Yoo Joonghyuk's Extinction spear was activated.

Everything in the 'Big House' shook dangerously, and the magical waves that burst out swept through every corner of the house.

Anna Croft, who was standing near the pupa, reflexively bent down to the magical waves that surged in.

[Tsk.]

Someone stood in front of the pupa and received the magical waves that burst out as an aftershock.

It was the fighter protecting the 'Great King of Fear'.

[That's why you can't let just anyone into the house.]

Anna Croft looked around in surprise.

[The 'King of Fear' shudders.]

What was so enjoyable, the pupa was trembling in joy. No, upon closer inspection, the pupa looked like his throat was swallowing a cry. It was unclear which way it was, but this fight was definitely having some effect on the growth of the 'pupa'.

[It's over.]

The explosion disappeared along with the warrior's words. The first to appear from the scattered dust was Yoo Joonghyuk.

Yoo Joonghyuk, who had unleashed all of the techniques from the first to the third form, was in a state where his entire body was completely burned black, like a meteor that had pierced through the atmosphere. Even amidst the scattered stories, his spear was aiming at its target without wavering.

Cheon Inho, who had a hole in his stomach, looked up at Yoo Joonghyuk while kneeling.

'Unbreakable Faith' rolling on the floor. His convictions were not broken, but he was defeated and the story collapsed.

"I see."

Cheon Inho laughed.

"As expected, 'my story' won't do."

The pupa shivered once more.

As the 'Big House' shook, Yoo Joonghyuk said.

"Bring that guy."

"Impossible."

Cheon Inho, who was laughing with his mouth wide open as if it would tear, added.

"Where on earth are you going to bring 'that guy' whose name has now disappeared?"

"I remember that guy's name."

Yoo Joonghyuk slowly closed his eyes.

It was uncertain whether that was 'that guy's' name. Nevertheless, the name definitely remained in the dumplings the guy gave him.

A white name that seemed like it would melt away like fluttering snowflakes.

"■■■. That's his real name."

The moment he said that name, the shell of the 'King of Fear' cracked slightly.

Cheon Inho stared blankly at Yoo Joonghyuk and blinked.

"Do you think he can show you the ending you want?"

"It's none of your business."

"The ending you want can't be seen anywhere. This world line is ultimately prepared for 'destruction'."

"We won't know until we fight to the end."

"We'll know even if we don't fight."

An old madness flowed through Cheon Inho's eyes as he grinned.

"The only thing we can decide is the method of that 'destruction'."

A tingling pain flowed through Yoo Joonghyuk's temple. He had a strong feeling that something was wrong. He felt that Cheon Inho had fallen much more easily than he had thought. There was no way that the end of that meticulous villain could be this sloppy.

Kim Dokja, who had been holding back from speaking to save on probability, added, perhaps thinking the same thing.

—Surely, that guy's real purpose...

What if Cheon Inho's purpose from the beginning wasn't to win this fight?

"The King of Fear who loves sadness more than anyone else."

Cheon Inho spoke in a bright voice, looking at the pupa.

"Are you satisfied now?"

With a sound of probability, [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint] ended. He got a feeling.

—Yoo Joonghyuk! Get out of this house right now!

Yoo Joonghyuk instinctively moved while holding the spear of the 'Hwangcheon-wolguk'. He grabbed the arm of Anna Croft, who was standing there dumbly.

But where should he go? How should he escape?

The moment Yoo Joonghyuk, who was worried, activated [Annihilation Spear] to destroy space, a message rang out.

[The 'King of Fear' begins a fable.]

Cheon Inho spread his arms and smiled brightly.

"King, let's watch the end together."

Soon, a bright light burst out from the pupa. Something was about to be born.

[The 'End' begins.]

The world was dyed black.

---

I was sinking into the deep sea.

Gravity was pulling me down from beneath my feet.

Looking back, I had experienced something similar before. It was probably when I entered the 'National Palace Museum'. When I was collecting star jewels to collect the 'Death Sword', I [incited] myself as 'Kim Dokja', and I was in the same situation as now.

「If you go down here, there is an abyss.」

How did it end up like this? I think back on my memories.

I guess it was because I was [incited] by Cheon Inho. If I had activated the [Fourth Wall], could I have avoided this situation?

I probably would have.

But I wanted to know. Even if it meant risking the risk of turning off my mental barrier, I wanted to understand the character called 'Cheon Inho' a little more. I wanted to.

「"From now on, you are me, and I am you."」

I wanted to know what drove him so hard, and what the final 'record' he wanted was.

And maybe, now I know a little about him.

「Cheon Inho wanted to be 'recorded'.」

I don't know if that's a reasonable understanding of Cheon Inho. However, some of what I understood was like that. He just wanted to be recorded next to the main character. That was all he wanted.

A reason that someone might laugh at and say that was all he wanted.

But some people are born with it as a given, while others struggle their whole lives to have it. Just because they're neither the main character nor the supporting actor, just because they were made that way, maybe I understand that feeling well.

And the Second Kim Dokja — 'King of Fear' must have felt the same way.

[The 'End' begins.]

The moment I heard the message in my ear, I suddenly came to my senses. It wasn't time to stay like this. I had to get out of here little by little.

I concentrated my mind and activated the [Fourth Wall]. But the skill didn't activate.

Why? Was something wrong?

Just as I was starting to feel like I was losing my breath, something pulled me up from the surface of the water.

A very small hand.

I grabbed that small hand and came up to the surface. When I let out a breath, I was in a snowfield. It was the snowfield where I had talked to Cheon Inho. And what pulled me up was.

"Ah."

A very small Kim Dokja.

"Giyeon hyung."

It was Gihyung who had disappeared with Cheon Inho. Cheon Inho had returned Giyeon hyung to me as promised.

"Ah."

My hyung clung to my leg, probably happy to see me again. Knowing that Giyeon hyung's true nature was a bearded man, I carefully pulled him away.

"Thank goodness, you're safe."

"Ah."

"I told you not to cry like Biyoo."

"Ah."

"Thank you for saving me."

Giyeon nodded vigorously and looked up at the sky. I also looked up at the sky with Giyeon.

It was snowing. To be exact, stories fragments were falling like snow.

「The Fear Realm has opened.」

We read the sentences pouring down into the snowfield.

「"Block it! Block it from this side!"」

「"The Fear Realm's entrance has opened!"」

The shouts of the Transcendents.

There were the incarnations of the Transcendental Alliance that I knew. They were fighting against the End.

God of Despair–Chunghuh, Ryunard, Karlton, Yoo Hosung, Cheok Jeongyung, Kyrgios, Breaking the Sky Sword Siant.

All the Transcendents gathered together, fighting against the waves of Outer Gods that were flooding in.

「"Kuaaaaah!"」

「"Damn it, the Outer Gods are moving into the scenario area!"」

Every single sentence was so interesting that I felt like I could read it forever.

Sentences that make you lose your sense of reality.

The deaths of the incarnations between the sentences were distant and hazy.

When all these sentences pile up, the world will be dyed pure white. And pure white destruction will come.

We will lie between these lines and watch that destruction.

"Hyung, we can’t just watch."

Giyeon hyung looked up at me.

"It’s the world we created."

In this 'Fear Realm', the world hyung wrote and the world I wrote coexist.

"Ah."

"We wrote these characters ourselves, with our own hands."

I didn't come here to see this kind of quiet destruction. I still had sentences I wanted to write. There were lines I wanted to change.

"Ah."

Giyeon nodded as if he agreed. I held Giyeon's hand tightly and said.

"Please lend me your strength."

I can't do it alone. But if you help me, I might be able to somehow.

"Ah."

Just like that day when we wrote the story together, I might be able to create a proper ending to this world.

"Let's go together."

I started walking while carrying Giyeon.

I don't know why I'm trapped in this 'Snowfield'. I don't know why the [Fourth Wall] doesn't listen to me. However, if anyone thinks of me, if I can use [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint] just once. Then I can get out of here.

I thought I could get out.

「What are you going to do when you go out?」

I'm going to stop the Apocalypse.

「How?」

I have to convince the Second Kim Dokja.

I have to ask him to stop the Apocalypse.

I got goosebumps for a moment.

The [Fourth Wall] is now broken.

So who am I talking to right now?

I slowly turned my head and saw a boy.

The dust of stories fluttering from his wings like snowflakes. The moment I smelled it, my mind became hazy.

The snow flurry that made me feel drunk if I lost my mind even for a moment.

The boy landed gracefully with his mysteriously sparkling, translucent wings spread wide.

「How?」

The Second Kim Dokja.

He was the 'King of Fear'.

863 Episode 47 King of Fear (7)

Why is the 'Second Kim Dokja' here? I didn't think long.

The 'Snowfield' is Yoo Joonghyuk's inner self.

Maybe not only 'Snowfield's Kim Dokja' but all Kim Dokjas have their own way of entering and exiting this space.

"Hello."

I greeted him first. Of course I had to greet him. I had to speak in a voice that was as affectionate, simple, and polite as possible. Because he said that the 'Second' was a sad guy.

Why am I thinking so many useless thoughts?

I felt like I would go crazy if I didn't think about this. Hair stood out in every pore of my body, and the chills running up my spine wouldn't stop. My legs were shaking so much that I felt like they would give out and collapse at any moment.

「The being in front of me is the Master of the Supreme 'Fear Realm.'」

The thought that I had to kneel dominated my mind. I felt tens of thousands of plankton wriggling in my frontal lobe. I wanted to sit before him and swear an oath.

I will swear allegiance. Great King of Fear who defines Fear. Born from the gap between understanding and incomprehensibility. Lover of existence and non-existence. Lover of light and darkness. And—

Tak.

It was the touch of a small hand that cut off the branches of my thoughts that were spreading out in a mess. As I lowered my head, Giyeon's small hand was holding mine.

I blankly looked at him, then held his hand tightly in return. Our trembling was transmitted through our large and small hands. His fear protected me.

Thank you, Giyeon.

I muttered to myself and took a deep breath. Then I slowly opened my mouth.

"I'm sure you already know about me."

Looking at the head of the Second Kim Dokja, I was finally realizing what it meant to face a Transcendent being without the [Fourth Wall].

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???' activates!]

"I am the Youngest Kim Dokja."

After [Inciting] myself, the trembling of my whole body gradually subsided.

I am Kim Dokja. I am Kim Dokja with the [Fourth Wall]. There is nothing in front of me that can harm me.

After thinking that over and over again, the distracting thoughts that had been boiling in my head gradually subsided.

I continued speaking.

"Oh, of course you are also Kim Dokja. Can I call you my Second Brother?"

The Second Kim Dokja did not answer at all. I regretted it later.

Damn it. I should have asked the First one more about the Second's tastes.

It was then that the Second Kim Dokja's pupils flashed like the compound eyes of an insect.

「How?」

I got goosebumps, but I tried not to show it. Instead, I smiled and accepted his words.

"So, what you mean by 'how' is 'how are you going to convince me not to cause the Apocalypse?'"

The Second Kim Dokja nodded his head silently. Fortunately, this level of communication is possible. If so, there is still a possibility.

I briefly considered using [Incite], but if I failed and provoked the Second's anger, there was a high possibility that everything would go wrong.

I decided to approach it the right way first.

"I will appeal to sympathy."

Second Kim Dokja tilted his head as if he did not understand the meaning of my words.

"You said you don't like being sad."

When I became one with Cheon Inho's soul, I also witnessed everything that had happened through Cheon Inho's eyes.

The Second Kim Dokja spoke clearly, 'I don't like being sad.'

I said, reaching out to the snow falling from the sky.

"If you cause the Apocalypse here, sadness will increase in this universe."

I felt the stories clinging to my fingertips. There was a voice there, desperately screaming, as if it didn't want to melt away.

「"Do you think you're going to die here? Do you think you're going to die in a place like this?"」

「"Save me! Save me. Please—"」

Most of them were voices I didn't know. But not all of them were like that.

「"Kim Dokja, where are you?"」

A familiar low voice.

There were scenes that flashed before my eyes without me asking who they were.

Killer King Cha Seongwoo and other readers.

「"Dokja-ssi, please help me."」

Kyung Sein.

「"Friend, are you okay?"」

Dansu ahjussi.

「"Author-nim."」

「"This way!"」

Ji Eunyu and Yerin.

「"Pildu ahjussi! Please take the other side!"」

「"Everyone block it! We have to defend Gwanghwamun!"」

「"Inho's group will block this side!"」

Ye Hyunwoo, Gong Pildu, and Bang Cheolsoo.

The people who endured the scenarios together were standing their ground without fail.

It seems that the door of Fear has already opened in the scenario area. Perhaps a large number of Outer Gods equivalent to a 'Natural Disaster' may have crossed over to the Korean Peninsula.

The Management Bureau may be able to buy some time using the excuse of probability, but there will be a limit to that.

After all, those guys end up making everything into a scenario.

In other words, if I can't convince the Second Kim Dokja right now, the 41st Round will end here.

"You've already been through a lot of sad things."

"You know that too, right? You've been watching all of this, haven't you?"

The Second Kim Dokja is also a 'Kim Dokja'. So he must have been reading my story here.

"They are not the <Kim Dokja's Company> that you love. But—"

I did not miss the slight change in the expression of the Second Kim Dokja at the moment when I mentioned <Kim Dokja's Company>.

"You love more than just <Kim Dokja's Company>, right? That's why you created this 'Fear Realm', right?"

The Second Kim Dokja listened to me silently.

"You wanted to trap everything that was being forgotten in the 'Time Fault', right?"

The 'Fear Realm' was the 'great sorrow' that the 'Second Kim Dokja' had collected.

The reason why the collected stories became 'Fear' was also clear.

In this Star Stream, 'Fear' soon becomes an important material for stories. War. Famine. Death. Murder… Once something is recognized as 'Fear', it does not easily disappear from the subconscious and is deeply imprinted like a brand. Second Kim Dokja made things forgotten over time into 'Fear' and preserved them in a giant formalin bottle called 'Time Fault'.

「Everything is worth remembering.」

Even though it was just a light fluttering of wings, it had a strong persuasive power.

In the story, the Outer Gods that had finally returned to the scenario were howling.

【Ooooooooooo!】

They were taking revenge on the world that had forgotten them. Even if they were still nothing more than Nameless Fears, they were fully enjoying themselves recorded in the story.

Even if it was in the form of the 'End'.

"It doesn't have to be recorded like this."

I said as if protesting.

"It doesn’t have to be the End."

The Second Kim Dokja shook his head weakly. With the fluttering of wings, the Second Kim Dokja’s body rose into the air. The small dust flowing out of his body became fables and stuck to me. Those fables spoke.

「It has to be the End.」

Perhaps that was the answer that the Second Kim Dokja came up with after watching the <Star Stream> for a very long time.

The Second Kim Dokja looked very sad as he said those words.

「If we don't bring about the end now, this universe will experience even greater sorrow.」

I couldn't figure out what he meant by 'greater sorrow'.

Suddenly, Cheon Inho's words came to mind. Cheon Inho said,

「There are things that can only be preserved if this world is destroyed.」

<Kim Dokja’s Company> and Han Sooyoung, whom I first met, had said something similar. If this world line isn't destroyed, other universes might be destroyed.

I also understand their justification a little.

"King of Fear. No, 'Watcher of Light and Darkness! Aren't you the 'Kim Dokja' who likes happy endings more than anyone else?"

Even so, I still think.

Is the ending of this world line really only 'destruction'?

[The story, 'Between the Lines of Truth and Lies', shines brightly.]

Is there no way to protect this world from destruction and other universes?

"I will stop it. Even if this world does not perish, I will prevent a greater sorrow from occurring."

「...」

"Just like you did someday."

The modifier of the 'Second Kim Dokja' is 'Watcher of Light and Darkness'.

He fought in the 'Great Battle of the Holy War' and obtained that modifier through a third choice that was neither absolute good nor absolute evil.

He is where he is now because he chose a path that no one else has taken.

"Second brother, please stop the End."

The Second Kim Dokja still did not answer. The moment his eyes once again gleamed like compound eyes, the wings behind him spread wide. Dust began to pour out from the wings. I instinctively thought that I should not touch it, but there was no space to escape.

The moment I touched the dust, my vision became blurred and my heart raced. When I opened my eyes again, I saw the back of Kim Dokja.

A white coat and a white face. A unique smiling expression. The Kim Dokja I had written, the Kim Dokja I remembered.

I unconsciously walked toward him.

When I looked closely, he was standing among people. People he liked. It was <Kim Dokja's Company>.

「That was the scenery that ■■■ had wanted to see for a long time.」

That's right. I wanted to see that. This scenery. I wanted to write that into the ending of this world. I wanted to see everyone I had made unhappy become happy again. I—

[The exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', is restored!]

I coughed violently along with a feeling of my stomach turning inside out. The dust escaped from my body, and the illusions that had been before my eyes were all shattered.

['Butterfly Dream' is released!]

Within a hair's breadth, the [Fourth Wall] was restored, and the power of 'Second Kim Dokja' was shattered. When I raised my head, the Second Kim Dokja was about ten meters up in the air, spreading his wings and arms wide and scattering dust on the world.

The dust he had scattered was rising into the sky like snow falling backwards.

At that moment, I realized something important.

This was Yoo Joonghyuk's 'inner world'.

What was in front of me right now was the soul of the 'Second Kim Dokja'.

Then where was his true self right now?

「"Ah, what the hell is that?"」

The snow fluttering in the air solved my question.

Joy. Trembling. Exaltation. Joy. A storm of snow flurries mixed with all sorts of positive emotions was blowing.

In the midst of that storm, one incarnation muttered.

「"Is it an angel?"」

The snow flurry that touched my fingertips was vividly recreated. The scene of the scenario was right before my eyes. The 'King of Fear' who had finally escaped the 'Fear Realm' had revealed himself to the people.

The incarnations approached the Second Kim Dokja as if possessed, and inhaled the dust he had scattered. And—

Ooooooooooo!

The people became 'terrified'.

「"Don't get hit by the dust! If you get hit by it, you'll turn into a monster!"」

「"Damage! Everyone, run away!"」

The Fear Realm was expanding in real time. And that was the Second Kim Dokja's answer to my question.

「This 'End' is the only way to resolve the conflict in this universe.」

An opponent I couldn't communicate with.

So that was the end of my expectations for brotherly affection.

I took a deep breath and leaped into the air.

"I know why your soul is in this 'Snowfield'."

This is a place free from the constraints of probability. As long as his soul is hidden here, he can protect his soul from the external probability aftershock.

"But you're not the only one who isn't limited by probability."

Of course, even if I wasn't restricted, it was impossible for me to stop him with my current strength.

But I was 'Kim Dokja'.

And like all 'Kim Dokjas', 'Kim Dokja' never fights with his own strength.

[The exclusive skill, 'Bookmark', is activated!]

I didn't hesitate and called the character I had previously designated in the bookmark. No matter how much I thought about it, the only character who could handle 'Kim Dokja' in this situation was this 'existence'.

[Activation time: 3 minutes]

[This character is currently unmanageable for you!]

A character who couldn't be called with [Bookmark] originally.

However, I met this character at the 'Recycling Center' a while ago, and I gained a small amount of understanding of him.

[Your understanding of the character is low, and the level of the character is too high, so only a part of the skill is activated.]

A strong person who is restricted even in the 'Snowfield', where there are no restrictions on probability.

[The level of the character is too high to fully reproduce the skill level.]

I felt the Second looking down at me in surprise. He must have known which bookmark I had taken out.

「He is the boy who respects Kim Dokja more than anyone else in this universe.」

But it was already too late.

At least as long as the opponent was an 'insect', I was confident that I wouldn’t lose to Kim Dokja right now.

[Bookmark 3, 'Insect Lord Lee Gilyeong', has been activated!]

I reached out to the Second Kim Dokja without hesitation.

[The exclusive skill, 'Taming Lv.???', is activated!]

864 Episode 47 King of Fear (8)

The moment I activated the skill, my hand bounced off with a strong spark.

[Cannot tame the target!]

[Insufficient communication with the target!]

[Insufficient understanding of the target!]

Even though I was Gilyeong who cleared the Last Scenario, the target I was trying to tame right now was none other than the 'King of Fear'. A Transcendent being whose rank could not be measured at a glance.

However, there was a countermeasure.

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', is activated!]

「Incite, which had been trained to the limit through the 40th 'Time Fault'.」

I added the power of [Strengthening Sentences] to it.

「I am Lee Gilyeong.」

Then the voice that had been fluttering in my head like an insect's wings became clearer.

「"I will save you, Dokja hyung!"」

King Lee Gilyeong.

「"I won't yield to anyone. Not even to that sooty bastard. Not even to Shin Yoosung."」

「"I'll become strong. To the point where I won't lose to anyone. Until there's no insect in the world that I can't tame."」

「"I'll tame it, and tame it again."」

There were scenes that came to mind every time the voice continued. The image of Lee Gilyeong casting [Tame] without regard to the level whenever he encountered the Insect Lord. The face of the boy who didn't give up even though he was torn by the Insect Lord's claws and bitten by its teeth.

If you think about it, taming something was like that.

Reaching out while risking my own wounds and hardening. Placing someone else's sentences on my margins.

Lee Gilyeong had been enduring that kind of life to get back just one person.

[The effect of the exclusive skill, 'Incite', affects the exclusive skill, 'Bookmark'.]

[Additional skills are activated!]

[Exclusive skill, 'Advanced Multi-species Interaction Lv.???', is activated!]

「Advanced Multi-species Interaction. Taming Scalp that increases the probability of Taming by interacting with the target.」

The moment the golden thread flowing from my fingertips touched the Second Kim Dokja, the entire Fear Realm screamed loudly.

The universe was connected.

---

There was a boy. He was a boy who loved reading books.

The boy especially liked novels, and among them, he cherished the story of a Regressor.

The boy liked that line from the protagonist.

A person who proudly says his name anytime, anywhere.

He admired the protagonist who lived such a life.

"Isn't that just a lie?"

That's how the boy's friend evaluated the novel the boy was reading. It's just a lie. A nonexistent fiction.

The boy silently agreed to that.

"That may be so."

Everyone knows that a novel is fiction. But the boy reading it was definitely a living person.

The boy still remembered it clearly. Outside the wide-open window. The feeling of gravity disappearing beneath his feet. The moment he first searched for 'Ways of Survival' on the old hospital computer. The feeling of reading the first sentence absentmindedly.

"But it's still fun."

The only thing the boy could say to defend that fiction was 'fun'.

A fun story that saved his boring life.

The boy's friend pushed up his glasses and said.

"I don't even have to look at it. It's a story about a chosen protagonist who continues to profit and rise through the ranks."

The boy wanted to tell him that the protagonist of this story didn't rise through the ranks, but he couldn't. Because he wasn't Yoo Joonghyuk.

"What's fun about a story about a lucky protagonist who does well as planned?"

He wanted to say that the main character of this story wasn't that lucky, but he couldn't. After all, he wasn't Yoo Joonghyuk.

Instead, the boy said this.

"I'm having fun."

"Why? What's having fun?"

"Because I'm not the main character."

As the boy read the book, he discovered characters like himself one by one.

「"Captain, I wanted to be like you too."」

「"But I couldn't. No matter how hard I tried, I couldn't be like the Captain."」

「"But even in that kind of country, please come back again in the next Round. If you keep trying, you might become one someday."」

Although they couldn't become the main character, there were many characters who lived hard. From important supporting characters, to minor supporting characters, to extras who didn't even have names.

「"I definitely want to be of help to you in the next Round."」

Countless characters who said similar lines and died.

「"I'll definitely kill you."」

The boy liked their stories as much as the main character's. In that sense, it was fortunate for the boy that 'Ways of Survival' was a very long and rambling novel.

It was around that time that the boy began reading other novels together. Among them, there were some novels that the boy found quite interesting.

For example, a story about a man who hated regression so much that he died.

The difference was that, unlike 'Ways of Survival', that story was very short.

「All stories end in the end.」

When he realized that fact anew, the boy became afraid.

The novel he liked would end someday.

He knew it. Even so, it was not easy to accept that fact.

Although it was not 'Ways of Survival', he felt that way even more after seeing the end of another novel. The boy trembled with fear as he imagined the characters in the novels he loved dying over time.

「What if 'Ways of Survival' ends like this?」

The boy carefully imagined the ending of the story.

Will the villain meet a villainous end? Will the supporting characters find their respective roles? Will Yoo Joonghyuk finally figure out what his ■■ is?

Will they eventually be happy?

And will he, who watches them, be satisfied with that?

Only after thinking that far did the boy realize.

Maybe there is no such thing as a 'happy ending' in this story.

Isn't a happy ending an illusion that doesn't exist? In the end, isn't the ending of this story bound to be a tragedy?

「I wish this story wouldn't end.」

It's okay if today's chapter is sad. It's okay if tomorrow's chapter, and the chapter after that, are sad. If only that sadness can postpone the ending.

And so, if only he can live forever dreaming of a 'happy ending'.

[The 'King of Fear' begins to dream.]

The first 'Time Fault' was born at that very moment.

The ability to fix the coordinates of a story and make it a kind of eternity.

Stories that were not recorded or disappeared were piled up one by one in the fault.

A warehouse that stores disappearing stories. Even if this story ends, it's a place where the story will never be forgotten.

「The 'Fear Realm' originated from such a dream of Kim Dokja.」

There, the Second Kim Dokja stockpiled and stockpiled stories. Ignoring even the fight between his brothers, perhaps to avoid participating in that fight, he hid himself even more in the Time Fault, absorbed in collecting the disappearing stories.

And there was a 'fighter' who protected him.

[You were here, Kim Dokja.]

The fighter who came across the world line recognized the Second Kim Dokja at a glance, and the Second Kim Dokja also recognized who the fighter was.

The Second Kim Dokja asked.

'Can you protect me?'

[For how long?]

'Until the day I can think of a happy ending.'

[Okay. If you think of it, tell me. I want to write it on the 'wall' too.]

The Second Kim Dokja dreamed of a happy ending while collecting the sadness scattered throughout the world.

Looking at the disappearing stories, remembering the characters who died without being recorded as 'Fears', the Second Kim Dokja imagined a happy ending.

But no matter how many stories he collected and recorded, a 'happy ending' never came to mind. A 'happy ending' felt like a concept from another universe that he couldn't imagine.

Then one day, he came to visit.

【Of course. There's no way for everyone to be happy.】

He was a man with impressive narrow eyes.

【As long as the 'main character' exists.】

'Main character?'

【Everything started because of the 'main character'. This story started because there was a main character, and because there was a main character, someone got hurt and died. Because there was a main character, someone became a supporting actor, and someone became an extra. And... because there was a main character, your brothers started fighting.】

'Sad.'

Why does a 'main character' exist in this world? Why should someone be the main character and someone not?

And yet, why does he like this story with a main character?

【There is a way not to be sad.】

'What is it?'

【Closing the 'book' that this story is written in.】

Closing the book.

The Second Kim Dokja tilted his head and asked.

'How?'

【Make the entire <Star Stream> a 'Fear'. Incorporate the entire universe into your dream.】

The man grinned, revealing his white teeth.

【Then this world will be 'fixed' forever without heading to the end.】

An eternal postponement of the end.

The Second Kim Dokja thought for a moment and said.

'If the story stops, it will also lose its meaning as to who the main character is.'

【That's right.】

'Then my brothers won't fight anymore.'

【That's right.】

The Second Kim Dokja smiled brightly.

'I will do that.'

Then the warrior asked.

[Kim Dokja. Is that really what you want?]

When the Second Kim Dokja nodded, the warrior smiled and answered.

[Yes, I understand.]

Soon, the sound of a book closing was heard.

---

I retched and was thrown out of the air. It was a very short moment, but it felt like I had vividly experienced a part of his history. Blood poured out of my mouth, and a message was heard.

[Exclusive skill, 'Taming Lv.???', failed.]

To tame someone means to share that being's emotions. To share their sadness and joy, their despair and fear.

However, the one I wanted to be with was the 'King of Fear.' A being that had been storing up emotions for years that I couldn't even measure.

[Exclusive skill, 'Multi-Cultural Communication Lv.???', is activated.]

It felt like someone was grabbing my brain with both hands and squeezing it.

Just having my mind connected would make me go crazy. My consciousness kept getting more and more confused.

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', is strongly activated!]

「(Come to your senses!)」

It was the voice of First Kim Dokja — 'Demon King of Salvation'.

「(If you get hit here, it's all over, Youngest.)」

I know. But there was nothing I could do. Even the trump card, 'Insect Lord Lee Gilyeong', was not working.

If things continued like this, the entire world line would become a 'Fear'.

I opened my mouth to somehow prevent that situation.

"I understand how you feel."

Now I understand why the Second Kim Dokja created the 'Fear Realm'.

"But this is not it."

I also understand where his end came from.

He will make the entire <Star Stream> into a 'Fear Realm'. If that happens, the main character will disappear from this world. Me, Yoo Joonghyuk, and the other characters will all become part of the 'Fear' and will be stuffed forever as a legend in the Fault.

Then the fighting will stop.

But that will stop this story forever. No one will know the ending of the story covered in thick binding.

"You liked this story, right?"

"You survived by watching this story. You know that too. This story is not just the main character's story. This story—"

This is a story for one reader.

"We made it together."

The protagonist is not the protagonist from the beginning. It is only when there is a 'reader' who reads the protagonist and wants to become the protagonist that he becomes the protagonist.

Is it because [Advanced Multi-species Communication] worked? For the first time, I felt like the Second Kim Dokja was looking back at me. Then a voice came into my head.

「If this story continues, one of us has to become the 'Protagonist'.」

"…"

「Because this world is now a story for 'One Reader'.」

I couldn't bring myself to refute that statement.

The Second's words are what I thought. If this world continues, Kim Dokja will eventually have to kill Kim Dokja.

The fact that, just like other Kim Dokja fragments, the stories that seek to hide the 'One and Only Kim Dokja' will continue.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', stirs.]

The Second Kim Dokja said.

「I'm trying to stop that story.」

Is it because of [High-level Multi-species Communication] that I'm being persuaded by his story right now?

For a moment, that thought crossed my mind. Wouldn't it be better if everything turned into 'Fear' just like he thought? Is the 'ending' that we have to see while enduring all the tragedies that lie ahead really meaningful?

「Do you really think the story will stop when you close the book?」

That wasn't the voice of the 'King of Fear'.

I felt goosebumps running down my spine. There was someone else in the Snowfield.

I saw Baekcheong's strong energy cutting through the air with a clear sword sound.

「Everything is already written, and it is being written at the same time.」

A pure white coat fluttering. His sword traced a trajectory with a faint smile, just like the day we first met.

「So, as long as even one reader is curious about the next story.」

In an instant, the 'King of Fear's' arm flew through the air. The 'Blade of Faith' radiating light was burning pure white before my eyes.

Treading on the pitch-black snow that had fallen, 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' turned to me and said.

「The story is not over.」

865 Episode 47 King of Fear (9)

---

There were three 'Kim Dokjas' that I've met so far.

First, the Demon King of Salvation.

The sponsor I made a contract with, and now my First Brother' who helps me inside the [Fourth Wall].

Second, the King of Fear.

The Master of the Fear Realm, and the being who created the Time Fault. My 'Second Brother' who tries to turn the entire <Star Stream> into a 'Fear Realm'.

Three, Snowfield Kim Dokja.

The Kim Dokja that I first met.

The Kim Dokja that spoke to me in the snowfield and gave me tea.

The only one who wasn't called by a 'modifier', he wasn't the First, the Second, or the Third Kim Dokja that hadn't yet appeared.

I knew who he was.

'49% Kim Dokja'.

A Kim Dokja who was torn apart in the process of the 'Oldest Dream' being shattered into fragments, just like me. The difference was that he fell into the Snowfield, not on Earth, and was raised by Cheon Inho there.

He probably increased the total amount of 'Kim Dokja fragments' through Cheon Inho. And eventually, he must have gained enough strength to threaten the status of the main body.

That's right. This 'Kim Dokja' in front of me right now is—

「It's been a long time.」

The one who tore Kim Dokja's main body apart and created the current 'Kim Dokja brothers'.

"You—"

I opened my mouth with a trembling voice.

Is it because of my mood? It felt different from when I met him before. His smile, which had felt strangely sad and hazy, had darkened a little.

「You've finally come this far, ■■.」

Pitch-black stories fell from the 'Unbreakable Faith' he held. It was the story of the 'King of Fear'.

Ignoring the screams of the stories, he spoke with his lips pursed.

「You lost your name, you.」

Snowfield Kim Dokja smiled bitterly as if he knew what had happened.

「I told you. Tell me the story you want to tell.」

"…"

「If you had done as I said, you wouldn’t have lost your name.」

The story I wanted.

I couldn’t help but feel repulsed by those words.

What on earth was the story I wanted to tell? What story should I have told so that I wouldn’t lose my name?

「Well, it doesn’t matter. You wanted to become 'Kim Dokja' too.」

Snowfield Kim Dokja turned his back on me as he said that. The King of Fear was looking at me from afar. Before I knew it, his severed arm was regenerating.

I staggered and stood up.

I don’t know why 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' had appeared here. However, I instinctively felt a sense of rejection. I felt that I couldn’t just leave him alone.

"Why did you come here?"

A different fighting spirit began to flow from the King of Fear’s body. It was a huge aura that seemed to cover the entire Snowfield with 'Fear'.

Snowfield Kim Dokja also began to manifest his power. It was a magnificent story that I had never witnessed before.

「■■-ah.」

My name was filtered and inaudible. Even so, I could clearly feel that he was calling me.

「I came to save you.」

Considering the situation, his words were right. However, the moment I saw the smile on his face, I had an ominous feeling.

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', shakes.]

The [Fourth Wall] twitched as if in agreement with that feeling. The fierce anger of the 'First Kim Dokja' could be felt from beyond the wall.

Snowfield Kim Dokja continued to ask, whether he knew my condition or not.

「If we don't stop that guy, this world line will be destroyed. Do you want that?」

I shook my head. Of course I wouldn't want that. I also want to protect this world line.

「Then back off. I'll take care of this.」

I didn't back down. I felt like I shouldn't do that. I knew why I was thinking that way.

"You're thinking of absorbing the 'King of Fear', right?"

Snowfield Kim Dokja looked at me blankly, then asked back without changing his expression at all.

「Is there a reason why I can't?」

The moment I saw that expression that resembled me more than any other Kim Dokja, my heart skipped a beat.

「You absorbed the 'Demon King of Salvation' too, right?」

"I didn't absorb him."

「Aha. So he's inside the [Fourth Wall] of his own free will?」

Snowfield Kim Dokja smiled brightly and reached out to me. The moment his long fingers touched my cheek, sparks flew out with a tsutsutsu sound.

[Exclusive skill 'Fourth Wall' is strongly activated!]

Snowfield Kim Dokja looked at me with his characteristically hazy smile and asked.

「How long will that trick work?」

"..."

「Eventually, 'Kim Dokja' will gather again. Because the <Star Stream> wants it.」

His voice sounded unfamiliar.

Was Snowfield Kim Dokja originally like this? Who on earth changed him into this? Or was he originally like this, and I was seeing things wrong?

"If it was going to be like this anyway, why did you tell me to tell 'my story'?"

At one time, I trusted him. I thought he would be on my side, that he would support me no matter what. No matter what anyone said, he was the first person who told me to tell 'my story'.

「You couldn't do it in the end.」

The moment I heard that, I thought I knew what had changed him.

「You couldn't make your story right. You couldn't do this or that right, and you became 'an ordinary Kim Dokja'.」

An ordinary Kim Dokja.

「That's why I'm going to do it.」

Maybe it was me who changed him.

It was the story I made.

「I am you.」

For the first time, his smile didn't feel beautiful.

「You're just standing there watching like you always have. Until this 'Round' ends.」

I turned around without saying anything and looked at his back. A gorgeous white coat fluttering in the wind. A back that looked better in a coat than any other Kim Dokja I'd ever seen.

In the end, the story is about the main character.

And in this war of Kim Dokjas, maybe I am not the main character.

Snowfield Kim Dokja opened his mouth to the King of Fear.

「We don't need to talk long.」

[The story, 'Wanderer of the Snowfield', begins its storytelling.]

Wanderer of the Snowfield.

It was a story that had never appeared in the main story.

[The story, 'Master of Fear', howls!]

In response, the 'King of Fear' also brought out his story. The two tales howled at each other for a long time, and in the next moment, 'Snowfield Kim Dokja's' footsteps disappeared.

Then, a loud noise shook the entire Snowfield.

Snowfield Kim Dokja, wrapped in Baekcheong's strong energy, was pushing the King of Fear. A quick and clear swordsmanship reminiscent of Lee Jihye's [Instant Kill]. [Full Electrification] that can be freely activated even without [Miniaturization]. The splendid strong energy that extended from the swordsmanship exploded like firecrackers, destroying the King of Fear's entire body.

But the King of Fear didn't just take it easy. The King of Fear, who had been crouching, spread his wings wide. The dust that fell from his wings seemed to cover the entire Snowfield, and then a huge vortex formed around several dust particles.

The vortex soon turned into a pitch-black portal.

【Ooooooooooo!】

A pitch-black tentacle appeared beyond the portal.

I immediately realized what kind of deity it was.

「This is interesting.」

The 'Outer Gods of Natural Disasters' including the 'Dream Eater' crossed the portal to save the 'King of Fear'.

「This is really an ability that is not like 'Kim Dokja'.」

Snowfield Kim Dokja activated [Baekcheong-ganggi] again. It was a skill on a different level than the [Baekcheong-ganggi] I had used.

The 'Blade of Faith' that was dozens of times longer cut off the 'Dream Eater's' leg.

【Ooooooooooo!】

As the 'Dream Eater' roared, other Outer Gods began to surge in through the portal. Outer Gods ranging from Disaster-level to Catastrophe-level fear. They were Gods of the Other World who lived in Fear under the 'King of Fear'.

Snowfield Kim Dokja cut down the Outer Gods rushing in without hesitation. The corpses of the Outer Gods who were cut down in an instant were piling up on the Snowfield’s floor.

They were talking.

「I don’t like it.」

Death was rising.

「I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it I don't like it.」

I approached the two of them through the corpses of Outer Deities. However, due to the stories of Outer Gods pouring out of the air, the two of them were no longer visible.

The sense of distance seemed to prove the gap between them and me.

As if there was no room for me to interrupt, the two stood in their respective positions. One was to destroy the world line, and the other side was to prevent the destruction of the world line.

Then where is my position?

Am I on the side that wants to destroy the world line, or the side that wants to protect the world line?

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', growls.]

If not both, then where is my position that does not choose both?

「"Tell me your story."」

In return for choosing this position, what was the story I ultimately wanted to write?

Once again, I felt someone grab my hand tightly. It was Giyeon hyung. Giyeon hyung's body, holding me tightly with his small hands, was shining brightly.

Giyeon hyung's memories flowed into me through the [Fourth Wall].

「"Writing interesting stories is protecting world peace."」

That's right.

「"If everyone is focused on my story, people won't fight with each other."」

I nodded without realizing it and took a step, I took another step.

My steps were not as flashy as those of other Dokjas. But I also walked diligently.

"If you have a mouth, you can talk, and if you have ears, you can listen."

There is an interesting story left in my head. That story is not over yet.

"So listen to me."

There is an ending that I absolutely must write. There is a debt that I must repay, and there are sentences that I must write.

And to fill in those sentences.

"Don't fight, you rascals!"

This 'space between the lines' must still be empty.

[The story 'Way of the Wind' begins its storytelling!]

They are not the only ones who are not restricted by probability here.

I am the same.

I may not be as strong or have overwhelming skill as them, but I am also a Dokja. I can fight in my own way.

"I told you to stop!"

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', is activated!]

Even with [Incite] with a greatly increased proficiency, I couldn't stop them.

I thought. I needed a sentence that would stop them even for a moment. But what should I say now to stop them?

What would be the most effective way to provoke them right now?

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', is strongly activated!]

I jumped over the corpses of the Outer Gods and flew into the air, opening my mouth at them.

"You guys—"

Even if these words were not true, if I could just steal a moment from you.

"Aren’t Kim Dokja!"

With a 'tsutsutsu' sound, sparks flew out of the air.

The two Kim Dokjas, who had not responded at all until now, looked back at me at the same time. A deep silence fell over the battlefield for a moment. Neither of them opened their mouths, but both of them were asking me with their gazes.

「What did you just say?」

I laughed, hiding the cold sweat running down my back.

"Aren't you curious?"

Seriously, you damn brothers.

"Why did my words, which weren't even true, stop you for a moment?"

Maybe I envy you.

I envy those of you who don’t doubt the fact that you are 'Kim Dokja'. I feel ashamed of myself for constantly running to become Kim Dokja and become even a little bit like him.

However, because I have been running like that, because I am Kim Dokja, who is weaker than anyone else, there are things I can do.

I stood between the two who were glaring at me and stretched out my hand and said.

"In fact, you know that too. If it were the real Kim Dokja, he wouldn’t act like that."

As soon as I finished saying that, a storm of stories swept through the two beings’ bodies. It seemed as if they didn’t care whether I was in the middle or not, whether my soul was torn apart or not.

"You will come out like that."

They knew that too. That my current power wouldn’t be enough to stop them anyway.

But there were also things that the two of them didn’t know. For example,

"You who seek old Fears."

The fact that from now on, I am not the one who will stand between them.

"I will fulfill the record of our promise here and now."

It was a card I didn’t want to use if possible. But there was no other way. Because on one side, [Baekcheong-ganggi] as big as a house was coming, and on the other side, the magic waves of the Outer Gods were coming.

With the order to fulfill the contract, a pillar of light rose from the center of the Snowfield.

【Ahahahaha! You finally kept your promise with me!】

Asmodeus appeared in a pitch-black gothic dress, along with a gorgeous blue.

[The Recorder of Fear 'Demon King of the Cinema' agrees to a contract with you.]

And the next moment, Asmodeus, who had grasped the situation, glared at me and screamed.

【Oh, damn Kim Dokja!】

A huge explosion occurred.

866 Episode 47 King of Fear (10)

【Kuaaaaat—!】

Along with Asmodeus's scream, a deafening roar echoed.

I crouched down, grabbing the wrist of the guy who was trying to run away.

【Let go of this! Damn it!】

Asmodeus tried to shake me off and run away, but he realized it was too late and began to unfold his own story. The story he built up while living as the 'Recorder of Fear' and 'Outer God'.

[The story, 'False Demon's Banquet', begins its storytelling.]

Surprisingly, it was a story I had read in 'Ways of Survival'.

「False Demon's Banquet.」

The characteristics of this story, where the number of uses resets every time the full moon rises, were as follows.

「Change all attacks that pour down on you for 1 minute into banquet fireworks.」

Originally, it was a technique used by the Highest-Ranking Demon King 'Ruler of Eastern Hell' Agares in some rounds, but for some reason, it seemed that Asmodeus had inherited the story.

The fierce blue that surged from the air was transformed into a splendid banquet fireworks. A vivid baptism of fireworks that dyed the white night of the Snowfield red and blue.

【Kim Dokja.】

Asmodeus was glaring at me from the center of the fireworks.

【Why did you call me in this situation?】

I laughed, still not letting go of the guy's wrist.

"You were the one who asked me to call you when I meet the King of Fear."

When I met Asmodeus in the Recorder's Room a while ago, I had made a promise with Asmodeus in exchange for getting my brother back.

'If I meet the King of Fear, I will call him.'

I simply kept that promise.

Asmodeus looked around with bloodshot eyes.

On one side was Snowfield Kim Dokja, who was spreading a cold air, and on the other side was the King of Fear, who was emitting an unreadable aura.

[The story, 'False Demon’s Banquet', stammers its storytelling.]

Sparks flew in the air, and the story’s power began to weaken.

It was natural. Those two Kim Dokjas were among the strongest Transcendent beings I’ve ever encountered. At least in this 'Snowfield', even the Myth-grade Constellations wouldn’t be able to stop them.

I couldn’t even guess how much probability it would take to replace the attacks they were pouring out with firecrackers.

"Please stop the fight. Can’t you?"

【Why should I do that?】

"If you don’t stop that, your plan will go awry."

I don’t know, but Asmodeus must have been thinking of confronting the King of Fear directly and taking his power.

However, even for Asmodeus, it was impossible to deal with both of them at once.

Asmodeus must have noticed my intentions and let out a bitter smile.

【You’ve made quite a gamble, Kim Dokja.】

Asmodeus looked back and forth between the King of Fear and Snowfield Kim Dokja and said.

【It’s true that if the two 'big fragments' here merge, my position will be a bit awkward.】

"Will you stop them?"

【Even I can’t deal with them for long in this space.】

The range of the firecrackers was shrinking in real time. Even for Asmodeus, it seemed too much to delay this situation.

"Can’t you borrow the power of the kkoma Kim Dokjas in the theater?"

【Do you think it’s that easy to make the kkoma Kim Dokjas imagine the same thing?】

Judging by the probability flowing through his body, it seems that the kkoma Kim Dokjas’ power was already being used right away.

【If you hand over your [Fourth wall] to me, that would be another matter.】

We smiled at each other. Both of us already knew that it was an impossible deal.

In the end, Asmodeus took a step back first.

【I can make it in a little while.】

"How much in a little while?"

【Five minutes, more than that is impossible. So—】

With the sound of probability, the power of the story shattered. The firecrackers disappeared and the stories from both sides surged toward us.

Asmodeus kicked my chest with his foot and said.

【With that smart head, find a way quickly!】

I fell to the ground and was buried in the Snowfield.

Almost at the same time, a pitch-black shadow appeared in the air.

【Okay, everyone. It's intermission time.】

The entire sky turned pitch black like a movie theater screen with the lights off, and soon a huge hexagonal black substance appeared.

[The story 'Silver Screen Seal' begins its storytelling.]

Asmodeus, Snowfield Kim Dokja, and the King of Fear were nowhere to be seen. It seemed like all three were inside that hexagonal object.

It was a story that reminded me of 'The Seal of the Apocalypse'.

Is that technique a desperate move that can buy me 5 minutes?

While the Outer Gods crawling on the floor howled like cats that had lost their owners, I desperately racked my brain to find a way to make the most of the time Asmodeus had given me.

This is the 'Snowfield'.

All the resources I have can be put to the best use here.

But in a situation where [Incite] doesn't work, what on earth can I do to stop them? I thought about borrowing the power of First Kim Dokja, the 'Demon King of Salvation', but there was no response, perhaps because there was a problem with the communication of the [Fourth Wall] since a while ago.

Then, it must mean that it is time to reveal the cards I have been saving up one by one.

I let out a light sigh and started to receive the 'Fear Rewards' that I had been putting off.

[Would you like to use the item 'Story Fragment Selection Ticket'?]

"Use it."

Story Fragment Selection Ticket.

This was the reward I received when I successfully interpreted the fear of 'Subway Home' when I entered the Transcendent Alliance.

Unfortunately, it was a flaw that it was called 'Story Fragment' instead of 'Story', but I was grateful for this now.

[Prints a list of available story fragments.]

1. The Relationship Between Hands and Feet

2. The Friend of a Small Stone

3. The Bone That the Demon King Threw Away After Eating

4. A Piece of Starlight in the Water

5. A Dumpling That Someone Left Behind

However, I could not find any useful story fragments. It was the same no matter how many pages I turned. Most of the story fragments I could see were trashy story fragments.

Still, I did not give up hope.

How many compensation pages did I turn? Finally, a story fragment that seemed useful appeared.

"I will choose story fragment number 214."

[Acquired story fragment 'Graffiti on the Wall'.]

Graffiti on the wall. It was a story that seemed like nothing special just by hearing the name.

But according to my thoughts, this story was related to 'that person'.

[Story fragment 'Graffiti on the wall' begins its storytelling.]

As if a warm match was lit on the Snowfield, the story began.

「"I'll be really sad if I tell everything and no one understands. Everyone has a wall and communication is impossible... It's obvious."」

"Still, we have to talk about anything. After all, there is someone on the other side of that wall."」

Outer Gods who were wandering around gathered nearby one by one to watch the story.

「"There's a wall, so what can you talk about?"」

"You can just write on the wall."」

I also stood in the gap between them and watched the old story. Even though it wasn't the story I lived, I somehow felt nostalgic. Maybe it's because I, too, used a part of my life to write this story.

In the end, like the conversation with Kim Dokja that day, this story remained as a story, and it is being read by someone now.

"I know you're there."

As I said this, I felt a small presence behind me. Then, a being appeared, tearing the space apart like a curtain. He was a warrior who protected the 'King of Fear'.

A fiercely rippling shadow.

I met the sadly shining eyes above the shadow's face.

"The King of Transcendents."

That was his nickname.

He was the most perfect incarnation in this world. A person born into the world through Kim Dokja's comment.

"Jang Hayoung."

The shadow's appearance changed with my words. As if she were only revealing her veil to those who could recognize her, her hair changed to a swaying golden color.

However, it was not a situation to be amazed. Because she immediately spoke in a sharp voice.

[How do you have that story?]

"Because I'm also Kim Dokja."

I don't think it was a coincidence that this story fragment came to me. As Snowfield Kim Dokja said, all Kim Dokja fragments have the property of attracting each other. So perhaps this story fragment came to me too.

"Would you like to see more?"

[…Yes.]

We listened to the story of the story fragment in silence.

The story contained in the fragment was short.

「"The other person won't know what's happening on the other side of the wall anyway?"」

At most, it was a few words of conversation between Kim Dokja and Jang Hayoung.

「"At least that wall has changed. Then, maybe someone will read it someday."」

The scenery of the restaurant and the air of that day, which lingered like the sound of a broken music box. Like a lit match going out, the memories quickly dispersed into smoke.

Jang Hayoung urged.

[One more time.]

I activated the story fragment once more. The story spoke and we listened. After a while, the story went out again.

[One more time.]

"No."

[Why?]

"We don’t have much time. Instead, if you grant me a favor, I will show you the story again as many times as you want."

Jang Hayoung looked at the story fragment with regretful eyes and asked.

[What is your request?]

"Don't you already know?"

Jang Hayoung hesitated for a moment and shook her head.

[No.]

I knew you would say that.

Even so, I asked in a shameless voice.

"We must stop that fight. Isn't it your duty to protect the King of Fear?"

Jang Hayoung, the King of Transcendents.

If she had seen the end of the scenarios with <Kim Dokja’s Company> in the 1,864th round, she would definitely be able to mediate that fight.

But.

[Even if that were my duty, I can't grant your request.]

"Why?"

[I can't interfere with the 'Kim Dokjas’' affairs.]

It seemed that she had some special restrictions.

Well. Unlike other members <Kim Dokja’s Company>, the reason she was able to descend directly into the 'Fear Realm' was because she had placed such restrictions on herself.

"That fight could kill the King of Fear."

[I know. But that's not 'real death' in the strict sense.]

Jang Hayoung seemed to have a vague idea about our situation.

A war to choose a single Kim Dokja. When Kim Dokja and Kim Dokja fight, the true side is absorbed into the other Kim Dokja. If we don’t recognize each fragment as a single entity, then this fight will only be seen as a journey to become a complete Kim Dokja.

I swallowed a light sigh and opened my mouth.

"Okay. Then can I ask you something else?"

[What is it?]

"The [Unidentified Wall] you have. Can you still use it?"

Jang Hayoung tilted her head for a moment and said.

[Well… I can still use some of its functions. But why?]

If I remember correctly, the [Unidentified Wall] had several functions.

For example.

"Then it would be possible to contact the Constellations."

Through the [Unidentified Wall], Jang Hayoung was able to communicate one-on-one with 'almost all beings' in the <Star Stream>. In fact, in the main story, Jang Hayoung used this ability to trade with various Constellations. I asked, looking at the rewards of the Fear Realm that I had not yet received.

"Can I contact people from other worldlines through that 'wall'?"

[That's not possible.]

As expected, even if it's the [Unidentified Wall], that would be difficult. I thought that if I could contact <Kim Dokja’s Company>, or if I could contact a Transcendent being like the 'Secretive Plotter', that would be great.

"Then this is only possible for this worldline."

I thought of the Constellations that could stop that confrontation in our worldline.

But no one came to mind easily.

If I really dealt with Zeus or Odin, then it would be different, but if I dealt with those guys, I would definitely lose all my stories and live as a slave to the giant nebula for hundreds of years.

I thought of other Constellations.

Like Uriel, Breaking the Sky Sword sAINT, or the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon... Sure, they were all attractive choices, but strangely enough, I wasn't sure if they could stop the fight.

While narrowing down my choices one by one, someone's name suddenly came to mind.

Wait, could that person work too?

867 Episode 47 King of Fear (11)

---

The Demon King of Salvation— The First Kim Dokja shouted as he hurriedly repaired the broken library.

「(Kids! Stop it! Quickly!)」

At the order of the Demon King of Salvation, the kkoma Kim Dokjas moved around. When some of them blocked the broken library frame with newspapers, the trembling stories became quiet.

After the series of events that the Youngest experienced in the Fear Realm, the [Fourth Wall] became very unstable.

It was probably because this [Fourth Wall] itself was not complete.

The First Kim Dokja frowned and turned the newspaper on the table.

「(Damn it, this is how it is—)」

In fact, the events in the library were nothing compared to the events that the Youngest was experiencing.

The [Fourth Wall] shook once again, and a new sentence was created in the newspaper.

「Kugugugugugu!」

The confrontation between Kim Dokja and Kim Dokja continued on the blank sheet of paper.

The Second Kim Dokja—the First Kim Dokja bit his lips after confirming 'that guy' who was confronting the King of Fear.

He never thought that guy would show up!

He knew that the guy would often come to see the Youngest in the form of dreams, but he never expected that he would intervene so blatantly.

It must be possible because it was the 'Snowfield'.

The Snowfield is a place that is least affected by the probability of the <Star Stream>.

Even in such a place, the entire Snowfield was filled with sparks due to the stories the two Kim Dokjas were spewing out.

It was then that the Youngest's thoughts floated over the newspaper.

As expected, the Youngest seemed to be thinking of stopping this fight. At his judgment, which was typical of the Youngest, the first nodded and thought.

If it were me, who would I call? The [Unidentified Wall] has a limitation that it cannot send messages to other worldlines, so the choices were limited.

'Breaking the Sky Sword Saint or Uriel.'

The problem was whether he could summon them to the Snowfield. No matter how strong the Constellation was, there were only a limited number of beings that the Youngest could summon to the 'Snowfield'.

The Eldest Kim Dokja, immediately turned on his smartphone and made a call.

「(Damn, is the Third child on airplane mode again?)」

As expected, the Third Kim Dokja, did not answer the call.

But it didn't seem like he could ask for help from Yoo Joonghyuk or <Kim Dokja’s Company> of other worldlines.

In the case of <Kim Dokja’s Company>, there was no way to enter this Snowfield...

No way.

Would only beings who could come to the Snowfield really be able to stop this situation?

An ominous feeling rose in his head.

「(Wait a minute. Youngest, no way.)」

No way. Even if the Youngest is crazy, he wouldn’t dare to take such a risk. If he makes a mistake, the entire Fear Realm could be blown away—

「(No way? Hey! You bastard!)」

Then, the blank page on which the Youngest’s story was written slowly began to tear apart.

---

I told Jang Hayoung the name I had thought of and asked if she could send a message. Then Jang Hayoung answered.

[Um, that person is not officially affiliated with the <Star Stream>?]

"Then it won’t work?"

[The message can be delivered. This is the first time this has happened. It’s amazing.]

Then there’s hope.

The problem is whether I can persuade 'that being'.

[What should I send? By the way, I can only send one word.]

"Can you send an item as well?"

As far as I know, the [Unidentified Wall] has a function that allows you to exchange skills or items.

[What is it?]

"This is it."

Jang Hayoung looked down at the item I handed her and nodded.

[I can send this. What about the message?]

After I took a deep breath and sent the message, Jang Hayoung tilted her head and asked back.

[You really sent it like that?]

"Yes."

[This is the first time I've received such a strange message since 'Grow Up, Hairy Head'... Okay, I sent it.]

The message was sent. The message that flew through the wall must have crossed this 'Snowfield' and reached the man floating in space.

How would he react when he opened the message? Honestly, I didn't really expect it. He was such an unpredictable man.

10 seconds, 20 seconds, 30 seconds... 1 minute.

Time passed, and there was no reply.

Jang Hayoung asked after seeing my expression.

[Are you anxious?]

"I'm anxious."

Jang Hayoung looked at me blankly and said.

[Kim Dokja was always anxious.]

"Was he? It's a little different from the Kim Dokja I know."

I thought about the Kim Dokja in the main story. The Kim Dokja I remember was always a calm man.

Jang Hayoung laughed.

[People who try too hard to hide it actually make it obvious.]

Kim Dokja as a human being who wasn't recorded in the main story. Maybe Jang Hayoung read Kim Dokja's wall.

[When I see you, I think about that time a lot.]

"Well, I'm Kim Dokja too."

[You try to think like that, right?]

"Does the [Unidentifiable Wall] also have the ability to blurt out other people's thoughts?"

[That's a great Kim Dokja speech.]

"I tried."

[I thought that was really unique. You're already Kim Dokja, but you're trying to become Kim Dokja.]

I laughed weakly. Suddenly, a question I wanted to ask came to mind.

"What kind of Kim Dokja was the King of Fear?"

[A guy who understands sadness.]

Jang Hayoung continued speaking while looking up at the seal of Asmodeus floating in the air.

[Even without saying anything, I felt understood when I stood next to him. I liked that feeling so I stayed by his side for a long time.]

"Don't you feel sorry?"

[It's a shame. But there's nothing I can do. He said so. If something like this happens, don't interfere.]

She won't get involved in Kim Dokja's fight.

That must have been the promise between the 'King of Fear' and the 'Fighter'.

I realized it anew.

How serious are both the King of Fear and Snowfield Kim Dokja in this fight.

No matter who becomes the last Kim Dokja, they are simply trying to fill the gap in this story with 'Kim Dokja's War'.

On the other hand, what about me?

"I'm a coward."

[Why?]

"Because I'm trying to borrow the power of another being for Kim Dokja's fight."

I thought of Kim Dokja and the King of Fear, who were engaged in a fierce battle inside the seal.

To be honest, I had been overwhelmed ever since I witnessed their true power.

I thought I had become quite strong after going through the 40th Time Fault. At least in this Snowfield, I believed that I could compete with anyone.

But when I actually witnessed the two, that confidence disappeared as if it had been washed away.

The feeling of seeing a being who was much more complete as 'Kim Dokja' than me.

If we simply considered the number of 'Kim Dokja fragments' that I had, there wouldn't have been much of a difference between me and the 'King of Fear', but our levels of completion were noticeably different.

The kind of 'gap in class' that only a being who understood the stories they had better than anyone else could express.

[Is that a bad thing?]

I suddenly woke up from my thoughts at Jang Hayoung's question.

[Asking for help has always been Kim Dokja’s specialty.]

"Thank you for the consolation."

[Not consolation. I’m just telling the truth, and do you think it’s easy to become a coward?]

Jang Hayoung continued speaking without any noticeable change in expression.

[Only those who know what's important to them can become cowards. Kim Dokja knew that well. He could become a conman of this <Star Stream> for his colleagues many times.]

"…"

[Just like you are now.]

I smiled bitterly.

"That's when my con is successful."

There was still no reply from the [Unidentified Wall].

From afar, with a squeak, I could see Asmodeus's [Silver Screen Seal] breaking.

【Keu…】

But I still had one more card left.

[You have successfully interpreted the ■■-level Fear, 'Evil Sophist'.]

[Would you like to receive the delayed reward?]

I had not yet received the reward for clearing the Time Fault 'Evil Sophist'.

I don't know what I will get with this reward, but if I use it, my chances of winning will go up a little.

I held on to my 'Unbreakable Faith' and took a deep breath. Even if I die here, even if I can't stop them, I will do what I can. Like Kim Dokja.

[Wait.]

At that moment, Jang Hayoung stopped me.

[Something is here.]

I felt it too. Something strange was approaching from across the sky.

A huge force that tore apart the entire vast space and flew in. At that moment, Snowfield Kim Dokja, the King of Fear, and Asmodeus all had no choice but to look up at the sky with the same expression.

As something suddenly occurred to him, Asmodeus looked down at me and shouted.

【What on earth did you call—!】

Looking at Asmodeus, whose face was pale, I recalled the name of the man I had called.

Judging by the fact that something like that was flying towards me, it seemed that my message had arrived properly.

By the way, the message I sent him was as follows.

---

—I will take you back to the past you wanted to go back to.

When Jaehwan first received that message, he thought that there was a crazy guy in this universe.

It was clear who the crazy guy was.

"Judging by the way he speaks, it's that guy."

It must have been that Heo Yeo-geon—the guy who called him 'Jaehwan-nim'—who sent him nonsense.

"He must want to die, judging by the nonsense he sent."

The Monarch Slayer Jaehwan.

Anyone who knows him even a little bit knows that the word he hates the most is 'regression'.

Because of that damn 'regression', he lost his comrades, lost his friends, and had to continue his journey alone up the terrifying 《Tower of Nightmare》.

How dare he offer to 'regression' to him?

Regardless of whether the offer was possible or not, it was something that only a human who had escaped the temporary ship could dare to do.

Jaehwan began to put strength into the sword he had taken out of his waist.

"It seems he’s hiding in a strange place."

His power as an Awakened person was manifested.

「Suspicious and Understanding.」

The path the message had come from was clearly visible on his retina.

"Did you think I wouldn't be able to find you if you hid?"

Jaehwan's sword strike began to condense the tremendous stabbing energy.

Sparks exploded like firecrackers all over his body.

[The Management Bureau has detected your dangerous actions!]

At the same time, a pure white spark net spread around him. As if someone was trying to restrain his actions, putting a limit on probability on him.

A dazzling pillar of light began to descend from the sky.

[The Great Dokkaebi, 'Halong', descends to the area!]

[The Great Dokkaebi, 'Holong', descends to the area!]

[The Great Dokkaebi, 'Noksoo', descends to the area!]

[The Great Dokkaebi, 'Onsae', descends to the area!]

[The Great Dokkaebi, 'Haesol', descends to the area!]

As many as five Great Dokkaebis appeared in the scenario to stop him.

Great Dokkaebis.

Except for the 'Dokkaebi King', the king of stories, these are the Executive-level dokkaebis who can wield the most powerful power in the Management Bureau. The fact that five of them appeared at the same time was an unusual event even in the long history of the <Star Stream>.

Jaehwan quickly realized who they were.

"Are you the 'Cultivators' of this worldline?"

Then the Great Dokkaebis answered.

['Monarch Slayer', you must not interfere with the affairs of the <Star Stream>.]

When the Great Dokkaebi 'Oksu' spoke, the Great Dokkaebi 'Onsae' next to him nodded.

[No one can go against the law of probability.]

The last one to speak was the Great Dokkaebi 'Haesol'.

[This is not the world you lived in. No spiritual power and world power. It’s not the 《Tree OF imaginary》 that is dominated by settings and components.]

"..."

[Do you really not know what the beings who interfered with the events of another dimension are saying?]

"I don't know what they are talking about, but..."

Jaehwan glared at the dokkaebis surrounding him.

The power of awakening was manifested once again in his eyes.

「Suspicion and Understanding.」

With that power, he read the story of the 'Management Bureau' behind the dokkaebis, and noticed the existence of the 'Dokkaebi King' who controlled it.

And he read the universe of this distant <Star Stream> where the Dokkaebi King served.

And what was at the end of that universe was...

With a tsususu sound, his power went out. There was something at the end of this world that even he, as of now, could not fully read.

Jaehwan snickered.

"That's interesting."

Suddenly, he wondered how that Heo Yeogeon guy would navigate this universe. He became curious.

Jaehwan concentrated his strength on his right hand holding the sword once more.

The dokkaebi Noksu warned.

[Wait, if you don’t stop right now—!]

Jaehwan thought.

Perhaps this was all part of that sly guy’s scheme. Although he didn’t like the feeling of falling for that trap, Jaehwan decided to let him fool him this time.

It was because of the object that had come flying in with the message.

Jaehwan quietly looked down at the dumpling he was holding in his left hand, then took a big bite. The moment he took the dumpling, he felt a surge of longing.

'Surely, what that guy said, 'I’ll make you go back'…'

Suddenly, names came to mind. Chunghuh. Karlton. Ryunard. The names of people who had liked him but were no longer around. Jaehwan shook his head as if shaking off his thoughts.

'That can’t be true.'

And he swung his sword forward with all his might.

In Jaehwan’s swordsmanship, a wave of destruction that tore through space rushed.

868 Episode 47 King of Fear (12)

The sky was splitting apart like a canvas. Beyond the shattered Snowfield sky, a pitch-black energy could be seen flying. No, I don’t know if that can be called 'energy'. What was certain was that it was tearing apart the sky of this world.

[Wow.]

That was Jaehwan’s stab.

Jang Hayoung muttered in admiration.

[This is the first time I’ve seen something like that in my life.]

This is the 'Snowfield'.

Even if it was Jaehwan, the slayer of monarchs, it wouldn’t be easy to enter here to deal with Kim Dokja.

But what if he could attack the 'Snowfield' itself from outside of the 'Snowfield'?

「Tearing the Constellations.」

If Jaehwan’s secret technique could shatter space and time, he thought it might be possible to temporarily dismantle the lines of this 'Snowfield'.

Fortunately, the gamble seemed to have paid off.

【How—】

The moment the astonished Asmodeus turned around, he saw the two Kim Dokjas floating in the air disappear. They also sensed the danger.

The problem was this.

Kwakwakwakwakwa!

That thing is flying out of the air, and I don't know how to get out of here.

The [□□] skill that determines entry into the Snowfield was not listening, and contact with the First Kim Dokja through the [Fourth Wall] was also cut off.

There was only one person I could trust right now.

"Please save me."

Jang Hayoung said, her eyes widening at my request.

[The Kim Dokja I know isn't as shameless as you.]

Jang Hayoung smiled and hugged me.

The next moment, my vision went blank and I was thrown out of the Snowfield.

Now that I think about it, I wasn't sure if I could return to my body like this.

My body is currently illegally occupied by Cheon Inho. No. Originally, that body belonged to Cheon Inho, so was it me who was occupying it illegally?

"Hmph."

I opened my eyes wide, wiping the saliva flowing from my mouth.

What is it? How did I come back?

Before I could even properly ask the question, a terrible pain shot through my stomach and other parts of my body.

I swallowed the pain and quickly looked around.

This was the 'Big House'.

If that's true, the scars left all over my body must have been from the fight with Yoo Joonghyuk.

I grabbed my stomach, which was leaking blood, and frowned.

[The exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', is activated.]

At least the [Fourth Wall] was reactivated, relieving the pain.

Yoo Joonghyuk, how much did you beat him up?

I crouched and held my hands on the floor, catching my breath. My knees were shaking, so I couldn't even get up. How on earth did Cheon Inho fight with this body?

"Cheon Inho?"

When I raised my head, Anna Croft, covered in dust, was standing there.

I smiled and waved my hand toward her, who was already raising her spirits with wary eyes.

"Kim Anna-ssi."

Anna Croft, who was startled, blinked her eyes in astonishment. Her eyes seemed to suspect that I was tricking her.

I smiled and continued to speak with narrowed eyes to help her make her judgment.

"Have you forgotten your own name?"

"...Are you back?"

"Yes."

[Character, 'Anna Croft', is activating 'Lie Detection Lv. 10'.]

['Lie Detection' has confirmed that your statement is true.]

Even in the midst of all that, she even had the sense to utilize [Lie Detection]. As expected, it was the quick reflexes of a Prophet. Anna Croft, who confirmed that I was not the 'real Cheon Inho', ran over and grabbed my hands and supported me. Then she stood there awkwardly, as if she didn't know what to do, and lowered her head. I doubled over because I found the situation funny.

"You were worried, right?"

I thought she would naturally object strongly, but Anna Croft unexpectedly answered in a heavy voice.

"Yes."

I could feel her sincerity in her tone.

Come to think of it, we had been through a lot together, going through the fears of the Fear Realm and the Transcendent Alliance.

[Your giant tale is stirring.]

To build such a bond with that 'Prophet'.

If Yoo Joonghyuk had heard it, he would have been shocked.

I quietly let go of her hand and looked around.

"Where is Yoo Joonghyuk?"

"The tyrant is…"

Following her gaze, I saw Yoo Joonghyuk lying on the floor. I hurriedly approached the guy and checked his pulse and breathing.

"Hey."

Even though I shook his shoulder, Yoo Joonghyuk didn't wake up.

Anna Croft added.

"He's been like that since a while ago. No matter how much I try to wake him up, he doesn't respond at all."

I had a rough idea.

The 'Snowfield' where the Kim Dokjas fought fiercely was Yoo Joonghyuk's inner world. However, since that world was torn apart for a moment by Jaehwan's blow, there was a possibility that the shock had affected Yoo Joonghyuk's reality.

"It'll be okay. I think he just fainted for a moment."

If he was really in a dangerous state, stories would have been running wild all over his body by now. However, his stories were surprisingly calm.

"What happened to Cheon Inho?"

Anna Croft asked back at my question as if it was absurd.

"Are you asking me that while you're in that body?"

"Yes."

Anna Croft shook her head at my shameless attitude.

"I don't know exactly. I saw the King defeat Cheon Inho, but..."

"What happened to his soul? Where did it disappear to?"

"The 'Eyes of the Great Demon' can't see that."

Even if it was Yoo Joonghyuk, he wouldn't have a way to destroy Cheon Inho's soul at that moment.

That means Cheon Inho voluntarily gave up his body to me.

It was hard for me to figure out his intentions.

Cheon Inho, who had a deeper love and hate for the main character than anyone else.

Why did that 'Evil Sophist' who struggled to be recorded on the 'Last Wall' give up his body again at a crucial moment?

...That's okay. It's not something that I can answer even if I think about it now.

"Kim Dokja."

Anna Croft, who had pulled up my sleeve, pointed her finger toward the cliff. The outside scenario area was reflected on the Fault screen of the cliff.

—Kuaaaah!

—Run! Run away!

The Outer Gods still held sway under the protection of the Fear Realm.

But upon closer inspection, the situation was a little different than before.

[The Constellation, 'God of Wine and Ecstasy', appears in the scenario area!]

The message from the Constellations striking the scenario area. Although it was not a full descent but a half-descent, the intervention of the Constellations in the scenario was still a spectacle.

[The Constellation, 'Maritime War God', appears in the scenario area!]

[The Constellation, 'King of Gold', appears in the scenario area!]

Taking advantage of the gap in the probability scale due to the Fear Realm, the Constellations appeared in the scenario and fought against the Outer Gods.

[The Constellation, 'Master of the Guillotine', descends into the scenario area!]

[The Constellation, 'Snake Slicer', descends into the scenario area!]

[The Constellation, 'Soundless Sword', descends into the scenario area!]

Under the command of the Constellations, the Outer Gods of the Fear Realm began to push back little by little toward the portal.

The enthusiasm of the incarnations responding to them was also great.

—Oh!

—The Constellations have arrived!

—That's it! Just push a little harder!

That was expected. The Constellations that had been hiding until now are now appearing in the scenario area to help them, so the incarnations cannot help but be moved.

[The fame of the Constellations in the Korean Peninsula is rising!]

Anyway, even if the scale of probability was broken, it was surprising that the Constellations themselves stepped forward.

The Constellations probably had their own calculations. There may have been an agreement with the 'Giant Nebulae', or there may have been a behind-the-scenes deal with the Administration.

In any case, they were working on the scenario with one mind and one heart for once.

【Ah ah ah ah ah ah ah ah】

The 'Nameless Things' writhing in pain was running inside the portal again.

I shouted at the top of my lungs into the air.

"Second Brother! Let's stop now!"

No matter how many powerful Outer Gods remained in the Second Kim Dokja's Fear Realm, he couldn't fight against the entire <Star Stream>. In the end, he would lose and his Fear Realm would be sealed.

"If we keep fighting like this, we'll all die! You didn't become the 'King of Fear' to see this kind of thing!"

Did he hear my voice?

An ominous fog swirled around the center of the Big House, and soon the 'King of Fear' appeared. Perhaps because of the battle in the Snowfield, his expression looked very exhausted.

"O Watcher of Light and Darkness!"

I shouted his modifier. But he didn't look back at me. Instead, he was looking up at the sky.

When did it start?

The sky reflected in his compound eyes was splitting apart.

Only then did I realize what was happening.

Tsutsutsu.

The ceiling of the Big House was collapsing.

"Oh my God."

Anna Croft muttered as she backed away in fear. After checking the dark clouds hanging over the collapsed ceiling, I hurriedly looked for Jang Hayoung.

"Jang Hayoung!"

Jang Hayoung appeared as the empty space behind her rippled. As expected, her expression was clearly bewildered.

[Isn't that flying back again?]

"No."

At first, I thought Jaehwan had been angry at my message and was stabbing me again.

But something was different. Unlike Jaehwan's dry stab, the story that was now breaking through the ceiling was clearly filled with malice.

The next moment, a flash of light flew through the crack in the ceiling. The floor of the 'Big House' was on fire with enormous heat.

Smoke spread acridly.

I swallowed my cough and looked up at the sky.

The enormous power of a story condensed in the flash. It was a 'Giant Story' that felt familiar somewhere.

"No way."

As hundreds of flashes bombarded the 'Big House', Jang Hayoung finally stepped forward.

[Damn it, Kim Dokja! Step back!]

An enormous force flowed out from Jang Hayoung's entire body.

I realized once again why Jang Hayoung was called the 'King of the Transcendents'. The story surging from her entire body was proving who she was.

The [Invisible Sword] that Jang Hayoung created drew a translucent trajectory and pointed at the ceiling.

Breaking the Sky Sword.

Seasonal.

Pacheonseonggyeol.

The [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship]'s seasonal, Pacheonryuseonggyeol, collided with the flash like a rising meteor. The Pacheonryuseonggyeol's strong energy, which was offset by the flash, soon lost its strength and began to break apart.

Jang Hayoung did not stop.

Jeon Inhwa.

Baek Cheongmun's secret technique, [Jeon Inhwa], was activated, and Jang Hayoung's entire body was covered with Baek Cheong's aura. Baek Cheong's tension poured out from her fist with a fierce explosion.

At the moment when the momentum was faltering, Jang Hayoung moved the formless sword once again.

The third form.

The three swords of Cheok Jungyeong, created to cut the sea, exploded in Jang Hayoung's swordplay.

The harmony of [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship], [Jeon Inhwa], and [Three Sword Style].

Jang Hayoung was drawing a landscape that three captains of the Transcendent Alliance could create on their own.

This was the true power of the 'King of Transcendents'.

Jang Hayoung's Three Swords, which finally pushed away the flash, detonated something beyond the ceiling.

I could feel the fierce waves of stories that shook the axis of the earth gradually diminishing.

[Damn, if only there were no probability constraints—]

It seems that Jang Hayoung cannot unleash 100% of her power in exchange for crossing the world line.

Nevertheless, when the dust cleared, Jang Hayoung was still firmly holding her position. Although her entire body was burnt black, she succeeded in defending the 'Big House' alone.

However, Jang Hayoung's expression was serious.

[You...]

Her eyes were filled with anger as she confirmed with her own eyes the being that appeared through the crack in the ceiling.

[How dare you. Do you know where this is?]

At the same time, the sound of something firing was heard from beyond the crack once again.

Jang Hayoung, whose complexion had changed, turned around and shouted.

[Kim Dokja, run away—]

With a dazzling flash of lightning, Jang Hayoung's body crashed into the floor of the 'Big House'.

It was unbelievable. There was an entity out there that could take down Jang Hayoung, the 'King of the Transcendents'?

Once again, the ceiling of the 'Big House' shook, and the sound of something squeezing into the ceiling was heard.

Kkuddeuk.

Dozens of ships appeared beyond the broken ceiling.

I knew those ships well, too. The 'Story Weapons' of the Giant Nebula that I witnessed in the final scenario of the 40th Round.

[The probability of the <Star Stream> is moving!]

[The Constellations of the small and medium Nebulaes are astonished by the appearance of the great being!]

[A probability aftermath is blowing!]

The ship of <Olympus>, the 'Argo', took the lead.

The moment I confirmed the Constellation leading them from the front, I thought I would accept Jang Hayoung's defeat.

Why on earth did that being appear here now?

At first, with an ominous feeling of foreboding, I felt as if the god aboard the 'Argo' recognized me.

But that couldn't be the case.

The fierce battle I had with him all happened in the Time Fault of the '40th Round'.

No, wait a minute.

「What if I'm not the only one who got the information of the '40th Round' through the 'Time Fault'?」

Damn it.

[The Constellation 'Seat of Lightning' reveals its status!]

<Olympus>'s strongest, Zeus, one of the three gods, aimed his holy relic, Astraphe, at the 'Great House'.

[Retrieve the fragment.]

The incantation fell.

869 Episode 47 King of Fear (13)

All scenarios in the <Star Stream> have a 'scenario number'.

From 1 to 99. The scenario number represents the difficulty of the scenario and is designed to impose a level of probability appropriate to the difficulty.

This was a kind of safety net to prevent the 'Transcendent beings' of the upper scenarios from intruding into the lower scenarios.

「There is no scenario number in the Fear Realm.」

Even if there was no scenario number, since it came from 'Murim', a 20th scenario area anyway, I vaguely guessed that the 'Fear Realm' would have a difficulty level appropriate to it.

「But is the difficulty of the 'Fear Realm' really '20th scenario's' level?」

It was strange when I thought about it.

This is because the 'Fear Realm' has a special space called 'Time Fault'. Each Fault boasts a vastly different level of difficulty.

Even the 'Time Fault' that I cleared was based on the 'Last Scenario' of the 40th Round.

The last scenario.

No matter how much of an experience it is, there's no way that the '20th scenario' boasts such an absurd level of difficulty.

Kwakwakwakwakwa!

When Zeus and other <Olympus> warships rushed in beyond the broken 'Big House', I realized once again that there was something seriously wrong with the 'Fear' scenario.

Tsutsutsutsu.

A storm of probability was raging in the sky.

Normally, the Constellations in the sky would have been torn apart like scraps of paper the moment the storm struck.

However, it wasn't the Constellations that were being torn apart, but the Outer Gods.

【That ah ah ah ah ah ah ah】

The Outer Gods traveling near the cliff fault were trampled by the Constellations' boots. The flash cannons emitted from the battleship were destroying the cliffs of the 'Big House'.

I had never seen such a sight even in the last scenario of the 40th Round. That was because Cheon Inho and Yoo Joonghyuk had already destroyed most of the main forces of the Nebulae.

"Ah, ah..."

Anna Croft groaned and staggered, and I stood beside her, looking up at the sky in panic.

That was the true power of the 'Giant Nebula'.

【Oh oh oh oh oh oh oh】

The floor of the Big House rose and otherworldly deities appeared.

The headless dragon that roared through the sky, the giant babies that guarded the outskirts of the 'Big House'.

The 'Dream Eater' also let out a roar and stretched out its tentacles.

【Mak ah ah ah ah ah ah ah ah】

And that wasn't all. There were also fears that had already been defeated by the Captains. For example, the 'Dragon Eater', the 'Darkness That Descends'. And—

【Kaka Kaka Kaka Kaka】

I also saw the appearance of the 'Founder of the Absolute Throne' that I had defeated.

Like Jang Hayoung who first appeared as a Fighter, the Outer Gods covered in pitch-black shadows stood by the 'King of Fear'.

The Outer Gods who drew their weapons only to protect Kim Dokja.

【Protect the King of Fear】

If even one of these Outer Gods were dropped into the scenario area, the area would be devastated. Hope welled up as I realized that fact anew.

Maybe.

With the power of the 'King of Fear' and the fears he rules, they might be able to bring down the 'Giant Nebula' that was all-out.

【Ah ah ah ah ah ah ah】

And.

【Oh oh oh oh oh oh】

The war had begun.

"Join us! Quickly!"

I carried Yoo Joonghyuk and held Anna Croft's hand, and hid myself in the pouring gunfire.

[The story, 'Pebble and I', begins its storytelling.]

Relying on a weak story, we watched the scenery of the 'Big House' where everything was falling apart.

Until now, I thought that the Constellations were afraid of Outer Gods. That's why I believed that whenever Outer Gods appeared, the Constellations ran away or kept silent.

However, not all Constellations were like that.

[The great story of <Olympus> begins its storytelling!]

The Constellations that make up the main part of the story do not fear Outer Gods.

The arrow shot by the omnipotent sun Apollo brought down the headless dragon flying in the sky, and Achilles, Jason, and other great Constellations knocked down the giant babies.

[Hahahahahaha! How fun!]

Ares, the ferocious god of war who was riding the Gigantes, laughed as he cut off the leg of the 'Dream Eater'.

[Fire!]

Gwagwagwagwagwagwa!

【Oh oh oh oh oh oh】

The 'Dream Eater', who was hit by the battleship's flash cannon, twisted his body and let out a painful cry.

Following that, the Gigantes unit led by Ares began to cut down the main body of the 'Dream Eater'.

【Woo woo woo woo woo woo】

Even if it wasn't his own power, it was the first time I had seen an Outer God being so helpless.

Of course, not all the Outer Gods were helpless. There were Outer Gods who jumped into the midst of the great Constellations and slaughtered them mercilessly.

【Ka kaka kaka kaka kaka】

It was the 'Founder of the Absolute Throne'.

Every time the famous swords held in his four hands made of bone drew a trajectory, the great Constellations of <Olympus> were sliced up like toys.

However, there was a Constellation that blocked his path. With a rough crack, the Constellation that breathed out hot breath like lava spoke.

[I wanted this guy's weapons.]

It was the volcanic blacksmith, 'Hephaestus', who swung a huge hammer.

[Kuaaaaap!]

As Hephaestus slammed his huge right foot into the ground, violent waves of stories erupted in an instant, causing large and small injuries to occur throughout the entire body of the 'Founder of the Absolute Throne'.

However, the 'Founder of the Absolute Throne' did not stay still either.

[Death]

Just two syllables. The great Constellations within a radius of several dozen meters fell down at the sound of the lion's roar contained in those syllables. The incarnations of the fallen great Constellations were all bleeding from their ears.

Hephaestus, who received the lion's roar from the front, also ground his teeth with bloodshot eyes.

[Athena! Artemis! Join us!]

Did he think it would be difficult alone? At his request for reinforcements, two more of the Twelve Gods joined in.

Athena's "Aegis" protected Hephaestus from the 'Founder of the Absolute Throne', and Artemis' arrows, which took advantage of the gap, struck the 'Founder of the Absolute Throne's' thighs and forearms.

【Ka Ka Ka Ka Ka Ka】

The 'Founder of the Absolute Throne' fought bravely against the three Twelve Gods. Even with his arms broken and his legs broken, he maintained his royal dignity until the end.

[Kwaaak! That damned Outer God—!]

Even in the midst of all this, the 'Founder of the Absolute Throne', who succeeded in blowing off one of Hephaestus's arms, laughed as his skull rattled.

Perhaps it was a natural result.

While the Outer Gods risked their lives to attack, the Constellations were only cautiously taking the offensive in order to avoid getting even a single wound.

Watching the Outer Gods' resistance, I did not lose hope. Just hold on a little longer. Even if it is a 'Giant Gate', even if this is the 'Fear Realm' without a scenario number, the aftershock of probability will not allow this kind of scenery to continue.

However, it seems that I was not the only one who thought that.

[Get out of the way.]

A voice that made my heart sink just by hearing it.

As Hephaestus shuddered and got out of the way, a giant trident pointed ahead.

「His play created the boundary of the sea.」

The moment the surging tale gave me goosebumps, a huge wave swept over the area.

I held on to Anna Croft and Yoo Joonghyuk and hid behind the severed leg of the 'Dream Eater'.

Kwaaaaaaaah!

The Fears that the 'King of Fear' had carefully collected were disappearing from the world one by one. The headless dragon, the Dream Eater, and the Founder of the Absolute Throne. The 'Fear' revealed under the brilliant starlight was no longer Fear. They were just vagabonds who had been kicked out of the scenario and lost their place.

Poseidon, the 'Spear that Draws the Boundary of the Sea' that had taken over Traiana, declared.

[Take care of it.]

The Constellations carrying the legend of the Giant Nebula on their backs began to slaughter the fleeing 'Outer Gods'.

I just stood there trembling in front of the scenery that made my imagination powerless.

What on earth could come to stop their tyranny?

Someone stood in front of the Outer Gods in my stead as I was just thinking.

The white, shining butterfly wings reflected the light pouring out from the Constellations.

[Stop it.]

Zeus, who had discovered the 'King of Fear', aimed at Astraphe once again. The battleship emitted light.

Kukuaquaquaquaqua!

It was a truly terrible bombing. It was a fierce attack on the Giant Gate where no living thing could survive. Even if he was Kim Dokja or the King of Fear, he couldn't withstand this attack.

"Damn, it hurts. Take it easy."

But there was someone who took the attack instead.

Between the scattered rays of light, the old man waved his blackened hands and clicked his tongue.

"Hehe, the Dream Eater I raised with great effort ended up like this."

The 'Dream Eater' who had fallen to the floor cried sadly. As the old man lightly patted the head of the Outer God and smiled bitterly, the boy who appeared next to him said.

"You can raise him again, old man."

"I'm saying this because it might take hundreds of years, you punk."

Those who resisted the starlight even in the midst of the hellish landscape. There were calm faces there, as if they had experienced this kind of disaster hundreds of times before.

[Transcendent Alliance.]

With Poseidon's words, the leaders of the Transcendent Alliance stood guard over the 'King of Fear'.

[Constellations, from here on out, I cannot allow it.]

Paradox Baekcheong Kyrgios.

[I wonder how many stars it takes to gather to form a 'Constellation'.]

Breaking the Sky Sword Master Namgung Minyoung.

[Hahahahaha! The day has finally come when I can fight you guys!]

Even Goryeo's best swordsman Cheok Jungyeong.

However, Zeus's expression, who was leading the way, did not waver even with the appearance of the Transcendents. Rather, a faint smile formed on Zeus' lips as if he was glad of their appearance.

[There are more sacrifices to place on the scale of probability.]

The Twelve Gods under Zeus rushed at the Transcendents.

Athena and Breaking the Sky Sword Master clashed, and Kyrgios and Hephaestus's weapons clashed. The First Sword of Goryeo, Cheok Jungyeong, and the fierce God of War Ares, fought each other's brute strength, firing their lion's roar.

When Zeus raised the holy relic 'Astrape', the warships began to fire again.

This time, the one who blocked the fire was Chunghuh, the Commander-in-Chief of the Transcendent Alliance and the God of Despair.

Zeus was annoyed by Chunghuh and said.

[Get out of the way. Mortals from another dimension, it’s not your place to get involved.]

"Hehe, I’m sorry, but I have no choice but to get involved."

Chunghuh continued, firmly blocking the way to King of Fear.

"If you destroy this 'Fear Realm', it will be difficult for us to maintain our existence."

Chunghuh said that and turned his head once more to look around.

Was it a coincidence? His eyes were staring straight at me, who had used 「Pebble and Me」.

Chunghuh nodded lightly at me.

"At least I can’t die yet. I just found out that the guy I really want to meet is alive."

Zeus seemed to no longer feel the need to talk, so he jumped down from the front and swung his spear himself.

Chunghuh, the God of Despair, bravely swung his sword in front of the Mythical Constellation’s action. The sky of the Fear Realm flashed like a giant light bulb, and ceaseless thunder struck the ground.

Even as his entire body burned black, the God of Despair was holding onto Zeus’s tale.

A terrifying fight. It was a fight I could not dare to get involved in. Nevertheless, on the one hand, I felt that I had to get involved.

Because I had the huge story I had gained from the 40th Time Fault.

「I have faced 'Zeus' before.」

I know that the situation is different now. I also know that the difference in class is absurdly severe.

Nevertheless, if only I could recreate that stage once more.

—Don’t think nonsense.

The one who stopped me was Cheok Jungyeong. While fighting against the ferocious God of War, Cheok Jungyeong was speaking to me through [Earth].

—It is not the time to use that yet. You cannot handle this fight.

I shook my head. I know that I am no help now. But...

—Disciple.

The moment I heard Cheok Jungyeong’s voice continuing, I realized that Cheok Jungyeong was very tired.

It wasn’t just him.

Kyrgios, Breaking the Sky Swords Saint, and the other Transcendents were also very tired.

Perhaps it was natural.

They had only recently returned from the 40th Round’s Time Fault with me.

I became anxious.

What should I do? What should I do to help them?

—There is something you must do.

As if reading my thoughts, Choi Jungyeong continued.

—Go and press the 'button'.

A button?

A memory suddenly came to mind.

When I first entered the End Zone and visited the 'Time Fault Room', I had seen a 'button' there.

The button at the top of the Time Fault.

0th Squad Captain Ryunard said this about that button.

「"Just press that. That's the 'reset' button of this 'End Zone'."」

The reset button of the end zone.

—If you press that button.

I saw Cheok Jungyeong's sword shatter under the spear swung by the ferocious God of War.

Cheok Jungyeong, whose belly was pierced, smiled at me and said.

—Everything that happened in the 'Fear Realm' will be 'as if it never happened'.

870 Episode 47 King of Fear (14)

---

[The story, 'Pebble and I', stops talking.]

I couldn't hide any longer.

I left Yoo Joonghyuk to Anna and ran towards Cheok Jungyeong.

Cheok Jungyeong's eyes widened when he found me, and soon he smiled bitterly. He pulled out the spear from his stomach as if this level of injury was nothing and reached out to me.

[Go away!]

The gust of wind from his hand blew me away.

"Kim Dokja!"

Anna Croft shouted.

At the same time, the great Constellations of <Olympus> who had found me stepped forward with flags.

[It's a fragment of Kim Dokja!]

[Retrieve that guy too!]

<Olympus>'s goal was not just the 'King of Fear'. Having secured a large number of 'Kim Dokja fragments', I was also one of their targets for capture. I activated [Way of the Wind] and got away from them, briefly relaying the situation to Anna Croft.

Anna Croft listened to my story with a serious expression, then nodded as if she had made up her mind.

"If you press that 'button', you can stop the war."

"Theoretically, yes."

The 'reset button' of the Fear Realm is literally a button that reverses 'everything' that happened in the Fear Realm. If I could just press that button, the events here would go back to 'before the End'.

The problem is that I don't know when 'before the End' will be.

"I'll help you."

The Constellations' artillery fire passed by in front of my nose.

I asked, spitting out acrid smoke.

"Can you use [Future Sight]?"

"If it's short. I can't see too far into the future."

"That's enough."

Even in the desperate 40th Round, we somehow found a way. No matter how strong the Constellations of <Olympus> are, if we join forces, we can definitely overcome them.

"Over there!"

It would be fast if we flew with full force using [Way of the Wind], but in this situation, we couldn't do anything that would catch the eye.

"Turn to the right!"

I calmly followed Anna Croft's instructions. I pushed back the Constellations that rushed at me using [Way of the Wind] and [Baekcheong-ganggi], and when threatening bombardments came flying, I knelt down next to the incarnations of the dead Constellations.

Kwakwakwakwakwa!

We ran through the thick smoke. We had to run a little faster.

We had to use the time that the King of Fear and the Captain-level Transcendental Constellations were giving us preciously.

Boom!

However, even with [Future Sight], we couldn't read all the bombardments. A blind shell flew towards us, and Anna Croft and I reflexively threw ourselves in a different direction. When I got up, covered in dust and coughing, I instinctively called out to Anna Croft.

"Anna."

Stories were flowing from her bloody legs.

Anna answered calmly.

—Kim Dokja, listen carefully. After all, the Constellations' targets are not me or the tyrant.

"But—"

—I will continue to relay the path through transmission. Go quickly.

Anna Croft hid behind the corpses of the Outer Gods that had exploded while carrying Yoo Joonghyuk.

I looked at Anna for a moment then bit my lips and started running.

Anna's voice filled my ears between the pouring artillery fire.

—Watch out for the back!

—They're flying in from the left!

—Ahead! There's a trap set right in front of you!

—Wait a minute there! Count to 5, then turn left and run!

I ran and ran, listening to the instructions without thinking.

How much time had passed like that? Finally, the exit of the 'Big House' began to come into view in the distance.

—From now on, it's straight ahead.

Straight ahead?

—Yes. We have to go straight ahead and break through.

I looked at the hundreds of Constellations blocking my path. They were the troops that <Olympus> had set up in advance, knowing that I would come toward the exit.

"How can I go straight ahead?"

However, Anna's voice could no longer be heard. What had happened? I hurriedly looked back, but Anna was nowhere to be seen.

Instead, what caught my eye was <Olympus>'s mythical Constellation, the 'Spear that Draws the Boundary of the Seas'.

Kukukukukukukuku.

Poseidon was pounding the floor with his Tryana. Every time the floor and the spearhead collided, the surrounding atmosphere swirled and tore apart the Outer Gods.

「Transmission is basically a technique that transmits sound by carrying it through compressed air. If the air in the area was controlled by Poseidon, it was only natural that Anna's Echo would not be transmitted.」

[Catch them.]

At Poseidon's command, Jason, Achilles, and other great Constellations rushed toward me.

Anna said. Break through them.

Then that meant I had a way to break through them. I thought I knew how. The story I had accumulated while experiencing a series of events in the Fear Realm was telling me how.

[The story, 'Friend of Fear', begins its storytelling.]

As the story began its storytelling, my confidence surged.

[It's over there! Catch them!]

The great Constellations' spears flew in, taking advantage of the gap I had paused.

I took a deep breath and thought.

This is the 'Big House' of the Fear Realm.

With the power of the 'Great King of Fear', all kinds of 'Fear' had gathered here.

[Use story fragment, 'Remote Signal Controller'.]

Of course, there were Fears that I had cleared.

[Catastrophic Fear, 'Alien Signal Light' is activated!]

The light of the signal light that was flashing in the distance changed, and the Constellations that were chasing after me screamed with a loud noise.

[Kwaaaaah! What the!]

I started running, leaving behind the terrible crashing sound that was pushing me forward and backward.

[The Constellation 'Spear that Draws the Boundary of the Sea' expresses its anger at you!]

I felt a dreary gaze from behind me, then the Triana's spear passed by me with a dizzying sensation.

The spear created a strong wind and blew away the 'Alien Signal Light' in the area.

Damn it.

[Enough! Chase him!]

I still had a long way to the exit. I thought I should activate [Way of the Wind] and fly away instead. Even if it draws some of their attention, if you want to run the shortest distance quickly, it’s better to fly here—

[Kuaaaaak!]

[What the hell—]

I heard the Constellations that were rushing toward me from the front being torn apart. It sounded like a shrimp’s back being crushed between whales.

When I blinked my eyes stupidly, there was a guy who really looked like a whale.

【Ooooooooooooo!】

A cry that tore through my ears.

It was the 'Fear' I knew.

[Natural Disaster-level Fear, 'Tooth Fin', roars!]

Tooth Fin.

It was the 'Shark Head' I had met at the entrance to the Fear Realm.

Every time the guy swung his tail once, five or six Great-level Constellations would fall.

"You… have become a 'Natural Disaster-level'!"

I shouted happily, and the guy flicked his fin once. It seemed to tell me to get on.

I climbed on the guy's back without hesitation. As the streamlined giant body writhed, the surrounding scenery began to rush forward.

[Don't miss it.]

Poseidon once again drew the floor with his spear. The sea boundary split and the waves that rose from the crater covered our rear like a tsunami.

However, Poseidon's choice was a mistake.

This guy was 'Tooth Fin'. The fear that ruled the Sea of Fear.

Following the sharp surge of the waves, Tooth Fin accelerated even more and arrived at the exit of the 'Big House' in an instant.

'Tooth Fin' blocked the exit with its huge body and stopped the Constellations chasing me.

"Thank you."

【Teeth Teeth Teeth Teeth Teeth Teeth Teeth】

After greeting the guy whose teeth were chattering, I slid down the streamlined back and opened the exit door. As I stepped out of the door, I saw the 'Time Fault Room' in shambles. I looked straight up.

The top of the 'Time Fault Room'.

[1863-99th round.]

Next to the Time Fault sign that said so, I saw a small button. It was the 'reset button' I was looking for.

Quaddududduk.

I heard something creaking inside the door of the 'Big House'.

Then, a terrible thunder echoed.

There was no time.

I immediately used [Way of the Wind] and soared into the sky. Fortunately, there was no Constellation to catch me, so it didn't take long for me to reach the top of the room.

Finally, there was a button in front of me. If I press this button, I can stop this tragedy.

But at that moment.

—Are you really going to make all that 'thing' as if it 'never happened'?

There was a voice echoing in my head. It was a voice I knew well.

"Cheon Inho."

—If you press that button, the King of Fear will survive. But all the stories you've built will disappear.

I hesitated and asked.

"How do you know that?"

—If you don't want to believe it, just think of it as the nonsense of the 'Evil Sophist'.

Suddenly, something occurred to me.

The Evil Sophist, Cheon Inho. He was one of the few 'Recorders of Fear' in this 'Fear Realm'. So it wouldn't be particularly strange if he knew the secrets of this 'Fear Realm'.

—As a Recorder, I'll give you some advice. If you press that button, all the events here will revert to the moment the 'Transcendent Alliance' was created. All the stories you've built since entering the 'Fear Realm' will disappear, and the reason you came here will become meaningless. And crucially.

Cheon Inho added with a smirk.

—If you press that button, your survival cannot be guaranteed.

Zeus's thunder was growing louder.

—The moment you press the button, all impurities that are not necessary for the initial components of the 'Fear Realm' will be removed.

"I can't believe what you say."

Regardless of whether Cheon Inho's words were true or false, if you don't press this button, all the characters in the 'Big House' will die. Kyrgios, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, and Cheok Jungyeong will all die.

It was the moment I finally put my hand on the button after taking a deep breath. With a hazy scent brushing my nose, someone grabbed my wrist.

Shining butterfly wings. It was the King of Fear.

His once brilliant wings were more than half torn off, and his body was covered in wounds from weapons.

His skin was horribly protruding.

From his shoulders to his waist, there were traces of Zeus's lightning striking him, and below, there were scars from Poseidon's waves. Snowdrops flowed like tears from his tattered feet.

In that state, the King of Fear called me.

【■■-ah.】

He was calling my name, which he had never called before.

【Don't do that.】

Why? His voice sounded normal. For a long time, [Multispecies Communication] was maintained.

[Exclusive skill, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint', is activated.]

Or is this also a function of [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint]?

His inner thoughts, which had been stained with incomprehension, suddenly became clear. Maybe it was because the Fear Realm had come to an end.

It might be evidence that he was no longer the 'King of Fear'.

【Don't press the button.】

I shook my head and shouted.

If I don't press this button, you will die. The people of the Transcendent Alliance and the Outer Gods will all die.

Everything you loved will turn to dust and disappear.

You will be torn to pieces by those damn Constellations who want the 'Kim Dokja fragments'.

So this is the only way to protect the 'Fear Realm'.

Return to before I entered this 'Fear Realm', before all the incidents occurred.

Then the King of Fear said.

【No.】

Kim Dokja, who loves the stories of this world more than anyone else, smiled at me and said.

【I like your stories too.】

871 Episode 47 King of Fear (15)

---

I like your story.

Kim Dokja's words left deep ripples in my heart.

Some words make me realize that I wanted to hear them all along after hearing them.

I looked into his face.

His name was Kim Dokja. A character I wrote about in 551 chapters.

[Exclusive skill, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint', becomes more powerfully activated.]

I could tell what he was thinking just by looking at his expression.

【The Fear Realm will be destroyed. I'll call a train, so get out of here.】

"That can't be."

The King of Fear looked back silently. An eerie light was continuously flowing out from beyond the doorway of the 'Big House'. It was Zeus's tale.

Beyond that, the screams of the Transcendents were scattered. I could also hear the sound of the Toothy Fins howling in pain.

"Let's get out of here together."

Why he liked my story, maybe I knew.

The Second Kim Dokja, who had been hiding in the 'Fear Realm' since the moment he was born.

In a sense, this 'Fear Realm' was another 'Snowfield' for Kim Dokja.

He must have hidden between the lines, collecting Fears, and reading and rereading the stories he had already read.

The Second Kim Dokja stared at me with calm eyes.

【You know what will happen if I leave here.】

The Second Kim Dokja made a light gesture, and a small screen rose into the air.

—It's been destroyed!

—The disaster has fallen!

His shards that had advanced into the scenario were dying after being attacked by the incarnations. His butterfly wings were torn, and the 'Nameless Things' that protected him collapsed.

【Not only me, but the 'Gods of the Other World' will suffer the same thing every time. As long as this <Star Stream> exists.】

"So you tried to make the <Star Stream> itself a 'Fear Realm'?"

The King of Fear smiled brightly.

【Failed, but.】

It was bound to fail.

In this world where someone's sorrow is simply a story, he who entered the scenario will only become a disaster. All the stars and incarnations will gather their strength to drive him out, and then plant a brilliant flag of victory in the place where his sorrow was.

【Still, it had to be done.】

"Why did it have to be now? Is it because I read the 'Prophecy of the End'?"

I thought of the 'Prophecy of the End' I had read when I entered the 'Transcendent Alliance'.

「The Fears that have begun to be recorded will return to being stories. They will become established stories. They will be written down in history again.」

When that day comes, the boundary of sleep will open, and the King of Fear will descend.

And only the one who defeats the King of Fear will become the last storyteller who denies all records at the boundary between dreams and reality.」

The 'Prophecy of the End' that hinted at the birth and death of the 'King of Fear'. The King of Fear looked at me quietly and shook his head.

【Everything is already written, and is being written at the same time.】

The King of Fear muttered those words lowly and then quietly added.

【The current 'Fear Realm' cannot accommodate all the Outer Gods. It was going to happen eventually. The prophecy was just a trigger.】

"But—"

【Go away. With your colleagues.】

As the King of Fear reached out, Anna Croft and Yoo Joonghyuk, who had fainted inside the doorway of the 'Big House', came out floating in the air.

I caught them with both hands and spoke again.

"I won't go. No, I can't go."

The King of Fear looked at me for a moment as if he was frustrated. I heard the sound of lighting flashing from behind me once again.

【There's no time. If you keep refusing, I'll absorb you.】

The moment I met his compound eyes, my heart pounded loudly. An uncomfortable aura flowed from his appearance as he approached step by step.

【I will absorb you and take all of your stories. I will gather the fragments and dye the <Star Stream> in Fear. I will create a world where everyone fears each other and no one can harm each other.】

At the same time, story stirred inside me.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', growls.]

I answered with my eyes narrowed.

"If you can, try. But I will never leave you alone."

【There's nothing I can do.】

The next moment, the King of Fear opened his mouth wide. The distant darkness inside his mouth greedily overflowed.

【You brought this upon yourself.】

The darkness swallowed me up.

---

rlaehrwk37: What? What happened?

---

The King of Fear opened his eyes.

The power of stories welling up inside him. The King of Fear took several calming breaths as if to calm his power.

How long did he continue breathing like that? The 'Time Fault Room' began to shake dangerously.

[The Constellation, 'Lightning Seat', manifests its own power!]

Finally, Zeus's incarnation reached the doorway of the 'Big House'.

Of course, Zeus was not the only one to appear.

【Ooooooooh!】

This is the 'Time Fault' Room!

The 'Divine Beings of the Other World' began to come in earnest through the entrances of countless Time Faults.

Catastrophe, Disaster, Natural Disaster.

A legion of Fear that could literally destroy this world.

Following that, Zeus's lightning spear Astraphe appeared beyond the doorway of the 'Big House'. It seemed as if pure white electricity was dyeing the sky, and in the next moment, the entire space was cleanly annihilated. Fragments of the stories of the fallen Outer Gods hovered around the 'Time Fault' room. The angry Outer Gods screamed.

【Ah... So, changing the history of this 'worldline'.】

[You probably know that you have no choice now.]

Even Jang Hayoung, who cleared the 1,864th round, could not stop their fleet.

In front of the overwhelming power of the <Olympus> fleet led by Zeus, there were only two choices.

Surrender here and be subject to <Olympus>, or disappear with the Fear Realm.

The King of Fear said.

【You guys, it seems you have forgotten where this place is.】

[Even if this is your dream, you cannot stop us.]

Poseidon laughed, as if he had already figured out the power of the 'King of Fear'.

[I know that all you can do is 'dream' to maintain this place.]

The most powerless god in this world.

The 'King of Fear' governs everything in the 'Fear Realm', but he cannot do anything alone.

【That's right. It's a sad story.】

The 'King of Fear' laughed. It was a laugh that was both a sneer and a self-mockery.

With that laugh on his face, the 'King of Fear' said,

【Youngest.】

He called me.

【Remember the end of this story well.】

As expected, I was not absorbed by the 'King of Fear'.

[Exclusive skill, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint', is activating.]

[Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint activated at a dramatic moment.]

[Exclusive skill, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint', stage 0 is activating.]

「Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint stage 0 that has never been activated. As a result of that stage 0, I was now seeing the world through the eyes of the King of Fear without being absorbed by him.」

[You're bluffing.]

The moment Poseidon aimed Traiana at the King of Fear, the Outer Gods of the 'Time Fault' simultaneously began to howl toward the sky.

The wailing soon covered the entire 'Fear Realm', and soon became a tale.

「A Giant Tale.」

It was a Giant Tale that turned the King of Fear into 'Kim Dokja'.

[The Giant Tale, 'Season of Light and Darkness', begins its storytelling.]

With a sound of tsutsutsu, the scenery of the battlefield began to change.

「Staging.」

It was unbelievable.

In order for 'Staging' to occur, the conditions for the stage to be established must be met.

For example, 「Season of Light and Darkness」 is a tale that occurred on the 'Island of Reincarnation'.

The story that was born when <Eden> and <Demon World> clashed, causing the 'Great War of the Holy Demons', with Kim Dokja leading to the conclusion of it was 「Season of Light and Darkness」.

But now, this place was not the 'Island of Reincarnation', and there were no Constellations representing good and evil.

The only one here was 'Kim Dokja'.

But how.

[What nonsense—]

It seems that Poseidon and Zeus had the same doubts as me.

「The ruins of the 'Holy Demon War' were spread out there.」

How could the 'Holy Demon War' be recreated here?

[There are no Archangels or Demon Kings here! But how...!]

The answer was simple.

【There are no Archangels or Demon Kings here?】

[What?]

【It's not that you can't see it?】

The Constellations of <Olympus>, including Poseidon, still had faces that they didn't understand.

Only I understood what he was saying.

I sighed and admired, and groaned and despaired. The scenery that I could see because of [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint] 'Stage 0' was activated. When did it start?

「The forgotten Archangels and Demon Kings stood beside us.」

No one would call them 'Archangels' or 'Demons' anymore. They had lost their names.

【Goodandevilgoodandevilgoodandevilgoodandevilgoodandevilgoodandevil】

【Lightanddarknesslightanddarknesslight
anddarknesslightanddarknesslightanddarknesslightanddarkness】

But there was a time when they also existed in the scenario. There were days when they faced their own battlefield with their own roles.

The old story—their legend, which could only be preserved through the 'Time Fault', was now being released as a 「stage」 here.

【Ohohohohohoh!】

On the stage, I could see the scenery that the 'King of Fear' had been guarding alone.

Only then did I understand the reason for the existence of the Time Fault, and I understood why Outer Gods keep hiding in the gap of the Time Fault.

They have been constantly wandering in search of their lost story and lost hometown.

Poseidon roared and shouted.

[The stage alone is useless. With just that 'Giant Tale'—]

[You don't know what kind of war the 'Holy War' is awakening.]

The 'King of Fear' who said that was truly like Kim Dokja.

[Well, it's not your history.]

Kim Dokja who led the 'Holy War' that day, in that place.

Kim Dokja in history who protected <Kim Dokja's Company> with his own sacrifice.

Kugugugugugu!

The loud noise was heard from the door far above.

「1863-99th round」

The unknown 'Time Fault' next to the 'reset button'.

Beyond the doorway of that Fault, something terrible was rippling.

[Spear That Draws the Boundary of the Sea, what is happening!]

The Twelve Gods of <Olympus> who came through the door late stood as if protecting the Mythical-grade Constellations. However, Zeus and Poseidon simply stared at the 'Time Fault' on the ceiling with bewitched faces.

Among the Twelve Gods, the first to notice the situation was the Blacksmith of the Volcano—Hephaestus.

[Oh my god, that crazy guy right now—]

Only then did they realize what kind of being the 'original form of the outsider' was beyond that doorway.

The shadow of a giant tail swinging beyond the portal of the Time Fault.

「There was the 'Calamity of the Stars'.」

I realized once again that this place was the 'Fear Realm'.

The Fears of this world were classified into several categories.

Catastrophe level, Disaster level, Natural Disaster level.

But there was one more level of classification above these.

End of the story.

A Fear that could possibly threaten this entire <Star Stream>.

[You, if you do that, you won't be safe either! Everyone here will die!]

The cries of the Constellations were colorless, and the King of Fear slowly raised his hand and called out the Fear.

【Come.】

Chunghuh had said something like that. The Fear of the end is not a 'Fear that can be avoided'.

It is a Fear that 'can only be accepted'.

That Fear was now awakening under the protection of the Giant Tale.

I also knew that Fear. In Han Sooyoung's 'Guide to Fear Realm that Even a Squid and Sunfish Can Understand', the name of that 'Fear' is given as follows:

「Type 1 End-of-the-Story Fear.」

The prototype of that Fear is as follows:

「The Last Dragon of the Apocalypse.」

I could feel the shadow of a giant tail shaking beyond the doorway.

Everyone here knew. That one tail flick would make everything about this 'Fear Realm' disappear.

Tsutsutsutsut!

The aftermath of probability finally began to blow. With the appearance of the last dragon, the 'balance of probability' was completely shattered.

In the center of the Fear Realm that was rushing in with pure white sparks, the god who was more omniscient and incompetent than anyone else spoke.

【As you said, all I can do is 'dream'. But.】

The god's finger pointed at the <Olympus> fleet.

【You are also in my dream.】

Finally, the last dragon's tail moved.

【I always have nightmares.】

872 Episode 47 King of Fear (16)

---

How long did the King of Fear have to endure for this moment?

It was a terrible, beautiful, natural, and mysterious dream. A nightmare that finally announced the end of a world. An endless darkness that no starlight dared to reveal its origin.

In that darkness, the last tail moved.

[Kim Dokja!]

Jang Hayoung, who had come through the doorway late, screamed. However, her voice was buried in the story of the Giant Tale and could not be heard.

The King of Fear's finger fell from above, and the tail of the last dragon sank in response.

[The Giant Tale, 'Season of Light and Darkness', is recreated!]

The last tail fluttered with a loud noise. The first shock wave passed through the doorway of the Time Fault.

I watched the scene through [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint] Stage 0. The time that the King of Fear had endured to dream this dream passed through my soul.

[The story, 'King of Fear', begins its storytelling.]

At that moment, I was the King of Fear, and the King of Fear was me.

Kim Dokja, who had dreamed for a long time in a 'Big House' that was so small compared to the world he had dreamed of.

「"Hayoung-ah."」

And there was a fighter who had been by his side.

「"Will I be able to have a happy dream someday?"」

Even he, who loved sadness more than anyone else, actually wanted to have a happy dream.

But he did not know what a 'happy dream' was. He had forgotten what it was, and perhaps had not learned it.

Jang Hayoung said to him.

「"Dreaming a happy dream is not important."」

Stroking the head of the boy who had now forgotten what happiness meant, Jang Hayoung told him an old story.

「"The important thing is to be alive now."」

Jang Hayoung also did not know what happiness was.

However, she had long-scribbled sentences on the wall.

Precious sentences that she had written down one by one on the unidentified wall—the 「Wall of Impossible Communication」—hoping that someone would read them again someday.

She was reading those sentences again after a long time. She was reading the sentences that she had hoped someone would read.

Helping Aileen at the clock shop Etica ("Actually, I don’t know much about clocks.").

The taste of the 'Devil’s Stir-Fried Tripe of the Ruined Lodge' made by Chef Marc ("You’ll regret not eating it if you only look at its appearance.").

The day she first encountered Kim Dokja in the world of terrible scenarios ("Some bastard threw a shoulder punch at me…").

The moment when time began to flow again in the Demon World that had stopped ("It was so frustrating.").

The memory of her, who had been pessimistic about her talents her whole life, blossoming for the first time and becoming Kim Dokja's 'fighter'. ("It was so overwhelming at that time.").

The time when people who were not given any roles in the scenario could all become 'Kim Dokja' at the same time, shouting 'revolution'. ("I will probably never forget it.").

Jang Hayoung talked about all those things as if they were troubled, sad, or happy.

Kim Dokja listened to the story silently, nodded, and asked.

「"Is that happiness?"」

Jang Hayoung was silent for a moment, then smiled faintly and answered.

「"I don't know."」

「"Why are you telling me that?"」

「"I want you to live."」

The moment the story took a deep breath, he disappeared.

[The story, 'King of Fear', ends its storytelling.]

The King of Fear spoke to Jang Hayoung, the fighter who was shouting from afar.

【I'm sorry. I couldn't keep my promise until the end.】

The shock wave of the tail wagging, approaching and crushing the entire upper part of the 'Time Fault Room'. According to the main story, the 'first tail strike' of the 'Final Dragon' destroyed a quarter of the <Star Stream>.

The tail strike consisted of a total of three shock waves, and the 'shock wave' approaching now was the 'first shock wave'.

At that moment, Zeus's Astraphe aimed at the sky. The <Olympus> fleet, which had finished lining up its troops, was waiting for orders.

[Fire.]

Dozens of ships simultaneously fired their flash cannons.

A magical cannon containing the great legend of <Olympus>.

The great power contained in each shot swept away the nearby Outer Gods and collided with the shock wave of the 'Final Dragon'.

Kukukukukukukuku!

However, despite that relentless barrage, the shock wave did not take any damage at all.

The end was approaching slowly and steadily.

The faces of the Twelve Gods who confirmed the wave darkened.

[How could that be…!]

That was the power of the 'Final Dragon'. It was the disaster of the <Star Stream> that ended the 'Great Battle of the Holy Demon'.

Even so, there was a way to stop that tail slap.

Kim Dokja in the main story blocked that shockwave.

「The first shockwave of the tail slap is made up of 'lightning'.」

Considering the lineup of Constellations that had withstood the shockwave in the main story, Zeus, a Myth-grade Constellation that controlled 'lightning', was qualified to block that first shockwave.

Even so, Zeus's judgment was as follows.

[Withdraw.]

A portal opened in the air and the ships began to move backward.

In that brief moment, Zeus made his judgment.

Even if he could offset the 'first shockwave', it would be difficult to fully handle the power of the Final Dragon here.

Even if he could handle it, he probably thought it would be more harmful than beneficial.

It was a cowardly but wise choice.

Because.

Tsutsutsutsutsut!

Immediately after the tail wagging began, everything in the Fear Realm began to be swept away by the aftermath of probability.

【Ahahahahah!】

A space that is not strange even if its existence is broken at any time.

If it were a normal Constellation, they wouldn't want to stay in this area for a minute or a second.

[The 'Fragments of the Oldest Dream' to be pushed.]

Zeus, who was hiding behind the portal, looked back at this side for the last time.

[<Olympus> will definitely take back our ■■.]

At the end of these words, the presence of Zeus and the Twelve Gods completely disappeared.

[The Giant Nebula, <Olympus>, suffered a huge blow and leaves the 'Fear Realm'.]

I had a bitter smile in my heart.

After making things like this, they're going to run away.

Still, with this, <Olympus>'s giant story would have been hit hard.

No matter how much the 'scale of probability' was broken, the power that Zeus used in the 'Fear Realm' was the power that was suitable for the final chapter of the scenarios.

Maybe this time they should step down from the 3 Great Nebulae.

By the way, what will happen to us if this happens?

<Olympus> disappeared, but the shock wave left by the 'first tail slap' was still hitting us.

【Ooooooooooo!】

The terrified Outer Gods were each running away to different 'Time Faults'.

I thought it would be a good idea to call Jaehwan again, but as Jang Hayoung said, there was no way to call him now.

It meant that from now on, we had to block that shock wave with our own strength.

In the main story, there were four Constellations that blocked that 'tail slap'.

Thor and Dionysus, Kim Dokja who activated [Electrification], and Kyrgios. Only after they joined forces did they manage to block the 'first shockwave'.

However, there was no Thor or Dionysus here.

What was here was...

[Seeing that guy finally woke up, it seems my disciple failed.]

When I looked back, I saw that Cheok Jungyeong was looking this way with his eyes wide open. Fortunately, the leaders of the 'Transcendence Alliance' seemed to have survived.

[But it's too early to give up.]

Kyrgios, who escaped from the big house, activated [Incarnation] and rose into the sky while emitting a Transcendental energy.

[There is a 'Paradox' here.']

With a 'Kudduk' sound, the white-blue lightning he emitted began to offset the shockwave.

Kugugugugu.

But it was too much for him alone. Even though he was one of the leaders of the 'Transcendence Alliance', if only one Transcendence could block the 'first shockwave', the last dragon wouldn't have been called a disaster.

Fortunately, he wasn't alone.

[Eeeeeeeeeeeeee]

The King of Transcendents, Jang Hayoung, who activated [Electrification], rushed towards the burning Kyrgios.

Following them, unknown Outer Gods joined them.

【Ooooooooooo!】

Is this an illusion?

At first glance, the backs of the Outer Gods fighting the dragons looked exactly like Thor and Dionysus.

As expected, Jang Hayeong, whose entire body began to burn black, turned around and shouted.

[Kim Dokja! Close the door! Quickly!]

A thought suddenly occurred to me after hearing those words.

The reason why the tail of 'Apocalypse Dragon' had covered the Fear Realm was because the 'King of Fear' had opened the door to the 'Time Fault'. Then, on the contrary, if only the King of Fear could close that door once more—

「The King of Fear cannot close the 'door'.」

[Exclusive skill, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint' stage 0 is released.]

「Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint was released, and the King of Fear sneezed violently into the air. I came out of his mouth with sticky mucus.」

【Youngest.】

I opened my eyes in my incarnation body with a slight dizziness. The dazzlingly burning King of Fear was before my eyes.

I knew why he was calling me.

He was Kim Dokja, who only had the most horrible dreams. In order to summon 'Apocalypse Dragon', he had just squandered all the probability he had.

【I cannot close that 'door'.】

He cannot stop his nightmare.

【The train will come soon, and I will put you and the children on that train. So that you can evacuate far away from this 'Fear Realm'.】

Even until the very last moment, he was worried about others, not himself.

"Are you giving up like this? We've come this far. We can do it! It's a disaster you've called, so you can get rid of it. So—"

The King of Fear shook his head as if dismissing my words.

【Even though I've been dreaming for so long, the only dreams I can have are nightmares.】

"But."

【Maybe except for one dream.】

The King of Fear, who had lightly glanced at the entirety of the Fear Realm, looked back at me for the last time.

It was a truly suffocating gaze. I stumbled, unable to bear that gaze.

【Perhaps this moment.】

When I first met the 'King of Fear', I thought he was a little scary. But damn it, at this moment, I thought his appearance was beautiful.

I thought that his appearance, risking everything to protect everyone else, was more like Kim Dokja than any other Kim Dokja I knew.

【This is probably why I've been dreaming all this time.】

A horn sounded from afar. A familiar train running on the tracks.

The sound of wheels.

A subway was approaching from afar.

「Subway on the way home from work.」

The train that brought us into this terrible scenario world.

【Thank you for giving me a good dream, Youngest.】

And yet, that train was the only salvation that could save us from hell at this moment.

"Let's go together."

I said, holding his hand tightly. Then, the King of Fear shook his head.

【That can't be. I am the 'Fear Realm' itself.】

"If you die here, all the dreams you've collected will disappear, right?"

【...】

"There is one way."

I finished speaking, looking back and forth between the shockwave that was now right in front of me and the train rushing toward me from afar.

"There is a way to avoid the 'End' without any of this Fear Realm disappearing."

873 Episode 47 King of Fear (17)

【A way to avoid the 'End' without any Fear disappearing.】

The King of Fear smiled bitterly as if pointing out the unreality of my words.

【You're also a helpless Kim Dokja.】

In fact, I think it would have been the same for any Kim Dokja, not just me.

If any Kim Dokja knew what the King of Fear was thinking, any Kim Dokja would have made the same choice as me.

A spark of probability flew out of the air again. The train running from afar was caught in the net of probability and couldn't come over.

Perhaps the <Star Stream> was blocking the train.

The train was forcing the probability of the end so that the 'King of Fear' couldn't get on board and so that he couldn't escape this world.

One fortunate thing is that the probability doesn't apply to anyone else except him. Due to the strong aftershock, the tail of the 'Final Dragon' also slowed down significantly.

Now was the perfect time to escape the Fear Realm.

[Everyone, get on the train! Hurry up!]

As Jang Hayoung, who was enduring the tail of the Final Dragon on the front line, shouted, the Outer Gods and the Transcendents who couldn't escape through the 'Time Fault' began to board the train one by one.

Watching the residents of the Fear Realm hurriedly evacuating, the King of Fear opened his mouth.

【I can't get on that, but you and your friends are different. You can get on that and escape even now.】

"I won't get on it."

The King of Fear looked at me blankly and then asked.

【Do you know what that means?】

"I know."

There is only one way to end this apocalypse without anything in this Fear Realm disappearing.

"We'll become one Kim Dokja."

I will take over his story and close the door of the 'Time Fault' that Apocalypse Dragon is trying to cross.

【You might fail. You might just die a dog's death.】

"No, I can do it."

It might not be possible alone, but it can be done with two. If we combine the power of the 'Kim Dokja fragments' that the two of us possess, if we combine our imaginations that even <Olympus> coveted, it will definitely be possible.

And above all.

"I also dream well."

I can't be sure whether the dream we create is the dream that the 'King of Fear' wanted.

But at least it will be a fun dream.

[The Constellation, 'Goryeo’s First Sword', is watching your choice.]

[The Constellation, 'Maritime War God', is watching your choice.]

[The Constellation, 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon', is watching your choice.]

The dream that the stars in the sky that are still watching this story like.

[The Constellation, 'Father of the Rich Night', is watching your choice.]

The Father of the 'Underworld', who had not appeared until now, was also looking into the Fear Realm. Maybe he had heard news of <Olympus> and came to visit.

Either way, it would not be bad for them to see this story. The more Constellations see this stage, the bigger the scale of the 'Giant Tale' we would obtain if we completed this stage.

The King of Fear, who was looking up at the Constellations in the sky with me, said.

【I thought dreams were always dreamed alone.】

The King of Fear, who reached out to me, was already on the verge of falling apart. The Second Kim Dokja, grabbed my hand tightly with his weak hand.

I felt his story flowing into the hand I was holding. It was a story that encompassed the entirety of the 'Fear Realm'.

【No matter what kind of dream it is, this is our farewell, Youngest.】

The moment I saw his weak expression, an intense hunger boiled inside me. When you become 'One Kim Dokja', one Kim Dokja is absorbed by the other Kim Dokja.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', mocks your will.]

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', opens its mouth as if he had been waiting!]

I calmed down the story with firm patience and said.

"What are you talking about?"

It was certainly as he said. Normally, two fragments should be combined to become 'One Kim Dokja'.

But there was something he still didn't know.

"You still don't know what a happy dream is."

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', activates!]

Instead of absorbing the story of the 'King of Fear', I started to let his story flow through the [Fourth Wall].

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', is recording the story.]

[Trait, 'Record Repairer', is activated!]

[Your lost records are starting to be repaired.]

The 'King of Fear', who realized what I was doing, opened his eyes wide.

I smiled at him and added.

"At least until you find out—"

The story flowed through my blood vessels like an electric current. For a moment, my consciousness became dizzy and then returned.

"You should stay with me until we find out what our 'happiness' is."

The situation was definitely different from the 'First Kim Dokja'.

The story I had to copy to the [Fourth Wall] now was no different than this entire 'Fear Realm'.

[The aftershock of probability is coming!]

I saw Jang Hayoung, who noticed our change, shouting in my direction from afar.

But no one, including Jang Hayoung, could approach me. The net of probability that wrapped us tightly did not allow it.

As if the current was getting faster, the story of the Fear Realm began to be conveyed to me at an increasingly faster rate.

「The beginning and end of a world were there.」

The Nameless ones that had visited the Fear Realm and the memories of the Outer Gods. The voices of the Transcendental gods. The Constellations' contempt all flowed into me.

And deep within that tale was the words of a great being.

「【Are you the 'King of Fear'?】」

Judging from the level felt in the true words, it was the voice of an Outer God that may be equivalent to the 'end of the word'.

「【If you thought you could lock us up in such a flimsy 'house', you were mistaken.】」

Even as my consciousness became hazy, I tried not to miss the words of the stories that I was hearing.

「【Your efforts are admirable, so I will wait a little longer.】」

「【Remember, baby.】」

「【You can’t stop the apocalypse just because you’re blocking us.】」

I couldn’t even guess which Outer Gods were giving advice.

I wonder if there’s something the 'King of Fear' hasn’t told me about the 'Fear Realm'.

「【Remember. You were the ones who stole our 'story' first.】」

I felt something inside me slowly expanding like a dam overflowing. I was starting to feel suffocated, and my breathing was starting to become difficult.

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', warns you!]

In the end, even the [Fourth Wall] had reached its limit.

I thought that maybe this might happen, but it happened too quickly.

Unlike the [Fourth Wall] that Kim Dokja had, the [Fourth Wall] that I had was still incomplete.

【Youngest.】

My library was too small to copy the stories of the King of Fear without any damage.

【Let go.】

I didn’t let go.

If I hold on a little longer, I can know your truth. I can know what you’re hiding. Maybe I can understand you. And so,

「I can save you.」

But the next moment, my consciousness became hazy as if something in my head was cut off.

【Youngest.】

In my fading consciousness, I heard the urgent voice of the Second Kim Dokja calling me. A voice that sounded distant, as if he was deep in thought.

【…!】

In the raging sparks, our two incarnation bodies were slowly disappearing.

And then, a small portal appeared behind the 'King of Fear'.

What appeared in the portal was a pure white hand.

Knowing what it was, I tried to tell the 'King of Fear' to avoid it.

You shouldn’t be caught by that hand. Then you too will disappear like the other 'kkoma Kim Dokjas'.

The moment the hand that moved quickly grabbed the 'King of Fear's' nape, the King of Fear looked back. When on earth did he notice? The King of Fear was holding the white hand with the other hand that was holding my hand.

【I'm sorry, but I can't give it to you.】

It was as if he knew the identity of the 'white hand.'

—Dreams are meant to be dreamed alone. So let's go to a place where you can dream alone. With me.

【No.】

—Why did you change your mind now?

【I don't know.】

The King of Fear stared at me silently and then added.

【If you don't know that, it'll be hard for you to collect all the 'Kim Dokja fragments' forever.】

The white hand that stopped at those words let out a mischievous laugh and said.

—That's why I hate 'Kim Dokja.'

A blinding white light burst out, and the King of Fear's painful groan could be heard. The sparks surrounding the surroundings gradually decreased.

As soon as my consciousness returned, I opened my mouth.

"King of Fear."

I did not hear an answer.

"Kim Dokja!"

His hand that was holding mine was nowhere to be seen.

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', stops recording.]

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', is licking his lips.]

I couldn't figure out what was happening.

I briefly lost consciousness, a white hand appeared, and the white hand and the 'King of Fear' talked.

And when I came to my senses, the 'King of Fear' was gone.

[You have achieved the impossible feat!]

[The Great Dokkaebi of the Management Bureau is watching your presence!]

[Your 'Myth Tale' evolves once again!]

[Your Tale holds the possibility of a 'Giant Tale'!]

[The probability of the <Star Stream> begins to move!]

I couldn't be happy about the messages that came one after another.

A train horn was heard from afar. The train carrying the Outer Gods and the Transcendents was finally ready to leave.

[Kim Dokja! Run away quickly! I can't hold out any longer—]

Jang Hayoung, who was still blocking the last tail wagging at the front line, shouted at me.

But I couldn't move.

If the Great King of Fear had disappeared like this, or if he had been kidnapped by the 'White Hand'—that is, by Asmodeus...

Woow.

That was when I felt a vibration in my arms. My phone was ringing in my pocket. I answered the phone without hesitation.

—You crazy bastard!

It was the voice of the First Kim Dokja, the 'Demon King of Salvation'.

"What happened?"

—What happened! Do you know what happened to this place because of you?

"You all watched. What happened to the King of Fear!"

The Demon King of Salvation closed his mouth at my urgent voice. After a moment of ominous silence, the Demon King of Salvation let out a deep sigh.

He said.

—The Second one came in safely.

I also let out a sigh of relief.

—But there must have been some damage to the story on the way in, because he’s still unconscious…

"Story loss?"

—Anyway, he came in safely. No, more than that, do you know what you did? Right now…!

"Please help me."

—Huh?

What happened inside [Fourth Wall] was an important issue, but what was more important was the incident unfolding before our eyes. The aftermath of probability was dying down, and Apocalypse Dragon’s shockwave was now reaching us.

—Can’t you just get on the train and run away?

"If I run away, what about that person?"

I looked up at the being who was still blocking the shockwave in front of me.

Kim Dokja’s fighter.

The being who swore to protect Kim Dokja’s side no matter what happened.

"Jang Hayoung will die."

Jang Hayoung never got on the train. Maybe she had decided that this place was her ■■.

Even if she had blocked the first shockwave, Apocalypse Dragon's shockwave was three stages in total.

"We have to close the door. Is there no other way?"

At first, I tried to control the Time Fault of the 'Fear Realm' by borrowing the power of the 'King of Fear'.

However, I couldn't properly exercise any power on the Fear Realm because I had not properly absorbed him but had put him in the [Fourth Wall], or because he was unconscious.

In other words, if this continued, I would inevitably be hit by Apocalypse Dragon's tail and go to the underworld.

—Well, if you insist on closing it, there's nothing you can't do.

"How?"

—You spoke confidently to the Second, but didn't you have another plan?

"My plan is you."

I said with a grin.

"Please tell me quickly. Otherwise, you might get killed if I keep charging forward like this."

The Demon King of Salvation clicked his tongue and replied, seemingly taken aback by my threat to his life.

—Or so it is.

"Yes?"

—Just charge forward. Close the door when you get close to it.

"Then I'll get killed?"

How could I approach the door when even the Constellations of the highest rank were destroyed by the shockwave?

Then the 'Demon King of Salvation' replied.

—You should be fine now. Ah, it's all done.

Then a message came.

[The effect of the characteristic, 'Record Repairer', is activated!]

[Record repair completed!]

[Exclusive skill, '□□', restoration completed.]

[You have become the new 'Recorder of Fear'.]

874 Episode 47 King of Fear (18)

Recorder of Fear.

I couldn't quite understand why I was given that role now.

[A huge amount of 'loss' has been collected.]

[The 'loss' you collected will be recorded on the Final Wall.]

As far as I know, I have not yet met the prerequisites to become a 'Recorder of Fear.'

According to the information I heard from Bicheonhori, there are two major conditions to become a 'Recorder of Fear'.

One, you must have reached the 'end' of the world, but were not satisfied with the ending.

Second, you must have the 'possibility of recording' that the Oldest Dream can hope for.

The latter condition was difficult to define, but the former condition was clear.

Both Asmodeus and Bicheonhori survived until the end of their respective world lines, but were not satisfied with the ending, so they became 'Recorders of Fear'.

However, I had not even seen the 'end of the world'. Of course, I did get a glimpse of the ending of the 40th Round through the 'Time Fault', but that was only a glimpse through the 'Time Fault'.

"How did I become a Recorder of Fear?"

Then the Demon King of Salvation answered as if asking why.

—You saw the end of the world.

"The end of the world? Are you talking about what I experienced in the 'Time Fault'?"

—What are you talking about? Hey, here it comes.

I quickly tilted my head back to avoid the shockwave mass flying towards me.

The shockwave mass that passed by my cheek as if it was scratching me crashed into the 'Time Fault Room' and turned the area into dust.

—You're Kim Dokja.

It was dizzying. But strangely, I didn't feel nervous.

As if I had already experienced all of this once, an unprecedented sense of composure settled deep in my heart.

—We already saw the 'End of the World' once in the 1,864th round.

The moment I heard that, something suddenly came to mind.

I looked through the message log and reconfirmed the message I had just seen.

[The effect of the trait, 'Record Repairer', is activated!]

[Record repair is complete!]

The effect of the trait 'Record Repairer' is to restore the 'story' that was lost through the 'Kim Dokja Fragment' that I obtained.

This time, because of the repair, I regained my skill [□□] and became a 'Recorder of Fear'.

"We already had the qualifications of a 'Recorder of Fear'."

—Yes.

"Did Kim Dokja have a story he wanted to change?"

—Maybe.

Even though Kim Dokja saw the end of the world, he still had a 'story he wanted to change'. Neither I, the Demon King of Salvation, nor perhaps the King of Fear know what it was.

Because only Kim Dokja, who was the 'One and Only Kim Dokja', knows.

What he wanted to change could have been the 999th Round, or the 1,864th Round. If not that—

「It could have been right now.」

The shockwave that flew in this time was a large lump. It was an electric shock that I couldn't avoid no matter how fast I moved.

So I didn't dodge. Instead, I opened the [Bookmark] and inserted 'Kyrgios Rodgraim', which I had sufficiently gained understanding of, into the bookmark.

[Exclusive skill, Electrification Lv.???', is activated!]

Kyrgios' exclusive technique, the perfect humanization that reached the realm of the realm, dyed my entire body in the aura of the Baekcheong.

I swung my 'Unbreakable Faith' with all my might toward the lightning wave that was flying towards me.

Tsutsutsutsut!

My fingertips burned brightly as if they had been electrocuted. Sparks began to flow through my entire body along with terrible pain.

It was the price I paid for using power that I couldn't handle at the moment.

—There are several advantages to becoming a Recorder of Fear. One of them is that your tolerance for 'probability' increases.

In fact, Asmodeus, the 'Recorder of Fear', did some ridiculous things, such as interfering with the early scenario, but he was not destroyed by the aftermath of probability.

—In your case, your tolerance would increase even more.

[The story, 'One Who Rewrites Fate', begins its storytelling.]

In addition to the effects of 'Recorder of Fear', the unique effects of the story 'One Who Rewrites Fate' were also added.

As the effects of resisting the aftermath of probability created synergy, the sparks that had been strongly pressing on my entire body began to gradually decrease.

Even though I had called upon the power of 'Kyrgios', I was free from the probability of the <Star Stream>.

"This is not enough."

But it was still not enough to close the door of the Time Fault.

Even so, the Demon King of Salvation was calm.

—It's okay. We've already dealt with the Apocalypse.

"We did."

—The same goes for the Second.

As I slowly blinked, Second child Kim Dokja's story began to be heard through the [Fourth Wall].

He was the 'Watcher of Light and Darkness'.

The experience of the 'Great Battle of the Holy Demons' that he had preserved was being released through me. The story of the Archangels and Demon Kings fighting, and <Kim Dokja’s Company> being active.

[The Giant tale, 'Season of Light and Darkness', tells you.]

The temporarily activated Giant tale took hold of my body.

I started to dash through the lightning waves as if I had a booster.

Tsutsutsut!

I can do it. If I were me now, I could close that 'door'.

—Youngest, left!

I dodged, offset, and pushed back the lightning waves that flew in sporadically, and I slowly advanced toward the door where the final tail was shaking.

[No!]

Jang Hayoung shouted, realizing what I was trying to do.

【The first phase will end soon! The second phase will begin!】

The final dragon's shockwave consists of three phases. If the first phase was 'Lightning', the theme of the second phase was 'Flame'.

And unfortunately, I didn't have a bookmark for a character who could handle 'flames' well.

In other words, the only time I could close that 'door' was while the 'first phase' was still going on.

There was absolutely no time left, and there was no quick solution.

But it was okay.

[You want to do something unexpected.]

[Describe your own actions.]

[Use 5 probability points.]

If there is no method, just write down a method.

[Exclusive skill, '□□', is activated.]

The surrounding scenery began to turn colorless.

[□□, a skill that activates when someone is about to do something unexpected.]

I saved my life several times with this skill at the beginning of the scenarios.

[Warning! The activity of '□□' is not smooth in the area!]

[You have entered the 'Snowfield'.]

[The time to enter the 'Snowfield' is reduced.]

[Describe your next action.]

> # Apocalypse Dragon's Paragraph
>
> 「At that moment, ■■■ is □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□…」
>
> * Based on the current proficiency, a total of ??? additional descriptions are possible.

Is it because I activated the skill after a long time?

Many things were different than before.

My name disappeared, and the total amount of additional descriptions was not written down.

To make matters worse, time was also an issue.

[You can stay in the Snowfield for a total of 20 seconds.]

Only 20 seconds.

I guess the opponent is too strong, so the time you can drag them out is not long.

It was only 20 seconds, but I wasn't particularly nervous or disappointed. Because I could have written a story in those 20 seconds.

I paused for a moment when I was writing my name filled with '■■■'.

Once I started writing the sentence, I picked up speed, and unnecessary sentences and absolutely necessary sentences were quickly sorted out in my head.

[You are currently unable to use the probability you have accumulated.]

Normally, I would have used the accumulated probability to increase the scene reproduction rate, but it was impossible at the moment.

[You lack the probability allowed.]

So I described the sentence without 'additional probability'.

[You lack the probability allowed.]

I checked all the materials and situations, items I could use. Whether it was Constellations, incarnations, or anything else.

[You lack the probability allowed.]

And this was the result.

[You described strange and wonderful content.]

[The reproduction success rate of this description is 50%.]

[Would you like to check the reader feedback?]

I nodded.

I guess I should hear the opinions of our kkoma Kim Dokjas. But I didn't hear the evaluations of the readers. Instead, I heard.

「rlaehrwk37 is saddened by your story.」

I imagined the little readers reading this story in a movie theater, a library, or somewhere in a world I don't know.

[Would you like to try to reproduce it?]

[If you fail to reproduce it, you will die.]

There is only one thing I wish for.

[You succeeded in recreating the scene.]

[You are leaving the 'Snowfield'.]

To make sure that this story I wrote and you read doesn't become meaningless.

「At that moment, Kim Dokja ran.」

I ran with all my might. The magic power of my heart began to beat violently, and the power of the great story flowed over it like a wildfire.

「He was not a complete Kim Dokja.」

I replayed the history of Kim Dokja in my head over and over again. I wondered what they would have done.

「But now he has met the 'Demon King of Salvation' and the 'Watcher of Light and Darkness'.」

So, in order to understand myself, you, and this world better, to endure all this tragedy without resenting it, I read the stories.

[The tale, 'Demon King of Salvation', continues its storytelling.]

[The Giant tale, 'Season of Light and Darkness', continues its storytelling.]

But their tale was too big, too grand, too loud for me to understand. Understanding was far away, like reaching out to a distant star.

That far awayness made me closer to Kim Dokja.

「Even if understanding is nothing more than the light of a star in the middle.」

"Ahhhhhhhh!"

I overcame the shock wave that flew into [Way of the Wind].

「As long as they don't give up understanding, humans can become anything.」

I broke through the shock wave that surged into [Jeon Inhwa].

「Yoo Joonghyuk proved it.」

By borrowing the power of the giant story, I temporarily split the dense lightning waves.

「Again, just like Kim Dokja proved it.」

I ran and ran. My thighs burst and my shoulders were torn, but I didn't care. It didn't hurt.

「That's how he reached the 'Time Fault Gate.'」

I saw a door. A door through which lightning waves were constantly pouring. Now, I just had to close that door.

Kwakwakwakwakwa!

I stepped through the wide-open doorway, canceling out the pouring lightning waves.

And at that moment.

「Kim Dokja thought. 'It's too late'.」

The second phase began.

「The second phase of the apocalypse, 'Flame Wave'.」

Beyond the shadow of the tail that was shaking as if mocking me, the second shock wave of the Final Dragon that would burn everything was coming. The heat was so hot that even the doorknob attached to the 'Time Fault Door' had melted.

「No matter how fast he moved, it couldn't be faster than the 'Flame Wave' starting.」

I saw the red-hot 'Time Fault Door'. The moment I grabbed that door, my hand would melt.

Unfortunately, there was no way for me to handle the 'Heat Wave' right now. It was impossible even if I used a [Bookmark] or activated the story.

I let out a bitter smile. I couldn't close the door by myself.

Unlike Kim Dokja of the 'Great Battle of Good and Evil,' I didn't have <Kim Dokja's Company>.

「No, is there really no one else?」

Somehow, the back of my head felt hot. The heat wave is approaching from the front, and the back of my head feels hot.

I slowly opened my mouth, feeling the subtle heat.

"You managed to avoid getting on the train."

I knew you didn't.

Because I wrote it like that. I used every trick I could to make this guy come to his senses.

"You're a real fucking punk."

I grinned at Yoo Joonghyuk and said.

"I know. Please help me."

"Why should I do that?"

I know you'll help.

Because I wrote it like that.

"That way, the <Star Stream> won't be destroyed."

"I've always lived hoping this place would be destroyed."

I knew you'd say that.

Because I wrote it like that.

"Still, will you help me?"

The heat wave was right in front of me. With the end of a world right before my eyes, I grinned at him.

Then Yoo Joonghyuk said.

"I know your real name."

That wasn’t something I had written.

875 Episode 47 King of Fear (19)

---

My 'real name'.

The moment I heard those words, various emotions surged at once.

Is my brain slightly accustomed to the surging waves of the Apocalypse? Or maybe I just thought that this time I might really die.

I smiled at Yoo Joonghyuk, who was staring blankly at me.

"My name is Kim Dokja."

Yoo Joonghyuk ignored my words and clenched one of his fists. Then, a piece of shining story blossomed in his hand.

"You're the only fool who would put your own name in a dumpling."

"..."

"I'll give it back."

"Thank you for your offer."

I hesitated for a moment and then added.

"I don't think I should take that name back now."

I felt like my resolve would waver if I took that name back again.

If I had insisted on putting my name in a dumpling, there must have been a reason.

Before I knew it, the flame wave had surged up to my nose.

Yoo Joonghyuk took out his Hwangcheon-wolgeuk. Yoo Joonghyuk in the main story used his [Yeolhwasingeom] skill to neutralize the shock wave of the second phase, 'Flame Wave'.

If my guess is correct, Yoo Joonghyuk in the 41st Round would have the same skill.

"[Yeolhwasingeom] is a sword technique. It is not suitable for use as a spear."

"[Yeolhwasingeom] is not used."

At the same time as those words, a magnificent white flame rippled over Yoo Joonghyuk's spear technique.

I opened my eyes wide in surprise.

How could Yoo Joonghyuk use that 'Stigma'?

The next moment, the dazzling light of the 'Stigmata' enveloped my hands as well.

I bit my lips as I looked at the flames of the stigma dazzling on my fingertips.

Not all the sentences I wrote through [□□] are necessarily reproduced in the 'form I have determined'. For example, the sentence I wrote this time was as follows.

「And an unexpected Constellation protected them.」

While writing that sentence, can I really say that I didn't know she would come?

[Stigma, 'Hellfire Lv.???', has been activated!]

[The Constellation, 'Demon-like Judge of Fire', has declared 'Deus Ex Machina'!]

Deus Ex Machina. An event where the Constellation intervenes in the scenario at the cost of a huge probability.

[The Constellation, 'Demon-like Judge of Fire', does not want your death.]

I looked up at the sky.

"Uriel."

I spoke to her on behalf of the Demon King of Salvation and the Watcher of Light and Darkness, or on behalf of Kim Dokja.

"I won't die."

My words were true.

Because the ending of this 'Fear Realm' has already been written.

Yoo Joonghyuk, who was ready, spoke.

"30 seconds. That's all I can hold out for."

"That's enough."

"Find a way in there."

The moment Yoo Joonghyuk collided head-on with the flying flames, I started to seriously push the door behind him.

Kkiiyi.

Thanks to Uriel's protection, the door was able to withstand the heat.

But there was a bigger problem.

The door wouldn't close.

Upon closer inspection, the door's hinges were melting and cracking due to the heat wave. If any more time passed, it might become impossible to close the door. There was no time to hesitate.

"Heir-ah."

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', grumbles at you not to call it that.]

"Help."

The guy grumbled but also took out the skill I wanted.

[Activate exclusive skill, 'Bookmark'!]

I immediately put a character in the empty bookmark.

[Activate exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???'!]

"I am Lee Hyunsung."

[Exclusive skill 'Incite' corresponds to 'Bookmark'!]

[You can temporarily use one 'stigma' held by the corresponding character!]

Both hands overflowing with brute force.

I started pushing the door again with a lot of strength.

[Exclusive attribute 'Mountain Push Lv.10' is activated!]

I used Lee Hyunsung's exclusive attribute and thought about the scene where he opened the subway door.

「"Whaaaaaaap!"

Lee Hyunsung's biceps swelled as if they were going to burst as he grabbed the door.」

Back then, he opened the door to survive, but now I had to close the door to survive.

Squeak.

The door started to move little by little. However, it was too slow. At this rate, it was impossible to close the door within the 30 seconds Yoo Joonghyuk had said.

Yoo Joonghyuk shouted, his whole body burning like a moth in the heat wave.

"Hurry!"

"I'm doing my best!"

And at that moment.

[It's freaking hot, really.]

The reinforcements I had been waiting for arrived.

「Kim Dokja's fighter was there.」

Jang Hayoung, who had come through the lightning wave, stood next to me and started pushing the door together.

[Eww! My hand! My hand is burning!]

Jang Hayoung originally had no skills related to 'Flames'. However, both of Jang Hayoung's hands were wrapped in bright red strong energy.

「Flame Yang Shingong.」

It seems that she had traded skills through the 'Wall of Impossible Communication' in that short time.

Jang Hayoung was an incarnation that reached a certain level of skill proficiency faster than any other incarnation of the <Star Stream>.

With that level of proficiency, it would be difficult to offset the 'Flame Wave', but it seemed possible to push the door together with me.

[Get up! Harder!]

Jang Hayoung was smiling even as her head was covered in lightning waves and her whole body was accustomed to the flame wave. As if she was enjoying this situation very much.

[Sorry, I finally feel like I can do something.]

As expected, it was a sentence I didn't write. I tried my best, but in the end, I couldn't write. On that blank space, a character who found their own role was smiling brightly.

[Han Sooyoung said. She'll write a lot of my stories in the side story.]

"…"

[How is it? I think I can create pretty cool stories like this, don't you think?]

I looked at Jang Hayoung for a moment and nodded with all my might.

"It's cool."

[Right?]

"But that side story, it might not be written by Han Sooyoung."

[What? Then who’s writing it?]

"That—"

With a kududu sound, the heat wave grew stronger. We stopped talking and focused on closing the door again.

[A little more! A little more!]

When the door was more than half closed, I called Yoo Joonghyuk. Yoo Joonghyuk used [Jujak Shinbo] to quickly evacuate behind us after canceling out one of the waves of the approaching flame wave.

"All right! Close!"

The flame wave flowing in gradually decreased, and finally the door closed.

But.

Kukukukukuku.

Even though the door closed, the flame beyond the portal did not disappear. The passage leading to here was not completely blocked.

Jang Hayoung muttered with a grave expression.

[Damn, the automatic locking mechanism must be broken.]

Even though Jang Hayoung and I were pushing the door with all our might, the door was rattling menacingly.

"Isn't there a way to fix it?"

[There is one, but—]

Jang Hayoung didn't tell me how. I already knew the method that Jang Hayoung didn't tell me.

"That locking mechanism, isn't it on the inside of this 'door'?"

I could see Jang Hayoung flinching. Her expression was like, 'How did you know?'. It was inevitable for me to know.

Because when using the 'Time Fault Door', you always use the 'key' on this side to enter, so the lock must be on the opposite side.

Kim Dokja thought. 'Is this how it's going to turn out?'

The opponent was originally the 'Final Dragon of the Apocalypse'. This means that even if Yoo Joonghyuk and Jang Hayoung joined forces, it wouldn't be a disaster that could be stopped.

To deal with such a disaster, simply blocking this 'door' would require an enormous probability.

I was in a situation where I couldn't invest in additional probability, so I had to figure out a way to close this 'door' without additional probability.

[No.]

Jang Hayoung grabbed my arm. Very firmly, with a strength that I could never release with my own strength.

[Absolutely not.]

"…"

[This isn't just a 'Time Fault'. Do you know why the other guys can't see this 'door'? Because this is beyond the control of the King of Fear. It’s a completely different world line!]

"Hayoung-ah."

Jang Hayoung’s startled power weakened for a moment.

[Don’t call my name! I absolutely won’t allow it—]

"Jang Hayoung."

Those words weren’t my language. They were the language of the 'King of Fear' that had awakened inside me.

The creaking door was slowly opening again. I could feel the heat wave rushing in.

"This is the only way to close the door."

[I’d rather do it myself—]

"Your [Heat Yang Shingong] won’t be able to withstand the heat wave. And if you go over, there won’t be anyone to manage the Fear Realm."

[Or send Yoo Joonghyuk! If it’s that bastard—]

I shook my head.

"No matter where this is, I’m the only one who has a chance of coming back alive. If it's a 'different world line' like you said, then even more so."

Jang Hayoung, who lowered her head, moved her lips several times. I carefully grabbed her wrist and let her speak. Jang Hayoung couldn't resist.

"Don't worry. Coming back from the dead is my specialty."

The strength she had just used to grip my arm was the last strength she could muster. Having endured the first phase of 'Tail of the Apocalypse' alone, she was already on the verge of exhaustion.

Yoo Joonghyuk took Jang Hayoung's seat as she sank to her feet.

"You can't do it alone."

"I guess so. But you can't help me this time, can you?"

I felt Yoo Joonghyuk flinch. It was natural. Because.

「"Oh, didn't Ryunard say that? That Fault cannot be seen by anyone."」

This 'Time Fault door' is only visible to certain beings.

「"It is a Fault that can only be seen by those like me who came from 'outside' this world, or by the Recorders who watch the worldline."」

Yoo Joonghyuk didn't show it, but he probably couldn't see the 'Time Fault door' right now.

It must have seemed like the shock wave of 'Apocalypse Dragon' was just coming from the air.

That's why Yoo Joonghyuk couldn't close the door like Jang Hayoung.

"Please survive, Yoo Joonghyuk."

Yoo Joonghyuk nodded and started to move away with Jang Hayoung.

When they had grown a certain distance apart, Yoo Joonghyuk's voice was heard.

—You must come back to get your name back. It's useless to me.

That was our last greeting.

「At the same time as closing the Time Fault door, the only way I have a chance of surviving.」

I jumped into the gap in the open door. The explosive heat of the flame wave melted my entire body. I rushed forward with momentum.

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', is activated to the extreme!]

Fortunately, Uriel's [Hellfire] and the function of the [Fourth Wall] protected me.

I immediately closed the door with [Mt. Taesan Push] and pushed the lock from the inside.

「The 'Time Fault Door' was locked.」

The 'Time Fault Door' swirled and disappeared in the empty air.

The problem was this.

[Warning! You are outside the 'World Line'!]

The last dragon's tail was still wagging. To make matters worse, when Uriel's protection disappeared, my body soaked in the heat wave began to disappear.

[The <Star Stream> is watching your strange behavior!]

[Many Constellations are surprised by your choice!]

With a tsutsutsu sound, I felt the existing channel being cut off. With the messages rushing into my head, I began to fall down. Suddenly, the number written next to the nameplate came to mind.

「1863-99th Round.」

If that number was correct, I was still in the worldview of the 'Ways of Survival'.

「Worldline of the 1,863rd Round.」

I don't know what the 1,863rd Round of this worldline is like.

The 1,863rd Round is the last time of Yoo Joonghyuk's 'Ways of Survival'.

Perhaps this place was a state where humanity was extinct. Or it could have been a world where Yoo Joonghyuk had already seen the ending and left.

From here on out, it was an unknown space that I had not written.

「All stories flow toward an empty space.」

A moment later, I felt my incarnation body collide with the floor. A terrible pain surged through my entire body as if my bones were broken, and my breathing flowed out through my completely darkened vision.

[Worldline movement was successful.]

A message came into my head.

「I survived.」

A sigh escaped with difficulty.

But I couldn't move a single finger. I didn't feel any sign of anyone. I felt a terrible coldness piercing my heart. I wanted to open my mouth and ask if anyone was there. I had an ominous feeling.

What if it was the world where all the scenarios ended?

What if destruction came, the channels disappeared, and the management bureau and Constellations disappeared?

So if there was no way to return to the original world,

Kuk.

How—

Kuk.

Huh?

Kuk.

I felt someone poking my head. If my guess was not wrong, it felt like a person’s foot.

"What is this?"

A human voice came from somewhere.

"I wondered why the Apocalypse Dragon was acting up again… What are you?"

When I slowly opened my eyes, a faint light penetrated my vision. I saw a white coat fluttering beyond the beam of light.

A coat that looked just like Kim Dokja’s.

「But the one wearing it wasn’t Kim Dokja.」

The cigarette she had in her mouth fell to the floor.

The moment I saw that cigarette, I realized where I had come to.

"First..."

Swallowing the lump in my throat, I opened my mouth with difficulty.

The '1,863rd Round' that I could come to was already set.

"Nice to meet you."

She was the one who alone saw the end of the 1,863rd Round in the world that Kim Dokja had left.

She lightly stepped on the cigarette that had fallen on the floor and put it out, then looked at me quietly and asked.

"You... look a bit like someone I know?"

That was the first meeting between Han Sooyoung and me in the 1,863rd Round.

876 Episode 47 King of Fear (20)

First Kim Dokja— The Demon King of Salvation glared at the newspaper on the table with discontented eyes. The kkomas Kim Dokjas who were stuck to his whole body spoke.

「(I can't see it.)」

「(Hyung.)」

「(Show me. Show me.)」

The Demon King of Salvation frowned and pulled off the kkoma Kim Dokjas who were stuck to him one by one. When he pulled off the Kim Dokja who was stuck to his face, he saw the last sentence of the newspaper that was half-torn.

「Successful world line transfer.」

That was the Youngest's last record.

「(What is it? Why did it suddenly cut off? Where did he go?)」

The Demon King of Salvation was inwardly perplexed.

He roughly figured out what had happened. The Youngest jumped into the world line where the Apocalypse Dragon existed to save the others of the Fear Realm, and closed the 'door'. In short, he couldn't control his habit again and committed 'Dokja behavior'.

「(Damn it. Why are all Kim Dokjas like this?)」

He wonders if <Kim Dokja's Company> that used to see him felt like this.

The Demon King of Salvation thought as he stroked the last page of the newspaper where the sentences were cut off.

[The '4th Wall' is currently being restored.]

He had a rough idea of why the sentences were cut off.

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall's', composition is extremely unstable.]

The library shook uneasily as if it would collapse at any moment.

A few kkoma Kim Dokjas clung to his legs as if they were scared. Kim Dokja looked around while hanging on to the kkoma Kim Dokjas like a fruit tree.

In the past few days, the [Fourth Wall] had changed quite a bit on the inside. It was already a somewhat dark and gloomy place, but now it had an atmosphere where a real ghost might appear. It wasn't a metaphor, but a real thing, something was wriggling in the darkness inside the library where the light didn't reach.

The Demon King of Salvation knew what that wriggling thing was.

「(Hey.)」

The Demon King of Salvation kicked the thing that was hanging like a larva in the darkness with the tip of his foot. However, the man with a good fortune didn't get up.

When he brought the lamp closer, he could see the man's appearance in detail.

Second Kim Dokja—The 'Watcher of Light and Darkness' was there.

「(How long are you going to sleep? Why aren't you waking up?)」

Of course, he knew that he wasn't simply asleep. The guy wasn't asleep, but rather, he was unable to come to his senses due to serious damage to his stories.

The Demon King of Salvation hesitated for a moment and placed his hand on the forehead of the Second Kim Dokja, who was hanging.

What should I do?

Would it get better if I fed him his favorite 'sad story'?

After a brief moment of thought, the Demon King of Salvation took out the 'sad story' he could think of.

But then, something came crashing down from a corner of the [Fourth Wall]. At the same time, the floor of the library cracked.

The Demon King of Salvation let out a light sigh and stood up, asking the direction from which the sound came.

「(What are you guys doing?)」

At that, the monsters suddenly poked their heads out of the darkness.

The First Kim Dokja pursed his lips and asked.

「(Didn’t I tell you to clean up the fallen books, not to destroy the entire library?)」

At that, the monsters laughed. Their faces were reflected in the flickering lamplight.

They were all Outer Gods that had been in a state of Fear.

From the shell of the 'Dream Eater', to the headless dragon, and…

「(Especially you. Aren’t you doing your job properly? I thought you’d be helpful since you have so many arms.)」

At the Demon King of Salvation’s remark, the four-armed skeleton rattled its jaw. It was the 'Founder of the Absolute Throne'.

「(Just kick them all out?)」

The 'Founder of the Absolute Throne' rattled his skull again with a sullen expression.

The moment the Demon King of Salvation, who was frustrated by that sight, couldn't hold it in any longer and was about to say one more word.

「(Hehe, they can't even speak properly. Don't bother them too much.)」

Three Transcendents appeared with the voice.

Chunghuh, Ryunard, and Karlton.

All of them were key figures of the Transcendent Alliance.

The Demon King of Salvation glared at the three and replied.

「(Then you guys who know how to speak, do it instead.)」

「(Hmm.)」

「(No, why did you crawl here in the first place? You could have just gotten on the train and escaped.)」

「(That's because, unfortunately, we belong to the 'Fear Realm' itself.)」

Unlike the other members of the Transcendent Alliance, the three were cases of being transferred to this world from a 'different worldline'.

The reason they were able to exist in this world was because the 'King of Fear' took on the burden of the lack of probability.

In other words, as the 'King of Fear' who ruled the Fear Realm became affiliated with the [Fourth Wall], their affiliation also changed to the [Fourth Wall].

「(How many more people are trying to come into this already cramped library, damn it.)」

「(…)」

「(If you came in, at least help me out a little. Do you know what our Youngest looks like right now?)」

「(Hmm, I can guess what happened.)」

「(Don’t you have any useful abilities? I’m sure you guys have made a lot of money in your own worlds.)」

「(According to the Transcendent Alliance regulations, we can’t exercise our power outside of the 'Fear Realm'.)」

「(So you’re not going to help us at all?)」

Three people shrugged at those words at the same time.

Chunghuh coughed in vain again and pretended not to know.

「(That Zeus guy is really strong. Are all the 'Myth-grade' guys in this worldline like that?)」

At Chunghuh’s subtle question, something came to mind belatedly. Now that he thinks about it, these three did their part. The reason the Youngest was able to be active in the Fear Realm was because these three held onto the Myth-grade Constellations of the 'Giant Nebula'. If those from other dimensions played that role, it's safe to say that they used most of the probability allowed in this world line.

「(Damn it, stop it. I didn't even expect you to help me in the first place.)」

The Demon King of Salvation approached the table again and began reading the newspaper from the beginning.

So many things have happened at once since he entered the 'Fear Realm'.

The Second Kim Dokja, the King of Fear, is one thing, but...

The incident that particularly caught his attention was the appearance of 'Cheon Inho', who became a Recorder of Fear, and another Kim Dokja.

Those guys are so quiet that it's unsettling.

Even if that's true, the appearance of Kim Dokja, whom the Youngest named 'Snowfield Kim Dokja', was unexpected. The Demon King of Salvation still remembered the figure of the guy who tore his brothers apart.

The one who had been watching this 41st Round before that, the one who had collected over 50 percent of the 'Kim Dokja fragments' and had become closer to the one and only Kim Dokja than anyone else.

Not only did that being start to intervene in the scenario in earnest, but he even appeared in the Snowfield and attacked the 'King of Fear' directly.

This must mean that the probability of this world was slowly flowing to the point where it would allow the guy's actions.

The only good thing was that no more 'Kim Dokja fragments' flowed to him. And thanks to the Youngest, the First and Second who had been separated were reunited.

Now that the two were together, there was only one thing left.

「(Please, take this.)」

The Demon King of Salvation muttered as he pressed the call button on his smartphone.

—Third Kim Dokja.

The guy who always sets his smartphone to 'airplane mode'. In fact, he knew the Third's number, but the Demon King of Salvation had never heard the Third's voice even once.

In fact, he had made a call once. But that time, a strange man answered the phone instead and all he heard was, 'Don't call me again.' At first, he thought he had dialed the wrong number, but no matter how much he thought about it, there was no way that could be true.

Above all, the number of the 'Third Kim Dokja,' was obtained through a deal with the great otherworldly god, 'Bowang.'

[The other party is currently in 'airplane mode'.]

Is it not going to work this time too?

The Demon King of Salvation shook his head and put his smartphone in his bosom.

Just like the First and Second, the Great King of Fear, the Third must also be trapped in his own legend. And within that legend, the Third may have made his own decision.

The Demon King of Salvation let out a light sigh and muttered as he looked at the torn newspaper again.

「(Youngest, I think we'll have to figure it out on our own.)」

But then, the smartphone in his arms vibrated.

—Third Kim Dokja.

The Demon King of Salvation threw down the newspaper he was holding and answered the phone.

Is there really no one there?

Jaehwan let out a light sigh and looked around. The cubic space centered around him, which was exactly ten meters wide, was literally 'blocked' by a translucent membrane.

The dokkaebis of the Management Bureau were more formidable than he thought.

No matter how much he overused his power, he could set up a 'Dark Dimension' that could temporarily seal himself.

'The 《Big Brother》 here must be quite a great guy.'

Jaehwan tapped the translucent membrane. It seemed like it was probably made of a material similar to the 'Void Curtain'.

'I guess I can break through it if I try…'

If you try to break through from the inside, part of this dimension will be blown away.

If you do that, 'that guy' will definitely get angry.

It seems that this curtain can only be opened from the outside...

"That's funny. They say even a tiger will come when you call it."

Jaehwan smirked as he spotted a man approaching from the other side of the translucent curtain.

The man in the pitch-black coat looked around for a moment, then flew straight toward him.

Jaehwan's expression hardened slightly as he confirmed the man who had come close.

"I see you're holding a spear, so it's that guy from 'this worldline'."

The voice couldn't get through the curtain, but the two were still able to understand each other.

The first to speak was Yoo Joonghyuk from the 41st Round.

"I need your help."

What had happened on the way here? Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body was almost like rags. The black coat he had been sporting was torn to shreds, one finger was missing from his left hand, and his thigh and shoulder were deeply wounded to the point where the bones were exposed.

Jaehwan said with a bitter smile.

"You look like you need help."

"Will you help me?"

"Are the humans of this dimension incapable of doing anything on their own?"

Yoo Joonghyuk did not respond to Jaehwan's provocation.

Jaehwan glared at Yoo Joonghyuk and then said.

"I can't help you. I'm trapped here because of that damn 'Kim Dokja'."

"I can release you."

"It's not a seal that you can release with just your strength."

As if his pride was hurt by those words, Yoo Joonghyuk tightly shut his lips. Jaehwan added, finding Yoo Joonghyuk's appearance amusing.

"If you want to help me, you'll have to regress a thousand more times. Or bring someone who has regressed that much."

"I can't regress that many times. I don't want to regress any more."

"Since the so-called Regressor has given up on regressing, I guess he's even more useless."

He said that, but Jaehwan's eyes were filled with a strange color.

He liked Yoo Joonghyuk's answer.

"I can save you."

"So, at your current level, this isn't something you can do..."

"Teach me so I can break this curtain."

"What?"

Jaehwan's eyebrows twitched for a moment.

The eyes of the Regressor were endlessly serious.

Jaehwan smiled as he met those eyes.

"You, you saw 'something'."

Jaehwan knew a little about the history of the character 'Yoo Joonghyuk'.

Unlike him who hated regression, this Regressor lived by repeating thousands of regressions.

He hated to admit it, but this Regressor was quite similar to him.

Just as he repeated 'stabbing' for a long time, this man also became stronger by repeating 'life'.

But that was after the man repeated thousands of regressions.

The Regressor in front of him now was nothing more than a novice who had only regressed a few dozen times.

"You are already close to the peak that you can reach now. It’s not something I can teach you to overcome."

"I know you have a special way to 'transcend'."

Jaehwan remained silent for a moment as if he could accept Yoo Joonghyuk’s sincerity.

"If you use that method to become stronger, you won’t be who you are now."

"But it doesn’t matter."

An expression filled with firm determination.

Jaehwan spoke as if confirming his determination for the last time.

"You’ll think it’s better to die, right?"

It was a warning, but Yoo Joonghyuk looked happy, surprisingly.

"The sea I’ve been hoping for."

Yoo Joonghyuk answered like that and suddenly looked back. There wasn’t really anyone there. Even so, if you were to ask if there was nothing there, that wasn’t the case.

The vast expanse of the <Star Stream> galaxy.

The Constellations that cheered him on, the people he loved. The distant stories he had walked, and perhaps he would have to walk, were there. It was too long a history for one human.

Nevertheless, it wasn’t long enough, so he was still here.

"Because that was the only wish I had made my whole life."

877 Episode 47 King of Fear (21)

---

A lonely wind blew across the Snowfield. Between the lines where the incident disappeared. Above those lines, fragments of stories that were not properly recorded scattered like snow.

「"Kim Dokja, where is he?"」

「"Teach me so I can break this curtain."」

「"Tell me. Where did Inho-ssi go?"」

The voices of those who were unable to save their precious ones. Words that disappeared without going anywhere.

Listening to those words, he stood on the Snowfield, hung his white coat fluttering in the wind on a chair, sat down at the table, and drank a cup of tea.

「The space given to you was really small, but you have left behind many stories.」

The man read and reread the stories that fell endlessly.

「"Kim Dokja."」

What had once been his name was now a title for someone else. The man was often confused by that fact. He didn't know what kind of feelings he should have.

Should he feel sad, or should he feel liberated?

Or should he feel angry?

As the man made a light gesture, another chair appeared across the table.

The man put down the tea he was drinking on the table and asked.

「Is there anything left to write?」

Another man stood behind him.

A man with bright hair and narrowed eyes. A dark red coat reminiscent of dried blood.

「That's how it is. After writing, you always feel regret.」

「The record of '40th Round' has changed just as you wanted.」

「Well, that's it for now.」

「Then it wouldn't matter if you left.」

Cheon Inho smiled and sat down in the chair the man had prepared. Then he spoke with his characteristic narrowed eyes even narrower.

「Isn't it too rude to treat like that the father you met after a long time?」

「Father.」

The man glared at Cheon Inho with an annoyed expression and added.

「You raised me, right? In this Snowfield.」

「I often think that way. Maybe the fact that I was raised by a human like you is proof that I'm the 'real Kim Dokja'.」

Cheon Inho nodded and asked.

「Do you still worry about who you are? How many more 'Kim Dokja fragments' do you have to collect before you stop worrying about that?」

「I'll know once I collect them all.」

「Then what should I call you until then?」

「That friend who uses my incarnation body.」

Cheon Inho grabbed the teacup the man had put down and took a sip of the tea, saying.

「He called you 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.」

Snowfield Kim Dokja snickered as if he found that title very strange.

「That guy called me Kim Dokja from the beginning.」

「Anyone can see that you are Kim Dokja.」

「No one calls me Kim Dokja except that guy.」

「I'm the one calling you that.」

「Have you already forgotten that I gave you that name?」

The two looked out at the snowy landscape in silence. Perhaps because there was so much snow falling? Their footsteps were not visible. Nevertheless, the two of them had definitely walked that path where no footprints had been left.

「I still remember the day I picked you up.」

As he said that, Cheon Inho took out a book from his bosom.

『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』.

「You were probably born around this point.」

As he said that, Cheon Inho opened the book.

Snowfield Kim Dokja silently read the passage that Cheon Inho had pointed to. The sentences that had begun to look somewhat out of place were written crookedly there.

—The Kim Dokja you know has scattered throughout this universe.

Cheon Inho continued speaking with a strange expression, as if that moment was still vivid.

「You were such a pretty child. It’s hard to believe that such a child fell from the sky.」

「Don’t romanticize it. You just wanted to use me.」

「That’s right.」

Cheon Inho nodded and answered.

「My goal was to feed you the 'Kim Dokja fragments' and revive the 'Oldest Dream'.」

The Oldest Dream.

The absolute observer of this universe that only the 'One and Only Kim Dokja' can become.

「If that was really your goal, why did you betray me?」

「…」

「You raised me, hoping that I would dream your story. But why?」

「I just found an easier way to achieve my goal.」

「Are you satisfied with the records that he changed?」

A subtle edge stood out in Snowfield Kim Dokja’s voice.

「I can discard those records if I become the 'Oldest Dream'. Or I can rewrite them.」

「Of course.」

Snowfield Kim Dokja let out a low breath as if to calm down his anger. Cheon Inho, who was watching him, asked.

「Didn’t you originally like that guy?」

「…」

「Are you angry because he declared that he would become 'Kim Dokja'?」

「…」

「Or because he became friends with the 'Demon King of Salvation' that you hate?」

「Your role was to prevent that guy from living as 'Kim Dokja'.」

「Haha, I made that promise.」

「Why didn’t you keep it? Did you want to see that guy act like the main character in your body? Were you ecstatic to see a new record being written in your incarnation body?」

Cheon Inho nodded.

「It was ecstatic.」

「I could have made you the main character, too.」

「If you were my 'Oldest Dream', it would have been possible. But you know. A wish that came true wouldn’t be very fun, right?」

「Not fun?」

A few snowflakes fell from the sky and fell into the tea. Cheon Inho stirred the tea with a spoon as if trying to find the snowflakes and said.

「Jecheon Daeseong could have ridden the neunda and headed to India at any time. But he walked with Samjang to reach India. That’s how 'Journey to the West' was created.」

「What are you trying to say?」

「It was fun to walk on foot.」

Snowfield Kim Dokja got angry.

「That’s not your story. You’re just a bystander.」

「Still, it was fun. That I can tell that story in my incarnation body. That I can live a life that isn’t one of the 'Ten Evils'.」

「You were incited.」

「That could be possible. However.」

Looking at the tea water swirling around and spinning, Cheon Inho finished his words.

「This world is a huge 'incite' in the first place.」

The two beings looked at the Snowfield again after saying those words. They still couldn't see the footsteps they had walked. However, they no longer thought about the path they had walked.

「So, what are you going to do now? Against your will, he decided to become 'Kim Dokja' himself.」

「He is not your avatar. He won't listen to you, and he won't move as you dream.」

As he said that, Cheon Inho looked at Kim Dokja's left hand in the Snowfield that had become half transparent. It was a blow to the Fear Realm that had been forcibly used to apply probability.

「He will find an answer that will not destroy this world or not. He is already closer to being the 'main character' than anyone else—」

Cheon Inho asked while looking at the snowflakes piercing through his left hand that had become transparent.

「Snowfield Kim Dokja, how are you going to stop it?」

Snowfield Kim Dokja looked up at the sky and slowly opened his mouth.

「The day I collected more than half of the 'Kim Dokja fragments' with your help, I tore apart my brother who came here from the sky.」

Snowfield Kim Dokja continued to speak.

「I thought I had truly become Kim Dokja. I believed that if I just collected the remaining fragments, I would become complete as Kim Dokja.」

「It sounds like you’re saying no now.」

Snowfield Kim Dokja moved his fingers and wrote someone’s name on the snow piled up on the table.

■■■

A name that was not written.

Cheon Inho asked while looking at the hole.

「It seems I’m not the only one who was incited by his story.」

「…」

「He even threw away his own name to become Kim Dokja. What can you throw away?」

「I’ve thought about it for a long time. What do I really want?」

Snowfield Kim Dokja said as he reached out and wiped the table.

「What do I want to become? Am I satisfied with simply becoming the 'Oldest Dream'?」

「Can I say that I have become the 'Kim Dokja' I wanted just by collecting all the 'Kim Dokja fragments'?」

Cheon Inho paused for a moment. It was because he sensed an unusual energy from Snowfield Kim Dokja.

「You're right. What's important is not the result, but the process.」

Cracks were slowly forming between the 'Kim Dokja fragments' that made up Snowfield Kim Dokja. A white light was leaking out through the cracks.

「What can I throw away?」

「You, no way...」

Cheon Inho absentmindedly looked down at the book on the table. In the shaking pages, he felt as if he had read this scene in advance.

「Stop. If you do that now—」

「No, this is the right choice.」

Snowfield Kim Dokja was breaking apart.

「From now on, let’s start the real 'scenario'.」

---

Killer King— Cha Sungwoo sat on the rooftop railing of Gwanghwamun and looked up at the sky.

At that moment, the rooftop door opened wide and someone came in.

Cha Sungwoo fixed his gaze on the sky and asked.

"No news today, right?"

"No."

Ye Hyunwoo answered that and walked over to sit next to Cha Sungwoo.

"Maybe it’s time to admit it now."

Half a year had passed since Kim Dokja disappeared from the scenarios. In the meantime, many things had happened to the group.

The Earth was currently in the middle of scenario number 32. In the meantime, the colleagues who had lost their center of gravity split into factions, and some gave up on the scenarios because they died or became victims.

Of course, there were those who didn’t give up, like Cha Sungwoo or Ye Hyunwoo. However, even they had to admit a certain fact now.

「There is no 'Kim Dokja' in this world anymore.」

Over the course of half a year, they had come close to death several times.

As time passed, the face of Kim Dokja in their memories became blurred, and soon became a blank space. Perhaps, both Cha Sungwoo and Ye Hyunwoo knew that it was time for someone to fill that blank space.

But who on earth could take that role?

"It looks like we're all going to die here."

"Second Apostle, Yoo Joonghyuk doesn't say things like that."

"I'm not Yoo Joonghyuk."

"Did you know that wasn't the case?"

Now, this lonely joke was all that proved their history of living in this world.

"That Yoo Joonghyuk is gone too."

They were left behind in a world where Kim

Dokja and even Yoo Joonghyuk had disappeared. All they could do was copy what they had read.

But even that was becoming increasingly difficult. This was because the scenarios had deviated from the 'novel development' they knew.

"This time, Yerin almost died."

"..."

"Next time, she might really die."

Cha Yerin was critically injured, beyond recovery even with the 'Elaine Forest's Spirit'.

According to Lee Seolhwa, in order to recover from this injury, an item of at least the 'Sung-yu-gwa' level was needed.

"We might have to deal with the Giant Nebulae."

The last option to survive the scenarios.

Ye Hyunwoo also knew that there was such a choice.

"But that..."

Ye Hyunwoo said with a deep sigh.

"What would Kim Dokja do?"

It was then that a meteorite fell from the distant sky.

"Huh?"

The 'Fifth Scenario' featuring the meteorite had already ended. But what on earth is that meteorite?

"2nd Apostle, that is—"

Before Ye Hyunwoo could even finish speaking, Cha Sungwoo jumped down from the rooftop like a man possessed. He then ran straight towards the spot where the meteorite had landed.

Fortunately, the point of impact of the meteorite wasn't too far away.

Cha Sungwoo approached the crater, panting for breath.

A man was lying inside the large crater.

Every cell of his was shivering. The story he had read over a hundred times was telling him who the man in front of him was.

The man slowly opened his eyes and looked at Cha Sungwoo. Cha Sungwoo also looked at him.

He definitely knew who the man in front of him was.

Even so, Cha Sungwoo asked him.

"Who are you?"

The man then asked back.

"Who do you want?"

Cha Sungwoo slowly opened his trembling lips. He wasn't sure whether he should say the name or not. Some ominous premonition was taking hold of him. Just a single name. By saying that name, he had a premonition that the important death of this world would be distorted.

Nevertheless, Cha Sungwoo had to say that name. Because that was.

"Kim Dokja."

It was the wish of all the readers living in this world.

The man slowly opened his mouth after hearing those words with a blank face, whether he knew the expectation or not.

"I am Kim Dokja."

One day, 499 days after the scenarios began on Earth.

"From now on, I will lead the scenarios."

'Kim Dokja' returned to the scenarios.

878 Episode 48 Avatar (1)

Han Sooyoung sat in the office of the penthouse and looked out the window.

The vast view of Gwanghwamun.

After looking at the quiet ruins for a long time, Han Sooyoung suddenly took out her notebook as if she had remembered something and started writing a sentence.

「And so Han Sooyoung was finally facing the Final Scenario of the 1,863rd Round.」

She bit her lip as if she didn't like that sentence at all and added another.

「But can we really call that the 'last'?」

A sentence that seemed like an unnecessary detail.

Was that sentence her own impression of facing the Final Scenario, or was it her regretful thoughts as a writer who had to end the story like this?

Even though the long-awaited moment had arrived, what was this inexplicable feeling of emptiness?

Han Sooyoung hesitated, closed her notebook, took a cigarette out of her bosom, and put it in her mouth.

When she raised her head, the gigantic sphere that filled the sky of the <Star Stream> came into view at a glance.

Seal of the Apocalypse.

As she looked at the sphere that looked like a broken period, it seemed as if the sphere was talking to her.

Asking if she had forgotten something important. Asking if it was too early to end the story here.

[Are you reminiscing?]

When she turned her gaze to where the voice had come from, she saw the wings of an Archangel floating outside the window.

Since the 1,863rd <Eden> had already been destroyed, there was only one 'Archangel' left in this world.

"Jophiel."

The commander of the Red Cosmos—Archangel Jophiel.

[What are you thinking about?]

"Just, various things."

When Han Sooyoung answered, Jophiel also looked up at the sky.

A world where the stars had fallen and only ruins remained.

She had finally come here after going through that hellish scenario.

The Archangel who had witnessed all those years from the closest place spoke.

[You did your best.]

"Yeah, I know."

Han Sooyoung took out a cigarette from her bosom and lit it. Han Sooyoung let out a light sigh as she watched the smoke rising in the air.

"It's just that something feels off."

There were things that came to mind when she looked at the half-broken seal.

Scenario 95.

That day, the pale face that fell from the sky. The short memory of performing the scenario with him. The moment they sat on the rooftop railing and talked together. Fragments of conversation that passed by here and there.

Jophiel asked.

[Are you thinking of 'Kim Dokja'?]

"What nonsense are you talking about?"

[Why are you using 'Poker Face'?]

[Exclusive skill, 'Poker Face LV.???', is activated!]

[Poker Face is a skill used to avoid being caught in front of Lie Detection.]

Han Sooyoung pursed her lips and turned off the skill.

"It's just a habit. Are Archangels originally this interested in other people's business?"

It had already been two years since Kim Dokja had appeared in this world.

The guy who appeared in this world like a comet had messed up this scenario on his own, freed the main character, and even released the Apocalypse before leaving.

「"It's not over just because the Apocalypse was freed. You know that, right?"」

However, thanks to the guy causing such chaos, Han Sooyoung was able to avoid making the wrong choice. She was able to live properly in this world.

[He would have returned to his own worldline.]

"That's right."

The world of Kim Dokja that had disappeared was not this one, and the guy had returned to where he should have been.

Leaving only the author behind in this world where the main character and the reader had left.

Maybe that's why, Han Sooyoung thought quickly. What if she had held onto him a little longer then? Asked him to read her story a little longer.

"He must be eating well and living well there."

If she had told him to watch this world until the end.

[I don’t know about that…]

"No, he’ll forget all about this place and just goof around. That’s just the kind of guy he is."

The time she spent with Kim Dokja was really brief.

Even so, whenever she looked up at the sky like she did now, Han Sooyoung kept thinking of that face that had been smiling subtly.

The man who loved novels more than anyone she knew. Was he still reading 'Ways of Survival'?

Will he remember her- the story of this world?

—Captain, preparations are complete.

When she heard a thought projection from somewhere, she looked down and saw Lee Hyunsung and her colleagues waiting for her at the entrance of the headquarters.

They were the colleagues she had formed after falling here— the 1,863rd Round.

The Delusion Demon Kim Namwoon.

The Maritime Admiral Lee Jihye.

The Beast Lord Shin Yoosung.

The Steel Sword Lee Hyunsung.

The colleagues who had finally reached the limit of their growth potential. The proud characters of this worldline who will not easily kneel down no matter what constellation they face.

Han Sooyoung waved her hand lightly toward them and muttered.

"You all worked hard."

She thought she muttered so quietly that it was inaudible, but Kim Namwoon, who was looking up at her, shouted.

"What are you talking about, Captain! Why are you already making that face that it's all over?"

"There's still the Last Scenario left!"

Han Sooyoung snickered as she listened to Lee Hyunsung's loud voice.

That's right. Their enemies still remained across the sky.

Enemies that were preventing them from passing through the gate of the 'Last Scenario'.

"I'm telling you in advance, kids."

As she said that, she realized that a lot had happened in the meantime.

Now, if she just took one more step, if she just wrote one more sentence, the last phase of this world would end.

But why was it so hard to take that one step, to write that one sentence?

At that moment, Kim Namwoon, who was looking up at her, said something strange.

"Huh? Captain, the movement of the Apocalypse Dragon is a bit strange."

Han Sooyoung raised her head, feeling as if it couldn't be true.

Kugugugu.

The 'Seal of Apocalypse' that was destroyed in the air was causing an abnormal reaction.

Lee Jihye said.

"What, wasn't that kid asleep?"

After the problematic scenario 95 ended, Han Sooyoung used a special method to make the revived Apocalypse Dragon fall 'dormant' again.

But the Apocalypse Dragon that was clearly asleep was moving again.

[No way.]

Even Archangel Jophiel looked flustered.

Han Sooyoung, with a hardened expression, activated [Predictive Plagiarism]. And.

"It's not awake. It's just like a sleepwalker."

[Sleepwalker?]

"It's a bit strange for a sleepwalker, but... What the hell."

The moment she confirmed the tail wriggling inside the sealed sphere, Han Sooyoung shouted at her colleagues.

"Everyone, hide behind cover!"

A shockwave from the Apocalypse soared into the sky with a tremendous air current. An ear-piercing explosion. A dust storm swept over the headquarters. The coughing sounds of the incarnations.

A moment later, when the dust cleared, someone pointed to the sky and said.

"Something's falling over there!"

A star was falling in the distant sky.

---

When I opened my eyes in the darkness, the first thing that hit me was excruciating pain. It felt as if Yoo Joonghyuk had beaten my whole body with [Hundred Steps Godly Fists]. However, since Yoo Joonghyuk couldn't have beaten me, this was probably just the aftereffects of the worldline shift.

「Worldline shift.」

Naturally, past events flowed through my mind like a panorama.

The first thing that came to mind was what happened in the 'Fear Realm'. It was.

「The destruction of the 'Fear Realm' has begun.」

「The time fault where the Apocalypse Dragon was sleeping has opened.」

「To prevent destruction, I personally closed the door to the 'Time Fault'.」

「In the process, I crossed over the door to the 'Time Fault'.」

And this is what happened.

My head was throbbing and I had a headache. There were more than one or two things to check.

「Did the 'King of Fear' safely enter the [Fourth Wall]?」

「What is the possibility of the 'Super-Giant Tale' that I obtained?」

「What power did I gain by becoming a Recorder of Fear?」

「Did Yoo Joonghyuk and Anna Croft safely return to the scenario?」

「Are my party, including Killer King and Ji Eunyu, okay?」

And.

「Where on earth am I right now?」

I had a guess about the last question. It was because the scenery I saw just before I fainted was still vivid in my mind.

However, The problem is.

「My hands and feet won't listen to me.」

At first, I thought it was because of muscle pain. However, as I gradually regained my senses, I realized that wasn't the case.

I couldn't activate [Skills] or [Stigmata].

Right now, I was restrained by a special tool.

「Story Metal.」

The moment I saw my hands and feet tied to the bed, I suddenly got scared.

Where am I?

Why am I tied up?

In the midst of all this, there was a long tube connected to the story vein on the back of my hand, as if it was a consideration to keep me from dying.

"Don't move. The story hasn't stabilized yet."

A pure white woman's face appeared in the darkness. I recognized her at a glance.

"Lee Seolhwa-ssi?"

However, the atmosphere was strangely different from the 'Lee Seolhwa' I knew.

Lee Seolhwa looked down at me with troubled eyes. She seemed to want to say something, but a voice from behind stopped her.

"Okay, just go out."

"Yes, Captain."

As Lee Seolhwa disappeared outside, a deep silence descended on the room. It was not easy to endure the silence while tied up on the bed, so I carefully opened my mouth.

"Excuse me."

Then I felt someone approaching me from the darkness. Under the sound of light footsteps and the soft light, a face I knew well was looking down at me.

「Han Sooyoung.」

The moment I saw her face, my heart ached. Various memories were boiling in my head. Whether or not she knew my feelings, Han Sooyoung opened her mouth in a calm voice.

"You."

"Yes?"

I wondered if my answer was not very good. Han Sooyoung glared at me for a moment and then suddenly asked a strange question.

"You came back?"

"...?"

"Hmm. Judging by your dazzling eyes, isn't it 'that guy'?"

My mind became complicated for a moment.

「This world line was the '1,863rd' of the 'Ways of Survival'.」

And the Han Sooyoung in front of me was definitely 'that Han Sooyoung'.

Han Sooyoung who had received 'half of the memories' from the main body, Han Sooyoung who had come over to the 1,863rd in accordance with the contract with 'Secretive Plotter'.

Han Sooyoung who had tried to seal Yoo Joonghyuk forever in the 1,863rd Round.

"What on earth are you?"

That Han Sooyoung was asking about my identity.

How did I get here, but I had no idea what to say about myself.

I took a deep breath and muttered to myself.

'Constellation-nim.'

In this situation, it would probably be best to borrow Kim Dokja's mouth. Kim Dokja had already met this Han Sooyoung, so he would know what to say in this situation.

He must be there.

But what is it? No matter how long I waited, there was no reply from the 'Demon King of Salvation'.

What is it?

When I looked back, the coat I was wearing had also been taken off. When I turned my head, I saw my coat hanging about ten steps away. However, my hands and feet were tied, so there was no way to check inside the coat pocket.

But.

"Are you looking for this?"

My smartphone was in Han Sooyoung's fingertips.

I opened my mouth without realizing it.

"Please give it back."

Han Sooyoung laughed as if she found me funny.

"Do you know how useless a 'smartphone' is in this world?"

That's definitely true.

Right after the 'scenarios' opened, the 'smartphone' was no longer 'smart'. This is because various skills could sufficiently replace the role of a 'smartphone'.

"Is there something precious in it?"

"That..."

Listening to that vague voice, I thought that maybe Han Sooyoung in front of me already knew a lot.

But even if that was true, I didn't know how to bring it up to her.

「Han Sooyoung of the 1,863rd Round was one of the most important characters in this entire world.」

What if I brought it up wrong and the world line got messed up again?

After thinking about it for a moment, I said,

"There's a novel I like in there."

"What novel? It's not 'Ways of Survival', is it?"

I didn't answer.

Han Sooyoung nodded her head, how she had interpreted my silence was unknown.

"He looks and speaks like that guy, but he's not that guy. But he likes the same novel as that guy... That's interesting."

In that short moment, Han Sooyoung seemed to have finished her insight into the human being called 'me'.

Maybe I had overlooked her. If you think about it, she was the one who knew who Kim Dokja was and where he came from just by reading the 'Sacred Three Questions'.

As I slowly raised my head in a cool mood, Han Sooyoung smiled and opened her mouth.

"You, are you Kim Dokja's [Avatar]?"

879 Episode 48 Avatar (2)

---

[Avatar.]

The moment I heard that, my head throbbed.

「"Are you Han Sooyoung's 'avatar'?"」

If I think about it, Kim Dokja, who visited the 1,863rd Round, had also asked Han Sooyoung in front of me a similar question.

Then, her question now might be revenge for that day that had been going on for so long.

I took a deep breath and opened my mouth.

"I."

I tried to say.

I'm not an [Avatar]. Just like you, I'm not just a proxy for 'Kim Dokja'.

But Han Sooyoung nodded without even listening to my answer and began to tell me this story.

"That guy, he's already seen ■■, right?"

"..."

"Well, the flow of time is different in each worldline. It wouldn't be strange if he was faster than me."

What on earth was she thinking when she saw me? Han Sooyoung's face brightened and darkened repeatedly.

"So, why did you come here? Did that guy send you? Was he worried about me?"

"Uh..."

"Or did you come because you were curious about the story of this worldline? Were you curious about the world I created?"

"That's it."

"How's that guy doing? Is he healthy? Does he still make people mad whenever he gets a chance?"

I couldn't bring myself to say that as I watched Han Sooyoung giggle. I couldn't say that the Kim Dokja you remember no longer exists in this universe.

I closed my eyes tightly and answered like this.

"Yes."

But it seems that I was mistaken about Han Sooyoung.

[Someone is activating 'Lie Detection'.]

My heart went cold. I slowly opened my eyes, and Han Sooyoung was glaring at me with a cold expression.

Her small hand grabbed my collar.

"Hey."

A tremendous amount of blue was flowing out around her. I could sense once again what kind of being Han Sooyoung was in front of me.

She was the only one who had fallen into this Round and reached the end of the world. The 'Director of the False Last Act' who had created an ending that no one could have imagined.

"Where is that kid now?"

"…"

"Tell me."

Cold sweat was dripping down my back, but I couldn’t answer.

"No."

"Why?"

Because depending on what I said right now, the future of the entire universe could change.

「Han Sooyoung in front of me was going to be 'tIs123'.」

She was the one who had perfected 'Ways of Survival' for the young Kim Dokja.

「She doesn’t yet know that she is destined to be tls123.」

If I had given her false information and the original price had been wrong—if the origin of the modern universe had been distorted—I wasn’t confident that I could take responsibility for it. Of course, no matter what I said, the already-established 'worldline of the beginning' might not change.

But just in case.

"Really? You won't tell me."

Han Sooyoung's eyes turned fierce.

[Character, 'Han Sooyoung', has activated 'Eyes of Truth'!]

「Eyes of Truth became even more powerful than when she met Kim Dokja. Her skill, which had synergy with 'Predictive Plagiarism', began to dissect me.」

"Do you think I can't read it because you're hiding it?"

An alarm bell rang in my head. I realized it instinctively. When that skill starts, all of my stories will be read. Then Han Sooyoung will know everything that happened in the 41st Round.

「That's dif fi cult」

The next moment, I felt something like the binding of a thick book covering my consciousness.

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', activates!]

Then, a bright spark covered the suite room.

---

To conclude, Han Sooyoung was unable to read the 'story' inside me. This time, it was thanks to the [Fourth Wall].

"Damn, this is the first time I've seen such a vicious guy since that guy. Should I really torture him?"

Lee Seolhwa asked at Han Sooyoung's sharp words.

"Isn't that guy the same guy from back then?"

"That's a pretty philosophical problem."

Han Sooyoung sighed several times and put me back on the bed where I was hanging in the air.

"Hey. Got it. I won't look. Okay?"

Han Sooyoung gave up faster than I thought. Of course, I knew that it wasn't a real give-up. Han Sooyoung is definitely not a soft person. She must have been trying to get information out of me by pretending to persuade me. Han Sooyoung pulled a chair over and turned it upside down toward me, then asked with her arm resting on the back of the chair.

"I really won't see it. I'll make an [Oath of Existence]."

"You can avoid that with [Avatar], right?"

"Oh, you know that too?"

Han Sooyoung took out her notebook as if she had just remembered something and started writing it down. Somehow, the more she talked, the more I felt like she was stopping me, so I shut my mouth again.

"Are you going to keep your mouth shut?"

"..."

"You must have a purpose for coming to this worldline, too. If you stay silent like that, nothing will change, right?"

Han Sooyoung's urging made me come to my senses once again.

The purpose of coming to this worldline.

That's right. Right now, I wasn't going to just sit around and do nothing.

"How did you end up here? You can tell me that much, right?"

"If you turn off [Lie Detection], I'll tell you."

"Anyway, who would say that bastard's avatar?"

After hearing the message that [Lie Detection] was ending in my head, I slowly opened my mouth.

"I was trying to prevent the destruction of my worldline, and somehow I ended up here."

"The worldline is destroyed?"

I couldn't hide all the information anyway. Since I came to this worldline, I also needed her help.

"To be exact, it almost happened. I managed to stop it somehow."

Han Sooyoung muttered after thinking about something for a moment.

"Is that why our Apocalypse Dragon was talking in his sleep?"

"Sleeping?"

"That's right. So you were trying to prevent destruction and fell into this worldline?"

"Yes."

"That's strange."

"What are you talking about?"

"There's no way that the worldline that bastard is in would suddenly be destroyed. And he's telling his avatar to do this because the worldline is destroyed? The 'Demon King of Salvation' himself?"

For a moment, a premonition flashed through my mind.

A strange smile lingered on Han Sooyoung's lips.

"You're not from the 3rd Round, are you?"

What kind of leap of thought would be required to make such a prediction?

I nodded, hiding my admiration.

"Yes, I'm not from the 3rd Round."

"Then?"

Since I've been caught this far anyway, wouldn't it be okay to at least tell her where I came from?

After making up my mind, I opened my mouth.

"I'm from the 41st Round."

"The 41st Round?"

"I can't tell you more details even if you ask me."

"Why can't I know? Is there any information I shouldn't know?"

Looking at her snickering face, I repeated my resolve several times.

I need to come to my senses.

The opponent is Han Sooyoung, who has [Predictive Plagiarism].

If I spill strange information, I'll ruin the whole story.

"There's a lot."

"I'm even more curious when you say it like that."

"Even if you're curious, I can't tell you."

"As far as I know, there were two '41st Round' in 'Ways of Survival'."

Even if it was Han Sooyoung, I didn't know that she could recall that much just by hearing the words '41st Round.'

"Once, the 41st Round before Shin Yoosung returned to the past. And once, the 41st Round after Shin Yoosung returned to the past."

I deliberately kept my mouth shut.

But Han Sooyoung seemed to have read something from my silence.

"Judging by your expression, you're from the former. Right?"

How could Kim Dokja dare to have a 'Sacred Three Questions' with Han Sooyoung, who would bite at the end of every word and chase after the truth?

I nodded and answered.

"Yes. That's right.

"Wow, you really came from the worst Round. There, Yoo Joonghyuk is a total idiot, right?"

"That's right."

As expected, Han Sooyoung also seems to know about the infamy of the 41st Round.

"Actually, it's not that much of a idiot."

"Huh? Are you protecting Yoo Joonghyuk right now?"

"Not to the point of protecting him, though."

"Anyway, you're similar to him in that you talk back to me every time."

Han Sooyoung looked quite pleased for someone who said that.

"Anyway, then you're pretty lucky, aren't you?"

"Yes?"

"You escaped that horrible '41st Round'. You seem to have enough memories to survive even if you're separated from your main body."

I'd never thought of it that way.

"What do you say, just stay here. Living in another world would be a pretty refreshing experience, right? Anyway, if you go back, you'll be integrated into the main body."

The person who said that was the one who actually did it herself.

Han Sooyoung in the 1,863rd Round was an avatar who had received half of the memories from the main body. No, at the point where half had been transferred, it would be difficult to determine which side was the 'main body'... Anyway.

"So, who did you make a contract with to come over?"

"A contract?"

"If you had attempted to move between worldlines, wouldn't you have made an 'Outer World Convent'?"

As I blankly looked up at her face, something suddenly occurred to me.

「<Star Stream>'s 'worldline movement requires special probability.」

Originally, in the <Star Stream>, 'worldline movement' was only possible under special conditions.

For example, based on the main story, there were three ways to 'move worldlines'.

One was to use Yoo Joonghyuk's 'regression'.

In the main story, <Kim Dokja Company> realized that the essence of 'regression' was to create a 'new worldline' and there was a time when they practiced 'collective regression'.

The second was when they attempted to move to another worldline using the 'Last Ark' used by the saints.

As expected, this was the method used by <Kim Dokja Company> and Yoo Joonghyuk in the main story, and they boarded this ark and returned to their original round in the 1,865th round.

The last, third was to make an 'Otherworldly Covenant'.

The Han Sooyoung in front of me was the case of crossing the 'worldline' using that third method. The Outer God she contracted with was 'Secretive Plotter'.

"Huh? Who did you contract with?"

In her eyes, I had neither [regression] nor come over on the ark. So it was natural to assume that I had crossed the 'worldline' through the third method.

"That's... I..."

And that was exactly the problem.

「I did not make a 'Otherworldly Covenant' with anyone.」

I had simply come over here through the door of the 'Time Fault'.

The moment I realized that fact, I felt a chill.

I heard this.

「Is that even possible?」

Even that great Secretive Plotter had to expend a considerable amount of probability to help Kim Dokja move through worldlines. But now I—

Tsutsutsutsut.

Sparks lightly flew around my incarnation body. My breathing became faster little by little. Even though the [Fourth Wall] was clearly activated, it was difficult to move my incarnation body. It was clear why.

Right now, the 1863rd Round was unable to accept my existence.

[The <Star Stream>'s probability is moving!]

[The Management Bureau has noticed your presence!]

[The Dokkaebis of the Management Bureau are questioning your existence!]

A sign of the aftermath slowly creeping in.

I opened my mouth urgently as I listened to the ominous message blaring in real time.

"I, absolutely must survive. I must return alive."

"What?"

How did I get here, I couldn’t die because of the probability.

"Please help me."

If it was Han Sooyoung, there must be a way. If she had [Predictive Plagiarism], there must be a way to overcome my current situation. But.

"Why me?"

"Huh?"

Han Sooyoung asked back in a cold voice.

"You, you didn’t come over to see me?"

The moment I heard that, I realized the identity of the strange sense of discomfort I had felt throughout the conversation.

"That bastard, he forgot all about this side, didn’t he?"

That’s right.

Perhaps <Kim Dokja Company> wasn’t the only one to lose 'Dokja'.

After Kim Dokja left, Han Sooyoung in the 1,863rd Round.

"Why should I help the avatar of a guy who doesn’t even care about what happens to this world?"

She was completely upset.

880 Episode 48 Avatar (3)

"No, wait a minute."

It was unfair. Because it wasn’t me who left Han Sooyoung alone for the 1,863rd Round.

"I’m not an [Avatar]."

"Then what?"

"I—"

I hesitated. I couldn’t think of anything I could say to persuade her.

For a moment, a brief temptation occurred to me.

What if I just used [Incite]? If I used [Incite] to persuade Han Sooyoung to do my bidding.

"I can hear your head spinning."

The moment I heard Han Sooyoung’s laughter, I realized. The opponent in front of me wasn’t someone who could do that.

There was nothing I could do. From here on out, I had no choice but to play fair.

"Just as you're not the avatar of 'Han Sooyoung in the 3rd Round', I'm not just Kim Dokja's avatar."

Han Sooyoung smiled as if she found it interesting.

"Really? How much of your memories did you inherit?"

"I barely received any memories."

"Yeah. They call someone like you [Avatar]. But isn't that right?"

"Does the amount of memories you have matter? It's not the amount of memories that proves who I am."

"Is that so?"

Han Sooyoung nodded and wrote something in her notebook.

I added while looking at Han Sooyoung like that.

"Just because Han Sooyoung did something wrong in the 3rd Round, you wouldn't blame her for it. It's a bit unfair to blame me for Kim Dokja's mistakes."

"Are you trying to say that you're not that Kim Dokja?"

"Yes. I'm not the Kim Dokja you know."

"Then there's no reason for me to help you? Because you're not that Kim Dokja."

Is that really the case? Damn it. I quickly changed my subject.

"But there's something called joint responsibility in this world. Since I'm also using Kim Dokja's name, I think I'm qualified to atone for his mistakes."

Kim Dokja's joint responsibility.

It feels a bit unfair. If there is a responsibility for the Kim Dokja Solidarity, shouldn't there also be benefits for the Kim Dokja Solidarity? But I've never received anything like that.

Of course, I couldn't complain to Han Sooyoung right in front of me.

Han Sooyoung stared at me blankly and chuckled.

"How are you going to atone for this?"

I cleared my throat slightly and began to speak.

"It’s all my fault. I’m sorry for leaving you alone. But I didn’t do it on purpose either."

Han Sooyoung’s eyes shook subtly. I didn’t miss that moment and continued to speak.

"I was curious about your story too. I was curious about how you were doing, what you were thinking, and if something big had happened in your world."

"…"

"I didn’t intentionally avoid visiting. I was just scared."

"Are you scared?"

"Sometimes, when it’s a story you really like, it’s scary to know the ending."

Han Sooyoung quietly watched me like that, then glanced at Lee Seolhwa who was peeking at her from behind and smiled bitterly.

"If someone saw me, they'd think I was doing this because I wanted an apology."

"You weren't?"

"What would I do accepting something like that?"

"Then why are you upset?"

Was that too direct? Han Sooyoung's expression cracked for a moment.

I didn't miss the opportunity and asked.

"Do you by any chance like Kim Dokja?"

"What?"

"If that's not the case, there's no reason for you to be so upset. Weren't you and Kim Dokja just in a business relationship? You gave and took. You broke up cleanly."

"…"

"Or did you actually want to go back to the 3rd Round with Kim Dokja?"

Han Sooyoung belatedly asked with narrowed eyes.

"You're talking about having a pierced mouth, but have you forgotten who's holding the knife?"

"I know. You're holding on to it. And very tightly. So please spare me."

"Oh my."

"If you spare me, I'll help you meet Kim Dokja."

Han Sooyoung paused for a moment and asked back.

"Why do you think I want to meet that kid?"

"If not, I'm sorry, but that kid would really want to see you."

Han Sooyoung's expression once again showed embarrassment.

"If you keep talking nonsense…"

"Han Sooyoung."

Tsk tsk, sparks colored my incarnation body along with the sound. I decided to settle the matter before the aftermath grew any bigger.

"Kim Dokja is in danger. Only you can save him."

Kim Dokja is in danger. I clearly saw the blue that spread across Han Sooyoung's expression at those words. I was a little envious, and a little sorry.

"Can you take responsibility for that statement?"

"Yes, I can take responsibility."

I knew how cowardly my words were.

Even if I didn't do anything, she would meet Kim Dokja again. More precisely, the less I did anything, the higher the probability that she would meet Kim Dokja again.

She was destined to become tIs123, and she would definitely meet the young Kim Dokja.

Of course, it wouldn't be the kind of reunion she wanted.

"How is Kim Dokja in danger?"

"That is…"

"If I save you, you will tell me?"

When I nodded, Han Sooyoung glared at me with a disapproving look and asked.

"I need to know who you made a contract with to come here."

"Will you help me?"

"I will listen to your story."

Fortunately, the atmosphere was not bad. I swallowed a light sigh and said.

"I didn’t make a contract with anyone."

"What?"

"I didn’t make an 'Otherworldly Covenant' to come here."

There is a possibility that an 'Otherworldly Covenant' that I don't know about has been activated.

Strictly speaking, I came here through the 'Fear Realm', and the owner of the 'Fear Realm' was the 'King of Fear'.

The 'King of Fear' held numerous Outer Gods, so it would be safe to say that the 'Fear Realm' itself was an 'Otherworldly Covenant'.

However, the 'Fear Realm' has now been destroyed, and the 'King of Fear' has lost his power.

In other words, the 'contract' that sent me here has lost its effect. However, Han Sooyoung's expression upon hearing my words was strange.

"Wait a minute, then you—"

At that moment, thunder rang out from outside the window. Han Sooyoung's eyebrows furrowed and Lee Seolhwa opened the curtains by the window almost at the same time.

"Captain, something is strange!"

Lee Hyunsung's shout from outside. There was a huge portal swirling in the sky outside the window.

I and Han Sooyoung knew what it was.

「Great Hall.」

A passageway to another world was about to open in the vast expanse of sky. A tremendous feast could be felt beyond the hall.

Han Sooyoung glared at me with a frown.

"What on earth have you done?"

I looked up at the sky in confusion.

「Even if it was the 1,863rd Round, there's no way a 'God of Another World' would suddenly descend in the clear sky.」

The scale of probability eventually shifted toward offsetting its weight.

If a God of Another World had appeared, it meant that there was a 'probability' that he would descend in this world line.

My heart sank.

「It's because of me.」

Up until now, my existence had been protected by a 'scenario'.

[The Management Bureau does not accept your existence.]

However, there was no scenario assigned to me in this worldline. In other words, the current me was an existence that was not needed in the 'scenario'.

Tsutsutsutsut!

The spark that was immediately felt in my incarnation body was the proof.

This worldline does not consider my existence 'probable'. Therefore, in order to protect the probability of this world, my existence must disappear.

【Ooooooooooo.】

Therefore, the guy coming over from the 'Great Hall' right now was a kind of grim reaper that came to erase me from this world.

"The Final Scenario is right around the corner, and because of this kid, the Earth could be destroyed."

I nodded calmly and said.

"I'm really sorry. So please help me, Han Sooyoung."

Han Sooyoung grumbled as if she was dumbfounded by my words.

"This is really shameless."

"You don't have a choice anyway. If you don't help me, your worldline will be destroyed."

"What do you want me to help you with?"

"Please help me return to the 41st Round."

As I said before, there are several conditions needed to 'move worldlines' in this world. However, I wasn't Yoo Joonghyuk, and I didn't have an 'ark' to cross worldlines like the Constellations.

So now, the only thing left for me is the last method.

"I will make an Otherworldly Covenant."

"Will that work now?"

"Why not?"

"With that kind of thing targeting you right now, do you think there would be an Outer God that wants to make an 'Otherwordly Covenant' with you?"

Han Sooyoung was right.

The otherworldly deity that is making an 'Otherworldly Covenant' right now will definitely clash with the Outer God targeting me from beyond the 'Great Hall'.

In other words, only a being stronger than the 'Outer God' targeting me would accept my offer.

"If the guy over there is stronger than the 'Old Being', then there is a possibility that he is at the level of the 'Great Old Being'."

Great Old Being.

I kept my mouth shut at that expression that I had finally heard. Han Sooyoung added, how she had taken my silence unknown.

"If the guy over there is at the 'Great Old Being' level, then there will be no Outer God that will help you."

I knew it too.

The Outer God that reaches the 'Great Old Being' level is a kind of 'Mythical Constellation' among the Outer Gods.

Still, I shook my head.

"No, it's not like there's no one."

Even if the being that covets me from beyond is a 'Great Old Being', it's not like there's no Outer God that can stand against it.

"You, really."

Han Sooyoung's expression as she looked at me was strangely hardened. Perhaps she had realized it too.

"The being that brought you to this 'worldline'."

The only being that can stand against a 'Great Old Being' is a 'Great Old Being'.

I took a deep breath and opened my mouth.

"Han Sooyoung, please call 'Secretive Plotter'."

881 Episode 48 Avatar (4)

Secretive Plotter.

I had no intention of receiving his help until now. It was questionable whether he would respond in the first place, and I was afraid that my call would cause even greater chaos in the universe.

However, that was when I was in the 41st Round.

This was the 1,863rd world line, where there was already a 'contractor' who was clearly connected to him.

"Are you in your right mind? Do you even know what you're talking about?"

"This is an extremely corrupted god."

'Secretive Plotter' was the strongest deity I knew. One of the 'Great Old Beings', and the King of the Outer Gods called 'Great Plotter'.

If I could only receive his help, if I could somehow make a deal with him, then it would be possible to resolve this situation.

【Gugugugugugu.】

A loud noise rang out in the sky once again. The Outer God who was trying to interfere with the 1,863rd world line was moving. The scenario was nearing its end, and the 'Void Curtain' covering the Earth would have become extremely thin due to the possibility of my appearance. If things continued like this, it was only a matter of time before the 1,863rd Round would collapse.

Han Sooyoung, who was frowning, shook her head and said.

"No. I can't call that guy. My contract with that guy is already over."

The contract is over?

"Didn't you hear anything from the main body? The moment Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,863rd Round made that choice, my contract ended as well."

I thought deeply about the contents of the main story.

「"I made a contract with 'Secretive Plotter' for the completion of 'a certain world'. If he gave me what I wanted, I agreed to help him complete the world he wanted."」

In the main story, Han Sooyoung of the 1,863rd Round clearly said that. The 'world' she spoke of must have been this 1,863rd world.

Separated from the 'main body', she wanted to have her own world, and Secretive Plotter provided this 1,863rd Round's world as her stage, and in return, Han Sooyoung promised 'Yoo Joonghyuk's death'.

"Yoo Joonghyuk chose both regression and death."

And thanks to Kim Dokja's great performance, Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,863rd Round split into two, one choosing 'death' and the other choosing 'regression'.

Because Yoo Joonghyuk succeeded in 'death', the 'Otherworldly Covenant' that Han Sooyoung made was also completed.

"I can't contact the Secretive Plotter anymore. I don't even know where he is or what he's doing."

"Have you ever called him?"

"I've asked for help a few times. But that was already two years ago. Now, the line that could contact him has disappeared."

My heart sank.

In the sky, a tremendous Outer God comparable to a 'Great Old One' was about to come over, and Secretive Plotter couldn't be contacted.

"Even if I could contact him, it's a problem. Have you forgotten that every 'Otherworldly Covenant' comes with a price?"

"I can handle whatever the price is."

"Even if you can handle it, it's difficult for us. We don't know what the 'Gods of the Other World' want."

Han Sooyoung's words were understandable.

She was now facing the 'Final Scenario', and she had probably prepared all the plans through [Predictive Plagiarism].

But if a guy suddenly fell from the sky and called the 'Gods of the Other World', it was bound to be difficult.

But this side couldn't just give in.

"If I want to return to my original worldline, there's no other way than to get help from the 'Gods of the Other World'. If you delay any longer, your world will truly be destroyed."

Anyway, if I couldn’t return to my original worldline, this world was over.

However, Han Sooyoung seemed to have a different opinion than me.

"Well. There’s an easier way than you going home."

I didn’t ask what it was. I knew it without asking.

Lee Seolhwa, whose face turned pale, grabbed Han Sooyoung’s shoulder.

"Sooyoung-ssi. No."

"Let go."

"He’s innocent."

"He’s already committed a serious crime by bringing that kind of thing into our world."

A cold murderous aura rose from Han Sooyoung's body as she looked at me.

"And this kid, no matter how I look at him, he looks a little dirty. He suddenly fell from the sky and threatened me with Kim Dokja, saying that he was in danger."

"…"

"It's also strange that he came from the 41st Round. Why did he come from the 41st Round and not the 3rd Round? Did Kim Dokja split like slime and scatter all over the universe?"

She was diagnosing the situation so accurately that I was speechless for a moment.

Han Sooyoung spoke in a cold voice as if to cut off the remaining chain of emotions.

"It's better to just kill him here. That 'God of the Other World' came after this guy anyway."

"Just wait. If you kill me—"

"Why, do you have any memories that shouldn't be lost? Don't worry."

Han Sooyoung smiled brightly and said.

"I'll retrieve your memories and return them to you."

I never thought that Han Sooyoung of the 1,863rd Round would be this fast.

She had activated [Predictive Plagiarism] and made her judgment. Eliminating me here was the safest way to protect the world she had protected.

"Even if you have Kim Dokja's memories, you can't trade it for the destruction of this worldline?"

Listening to her calm and composed voice, I felt like I understood her feelings a little.

"Is that so?"

When I write, such moments come. No matter how much I cherish the character, there are times when I have to sacrifice them in order to protect the world's probability—or to keep the entire story from being ruined.

Perhaps Han Sooyoung decided to take responsibility for it by killing me.

I smiled as I watched the [Black Flame] burning in her right hand.

"I respect your choice."

"Yes, thank you."

Han Sooyoung’s hand rose into the air like a guillotine blade.

The moment her hand, which must have written and erased countless sentences, was about to strike my neck, I opened my mouth.

"But do you know that?"

I certainly understood her as a writer. However, I was not a writer in this world right now, but a 'living figure'. So,

"The 'Oldest Dream' is not a 'giant baby'."

I should struggle to survive as a character.

Han Sooyoung paused and glared at me. Looking at her hand that had stopped exactly three feet in front of me, I calmly continued speaking.

"You must have guessed it too. What kind of structure does this world have? How are the worldlines connected? Why do the stories always flow to 'empty places'?"

"You seem to be trying to pique my interest by telling a plausible story—"

"That's right. So while I'm at it, let me say one more thing."

One day, the King said,

"Everything is already written, and it's being written at the same time."

If all of this is inevitable, and it's already written and being written at the same time—

"Han Sooyoung, do you think it's just a coincidence that I came to this world?"

A puzzle was fitting together in my head.

1,863rd Round, Han Sooyoung's future and how she saw the 'end of the world'. And even her clearing process that wasn't written in the main story.

"If you kill me, you'll never see the end of this world."

The moment I looked into Han Sooyoung's eyes, I was certain. Right now, she was thinking the same thing as me.

"How... do you know that?"

If she has [Predictive Plagiarism], if she will use 'Ways of Survival' in the future, she must have already guessed.

How this world is structured, and what is the 'wall' she will encounter at the end of this 1,863rd Round.

What she needs to overcome that 'wall'.

"In order to see the end of the world, you need the 'Fragments of the Final Wall'."

"If it's a fragment, I have it too."

"But you couldn't get the 'Final Fragment'."

Han Sooyoung's eyes widened.

"Because that 'Fragment' doesn't exist in this worldline."

The last fragment of the Final Wall, only Kim Dokja has it.

Because this world exists to save Kim Dokja, who is the 'Oldest Dream'.

That's why Yoo Joonghyuk of the 'Ways of Survival' couldn't reach his own fire even after reaching ■■ of the world.

"I can help you get over the 'Final Wall'."

Han Sooyoung’s lips parted.

Even without using [Lie Detection], the current Han Sooyoung would have known that what I was saying was true.

A loud noise rose from the sky again.

Han Sooyoung opened her mouth.

"I can’t call upon a deity of the other world."

My mouth watered without me knowing. Could it be that you're planning to kill me even after saying this?

Thankfully, I didn't feel the same murderous intent from Han Sooyoung as before.

"I'm saying that there's no need to use such dangerous methods to send you back to your original worldline."

"That means—"

"No matter how you go, you can just go to Seoul, right?"

However, there's no way for the current me to cross through worldlines without making the 'Otherworldly Covenant'.

No, if there was a way…

"Is there still an 'ark' left in this worldline?"

Han Sooyoung pointed outside the window. Higher than where the seal of the Apocalypse Dragon was located. At the edge of that sky, the stern of a ship was visible, sticking out as if it was stuck in the sky.

"That is..."

"It's the ark that the guys who were trying to escape to another world were on. If we retrieve it and fix it, it should be usable."

"Ah."

"Originally, I was just going to blow it up. That 'ark' was blocking the gateway to the Final Scenario."

In other words, Han Sooyoung was going to retrieve that ark for me.

However, there was one problem that both Han Sooyoung and I knew about.

Kudduddud!

I heard the sky splitting and the sound of the curtain tearing. The color of the sky seemed to change, and then the 'True Word Defense System' that was protecting the headquarters area began to collapse.

Finally, the Outer God beyond the curtain was coming to this worldline.

"Han Sooyoung."

I called her urgently.

I couldn't retrieve the ark right away. If I don’t stop that Outer God right now, this worldline will be over before I can do anything right.

"He’s the one who came after me, so I’ll buy some time."

"…"

"Even if he catches me, I won’t die right away. If you retrieve the ark while I’m buying some time—"

"What are you talking nonsense?"

"Huh?"

The moment I saw her expression, I realized something.

This worldline was in its 1,863rd Round. And Han Sooyoung was the 'Constellation' facing the 'Final Scenario' of this world.

[The Constellation, 'Director of the False Ending', is looking at you.]

Only then did I realize her status, the power of the tales she had built up.

I could feel it.

"Me and my colleagues didn't just go through the scenarios carelessly."

A dazzling light flowed out from Han Sooyoung's entire body.

"It was originally meant to be used to blow up the ark, but there's nothing I can do about it."

The story she had endured and lived through was talking about it.

[The Giant Tale, 'Han Sooyoung Corporation', begins its storytelling.]

The story soared into the air, leaving behind a beautiful tail.

However, no matter what kind of history she had accumulated, the opponent was an Outer God that surpassed the 'Old Being'.

Even if the Myth-grade Constellations joined forces, it was a difficult enemy to deal with.

No matter what this worldline used, it was impossible to defeat that 'Outer God'.

"Great Nebula Destruction Weapon unleashed."

Great Nebula Destruction Weapon?

I hurriedly looked up at the direction Han Sooyoung's story had been sucked into.

「There was one. Just one. A being that can stand against that 'Otherworldly God'.」

But I thought that was impossible. No matter how strong Han Sooyoung was, there was no way she could control such a disaster.

「But Han Sooyoung did it.」

The 'Sealing Orb of the Apocalypse' that had absorbed Han Sooyoung's tale began to emit blue light. Watching that sight, I finally realized how Han Sooyoung had defeated those terrifying Constellations and Demon Kings and reached the end of this world.

"Adjust the Apocalypse's sleep phase to REM-3."

She had succeeded in turning that 'Final Dragon of the Apocalypse' into a weapon.

The Apocalypse, whose eyes were still closed, raised its head toward the sky as if it was annoyed. And then in the next moment.

"Get rid of it."

The Apocalypse's breath breathed ecstatic fire toward the atmosphere where the Otherworldly God was coming from.

882 Episode 48 Avatar (5)

---

If you think about it, there’s a reason why dragons are so strong in the <Star Stream>. They’ve been objects of fear and awe since time immemorial.

Everyone has heard stories of wizards or knights fighting dragons at least once.

I was like that too. I loved dragons so much that I even read the pages of the 「Encyclopedia of Fantasy Beasts」 that had 'dragons' in them over and over again.

I imagined what it would be like if I could tame a dragon—or if I could fly on one.

But while I was just imagining, there was someone who made that imagination a reality.

Kuooooooooo!

Along with the feeling of the air being compressed, the dragon’s breath, filled with splendid tales, pierced the sky.

「Breath of the Apocalypse.」

The original 'Last Dragon of the Apocalypse''s main skill was its 'tail wagging', but the Apocalypse didn’t always just wag its tail. Like any other dragon, the Apocalypse also uses its breath. Especially when dealing with a powerful 'single entity' like this.

【Ooooooooooooooo—!】

The breath went straight through the atmosphere and struck the Outer God beyond the curtain.

A long and painful cry was heard from beyond the curtain.

As expected, even an Outer God beyond the 'Old Being' level would not be able to handle the power of the Apocalypse Dragon.

The fiercely swirling 'Great Hall' was slowly closing.

I was dumbfounded by that unbelievable sight and just looked up at the sky.

Who would have thought?

That it would be possible to make that 'Final Dragon of the Apocalypse' into a weapon.

That's when I heard an angry voice from afar.

【Unauthorized... You will be punished.】

I came to my senses for a moment.

That's right. Even if it was the Final Scenario, there was no way such incredible power could be possible without a price.

In fact, a different pattern appeared in Han Sooyoung's eyes as she reached out toward the sky. It was a pattern I knew.

「Ring of Chaos.」

A similar pattern had appeared in the eyes of Jung Heewon, who had defeated the Demon Kings in the 'Seongma Daejeon'.

"Han Sooyoung?"

At that moment, I felt like I understood many things.

I understood why she had said she could not call 'Secretive Plotter' and why she had been reluctant to make a new covenant with a 'Divine Being of the Other World'.

She had already made a new 'Otherworldly Covenant'.

And with a 'Divine Being of the Other World' that was powerful enough to defeat that 'Old Being'.

Tsutsutsutsu.

At that moment, an ominous spark began to fly from her entire body.

"Han Sooyoung!"

The moment I suddenly stood up from my seat, sensing the ominousness, the scenery of the world stopped.

[Exclusive skill, '□□', is activated!]

The scenery was dyed colorless.

[Entering 'Snowfield'.]

[There is a lack of probability for 'Snowfield' to continue.]

['Snowfield' does not function smoothly in this area.]

['Snowfield' will end soon.]

If 'Snowfield' was activated regardless of my will, there is only one reason.

A decisive event in this 'worldline' is about to happen right before my eyes.

I immediately looked up at the sky and saw a pitch-black lightning bolt flowing out of the 'Great Hall' just before it closed.

It was clear who the lightning bolt was targeting. Han Sooyoung opened her eyes wide. I had no time to think or write a sentence.

['Snowfield' ends.]

I almost instinctively flew toward Han Sooyoung.

Following that, a massive torrent poured down from the sky, piercing through the outer wall of the base and exploding into the room. Darkness fell upon the world.

---

In the strange darkness, I could hear mutterings.

"This guy is that guy's avatar?"

"The stories said so."

"That's why he faints in a similar way."

…

"Get out of the way, I need to give him medicine."

"Medicine?"

"It's a new medicine made by stories."

"Oh, what is it? It's so luxurious.

"They say it tastes like lemon candy."

"Can I have one too?"

"Kim Namwoon, do you really want to lose?"

…

"This kid doesn't get up easily. Is his injury serious?"

"He got hit directly by the Chaos Wave."

"What's a direct hit? It must've just grazed."

"Even if it grazed, it's enough power to annihilate a mediocre Constellation."

"How did this guy endure that?"

"I don't know. Anyway, the Captain survived thanks to this ahjussi."

"Damn, I should have been next to the Captain!"

I tried to catch my breath and roll over several times. After about an hour or two, I gradually regained my senses.

[The story, 'One Who Rewrites Fate', continues its storytelling.]

[The exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', is activated.]

I slowly opened my eyes, and the first thing I saw was Lee Jihye's pale face.

"Oh, his eyes are open."

---

The one who supported me, who still couldn't move my hands and feet, and put me in the wheelchair was Kim Namwoon.

"Hey, just lie down."

Kim Namwoon put me in the wheelchair with a look that seemed to be annoyed, and he roughly fixed my hair.

"Good, now you look like a person."

I saw myself in the mirror with the same hair as Kim Namwoon. Kim Namwoon asked with a satisfied smile.

"Can you speak?"

I moved my neck and nodded. Although the base of my tongue was a bit numb, I was able to communicate.

What on earth happened?

The next thing that came to mind was the memory of the pitch-black lightning that broke through the outer wall of the building and flew in.

I instinctively looked out the window. The weather was surprisingly clear. I couldn’t even see the swirling 'Great Hall'.

Did the Outer God retreat?

Perhaps the lightning that was shot at us was the Outer God’s last struggle.

Then did Han Sooyoung succeed?

Kim Namwoon, who was watching me, waved his hand in front of my eyes and added.

"Are you crazy, sir? It’s been two days since you woke up. I’m in charge today, so if you need anything, just ask me."

"…"

"You took the medicine that Seolhwa-noona gave you, so you should be fully recovered by today at the latest."

At the last moment, I was struck by lightning from an outside source.

No matter how much I had immunity to the 'Divine Status of the Other World', I couldn't avoid being fatally injured if I was exposed to such a high-level being.

If it was a medicine that could fully recover me from such serious injuries in two days... then it must be the 'Life and Death Pill'.

"...Do you understand? So, until then, just be quiet."

A sharp but worried tone. I willingly bowed my head to show my respect.

"Thank you."

Kim Namwoon pretended to be surprised by my greeting, but soon laughed mischievously.

"Heh heh, how can you thank me for something like this?"

「What a polite ahjussi.」

I suddenly wondered why I could hear this kid's inner thoughts.

[Your understanding of the character, 'Kim Namwoon', increases.]

[The exclusive skill, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint', is activated.]

The skill was also activated on its own.

Why did this happen often after I collected a fair amount of 'Kim Dokja fragments'?

「Heh heh. It's been a long time since I've heard a thank you.」

I heard it unintentionally, but I felt a little sorry for him.

I wonder if no one in this world says thank you to Kim Namwoon.

Kim Namwoon pushed the wheelchair from behind and asked.

"I heard you're an avatar of that guy. Is that right?"

If you say 'that guy', you must mean 'Kim Dokja'.

I didn't have the confidence to explain the complicated situation to Kim Namwoon, so I just nodded.

"But you're so polite? That guy himself was a bit rude."

Come to think of it, Kim Namwoon was bullied quite a bit by Kim Dokja back then.

Kim Namwoon also kept twitching his lips as if he was recalling that memory.

While passing through the hallway in a short silence, I observed the exterior of the base seen through the window. Then I realized something and opened my mouth.

"Didn't you say that I fainted two days ago?"

"I did."

"Has the base already been restored?"

If I remember correctly, the Gwanghwamun area, including the base, was hit directly by the 'Divine Power of the Other World' and was half destroyed.

However, the scenery of Gwanghwamun seen from outside was surprisingly clean and organized.

"Of course. Our corporation's restoration system is truly the best in the <Star Stream>."

Kim Namwoon said proudly.

"Have you heard of Story Metal? We covered the outer walls of our base with it."

Story Metal.

I couldn't even guess how much astronomical coins it would take to invest to do something like that.

The restoration was still in its final stages, and I could see the incarnations attached to the wall by the window, checking the bonding of Story Metal.

Interestingly, their nationality did not seem to be Korean.

I suddenly thought of the incarnations of Zarathustra I had met in Las Vegas.

"Are they by any chance the craftsmen of 'Zarathustra'?"

"You have quite the eye for it? Yes. After Zarathustra was disbanded, those who had nowhere to go came under our care."

My heart sank for no reason.

I see. Anna Croft of the 1,863rd Round died.

When I thought about it, it was obvious. This was the Last Scenario. Most of the incarnations I know are probably not alive.

Suddenly, the face of Kim Anna-ssi of the 41st Round flashed through my mind.

"Okay, that's the restaurant. Let's eat breakfast first."

I hadn't been up for long, so I wasn't feeling very hungry, but it wouldn't have been polite to ignore the kindness of having brought me here.

I thought I could just eat quietly and leave, but Kim Namwoon, who was pushing the wheelchair, shouted loudly.

"Okay, everyone, get out of the way! His Majesty is coming!"

The people inside the restaurant all turned to look at me.

"Oh, that guy..."

"Is that him?"

There were murmurs from all around.

Kim Namwoon waved his hand around the restaurant, seeming pleased with the attention. Then he pushed my wheelchair to the edge of the wide table and sat down across from me.

"So, what do you want to eat?"

Kim Namwoon handed me the menu. After looking at it, I asked in a suspicious voice.

"Are these dishes really available?"

"Why? Are you surprised?"

Instead of answering, I looked at the food names on the menu once more.

> —Death Devil Tteokbokki (Level 0/Level 1/Level 2/Level 3 (for large intestine only))
>
> —Kimchi fried rice from the ruined lodge (adjustable spiciness)
>
> —Sundae soup from the valley of dawn (mild/spicy)
>

There were at least thirty menu items.

In a world where everything is ruined, how can we still eat this many different foods?

I thought about it for a moment and chose the one that seemed the safest.

"I'll take this."

> —Shy Man's Omelette Rice (optional: demi-glace/ketchup)

Kim Namwoon checked the menu I chose.

And then he muttered.

"Hmm, that's a choice like a handsome man."

I got a little angry, but tried not to show it. Kim Namwoon added with a chuckle.

"Just kidding. Actually, I sometimes eat it when I fight with Jihye."

The food came out quickly.

Kim Namwoon had sundae gukbap. I had omelet rice. After exchanging brief glances, we immediately took our spoons to our rice.

It was a proper meal for the first time in a while. Actually, I didn't expect much from the taste. After all, Yoo Joonghyuk is no longer in this world.

But.

"Huh."

I took a spoonful, then another. When I came to my senses, I had already taken five or six spoonfuls in an instant.

I can't say that my taste buds are sophisticated, but I've even tried Yoo Joonghyuk's cooking. At least I can tell the difference between delicious and tasteless food.

"It's delicious, right?"

I couldn't refute Kim Namwoon's words, which was frustrating.

"Of course. The chef here was brought from the Demon World."

Demon World. I understood many things belatedly. Was that why the names of the foods were all strange?

"Is it the 73rd Demon World? Anyway, it was in that area."

I also knew the chef's name.

「Revolutionary Knight, Marc Xavier.」

The bodyguard of the Demon World who had carried out the 'Revolutionary Scenario' with Kim Dokja.

When I raised my head, I saw Marc carrying plates from afar. As I watched his expression as he wiped away sweat with a bright face, I realized once again that this world was approaching its final destination.

A base made of Story Metal, talents gathered from various regions. And even a great nebula weapon using the 'Final Dragon of the Apocalypse'.

Even after Kim Dokja left, Han Sooyoung continued to work hard on the scenarios.

She had been desperately struggling to create a complete ending by utilizing every sentence remaining in this world. Perhaps, even though she knew that the world she had created would never be read, she did not give up on the ending of this world in order to keep her promise to just one person.

"Kim Dokja."

Someone poked my shoulder. When I turned around, Han Sooyoung was standing there. I looked up at her, and then suddenly realized something and asked back.

"What did you just say?"

Han Sooyoung looked down at me for a moment, then turned her head and said.

"If you're done eating, come with me. I have something to tell you."

883 Episode 48 Avatar (6)

---

When I was halfway done with the omelet rice, Kim Namwoon took me to the third floor of the base. I thought we were going to meet Han Sooyoung right away, but the place I arrived was the emergency room.

"You've worked hard, Namwoon-ah."

Lee Seolhwa, who was waiting in front of the emergency room, greeted me as she handed me the wheelchair.

Kim Namwoon bashfully frowned and patted my shoulder.

"Then let's meet later, sir."

After Kim Namwoon disappeared, Lee Seolhwa took me and stood in front of the mirror in the supplies room. She busily went around the room, put down a package full of cosmetics on the table, and started to fix my hair.

"What are you doing?"

"Makeup."

"Why all of a sudden?"

"Hmm, because the Captain told me to?"

I couldn't figure out Han Sooyoung's intentions at all.

Why did you make me do that? Do I look so ugly? Or did the 'Ugliest King' effect activate while I was getting the Kim Dokja fragments?

I stared blankly at my face reflected in the mirror. The face in the mirror that I hadn't seen in a long time felt unfamiliar.

Since I had acquired a large quantity of Kim Dokja, my face had become much closer to Kim Dokja than Cheon Inho.

Lee Seolhwa, who had been observing my expression, opened her mouth.

"You look a lot like him."

"Because I'm an avatar."

Without realizing it, A self-deprecating remark. However, Lee Seolhwa tilted her head and smiled as if she had not read my feelings at all.

"Even avatars change their impressions slightly depending on what kind of memories they receive."

It was the first time I heard that story.

Well, Han Sooyoung of the 1,863rd Round was more skilled at using [Avatars] than anyone else.

The colleagues who spent time with her might be able to discern the subtle differences.

"What kind of 'avatar' do I look like?"

"Well..."

She added while cutting my bangs that had grown out a lot.

"I can see that you are someone who neglects self-care."

Self-care.

I smiled bitterly for no reason. I had forgotten for quite some time that such a combination of words was possible.

"Isn't that a luxury in this world?"

"The Captain said that at first too. Until Namwoon went without washing for over two months."

I suddenly remembered that everyone I met after entering the base had clean faces.

"The Captain said that no matter how ruined the world is, we sometimes need to maintain a luxurious lifestyle if we want to exist as humans."

"..."

"Well, it sounds like she just said that for Namwoon to wash."

Lee Seolhwa hummed as she took care of my hair. She cut off my messy hair and trimmed my eyebrows.

"You're good with your hands."

"My hobby is touching up children's hair."

I never thought Lee Seolhwa would have such a hobby.

So Kim Namwoon and Lee Jihye's hair were all Lee Seolhwa's creations.

"When I was young, I wanted to work in the beauty industry."

"Why didn't you?"

"Well, it's an obvious reason. My parents were against it."

The general picture was drawn.

I forgot which round it was, but I remembered reading that Lee Seolhwa graduated from medical school.

"What about Dokja-ssi?"

"Yes?"

"What did Dokja-ssi do before the scenario started?"

"Oh, I was... a writer."

"You're just like our Captain."

I smiled bitterly. Can I say that I'm 'just like' Han Sooyoung?

The styling was finished with the sound of the hair dryer ringing in my ears.

"Okay, done!"

Lee Seolhwa looked into the mirror with a satisfied smile.

"Look, it's much better than before, right?"

It's definitely Kim Dokja's face, but it's subtly different from before. It felt like my impression had come alive.

Lee Seolhwa looked at my face carefully and added with a smile.

"Looking at it like this, it looks like a different person."

I also looked at my face quietly and nodded.

"Thank you."

"Then shall we move?"

Lee Seolhwa personally pushed the wheelchair and guided me to another floor. I thought I would head to the penthouse office, but unexpectedly, I arrived at a large lobby on the 4th floor of the base.

"I haven't been here many times either. The Captain seems to be in a good mood."

As Lee Seolhwa muttered as if she was jealous, the guard waiting at the lobby entrance let me in.

[The 'Soundwave Blocking' skill is activated in the area.]

[The 'Interference Screen' skill is activated in the area.]

…

After passing through the strict security system and narrow entrance, a small living room appeared. The living room, which had a more simple feel than the penthouse office, had a sense of life everywhere.

I realized something for a moment.

This was Han Sooyoung's 'real home.'

The sound of boiling water coming from somewhere, a smell that made my mouth water even though I had just eaten.

Han Sooyoung was boiling ramen in the makeshift kitchen.

"Oh, you're here?"

She must have been reading a book until then, because there was a book with a folded spine on the kitchen table.

『Recorders and Old Thoughts』.

It was a book I had never seen before.

"Do you live here?"

"Yeah."

"What about the penthouse?"

"I can't sleep in a place that's too big."

"There's a chef downstairs, so why ramen?"

Instant ramen.

It was amazing that something like that still existed in this world.

Is it sold at the 'Dokkaebi Bag'?

"If you're going to eat it too, I'll boil two."

"Then... Let's just taste it."

"What about eggs?"

"I tend to put them in."

"What about green onions?"

"It would be nice if there were some."

"What about kimchi?"

"Is there something like that?"

As I heard the sound of eggs breaking, I felt as if I had gone back to before the scenarios had started.

If the scenarios hadn’t started, if Han Sooyoung and I had happened to meet in the same worldline… what would we have talked about?

"Your hair looks good together."

"Seolhwa-ssi touched it."

"You looked happy with Lee Seolhwa."

"Were you watching?"

Han Sooyoung didn’t answer and put kimchi on a small piece of paper and handed it over. I picked up a piece with my chopsticks and tried it. It was definitely the kimchi I knew.

"How are you feeling?"

"I’ve recovered a lot."

I was slowly regaining sensation in my lower body. I thought I could get up if I pushed myself a little harder.

Soon, a bowl of well-cooked ramen was placed in front of me. I swallowed without realizing it. Han Sooyoung said, perhaps sensing my state of mind.

"Eat."

I picked up a chopstick without hesitation. The moment I filled my mouth with the moderately chewy noodles, an ecstatic sensation captured the tip of my tongue.

How long has it been since I ate ramen?

I don't know if I can say this, but it was as moving as the first time I ate Yoo Joonghyuk's cooking.

They say that the taste you know is the scariest.

"Is it delicious?"

"It is delicious."

We ate ramen in a quiet silence.

"Do you eat ramen every day?"

"Not every day, but maybe once every two days?"

"It's not good for your health."

"You're saying the same thing as Lee Hyunsung."

Han Sooyoung laughed as she said that.

It was the first time I saw her laugh so clearly, so I blankly stared at her for a moment before going back to eating the ramen.

"There's something I need to apologize for."

"An apology?"

"When you fell asleep, in your incarnation, I saw your stories."

Han Sooyoung handed me water as I coughed.

"I didn't try to see it on purpose. Really."

Han Sooyoung's words must be true.

I was hit by the attack of the 'Divine Being of the Other World' and collapsed, so it wouldn't have been strange if she had confirmed some of my stories while healing me.

The problem is how much of my stories she's seen...

If she's seen things she shouldn't have seen, then I've caused a great deal of damage to the worldview of the main story just by existing.

"How much have you seen?"

"That you come from a very unique worldline."

"And?"

"That you're not just an 'avatar'."

My heart felt cold. All sorts of thoughts came and went in my head.

I wonder if it's okay. Maybe Han Sooyoung found out information she shouldn't know.

Whether she knew what I was thinking or not, Han Sooyoung spoke while cracking the half-broken egg with her chopsticks.

"It's not easy to endure. The fact that there is another me besides me."

The sentence flowed naturally like cracking an egg. Perhaps Han Sooyoung in front of me was the one who understood such a life better than anyone else.

For a moment, I was overcome with the desire to tell her everything I knew.

"Am I real or fake? Who am I, and how much of me am I? Are my memories truly mine?"

Maybe I could change this messed-up story that I ruined.

Maybe I could bring Kim Dokja back to this world that has lost him.

"Kim Dokja."

"Why do you call me Kim Dokja?"

"What do you think determines existence?"

I hesitated, unable to answer the sudden question right away. However, Han Sooyoung didn't seem to be waiting for my answer in the first place.

"I think it's actions."

Actions.

"The actions we choose at crucial moments. Those actions pile up and become history, and history becomes a story."

And the story again determines who we are.

"In that sense, I thought you were Kim Dokja. That’s why I’m calling you Kim Dokja."

I didn’t know what to say, so I lowered my head for a moment.

"What’s that expression? Are you happy or sad?"

"Both."

Han Sooyoung smiled bitterly.

"You asked me to send you back to your worldline."

"Yes."

"Do you really want to go back?"

"I have to go back."

"You have to go back."

Han Sooyoung repeated that answer as if it was funny.

"In the worldline you lived in, you must have risked your life countless times for the people you cherished. You must have constantly created things you had to protect and obsessively protected them. That must have been how you, and how Kim Dokja, existed as Kim Dokja."

I couldn’t say anything.

"But you know. Will you be able to be happy in the ending of a story made that way?"

Happiness.

I flinched involuntarily at the unfamiliar word I had never thought of.

"What choice will a being who can only feel useful by saving someone make when there is nothing left to save?"

A faint shiver ran down my spine.

For a moment, such a thought occurred to me.

I wondered if she already knew everything, what had happened to Kim Dokja, or if she had anticipated everything.

Han Sooyoung put down her chopsticks and stood up, saying,

"You can still choose your ending."

Before I could even ask what that meant, Han Sooyoung started pushing my wheelchair.

She crossed the living room and headed toward the balcony. When she opened the balcony window, the incarnations waiting under Gwanghwamun all looked up at us.

"Oh—!"

"They're finally out!"

Along with the commotion, people's cheers could be heard from below the balcony.

I asked, a little flustered.

"Why are all these people gathered here?"

Han Sooyoung waved at them and answered.

"I called them. I wanted to introduce you to the people."

"So why..."

"You don't have a scenario yet."

Han Sooyoung added with a grin.

"There are several ways to get a scenario."

There were incarnations here, and the Constellations they had contracted with.

In other words, Han Sooyoung is now.

[The Constellation, 'Maritime War God', admires your spirit.]

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', asks if that man is really the hero who protected Gwanghwamun.]

[The Constellation, 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon', likes your hairstyle.]

[A very small number of Constellations say that you look more neat than they thought.]

She wants to imprint my existence on the Constellations of the Last Scenario.

[All the Constellations of the Korean Peninsula are looking at you.]

The Last Scenario.

The few stars left in this world were focused on me. Following the desires of the stars, I could hear the faint sound of probability moving.

[The Management Bureau acknowledges your contribution in this scenario.]

[You will be assigned a new scenario.]

The moment I heard the message echoing in my head, I thought I knew why Han Sooyoung had dressed me up and why she had called me to this place.

"You don’t have to save anyone anymore. You don’t have to live as the Demon King of Salvation. You don’t have to become the Kim Dokja that people want."

Han Sooyoung was now showing me her world.

A world nearing its end.

Before the end of that story, Han Sooyoung was telling me.

"You are one here."

That there is a place for me in this world too. No, maybe this is the world where I can exist as my 'real me'.

"You don’t necessarily have to see the 'ending' in the worldline you lived in. So—"

Han Sooyoung’s hand was faintly shaking. With her hand firmly wrapped around my shoulder, Han Sooyoung said.

"This time, let’s see the ending of this world together."

884 Episode 48 Avatar (7)

During the short banquet, Han Sooyoung introduced me to the people.

"He's my friend."

I didn't know she would introduce me like that, so I blankly looked up at Han Sooyoung. The people listening to the story also looked perplexed.

Some people were surprised, asking if the Captain had a friend, while others nodded their heads, saying that they could trust the Captain's friend.

Han Sooyoung laughed as if she found those people's reactions funny and added,

"I'm joking. In fact, this guy is a messenger from another worldline. He came to help our world before the Final Scenario. Don't ignore him and treat him well."

It was an explanation that lacked some important details. I wondered if people would be convinced by that, but surprisingly, the response was not bad.

"If he came to help, then he's welcome."

"If the Captain brought him here, I think there must be a reason."

Even the Constellations agreed.

[The Constellation, 'Maritime War God', nods his head.]

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', says, 'If that's the case, then I can believe it.']

However, it wasn't because my existence was probable, but because of Han Sooyoung's overwhelming charisma.

To be honest, the people here would believe Han Sooyoung's words even if she made a 'Life and Death Ring' out of stones.

"Han Sooyoung! Han Sooyoung!"

Everyone who survived until the Last Scenario was calling her name.

Even though they were just calling her name and hearing her name, I somehow felt like I knew what kind of story she had been through.

Even if all of this was an elaborate production for a 'False Ending,' it was a scene that made me think that I would gladly be fooled by this kind of production.

"Kim Dokja!"

And then, from somewhere, someone else appeared calling my name.

"You're handsome!"

Only after hearing those words did I understand why Han Sooyoung had Lee Seolhwa dress me up.

[A new scenario has arrived!]

That's when the scenario alarm came up.

The scenario was the minimum justification for me to exist in this world.

It was proof that the direction she had built up had been recognized by the Dokkaebis and Constellations.

I immediately checked the scenario content.

<Sub-scenario - Uninvited Guest>

Category: Sub

Difficulty: ???

Clear Conditions: Solve the problem of the relevant worldline and find a way to return to the worldline you belong to.

Time limit: 30 days

Reward: ???

Failure: Disappearance of the incarnation body.

A sub-scenario, not the main scenario.

After all, I didn't perform the main scenario in this world from the beginning, so I guess I'm not given the right to the 'Last Scenario'.

By the way, the assignment content was a bit strange.

'Solve the problem of the relevant worldline and find a way to return to the original worldline?'

Even if I can go back, what's wrong with this worldline? No matter how much I look around, I don't feel like there's any particular problem. The subtitle of the scenario was 'Uninvited Guest', which also bothered me. What on earth was the management office thinking when they came up with this scenario?

Whether or not she knew my thoughts, Han Sooyoung waved her hand at the people and muttered.

"If you're going to stay here from now on, it'd be good to get to know the people."

"..."

"That guy left without any feelings, but I'm saying this because I think you're different."

"What you said earlier..."

In fact, throughout the banquet, Han Sooyoung's words were lingering in a corner of my head.

「"This time, let's see the end of this world together."」

Han Sooyoung shook her head as if she knew what I was going to say.

"Don't take it to heart. It's just something I said."

"Oh, really?"

"But if you stay here for a week, you'll probably just want to sit down."

I could sense a strange sense of confidence in her voice.

"I don't know which scenario your worldline is in, but... It won't be easy to go back after playing through scenario number 99 with a max level character."

"I'm not a max level character."

"Anyway."

"And this isn't my first time coming to scenario number 99."

"What?"

I've already performed Cheon Inho's 40th Round through the 'Time Fault'.

In that 40th Round, I definitely performed the 'Last Scenario'. Even if it was a re-experience.

"Is your worldline also scenario number 99?"

"That's not it."

"Then?"

"I can't tell you the details."

Han Sooyoung looked at me with a strange expression and pursed her lips.

"But isn't this place more fun? It's not like all scenario 99 are the same."

That's right. Han Sooyoung's 1,863rd Round was definitely different from Cheon Inho's 40th Round.

Unlike Cheon Inho, she had many colleagues.

"And in the worldline you came from, there's no 'me' either?"

My heart prickled at those words.

"Yes. There isn't anymore."

"Then there's no one waiting for you."

"I don't know why you're so sure, but I have people waiting for me too."

"Really? How many of them?"

I pictured the faces of the readers in my head. Dansu ahjussi, Kyung Sein, Cha Sungwoo, Cha Yerin, Ye Hyunwoo. And Ji Eunyu…

Then, for a moment, a strange thought occurred to me.

Are they really waiting for me?

「They needed 'Kim Dokja' more than anyone else.」

But could I be a 'Kim Dokja' enough for them?

Han Sooyoung added a word as if driving a nail into that question.

"Are you really what those people need?"

Han Sooyoung's expression was triumphant, as if she had read the history of my life.

Instead of resisting that triumph, I asked this.

"Why do you want me to be here?"

Han Sooyoung didn't answer right away, but looked up at the distant night sky and said after a short pause.

"You said it. You'll help me get over the 'Final Wall'?"

The Final Wall.

Beyond that distant night sky, there is definitely the last gate that Han Sooyoung must overcome.

"Am I really the one you need?"

The few remaining starlights were shining on us. The light was so dim that Han Sooyoung's expression was obscured by the darkness and could not be seen clearly.

---

The next morning, Kim Namwoon woke me up.

"The Captain said to take you with me. Can you walk now?"

I nodded.

The effectiveness of the Life and Death Ring was certainly different. The lower half of my body, which had not listened to me until yesterday, felt light today as if it had been reborn.

"No problem."

"Then follow me."

Kim Namwoon left those words behind and walked ahead.

"Is there anything I need to do?"

"Well, there's nothing in particular."

I wondered why it was Kim Namwoon among all the people, but upon closer inspection, he seemed to be the most idle person in the base.

"The Captain just told me to show you some people and introduce you to the work."

"What about Han Sooyoung?"

"The Captain is always busy."

Well, leading this kind of force would require a lot of work to be done from the morning. Unlike the relatively small <Kim Dokja Company>, <Han Sooyoung Corporation> really seemed to have a lot of employees.

Kim Namwoon walked around the base with an annoyed expression and introduced me to the facilities.

"This is a bathroom for executives only, and over there is a PC room that Jihye often goes to."

"Is there a PC room?"

"Of course. It's a computer made with magic engineering, so it doesn't run the latest games. Anyway, the facility down there is a billiard hall that Jihye sometimes goes to, and over there is a library that Jihye hates..."

Something about the explanation is tilted toward the person who has already explained it.

"Damn, I feel like I'm a game NPC right now. Do you know about NPCs, sir?"

"I do."

"Oh, do you like games?"

As if he thought he had found something in common, Kim Namwoon started talking about the games he liked for a while. I suddenly remembered that Kim Namwoon was a high school student.

"Ahem, I'm the only one talking too much, sorry."

"It's okay."

"Jihye doesn't like talking like this."

I watched Kim Namwoon scratching his head with a slightly sad heart.

Is it because of Han Sooyoung that the Delusion Demon Kim Namwoon has changed like this, or is it because of the environment of the 1,863rd Round?

"But now that I'm looking at you, sir, I understand why the Captain told me to bring you around."

"...?"

"You look depressed."

I was momentarily speechless at the unexpected insight.

I look depressed.

When I looked at the expression reflected in the passing window, I really did look a little depressed.

If I were to look for a reason, I could find one. But I didn't want to think about it.

Looking back, not a single thing has gone as planned since I was reincarnated into this world. It was the same at the Recycling Center and in the Fear Realm.

That's how I arrived at the 1,863rd Round.

For some reason, Han Sooyoung left me in Kim Namwoon's hands, and I was thrown into the Last Scenario of an unfamiliar worldline, listening to Kim Namwoon talk about games.

I turned my smartphone off and on several times, thinking that if I said something to someone, things would get better, but I couldn't contact my Eldest Brother.

In fact, it would be a problem even if I had contacted him.

As you can see, I must have heard that reading 'Ways of Survival' would make things better.

"I've been like that before, too. I've overcome it all now, but cheer up. Everyone has difficult times."

"Yes."

That's comforting.

I replied casually and looked out the window at the scenery of Gwanghwamun.

It's just as Han Sooyoung said.

Even though it's the same scenario 99, the scenery of the world is so different.

Even in a world without Kim Dokja, people can 'get close to the ending'.

I wonder if everyone is doing well.

Do Yoo Joonghyuk and other readers remember me? How much time has passed there? What happened to Ji Eunyu and Heewon-ssi?

Was it because the sunset reflected on the window was so beautiful, or was it because the expressions of the people looking at the sunset were so warm?

I thought about that for a moment.

「Am I still a valid person in this story?」

That’s when I heard a loud thud from inside the base.

I turned my head wondering what had happened, and Kim Namwoon shook my shoulder as if it was nothing. He shrugged.

"I guess it's almost training time."

Training time?

Kim Namwoon guided me to the underground training grounds as if to resolve my doubts.

At the entrance to the training grounds, several incarnations were gathered here and there, looking at a huge screen.

There happened to be a familiar figure in front of the screen.

"Are you here?"

"Yes, Jihye."

"I told you not to greet me like that."

"Sorry."

I looked up at the screen together from behind the two of them. The man on the screen was a person I knew well.

"Oh, what. Is Hyunsung-ssi in good condition today?"

As expected from the Last Scenario, Lee Hyunsung, who boasted vicious latissimus dorsi and serratus anterior, was swinging his fists with his upper body exposed.

"The Captain made it. It's a kind of grand battle simulation based on a legend from the past."

The background was a dry desert. Every time Lee Hyunsung moved his fist, huge craters appeared all over the desert.

Is it [Mt. Taesun Smash]? If it's like that, it could really destroy a mountain, just like its name suggests.

Boom! Boom! Boom! Boom!

It seems that was the source of the loud noise I've been hearing since a while ago.

"After entering, if you choose a specific legend, you can fight the character in the legend."

I roughly understood the system.

Anyway, if they're going to face Lee Hyunsung who's gotten that strong, the enemy in the simulation must be amazing.

A delicate and beautiful sword fight that occasionally appeared through the sandstorm. The fist and the blade crossed, and an ecstatic storm of legends rose.

Is the opponent a Constellation?

What if that Constellation is that good at swordsmanship?

A loud noise as if the sky was breaking rang out every time the sword fight flashed in the hazy sky.

Wait a minute, no way.

When I saw the black coat fluttering in the thick dust, I realized how the characters in this worldline could become so strong.

Some stories remain in people's hearts like shadows even after they reach their conclusion and do not disappear.

"I wonder if Hyunsung ahjussi can win this time."

On the screen, Lee Hyunsung and Yoo Joonghyuk from the 1,863rd Round were fighting.

885 Episode 48 Avatar (8)

---

In 'Ways of Survival', Lee Hyunsung and Yoo Joonghyuk fight frequently. Of course, most of them were mock battles ordered by Yoo Joonghyuk ("We will conduct a combat stamina test in preparation for the next scenario"), and they were part of a special training plan to strengthen Lee Hyunsung's tanking ability.

「"Get up, Lee Hyunsung."」

Yoo Joonghyuk only repeats that phrase throughout the mock battle. That's because in his sparring with Yoo Joonghyuk, Lee Hyunsung is constantly getting beaten up and falling down.

Falling down, getting up, falling down, getting up.

An incarnation body that has been forged hundreds and thousands of times, just like refining steel. That was Lee Hyunsung, the Steel Sword Emperor of 'Ways of Survival'.

However, the 1,863rd Round's battle unfolding before my eyes was strangely different from the 'Ways of Survival' that I knew.

"Oh! He hit him with one shot!"

Unlike Lee Hyunsung of 'Ways of Survival' who felt goosebumps and trauma just by looking at Yoo Joonghyuk, Lee Hyunsung of the 1,863rd Round was calm.

Lee Hyunsung, who fought by turning the entire desert upside down, a wave of extraordinary magical power rose from his fist.

Kim Namwoon, who was watching from the side, muttered in admiration.

"Wow, he's mastered that technique too?"

With a loud noise like a mountain collapsing, a magical light exploded from his fist.

「Byeokryeokilkwon.」

The martial art of 'Kwon-wang', a transcendental left-hander from Murim. In addition, his technique to avoid Yoo Joonghyuk's [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship] was Lee Jihye's specialty, [Ghost Walk].

"No, I told you several times that you shouldn't walk like that!"

Lee Jihye, who was watching, pursed her lips and said. Even though it wasn't perfect, the fact that Lee Hyunsung could freely use the skills of other incarnations shocked me greatly.

「It's different from 'Ways of Survival'.」

Come to think of it, Han Sooyoung in the 1,863rd Round used [Black Flame] even though she didn't make a contract with the Black Flame Dragon.

Perhaps they were constantly developing the combat abilities they didn't have by repeating the simulation.

"That's right! Push!"

Lee Hyunsung fought desperately. He calmly deflected Yoo Joonghyuk's attacks, countered the attacks he couldn't deflect, and punched him without hesitation whenever he saw an opening.

Since his opponent was Yoo Joonghyuk, he ended up losing the overall fight, but his improvisation and situational management skills were astonishing.

If Yoo Joonghyuk of 'Ways of Survival' had been by his side, Lee Hyunsung would have definitely received a 'Battle Physical Test S-Rank'.

Kim Namwoon asked.

"Isn't our ahjussi great?"

I nodded and kept my eyes on Lee Hyunsung's battle.

Beyond mere desperation, it was a battle that felt like a desperate battle. That was the only way I could describe it.

The story contained in each punch and kick was telling the story of Lee Hyunsung.

I didn't know why he kept fighting with that face. I just vaguely guessed that there must be something he wanted to protect just as much.

Kwaaaaah!

The suffocating close combat finally ended.

[The story simulation '1,863–004' ends.]

The smoky dust on the screen disappeared, and the door to the training capsule that Lee Hyunsung had entered opened.

"You did well, ahjussi."

Lee Jihye handed a towel to Lee Hyunsung, who was drenched in sweat.

"Thank you."

"It was too bad. I thought we would win this time."

Lee Hyunsung shook his head with a bitter smile. But the next moment, he turned his head towards me. We stared at each other for about three seconds. When I bowed first, Lee Hyunsung also responded.

"You're the person the Captain brought."

In some rounds, Lee Hyunsung was always a kind person. To Kim Dokja and to his colleagues.

But why?

Strangely, there was a faint sense of wariness in the way Lee Hyunsung spoke to me.

[The character, 'Lee Hyunsung', is suspicious of you.]

What?

"Nice to meet you. Please take care of me."

This man, who seemed to be reaching out to me on the outside, seemed suspicious of me on the inside.

Why?

If I had to pick a reason, it wasn't that hard to guess. He might not like me, who suddenly fell from the sky like a parachute (I really did fall from the sky), and appeared at Han Sooyoung's introduction.

Lee Hyunsung looked at me for a moment, then turned around and walked out of the training grounds.

---

One day, two days, three days passed again.

During that time, Kim Namwoon dragged me to training grounds and PC rooms, and whenever he had the chance, he would harass me by saying things like, "Let’s have a go."

What was Han Sooyoung thinking when she told me to meet people?

「There are 27 days left.」

I checked the scenario again anxiously. In the next 27 days, I had to solve the problem of this worldline and find a way to return to my worldline.

However, I had no idea what the problem of this worldline was.

So I tried to sneak a hint to Kim Namwoon once.

"Problem? Well, Jihye doesn’t really react when I talk to her."

Surely that wasn’t the 'worldline problem'.

I asked Lee Jihye as well.

"You mean my swordsmanship hasn’t improved much lately?"

"It can’t be the only thing you’ve got to worry about?"

"Kim Namwoon keeps on hanging around? Why?"

This didn't seem like a grand enough problem to be called a 'worldline problem'.

To the same question, Lee Seolhwa answered as follows.

"Loneliness, isn't it?"

"Loneliness?"

This time, I was a little surprised by the somewhat abstract answer.

Loneliness. An emotion that everyone experiences, to varying degrees, as a human being.

But is there a reason why that would be a 'problem' in particular?

Ah.

Now that I think about it, 'Yoo Joonghyuk' is no longer in this round. I wondered if the loneliness Lee Seolhwa felt was related to that, but Lee Seolhwa smiled and added.

"It's a story about the Captain."

"Han Sooyoung is lonely?"

I opened my mouth as if to protest without realizing it.

"How could she be lonely when she has such great colleagues?"

Han Sooyoung's 1,863rd Round was close to perfect.

She reached the Final Scenario without Yoo Joonghyuk. Even in the Final Scenario, the fact that so many incarnations survived was something that even Yoo Joonghyuk of 'Ways of Survival' couldn't do.

"That's not the problem."

"Is that so?"

Lee Seolhwa didn't answer. For a moment, she made a strange expression like a broken doll, and then suddenly acted out.

"How are you feeling?"

"I'm fine."

"That's fortunate."

"But what you just said—"

"I have something to do, so I'll go first."

It was a conversation that left only a sense of uneasiness.

After work, I returned to my assigned dorm. I had many worries about the scenario, but it was hard to remember the last time a day passed by so peacefully like today.

As I sat on the soft chair and looked at my face in the mirror, I remembered something I had heard in passing.

Did you say I looked depressed?

That thought suddenly occurred to me. If I am influenced by them every time I get a fragment of Kim Dokja, then my current 'depression' may also be related to Kim Dokja.

So…

"Kim Dokja, are you watching?"

I tried speaking to him while looking in the mirror, but there was no answer.

Well, if they were the kind of people who would respond when I spoke to them like this, they would have contacted me already.

I thought for a moment, then turned on my smartphone and opened the web novel app. It was to check the comments on the platform for the first time in a while. In times like now when there is insufficient information, it was best to use a platform that allows short-term future vision.

[Current connection is not smooth.]

However, the site connection was not smooth.

Why is that? Is it because this is a different worldline?

Wiiing.

I was startled by the vibration sound that rang for a moment and looked at the screen.

[A new message has arrived.]

There are already people who will send messages to this smartphone.

To be exact, there are only two.

As expected, the sender was my hyung.

—Round 896 of Ways of Survival

That was the end of the message. It was a rare contact, but I was disappointed.

The content of the message he sent was also 'Round 896 of Ways of Survival'.

But thinking about it again, I was grateful that he sent me even a short message.

Seven characters that were sent at the risk of probability in a situation where even the platform connection was not smooth.

If this was Kim Dokja's message, there must be a reason.

I immediately opened the text file of 'Round 896 of Ways of Survival'.

I scrolled down, and down again.

Soon after, I found the 'Round 896' of Ways of Survival that Kim Dokja had mentioned.

「And Yoo Joonghyuk opened his eyes.」

Yoo Joonghyuk in the 896th round was the same as Yoo Joonghyuk any other time.

The first scenario started on the subway.

Yoo Joonghyuk calmly obtained the necessary items and then proceeded with the scenario. As I followed the smooth progression without any unnecessary details, I realized once again what kind of life Yoo Joonghyuk had lived.

Life was a habit to him.

The sincerity of repeating the same thing over and over again without getting tired of it. That sincerity is what ultimately made Yoo Joonghyuk.

「"You die."」

Of course, his personality became a bit twisted in return.

「"You die too."」

He became a strange person who only repeated the word "die" whenever he got the chance.

「"You survive."」

In the midst of all this, Yoo Joonghyuk faithfully saved those who needed to live, and took them as his comrades. Yoo Joonghyuk continued to advance while carrying out the 'Absolute Throne' scenario with them and fighting against various Nebulae.

After going through the 'Demon King Selection Tournament', 'Gigantomachia', 'Ragnarok', and 'The Holy Demon War'—he encountered several crises and cleared scenarios that seemed impossible to solve. I also followed Yoo Joonghyuk's journey.

Did I acquire too many Kim Dokja fragments?

It had been a long time since I felt reading—and especially 'Ways of Survival'—interesting.

I didn't want to miss this flow, so I forgot about my problems for a moment and immersed myself in Yoo Joonhyuk's story.

How much did I read like that?

「And Yoo Joonghyuk reached the Final Scenario.」

I finally reached that sentence. And only then did I realize the strange sense of discomfort I had felt throughout reading the 896th Round.

"Huh?"

Something felt strange.

The 'Final Scenario'?

That couldn't be.

As far as I know, except for the 1,863rd Round, the only time he got close to the 'Final Scenario' was in the 999th Round.

But in the 896th Round, which was 100 rounds earlier, he reached the 'Final Scenario'?

Did the content of Ways of Survival change?

Or am I remembering something wrong?

But regardless of my memory, Yoo Joonghyuk continued with the scenario, and even.

「That's how he cleared the Last Scenario.」

He even cleared the 'Last Scenario'.

「At the end of every scenario, he slowly looked back at the world. His colleagues laughing unrealistically, the ending he had so desperately wanted.」

But Yoo Joonghyuk, who was quietly staring at that scenery, let out a bitter laugh.

「"I see."」

And he muttered.

「"This world is fake."」

---

I paused at that part for a long time.

This world is fake.

It was just one sentence.

Even so, I couldn't fully fathom the temptation that Yoo Joonghyuk had to resist in order to reach the conclusion of that one sentence.

「"Stop joking and come out. I now know that this world is an illusion."」

The feeling of having to deny his own end after reaching the end he had so desperately wanted.

Perhaps Yoo Joonghyuk hoped that no one would answer his question while saying those words.

「[That's amazing, Supreme King. How did you figure that out?]」

A voice that shattered illusions.

He was a Constellation that I also knew.

One of the Twelve Gods of the great <Olympus>, and the Constellation that provided a story to Cheon Inho in the 40th Round.

「Hermes, the Master of the Skywalk.」

It was the moment when the identity of the '896th Round' was finally revealed.

「[I'll ask again. How did you find out?]」

In fact, Yoo Joonghyuk's actual incarnation body was still in the 895th Round, and he was on the verge of death.

However, <Olympus>, which acquired his incarnation body that was on the verge of death, delayed his death and connected it to Hermes's 'Big Data System'.

As a result, <Olympus> succeeded in making Yoo Joonghyuk wake up in the 'Terrarium', an imaginary world created based on Yoo Joonghyuk's memories. Not only that, they even led him to believe that world was the '896th Round' and live there.

The so-called 'Terraria Project'.

It was the ultimate trap designed by <Olympus> to uncover the secret of [Regression] and find out Yoo Joonghyuk's scenario pattern.

「"I just knew it."」

Yoo Joonghyuk calmly accepted all of the facts and answered.

「"There's no way I could be this lucky."」

Looking back at his surviving comrades, seeing his wish that had never been fulfilled come true before his eyes, Yoo Joonghyuk blinked his eyes indifferently.

He then grabbed his sword in reverse and aimed it at his heart.

「[Wait. Stop!]」

Hermes stopped Yoo Joonghyuk.

「[I can leave this world for you.]」

Yoo Joonghyuk's blazing anger turned to Hermes.

He had been robbed of his freedom, his comrades. He had been robbed of the truth. He had been robbed of his joy and sorrow. And now, in front of the stars who had taken away even his story and turned it into their amusement, Yoo Joonghyuk was speaking.

「"Until the day my life ends, I will never forgive you guys."」

「[Of course. But there are no Constellations left in this worldline for you to take revenge on. They were all destroyed by the aftershock of probability while trying to imitate your [Regression].]」

The ending of the 'Terrarium Project' was terrible. The Constellations of <Olympus> were caught up in the aftershock of probability in the process of digging up the secret of the 'Oldest Dream' and [Regression] that they had been desperately trying to know.

While recreating the [Regression] stigma based on Yoo Joonghyuk's memories, they failed to calm the 'Great Tale' that caused the Myth-grade Constellations to run wild, resulting in a catastrophe that caused the entire <Star Stream> to collapse.

Yoo Joonghyuk mocked Hermes.

「"There's still the next Round, and the one after that."」

Hermes replied with a bitter smile.

「[I know. You'll try to kill us again and again. Just like you did in your past life. Your lonely revenge on the Constellations who don't even remember the last Round will continue forever. But are you really satisfied with that?]」

「[The Puppet of the Oldest Dream.]」

Hermes was silent for a moment after saying that. Although his thoughts were not described, I, who was reading the story outside the lines, could feel Hermes's emotions that were not described.

「[Do you really think that this world you lived in is an 'illusion'?]」

In the <Star Stream> where the Constellations died, the only world that survived now was the 'Terrarium' where Yoo Joonghyuk exists.

「[The world of the <Star Stream> where you lived is also just a dream of a great cosmic being. If that's the case anyway, wouldn't it be okay to stay in the Terrarium I created?]」

In the 895th Round, which was on the verge of destruction, Yoo Joonghyuk was the last 'story' left to Hermes.

「[You just have to forget. If you just forget that this world is a lie, you can be happy again. You can reach the ending that you couldn't find in the <Star Stream>.]」

「"The 'ending' I want doesn't exist in the world you created."」

Yoo Joonghyuk stabbed his own heart without hesitation.

Hermes muttered bitterly.

「[Lonely Regressor. You will make even the stars that have come to like you lonely.]」

With those words, the 'Terrarium' created by Hermes collapsed, and Yoo Joonghyuk's real '896th Round' began.

Why did Kim Dokja tell me to read this Round?

I couldn't quite understand it.

Could it be a hint that this world wasn't the real 1,863rd Round, but a kind of 'Time Fault'?

However, I couldn't feel the time density characteristic of a Fault at all.

Furthermore, there was no task that was announced when entering the 'Time Fault'.

Or simply, could this world also be a 'Terrarium' created by Hermes?

I took a moment to gather my thoughts, then slowly reviewed the contents of the 896th Round I had just read.

Upon closer inspection, I saw a passage that I had overlooked earlier.

「It was a difficult and arduous task to build a 'world' to deceive a Regressor who had repeated hundreds of lives.」

So, Hermes thought. The one who would create this 'Terrarium' should be Yoo Joonghyuk himself, not himself. In other words, it should be a world where the Regressor himself deceives himself.

To help with that process, Hermes borrowed a unique skill, and the name of that skill was…」

The moment I read that far, a sharp ringing sounded in the air.

Beep beep—

As I opened the door and went outside, I saw people busily moving around the base.

"What's going on?"

"It's an attack!"

It was early morning.

It was definitely a time when it was vulnerable to an attack, but who would dare attack this base?

Once again, a kung sound rang out and the upper part of the building was destroyed.

At that moment, Kim Namwoon, who had come running down from the upper floor, asked.

"Whoa! Ahjussi, are you okay?"

"Yes, I'm okay, but—"

"Don't crawl out for no reason and stay here. Got it?"

I couldn't really stay still just because I heard those words.

The sound of sergeants clashing and screams could be heard alternately from outside the base.

As I hurriedly went down to the first floor, I saw Lee Seolhwa, who was waiting with the medical team. Beyond them, Lee Hyunsung, Lee Jihye, Kim Namwoon, and other members of <Han Sooyoung Corporation> were engaged in a fierce battle with something.

But the sight of the opponent engaged in a fierce battle seemed familiar.

If my eyes weren't wrong, it was definitely one of the Twelve Gods of <Olympus>.

Ares, the Ferocious God of War.

But it was different from the 'Ares' I knew.

He was not the 'Ferocious Lord' who boasted of his splendid armor and relics.

His skin was distorted by burns like a burnt zombie. His muscles were cut off here and there, making him look ugly.

I was able to recognize him because of the story fragments floating around his base.

[Story fragment, 'Echoes of Ferociousness', continues its storytelling.]

It wasn't just Ares.

All the Twelve Gods of <Olympus> that I knew, including Hephaestus, Artemis, and Athena, were roaming the battlefield like zombies.

"They're the dregs of the Constellations."

Lee Seolhwa said.

"They're like the wills of dead Constellations. Constellations that had powerful stories sometimes remain as stories and wander the world even after death."

As if to prove her words, the Twelve Gods were speaking.

[Evil... Director... ]

[The <Star Stream> you destroyed… will not forgive you… ]

[You… cannot see… ■■… ]

[No one in this world… ■■… wants… ]

I don't know what they're talking about, but it was clear that they had hostility towards this side.

Even if they are dead, a Constellation of the highest rank is still a Constellation of the highest rank.

The fierce waves of the Lion’s Wrath that flowed from Ares’s mouth swept through the base.

"Hyunsung ahjussi!"

Lee Hyunsung’s [Area Defense] skill covered the party. However, there were enemies who entered through the gap.

Hephaestus, who had climbed over the defense wall with his half-twisted limbs. Even the Constellations of <Olympus> were following him.

"Damn it! The left side is pierced!"

"Shin Yoosung!"

Then, the 'Chimera Dragon' appeared along with a shadow that covered the sky far and wide. With Shin Yoosung’s signal, the 'Chimera Dragon’s' breath tore through the earth, turning it into scorched earth.

Taking advantage of the time the breath gave her, Lee Jihye grumbled as she crossed inside the barrier.

"There are too many. Damn it, if only we could have used the power of the Apocalypse Dragon—"

The power of the Apocalypse Dragon.

I thought of the power of the other world that Han Sooyoung had used to save me a while ago.

Maybe because they wasted too much probability back then, they don’t have enough energy to deal with the enemies now.

Now that I think about it, where did Han Sooyoung go?

"Lee Jihye! The right side is also pierced!"

Along with Kim Namwoon’s shout, Ares and other Constellations came running, limping in their half-broken incarnation bodies.

The direction they were running from was the direction I and Lee Seolhwa were in. Lee Seolhwa, with her expression hardened, was about to step forward, when I pulled out my sword first.

"Please stand back."

If things were like this because of me, I couldn’t just sit back and watch.

I took a deep breath and focused on the story inside me.

I saw Ares, who had noticed me, licking his lips.

[You…?]

I pulled out my sword without giving him a chance to speak. What I needed right now was a quick decision. If they didn’t know my identity, then I had a better chance of winning.

Kiiing!

The ether blade that rose from 'Unbreakable Faith'. The stories I had built up were embedded in the Blade of Faith.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', roars!]

I don’t know if it was another Narrative-grade Constellation, but at least in my current state, I wouldn’t be pushed back by this guy.

Because I’ve already cut him down as the 'Demon King of Salvation'.

[Kuaaaaah!]

As Ares, who was cut by 'Unbreakable Faith', screamed and flinched, I took advantage of the gap.

Kim Namwoon and Lee Jihye rushed forward and struck back, blowing Ares's head off.

"Nice, ahjussi!"

Kim Namwoon cheered and waved his hand at me.

But instead of reacting to him, I stared at the battlefield with calm eyes.

「It was a perfect Round.」

No matter how much they were just scraps of Constellations, the Constellations once represented a single Giant Nebula. Against them, the members of <Han Sooyoung Corporation> were barely harmed and protecting each other.

「That's why it was an impossible Turn.」

A strange sense of discomfort ran down my spine once again.

The wall that Yoo Joonghyuk, who had regressed 999 times, could not overcome even after sacrificing his own incarnation body, was the 'Last Scenario' of the <Star Stream>.

I knew that Han Sooyoung was outstanding. But even for her, would it be possible for her to reach this scenario with all her colleagues? And no one was hurt—

"Dokja-ssi."

Lee Seolhwa suddenly approached me and asked.

"Are you hurt anywhere?"

"Yes, how are the others?"

"It's okay, there are some with minor injuries..."

I saw patients being carried on beds. The patients were shedding stories from their cuts and torn wounds.

「Shedding stories.」

I blankly stared at the injured, then turned my head to look at Kim Namwoon, Lee Jihye, and Lee Hyunsung.

They were also shedding stories from their wounds.

Of course, shedding stories wasn't that strange. When Constellations were injured, they would shed stories from their incarnation bodies. The noble Transcendental Constellations also shed stories when they suffered deep internal injuries or were struck at their source.

But this case was a bit unusual.

General incarnations don't shed stories instead of blood.

Except for one case.

「If the incarnation is not the 'main body'.」

I thought that was impossible.

Even if it was Han Sooyoung, there was no way that it could be possible.

But the faint sparks that swept across the entire battlefield—the reality before my eyes supported that possibility.

「A way to reach the Final Scenario without anyone dying.」

Just as Kim Dokja, who had overcome the 'Final Wall' with his comrades, had to shoulder the 'Oldest Dream', there was always a price to pay for those who dream impossible dreams.

So what price did Han Sooyoung pay to get here?

"Seolhwa-ssi."

Lee Seolhwa's eyes were shaking as she looked into my eyes.

As if she already knew what I was going to ask.

"Han Sooyoung, where is she right now?"

887 Episode 48 Avatar (10)

"Sooyoung-ssi will be resting for a while. She hasn’t recovered from the aftereffects of using the power of the 'Apocalypse Dragon' last time-"

I know. Of course. But that's not what I was curious about.

"Let me ask again."

"..."

"Where is the 'real Han Sooyoung' right now?"

The real Han Sooyoung.

Lee Seolhwa glared at me with her eyes wide open.

"You..."

I felt a fierce energy for a moment.

Lee Hyunsung, who had finished cleaning up the dead Constellations in the front, was approaching me.

"What's going on?"

Lee Hyunsung's expression was cold as he looked at me, as if he had been watching me the whole time. A threatening fighting spirit flowed out of his body, as if he would rush at me at any moment.

Lee Jihye, who had finished organizing the right front, joined us soon after.

"Ahjussi! I've taken care of this side too! What's going on, why is the atmosphere like this?"

Did she sense the strange air flowing around her? Lee Jihye looked at me and Lee Hyunsung with tense eyes.

Lee Seolhwa sighed deeply and opened her mouth.

"Dokja-ssi wants to meet the 'real' Captain."

Then Lee Hyunsung blocked my path and said.

"The Captain is not feeling well right now."

"It will only take a moment."

"The Captain is not the kind of person you can meet whenever you want."

I compared the Lee Hyunsung of the 1,863rd Round I had read with the Lee Hyunsung in front of me. Lee Hyunsung was originally a person with strong loyalty, but this was too much. However, if I was going to back down here, I wouldn't have even brought it up in the first place.

"What exactly is wrong with her? I might be able to fix it."

Rain fell from the sky. It was so cold that it felt like snow. The raindrops fell directly on me and the group's heads.

I could see Kim Namwoon approaching from afar, stealthily keeping an eye on me.

"Kim Namwoon, take Dokja-ssi inside."

"Huh? Huh?"

Kim Namwoon, surprised by Lee Hyunsung's strong tone, grabbed my arm and pulled me.

"Ahjussi, I don't know what's going on, but let's go inside. Okay, everyone, get out of the way!"

I shook off Kim Namwoon's hand and said.

"Let's get rid of it. How long do you plan on continuing this 'direction'?"

I looked around at the sky and shouted.

"Han Sooyoung! I know you're listening!"

The moment Lee Hyunsung frowned and took a step toward me.

"There are still two left!"

Shin Yoosung shouted while operating the 'Chimera Dragon' in the air.

"Over there, over there!"

Two tall buildings located across from the base. A dreary story was blooming on the top of each building. On the railing of the roof, two incarnations of young women stood precariously, and their appearances were ominous at first glance.

Threateningly long, torn mouths.

The women, who looked as gaunt as zombies, looked at each other and opened their mouths at the same time.

Aaaahhhhhhh—

The first to show an abnormal reaction were the incarnations at the front. With a thud, they dropped their weapons and stared blankly at the sky.

Some of them grabbed their own faces or grabbed their chests.

Aaaahhhhhh—

My heart grew cold. The identity of the 'star dregs' inhabiting those female bodies was clear.

The group in the back, who had come to their senses late, shouted.

"It's a siren!"

A siren. One of the monsters of Greek and Roman mythology.

The stars of the damned <Olympus> had summoned even the monsters that were comparable to Constellations of fairy tales.

"Everyone, cover your ears!"

Even though Lee Seolhwa shouted, most of the incarnations were already entranced by the Siren's song.

I recalled the 'Siren Countermeasure' from 'Ways of Survival' in my head.

「Despite its high notoriety, the 'Siren' countermeasure is very simple. First, cover your ears. If you have the [Sound Blocking] skill, the Siren's song is not a threat at all.」

However, it seemed that there were no incarnations around that could use [Sound Blocking].

「Even if you don't have [Sound Blocking], there's no need to panic. If you have a high-grade [Mental Barrier], you can sufficiently resist the Siren's song heard from a distance.」

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', activates!]

「Fourth Wall activated as if it had been waiting for it. Fortunately, if you have a high-level mental barrier skill like me, the Siren's story is hardly a threat. The problem was that such advanced skills would not be easily distributed to ordinary incarnations.」

Even with a mental barrier, it was not 100% safe.

「However, there are reports that incarnations with particularly high sensitivity are more sensitive to the Siren's Song.」

The new form of the 'Chimera Dragon' that covered the sky was shaking dangerously. Lee Jihye noticed this and shouted.

"Shin Yoosooung!"

The Chimera Dragon that had been flying in the air suddenly lost its direction and began to fall. The dragon's gigantic body fell to the ground with a loud noise.

"Ah..."

A faint groan could be heard in the thick dust.

"Th-thank you."

Shin Yoosung stuttered as she was held in my arms while I activated [Way of the Wind]. She looked up at me with her eyes wide open in surprise and asked.

"But... I think something similar happened before..."

I put Shin Yoosung down on the ground. Perhaps she remembered Kim Dokja who visited two years ago.

"Please rest."

It was a grateful thing, but right now, dealing with the sirens came first.

There were two sirens on the rooftop of the building.

I quickly checked the status of the group. Right now, excluding me, there were only two people in the group who had resistance to the siren's voice.

One was Lee Hyunsung, the Steel Sword Emoeror. However, Lee Hyunsung was slow. Then.

"Kim Namwoon!"

I shouted at Kim Namwoon.

"Please take care of the siren on the right!"

Kim Namwoon, who suddenly came to his senses, nodded at me.

"Okay, leave it to me!"

As soon as he answered, I started running toward the siren on the rooftop of the building on the left.

Ooooooooh—

The closer the listening distance of the siren's song, the more mental burden on the target increases.

But I wasn't worried.

I had [Fourth Wall], and Kim Namwoon—

"Euhahahaha!"

Even if he didn't listen to that song, he was already crazy.

「The Delusion Demon is resistant to one-dimensional 'mental attacks'.」

His exclusive trait, 'Middle School Syndrome', has probably evolved into 'the Ultimate Delusionist' by now.

"It's nice to listen to!"

To Kim Namwoon, who reinterprets all information in reality with his own 'Delusion Filter', the siren's song posed no threat at all.

Scream!

In an instant, Kim Namwoon climbed the wall and cut off the first siren's neck.

I also activated [Way of the Wind] and reached the second siren's eyes.

The siren's eyes widened. The 'Blade of Faith' scattered its magic power, and the siren, sensing danger, raised her voice for the last time almost at the same time.

Aaaahhhh—

The moment the siren's head hit the ground, the guy's last song engulfed the entire area. Even I, who had [Fourth Wall], felt the illusion that the floor was rippling like water for a moment.

A strong urge to throw myself below deck.

The head of the siren rolling on the floor was laughing.

I reflexively looked back and saw the patients sticking their heads out the windows of the base. As if possessed by something, the patients were hanging on the windows one by one. People who were laughing and giggling stretched their legs toward the empty space. The horrifying scene that would unfold in the next moment was vivid in my eyes.

Falling. All those incarnations will fall at once.

For a moment, I felt time slow down, and my brain circuits accelerated.

"Everyone—"

I activated the skill that I was best at using as the story moved and the probability was charged.

"—Stop!"

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', is activated!]

As if a huge rock had fallen on the water, the entire area was engulfed in a silent spray. I felt Kim Namwoon and the others looking back with surprised faces. And.

"What, what is it?"

"Huh? Huhuhuh—"

"What the hell… what happened?"

The people who had stretched their legs under the railing of the building were screaming and falling down one by one.

"What the heck, ahjussi. If you could have used something like this, you should have used it sooner!"

Kim Namwoon, who had come running while making a thud thud sound, patted my back painfully.

But I couldn't smile back at him.

I slid down the building and ran toward the headquarters. Neither Lee Hyunsung, Lee Seolhwa, nor Lee Jihye stopped me. They knew where I was going.

At the end of my gaze, there was an incarnation that had fallen to the ground.

"Dokja-ssi."

Even though I used [Incite], I couldn't protect everyone. The incarnation that had been entranced by the Siren's song and thrown itself to the ground was there. A man who hit his head on the floor and died.

I stood still and watched the man’s end. It was a character I didn’t know.

"Kim Dokja-ssi."

I heard Lee Hyunsung’s voice calling me, and placed my hand on the dead man’s head. There was no blood flowing anywhere. Only the rampant stories he had been holding lingered like an aftertaste.

I felt Lee Hyunsung’s strong grip on my shoulder.

"Calm down."

I slowly got up from my seat and looked back at Lee Hyunsung. Lee Hyunsung added with a blunt face.

"No one is dead."

"No one is dead?"

"Yes."

With those words, the dead man’s incarnation body magically disappeared. And the next moment, someone opened the main gate of the headquarters and appeared.

"Haam… Heeeeek! Th, what is this! What happened?"

The man who was making a fuss while wearing a torn hospital gown was the man who had just disappeared before my eyes.

I stared at the man with a blank expression, then slowly opened my mouth.

"I see. No one died."

I felt like laughing.

Despite the fierce battle against such powerful enemies, not a single person died.

「That's how Han Sooyoung created 'the one and only perfect world'.」

A world where no one can see the end without dying.

I couldn't figure out whether Han Sooyoung, who created this world, had gone crazy, or whether the <Star Stream>, which had encouraged Han Sooyoung to create this world, had gone crazy, or whether I was crazy for accepting this world as crazy.

Since I couldn't figure it out, I laughed like a crazy person. I laughed alone in a scenery where no one was laughing. Then, I suddenly stopped laughing and said,

"But it seems like no one is alive."

I couldn't believe those words came out of my mouth.

Do Avatars exist?

Isn't it? If the avatar commits suicide, is it suicide or not? If the avatar dies, is it death or not?

The avatar, I.

"Kim Dokja. You are not a human in this world."

The moment I thought about it that far, I thought I knew why I was so angry.

"Whatever happens here is none of your business."

"Lee Hyunsung, is that your idea? Or..."

Watching Lee Hyunsung slowly clenching his fist, I bit my lip as I asked.

"Is it the idea of 'Han Sooyoung' who created you?"

I saw Lee Hyunsung's shoulders flinch at my words.

He must be angry. I know that those words might make him feel bad.

Nevertheless, it was something that had to be said.

"I will solve the 'problem' of this worldline."

Because that was the 'scenario' I had received.

The problem of the worldline.

The moment I saw the story that Lee Hyunsung was telling, I could instinctively know. The secret they were hiding was the 'problem' I was looking for.

And in order to dig up that problem, I needed to dig into their sensitive parts as much as possible.

"What do you know?"

A lofty wave of story rose from Lee Hyunsung's entire body. When I directly faced his story that defeated the 'star dregs', the pressure was truly enormous. This was the power of the Steel Sword Emperor who had reached the Final Scenario.

If I were to fight one-on-one right now, would I be able to defeat Lee Hyunsung?

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', growls.]

If we only consider my specs, I'm not that disadvantaged. I have a Mythical Story, and a 'Giant Tale' that has yet to be named.

But I wasn't sure. It wasn't simply because Lee Hyunsung's story was so powerful.

I don't know why, but the moment I confronted his anger, I felt as if I was encountering a world. I felt the emotions of that world so clearly that I could touch them. A world that was strong, noble, sad, and for some reason, resented me.

This world...

"I understand."

As soon as Lee Seolhwa stopped me, the pressure of the story that had been weighing me disappeared as if it had been washed away.

"I'll take you to the Captain."

"Seolhwa-ssi."

Lee Seolhwa nodded to Lee Hyunsung as if telling him to stay still. Lee Hyunsung, who had been biting his lips nervously, quickly stepped aside.

"Follow me."

I followed Lee Seolhwa to the base. We walked along the path where the rain was falling steadily. Even though it was a path that would take only 10 seconds to reach if we ran, Lee Seolhwa's pace was leisurely. It was as if she was deliberately killing time.

"How have you been over the past two years?"

I wondered if she was asking to lighten the mood.

I smiled and asked back.

"Isn't it too late to ask me?"

"I'm sorry."

Looking at Lee Seolhwa smiling brightly, I thought for a moment about what to say.

First of all, I wasn't 'Kim Dokja who visited here two years ago'.

So what should I say as Kim Dokja's representative?

I've had a lot going on. I've seen the end of the scenarios, I've become a god of the universe, and then my existence was torn to pieces, and now I stand before you as one of those torn pieces. There is… I can express all that history, but I barely managed to find a sentence that can explain nothing.

"There was a lot going on."

"We are like that too."

I nodded to Lee Seolhwa's words.

"Yes, it seems so."

Lee Seolhwa's steps slowed down even more.

Now the base was right in front of us.

"Have you had a separate conversation with the Captain?"

"She asked me to watch the end of this world together."

Lee Seolhwa paused for a moment at my words.

"The Captain has been waiting for you all along."

"Me?"

"Too long."

Waited too long?

Lee Seolhwa stood tall at the entrance of the base. Her gaze, blankly staring at the entrance, was somewhat lonely.

"I'll ask you one last time. Do you really want to meet the 'real Han Sooyoung'?"

I let out a light sigh.

"I don't know why you keep wasting time. Aren't you a part of Han Sooyoung anyway?"

"…"

“Lee Hyunsung, Kim Namwoon, Lee Jihye. Everyone already knows that they are Han Sooyoung's avatars."

I had seen Han Sooyoung recreate <Kim Dokja Company> with her avatars before.

But Han Sooyoung of the 1,863rd Round could do even more.

In short, she could inject all the avatars with different stories and make them into one 'being'.

"Stop acting, Han Sooyoung."

"I know what you're thinking, but I'm not Han Sooyoung."

"You're Han Sooyoung's avatar."

Lee Seolhwa's eyebrows furrowed at my assertion.

"Yes, that's right. I am her avatar."

At the same time as Lee Seolhwa answered, a light spark flew from the entrance of the base.

I observed the spark for a moment, then looked around at the surrounding incarnations and asked.

"Is there anyone here who is not an avatar?"

I thought that there was no way that they were all [Avatars].

Even if it was Han Sooyoung, would it be possible to operate this many avatars simultaneously?

Instead of asking, I could have checked it myself. After all, avatars have the characteristic of 'bleeding stories, not blood'.

However, not all avatars are like that, and avatars that have received a certain amount of memories bleed.

In other words, with my current abilities, there was no way to distinguish who was an avatar and who was not.

"Is that important?"

"It is important. I need to know why Han Sooyoung did this."

"What are you going to do when you find out?"

"Yes?"

"If you find out why the Captain recreated us as avatars, will you take responsibility for this world with the Captain?"

I couldn't answer.

"Why did Han Sooyoung make you avatars?"

"Just because you're Kim Dokja's avatar, doesn't mean you understand everything about Kim Dokja."

"You don't know?"

"Well, I don't know."

"Please call Han Sooyoung's true body. She can manifest through you whenever she wants."

"It's not that simple. We're not simple [Avatars]."

You're not simple [Avatars]?

"Do you really want to know the truth of this world? The Captain doesn't want you to know."

Lee Seolhwa's voice was earnest as she said those words.

"You can just pretend not to know and stay in this world. If the Captain hid something, there must be a reason for it."

I shook my head.

"That's not my way."

"Some secrets make you responsible just by knowing them. Are you still curious?"

I nodded.

Lee Seolhwa took a deep breath and said.

"From now on, get your mind straight. This 'base' is not where you thought it was."

With those words, Lee Seolhwa grabbed my wrist.

"Don't believe what you see in front of you. Don't be fooled by the sentence right in front of you. Believe the 'story' you think, the 'story' you believe."

Before I could even ask what that meant, my vision was enveloped in darkness. I wondered what was going on.

"Seolhwa-ssi?"

I spoke to Lee Seolhwa. Lee Seolhwa's hand appeared in the dim light floating in the air. Lee Seolhwa's body had completely disappeared, leaving only the wrist that was holding me.

I flinched and stepped back, seeing the blood dripping on the floor. I instinctively thought that I had to get out of here. However, the moment I looked back, I couldn't see the entrance I had just entered.

"Seolhwa-ssi!"

The voice echoed hollowly in the darkness.

A moment later, a voice was heard in the darkness.

"Save me."

It was Lee Seolhwa's voice.

"Save me."

At the same time, a piece of advice came to mind.

Don't believe what you see before your eyes.

"Please save me."

I felt something grabbing my ankle. I saw hands filling the floor. Hands crawling like insects were holding my ankle.

"Please save me."

I gradually became unable to tell whose voice it was. Nevertheless, I knew the owners of those wrists.

"Pleasesavemepleasesavemepleasesavemepleasesavemepleasesavemepleasesavemeplease asesavemepleasesaveme."

Some wrists belonged to Kim Namwoon, and some belonged to Lee Jihye. There were also wrists that looked like those of an Archangel or a Demon King.

I felt like I would go crazy if I stayed still, so I started running. And the next moment.

"Avoid!"

A huge magic wave flew from the front. I felt someone covering my body as if covering it.

A large man looked down at me.

"Lee Hyunsung?"

Lee Hyunsung, who had raised his body while protecting me, dripped blood from his mouth. The blood he had been possessed flowed into the large hole in his chest.

"I'm sorry, Captain."

Lee Hyunsung's head burst open.

When I reached out, Lee Hyunsung's body turned into stories and scattered.

And the sentence before my eyes came to mind.

「Scenario 85. Hypothesis 9724. 'Demon World Hell Island' discarded.」

The scene before my eyes changed.

All I could see was the vast ocean.

I heard something exploding in the distance. The tsunami of the ocean was coming.

"Eeeeeeeee! I can't stand it anymore!"

"I told you not to touch Poseidon!"

The voices that resembled Lee Jihye and Kim Namwoon crashed like waves, and soon everything in front of me was swept away by the sea.

「Scenario 44. Hypothesis 981. 'Sea Expedition' discarded.」

With no time to catch my breath, the scene changed once again.

"What the hell is that?"

When I raised my head, I saw a huge meteorite falling. Beyond the meteorite, the Constellations were grinning. And the voices of the incarnations despairing.

"How can I deal with something like that—"

Then the Earth was shattered into pieces.

「Scenario 72. Hypothesis 9135. 'Interstellar Road Murder' discarded.」

I couldn't come to my senses from the tragedy that was raging.

Why on earth are these things inside the base?

Every time I took a deep breath, the pain and screams of the dying incarnations flowed into me.

The pain felt like my head was going to burst. Inside, I muttered.

"I am Kim Dokja."

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', is activated!]

I protected my mind with the strengthened [Fourth Wall].

Even in the midst of all this, the scenery before my eyes continued to change.

「Scenario 88. Hypothesis 9135. 'Deep Sea Monarch' discarded.」

A monster that awoke from the deep sea attacked the Korean Peninsula.

「Scenario 89. Hypothesis 331. 'Zeus Provocation' discarded.」

Ignoring the probability, <First Murim> collapsed due to the strong Zeus.

「Scenario 90. Hypothesis 9135. 'Otherworldly Deity #61' discarded.」

All of humanity died after accidentally summoning the 'Otherworldly Deity' to fight against the Giant Nebula.

「Scenario 90. Hypothesis 911. 'Nebula Spy' discarded.」

They planned to overthrow the Giant Nebula from within, but instead she was captured and subjected to terrible torture.

It was strange.

If all of these are Han Sooyoung's memories, then why do these memories exist?

Isn't she Yoo Joonghyuk?

「It's not only those who regress that regress.」

For a moment, I vaguely thought I knew the answer.

This was a 'regression' that only she could do.

「Scenario 90. Hypothesis 12454, 'Black Cloud Killing' discarded.」

「Scenario 91. Hypothesis 1199. 'Invasion of Olympus' discarded.」

As I watched the vivid destruction pouring down before my eyes, I thought about the origin of all this destruction.

These records were all records of 'worlds that could have existed'. All of this destruction had occurred entirely within her.

「Predictive Plagiarism.」

'Future Prediction Stigmata' surpassing Hermes's 'Big Data System' or Anna Croft's [Future Sight].

I knew that if such an ability was activated, the user would certainly pay a huge price, but I never thought that the way the stigma was implemented would be like this.

「Scenario 92. Hypothesis 10841. 'The Nameless Mist' discarded.」

I had completely overlooked how vivid a representation was needed to measure the future with a mere 'thought experiment'.

A fantasy world where you can't feel even the slightest difference from reality. Sitting in the twisted tunnel of her mind, Han Sooyoung wrote and erased countless worlds to protect just one reality.

「Scenario 92. Hypothesis 12841. 'Nirvana Re-entry' discarded.」

She wrote characters dying in front of her eyes over and over again. She wrote, erased, wrote, and erased.

I couldn't know how her mind had changed during that time. I couldn't know what it was like to live a life sacrificing countless fictional stories to complete just one story.

「This 'hypothetical world' doesn't exist.」

The writer, leaning on that one psychological breakwater, endlessly destroyed, destroyed, and destroyed the world again.

One day, she might have thought this.

「Is this hypothesis really a 'hypothesis'?」

How is this secret country that remains in her memory different from the 1,863 regressions that Yoo Joonghyuk has lived through? How is it different from the 'Ways of Survival' that was once a novel?

「Scenario 93. Hypothesis 12841. 'Hermes Hacking' discarded.」

「Scenario 93. Hypothesis 31145. 'Isgard End' discarded.」

「Scenario 94. Hypothesis 1912. 'Korean Peninsula Unification' discarded.」

「Scenario 94. Hypothesis 8754. 'Worldline Overturning' discarded.」

My breathing became more and more suffocated.

I wanted to know what had driven her this far.

At the end of this false ending, I wanted to ask what the real ending she had been looking for was.

At that moment...

「Scenario 95.」

A landscape unfolded. It was a landscape where destruction had not yet come.

「'The Second Coming of the Apocalypse.'」

A rooftop of a base where a cool night breeze blew. A man was standing on the edge of that rooftop. The moment I saw his fluttering white coat, I realized.

This was not a 'hypothesis.'

"Han Sooyoung."

The Kim Dokja I remember.

The Kim Dokja who had crossed the worldline like me and visited the 1,863rd Round that day was speaking.

"What kind of story do you want to write in the future?"

Han Sooyoung asked back.

"What kind of story do you want to read?"

Kim Dokja seemed to think for a moment.

As I watched Kim Dokja, surrounded by the desolate night scenery, I suddenly thought I knew what he was going to say. Perhaps there was no sin in that answer. Nevertheless,

"I wish there was a story where no one dies."

Kim Dokja should not have given that answer.

889 Episode 48 Avatar (12)

My fingertips trembled violently.

I wondered if that was true.

Maybe the reason Han Sooyoung created so many avatars was…

「Scenario 95. 'The Reincarnation of the Apocalypse'.」

The screen changed, and the scenario began to play out in real time before my eyes.

"Captain, will we be okay?"

The sound of the sealing ball in the sky moving was heard along with Kim Namwoon's worried voice.

It would take three days for the seal to be completely released.

「"The Apocalypse is not over just because it's been released. You know that, right?"」

Han Sooyoung agreed with Kim Dokja.

"I'll tell you in advance, there's no way for us to fight the Apocalypse head-on and win."

The Apocalypse that was coming this time was the disaster that destroyed <Eden> in the past Holy Demon War. There was no way that human power could stop the disaster that even destroyed the Giant Nebula.

"But there is a way for everyone to survive."

Han Sooyoung said as he looked around at her party.

"We just have to abandon Earth."

'The Resurrection of the Apocalypse' is a scenario whose goal is to liberate the Apocalypse.

They could survive if they moved to the next scenario area before the creature woke up.

Is that all?

Now that they had liberated the Apocalypse, they could also receive a reward.

The Giant Tale, 「Liberator of the Apocalypse」.

It was truly an enormous reward.

They would probably be able to meet most of the conditions needed for the 'introduction, development, climax, and conclusion' with the 'Giant Tale' they obtained this time. And in the Last Scenario, they would be able to compete with the Giant Nebulae.

But they had to discard the cards they needed to discard for that.

"Don't worry, I'll take all of my colleagues from headquarters with me."

The colleagues looked half in doubt. Lee Jihye was the first to raise an objection.

"Captain. Even if we move, not everyone else can go."

"What about the Constellations on the Korean Peninsula?"

Lee Hyunsung also nodded and added.

Unlike Han Sooyoung, who became a Constellation herself, all of her colleagues had contracts with a sponsor. Even if the incarnations move on to the next scenario, their sponsor is in a different situation.

"The Maritime War God and the God of Wine and Ecstasy are all from the Earth as the origin of the legend. If the Earth disappears because of the Apocalypse Dragon..."

The Constellations that lost the origin of their legend could face the risk of extinction.

That wasn't the only problem.

"There are also people who didn't receive this main scenario."

Including the craftsmen, those who couldn't move on to the 'next scenario area'.

"Captain, we're fine."

"Thank you for leading us this far."

The incarnations who couldn't participate in the Apocalypse Dragon Liberation battle because they didn't meet the qualifications for the scenario.

If the party moves on like this, all the remaining ones will be abandoned. And if they're unlucky, they'll be swept away by the destruction of the Earth and scattered as story fragments.

Han Sooyoung bit her lip.

She couldn't save everyone. 「Predictive Plagiarism」 wasn't omnipotent, she knew that well.

But even though she knew that well, why was she so troubled?

「"I wish there was a story where no one dies."」

Is it because she heard that from Kim Dokja?

「Scenario 95, hypothesis 1575 'Apocalypse Dragon Resealing' discarded.」

「Scenario 95, hypothesis 5612 'Righteous talent' discarded.」

Han Sooyoung thought and thought again.

「Scenario 95, hypothesis 9413 'Sealing Orb Reinforcement' discarded.」

「Scenario 95, hypothesis 18563 'Jophiel' discarded.」

She destroyed countless worlds inside her in real time, searching for a method and finding it again.

The result.

「Scenario 95, hypothesis 88875 'Grand Banquet'.」

She arrived at a hypothesis.

「Success rate less than 30%.」

A hypothesis is only a hypothesis when it's in your head. The moment even one sentence of that hypothesis comes out of your head, it becomes reality.

「If it fails, all the main characters will be annihilated.」

A failed plan will lead to the end of reality. A writer who knows that well should never have mentioned this plan out loud.

Still.

"Just one."

Han Sooyoung opened her mouth after a long silence.

"If there's a way to defeat the Apocalypse and protect the Earth... will you try it?"

If it were the usual Han Sooyoung, she wouldn't have brought that up to the group.

A plan that takes that much risk can't be called a 'plan'.

But Han Sooyoung was different that day.

"If it fails, everyone could die."

She took her time explaining the plan. She paid extra attention when explaining the level of risk. She explained and explained for a long time that they didn’t have to make this choice, that they were walking into the pit of hell instead of the safe path.

The group listened carefully to Han Sooyoung.

And when the story finally ended, Lee Jihye asked.

"Why didn’t you tell me about that method earlier?"

For some reason, the group looked delighted. Even though the plan had less than a 30% success rate, and even though it was a plan that could easily wipe out everyone here, the expressions on the group’s faces after hearing the story were strangely bright.

"I waited for the Captain to say that."

"We can now fight properly."

Looking at the faces of the group, Han Sooyoung also realized something a little late.

She wasn’t the only one who was inspired by Kim Dokja—or by the story he left behind.

"A 30% success rate is a very high success rate. And Captain, you can’t execute that plan alone, right?"

The plan was established.

But not long after that, Han Sooyoung began to think.

「That plan had to be a 'hypothesis'.」

The moment I unconsciously held my breath, the scene changed once again.

When I blinked, the first thing I saw was the gorgeous chandelier hanging from the ceiling.

I was standing in a banquet hall.

As I stood there blankly, several incarnations of the Constellations came and bumped into me. As I lost my balance and stumbled, someone grabbed my hand.

"I told you to come to your senses."

It was Lee Seolhwa.

With music flowing from somewhere, Lee Seolhwa naturally grabbed both of my hands. We started dancing together.

I answered, moving my feet to the beat.

"I’m sorry."

"If you don't read the story properly, the story will read you."

I nodded and took a deep breath.

"What is this banquet hall?"

As I looked around, I noticed some familiar faces.

It wasn't just Lee Seolhwa. Lee Hyunsung, Lee Jihye, and Kim Namwoon were each taking up a table in the banquet hall.

There were also incarnations from overseas. China's Fei Hu, India's Ranbir Khan, Japan's Asuka Ren.

Next to them were the incarnations of the Constellations. The Maritime War God, the Bald General of Justice, the First Sword of Goryeo, and the King of Beauty.

There were also incarnations of the Constellations of the Giant Nebula, the incarnations of the Constellations of the Narrative or Myth-grade.

The overwhelming feeling of the stars was so great that the wide hall felt cramped.

Lee Seolhwa, who had seen them with me, asked.

"You said you wanted to know the truth of the world, right?"

Lee Seolhwa said with a slightly sad smile.

"Then look straight ahead."

To the podium in the center of the hall I saw Han Sooyoung come up.

"Thank you all for gathering."

Han Sooyoung, who was standing on the podium, opened her mouth.

「Scenario 95. Hypothesis 88875 'Grand Banquet' execution.」

It had been a while since I had heard such eloquence. It was a speech that was neat and tidy, but emphasized the necessary parts appropriately. Anyone with ears could not help but be moved.

The content of the speech was simple.

「Let's create a 'Single Tale' that all Constellations share.」

When the speech was finally over, there was a great reaction in the banquet hall.

[The Constellation, 'Maritime War God', shares the same intentions as 'Director of the False Ending'.]

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', nods and cheers.]

[The Constellation, 'Goryeo's First Sword', agrees with 'Director of the False Ending'.]

…

However, not all the Constellations were friendly to her.

[The Constellation, 'Ferocious Lord', asks if you called him to tell him something ridiculous.]

[The Demon King claims that the 'Black Maned Lion' is just nonsense that doesn't need to be heard anymore.]

[The Constellation, 'Almighty Sun', shakes his head.]

[The Constellations of the Nebula, <Asgard>, prepares to leave.]

Han Sooyoung coldly warned those Constellations.

"If you run away like that now, there's no turning back."

[Some Constellations laugh at the words of the 'Director of the False Ending.']

[A small number of Myth-grade Constellations say that they don't need to take such risks.]

"Yes, you Myth-grade Constellations would be like that. But what about the guys below you? What about the Constellations that didn't make it to the Final Scenario? When the Apocalypse starts to twitch its tail, all of these children will die."

[Some Constellations ask if that's true.]

[A few Myth-grade Constellations are silent.]

"We haven't tried it."

The solution to some scenarios is very simple. However, since the solution is so simple that anyone can think of it, no one thinks of it as the solution.

"Never before have all the Constellations faced a single disaster."

Han Sooyoung's plan was clear.

The Apocalypse starts to 'twitch its tail' as soon as it is resurrected. If only the Apocalypse's 'resurrection disaster' could be prevented, the Constellations would have a chance.

"It's possible. You all know that. There is no 'truly impossible' scenario in this <Star Stream>."

The Constellations were shaken by her words.

Han Sooyoung continued.

"It's possible if everyone dreams of the same story. If everyone wants the same scenario, it's quite possible. Because—"

After a short pause, Han Sooyoung finished her words.

"You are the <Star Stream>."

If Han Sooyoung, who didn't trust the Constellations, had been her usual self, she would never have carried out that plan.

「To hold a single 'Grand Banquet' and unite the Constellations.」

Even so, the reason Han Sooyoung adopted the plan was probably because the Constellations who changed her mind were also Constellations.

[The Constellations of the nebula, <Olympus>, prepares to leave the scenario.]

However, the Constellations had lived too long to be persuaded by a brief speech. Their choice had been predetermined.

[The Constellations of the nebula, <Vedas>, prepares to leave the scenario.]

Faced with the catastrophe before her eyes, Han Sooyoung smiled as if she had expected that.

"Yeah, I knew it. But you don't have a choice anyway, do you?"

[From now on, 'Scenario departures' are restricted.]

"Because."

[Warning! The resurrection of the 'Final Dragon of the Apocalypse' is imminent!]

In order to gather the Constellations together and borrow their power, Han Sooyoung made a drastic choice.

"The disaster has already begun."

「That is, to bring forward the 'Resurrection of the Apocalypse' by a few hours earlier than scheduled.」

A loud noise echoed through the sky. The entire banquet hall seemed to shake dangerously, and the Apocalypse Dragon began to poke its head out through the broken seal.

"From now on, we will create the Final Tale of the <Star Stream>."

Han Sooyoung's plan was perfect.

Attracting the Constellations and making them all fight against the 'Apocalypse Dragon' at the same time.

But as always, a perfect plan did not necessarily guarantee success.

「Scenario 95, 'The Second Coming of the Apocalypse Dragon'.」

That day when the night sky of the <Star Stream> was brightly lit by a director.

「Failure of the scenario strategy.」

The universe of the 1,863rd Round returned to the darkness of the beginning.

890 Episode 48 Avatar (13)

A meteor shower was observed.

A rain of stars falling from the sky.

I realized anew how many Constellations there were in the sky of the <Star Stream>.

The Constellations that forced the scenarios on the incarnations, cheered them, laughed at them, mocked them, supported them, saved them, and were saved.

The Constellations were weighing.

I looked up at the scenery she had seen that day in Han Sooyoung's world.

"It begins."

Everything flowed according to Han Sooyoung's will. The Constellations that were blocked from running away from her scheme had no choice but to follow Han Sooyoung's plan.

「First Wave, Lightning.」

One of the representative Constellations of <Asgard> stood against the Lightning Wave.

[I am the Thunder of Thursday!]

Thunder of Thursday, Thor.

[I didn't know I would end up fighting you.]

Indra, the God King of Lightning.

The Constellations of the Narrative-grade that belonged to the Ten-Yo also participated.

[Ooooooooooo!]

'Lightning of Disaster and Harvest', Raijin.

A Japanese Constellation that did not properly appear in the main story.

Kugugugugu!

But those three could not cancel out all the lightning waves.

[We'll join in too!]

The martial artists who learned the martial arts of the electric power system, and the Constellations of the great men also helped.

But despite the cooperation of those Constellations, the lightning wave that spread out mercilessly swept away the universe of the <Star Stream>.

The Constellations were oxidized without even being able to scream.

But there was no time to look back at them.

「Second wave, Flames.」

The flame wave continued without giving them a moment to catch their breath. The Constellations began to retreat in fear at the flame wave that was even larger than the lightning wave.

"Now it's my turn to step forward!"

As Kim Namwoon, who was covered in [Black Flame] all over his body, confidently stepped forward, the Constellations also burst into cheers as if they could not lose.

[Nothing compared to the flames of the volcano!]

The Blacksmith of the Volcano, Hephaestus.

[It is time to choose the strongest flame.]

'Burning Tragedy', Kagutsuchi and 'Wandering Lantern', Jack O'Lantern.

What appeared behind them was the God of Fire whose entire body was engulfed in bright flames.

[I will stop it.]

Agni, the 'Flame of Purification', one of the Locapalas of <Vedas>.

[This time, I cannot miss out.]

Likewise, Surua, the 'God of Supreme Light', one of the Locapalas.

[K, I am pushed back—!]

[Kuaaaaaaaah!]

Even so, the total amount of power was insufficient. As the Constellations became stronger, the shockwaves emitted by the Apocalypse Dragon also became stronger. The moment Hephaestus and Agni, who had been holding out in the front row, were scattered to ashes, the terrified Constellations screamed and ran away.

However, there were some Constellations that did not run away and kept their positions.

[Not yet.]

She was the last remaining Archangel of the 1,863rd <Eden>.

The Demon-like Judge of Fire, Uriel.

The wall of flames built around her blocked the heat wave. How much time had passed like that? Uriel's [Hellfire] began to split the waves of heat little by little.

A disaster that confirmed the destruction of the <Star Stream> along with its manifestation. The Constellations trembled as they watched the disaster being canceled out in real time before their eyes.

[Yes, we did it. We did it!]

[This could really be…!]

Although the damage to the planets other than Earth was enormous, the Constellations that protected the main scenario area regained their spirits.

However, Han Sooyoung's expression was not so bright.

「The flow is not good.」

The scenery in front of me was a scene from a hypothesis that had already been discarded.

「Discarded hypothesis 87413. 'Sabotage'.」

In that hypothesis, the lightning and flame waves of the Apocalypse Dragon were blocked much more easily than expected, and as a result, the Star Stream met a terrible end.

[The <Star Stream>'s probability is moving.]

Han Sooyoung bit her lips.

[What, why is the probability suddenly—]

[Damn it! That's…!]

The <Star Stream>'s probability flows in the direction that the watching Constellations want.

Even in this situation where countless Constellations were facing off against the Apocalypse Dragon, there were still Constellations enjoying the game.

[Why are the Myth-grade Constellations…]

The Myth-grade Constellations had already sacrificed their own legends and escaped the disaster zone.

They were watching the destruction of Earth in the Final Scenario zone.

[The <Star Stream>'s Myth-grade Constellations laugh at the 'Director of the False Ending'.]

They did not want Han Sooyoung and other Constellations to prevent the disaster of the Apocalypse Dragon. If such a 'Tale' were born, Han Sooyoung would have the power to destroy even the positions of the Myth-grade Constellations.

「Third Wave, Chaos.」

The third wave of the Apocalypse Dragon then attacked the Constellations.

[Ahhhhhh!]

The Constellations that were hit by the chaos wave from the front collapsed with a final gasp.

The chaos wave was fundamentally different from the previous lightning wave or flame wave. Only beings with both good and evil characteristics or those who were protected by a 'divinity of the other world' could deal with it. However, this was not without a way to attack. If the Constellations of 'Absolute Good' and 'Absolute Evil' that participated in the Holy Demon War joined forces, and thus could recreate the grand tale of the 'Holy Demon War', it would be possible to arbitrarily implement the attribute of chaos.

However.

[Some Constellations are protected by the 'Nebula' and depart from the scenario!]

Taking advantage of the weakened regulation of the scenario, the Constellations of 'Absolute Good' and 'Absolute Evil' that were protected by the Holy Gate began to depart one by one.

In an instant, only one Constellation of the Holy War remained in the front.

"Uriel! No!"

The incarnation of the Archangel who had thrown everything away along with the flames of [Hellfire] was scattered to ashes.

The balance of the battlefield collapsed, and the Historical-grade Constellations trembled in fear. Everything in the area was being swept away by the chaos wave of the Apocalypse Dragon.

However, Han Sooyoung did not give up.

"I expected this."

Gazing upon the approaching chaos wave, Han Sooyoung took out the Holy Fruit of <Eden> from her bosom. The moment she bit into the 'Fruit of the Tree of Good and Evil', the power of chaos surged from her entire body.

[The power of the 'Fruit of the Tree of Good and Evil' seeps into you!]

[All the Constellations of 'Absolute Good' are astonished by your choice!]

[All the Constellations of 'Absolute Evil' are astonished by your choice!]

[Some Myth-grade Constellations mock you, saying that it is impossible for you to endure the 'Chaos Wave' alone.]

Han Sooyoung also knew.

Eating the Fruit of the Tree of Good and Evil was just a means to use her body as a conduit for 'chaos'.

In order to prevent the approaching disaster, she needed the support of a powerful being that could restrain the Apocalypse Dragon.

The first thing that came to mind was 'Nameless Mist'. However, if she were to summon the 'Nameless Mist', a disaster like the Apocalypse Dragon, the Earth would also be destroyed in return. The worries didn't last long.

"Great ancient being who governs the ancient tales!"

Chaos rings began to rise all over Han Sooyoung's body.

[Nebula, <Papyrus>, warns you!]

[Nebula, <Olympus>, gives orders to the terminal incarnation!]

[Nebula, <Asgard>, is glaring at you!]

Nebula's terminal incarnations rushed toward Han Sooyoung all at once. They were determined to stop Han Sooyoung even at the risk of self-destruction.

This was what the 1,863rd Myth-grade Constellations thought. If they didn't eliminate Han Sooyoung here, Han Sooyoung would become their greatest threat in the future.

The chaos faction was in front, and the incarnations of Nebulae were running from behind.

Even so, Han Sooyoung was smiling.

"I knew it all."

This was the last tale of the <Star Stream> that she had planned.

「Hypothesis 88876. 'Great Chaos'.」

The chaos wave of the Apocalypse covered the Earth.

[The protection of the 'Great Old Being' is upon you.]

While no Constellation dared to utter a word, the chaos wave of the Apocalypse began to be sucked into her hand.

However, even with the power of the 'Great Old Being', it was impossible to completely handle the chaos wave. So instead of accepting the chaos wave, she chose to twist the chaos wave's trajectory and strike it back.

In the direction she twisted the chaos wave's trajectory.

[The Myth-grade Constellations are astonished!]

The 'Myth-grade Constellations' of the Last Scenario were staying there.

Kugugugugugu!

The Constellations screamed. With countless mantras covering the sky, the chaos wave of the Apocalypse covered the Constellations.

[The Myth-grade Constellations aboard the 'Last Ark' roar!]

The sky was covered in pitch-black darkness. The universe flickered, and day and night alternated.

The shining Constellations began to fade, and the number of indirect messages began to decrease one by one. Thick darkness descended, and the universe was covered in silence.

After a while, when even that darkness receded, Han Sooyoung slowly opened her eyes.

What she saw in the sky was the Apocalypse Dragon, crouching back into the seal as if tired, and the 'Last Ark', torn in half and stuck in the atmosphere.

[All the Constellations of the <Star Stream> will never forget the 'Director of the False Ending'.]

The scenario was over.

She blocked the shockwave of the Apocalypse Dragon.

"It's done."

She barely managed to let out a sigh.

The disaster was over. The hypothesis was successful. But when Han Sooyoung slowly turned her head and looked, a landscape that wasn't in her 「Predictive Plagiarism」 was unfolding.

"Ah."

The characters she had to protect were lying helplessly there.

「Hypothesis 88876. 'Great Chaos'.」

Lee Hyunsung, Kim Namwoon, Lee Jihye, Lee Seolhwa, Shin Yoosung. And…

「Failure of development.」

The landscape began to tear apart in front of her eyes. As if erasing a sentence that was written incorrectly, the landscape was blurring mercilessly and quickly.

「That had to be a hypothesis.」

Only sentences that were not erased lingered between the torn landscape.

「It was a story that shouldn't become reality.」

I stared blankly at those sentences.

「That guy probably didn't want to see this kind of story.」

Han Sooyoung's voice and system messages were heard occasionally. Han Sooyoung was carrying her fallen comrades in the torn landscape. Fatal injury that could not be revived even with a Life and Death Ring.

「No one should die.」

Her 「Predicitve Plagiarism」 was going wild. The slurry that flowed out engulfed the group.

The power of the other world began to swallow everything in the area. The dead people and the broken headquarters were covered.

And now I was finally realizing how the scenery I had seen had been created.

That's right. The people I had met, the base in Gwanghwamun, all of it was Han Sooyoung's—

"Kim Dokja-ssi."

When I suddenly turned my head, Lee Soohwa was grabbing my wrist.

"We have to go back now."

"I haven't met the real Han Sooyoung yet."

"The Captain doesn't want to meet you. Because..."

"Because I know the whole truth."

Seeing Lee Soohwa hesitate, I added.

"That's why we have to meet even more."

"Sooyoung-ssi—"

"Han Sooyoung should no longer use [Avatar]."

I know what Lee Seolhwa is trying to say.

The ability to cover Gwanghwamun with her [Avatars]. This was not a miracle of the scale that an ordinary Constellation could perform.

Han Sooyoung may have become a being beyond human. She may have been imbued with the power of the 'Great Old Being' she made a contract with, and become a god.

"There is something I absolutely must say."

Even so, I could not give up.

"Don't be greedy."

"..."

"It was the Captain's choice. She created this world, she made us avatars, it was all the Captain's choice. It's not for you to meddle in it."

"..."

"You just have to pretend not to know. Just experience this world the Captain created, and return to your original world like a reader who reads an interesting story. Then—"

I shook off her hand and started to move forward.

"Kim Dokja!"

Lee Seolhwa's voice grew distant, and my vision was covered in darkness again. With every step I took, the darkness rippled noisily.

I soon realized that the darkness was not simply the absence of light.

「Failure.」

「I failed.」

「This story failed.」

This darkness was the remains of her 「Predictive Plagiarism」.

I called Han Sooyoung's name.

"Han Sooyoung!"

Discarded hypotheses. Discarded memories feebly caught my feet.

At the end of the remains was an old door.

I read the small sign on the door.

'Writing'.

The moment I raised my hand to knock on the door, the darkness that jumped out from behind grabbed me. As if telling me not to disturb her, the pitch-black sentences pulled my hands and feet as if they were restraining them. Soon, my hands and feet, caught in the darkness, turned pitch-black. It started to get wet.

"Han Sooyoung!"

Instead of answering, the sound of the keyboard was constantly coming from behind the door. The fact that I could hear this sound meant that Han Sooyoung was also hearing my voice.

"Kim Dokja has already read your story!"

I had to make her open that door herself and come out.

"The story you wrote saved Kim Dokja!"

Perhaps my words could twist the foundation of the universe. I might be driving the universe to destruction once again in order to save one person in front of me.

「I don't know why she is so obsessed with 'readers'.」

However, I thought about Han Sooyoung's life.

「Maybe that's the setting she received as a 'writer'.」

I thought about the countless sentences she had written and erased, and the distant eternity of writing that spread out before her.

「She deserves to know the truth of this world. Just like Yoo Joonghyuk did.」

I thought of the writer who devoted her life to saving just one person, and of the one reader who read that story again. I thought of the two people who never met each other but saved each other. Maybe that salvation is enough. Maybe that world doesn't need a side story.

Still, wouldn't it be okay to allow them just one sentence? Even if it's just a footnote, even if that footnote changes everything in this world.

"You are tls123."

The keyboard stopped clicking.

891 Episode 49 tls123 (1)

---

「Do you think there is anything more lonely than knowing the future?」

—Anna Croft, the Prophet.

---

If asked to choose a scene from her childhood that could be the introduction to a novel, Han Sooyoung couldn’t help but think of that scene.

"Wake up."

The one who said those words was the 'uncle' who took care of the young Han Sooyoung.

The young Han Sooyoung was the only one who called him uncle. Her father called him a 'manager' and her mother called him a 'housekeeper'.

"No one will protect you."

He made Han Sooyoung’s breakfast at 8 a.m. He was such a good cook that Han Sooyoung never missed a single breakfast he made.

"Is this your country’s food?"

"It’s similar."

Han Sooyoung asked, looking back and forth between the pad thai and banh mi he had made.

"Pad Thai is Thai food, right?"

"That's right."

"Banh Mi is Vietnamese food."

"That's right."

Han Sooyoung didn't ask any more questions. She wouldn't know just by looking at it. Maybe her uncle's mother is Thai and his father is Vietnamese.

Just like her mother is a teacher and her father is a member of the National Assembly.

Her uncle also had a peculiar habit. After doing the washing machine, he would do strange movements by himself in the living room.

"What is that?"

"Baekbo Shin Kwon."

Her uncle answered in a tone like an AI translator and repeated the strange movements.

"You have to be proficient in various martial arts to survive."

In fact, he knew various martial arts other than Baekbo Shin Kwon.

Han Sooyoung imitated her uncle's posture and asked.

"But is there any use for this? Our country has pretty good security."

"If you learn it, you'll use it someday."

My uncle was a man who firmly believed that an apocalypse would come to this world someday.

"A new world needs new rules."

Now in her fading memory, Han Sooyoung followed her uncle's movements diligently. After repeating the movements and finishing dinner, her uncle would always leave work with the following greeting.

"No matter what happens, don't give up."

Han Sooyoung thought that greeting was hilarious. If she had known that her uncle would soon be replaced by her aunt, Han Sooyoung would have talked more with her uncle.

"Han Sooyoung."

After a long silence, her uncle grabbed Han Sooyoung's small head and said this.

"The apocalypse is coming."

"You always say that."

"It really will come."

"Yes, yes. I understand."

"No matter what happens, don't give up."

What was the last thing she said to her uncle? Her memories after that are unclear. Since it happened when she was so young, it was probably natural. Still, when she thinks back, there were a few things she remembered.

The last day her uncle worked, several valuables disappeared from the house. Her uncle used the Baekbo Shinkwon he had taught her right before he was caught by the police. Rumors that he had gone to prison. Rumors that he had escaped from prison. Rumors that he had threatened to reveal the secrets of her father, who was a member of the National Assembly, and had been forcibly repatriated to his home country.

Where did her uncle end up?

Once, when she visited her mother on the weekend, she asked about her uncle.

Her mother tilted her head for a moment at her question and then asked back,

"What on earth are you talking about?"

Han Sooyoung frowned and talked about her uncle. She talked about the breakfast he had made her, the Baekbo Shinkwon he had taught her, and the impending apocalypse.

Her mother took Han Sooyoung to a psychiatrist. The doctor who had often prescribed propofol to her mother was impressed after hearing Han Sooyoung's story.

"Your daughter seems to have an imaginary friend."

That couldn't be true. Her uncle definitely existed. He made her breakfast.

He told her about a monster that looked like a dog, a monster with long horns, and a dragon that led the world to its end.

He also told her about the Constellations. When he talked about the Constellations, her uncle would look up at the sky with deep eyes.

All of that couldn't have been fake. No one could have forgotten someone like that. But people collectively didn't believe her as if they had taken propofol.

The only one who remembered him was young Han Sooyoung, and so her uncle remained an imaginary friend that Han Sooyoung had created.

Not long after that, Han Sooyoung began writing a novel.

When she woke up from a deep sleep, she felt a deep sense of fatigue and ideas welled up. Han Sooyoung wrote everything that came to mind into a novel.

In the novel, there was the apocalypse that her uncle had spoken of. The main character of that world was a regressor. A regressor who fought alone against the destruction of the world.

"What was your uncle's name?"

Han Sooyoung couldn’t answer the psychiatrist’s question properly. Instead, Han Sooyoung said the name that most closely resembled her memory.

"Yoo Junhyun."

Yoo Junhyun gathers his colleagues and struggles with life in endless regression.

He doesn’t give up.

What if her uncle wasn’t just her imagination, what if her uncle really lived somewhere in this world?

In fact, if his home country wasn’t this world but another world, in a sense, the novel was written to overcome Han Sooyoung’s childhood.

Every time Yoo Junhyun’s regression was repeated, the uncle in her memory became blurred. Her childhood memories turned gray, and Han Sooyoung gradually became an adult.

One day, while she was writing the novel.

—Isn’t this a plagiarism of 'Three Ways to Survive in a Ruined World'?

She read a strange comment.

---

When she came to her senses, Han Sooyoung realized that it was all a dream.

Tsk tsk tsk. As the faint spark illuminated the surroundings, the incarnation bodies of her colleagues on the verge of death came into view.

[Exclusive skill, 'Special Preservation', is activated.]

To be exact, they were the incarnation bodies of her colleagues who were frozen in a state just before death.

Kim Namwoon with both arms ripped off. Lee Hyunsung with a large hole in his stomach. Lee Jihye with critical injuries to her major organs. Lee Seolhwa, who was barely breathing after being burned beyond recognition, and Shin Yoosung, whose vital signs had weakened after a strong blow to the head.

In addition to them, all of the colleagues of <Han Sooyoung Corporation> were stuffed and trapped in pale flasks.

As if time had stopped just before death.

Han Sooyoung looked at her colleagues with her piercing eyes and thought about her 'uncle' once more.

Perhaps the existence of an 'uncle' was a memory that was reassembled after she became an adult—a memory created after she met Yoo Joonghyuk, for example. Because stories tend to flow towards 'empty spaces'.

"Why is it Yoo Joonghyuk and not Yoo Joonhyun?"

Yoo Joonhyun in her memories says.

「"No matter what happens, don't give up."」

"How can you not give up in a situation like this?"

Mumbling in a tone that made it unclear who she was talking to, Han Sooyoung slowly started typing on the keyboard.

「Lee Hyunsung thought. I need training. I need painful and harsh training to stop my thoughts from continuing.」

「Shin Yoosung asked worriedly, "But is it okay to just leave that ahjussi alone?"」

「Lee Jihye frowned. "Then what are we going to do? Seolhwa took him away."」

「Kim Namwoon shook his head. "I told you I didn't like that guy in the first place.」

「Lee Seolhwa shouted. "Dokja-ssi! Where are you!"」

All of [Avatar]'s actions were being created at her fingertips. The created sentences flowed through the story link extending from her and directly toward her colleagues stuffed in the flask.

The story of [Avatar] she wrote will one day become her colleagues' memories. So that they can reminisce about this moment together when they are resurrected in the distant future.

This is her world where she can see the ending without losing anyone.

「Avatar World.」

Han Sooyoung thought she knew why she had been dreaming about her 'uncle'.

Perhaps the uncle in her memory was the first avatar she had created. A strong avatar that would comfort her loneliness and protect her childhood.

The tips of her fingers began to tingle a little. Her vision felt dizzy with a slight chill. This had been happening often recently.

Suddenly, her figure was reflected on the flask fragments. Her figure was much smaller than before.

[Your incarnation body has reached its limit.]

Now, both body and mind were at the limit.

Her story was losing its center and gradually scattering.

But she had to hold on. At least until the end of this story, until the scenario ended.

Tsutsutsut.

Han Sooyoung instinctively put her hand into her bosom. What she was holding in her hand was a small notebook.

A note left by Kim Dokja, who had visited the 1,863rd Round.

「"Don't throw it away, and look at it whenever you have time."」

Han Sooyoung read it.

For some reason, whenever she read that notebook, the aftermath that threatened her would calm down.

However, that effect had been weakening a little recently.

A faint spark flew from the surface of the notebook, which had been scorched by the probability spark.

"Damn it."

A half-happy mutter.

"I really didn't plagiarize."

Soon, the notebook fell from her hand with a spark. Han Sooyoung began to nod off.

Then, signs of the probability aftershock began to appear all over her body. The world she had maintained for so long was collapsing.

At that moment, a door opened somewhere and someone's voice was heard.

"I know."

Han Sooyoung looked up at the man who opened the door and came in with a hazy consciousness.

She couldn't tell if this was a dream or not. Maybe she had created another 'imaginary friend'. In this world where only she and her avatar remained, she couldn't bear the extreme loneliness, so she created another 'uncle'.

The uncle nodded as if he understood her feelings.

"That's enough."

The uncle said while holding the half-collapsed Han Sooyoung in his arms and laying her down.

"I'll write from now on."

The uncle began to tell a story.

Like when she was a child, Han Sooyoung leaned against the soft sofa and listened to her uncle's story. Even though she knew that she shouldn't do this, even though she knew that if she didn't write, the world would collapse, Han Sooyoung couldn't help but listen.

Maybe it was because she had been writing for so long. Perhaps it was because she wanted to be a reader, listening to another story made by someone else, even if only for a moment. It was a story of a reader. A story of a reader who loved novels more than anyone else. A story about meeting characters from a novel he likes and meeting the author of a novel that he likes. A story about going on an adventure together.

A story about a man who loved that story so much that he became the story itself.

"That story."

Han Sooyoung asked.

"Is it okay for you to tell it to me?"

The uncle thought for a moment and answered.

"Yes."

Han Sooyoung continued to listen to the story with her eyes closed.

As the story continued, the aftershock gradually disappeared.

That day, Han Sooyoung had a dream.

It was a dream about meeting a man she had wanted to meet for a long time.

When she opened her eyes the next day, Han Sooyoung was looking at me.

"Kim Dokja, do you know what you did?"

On a devastated world where all the avatars had disappeared, she spoke to me with an expression that did not contain any lies.

"I will not become tls123."

892 Episode 49 tls123 (2)

Han Sooyoung asked again in a strange voice, observing my reaction.

"You didn't not know what would happen if you told me that, did you?"

I recalled our previous conversation.

In order to open the door of Han Sooyoung's tightly closed heart, I confessed a secret that I shouldn't tell her.

「"You are tls123."」

If Han Sooyoung of the 1,864th Round had heard it, it would have made her faint. She would have asked what I would do if I told her that, if I was in my right mind.

But I said it anyway.

tls123. The author of 『Three Ways to Survive in a Ruined World』 that she's always wondered about. That person is none other than Han Sooyoung of the 1,863rd Round.

And Han Sooyoung, who has [Predicitive Plagiarism], would have vaguely noticed the truth of this world just from my one word.

"I'm not joking. I really don't want to become tIs123."

"I see."

"You think I'm joking?"

Han Sooyoung frowned, as if my answer was not very good.

I added a word to reassure her.

"You can do whatever you want. Yes. Just don't become tIs123."

But Han Sooyoung didn't seem reassured, but rather made a bewildered expression. Then she glared at me silently and reached out her right hand to touch my forehead.

"The state of the story is normal."

"It's extremely normal."

"Did you separate from the main body and cause another problem? Did you get a story that shouldn't be obtained? Like 「Mad Soldier Yoo Joonghyuk」. No. Even if you got a story like that, it wouldn't have been like this—"

A story that shouldn't be obtained.

"I've gotten a lot of strange stories."

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', chuckles.]

Hearing the story's voice babbling inside me, I thought about my decision once again.

In fact, my decision was not solely 'my decision'.

This decision was made with two other Kim Dokja who shared Kim Dokja's story with me.

I didn't really talk about this issue with them, but there were things that were felt beyond the [Fourth Wall].

「Han Sooyoung has the right to decide her own future.」

The world we lived in was completely dependent on Han Sooyoung's sacrifice.

The 'Ways if Survival' written by Han Sooyoung in the 1,863rd Round, who returned to her childhood, over a period of ten years.

Because of that story, Kim Dokja survived.

However, in return for writing that story, Han Sooyoung in the 1,863rd Round was unable to meet Kim Dokja again and dispersed into her subconscious. And that is where the 「Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint」 we know begins.

「And then Kim Dokja thought.」

Does that story need to be repeated once more? Even if all causality in this universe collapses because Han Sooyoung does not become tIs123, can that be a justification for sacrificing one person in front of me?

「Han Sooyoung must have thought about it too.」

Perhaps, Han Sooyoung that day was also at a crossroads with the same choice as me.

And Han Sooyoung made a choice.

Instead of preventing the great tragedy of the universe that was about to come, she decided to save one boy who was dying in front of her.

"Fine. What's the point of talking too much? Don't regret it later."

Han Sooyoung glared at me for a moment as if she was tired of talking, and then sighed deeply again. A momentary silence fell between us.

I regained consciousness completely and calmly looked around. The dark basement reminded me of an old warehouse. Countless flasks were neatly arranged throughout the basement.

I looked at the incarnations contained in those flasks. Characters including Lee Hyunsung, Shin Yoosung, Lee Seolhwa, Kim Namwoon, and Lee Jihye were preserved there with the [Special Preservation] skill. The Blood Demon’s warehouse where the heads of the lions were stored also felt like this.

Do unrecorded stories eventually wear out little by little?

If there was a difference between the two scenes, it was that the incarnations stored in this warehouse were still breathing.

"This is the real 'headquarters'."

I could tell without having to look closely. All the scenes of 'headquarters' I had seen so far were the effects of the [Avatar] created by Han Sooyoung.

Not only the incarnations, but also the [Avatar] that covered the entire headquarters.

She had covered the entire area, including this building, with her avatar and controlled it.

"Were all the people I met you?"

"They move and speak as I write, but they basically act based on the characters' stories. I don't control them at will."

"Is that so?"

"Yes, it may sound like a lie…"

Han Sooyoung smiled bitterly, knowing how her words would sound.

"Are you disappointed?"

"I'm impressed."

"Are you being sarcastic?"

"I'm serious."

In any case, Han Sooyoung did her best to keep her promise to Kim Dokja. Not all of them survived, but she still tried to save 'as many' incarnations as possible. That alone was enough to acknowledge her efforts.

"What happened to the Constellations that tried to stop you?"

"Most of them died when the Apocalypse Dragon was resurrected. There are still some left."

They probably boarded the 'Broken Ark'. Maybe the Myth-grade Constellations she witnessed in her memories still remain.

"Those guys have lost most of their power. The original Apocalypse Breath was supposed to be used to maul them..."

I happened to show up at that moment, and the Apocalypse Dragon's Breath ended up being used to save me from the 'God of the Other World'.

She probably has little chance left now.

"I'm sorry."

"No. Well, it wouldn't be fun if the scenario went too easily."

"Will you use [Avatar] again?"

"Once my power is restored."

"Why are you trying to keep [Avatar] that long? Is it because of your promise with Kim Dokja?"

"That's part of it, but..."

Han Sooyoung looked at the characters in the flask, keeping her mouth shut for a moment.

"Someday, when these guys wake up again, I want to tell them the tale I made."

"..."

"I know. All of this is just my self-satisfaction. It could just be a deception to these guys."

I understand Han Sooyoung's feelings. She doesn't want to clear this 'scenario' alone.

She wants to tell her colleagues who have been working on the scenario together that she saw the end of the world together.

"Is there a way to revive them?"

"Maybe."

Wounds that cannot be revived even with the Life and Death Ring. In order to revive them, a powerful probability that could twist the laws of this worldline was needed.

And as far as I know, there was only one material that accumulated that much probability in this 'Final Scenario'.

"It's the Story Core."

If we use the 'Story Core' that moves the ark, we may be able to revive the party facing death.

"That's right. But there was a problem when you came."

Han Sooyoung got up from her seat and shook out her pants.

I followed Han Sooyoung out of the warehouse. As she opened the lid of the underground passage and went outside, a warm heat that I had never felt before came over me. The Apocalypse Seal floating in the sky and the Ark being stuck were the same as before, but the stars felt unusual beyond the atmosphere.

[All beings in the area are affected by the 'Final Dragon of the Apocalypse'.]

[All beings in the area are exposed to madness.]

['Interplanetization' is in progress in the area.]

[All living things in the area are experiencing real-time mental power decreases.]

['Twisted Tales' are parasitizing in the area!]

[All beings in the area are experiencing 'Tales Contamination' in real time!]

Warning messages kept popping up.

I muttered to myself, 'Oh my god.'

What is this, having a perfectly good incarnation? Even if I had it, it wasn't an environment where I could possibly survive.

Looking at me like that, Han Sooyoung smiled.

"This is really the 1,863rd Round."

---

Han Sooyoung and I worked all night to alleviate the area-wide debuffs that were pouring down in real time.

Since we couldn't use [Avatar], we moved our bodies ourselves and installed the related equipment one by one.

[Item, 'Area Tale Curtain', is activated!]

[Item, 'Area Offset Spray', is activated!]

[Item, 'Special Pollution Purification Device', is activated!]

After finishing installing the equipment in the main spots, the air in the area changed. I couldn't feel the fear of the Apocalypse Dragon that had been weighing on my shoulders, or the otherworldly story that gave me an ominous feeling.

Indeed, there would be such an item when we reached the Final Scenario.

"Okay. It'll be enough to hold on until I regain my strength."

"Did you prepare for this moment?"

"Why would there be [Predictive Plagiarism]?"

I sat side by side with Han Sooyoung in the front yard of the ruined base.

The sun was slowly setting in the world that was falling apart.

Han Sooyoung must have watched that scenery alone several times. Left alone in this world where no stars were watching, she must have written a story that no one would read on a lonely blank page.

[The Constellation, 'Maritime War God', nods while watching you.]

Huh?

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', watches the two of you and wipes his head.]

Wait a minute.

[The Constellation, 'Great King of Beauty', hides a throbbing expression.]

"Are these message real?"

"Then it must be fake?"

"You said all the Constellations are dead."

"How many guys are left who were on my side? It's the same as being on the verge of collapse."

In fact, the indirect messages from the Constellations didn't have any sense of their original status at all.

"I was lending these guys incarnation bodies through [Avatar] body until recently, but now they're in big trouble."

"Then shouldn't they conserve their strength? If they keep sending out indirect messages like that..."

"Why would they be excited?"

I blankly looked up at the sky.

[The Constellation, 'Maritime War God', is looking forward to your existence.]

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', is curious about your existence.]

[The Constellation, 'Great King of Beauty', is deeply interested in your existence.]

Goosebumps ran down my spine.

I wonder why the Constellations are talking to me now, risking their own existence.

"This worldline finally has something to talk about."

I realized anew what kind of place this worldline was.

This worldline is a worldline where even the 'Dokkaebi King' has lost interest in scenarios.

After the disaster of the Apocalypse swept through the <Star Stream>, there are no more incarnations to create tales or stars to read them.

"Are you having fun, kids?"

Han Sooyoung threw dirt at the sky as if she was annoyed by those stars. The few remaining Constellations in the night sky blinked faintly instead of answering. I understand their feelings.

They just want to read the last story of this world. Even at this moment when their lives are short, the Constellations that are dying while reading their favorite stories. Han Sooyoung muttered as she looked up at those stars.

"I wonder if Kim Dokja is watching this story too."

"He will be watching it."

"Why aren’t you angry?"

"Why would I suddenly be angry?"

"You’re Kim Dokja."

I answered while scratching the fire.

"I’m Kim Dokja too."

"Can I ask a few things?"

"You kept asking me."

"How have you been?"

"Are you asking me that, or another Kim Dokja?"

"Either way."

"I can't tell you with my bare mouth."

"That's what you're going to say."

"You said you wouldn't even become tls123."

Han Sooyoung looked at me with a dumbfounded expression and asked with her lips curled.

"Am I really tIs123?"

"You'll know if you try [Lie Detection]."

But Han Sooyoung didn't use [Lie Detection]. Was it the minimum trust she had in me that she didn't bother to use her skill to check me, or was it her last struggle not wanting to confirm the truth?

"You have the 'writer' trait, don't you?"

I blankly bit my lips like someone who had been unexpectedly attacked.

As if she knew it, Han Sooyoung said with a grin.

"I'll know just by looking at you. There’s a peculiar unpleasant feeling, a kind of nuance that comes from those who try to record everything they’ve experienced."

"I’m scared that someone might hear it."

"It’s a little shocking. There’s a 'Kim Dokja' who writes."

Han Sooyoung looked at me with a strangely betrayed expression, then added with a sly smile.

"But I don’t think you’re a proper 'writer' yet."

My expression hardened at those words without me knowing.

What did Han Sooyoung see when she said that?

Or did she read the story of the 41st Round that I ruined with [Predictive Plagiarism]?

If not…

"You still don’t know how to use [Avatar]."

Ah.

"Do you know why writers have [Avatar] skills?"

893 Episode 49 tls123 (3)

---

「Avatar.」

A skill exclusive to replies with the 'writer' trait, and a skill that allows them to create their own clones and perform various purposes, and at the same time, the culprit of all these tragedies that divided Kim Dokja into 51% and 49%.

「Why do writers have 'Avatar' skills?」

The reason has already been mentioned in Kim Dokja's monologue in the main story.

「A job that mainly involves creative work and frequently causes dissociative personality disorder or schizophrenia due to excessive stress.」

In fact, writers do not necessarily suffer from grandiose symptoms such as 'dissociative personality disorder' or 'schizophrenia'. There are healthy writers in this world (I've rarely seen them), and there are many writers who live happily even though they are not healthy (I've never seen them either).

So why did [Avatar] become the exclusive skill of 'writers'?

"Because writers are professionals who write 'characters'."

Even while writing just one novel, writers must become countless other 'characters'. Perhaps Han Sooyoung, who was writing this story, was the same.

Even if the story was a reconstruction of a story she had heard from Kim Dokja, Yoo Joonghyuk, and other characters, the writer must fill in the blanks with her own imagination.

And while filling in the blanks, the writer must become different beings over and over again.

Thus, Han Sooyoung must have become Kim Dokja, Yoo Joonghyuk, Lee Hyunsung, Yoo Sangah, Shin Yoosung... and once again her past self.

When I thought about that, I groaned without realizing it. I looked around at the scenery around me once more.

「This world was still 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint'.」

Perhaps she had been continuing to write that story even here without knowing it.

"It seems you're not completely untalented."

Han Sooyoung smiled brightly like a teacher who had checked the model answer and asked again.

"Then here's a question. Why can't you use [Avatar]?"

"Why are you so sure that I can't use [Avatar]?"

"If you knew how to use [Avatar], you would have noticed that I was an [Avatar] the moment you first met me."

"If you have [Avatar], can you know that?"

Come to think of it, Han Sooyoung was the first to realize that 49% of Kim Dokja in <Kim Dokja Company> was an avatar.

"I figured it out eventually, too."

"I told you. So you're not completely untalented."

Talent.

I smiled bitterly and repeatedly clenched and unclenched my dusty hands.

I've been through a lot since I entered this world.

There have been many stories since then. From 「Heir of the Eternal Name」 to a Giant tale that hasn't been named yet.

Is that all? I have now earned the title of 'Recorder of Fear'.

"Why?"

And yet, as time passed, there were times when I felt like these 'tales' I had accumulated were not mine.

"Why, can't I use [Avatar]?"

Perhaps it wasn't simply a question about [Avatar].

"Well."

Han Sooyoung seemed to know that fact as well. In the end, the answer to this question was something I had to come up with myself, not something that Han Sooyoung could answer for me.

Nevertheless, I had hope for a moment. It wasn't someone else, but Han Sooyoung. Couldn't Han Sooyoung tell me something different?

"There are things I need to know first to solve that question."

When Han Sooyoung lightly gestured to the air, two [Avatars] that looked exactly like Han Sooyoung were born with a popping sound.

While Han Sooyoung sat down in her seat and smoked a cigarette, the avatars grumbled and started working. Checking the equipment we installed, and repairing the exterior of the base.

"Are you afraid of [Avatar]?"

I asked after a short pause.

"Why are you asking that?"

"I just imagined it. What if I were you."

I could see the concentrated world of imagination flowing in her eyes.

「Predictive Plagiarism.」

She was looking at me now, imagining a me that I didn't say, a 'me' that maybe even I don't know.

"In a universe where countless 'Kim Dokjas' exist, what would it be like for you to live as one of those 'Kim Dokjas'?"

I had never told Han Sooyoung in detail why I was here, and what exactly happened to the 'Kim Dokja' she remembered.

And yet Han Sooyoung was reading the information I hadn't told her.

"Living my whole life doubting who I am. The anxiety that I might be a byproduct of another being, that what I think might not be my complete thoughts…"

I wanted to ask how she knew so well. But there was no need to ask.

Because the Han Sooyoung in front of me was the person who could understand me better than anyone else.

"Was that the case for you too? When you first found out that you were an [Avatar], was that how you felt?"

The woman I asked did not think of herself as an [Avatar]. I also admit that there are many ambiguous aspects to calling her an [Avatar].

However, there is one clear fact.

「The Han Sooyoung in front of my eyes is a being created through [Avatar].」

Regardless of whether she had memories equal to her main body or not, the Han Sooyoung in front of me was born the moment Han Sooyoung first used the [Avatar].

Just because she was born a little later in time, a being born late cannot escape the thought that she is not the 'real' one.

"What do you think?"

Han Sooyoung smiled and took out a cigarette from her bosom and lit it. Watching the smoke spreading out, I unconsciously reached out my hand.

"Could I have one too?"

"Why? Do you smoke too?"

"I feel like smoking."

Han Sooyoung smiled and handed me a cigarette and lit it. As I inhaled the smoke, the pungent sensation of the smoke tickled my lungs.

I coughed and added a word for no reason.

"It’s because it’s been a while since I smoked."

I inhaled the smoke again and let out a long breath. The smoke that had dispersed in a clump soon took the shape of a person with the same body size as me.

Han Sooyoung spoke in a slightly surprised voice.

"A [Smoke Human]? You have quite a unique skill."

"I acquired it by absorbing other 'Kim Dokjas."

"How many people have you absorbed?"

"I don’t know. There were some that weren’t human, and there were some that just existed as sculptures."

"There seem to be many such Kim Dokjas in your world."

"Yes."

"Are you competing among Kim Dokjas? To become the one 'real Kim Dokja'?"

"Similar."

Han Sooyoung was silent for a moment. Maybe she was imagining the bloody battles of Kim Dokjas to become Kim Dokja through [Predictive Plagiarism].

Suddenly, I became curious.

Which Kim Dokja would survive until the end in her hypothesis?

A cigarette butt fell at Han Sooyoung’s feet.

"Are you afraid that another 'Kim Dokja' will appear?"

"…"

"Are you afraid that something beyond your control will happen? Right?"

I couldn’t answer.

Han Sooyoung continued talking without waiting for my answer.

"But that's the nature of a writer's job. Constantly bumping into things that you can't control."

"..."

"You know. Once you create a character, they don't move as we want."

"That's right."

"In the end, we create them while accepting a certain degree of uncertainty. We don't even know exactly what kind of person they will become."

At that moment, I remembered a conversation that Kim Dokja and Han Sooyoung had once had.

「"As a writer, you don't completely control your own novel. If you look back, there are many holes here and there. In the end, reading is the work of connecting those irregular holes in your own way."」

A person who writes something is also just a reader.

A person who weaves a story for the first time experiences his first reading experience by weaving that story.

Perhaps Han Sooyoung is explaining that in a different way.

"You have to learn how to handle [Avatar]."

"…"

"You’ve had the writer’s traits, so it’s a shame not to use [Avatar]."

I know that too.

How foolish it is to have the writer’s traits and not use [Avatar].

But I also have my reasons.

"This world is no longer a simple 'novel'. The uncertainty I created becomes a variable I cannot control. If it were a world that wasn’t real, I could create anything without any burden, but this world isn’t like that."

"You’re not afraid of simply creating [Avatar], are you?"

[The exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', shakes.]

I let out a light sigh. The cigarette I hadn’t even smoked a few puffs of fell to the floor as sparks.

I was afraid of speaking. Nevertheless, now was the moment when I had to speak.

"I’m afraid of stories."

Maybe it was because the person in front of me was Han Sooyoung that I could say that.

"I’m afraid of writing stories."

When I first entered this story, I enjoyed it. On the one hand, I felt the fear of death, and on the other hand, I felt the joy of being able to write all of these things down.

However, as I gained colleagues and felt the stories pile up, my thoughts changed little by little.

My emotions began to take shape when I cleared the Recycling Center, broke the Fear Realm, and put two Kim Dokjas into the [Fourth Wall].

「The story was getting closer to its conclusion.」

It was like an intuition as a writer.

From now on, if I made a mistake, everything I had built up could be destroyed. Regardless of how hard I had tried before, everything could be destroyed with just one wrong sentence.

"If you think too much, you won't be able to write anything."

"Yes. But—"

"Why do you think we write stories?"

Why are we writing stories? There must have been a reason, but suddenly, I couldn't remember.

Han Sooyoung sighed and said.

"I asked you to see the 'ending' of this world together."

"Yes."

"What's your answer?"

"I will."

Han Sooyoung pursed her lips as if she didn't like my answer, then opened her mouth.

"I'll cancel my offer."

"Huh? Why?"

"You want to run away right now."

"..."

"You're trying to stay in this world because you're afraid of seeing the end of your worldline."

"No. I—"

I tried to say. It’s true that I wanted to stay in this worldline. But the reason I wanted to do that was because I thought there was something to learn from Han Sooyoung’s worldline.

[Someone is activating 'Lie Detection'!]

But I couldn’t continue.

Perhaps it was because I couldn’t determine whether or not my words were true.

Han Sooyoung said as if she knew it.

"I can’t see the end with that pathetic guy."

"Is that so?"

So I’m going to end up like this here too. I sighed deeply as I looked at the smoke floating around in thick clouds.

But Han Sooyoung didn’t finish speaking.

"So let’s do this. You need the 'Ark' and the 'Story Core' to return to your world. Right?"

When I nodded, Han Sooyoung continued.

"And I need the 'Story Core' of the Ark to revive my comrades."

In that moment, I thought I knew what Han Sooyoung was going to say.

"Let's fight."

Han Sooyoung pointed to the Ark in the sky, looking at me who was blankly open-mouthed.

"In three weeks, we'll fight for the 'Story Core' over there."

Three weeks. The time left until my sub-scenario ends.

"If you win, you'll be able to return to the worldline you belonged to. And if I win—"

"You can revive your comrades."

Why? My heart suddenly raced.

"That's right."

"But isn't this too advantageous for you?"

There was no reason for my heart to race. If I accepted that offer, the ending for us was already decided.

A bloody battle that would determine the end of the worldline.

If one side won by chance, the other side would have to face a painful tragedy.

And yet I.

"Of course, if we just fought, it would be a fight I would win. So…"

Looking at her brightly shining eyes, I naturally thought of the next sentence she would spit out.

"I'll teach you everything I have for the remaining three weeks."

With the sound of 'tsutsut', I heard the sound of the world's probability being distorted. The 1,863rd Round's Managment Bureau that had been watching all the scenarios up until now—the 'Dokkaebi King' who had lost interest in the scenarios was moving.

[Sub-scenario content has been updated!]

I could see Constellations faintly opening their eyes in the pitch-black night sky.

As if greeting the audience of this world that was not much left, we slowly stood up from our seats.

The world of the last scenario. What unfolded before us was overwhelmingly vast, but at the same time, there was only a very small margin.

"I'm scared."

"But do you still want to try it?"

I couldn't help but admit it.

Before I could even answer, my heart answered. Was it because I was a writer, or because I was a reader? I thought it didn't matter.

But right now, I—

"It seems fun."

Just I was thinking about seeing the 'next story'.

The last scenario of the 1,863rd Round.

There are now two writers here.

But this time, there was only one story left.

"Let's start."

We drew our swords at the same time.

894 Episode 49 tls123 (4)

For an hour after that, I was beaten up here and there by Han Sooyoung. Maybe because I was beaten up so much, I could answer Han Sooyoung’s questions right away.

"What major did you choose?"

"Creative Writing."

"Oh, you must have won some awards at the 100th-day celebration when you were young?"

"Only a reading award. Actually, I never learned writing separately, so I wasn’t very good at writing."

"Really? But you must have learned some things when you went to college, right?"

"Yes, I did."

Actually, there were people who taught me. Anyway, I graduated from the Creative Writing Department, and I took novel classes from various professors. However, if you ask me if I learned writing from them, I don’t know what to say.

But there is one professor I remember.

「"■■-ah, are you having a hard time these days?"」

It was around the time when I had not received any requests since my lucky debut.

「"Have you ever thought about writing web novels?"」

At that time, I was still not yet fully into pure literature, so I was depressed because I thought the professor's words meant, "You have no talent at all, so get out of the literary world." But now that I look back, that advice meant, "If you keep dying here, your life will be ruined."

When I think of my peers who are having a hard time in the literary world, drinking, I want to give my professor a tip for his wisdom, but unfortunately, I can't even remember his name anymore. It was because I lost many of the memories I had while going through the 'Fear Realm'.

"At first, it was hard to adapt to writing web novels."

"Well, it must have been hard if you had come from pure literature. The writing style is very different."

"I didn't know I would struggle that much. But I graduated from the Department of Creative Writing."

"That's possible. In fact, our industry has a relatively low barrier to entry, right? Anyone can write if they have a keyboard."

It didn't feel real at all that I was talking about web novels with Han Sooyoung.

"Yes. Anyway, I had a hard time at first."

"No one is good at writing from the beginning. Although there are geniuses sometimes."

"You weren't good at writing at first either?"

"I'm that genius?"

I smiled bitterly as I watched Han Sooyoung smiling proudly.

Even though she said that, I knew that she was the one who worked harder than anyone else.

After all, she was someone who had serialized a novel that only one person read for over 10 years.

"Come on, get up. We have to keep going."

I sighed and got up from my seat.

"Are you going to hit me again?"

"Who said you'd just get hit? I told you to hit me too. Then I'll answer the questions you want?"

"Easier said than done."

"You only need to hit once, is that so hard?"

"It's harder than when I first started reading web novels."

She said one hit, but from my perspective, it seemed like Han Sooyoung was just beating me up under the pretense of training.

"Is it because you've been studying pure literature? Your skill usage is so old-fashioned."

"Honestly, how much pure literature have you read?"

"Your basic stamina is also really poor."

"I've never seen a writer with such good stamina."

"For a writer, stamina that doesn't get tired even after working for three days and nights is a given. In my time—"

I quickly used the story.

[Story fragment, 'Way of the Wind', begins its storytelling!]

「Way of the Wind, condensed into 'Unbreakable Faith', swirled and created a fierce sword wind.」

Han Sooyoung muttered as if it was interesting.

"Oh, this one has good application?"

Even so, my [Way of the Wind] didn’t even brush Han Sooyoung’s collar.

I bit my lips and swung my sword again and again.

Han Sooyoung kept asking questions while dodging my strikes here and there.

"What’s the name of this skill?"

"It’s [Way of the Wind], right?"

"That’s the skill name. [Way of the Wind] isn’t used like that originally."

"I didn’t give it a name."

I’m not Killer King, so I wouldn’t have named every skill I used like "Dark Spinning Breaker".

But Han Sooyoung looked at me as if I was pathetic.

"Isn’t that skill your original? But you didn’t even give it a name?"

"Why do you have to give it something like that?"

"Because it becomes stronger with a name."

I couldn’t understand what she meant.

It becomes stronger with a name?

"Extinction Sword (멸화검)."

As Han Sooyoung muttered softly, a long purple sword spurted out from above the dagger she was holding.

I stared at the shape of the sword spur and asked.

"Extinction Sword? Isn't that just [Black Flame] stretched out and pulled out?"

"Extinction Sword Form 1, Annihilation." (멸화검 제1식, 멸화개아.)

Han Sooyoung shouted the name of the technique without paying attention to my tackle. Following that, the form of [After Flame] wrapped around Han Sooyoung's entire body like a flower bud, and soon deflected all the blade storms created by [Way of the Wind].

[The Constellation, 'Maritime War God's', eyes sparkle!]

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', is happy to see 'Extinction Sword' for the first time in a long time.]

Messages from the Constellations pouring down from the air.

I felt like I could understand Han Sooyoung's words that I had to give it a name.

"Form 2, Extinction." (제2식. 멸화분분.)

Following that, a flower bud made of [Black Flame] opened. The sight of a flower made of pure purple energy blooming was captivating just by looking at it.

The moment my gaze was captured by that scenery, the purple energy that had bloomed like petals scattering fragrance began to pour out in all directions.

"Tch."

I hurriedly activated the 'Blade of Faith', but it was not enough to counter the countless energy of [Black Flame]. In an instant, small scars appeared on my arms and legs.

I was purely astonished by the overwhelming difference in skill.

Just as my skill relied on the source of [Way of the Wind], her skill was also based on [Black Flame]. However, the way she used [Black Flame] was much more sophisticated and delicate than how I used [Way of the Wind].

Han Sooyoung shook her head and said.

"It's not a difference in skill. It's a difference in imagination."

A difference in imagination.

"Even if you handle the story in the same way, the image of the technique changes completely depending on how you name it."

I realized belatedly what she meant. It was true that I had only given it a name, but the image of the technique felt much clearer.

A crouching flower bud and a blooming petal fluttering in the wind.

The established name creates a framework for imagination and stimulates the curiosity of the Constellations.

[The Constellation, 'Goryeo's Swordsman', feels the longing for the Murim.]

Then...

"Storm Wave Fortress (풍랑섬)."

I swung my sword with all my might. The magical power in my body drained away and the shape of the blade storm created by [Way of the Wind] changed.

I thought of the wolf that had taught me [Way of the Wind]. The Wolf of Immutar galloping across the plains of Chronos. The wolves running toward the sunset began to roar all at once.

Kudduddud! The energy of [Way of the Wind] and [Black Flame] collided, creating a whirlwind.

This side was slightly pushed back.

I continued to supply my magical power and added [Baekcheong-ganggi] to the blade.

"White Wave Fortress(백랑섬)."

The manes of the roaring wolves scattered silver. Some wolves were cut to death by the flower petals, but some wolves managed to bite the flower petals. With a sound of sparks, the magical power was canceled in the air, and [Black Flame] and [Way of the Wind] scattered into ash.

Han Sooyoung smiled as if she was amazed.

"You have good learning ability. Is 'Storm Wave' (풍랑) borrowed from Lycaon's name?"

I then activated other stories and skills one after another.

[The story, 'Tenacious Martial Arts Master', begins its storytelling!]

A story obtained from Cheon Gae, The Dragon's Head Ark of Beggar Sect.

[Exclusive skill, 'Nakgak Breath Lv. 10', is activated!]

The long breath sucked in by [Nakgak Breath] strengthened the magic circulation efficiency of 'Circulation Delay'. It was the result of practicing the skill linkage that the Demon King of Salvation had pointed out before.

Han Sooyoung, who had exchanged a hundred or so combinations with me in an instant, nodded and said.

"The skill set isn't that great, but the linkage isn't bad. You worked hard, didn't you?"

I felt elated for no reason.

I worked hard. It felt so good to be recognized for that.

It felt like a certain sense that I had long forgotten was awakening again. Even though it was just clashing swords and telling stories that I had accumulated.

"Don't get excited for no reason. We still have a long way to go. Is there anything else you know how to do?"

"I can use Kim Dokja's power."

Currently, I have accepted the 'First Kim Dokja'—the 'Demon King of Salvation'—and the 'Second Kim Dokja'—the 'King of Fear'. I was able to borrow their powers that remained in the [Fourth Wall] with the power of 'Heir of the Eternal Name'.

"Try it."

"Not now."

"Why?"

"I don't know."

[Currently, a part of the 'Fourth Wall' is being restored.]

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', refuses your request.]

It seems that the [Fourth Wall] is not in good condition. The Heir guy is not listening to me either.

Han Sooyoung asked, licking her lips.

"This is difficult. What else?"

"I can also use Cheon Inho's techniques."

"[Incite]?"

"Yes."

"Then try that."

Despite Han Sooyoung's suggestion, I hesitated a little this time. Because I experienced Cheon Inho's '40th Round' in the Time Fault of the Fear Realm, my [Incite] had become quite strong. Right now, I was confident that even a mediocre Constellation could kneel with just [Incite].

"You'll get hurt."

"Me?"

Han Sooyoung said with a smirk.

"Want to make a bet? If your [Incite] works even a little, I'll grant you one wish."

"Wish?"

"Yes."

"Don't regret it."

I opened my mouth without hesitation.

"You."

I briefly thought about what [Incite] I should do. Since it's my first time, I'll go with something safe.

"You're worse at writing than me."

[Exclusive skill, Incite Lv.???', is activated!]

Tsutsutsutsu.

A spark flew in the air.

Han Sooyoung stared at me blankly. Then, I felt a strong backlash in my incarnation body.

[The story, 'One Who Rewrites Fate', offsets your probability aftershock.]

As expected, I failed.

"Would that spell work?"

"You never know."

"The basics aren't right. Before using [Incite], you should analyze what kind of emotional state the other person is in."

I was about to say that I analyzed a little bit, but stopped myself.

"If I had even the slightest thought that I might lose to you, would that [Incite] work?"

"Then what should I have said to [Incite] you?"

"You have to find that out. Other than this? Nothing?"

"Nothing."

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', is activated!]

Han Sooyoung's smile deepened.

"That's pretty good. I almost believed it."

"What a shame."

Actually, Han Sooyoung was right. I still had one more important asset left.

"You, do you have a 'Giant Tale'?"

"I do, but I don't know how to use it yet. To be exact, it’s in a state where it can’t be used."

"What does that mean?"

I thought about it for a moment and decided to be honest.

"It’s not just 'skills' that need a name to be used properly."

"You haven’t gotten a name for it yet, have you?"

"Yes."

"When did you get the Giant Tale?"

"Well, it’s been quite some time."

"Then, the <Star Stream> must have given it to you?"

Han Sooyoung approached me with a puzzled expression and grabbed my wrist. Her story began to rush into me.

And as if to oppose her story, a strong energy boiled inside me.

The 'Giant Tale' was resisting Han Sooyoung’s story. As if it was rejecting all of her stories.

"Look at this?"

Han Sooyoung, who had been briefly confronting the story, opened her mouth as if she found it interesting.

"This guy is refusing to be given a name?"

895 Episode 49 tls123 (5)

---

A story rejects its name?

Is there such a case?

"Hmm."

Han Sooyoung looked at my story for a long time as if she had found an interesting subject.

"Has this ever happened before?"

"No, this is the first time."

[Your 'Giant Tale' rejects the touch of the 'Director of the False Ending'.]

It seems like it has a pretty strong ego. Is this guy the same as Heir?

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', giggles.]

Han Sooyoung watched my story's reaction for a moment and then seemed lost in thought. Then she let go of my wrist and asked.

"You, how much of the 'Introduction, Development, Climax, and Conclusion' have you completed?"

Intro, Development, Climax, and Conclusion. In order to clear the last scenario in the <Star Stream> and see your own ■■, you had to complete the 'Giant Tale' based on the 'Introduction, Development, Climax, and Conclusion'.

「The decision of victory of the Introduction, Development, Climax, and Conclusion is completed the moment you acquire the first 'Giant Tale'.」

In Kim Dokja's case, he completed it when he cleared the 'Demon King Selection Tournament' and obtained the first giant tale, 'Spring of the Demon World'. However, even though I obtained a Giant Tale, I never received a message that I had completed the 'Introduction, Development, Climax, and Conclusion'.

Up until now, I thought it was because the tale's name hadn't been decided yet...

"You haven't even received a message that you have completed it yet."

Han Sooyoung nodded as if she knew it would happen.

"You, maybe you won't be able to complete the Introduction, Development, Climax, and Conclusion."

---

I heard from Han Sooyoung about the 'Introduction, Development, Climax, and Conclusion' she had built up. It was an unfortunate incident that occurred because she couldn't stop the conversation that started with 'When I was', but in the end, it was content that I didn't mind hearing.

Because she was someone who had built up the 'Introduction, Development, Climax, and Conclusion' in a completely different way than Kim Dokja.

And my impression after listening to the story to the end was clear.

"I don't know what to say, but... you're amazing."

Just listening to the story was overwhelming.

If I were her, it wouldn't have been strange if I had given up a long time ago. If it weren't for Han Sooyoung, who had [Predictive Plagiarism], she would never have been able to build up the stories.

However, the person in question seemed to think differently.

"It ended up like this, so it's not that great."

I understood Han Sooyoung's words.

There are few writers who like the 'stories' they write. However, stories are usually completed on their own, and writers have to accept that.

While we were on the subject, I briefly told her about the scenarios I'd experienced.

Han Sooyoung nodded and sighed lightly as she listened to my story to the end.

"That's great. It must have been hard to survive in the 41st Round. Isn't Yoo Joonghyuk much weaker there than here?"

"No. Yoo Joonghyuk in the 41st Round is pretty strong too."

"Oh my. Are you protecting Yoo Joonghyuk?"

I thought about Yoo Joonghyuk in the 41st Round for the first time in a while.

I wonder if that guy is doing well.

Since we parted ways when the Fear Realm closed, he must have returned to Earth by now.

At first, I was scared to even make eye contact with him, but now I'm worried about his well-being, so I guess that's a great improvement in its own way.

"But what do you mean when you say I might not be able to complete the 'Introduction, Development, Climax, and Conclusion'?"

"Have you been listening to my story so far?"

"Huh?"

"Was I just bored and talking about all the stories I've built up with you?"

Han Sooyoung sighed deeply and shook her head.

"Your journey has been a series of unbelievable hardships by normal standards. Considering the volume of adventures you've had so far, it wouldn't be surprising if you've gotten a 'Grand Tale' several times."

I thought back on the things I've experienced. When I thought about it, there were quite a few incidents that could be called 'big events'.

"But I've only participated in the 'Grand Tale Scenario' once."

"You can get the Grand Tale even if you don't participate in the 'Grand Tale Scenario'. And you can complete the 'Introduction, Development, Climax, and Conclusion' even if it's not a Giant Tale."

She's right. Kim Dokja of the main story also filled part of the 'Introduction, Development, Climax, and Conclusion' with a 'Mythical Tale'.

"I do have a Mythical Tale."

I hunted the 'Founder of the Absolute Throne', a God of Another World, and obtained the 'Heir of the Eternal Name'.

However, even that tale wasn't a 'Mythical Tale' from the beginning, and I haven't obtained a Mythical Tale since then.

However, there were several events where I expected to obtain a tale of that level.

For example, when I defeated the Giant Nebula Constellations in 'Ginneung-ga-gap' with the 'Demon King of Salvation'.

When I faced the Giant Nebula Constellations in the Recycling Center and summoned the 'Nameless Mist'.

When I met <Kim Dokja Company> from another worldline, or when I met 'Jaehwan', the absolute being from outside the <Star Stream>. That's right.

Events that even Kim Dokja of the main story had never experienced.

However, even while experiencing all those events, the 'Giant Tale' did not sprout.

"Your first 'Giant Tale' came too late."

I obtained my first 'Giant Tale' after entering the 'Fear Realm'.

"Could it be because I entered the 'Giant Tale Scenario' late?"

"No, your 'Giant Tale' was not obtained by clearing the 'Fear Realm'. That's just a trigger."

"Then..."

"It's highly likely that it was being completed before that."

If it was before that, when on earth did it start?

"Maybe it was when you first 'possessed' that body."

Since the time I possessed 'Cheon Inho's' body?

It wasn't an absurd story.

Just like Jang Hayoung of the Demon World, 'possession' is used as a material for scenarios or stories in the <Star Stream>.

So does the <Star Stream> view the time from the time I possessed Cheon Inho until now as a 'Giant Tale'?

Then something suddenly came to mind.

"I've received a strange message regarding my 'Giant Tale'."

I definitely received that message right after I cleared the 'Fear Realm'.

"They say my story holds the potential for a 'Super-Giant Tale'."

"A Super-Giant Tale?"

"Have you ever heard of it?"

Han Sooyoung shook her head.

That made sense. The concept of 'Super-Giant Tale' does not appear in 'Ways of Survival' or 'ORV'.

"Do you know what a 'Giant Tale' is?"

"Isn't it a term referring to a story with a unique worldview?"

"That's right. Then what is a 'Super-Giant Tale'?"

"Does it mean that it has a larger worldview?"

"Well. Is the size of the worldview an issue?"

"Yes?"

"Giant Tales are also divided into quite a few categories. I don't think they will escape the concept of a Giant Tale simply because their worldview is larger than other Giant Tales."

Han Sooyoung was right. It wouldn't be called a 'Super-Giant Tale' simply because their 'worldview' is large.

In fact, it was difficult to see my 'Giant Tale' as being larger in scale than Kim Dokja's 'Sacred Torch that Swallowed Myth' or 'Season of Light and Darkness'.

"This is what I think. The 'Super-Giant Tale' might be a concept for writing a story with a different nature from the 'Giant Tale'."

"A story with a different nature?"

"For example..."

Han Sooyoung, with a blank expression, was silent for a moment, what she was thinking unknown. Maybe she was writing something like [Predictive Plagiarism].

"A story that can only begin after another story ends."

I opened my mouth for a moment. Han Sooyoung added with an embarrassed look.

"For example, that's what it is. It's just an expression that suddenly came to mind, so don't worry about it."

"Why did this happen to me?"

I don't know. Maybe the <Star Stream> judged that your story wasn't suitable for writing in the form of 'Introduction, Development, Climax, and Conclusion.'

Han Sooyoung added with a light quiver of her lips.

"Well, you'll find out soon enough. Anyway, when that 'Giant Tale' is completed, you'll find your ■■ too."

"I don't even know what kind of tale I'm making."

"No writer knows what kind of story they’re going to tell."

"…"

"No matter how plausible the blueprint is, the story doesn’t always go as planned."

Han Sooyoung took another cigarette out of her bosom and lit it, saying,

"And your story, it wasn’t bad."

"…"

"It’s confusing, messy, and distracting, but…"

Han Sooyoung’s two eyes were looking at me through the lightly dispersing smoke.

"I felt a strong desire to tell that story to someone."

"…"

"For whom are you trying to see the end of the world? If you know that, you might be able to guess a little bit about the name your 'Giant Tale' will be named."

For whom am I continuing this story?

The first faces that came to mind were the other 'Kim Dokja''. Dansu ahjussi, Killer King, Ye Hyunwoo, Kyung Sein, Yerin, and other readers. In order to send them back to their original world, I have continued to tell this story. It certainly was.

"I don't know."

"Don't you know?"

"At first, I thought I knew, but now I don't know. There are so many people who have been hurt by the tales I created."

I often thought.

What if I hadn't been the one who experienced all these tales? If I had been one of the 51% of Kim Dokja, wouldn't I have been able to tell this story much better than I did?

Then Han Sooyoung said,

"Of course not everyone will like your stories. It's obvious, but you can't write a story that everyone loves. Some stories can make enemies and incur hatred just by writing them."

I thought of other readers I had met while experiencing the stories. I thought of the Misreading Association, Gu Seonah, and 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' who had been glaring at me.

"But there will be people who support your stories. There are definitely people who believe in the story you've built and want to complete it with you."

What came to mind with those words was the lonely face of Yoo Joonghyuk in the 41st Round.

"That's why I'm writing until the end. If even one person likes your story, that's what a writer does, not giving up until the end."

The side profile of her as she spoke was dazzling.

Will I be able to make the same expression as her when I finish this story someday?

I don't know now. The only sentences I can write now are ones that tease Han Sooyoung.

"So you've been writing 'Ways of Survival' for Kim Dokja for 10 years."

Han Sooyoung, who had a miserable expression, dropped her cigarette and said.

"I won't write that kind of thing. The author of Ways of Survival is a 'very huge baby'."

I smiled bitterly and answered.

"You still say that? You're the one who's going to write Ways of Survival. And the 'Oldest Dream' that you made into reality after reading that story is..."

"Kim Dokja, right?"

I opened my mouth in surprise.

"Did you know?"

"I expected that to happen. Ever since you started talking about tls123."

"You must know everything now."

Han Sooyoung nodded.

"But don't you think something's strange? What on earth is Kim Dokja that made him such a great person? Why, why was Kim Dokja the only one in this universe chosen as the 'Oldest Dream'?

"That's..."

"Why, out of all the people, did 'Kim Dokja's' imagination give birth to the Star Stream?"

It was a question that had no answer.

Why did Kim Dokja's imagination alone have such power? Looking into her eyes, which were filled with faint starlight, a thought suddenly occurred to me. Maybe she had already done [Predictive Plagiarism].

"This is what I think."

And so, maybe she had figured out the clue to how this whole story began.

"Somewhere in this universe, there must be a 'very huge baby'."

---

From that day on, I learned and practiced various techniques from Han Sooyoung every day.

She explained in detail everything I asked her. From how to communicate with the story, how to train skills, and how to deal with scenarios.

I learned a lot from her in a short period of time. Honestly, if I could, I would have liked to raise the bar.

「And 20 days passed.」

And so, 20 days later.

The day of the showdown dawned.

896 Episode 49 tls123 (6)

---

That morning was the same as usual.

We woke up at dawn, busily cleaned our faces (Han Sooyoung ordered us to do this), did some light stretching (Han Sooyoung ordered this too), and sat next to each other to eat sandwiches made with reference to Yoo Joonghyuk's recipe from the 81st round (we agreed on this).

"I have a question."

"What?"

Han Sooyoung, who was crunching on a sandwich made with ground pup hind leg meat, glanced at me.

"Even if stretching is like that, is there any point in cleaning our faces?"

"The Constellations are watching."

[The Constellation, 'Maritime War God', nods at the handsome face of the descendant.]

[The Constellation, 'Great King of Beauty', says that the clean incarnation is also nice to look at.]

Honestly, I was impressed. Does this person care about such things even in the Final Scenario?

"They see us even when we haven’t washed?"

"So they’d like it more if we washed."

[The Constellation, 'Commander of the Red Cosmos', nods.]

In the meantime, I’ve become quite attached to the Constellations of the 1,863rd Round.

The Constellations that burn the remaining stories and shine on me.

"Are you ready?"

It’s time to say goodbye to them too.

"Yes."

"What did I teach you?"

"I learned most of it."

For the past 20 days, what Han Sooyoung had been teaching me intensively was how to awaken my potential.

「"You’re already strong enough. You just don’t know how to use your power."」

I briefly told her what had happened in the 41st Round, and after understanding the situation, she advised me this.

「"You don't have to be scared because you're going to fight Myth-grade Constellations. Trust the stories you've built up."」

The enemies I have to fight are Constellations that are comparable to the Three main Gods of <Olympus>.

And maybe the 'Kim Dokjas' who have more fragments than me.

「"If you collect those 'Kim Dokja fragments', you'll get stronger, right?"」

「"Theoretically, yes."」

「"But in my opinion, collecting a lot of fragments isn't necessarily the only way to get stronger. In short, it's like this. The 41st Yoo Joonghyuk isn't necessarily weaker than the 1,863rd Yoo Joonghyuk."」

I listened to her story as if I was possessed.

「"The amount of stories you have is important, but what's more important is how well you understand the stories you have."」

I agreed. I've felt this clearly while fighting the 'Demon King of Salvation' and the 'King of Fear'.

「The total amount of 'Kim Dokja Fragments' that I currently have is close to 30 percent.」

The total amount of fragments that the First and Second had was not much compared to what I had. However, with just that amount of fragments, they showed an influence that shook the <Star Stream>.

In other words, the most important task that I had to solve right now was to 'properly understand' the stories I had.

"[Avatar]?"

"I can't use it yet."

"Hmm."

Despite all the training I've done so far, I still haven't mastered [Avatar].

Han Sooyoung seemed to think it was strange, but she didn't really say anything. It seemed like she thought it was a task that I had to solve in the end.

"You haven't forgotten our promise, have you?"

I nodded.

"We'll go to the 'Last Ark' together and get the Story Core."

"And then?"

"We'll give the 'Story Core' to the winner of this fight."

It was a simple contract. If she gets her hands on the Story Core, she will be able to revive her stuffed comrades in the headquarters' warehouse.

And if I get my hands on the Story Core, I will be able to safely return to the 41st worldline.

"I won't let this be the last time, you know?"

"I don't even want to."

In the meantime, I have fought countless matches with Han Sooyoung. And I have never won against her.

Han Sooyoung, with a dreary smile, aimed her sword at me.

"Then let's see how much you've grown."

A fierce aura rose from Han Sooyoung's entire body. She pulled out a long sword from her waist.

"That sword…"

I recognized the sword at a glance.

"Is this the first time I'm showing you? This is my main weapon."

She smiled brightly and held a super sword in her right hand.

The weapon that Kim Dokja used when he visited the 1,863rd Round. It seems that Han Sooyoung has been keeping that weapon.

"Come to think of it, Kim Dokja gave you 'Unbreakable Faith'."

Maybe that super sword is now her new 'Faith'.

But her weapon wasn't just one super sword.

Sssssss.

The hilts on her waist seemed to multiply, and in an instant, her [Avatars] split into six and grabbed a sword each.

The Holy Sword Ascalon.

The Thunder Sword Gram.

The Dragon Sword Ridill.

The Old Dragon Sword Nægling.

The Dragon Slaying Sword Arondight.

They were all swords used to seal the Apocalypse Dragon.

I swallowed as I felt the immense energy flowing from the six holy relics. Han Sooyoung really intended to defeat me here.

"Come."

Before I could finish my words, the blade of the Dragon Slaying Sword moved towards my Adam's apple.

I narrowly avoided the blade and swung my 'Unbreakable Faith'. With a sharp crack, the Thunder Sword Gram and the Dragon Sword Ridill flew in from both sides, aiming for my sides and thighs.

「Way of the Wind.」

「Tenacious Martial Arts Master.」

「'Circulation Delay'.」

「Naggak Breathing.」

The skills, stories, and characteristics within me were simultaneously manifested.

「Storm Wave Fortress.」

As I swiftly rotated my body and extended my sword strike, the Old Dragon Sword Nægling and the Dragon Slaying Sword Arondight flew in from the opposite empty space.

「White Wave Fortress.」

The White and Blue Sword Energy that extended from my sword strike rushed toward Han Sooyoung like a wolf running through the grassland. She said, blocking the consecutive attacks of [Storm Wave Fortress] and [White Wave Fortress] with a concise movement.

"You know that won't work?"

As Han Sooyoung raised her Grass-Cutting Sword, dark clouds gathered in the sky.

The shadow of the eight-headed Imoogi was visible through the dark clouds.

The Eight-Headed Monarch, 'Yamata No Orochi'.

The Grass-Cutting Sword she held was a sword made from the tail of that Yamata No Orochi.

The legend contained in the Grass-Cutting Sword was resonating with her [Black Flame].

That was the true power of the 'Holy Relic'.

"Black Lightning."

The shadow of the Imoogi opened its mouth wide, and its eight heads spit out pitch-black lightning toward the ground.

An incredible wide-range attack reminiscent of Zeus's Thunderbolt.

My mouth fell open without me knowing it, but it wasn't the time to be amazed.

"I am—"

I took in all my breath and spat out into the air.

"The Paradoxical White-Blue, 'Kyrgios Rodgraim'."

A combination of [Incite] and [Bookmark].

When [Electrification] was activated, pure white white-blue lightning enveloped my entire body.

[Your current physical composition is different from that of the corresponding character.]

[You cannot use 'Electrification' with your current physical composition.]

[A powerful skill penalty will consume your body!]

Kyrgios is 'small'. Normally, you would have to receive a penalty due to the different incarnation body composition.

[Your 'strength' overcomes the skill penalty!]

This is only when your 'strength' is lacking.

Kwakwakwakwakwa!

I swung [White-Blue Power] ceaselessly toward the pouring [Black].

Han Sooyoung said with a smile.

"A combination of 「Heir of the Eternal Name」 and [Incite]."

A combination of Kim Dokja's [Bookmark] and Cheon Inho's [Incite].

It was a combination that I had used several times before meeting Han Sooyoung, but it was the first time I had shown it to her.

"And it seems like you were aiming for a 「Stage Effect」 as well, is that right?"

"You're sharp."

I briefly hoped that the 「Stage Effect」 that had defeated Yamata no Orochi in 'Peace Land' would activate, but unfortunately, the stage did not open. It seems that my conditions were somewhat inadequate to satisfy the Stage Effect.

"It's increased quite a bit, but it's still not enough. Do you think you can defeat the Myth-grade Constellations with that much?"

Sparks began to fly from Han Sooyoung's entire body again.

An intense sense of pressure that could be felt just by making eye contact.

It wasn't simply because of the amount of stories she had. It was, so to speak, a difference in interpretation.

A Constellation that understood her own stories better than anyone else. The unique force that the being emitted was pressing down on my entire body.

I was convinced. The Han Sooyoung in front of me right now would never lose even if she were to compete with those terrifying Myth-grade Constellations.

"Black lightning."

The sky in the area turned pitch black and once again, a dark lightning struck the ground.

The lightning was twice as large as before.

I hurriedly swung my sword toward the empty space, but the moment it collided with the lightning, a massive shock swept through my entire body.

A terrible pain that swallowed even my screams. A shock that even [Electrification] could not handle shook my mind. Blood flowed from my clenched lips.

"I—"

I used [Incite] and [Bookmark] at the same time once again.

"I am Kyrgios Rodgraim, the captain of the First Division of the Transcendent Alliance!"

The strongest 'Kyrgios' I know. I [Incited] myself as 'Paradox White-Blue', the leader of the Transcendent Alliance.

[Your understanding of the person is lacking!]

[Your interpretation makes up for your lack of understanding.]

[Your persistent interpretation creates a new understanding of the person!]

Han Sooyoung looked surprised as she watched me rise several times in level in an instant.

No matter how much my interpretation improved, it would take an enormous amount of probability to recreate a 'character' of this level with [Incite] and [Bookmark].

"You told me. Have a good conversation with the 'story' I have."

"Does it make sense for the story to rise in level just by having a conversation?"

Of course it doesn't make sense.

But I was able to do it now.

Because, the 'story' I tried to communicate with the most in the past 20 days was—

[Your 'Giant Tale' is looking at you.]

It was my 'Giant Tale'. A giant tale that has yet to be named. A tale that I don't even know when or why it sprouted in me.

I constantly talked to that story, and found a way to draw some strength from it.

[The possibility that your 'Giant Tale' is lacking is shared.]

First Division Captain Kyrgios Rodgraim, who was hunting the Outer Gods of the Fear Realm.

My incarnation body, which had transformed like a single flash of light, passed through [Black Lightning] and rushed toward Han Sooyoung.

The two swords clashed with a loud noise. Han Sooyoung's sword no longer felt heavy.

[The Constellation, 'Maritime War God', can't take his eyes off your battle!]

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', hurriedly wipes his head!]

[The Constellation, 'Commander of The Red Cosmos', watches the battlefield with anxious eyes.]

In an instant, we exchanged a hundred or so attacks.

Because of the excessive use of power, my whole body was sweating like crazy.

My vision was getting blurry. Nevertheless, my mind was clearer than ever.

「I need one more sentence.」

A single sentence to defeat her.

Han Sooyoung’s eyes were shining brightly as she swung her sword at me. She knew it too. This match would be won by whoever found the 'next sentence' first.

I was the one who moved first.

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???' is activated!]

"Kim Dokja—"

All I needed was a moment of inattention. And there was only one sentence that could bring about that inattention.

"He likes the novel you wrote!"

I couldn’t tell whether [Incite] had worked or not. However, for a moment, Han Sooyoung's breathing was disturbed, and her sword moved. Her Super Sword rolled on the floor with a dazzling flame.

Han Sooyoung muttered as she watched the swordplay of 'Unbreakable Faith' aimed at her neck.

"Okay..."

I smiled bitterly.

"I lost. The Story Core is yours."

I looked at Han Sooyoung for a moment and then put my sword away, saying.

"No, I will not have the Story Core."

"What?"

In the first place, I had no intention of using the 'Story Core' even if I won.

"Let's go get the 'Story Core' together. Reviving your comrades is the first thing."

Even without using the 'Story Core', there might be a way for me to return to my original worldline. For example, I could make a contract with a 'God of the Outer World' like her.

The conditions and methods would be difficult, but I could definitely find it if I tried.

However, Han Sooyoung's expression was strange. An alarm bell rang in my head along with a strange sense of discomfort.

「Couldn't Han Sooyoung have anticipated this battle?」

No matter how unique the strategy was, the opponent was Han Sooyoung.

Couldn't she have anticipated that I wouldn't take the 'Story Core'?

No, was it logically possible to defeat her with just the cards I had in the first place?

My heart began to beat slowly.

The previous battle quickly replayed in my head.

「She never used [Predictive Plagiarism] while fighting me.」

The fact that she didn't use her specialty, [Predictive Plagiarism], meant that she wasn't in a situation where she could use it. For example,

"Han Sooyoung, Surely—"

Or that the power of [Predictive Plagiarism] had already been used elsewhere.

With a loud noise coming from the sky, I reflexively raised my head.

The destroyed Final Ark. Black dust was rising from the stage of our destination, the 'Last Scenario'.

Along with Han Sooyoung's faint smile, the one sentence she had found echoed in my head.

[Someone cleared the 'Last Scenario'.]

897 Episode 49 tls123 (7)

---

My head was spinning. This couldn't be happening.

The last scenario was cleared.

Why on earth?

"Sorry, this was the best we could do."

As I watched Han Sooyoung mutter, I finally thought I understood what had happened.

"It was an avatar."

Han Sooyoung's avatar, with a faint smile on its face, was looking at me.

The destroyed final ark.

Han Sooyoung's 'main body' was probably inside that ark. She had infiltrated the final ark and completed the last scenario while an [Avatar] was holding me back.

"Why did you do this? We promised to clear it together."

"The ark is much more dangerous than you think."

"I learned from you so far so that we could do that dangerous thing together."

According to Han Sooyoung, what was waiting for us inside the ark were the Myth-grade Constellations of <Olympus> and <Asgard>.

Of course, they were not in their prime condition due to the great blow from the 'Apocalypse Dragon', but even so, a Myth-grade Constellation was a Myth-grade Constellation. They were not enemies that Han Sooyoung could easily deal with alone.

"I can do it alone, so why bother?"

As the dark clouds created by Han Sooyoung's [Black Lightning] disappeared, the Apocalypse Dragon was seen sticking its head through the 'Apocalypse Dragon's Seal' floating in the sky.

I realized why she had created so many dark clouds and used such a fancy technique to summon thunder and lightning. She had used 'Apocalypse Dragon's Breath' to bombard the Constellations in the ark from beyond the scenery created by [Black Lightning].

Judging from the fact that the Constellations were barely noticeable in the ark, it seemed like her gamble had been successful.

"You won."

"Why do you look so happy?"

"Because you'll able to revive your comrades."

Although Han Sooyoung didn't keep her promise, on the other hand, I thought it was fortunate that she didn't keep her promise.

I don't know if it was because she didn't trust me or for some other reason, but she eventually obtained the Story Core. So…

「But was it really necessary to obtain the Story Core in such a 'cumbersome way'?」

My expression hardened at the sudden question that came to me.

If she was going to revive her comrades anyway, it would have been best to just join forces with me or clear the final scenario through an 'Oath of Existence'.

But she obtained the Story Core on her own.

If Han Sooyoung, and not someone else, acted like that, then there had to be a reason for her to do so.

For example—

"You’re not thinking strangely, are you?"

"What?"

"That Story Core…"

"Oh, you wonder if I’m going to give it to you?"

When I nodded slightly, Han Sooyoung added with a smirk.

"Why am I giving you what I worked so hard to get? Anyway, you are also overly self-conscious."

Han Sooyoung suddenly got up from her seat, dragged me by the arm, and hid between the nearby abandoned buildings. Just as I was about to ask what he was doing, Han Sooyoung put her finger to her lips and said, "Shhh."

A moment later, golden stories seemed to be overflowing in the sky, and then a presence was felt from the underground warehouse.

「And so the last puzzle of the forgotten worldline was being put together.」

Han Sooyoung's colleagues who had been trapped in the warehouse were walking up to the surface.

The power of the 'Story Core' had succeeded in reconstructing their bodies.

"Captain!"

"Captain!"

Lee Hyunsung, Shin Yoosung, Lee Seolhwa, Kim Namwoon, Lee Jihye. The main members of <Han Sooyoung Corporation> encountered Han Sooyoung's main body descending from the sky.

The group, who had received memories through Han Sooyoung's [Avatar] link, seemed to know everything that had happened to Han Sooyoung.

「Now they will go to see the end of this worldline together.」

They will enter the portal installed in the ark and defeat the 'Dokkaebi King' of this worldline. And they will complete all the scenarios.

That’s how the 1,863rd Round ends safely.

I watched the people who burst into tears while holding Han Sooyoung in the sky. No matter which worldline it is, the scenery of the last scenario makes people’s hearts strange.

When I looked around, Han Sooyoung was watching the same scenery with deep eyes.

"Thank you, for keeping your promise."

"A promise?"

"I asked you to watch the ending together."

"Did you split an [Avatar] to watch this scenery together?"

Han Sooyoung didn’t answer with a vague expression.

In either case, watching that scenery with Han Sooyoung was meaningful to me.

「Just like Yoo Joonghyuk in the 1,863rd Round, Han Sooyoung in the 1,863rd Round also created her own ending.」

I was so overwhelmed that I wanted to put this moment into words someday.

But maybe it was because of my mood.

While the ending scenery was so vivid, Han Sooyoung in front of me felt a bit fainter than before.

"Now, retrieve the [Avatar]."

I spoke again to Han Sooyoung, who didn't respond.

"You don't have to worry about it. I'll somehow find a way to return to the original worldline. So you should just retrieve your [Avatar] and tell your colleagues…"

"That won't work. This [Avatar] can't be retrieved."

For a moment, I couldn't understand what Han Sooyoung was saying.

"To be exact, I shouldn't retrieve it."

I didn't want to understand.

I didn't want to imagine the other side of this 'finale' flowing deep in my head.

Han Sooyoung spoke as if adding more.

"You did that. The worldline was already distorted."

When I told her that she was tls123, the nature of this worldline changed from the main story I knew.

She learned everything that would happen in her future, and by declaring that she would not become tls123, she changed the development of the worldline.

I thought she had changed it.

「Han Sooyoung has finally found a way to restore the distorted worldline to its original state.」

I blankly looked down at her, then looked at Han Sooyoung’s body reunited with her colleagues from afar.

「However, there is only one prerequisite for the distortion to be restored.」

I felt dizzy.

「Han Sooyoung’s body will forget everything that happened with me.」

I slid down on the nearby stone wall.

"Right now… Are you putting all the memories of our time together in this [Avatar]?"

"That’s right. The main body doesn’t know who you are right now. I have no idea what will happen next."

Han Sooyoung's [Avatar] became a little lighter than before.

Han Sooyoung's plan was clear. She had decided to erase all the memories of the 'future' she had learned in this worldline.

「This was her 'real ending'.」

I staggered up from my seat.

It's not too late even now. I just need to tell Han Sooyoung's true self this fact. Then she can choose again. She doesn't have to become tls123 without knowing anything and sacrifice herself for Kim Dokja.

She doesn't have to become the author of this story.

"If you go there, Kim Dokja will die."

Han Sooyoung's transparent hand grabbed my wrist tightly.

"Everything is already written, and is being written at the same time. You know. It was all meant to be this way."

I couldn't say anything. I was completely helpless in front of the cruel <Star Stream>.

"How much time is left for this Avatar?"

"There's less than 5 minutes left now. Okay, I feel good. If you have any questions, ask. I'll answer them all."

"Why did you make this choice?"

Han Sooyoung seemed to think for a moment, then took out a notebook from her bosom and handed it to me. It was the notebook that Kim Dokja had given her when he left the 1,863rd Round.

"I know you wrote a little bit of new content every night."

"…"

"Unlike Kim Dokja, your writing skills are quite good."

Han Sooyoung said. While reading the words written in the notebook, the aftershock of probability that threatened her also subsided.

So I wrote down in the notebook what I knew about the future. What would happen to her, the colleagues she would meet, and the 'ending' of this universe she would face.

Hoping that she would make a slightly different choice after learning that fact.

"Thank you. And I’m sorry. I can’t take this with me. Then the future will be ruined."

I took Han Sooyoung's notebook.

"Is this why you made that choice?"

"Well, that's not all."

Han Sooyoung scratched her cheek with a smirk.

"Do you remember when Kim Dokja always teased me for being a plagiarized writer?"

I nodded.

Han Sooyoung continued talking.

"This is the perfect opportunity to make that guy the only avid reader of my novel. I can't miss such a fun event, right?"

I opened my mouth in bewilderment. I don't know if she's being sincere or not, but in a way, I thought it was very typical of her.

"You have three minutes left. Do you have any more questions?"

The incarnation body had become more transparent than before.

Now there really was no time.

"From now on, only ask what you absolutely need to. You know there won't be another chance like this?"

A question that must be asked.

Han Sooyoung was right. In fact, I had that question.

I bit my lip for a moment and then opened my mouth.

"Who is the 'Outer God' that you contracted with?"

"Well, I knew you'd ask."

The 'Outer God' that she contracted with is a being that offers enough probability to control that 'Apocalypse Dragon'. If I could find out his true name and make a contract, I might be able to return to my original worldline as well.

"I'm sorry, but I can't tell you that. It's a name that you shouldn't know right now."

"What does that mean?"

I was confused. A name that I shouldn't know right now.

Could it be that Han Sooyoung 'read' something about my future?

"Kim Dokja."

Han Sooyoung stared at me with sad eyes for a moment, then placed her pale hand on my cheek. Her palm was breaking in real time as it touched me.

"Don't worry. You can safely return to your world."

"What is this..."

"You came all the way here to see me, so I should at least pay for your transportation. Right?"

Her fingertips and toes were breaking. The broken stories soared into the sky, emitting pure white light.

A sudden thought occurred to me. Her [Avatar] was now condensed with a vast amount of stories.

A story containing the ending of the 1,863rd Round and the secret of the <Star Stream>.

She could not have been unaware of the value of that story.

"I will fulfill the Covenant of the Other World."

For a moment, a dark energy flashed in the sky. Someone received her 'story' as the price of the Covenant.

The content of the Covenant was clear.

"Send this guy back to where he came from."

A dark light flickered in the air once again.

She smiled at me, who was bewildered.

"Why are you looking at me like that? I'm Han Sooyoung. Do you think I'm going to end this world with a bad ending?"

I tried to say something. But I didn't know what to say. If I said anything, my vision would collapse.

In that unstable vision, Han Sooyoung said.

"It's okay."

What does it mean to be okay? If everything was meant to be like this, what was the meaning of all the time we spent together? If it was going to disappear like this, why did you teach me all those things?

"You have more stories to tell when you go back."

The moment I heard those words, I realized.

She had written down her own story for me, who was about to disappear.

"Lastly, I have something I'm curious about."

I supported her avatar, which was slanted to the side. The avatar was already more than half gone. Her blurry eyes were staring at me.

I realized that what she was looking at was not me in front of her.

"My novel... how was it?"

I watched Han Sooyoung's back as she and her colleagues advanced to the final chapter of the scenario from afar.

「Han Sooyoung will never be able to hear the answer to that simple question.」

Han Sooyoung in the 1,863rd Round will cross the 'Final Wall' at the end of this world and possess in the worldline where young Kim Doja is.

「That's because this 'story' is written that way.」

She will write 'Three Ways to Survive in a Ruined World', become tls123, and save Kim Dokja, but in the end, she will never be able to meet Kim Doja.

「She will never be able to ask questions, and Kim Dokja will never be able to answer.」

Having finished everything, she will be absorbed into Han Sooyoung's subconscious in the 1,863rd Round. And 『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』 begins.

In order for the story to be complete, the dialogue must not be established.

However...

「Some stories begin only when one story ends.」

I, who opened my mouth, was not the Kim Dokja she knew, and she, who disappeared, was not yet tls123.

However, at that moment, we were a writer and a reader involved in one story.

"That novel."

I couldn't tell whether Han Sooyoung, who was brightly scattering, heard my answer.

[The clear condition of the 'Sub-Scenario' has been met.]

[The 'Covenant of the Other World' is fulfilled.]

However, only the beautifully scattered stories proved that there was definitely a story here too.

[You've acquired a new tale!]

[You've acquired the tale, 'The One Who Knows the Truth of the False Ending'!]

A part of the sparkling story was scattered and absorbed into me.

[Some of the abilities of incarnation 'Han Sooyoung' will be inherited by you.]

Perhaps this is the last gift Han Sooyoung left me.

「"Learn it well."」

Even though she knew that this 'ending' would come, and even though she knew that I wouldn't be needed in her ending, Han Sooyoung taught me everything about herself. This was her choice.

Her voice hummed in my head.

As I barely managed to stabilize my breathing, a message came.

[You've acquired the possibility of a new 'Giant Tale'!]

The possibility of a new Giant Tale. Perhaps it was because it affected the 1,863rd worldline.

Normally, it would have been something to be happy about, but there was one problem for me.

[Your 'Giant Tale' is shaking violently!]

[Your 'Giant Tale' is absorbing the possibility of a new 'Giant Tale'!]

As expected.

Han Sooyoung was right.

「"You, you may not be able to complete the Introduction, Development, Climax, and Conclusion."」

It seemed that all the 'Giant Tales' I would obtain would be absorbed into the 'First Giant Tale'.

[The signs of the 'Super Giant Tale' are becoming more evident.]

[You have achieved an impossible feat!]

[The Management Bureau of the relevant worldline is questioning your existence!]

A sign of the aftershock that was slowly coming.

It was the result of me, who was not even a member of this 'worldline', receiving excessive benefits from this worldline. Normally, in this case, the 'Management Bureau' would make one of two choices.

One is to make the entity that has a negative impact on the scenario a 'disaster' and incorporate it into the scenario.

And the second is to banish the entity from the scenario.

[Someone succeeded in negotiating with the 'Dokkaebi King' of the relevant worldline.]

The interests of the Management Bureau coincided with a 'proposal' that came in at the right time.

[The 'Dokkaebi King' agrees to proceed with the negotiation.]

[Someone has granted you permission to use the 'Portal'.]

'Forced movement of the worldline' was a transfer that would not be easily attempted unless at least by a 'Secretive Plotter' level entity.

But there is an entity that can negotiate and pull off that transfer with the 'Management Bureau'.

Han Sooyoung, who on earth did you contract with?

Han Sooyoung said that I shouldn't know that name yet.

But I was the entity that knew the end of 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint'. Could there be someone whose name I shouldn’t know?

That was when a strange scent wafted from the tip of my nose.

The scent of apples?

My vision shook with the softly spreading scent. The portal in front of my eyes was calling me.

「This is the end of the 'False Ending'.」

I saw Han Sooyoung’s body enjoying a reunion with her companions from afar. I wanted to say goodbye for the last time, but that 'Han Sooyoung' wouldn’t recognize me.

The Han Sooyoung who remembered me is now gone. And I have to live the blank space she left behind.

「"You must be having a hard time too. The end of the 41st Round is set."」

I have to write the next sentence while carrying all the words she left behind.

「"But you know what? Even if I already know the ending, there are stories I have to write."」

Can I do it like Han Sooyoung? Like Han Sooyoung, who knew that she would become tls123, but did not hesitate to move forward toward the same future.

Can you choose an endless eternity just to save one person's world?

[The Worldline Movement begins.]

My vision became distorted and all the scenery became distant.

[A special privilege is awarded as a reward for clearing the sub-scenario.]

[You have acquired 500,000 coins!]

[Settlement of additional rewards is delayed.]

[The Management Bureau requests the Management Bureau of another worldline to 'pay your reward.']

I listened to the message coming in and focused my mind.

【Everything is already written and is being written at the same time.】

Along with the familiar voice, I felt the flow of time and space being distorted.

When I opened my eyes again, what was revealed was a desolate scene.

No sign of life was felt around the innermost part of the 'Fear Realm' where everything was destroyed. Suddenly, the scenery of that day came to mind once again. The destruction of the Fear Realm, and the incarnations of the Fear Realm fleeing on the 'Train'. The constellations of the Giant Nebula that attacked the Fear Realm, and the tail of the 'Apocalypse Dragon' that flew over the Fault. The Gods of the Other World who were running away in a panic from the 'Time Fault' where they had been hiding.

The traces of the ruins that still remained were evidence of the history of that day.

Including the portal I had come through, all other 'Time Faults' were closed.

「The 'Time Fault' in question was closed.」

Time Fault.

Was the story I had experienced really a 'history' that existed? Or was it just a 'Time Fault'?

If it was a story that no one would remember anyway, was there a significant difference between the two?

Woof.

My smartphone was ringing in my arms.

I immediately checked the caller.

It was a call from the 'Demon King of Salvation'.

---

I walked through the ruins of the Fear Realm and talked to the Demon King of Salvation.

—Hey, man! Pick up the phone!

The 'Demon King of Salvation' seemed to have gotten a little angrier since I hadn't seen him before.

—Hey! I told you not to touch that! Do you really want to get hurt? Huh? Huh? Hey! It fell down! Get it back up quickly!

Who is he talking to?

For a while, a clattering sound could be heard from the other end of the phone. It seemed like there was a commotion in the [Fourth Wall].

—Damn, it’s so hard to hear a voice. Why aren’t you answering the phone?

"Did you call me?"

It was strange. My smartphone never rang while I was in the 1,863rd Round.

—Yeah! Do you know how much coins I spend on each call?

"It’s always the recipient’s call."

When I checked my smartphone, there were actually dozens of 'missed calls'.

But why didn’t I know that I had a call? Was it in an area where I couldn’t receive calls?

—No matter how distracted you were by Han Sooyoung, you have to answer my calls.

It seemed that the 'Demon King of Salvation' knew roughly what I had been through in the 1,863rd Round.

"If you have something to say, I can tell her."

—She'd have forgotten everything even if I told you.

"Just because Han Sooyoung disappeared, that story didn't disappear entirely."

If it was none other than Kim Dokja, there must have been something he wanted to say to Han Sooyoung in the 1,863rd Round.

The two had never met since they met in the 1,863rd Round.

—I'm not the 'Kim Dokja' she remembers.

"Still..."

—And you said everything I wanted to say.

Sometimes, whenever I talked to Han Sooyoung, I felt like someone was knocking on the wall at the entrance of my heart.

It felt like someone was conveying their thoughts to me from beyond the wall.

Maybe it was a signal from the 'Demon King of Salvation'.

—I didn't know you would say that.

"You're talking about tls123."

Thinking back, the story related to tls123 was something that should never have been told to Han Sooyoung, considering the distortion of the worldline.

"Why didn't you stop me? There must have been a way to talk without using the phone."

—Are you the kind of person who would listen to me if I told you not to?

"If you were an ordinary person, you would have told me not to."

The story of tls123 was related to the origin of this world.

If Han Sooyoung had not become tls123 and written the novel, Kim Dokja would not have survived and 『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』 would not have begun.

It means that the very creation of the world could have been distorted due to my slip of the tongue and that this entire universe could have been overturned.

—Does that mean that I had to say with my own mouth that Han Sooyoung had to die in order to save me?

Come to think about it, this was a complicated issue for Kim Dokja.

"Well, you're the kind of person who would rather die than kill someone else."

—You talk like it's someone else's business, you idiot.

"But this problem isn't just about our lives."

If Han Sooyoung doesn't create 'Ways of Survival', not only Kim Dokja's history, but everyone related to us will change. Those who die and those who live will change, and maybe the world could have fallen more into great tragedy and misery.

Even so, Kim Dokja did not stop me. The reason was clear.

"You knew, right?"

Kim Dokja probably knew what choice Han Sooyoung would make.

— Because that's the kind of person she is.

A reader who has read a writer's story longer than anyone else can read sentences that the writer did not write.

— You knew Han Sooyoung would make that choice, right? That's why you were able to tell the truth.

I turned my head and looked at the entrance of the 'Time Fault' I had come out of. It hadn't been that long since I had experienced all those things, but the events of that worldline felt somewhat distant.

"Is what I experienced really 'history' that actually happened?"

—Now that novels have become reality, does it still matter what's real and what's fake?

Kim Dokja was right. Whether real or fake, the story I told with her clearly remains inside me.

Still, if you think it would be nice to have at least one more person who remembers that story—someone who can tell you that the story was real, is it greed?

—The Second and I watched it together. And the other kkoma Kim Dokjas.

I smiled silently.

Kim Dokja wouldn't know. How much comfort his one word is to me right now.

—Are you crying?

"…The [Fourth Wall] seems a bit noisy, what's going on?"

—Are you really asking because you don't know? It's all because of you.

"Is it because of me?"

While I was learning various things from Han Sooyoung in the 1,863rd Round, the Demon King of Salvation said that he spent all his time organizing the [Fourth Wall].

—What do you want me to do if you put all the Outer Gods of the Fear Realm in the library? Do you think I'm Yoo Sangah?

As expected, many of the 'Divine Beings of the Other World' who resided in the 'Fear Realm'’s Time Fault seemed to have been incorporated into the [Fourth Wall]. It was a side effect of accepting the 'King of Fear' as the [Fourth Wall].

—The library almost collapsed...

"But you managed to calm them down, huh?"

—They all liked your story.

My story.

—The guys who would go crazy at the mere touch of me, became like ghosts when the story of the 1,863rd Round began. It got quiet. So in that gap…

Just as Outer Gods were hiding in the 'Time Fault' of the Fear Realm, Kim Dokja said that he folded them one by one and put them like bookmarks between the records of the [Fourth Wall].

I don't know exactly what that means, but I was glad that it was sorted out anyway.

"How about the 'King of Fear'?"

—Second…

At that moment, the phone was interrupted by static and the call was disconnected.

[The <Star Stream> has recognized your existence!]

[The Management Bureau has recognized your existence!]

The side effects of 'Worldline Movement' were finally about to begin.

Tsutsutsutsu.

A light spark shot out from my entire body.

I finally recalled the contents of the 'main story'. Just like when Kim Dokja visited the 1,863rd Round of the main story, those who have experienced dimension movement to another 'worldline' are always given a 'Returnee Scenario'.

This time will probably be the same.

My heart pounded for no reason. Ji Eunyu, Dansu ahjussi, Kyung Sein, Yerin-ssi, Ye Hyunwoo, Killer King… Are they all doing well? And that bastard Yoo Joonghyuk too.

It was finally time to meet them again. But.

[Your 'Giant Tale' begins its storytelling.]

What?

「But Kim Dokja didn't know that back then.」

I frowned at the sentence that followed quietly.

「That the 'reunion' he hoped for in this story would never happen.」

[CLICK TO READ CHAPTER COMMENTS]

Note [1]: Episode 1’s name was '완결 이후의 세계' and episode 50’s name is '종말 이후의 세계'. The name of chapter 554 and 555 will thus be changed to 'The World After Completion'.

899 Episode 50 The World After The End (2)

I looked at that sentence carefully.

The 'reunion' I wished for in this story cannot happen?

[The 'Giant Tale' stops its storytelling.]

Before I could resolve my doubts, the sentences in front of my eyes scattered.

Why did the 'Giant Tale' suddenly activate?

It wasn't a 'Stage Changing' situation, nor was the power of the story artificially used.

So did the [Fourth Wall] activate and read the story without permission?

"Demon King of Salvation."

I tried calling Kim Dokja's smartphone again.

[Currently, 'call connection' is unavailable.]

What could it be? What happened inside the [Fourth Wall] again?

I took a deep breath and tried to calmly understand the situation. I read sentences that seemed like fatal foreshadowings to anyone, but just like in the main story, not all foreshadowings necessarily came true in the worst possible way.

For example, the story said that 'the reunion I wish for' would not happen, but it didn't say that 'the reunion' itself would be impossible.

Of course, I was a little anxious.

At least several months had passed since I'd seen the group. It wouldn't have been strange if something had happened.

Still, I trusted the group, and I trusted Yoo Joonghyuk, Jung Heewon, and Ji Eunyu. Even if I wasn't there, if they were there, the group would be safe.

They have to be safe.

Kikiri.

The debris of the ruined building made my feet trip. As I stepped on the debris, I recalled the memory of when I first entered the 'Fear Realm'.

Transcendent Alliance. Memories of defeating Fears with Yoo Joonghyuk and Kim Anna-ssi, and wandering through the 'Time Fault'.

I also remembered the memory of checking Cheon Inho's 40th Round. Come to think of it, I haven't met Cheon Inho since then. Since he's a 'Recorder of Fear', he probably didn't disappear just because the Fear Realm was destroyed.

The Evil Sophist, Cheon Inho.

The one who raised 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

What was his purpose in the end? Was he really satisfied with seeing the end of the 40th Round's 'Time Fault' through me and driving the 'Public Forum' to its end?

Even though the terrible scenarios had passed, I still had big questions.

I saw the scenery of the training ground where the Transcendents once laughed and chatted.

Kyrgios, Cheok Jungyeong... Did the Masters and the Transcendents safely board the train and escape?

I cast the Fear Realm as if I was reliving the old memories one by one. I walked through the End Zone and then the Middle Zone.

The path that I had to risk my life on when I came in was surprisingly easy when I came out. No Fear stopped me.

Now, the 'Fear Realm' had lost its regional effect. The 'Fear Realm' does not protect or isolate the Outer Gods, nor does it provide the possibility of their existence.

In other words, 'Fear' has now lost its value as 'Fear'.

A world without Toothy Fins or Alien Signals.

The darkness where the story disappeared was lonely and deep. How long had it been like that? A cry was heard in the darkness.

Growl.

I instinctively moved my hand to 'Unbreakable Faith' and looked around.

A unique sensation felt on the fluff.

A God of the Other World.

The entities that appeared in the dim darkness had no head or arms.

Monsters that were once terrifying, but are no longer even terrifying.

I know the names by which those guys are called.

"You."

I looked at the 'Nameless Things' with eyes full of pity.

"Just go. I don't want to kill you."

The reason I couldn't help but say those words was because the 'King of Fear' was inside me.

Even though I was slowly raising the stakes, the 'Nameless Things' did not back down. They were trembling in fear but not running away, which meant that they were not in a position to change their fate between death and running away.

I let out a light sigh and activated the 'Blade of Faith'.

By the way, why are the 'Nameless Things' still here?

This was no longer a 'Fear Realm'. In order for the 'Nameless Things' to spread to a place where the area effect was not activated, the scenario number of the area had to be at least 80 or higher. But is that possible?

【Ohhhhhhh!】

I thought as I cut down the 'Nameless Things' approaching. First, I had to escape from here.

"I'm sorry, but I won't let you."

Fortunately, that wasn't that difficult for me right now.

---

Namgung Myung was carefully walking through the entrance to the Fear Realm.

"Hey, move quickly!"

A threatening shout was heard from behind. Namgung Myung frowned and hurried his steps.

"You all know your quota, right? Those who don't meet their quota today will have their heads blown off."

The expressions of the incarnations next to Namgung Myung darkened at the supervisor's voice.

"Damn, how on earth are we going to meet that damn quota?"

"You're doing this on purpose. There can't be any fragments left from the 'Fear Realm' anymore."

"Shh, be quiet. Then they'll hear you."

The grumbling incarnations were all wearing old martial arts uniforms and their faces were covered in soot. At first glance, they looked like 'collecting slaves' from the Demon World. This wouldn't have happened if they were the ones from before.

Because they were the famous <First Murim>'s Later Rankers.

Divine General, Yeon Gisu.

Little White Tiger, Mo Yongshin.

If the world's best Later Rankers competition were held, they would definitely be among the Top Rankers. But now, they are just puppets in charge of collecting the fragments.

"Myung-ah. What do you think? If you just jump into the Fear Realm during this exploration…"

Namgung Myung shook his head.

"No. You'll get caught."

"Don't you have any pride? Have you already thrown the dignity of the great Namgung Se Family to the ground?"

Namgung Myung. He was one of the Five Great Families that once ruled this 'Murim'. He was Namgung Myung, the head of the Namgung Se Family.

"If Elder Breaking The Sky finds out that you've become like that…"

"Gisu-ya, stop it."

In the end, Mo Yongshin, who couldn't stand it anymore, intervened.

Namgung Myung lowered his head in silence.

Yeon Gisu continued to speak.

"That's enough. No matter what you say, I'm going to jump this time."

"Gisu-ya."

"Let me get my hands on just one fragment from inside. Will you offer it to me as a gift? Absorb it right away…"

"Gisu-ya, stop—"

Yeon Gisu turned around with an annoyed expression at Mo Yongshin’s dissuasion.

"Divine General. Yeon Gisu."

The supervisor with pitch-black horns sprouting from his head was there. The supervisor, who at first glance resembled a devil, tilted his head at an odd angle and glared at Yeon Gisu.

"Su-supervisor."

Yeon Gisu fell to the ground.

The supervisor looked down at Yeon Gisu, who was trembling, for a moment, then tapped his shoulder and helped him up.

"You take the lead in this exploration."

"Yes? But…"

"Why? You don’t like it?"

"No… I understand."

Yeon Gisu jumped up from his seat and quickly took the lead of the collectors.

The incarnations including Mo Yongshin looked at Yeon Gisu with worried eyes.

"Are you okay? If you come forward, you'll be called 'Tail'."

"I know. Even if I do that, I'll only die, right?"

Even though he said that, Yeon Gisu's expression was pale.

The 'collectors' had already been deployed to the Fear Realm over a hundred times.

Over a hundred collections had taught them only one lesson.

「Never claim to be a 'Tail'.」

The 'Tail' of the collection team was bait to lure the 'Nameless Things'.

A nickname given to them because they would cut off the 'Tail' and run away if necessary.

Yeon Gisu bit his lips.

He knew that the day would come when he would become a 'Tail', but he never thought it would be today.

The one who comforted Yeon Gisu was Namgung Myung.

"Yeon Gisu, becoming a Tail doesn't necessarily mean you'll die."

"..."

"Don't worry. I'm here. If those guys come near, I'll let you know right away."

Young Master Namgung Myung was one of the few survivors of the previous 'Fear Realm Invasion'. He had even been contaminated by the 'Fear Realm's Otherworldly Tale', and in exchange for surviving the contamination, he was able to sense 'Outer Godes' approaching from afar.

Yeon Gisu stared blankly at Namgung Myung and asked.

"Myung-ah. But wouldn't it be possible with your ability?"

"What?"

"Running away into the Fear Realm."

"Are you still hearing that?"

"You can sense the Outer Gods approaching. Then you could probably run away from them even inside the Fear Realm."

Namgung Myung, who was silent for a moment, asked.

"If you run away like that? What would change then?"

"You can look for the disappeared Transcendents."

The disappeared Transcendents.

Yeon Gisu's eyes were agitated.

"We're going to find humanity's last hope. You know? They'll never turn away from us. If they see what Murim has become, if they see what those Giant Nebula guys have done, they'll never—"

"Gisu-ya, forget it."

Namgung Myung's voice, as heavy as his heart, his gaze wandering through the darkness of the Fear Realm was recalling a scene from the distant past.

"Even that Breaking The Sky Sword Saint was defeated."

"…"

"Even the Murim gods we thought were stronger than anyone else were defeated by those guys."

"So you're saying we should give up here? There are many other Transcendents besides Breaking The Sky Sword Saint. If we can find even one of them…"

"It's been a long time since the Fear Realm met its end. And yet no one besides Breaking the Sky Sword Saint has come to help us. What do you think that means?"

Yeon Gisu, who had been biting his lips as if he didn't want to admit it, spoke again.

"I don't know. There could be some circumstances. And. Breaking The Sky Sword Saint-nim didn't lose to them. Breaking The Sky Sword Saint-nim just—"

"Yeon Gisu, here he comes."

Yeon Gisu turned around in front at Namgung Myung's signal. Although it wasn't in his sight yet, he could feel the darkness stirring.

Namgung Myung quickly added.

"Hold on to the Sananghyang and run to the darkness diagonally to the right. Make a big circle in that direction, then run east, count to 30 minutes, and then return following the scent."

[NOTE 1]

Yeon Gisu nodded. Namgung Myung had just told him the only way to survive from the 'Nameless Things'.

"Let's meet alive."

Yeon Gisu jumped into the darkness with those words. His goal was to draw the attention of the 'Nameless Things' until the first collection was over.

But at that moment, a ray of light flew in from behind the group.

"Ahhh!"

With a scream, Yeon Gisu was seen rolling on the floor.

A sharp beam of light was piercing Yeon Gisu's thigh.

It was clear who had thrown the spear.

"Divine General Yeon Gisu did not meet half of his quota at the last party."

The supervisor was saying.

"If you don’t fill up the quota, that’s what’s going to happen."

The limping Yeon Gisu screamed.

Then something emerged from the darkness. It was Nameless Things. They rushed straight to Yeon Gisu and started tearing at his flesh.

"S-save me—"

The few remaining post-war survivors in Murim died in an instant.

Namgung Myung, who confirmed his friend’s death, turned his head toward the supervisor.

"Supervisor, he was bait."

"So?"

"If the bait is already dead, the mortality rate of the remaining members will increase."

"We won’t consider mortality rates from this exploration. We’ll hunt the Nameless Things that appear and advance deeper. There’s nothing to gain from the Entrance Area anymore."

The supervisor said that and started to lead the way. Every time the dazzling sword pierced through the darkness, the 'Nameless Things' fell one by one.

The incarnations who were watching the scene from behind sighed.

"Oh my god, I didn’t know the supervisor was that strong…"

"I heard that they received fragments of debris from a Giant Nebula."

Fragments of debris.

「The 'pieces' left behind by the 'King of Fear' as it disappeared.」

A divine being that could gain power comparable to a 'constellation' with just a single small fragment.

The reason they came to the 'Fear Realm' right now was precisely to collect the fragments of that King of Fear.

After killing three or four more 'Nameless Things,' the supervisor turned around and asked.

"Namgung Myung, how many more are left?"

"About ten."

"What's the rank?"

"The lowest rank."

"That's worth a try. Everyone, wake up and follow me. Today, we're going to the 'Middle Zone'."

The supervisor, who had only recently gained strength, seemed to want to test his own strength.

When the supervisor, who was swinging his sword recklessly, had advanced a certain distance, Namgung Myung quietly whispered to Murong Xin behind him.

"Murong Xin, count to ten and run away."

"What? What nonsense are you talking about? Didn't you see Gisu die earlier?"

Anyone who runs away gets killed. That's the rule of this 'Exploration Team'.

But Namgung Myung shook his head.

"This exploration will fail."

In Namgung Myung's left eye, which was strangely shining, a story of another world was shining.

Mo Yongshin muttered in a voice of shock.

"Myung-ah, you wouldn't..."

In the past hundred or so explorations, Namgung Myung had only made a few expressions like that. The last time he made an expression like that, the 'Natural Disaster-level Fear' 'Toothed Fin' descended.

"You can run away now. The supervisor went too deep because he was drunk on his own power."

"And you? What about you?"

Namgung Myung silently pointed to his neck. Unlike the other incarnations, he was wearing a black belt that reminded him of a dog collar.

"If I run away, the supervisor will notice."

"..."

"Gisu is dead. I can't lose you too."

Mo Yongshin pursed his lips several times toward his friend. Then he bowed his head and said.

"I'm sorry, Myung-ah."

Mo Yongshin immediately started running backwards with those words. The other incarnations, sensing something strange, also noticed and followed Mo Yongshin.

When more than half of the collection team had run away, the supervisor, who belatedly noticed the situation, shouted.

"What? Where did everyone go?"

The grumbling supervisor approached Namgung Myung. Then Namgung Myung said.

"Supervisor."

"What?"

"Coming."

With those words, a group of 'Nameless Things' appeared from behind and attacked the supervisor.

"These damn things—"

【Oooooooh!】

"This kind of thing, this kind of thing—"

In an instant, five or six Nameless Things rushed in and bit the supervisor's arms and legs.

They shook them off, cut them, and stabbed them.

However, when one died, another one appeared and lifted the supervisor.

"Didn't you say ten, ten!"

The supervisor, whose body was now dripping with tears, shouted at Namgung Myung in a bloodshot voice.

"You bastard—"

A giant baby appeared from behind and swung its arms and cut off the supervisor's neck.

It was a vain end considering the fear it had caused the later indices.

Namgung Myung smiled in vain as he watched the monsters.

Were there still so many 'Nameless Things' hiding?

Namgung Myung knelt down and slowly sank to his knees in front of the approaching disaster.

He lost his father, and the Breaking The Sky Sword Saint he respected. And now even his old friend had left him.

There was no hope for him to survive like this.

His Murim had already been destroyed.

The day that would come someday had simply come a little earlier.

Then, the 'Nameless Things' that surged in covered his entire body. The sensation of them brushing past his shoulders, torso, and head.

But why?

The Gods of the Other World did not attack him.

Was it because he did not react to the attack? Or was it because of the 'story of the other world' that was embedded in him?

He could not tell for sure which.

He slowly opened his eyes and looked, and the 'Nameless Things' were a little strange.

Their movements were strangely different from usual, as if they were ignoring him. Namgung Myung, who always ran away, immediately noticed their state. He noticed.

'Running away from something.'

Something was walking towards the end of the waves of 'Nameless Things'.

He didn't know for sure, but if it was enough to make the 'Nameless Things' terrified, it must be a powerful Outer God comparable to a 'Natural Disaster'.

Namgung Myung shouted with a trembling voice.

"Outer God! I will make a contract with you!"

He continued to speak with his eyes tightly shut. He knew that the Outer God wouldn't understand his language. He knew that they would burst his existence like a bug. But this was all he could do.

"I will offer up all the stories I have! Please destroy this world! Those damned Constellations, all the Constellations—"

He wanted to convey his despair to the outsider, even if it was just a single word.

But.

"Excuse me."

The outsider answered.

When he slowly opened his eyes, a man was standing before his eyes.

At first, he thought he was a monster in the form of a person, but something was different. He could definitely feel the aura of a person, but at the same time, there was a certain aura he could feel from him.

It was the aura that Namgung Myung had longed for, the 'arrogance' that only those who had trained in the 'Time Fault' for a long time could exude.

"Now, just hearing the words 'destruction' or 'contract' gives me goosebumps."

Namgung Myung blankly looked up at the man. The words that had escaped his throat lingered on the tip of his tongue for a long time.

"Could it be... Are you a member of the Transcendent Alliance?"

Then the man smiled brightly and said.

"Yes, I am the youngest of them."

"Why, why did you come now?"

"That is..."

It had been a long time.

But it seemed to be the same for the man too.

"There are still too many stories I don't know."

Eight years after the destruction of the Fear Realm.

The last survivor of the Transcendent Alliance finally returned to the scenario area.

900 Episode 50 The World After The End (3)

---

[Main Scenario #■■ - 'Fear Realm Expedition' has ended!]

The main episode 'Fear Realm' has been cleared. The strange thing is that even though the scenario has been cleared, the scenario number has not been unlocked.

Well, considering what happened inside, the Management Bureau must have had a hard time assigning scenario numbers.

Considering that Giant Nebulae and Mythical Constellations appeared and Natural Disaster-level Fears ran rampant, it wouldn't have been strange if the scenario difficulty had been around 70 or higher.

[Your 'Fear Realm Exploration' is 300%.]

Not 100%, but 300%.

I invaded the 'Fear Realm's' End Zone, joined the 'Transcendent Alliance', and even faced and fought the 'King of Fear'.

If you don't give me proper recognition, I'll be the one who feels bad.

[A 'Temporary Channel' is in operation in the area.]

[Some Constellations are curious about your identity!]

The Constellations didn't seem to recognize me right away. Right now, I was wearing the hood I received when I crossed over from the 1,863rd Round. It was something Han Sooyoung had given me.

「"Wear it later. You never know what might have happened in your worldline. It's an item that makes it difficult to identify your identity."」

「"You want me to live in a state of exhaustion?"」

「"Because the Constellations are having fun."」

「"What a genius writer."」

In fact, in the air, there was a guy who had been curious about my identity for a while, sending me an indirect message.

[The Constellation, 'Master of White Deer Lake', is curious about your identity.]

'Master of White Deer Lake'.

A Nebula came to mind.

But why was that 'Nebula's' Constellation on the Temporary Channel?

The question didn't last long. That was why the message from the Management Bureau that followed filled my head.

[The Management Bureau is checking the clear record of the scenario in question!]

[The Dokkaebis of the Management Bureau are not convinced that you cleared it.]

[The Management Bureau is conducting a full investigation of the scenario.]

Are you saying you don’t want to give me a reward?

Since the scenario wasn’t even numbered, there was a possibility that I would receive a poor reward with some ridiculous excuse.

[The Management Bureau has checked your scenario clear record.]

However, the <Star Stream> knows what happened that day, and the Constellations remember it.

A great number of Constellations participated, comparable to the 'Giant Tale Scenario', and just as many Constellations fell.

I barely made it out of that terrible scenario.

If my contribution is not acknowledged here, it will not only damage the prestige of the Management Bureau, but also the probability of the <Star Stream> as a whole.

[The <Star Stream> acknowledges your eligibility for a reward.]

As expected. Then, let's start with the reward...

[The 'Returnee Scenario' that was supposed to be given to you has been temporarily postponed.]

I looked up into the air with a slightly embarrassed heart. Not another scenario, but the 'Returner Scenario' was postponed?

The main story's development flowed through my head. Even Kim Dokja, who had been to the 1,863 Round, had not experienced something like this.

[A 'Dokkaebi in Charge' will be dispatched to you soon.]

'Dokkaebi in Charge' dispatched.

I was momentarily silent, but soon I thought it was better. Rather than receiving a mediocre reward, it might have been better to request a private meeting with that Dokkaebi in charge and receive a proper reward.

More than anything, there is the 'Demon King of Salvation' here, so there is no need to be pushed back.

[A temporary scenario will be issued to you!]

[The sub-scenario, 'Familiar Sky' has begun!]

<Sub-scenario - Familiar Sky>

Category: Sub

Difficulty: B

Clear Conditions: You are the first survivor after the 'End of Fear'. Check the progress of the scenario that occurred while you were away.

Time Limit: 3 days

Reward: 5 D-coins

Failure: –

Sub-scenario 'Familiar Sky'.

This was a sub-scenario that incarnations who temporarily visited other dimensions often received.

It seemed to mean that they were to perform this or that until the 'Dokkaebi in charge' was dispatched… But I saw one thing that bothered me. It was something that was listed as a reward.

…D-coin?

That was when the man who had been walking with me at the entrance to the Fear Realm spoke.

"I, Benefactor."

"Yes."

"My name is Namgung Myung."

Come to think of it, we hadn't even properly introduced ourselves while walking together.

I answered with an embarrassed smile.

"Ah, you're from Namgung Se Family."

Looking back, I had a small connection with 'Namgung Se Family'.

When the 'Fear Realm Expedition' was called, I had participated in the expedition with the help of Namgung Se Family's head, Emperor's Sword Namgung Jincheon.

Namgung Myung nodded vigorously as if he had gained strength from my answer.

"Yes, the head of the Namgung Se Family at that time. Now it is just a name in name only."

The head of the Namgung Se Family. When I heard that, things came to mind.

「"Father! Please save me! Father!"」

A young man from a prestigious family who was contaminated by the tales of the other world and cried out for his father.

Although his face was much older than I remembered, the man in front of me seemed to be the same martial artist from back then.

In other words, the man in front of me was the son of the Emperor's Sword Namgung Jincheon.

"Is the Emperor's Sword okay?"

"Do you know my father?"

I know. A greedy old man who advertised a dumpling franchise by selling the story of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

"I met him once before."

Still, the Emperor's Sword called me a god and I was able to repair my incarnation body. It was part of business, but I wasn't completely ungrateful.

I thought I should buy him dumplings when we met this time.

"My father passed away a few years ago."

Unfortunately, those dumplings were no longer edible.

"I-I'm sorry."

"No. It’s nice to see someone who remembers my father after a long time.”

A faint longing appeared in Namgung Myung’s eyes and disappeared. He quickly collected his emotions and added with a smile.

"I have received the grace of the Great Swordsman this time. May I ask your name?"

I was about to answer, 'Kim Dokja', as usual, but stopped.

[The Constellation, 'Master of White Deer Lake,' listens to your answer.]

Come to think of it, the name 'Kim Dokja' was already well-known even before I entered the Fear Realm.

Since I've decided to hide my identity, I think it would be better to just watch the situation unfold here for a while.

"Actually, I don't remember. It seems that I lost some of my memories while staying in the 'Fear Realm'."

Namgung Myung looked surprised, but soon seemed to believe me.

"Oh, you were consumed by Fear."

"I think so."

"Well, it's the 'Fear Realm', not anywhere else... Among my friends, there is a guy who faints at the sight of a white ladder because he is consumed by Fear."

A white ladder? Did he see an 'Alien Traffic Light'?

"That Fear is scary."

"As expected, even Benefactor knows about the dangers of 'Disaster-level Fear'."

"Hmm, yes."

What kind of expression would Namgung Myung make if he found out that I could control that Traffic Light?

"If you're suffering from memory loss, even Benefactor must have been trapped in a 'Disaster-level' or higher Fear for a long time."

Disaster-level…

I smiled and replied.

"Yes, similar."

"Then you don’t know much about what happened inside the Fear Realm?"

"I know that the Fear Realm has fallen, but…"

"Do you also know that the King of Fear is dead?"

"Yes. I know that."

Then, as if it were easy to explain, Namgung Myung nodded.

"Right now, the outside is suffering because of that."

"It happened inside the Fear Realm, but did it have any influence on the outside?"

"To be exact, it was a riot caused by the 'ruin' he left behind."

The 'ruin' left behind by the King of Fear.

Somehow, I felt like I knew how the situation was going.

"Are there fights over the tales of the dead Outer Gods?"

"That's right."

"But most of his tales must have disappeared with the fall of the Fear Realm."

"Ah, Benefactor, you felt it too. As Benefactor said, the 'Great King of Fear's' great ruins were reportedly stolen by Outer Gods of the level of Myths on the day the 'Fear Realm' fell..."

So that's how the events of that day became known.

Suddenly, I became a Myth-grade Outer God.

"The other small fragments of the ruins were scattered all over the Fear Realm. Since that day, traces of the 'King of Fear' have been found in the appendix of the 'Nameless Things' and 'Divine Beings of the Other World' that appear in the Fear Realm."

"Could it be that Namgung Young Hero entered the Fear Realm because...?"

"Yes. That's right. I am collecting the 'crumbs' of the ruins under the orders of the corporation."

Corporation?

"What is a 'corporation'? Did something like that exist in the 'First Murim'?"

"Ah, Benefactor, you may not know. I'm at a loss as to where to begin explaining this. May I ask when you first entered the Fear Realm?"

"Um, I don't have a good sense of time either."

"That could be possible. Then do you remember which Expedition you participated in?"

I tried to recall my memories for a moment.

"I think it was the 191st Expedition."

"The 191st? Oh my. Benefactor, you were a survivor of 'that day'."

I recalled the scene of 'that day' that Namgung Myung had spoken of.

The day the Great Hall opened and 'Tooth Fin' appeared in the Blue Dragon Castle of the 'First Murim'.

At that time, I dragged him into the 'Fear Realm' to prevent the destruction of the 'First Murim'.

"Then you can't help but not know. First, let me tell you the conclusion."

Namgung Myung sighed with a worried expression on his face, as if he was worried that I might be shocked, and added the following.

"The 'First Murim' that Benefactor knows about was destroyed eight years ago."

---

The destruction of the 'First Murim' was an episode that was covered several times in 'Ways of Survival'. It was destroyed by the invasion of a Giant Nebula or an invasion by Outer Gods, was consumed as a lower scenario area of <Emperor>, and there was a bloody disaster caused by a rebellion of a lower Murim.

Not to mention, in the main story, it almost was destroyed by the invasion of the 'Divine Being of the Other World'.

So the problem was not the destruction of Murim itself.

"How many years?"

Namgung Myung answered with a trembling face as I asked him with a dumbfounded expression.

"Eight years."

Eight years.

For the Constellations, the God of the Outer World, and the Transcendents of the 'Time Fault', it was almost a moment.

However, in the 'main story', if the 'main scenario' is the standard, the story is different.

I felt dizzy.

Even in the past, there were times when Kim Dokja would deviate from the main scenarios for three years, but he had never disappeared for eight years.

「I wonder what happened to all the party members.」

My heart was beating dangerously.

[Exclusive skill, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint'activated!]

If there was even one person who thought of me right now, I could connect with them.

However, even though I activated [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint], there was no one I could contact. It meant that no one was thinking of me.

Eight years was that kind of time.

「It felt like I was left alone in the vast universe.」

It felt as if my existence had been taken out of the center of the story and thrown into the middle of nowhere.

It was the moment when my first goal after returning was naturally set.

「I have to meet the party members again. I have to hear what happened.」

The problem was that 'goal' could not be achieved.

「If it’s not that they don’t think of me, but that they can’t think of me?」

I thought with my lips tightly shut. It wasn’t time to make such ominous predictions yet.

It’s okay if no one thinks of me. Even if [Omniscient Reader’s Viewpoint] doesn’t activate, there’s a way to connect directly to at least one person.

[Use the item, 'Midday Tryst'!]

I once connected a direct line to 'Midday Tryst' with Yoo Joonghyuk. If he’s alive, the line will definitely respond.

After a while, a message appeared before my eyes.

901 Episode 50 The World After The End (4)

---

[The person is currently in an unreachable area.]

I blinked stupidly.

An unreachable area?

[There are unread messages left in 'Midday Tryst'.]

The fact that there are unread messages means that 'Midday Tryst' is still functioning normally.

In other words, Yoo Joonghyuk was paying coins to maintain this connection on my behalf.

This is a little touching, isn't it?

[There are ??? missed messages.]

[The usage fee for 'Midday Tryst' is currently partially overdue.]

Huh?

[The usage fee is currently overdue for 32 days.]

[To check the missed messages, pay the overdue usage fee.]

Hey, you bastard, you didn't pay everything, did you?

I thought about it for a moment and paid the fee. It's not even a few years, it's only 32 days overdue, so I can pay it. There might be an important message.

[Payment of overdue fee has been completed.]

I checked the message right away.

[The message is damaged and unreadable.]

I don't know why, but the message was seriously damaged.

Come to think of it, there was something similar in the main story. What did Kim Dokja do then?

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', activates!]

That's right. Kim Dokja in the main story used the power of the [Fourth Wall] to decipher the damaged message. Then, should I do the same?

[Someone on the 'Fourth Wall' says that they can decipher the message.]

If it's someone on the [Fourth Wall], it must be the 'Demon King of Salvation'. Or the 'King of Fear'? Or maybe the kkoma Kim Dokjas?

It didn't matter which one. Right now, finding out the contents of the message was the priority.

'Decipher it.'

As soon as I answered, I felt the [Fourth Wall] wriggling. And after a while, the interpreted message appeared on the smartphone screen.

「I d i ot.」

This was the first message.

「I d i ot.」

Again?

Hmm, right. If it's Yoo Joonghyuk, then that's possible.

Since we broke up like that in the Fear, he might be mad at me.

「I d i ot.」

I stared at the screen for a moment.

This seems like someone is interpreting it maliciously on purpose. Come to think of it, weren't the Kim Dokja clan the masters of 'misunderstanding Yoo Joonghyuk' for a long time?

I continued reading the interpreted message.

「Are you a li ve ? ?」

「I ? curr en tly belo ng ? 」

「You r ? na me is ? 」

Unfortunately, the recovered messages were impossible to properly confirm their contents.

The only one that was intact was...

「Ne bu la Batt le」

The Nabulae waged war?

Is that what it means?

「? ? co in ? ?」

This seems to be something related to coins. Is it related to that 'D Coin'?

「Kim Dok ja, be ca re ful」

That was Yoo Joonghyuk's last message.

Kim Dokja, be careful.

I read the message over and over again. It didn't seem like there were any hidden clues like vertical reading or anagrams.

So, was it really telling me to be careful?

...That couldn't be true.

Above all, Yoo Joonghyuk wouldn't have used coins to leave such a simple message.

"Benefactor, we've arrived."

While I was lost in thought, the entrance to the swirling portal quickly approached. If I go past that, I'll see the scenery of the 'First Murim'.

No, since the 'First Murim' has been destroyed, I wonder if I'll see a different scenery.

Namgung Myung, who had been watching me for a moment, asked.

"Can I ask you a few questions before we go through the portal?"

"Yes. Sure."

"Benefactor, what stage of 'Transcendence' have you reached?"

I wondered why he suddenly asked that, but upon thinking about it, Namgung Myung knew that I belonged to the 'Transcendence Alliance'.

"Well, that's... Strictly speaking, I'm not a Transcendent. I failed to break through the First Stage of Transcendence."

There are several conditions for achieving Transcendence in 'Ways of Survival'.

For example, reaching a total ability score of 100, or 'forgetting' a skill whose proficiency has reached its limit...

"You failed to achieve Transcendence?"

"Yes. It just so happened. That's why I was persecuted a lot."

In fact, when I first entered the 'Fear Realm', my goal was to achieve 'Transcendence'.

For example, integrating the Transcendence's incarnation and the Constellation's soul into one being, just like Goryeo's First Swords Cheok Jungyeong did. In fact, my incarnation was precisely trained through the Time Fault, and I came pretty close to the First Stage of transcendence.

However, that was it, and I was unable to achieve transcendence.

Towards me who could not achieve transcendence, Chunghuh, the Commander-in-Chief of the Transcendence Alliance, said this.

「"Transcendence can only be achieved by forgetting what you have, but it seems like there is something you must not forget."」

Something I must not forget.

「"'Transcendence' may not be the only answer to reach 'after destruction'. Struggling to remember everything could also be another possibility for repair."」

When I relayed that story to Han Sooyoung in the 1,863rd Round, Han Sooyoung said this.

「"You're Kim Dokja."」

Han Sooyoung clicked her tongue as if to ask why I was thinking so hard and added.

「"If you achieve 'transcendence' in your current state, you might actually be lowered in rank. Do you know that Transcendence is a state that is reached by studying and training for a long time on a 'single story'?"」

「"It is."」

「"If you do that, your understanding of a single story will deepen, but your overall worldview will narrow. You have to become stronger in a different way than other Transcendents. In other words, readers have their own lives."」

All the way to the 1,863rd Round, I was absorbed in that 'Kim Dokja's Way' with Han Sooyoung.

Of course, Namgung Myung, who couldn't know about this secret, had a somewhat dark expression.

"I see. You're not a Transcendent..."

"Are you disappointed?"

Namgung Myung thought for a moment, then shook his head and smiled faintly.

"No, I think it's fortunate."

In fact, fortunate?

"If you were really a Transcendent, you would have been in a difficult position in the 'Divine Murim District'."

Divine Murim District.

It seemed to be the new name for the 'First Murim'.

"Because the Divine Murim District doesn't welcome Transcendents."

It was a strange story.

Whether it was the 'New Murim' or the 'Old Murim', if it was a murim, there was no reason to treat Transcendents coldly. If you just achieved the First Stage of Transcendence, you could compete with the lower-ranking Constellations. That's what Transcendents are.

As if he knew my doubts, Namgung Myung opened his mouth again.

"The Transcendents who returned from the Fear Realm are a headache for companies. The Transcendents who are familiar with the laws of the 'Old Murim' are trying to destroy the system instead of adapting to the 'New Murim'."

"I've been wanting to ask you this question since a while ago, but what exactly is this 'company'?"

"Do you know about the Old Murim Faction or the Five Great Sects?"

"Yes. I've heard of it."

The Old Murim Faction and the Five Great Sects.

The Namgung Sect that Namgung Myung was a part of was also one of the Five Great Sects.

"If the past Murim Faction was controlled by the Old Murim Faction and the Five Great Sects, the current New Murim Faction is controlled by 'companies'."

"It's a kind of 'sect'."

"It's similar, but a little different. You'll know when you see it for yourself..."

I thought I knew roughly how the 'New Murim Faction' came to be.

Seeing that they use the word 'company' instead of 'sect', it seems like a similar worldview to the 'Modern Murim Faction' that I used to write about.

"If possible, I recommend that you belong to a 'company'. When you enter the city, you will automatically go up to the examination table, and the examiner will explain the details later."

Just as I was about to ask what the examination table was, a portal opened and a desolate desert appeared. A huge moving walkway was installed in the center of the desert.

We got on the moving walkway.

"The city you see in the distance is the 'New Murim District'."

The exterior of the city was obscured by a white smog as if it had been hit by yellow dust, so I couldn't see it well.

Come to think of it, it was strange that there was a desert area here.

A dry and desolate land.

'Environmental pollution' in that Murim? If Breaking The Sky Sword Saint had seen it, she would have done the same.

As I clicked my tongue inwardly, people began to gather one by one through the other branch of the moving walkway.

I saw one of them waving their hand in this direction.

"Oh, Namgung Myung. This time, you came back safely."

"Hwang Minhyeok."

I looked at the man called Hwang Minhyeok.

He was wearing clothes that were completely different from Namgung Myung, and the words 'Tamra Middle School' were written on his chest.

Is that the name of the company?

When I looked again, there was something written on Namgung Myung's back as well. It was too dusty to read, but Hwang Minhyeok, who was observing Namgung Myung's expression, asked again.

"But where did your team go and are you coming alone?"

"We met waves."

"Waves? Could it be that the entire team was wiped out?"

"A total of thirty-two people, including Yeon Gisu and the supervisor, died."

"Yeon Gisu is fine, but the supervisor died? You, could it be—"

Namgung Myung waved his hand at Hwang Minhyeok, who was glaring.

"I didn't kill him. The supervisor died trying to enter the Middle Zone too hard and fell down."

"Huh, you don't need to make excuses to me. The audit team will find out the details. By the way, who is the incarnation behind you?"

"Oh, this person is…"

Before Namgung Myung could even introduce me, the moving walk began to slow down.

[You will soon enter the 'New Murim District'!]

[You have entered a new scenario area!]

At the same time, I saw my body turning translucent.

Namgung Myung shouted at me urgently.

"Benefactor, I will see you later. And remember! You must choose a company at the judging table! If you don't…!"

Namgung Myung's figure disappeared, and I started to be transferred somewhere. Judging from the feeling, it seemed that I was about to be summoned to that 'examination board'.

Amid the dazzling scenery that was quickly passing by, a message appeared before my eyes like a subway advertisement.

[Tamra Junggong.]

—Creating a new world with the bones of forgotten gods.

Tamra Junggong.

The name written on the back of that 'Hwang Minhyeok' earlier.

Was that a company name?

The advertisement kept coming to mind.

[Vedas Biotech.]

—Living scripture, rewriting humanity.

The company name in front seems to be the name of the company, and the one after seems to be a slogan.

[Baekyo Heritage (百妖遺産).]

—Technologization of the strange, armament of tradition.

I started to understand Namgung Myung's words about choosing a company to belong to.

Is it some kind of sponsor selection?

After all, this 'scenario region' seems to be a system where you enter a 'company' and progress.

In the end, it meant that in order to enter this region, you had to choose one of these companies.

[Olympus Technology.]

[Black Cloud Foundation.]

But as I looked at the passing company names, they all seemed like evil companies.

Olympus Technology?

If I entered a place like that, I'd lose all my stories and live as a slave terminal incarnation for 200 years.

It seemed that each company had a different promotional time, so the companies in the back quickly passed by with only their names introduced.

That was it.

...Huh?

That company passed by 'very quickly'.

But I definitely saw it clearly. That 'company', without a doubt—

> ...
>
> —only we, know the ending of this world.

It was a company I knew very well.

902 Episode 50 The World After The End (5)

---

[■■■ Company.]

I still didn't know whether the word that would go into that ■■■ was Kim Dokja, the name of someone who shouldn't be called, or literally three black squares.

However, there was something certain.

In this crazy worldview, the people who would establish a company with that name were already decided.

'Readers.'

Killer King, Cha Yerin, Kyung Sein, Ji Eunyu, Ye Hyunwoo, Dansu ahjussi...

I could definitely meet all of them, or at least one of them, if I went to that company. I was certain of that.

[The summoning of the examination team is completed.]

The summoning was completed with a dazzling beam of light.

Is this the 'examination team'?

I slowly looked around, and the sight of a pure white room came into view.

The room looked to be about the size of a sports field.

Various weapons were on display outside the examination team. In particular, the quality of the weapons displayed in the front row was quite excellent.

If they are investing this much in just display equipment, is 'Divine Murim District' a fairly wealthy city?

—High-grade D Sword.

—High-grade D Blade.

—High-grade D Spear.

Strangely, all the item names had D in them.

Come to think of it, the coin I received when I entered here also had 'D' in it.

I took out the coin I received as a scenario reward.

<Item Information>

Name: D Coin

Grade: ???

Description: A special currency circulated in 'Divine Murim District'. It has relatively high value compared to regular coins. There are rumors that it contains the stories of 'Divine Beings of the Otherworld' found in places like the 'Fear Realm', and there are cases where unrefined 'Fears' are sometimes found, so be careful when handling it.

That was a simple explanation. Expensive currency handled in this area.

Anyway, Divine Beings of the Otherworld... The moment I held the coin, I felt an unpleasant sensation, as if I had touched the skin of an unfamiliar creature.

['D Coin' responds to your story.]

In an instant, the coin clung to my palm like a leech. I was startled and summoned the coin back.

I guess it's because I've been back to the scenario for the first time in 8 years, but I can't get used to everything from the currency to the scenario area.

If I could contact them at least, I'd ask for help, but it doesn't seem like the inside of the [Fourth Wall] would be a good situation.

I should meet the readers quickly.

"Is anyone here?"

There was no sign of anyone around the examination table except for me.

Why is there no one here? Is this an automated system?

I thought about just walking out, but I remembered Namgung Myung's advice to definitely choose a company.

Let's wait a little longer.

I took out 'Unbreakable Faith' and started to lightly stretch my body. Maybe because it was a Murim area, the amount of magical power in the air was quite abundant.

[Exclusive trait, 'Circulation Delay', is activated!]

Lightly draw a sword line left and right.

Although I didn't become a Transcendent, my swordsmanship skills have improved by leaps and bounds since joining the 'Transcendent Alliance' and completing the 1,863rd Round. The connection between [Way of the Wind] and [Baekcheong-ganggi] has become much more natural, and my understanding of the characters in [Bookmark] has also improved significantly.

Honestly, I felt like I wouldn't lose to any incarnation except for Yoo Joonghyuk right now.

"Huh?"

That was when I discovered the sword mark drawn in the middle of the martial arts field.

The sword mark that tore the solid martial arts field floor diagonally.

'It's the martial arts of the Transcendents.'

There was no doubt about it. Judging from the strength of the floor and the depth of the sword, it was a powerful Transcendent that had reached at least the 3rd stage of Transcendence.

The faces of the Transcendent Alliance quickly flashed through my mind.

Did one of them visit here? But it wasn't Cheok Jungyeong's [Three Swords] or Kyrgios' [Baekcheong-ganggi]. At first glance, it seemed like [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship], but upon closer inspection, it had different characteristics.

There was another strange thing. The moment I examined the form of the swordsmanship, my heart fluttered slightly. I can't express it well, but it seemed like the swordsman who left this sword mark swung a sword in extreme sadness.

"Huh? Who is it?"

A voice was heard from the entrance outside the examination hall. The one who opened the entrance and came in was a middle-aged man wearing somewhat baggy clothes.

A person finally appeared.

It seemed that the middle-aged man was the 'examiner'.

"Who is Young Hero?"

"I'm here to be examined."

"Alone?"

"Yes."

The middle-aged man looked at something on the terminal he took out from his bosom as if he was embarrassed, and then said.

"That's strange. The lower scenarios aren't in the season for the promotion yet, right?"

What kind of a baseless term is the season of the quest?

"How did you get here, Young Hero?"

"I walked."

"Huh?"

"I just walked into the city and got summoned here."

The middle-aged man who had been listening to my answer with a blank expression suddenly snapped.

"Hey you! Don't lie! How can someone who walked into the city get summoned to the examination?"

"It happened?"

The middle-aged man looked extremely embarrassed. I felt his lips mumble softly as he rolled his eyes and examined me for a moment.

I guess I know what he's trying to do.

[Someone has activated 'Precise Search'!]

However, there was no way he could deduce my identity with such a skill.

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', is activating!]

With a light spark, the examiner who was watching me was greatly shocked and took a step back.

"What, what is this—"

Then, he opened his eyes wide and began to examine my entire body. It was probably not a 'perception' skill, but rather an attempt to read my status through his senses.

But it would be useless.

This 'hood' I'm wearing was taken from the last scenario area.

[Your status is hidden by the effect of the item, 'Unidentified Hood'.]

The examiner looked at me with a confused expression, and suddenly spoke to me formally.

"Young Hero, are you by any chance from the 'Giant Nebula'?"

'Giant Nebula'.

Come to think of it, I had once made a Small Nebula at the 'Recycling Center' with other readers.

"It's not a Giant Nebula."

"But how... No, wait a minute."

The tone of his speech changed immediately when I told him I wasn't from a Giant Nebula.

While the examiner was going through a stack of electronic documents, I lightly activated my skill toward the examiner in front of me.

[Exclusive skill, 'Character List' activated!]

<Character Information>

Name: Jeon Yeongwoo

Age: 231

Sponsor: None (Currently, there is no Constellation interested).

I doubted my eyes for a moment.

It was because it had been a long time since I had seen an ordinary incarnation that was over 100 years old.

Did I enter a 'Time Fault'?

Exclusive Traits: 2nd Class Examiner (Rare), Cyborg (Rare), Lobby Expert (Rare).

Exclusive Skill: [Heartless Sword Technique Lv. 10]

Overall Ability: [Physical Strength Lv. 67], [Strength Lv. 88], [Agility Lv. 84], [Magic Power Lv. 68]

Overall Evaluation: Jeon Yeongwoo is an examiner of the 'New Murim' equipped with a low-level foreign body. Jeon Yeongwoo, who has been dealing with major companies in 'New Murim' for a long time, maintains close connections with Executive-level figures in the companies.

'Foreign body. Cyborg. That's why they have long lives.'

Come to think of it, there was a time when a large number of similar incarnations appeared in 'Ways of Survival'.

It was the 1,500th Round, I think.

I skimmed through it so I don't remember clearly, but the scenario area. Some were occupied by a group called a 'company'.

The Murim world including 'First Murim', the world of the demons, and even the medieval fantasy world and SF world including 'Peace Land'.

「The appearance of a company that governs the mid-level scenario area where incarnations reside in large numbers.」

Maybe those 'companies' are the 'companies' I checked earlier.

And this examiner...

"Hmm, are you really a friendly person who came up without knowing anything? It's been a while since I've seen something like this."

He was a kind of a 'new recruit training manager' who was in charge of measuring the skills of the incarnations and transferring them to a company.

"I guess they don't usually come in walking like me?"

"The judging panel only summons incarnations who have come up through [the path to the top] from lower scenarios. They won't be summoned to this 'judging panel' just because they walked into the city."

Is that the principle?

"Usually, the 'judging' is conducted according to the season branches of the lower scenarios. This season already ended a few months ago, so I thought there wouldn't be any new recruits for a while..."

So this 'judging panel' is a kind of primary filtering net that welcomes new recruits who come up to the 'new Murim district' through [the path to the top] from lower scenarios.

"If you're summoned to the 'judging panel' alone at a time like this, it's usually one of two things. You're either an 'outcast' who has been away from the scenarios for a long time, or..."

The judge, who was looking at me with deep eyes, continued speaking.

"A mysterious strong man who suddenly 'jumped from a scenario' in an unknown scenario, or Young Hero?"

I thought for a moment and then asked.

"Is there a disadvantage if I don't answer properly?"

"Hehe, what an interesting newcomer. You're really spirited."

"First of all, I'm not an outcast."

"I guess so. If you're an outcast, your incarnation body should have already been dyed in the probability aftermath."

Were there some outcasts hiding in the scenario?

The examiner seemed to know a lot about the characteristics of outcasts.

"Then you're from a lower scenario... There's something about it that doesn't make sense to believe that."

"What's the point?"

"Usually, when you're summoned here from a lower scenario, you can't help but have trouble breathing because of the narrative pressure of the higher scenario, but Young Hero is very relaxed."

The density of the stories that could be felt in the air was definitely different. But compared to the density of the stories I experienced in the 'Fear Realm', this level of pressure was child's play.

"Even if you've come this far, there must be a last scenario you cleared. What's the last scenario number?"

Which scenario was the last?

The last scenario I performed was the 'Fear Realm', but the Fear Realm didn't have a scenario number.

Then should I start from the 'Recycling Center' before that?

"It's probably around scenario number 20."

The examiner's eyes widened after hearing me.

"No way! Do you know which scenario this is?"

I nodded. Even without asking, there had been a message flashing above my head since a while ago.

[You have currently entered the 'Scenario 70' area.]

[The main scenario will be assigned soon.]

Scenario 70.

A number that wouldn’t be strange even if a 'Giant Story Scenario' of the Super-Large Nebulae occurs.

At this point, the examiner’s shock was understandable. Even after looking through both the 'main story' and the 'Ways of Survival', there was no incarnation that suddenly jumped 50 scenarios.

"Did you receive the blessing of a Constellation of a Narrative or a Myth grade?"

"Hmm, I think there was something like that."

"Did you learn from the Transcendent Alliance’s Transcendents, or were you their disciple?"

Strictly speaking, I was a disciple, but I didn’t learn their martial arts.

Strictly speaking, I didn’t learn martial arts from them, I was a thief who stole with [Bookmarks].

"Huh… Either way, it’s surprising. Honestly, the level I feel from the small group isn’t that great…"

The examiner licked his lips after saying that and started sending a message somewhere. I guess he was sending a message to a 'company'.

As I was looking at that scene, a familiar cliché came to mind.

That's it.

The 'rank measurement episode' that is often seen in hunter stories.

This is the cliché that hunters who returned from 'another world' or 'rank measurement impossible' dungeons experience when they visit the Hunter Association.

Usually, character A, who ignores me, should appear around this time.

[The Constellation, 'Master of White Deer Lake', is curious about your strength.]

Unfortunately, there was no such sign.

I was wondering whether I should maintain 'exhausted mode' this time as well or whether it would be better to gradually show off my strength, but the examiner said something unexpected.

"Oh, really, I really want to measure the rank of Young Hero, but unfortunately, the measuring machine is broken right now. Last time, one of the incarnations summoned destroyed all the spare measuring machines."

To be honest, from my perspective, it wasn't such a bad situation. It was like I had a reasonable excuse to hide my strength. However, I was a little curious about who the incarnation was that destroyed all the extra 'measuring devices'.

I absentmindedly glanced at the bottom of the examination table.

Could the owner of the 'mark' be that incarnation?

"If you're an executive, they can tell your rank without a measuring device…"

The examiner, who had been thinking for a moment, gestured toward me as if he had made up his mind.

"Well, that's better. Please follow me for a moment."

"Where are we going?"

"There's an 'Ascension Ceremony' for corporate executives scheduled to take place near here today."

"Ascension ceremony?"

"To put it simply, it's the day when the executives go up to the 'next scenario' area. Normally, a newbie like you can't attend this event…"

If you're an executive, it probably means someone who has a big responsibility in the company.

"I think it's great that you came all the way here alone, so I'll take you there for a special occasion."

I looked at the examiner who was smiling shamelessly as if he was doing me a great favor.

There was no reason for the examiner I met for the first time today to suddenly be kind to me, so his intention was clear.

「Some of the companies he just contacted want to contact me.」

In other words, this guy was plotting to sell me off to a company in real time.

Did he judge me to be that valuable?

[Your understanding of the character 'Lobbying Expert Jeon Yeongwoo' has increased!]

If I wasn't careful, I could have been sold off to the losers of this region as soon as I started the scenario.

In order to maintain the wise 'strength mode', it would have been right to sneak away at this point, but I was also curious.

Just how strong do the key figures in this 'scenario region' really are? And how strong have I become now?

That's when a strange story became entangled in my feelings.

"Examiner."

I stopped walking, looked at the doorway outside the examination room, and asked,

"Do you happen to know who the 'Executive' who is ascending today is?"

The owner of a story I knew very well was definitely there.

903 Episode 50 The World After The End (6)

Did my question sound strange?

The examiner, whose expression had changed, looked at me carefully.

Did I say something wrong? It doesn't seem like such a big question to be curious about who the Ascendant is today.

"Hmm, now that I think about it, you said you received the blessing of a higher Constellation. I guess you're curious if there's anyone you know among the Ascendants."

I nodded.

If you misunderstand, I'd be grateful.

The examiner, who had been pondering for a moment, answered.

"Ascendants are usually from large corporations. They're the incarnations who were considered promising talents when they first joined the company. Let's see. Today's Ascendants are from <Tamra Heavy Industries>, <Black Cloud Foundation>, and <Olympus Technology>…"

Tamra Heavy Industries. Black Cloud Foundation. Olympus Technology. They were all company names named after famous Nebulae. Tamra would be <Tamra> based on Jeju folktales, and Black Cloud would be <Black Cloud> of the Black Flame Dragon. <Olympus>… there's no need to mention it.

Why did companies named after Nebulae enter 'Murim'?

Was it because of the power struggle related to the destroyed Fear Realm? Or maybe there was a need to supplement the Incarnation resources in the lower scenarios…

In either case, it wasn't a good scenario flow. Especially if a Nebula, who wasn't particularly interested in expanding their power like <Black Cloud>, had also intervened… something big that I don't know about could have happened in the upper scenarios.

"…So, today's list of Ascendants… Hmm? Oh, where did I save the list…"

While the examiner was hurriedly searching through the documents, a door leading to the Ascension Ceremony location appeared in the distance.

This is difficult. If the Ascendant over there is related to the 'being' I'm thinking of…

"How strong are the Executives?"

"Oh, right. I wonder about that too."

It's a scenario in the 70s.

Considering that even the main story's <Gigantomachia> was a scenario in the 60s, the Ascendants in the 70s must be incredibly strong.

"Don't be surprised. The Executives have a 'level' that's equivalent to the early stage of Narrative grade."

Early stage of Narrative grade.

Even the guys like 'Master of Spears' that we fought against at the 'Recycling Center' before were, strictly speaking, early stage of Narrative grade.

However, back then, it was a scenario in the 20s, and now it's a scenario in the 70s.

Since the binding force of the probability that can handle the maximum level of the level is different, even the same 'early stage of Narrative grade' will exert completely different power here.

"I see."

"Hmm? You're not really surprised."

I answered with a grin and stared ahead.

Now, what kind of guy is beyond here? Is he related to the 'existence' that I thought of?

"Now, this is the Ascension Hall where the Ascension Ceremony is held."

Along with the judge's introduction, a wide, circular platform appeared.

A vast sky reminiscent of a celestial sphere hung on the ceiling, and a translucent passage of light descended from the center of the sky and connected the platform. It was a sight reminiscent of an Orbital Elevator.

"Ohhh—!"

In addition to us, hundreds of incarnations had gathered in the area.

"Blood Jade Demon! Blood Jade Demon!"

Incarnations whose ranks were comparable to the judge next to me. If they were the incarnations who survived until now, they must be worthy of it.

—The Ascension Ceremony will be held today.

It seems that this 'Ascension Ceremony' is a large-scale event in the 'New Murim District'.

The faces of the Ascendants were shown in close-up on the giant screen displayed at the top of the platform.

The judge next to me sighed as if he had just remembered.

"Today is the Ascension Ceremony of Jo Daehyeop."

[NOTE 1]

"Jo Daehyeop?"

"The incarnation standing on the right side of the altar is none other than Jo Jincheol, the Blood Jade Demon."

Jo Jincheol.

It was a name I knew.

"Jo Daehyeop is an Ascendant of the <Black Cloud Foundation>. Hehe, how many martial artists have had their spines ripped out by Jo Daehyeop in the past few years?"

At that moment, I could hear the mutterings of the onlookers nearby.

"The troublemaker of Murim is finally ascending to the upper town."

"That vicious bastard."

I glared at the face on the screen and frowned.

That 'Jo Jincheol' survived up to scenario number 70?

The head of the Gyeonggi Alliance, the Ten Evils Jo Jincheol.

In the main story, I know he was defeated by Kim Dokja in the Demon King Promotion Match and died, but how on earth did he end up here? Oh, I see, there is no such 'Kim Dokja' in this world...

Judging by the 'Black Cloud Foundation' written on his back, Jo Jincheol seemed to be an Ascendant of the <Black Cloud> side.

"Paradise Emperor! Paradise Emperor!"

"Ohhh!"

The next Ascendant to be illuminated was a tall, slender figure with small horns on his head.

The moment I heard his nickname, I got goosebumps.

Is this some kind of special on the Ten Evils?

I knew that the 41st Round was going to be a terrible Round, but I didn't know it would be this bad.

If Yoo Joonghyuk was here, he'd be all beat to death.

The owner of Paradise, Reinheit.

Reinheit, who should have fallen down dead in the 9th scenario, was standing there, looking fine.

How on earth did he bring the guy who was stuck in Paradise?

No... Wait a minute.

「The 'Dark Castle' that was the 8th scenario didn't appear on the Korean Peninsula in this Round.」

Originally, 'Reinheit' was the villain who was killed by Yoo Joonghyuk in the Dark Castle.

Since Yoo Joonghyuk, who was going to destroy it, didn't visit the Dark Castle, it was natural development for him to survive in this Round.

The intensity felt from Reinheit's entire body was almost on par with that of a lower-level Demon King.

On his back was written <Olympus Technology>.

Kukukuku.

I don't know the details of this round, but the fact that he came here must mean that he had a powerful benefit that was enough to throw away 'Paradise'.

The moment I saw the spear held in his right hand, I thought I knew what benefit he had received.

"That's—!"

The screams of the incarnations in amazement.

Surprisingly, in his hand was Astrape, a sacred relic of Zeus.

"Thunderbolt's Left Thunderbolt!"

"It's as powerful as I've heard!"

If that were real, I would have been surprised and fallen over.

However, I've seen Zeus swing the Thunderbolt himself several times. So I was sure of it.

"It's a well-made fake."

The examiner flinched and turned to me.

"You have a keen eye. That's right."

"It seems to be equivalent to a Holy Relic."

"It's proof that the Paradise Emperor is recognized by <Olympus> to that extent. Even if it's a mass-produced version, not just anyone can have that spear."

"I see."

I don't know the specific method, but it was clear that Reinheit escaped the Dark Castle with the support of <Olympus>.

Yoo Joonghyuk had also accepted Reinheit as a colleague, so <Olympus>'s decision was understandable.

Anyway, the fact that they've made it to the 70th main scenario means that the lower scenario regions that I knew of were already...

「As we enter the latter half of the scenarios, some continents on Earth have disappeared from the map forever.」

A sinister thought came to mind along with the phrase from 'Ways of Survival' that came to mind.

Will the Korean Peninsula be safe?

What happened to the incarnations at Geumho Station and Gwanghwamun?

"I thought there was one more Ascendant, but it seems he hasn't arrived yet. That's for the best. Follow me. The full-fledged Ascension Ceremony is not over yet, so I have some time to spare."

The examiner said that and moved through the crowd toward the altar.

I thought about sneaking out at this point, but since I had come this far, there was one thing I wanted to try.

"Jo Daehyeop!"

Jo Jincheol turned to look at the examiner's call. It seemed that Jo Jincheol knew the examiner.

"Oh, Jeon Daein."

"Congratulations. You are finally leaving this damn 'New Murim'."

"Thank you. I guess we are meant to be. It's because we met again on the last day."

Jo Jincheol, who had no influence in the main story, became a being on par with 'Narrative-grade'.

Based on the sense of stories, it seemed that he had reached the early Narrative-grade by increasing the average synchronization rate with his sponsor, but even that wasn't easy.

"Haha, that's right. I heard that you secured quite a lot of D Coins in the recent 'Foreign Press Suppression War'."

"Hmm, nothing much. Just took care of a few remnants of the Disaster-level."

"As expected, you're the great Jo Daehyeop."

Watching Jo Jincheol converse so normally, I felt a sense of wonder inside.

Perhaps this was an extremely rare scene in the entire 'Ways of Survival'.

「I want to record it.」

[The 'Recorder of Fear', whose identity has not been revealed, looks around in surprise.]

Did he sense my gaze?

Jo Jincheol glanced back at me. When the examiner pointed to me and explained the situation, Jo Jincheol's eyes flashed with interest.

"A subject for irregular examination?"

"Yes. He's the incarnation that entered the 'New Murim District' today."

"Hmm... Aren't you a friendly soldier who's reluctant to reveal your face?"

At that tone of voice asking how I could be so arrogant as to wear my hood upside down in front of the victor, I took off my hood with a bitter smile.

[The effect of the item, 'Unidentified Hood' disappears.]

"Hoo..."

Jo Jincheol's eyes flashed. An unpleasant gaze scanned my face. What he used wasn't a search or insight skill.

I knew the skill Jo Jincheol used.

「Those who have reached the early stages of the Narrative-grade acquire their own 'story interpretation method'.」

'Narrative' is both the status of a Constellation and the way Constellations view the world.

Every Constellation emits light based on the stories it has accumulated, and understands the world by projecting that light onto other stories.

That's why the 'birth story' is important to all Constellations.

This was the same for not only Constellations, but also for Transcendents. For example, those who have reached the third stage of the Transcendents could understand others' stories and even infer their hidden realm.

Jo Jincheol, who was in front of me now, also seemed to have manifested the same power as he entered the early stages of Narrative-grade.

I had a conversation with Han Sooyoung about this once.

「"You mean the hood won't work from the early stages of the Narrative-grade?"」

「"They have excellent story detection."」

「"Then how can I hide my identity in front of the Narrative-grade?"」

Han Sooyoung smiled and answered my question.

「"Don't do anything."」

「"Yes?"」

「"Now the average Constellation won't be able to guess your realm?"」

Jo Jincheol's expression was changing in real time before my eyes.

"This is?"

"Jo Daehyeop. Do you see something?"

"Hmm."

「"Why?"」

「"I don't know if you don't realize it or if you want to show off. Think about the stories you've built up so far."」

I thought about the stories I had 'built' myself.

Recorder of Things that Will Disappear (사라질 것들의 기록자).

The One Who Rewrote Fate (운명을 다시 쓰는 자).

Heir of the Eternal Name (영원한 이름의 계승자).

The Line Between Truth and Lies (진실과 거짓의 행간).

Up until this point, three were legendary, and one was mythical.

And on top of that, there was the 'Giant Tale' that had no name yet.

「"Huh?"」

「"Do you understand now?"」

I have built more than five 'stories' so far.

And the <Star Stream> describes the existence that has built five stories as follows.

Constellation.

Originally, I should have already achieved the status of a Constellation.

But the <Star Stream> and the Management Bureau did not give me the modifier of a Constellation.

Why on earth?

「"It must be because of the 'rank' of the stories you have built."」

Come to think of it, even 'Kim Dokja' did not build stories of this level when he became a Constellation.

King of a Kingless World (왕이 없는 세계의 왕).

One Who Fights Against Fate (이적에 맞서는 자).

One Who Hunted the King of Disasters (재앙의 왕을 사냥한 자).

One Who Killed an Outer God (이계의 신격을 살해한 자).

Demon King of Salvation (구원의 마왕).

Four Legendary-level stories and one Semi-Myth-grade stories.

「"That 'Kim Dokja' also received a 'Narrative-grade Constellation' as his first rank. But if you were to receive a rank, what would you become?"」

I couldn't answer.

「"The Management Bureau judged after seeing the stories you've accumulated. 'That can't possibly be possible. That kind of being is definitely an 'error.'"」

An 'error' that is not given a rank.

「"The Constellations just use a handful of light to read whatever they want to read."」

Han Sooyoung's smiling expression slowly overlapped with Jo Jincheol's in front of her.

The Narrative-grade Constellation was looking at me through Jo Jincheol's swirling eyes.

「"I'm curious too. In those guys' eyes, what will you 'look like' now?"」

Jo Jincheol's lips opened.

Note [1]: Daehyeop 대협 = 'Grand Master Martial Artist', as opposed to Young Hero/Sohyeop 소협 which means Young Expert Martial Artist.

904 Episode 50 The World After The End (7)

"Demon King?"

The judge's expression was expressed by Jo Jincheol's one word.

"Jo Daehyeop! What do you mean, Demon King?"

"With your tongue... you fooled people?"

"Tongue, with his tongue? Is there a Demon King related to the tongue?"

As the incarnations in the audience began to get curious one by one, Jo Jincheol's mouth continued to move.

"...A new world requires new laws."

Huh?

"I'll knock you all out of that damn sky!"

Huh?

"... I have my own life?"

Wait a minute. Is this kid reading the original story?

"What the hell are you talking about, Jo Daehyeop. What kind of being is this newbie?"

Jo Jincheol answered in a deep breath.

"Amazing. I think I only have a few stories of Historical-grade, but if there is a person who has this kind of story, then he might be the talent our ancestors were looking for."

"If it's our ancestors..."

"The great master of <Black Cloud>!"

"Whoa!"

Looking at the examiner who fell over in surprise, I briefly wondered if this might be some kind of surprise newcomer party.

"On the planet I lived on, there were guys with a trait called 'middle school syndrome'. A devilish talent that pushed their delusions to the limit and eventually made them a reality..."

As I listened to the story, I vaguely thought I knew what Jo Jincheol had seen in me.

「"Most Constellations that see you will probably experience cognitive dissonance. It will be hard to accept that someone who is neither a Constellation nor a Transcendental Constellation has such a strangely great status.」

If they acknowledge you, the Constellations will have to accept that an incarnation that is nothing is stronger than them.

So ordinary Constellations will not be able to face your existence and will only read fragments of distorted stories."」

Is that why she was curious about what other Constellations would see in me?

I was about to tell them that it was a complete misunderstanding, but Jo Jincheol, whose eyes had changed, shouted at me excitedly.

"Come to our <Black Cloud Foundation>. With your talent, I can contact the foundation's main server right now and help you download [Black Flame Sky Dance]."

Black Flame Sky Dance. It's a martial art that I don't want to learn just by hearing its name.

But the others seemed to have different thoughts.

"The <Black Cloud Foundation> made the first offer to recruit him?"

"Black Flame Sky! Oh my goodness. Isn't that the unique martial arts of the <Black Cloud Foundation> Executives?"

"He's a really enviable new recruit."

The situation was taking a strange turn.

The examiner lightly tapped my shoulder and said.

"You're really lucky. Judging from your expression, I don't think you understand what's going on yet, but this is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity."

"..."

"Black Cloud Foundation is one of the 'big corporations in the New Murim District. If you can ascend through that company, your future will be..."

I was about to say that it didn't seem like a very positive future, but then I heard the people around me talking.

"Damn, another parachute has appeared. You damned Constellation-spooners."

"I'm jealous, though."

The expressions were filled with envy and jealousy.

Listening to the rumbling voices, my mood became complicated for no reason. Perhaps the possibility of incarnation is mostly determined by the first scenario, 'Proof of Value'.

The incarnations who survived until now without receiving proper sponsor selection still have to endure life waiting for the selection of the higher Constellations.

"Damn it. If only I could go to a large company..."

In the main story, Kim Dokja became a Constellation on his own without sponsor selection, but not everyone can take that path.

I was worried about my colleagues again. Even if it was true that Dansu ahjussi and Ji Eunyu-ssi were selected by Narrative-grade Constellations, what would have happened to the other colleagues who did not choose at the sponsor selection?

The examiner patted my shoulder again and said.

"...So, if you enter the <Black Cloud Foundation> and polish your stories for about ten years, you can become an ascendant like Jo Daehyeop and become a dragon who assists the great Black Cloud Master. Do you know what kind of being the Black Cloud Master is?"

"I've heard of it."

"That's right. Haha, you can't help but know. He's closer to the 'Final Dragon of the Apocalypse' than any other existing dragon!"

In short, if you join there and suffer for ten years, you can become the Black Flame Dragon's footstool.

This human, if he knew that I was chosen by the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' in the first scenario's sponsor selection, he'd probably faint.

I was about to express my intention to refuse without hesitation, but unfortunately someone interrupted me.

"Why are you having such a pleasant conversation without me?"

It was Paradise Emperor Reinheit.

Jo Jincheol, sensing something strange, quickly blocked his way and warned him.

"Paradise Emperor, it's not your place to interfere. Our <Black Cloud Foundation> has already decided to recruit this cute guy."

"I don't think you've heard that incarnation's opinion yet?"

"There's no need to listen! What kind of incarnation would dare to refuse to be recruited by the Foundation!"

"It seems you've already forgotten about the Mad Sword Emperor incident."

Jo Jincheol's expression hardened.

"Mad Sword Emperor! Why are you bringing up that crazy woman?"

"Even back then, didn't Jo Daehyeop misread the story and recklessly try to recruit her, and the Foundation branch was almost destroyed?"

"You!"

"Please give me a chance too. Maybe he's a better fit for <Olympus Technology> than <Black Cloud Foundation>?"

Reinheit ignored the indignant Jo Jincheol and turned his ominous eyes toward me.

"Hmm..."

The guy unleashed the power of the Constellation and began to read my stories. It was the exact method Jo Jincheol had used.

I wondered what kind of strange things I would hear this time.

"It's amazing. Even that 'Flame Demon Emperor Star' wouldn't have been able to build such a noble story in a scenario of the same level…"

The examiner was surprised by Reinheit's words and asked again.

"Have you ever seen Flame Demon Emperor Star?"

"I've seen them once from afar. They're as beautiful as the rumors say. I couldn't get close because of the tale of the Monkey King…"

The Monkey King?

It sounds like a story about someone I know.

"Anyway, it's been a long time since I've seen an incarnation come up here with such a clear soul."

At that moment, Reinheit's [Echo] came into my ear.

—Excuse me, which great Demon King's household are you?

Hmm?

"He's the one who saved countless souls and built up good stories."

When I glared at him, he continued [Echo] with a deep smile.

—Although I can't read your essence, I can strongly sense the tale of 'hypocrisy' from you. Hoho, how many beings have you deceived?

Look at this kid?

"Unless you've received the grace of an Archangel, it would be difficult to build such a good story…"

—With this level of sorcery, you must have deceived countless Constellations to get here. Above all, your narrow eyes that even this power cannot see through…

The attendees of the ascension ceremony stirred once again.

"The grace of an Archangel? Is he from <Eden>?"

"But <Eden> wouldn't have opened a branch in the 'New Murim District'—"

"You can only have an incarnation that has received grace. Either way, it's a great thing."

Before long, the whole place was filled with stories about me.

Taking advantage of the atmosphere, Reinheit made a suggestion.

"Come to our <Olympus Technology>."

—I don't know why you left the Demon World and came here… but if a high-ranking Demon King's agent came here, it means there must be some unavoidable circumstance. <Olympus> can protect you. Even if you are being chased by <Eden>.

It seemed like he had a huge misunderstanding about me.

He must have judged me to be a high-ranking Demon King who was expelled from the Demon World or something similar…

Thinking about it carefully, it was unfair that I couldn’t say it was a misunderstanding.

In the meantime, Jo Jincheol intervened again.

"What nonsense are you talking about, Reinheit! You said you only followed the goddess of beauty around, but now your eyes have become distorted. Archangel? A good story? Where can you read stories like that from this guy! This guy is a talent of the 'Black Cloud Foundation'! Hey, ignore that nonsense! I'll write a letter of recommendation myself!"

"A-a letter of recommendation from an Ascendant!"

I don't know much about letters of recommendation, but it seems to be a great privilege here.

The examiner nodded happily as if he had read my expression and explained.

"You're still a newbie, so you don't know much, but if you get a letter of recommendation and join, you should be able to become eligible for Ascension in at least 5 years depending on your efforts. Even if you learn [Black Flame Spring]…!"

In short, it was a story that the time it would take to become the Black Flame Dragon's footstool would be shortened from 10 years to 5 years.

What an incredible benefit.

I was about to readily express my intention to decline, but this time Reinheit intervened.

"If you join our <Olympus Technology>, we will put you on the Ascension Platform within 3 years."

"3 years! Oh my god!"

I smiled bitterly.

I don't know for sure, but there must be a heated debate going on inside the [Fourth Wall] about 'Becoming an Olympus Slave vs. Becoming a Black Flame Dragon Footstool' right now.

"It doesn't end here. If you become an Ascendant, I will personally recommend you as the incarnation of the Twelve Gods of <Olympus>."

The room was filled with shock. Olympus's Twelve Seats.

If I didn't know much about <Olympus>, it would have been a tempting suggestion.

"Oh my! Is the Paradise Emperor sincere?"

"If it's the Paradise Emperor, then it's possible. I heard that the Paradise Emperor was also selected as an incarnation candidate for one of the Twelve Seats this time."

This time, I was a little surprised.

That Reinheit is the incarnation of one of the Twelve Seats?

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', activates!]

I instinctively felt wary.

If Reinheit was a terminal incarnation directly connected to the <Olympus> Twelve Seats, then this situation was dangerous.

<Olympus> had clashed with me several times in the 'Recycling Center' and the 'Fear Realm'. Even if it had been quite some time, if it was a Twelve Seats-level, they might recognize my identity.

At that moment, the sky above the Ascension Platform was rippling ominously. Intermittent sparks began to flow around Reinheit's brainwashing window.

I quickly turned my hood over and asked.

"Excuse me, but I have a different company I would like to join."

The examiner, startled by my words, asked.

"Huh? What do you mean?"

I looked around the room. The incarnations gathered here were each wearing uniforms with different company symbols or names on them. However, no matter how much I searched, I couldn't find the company name I was looking for.

"You're crazy. You're looking for another company when you have the ascendants of <Black Cloud Foundation> and <Olympus Technology> right in front of you?"

"Are you a kid who still can't see?"

If I was going to be the Black Flame Dragon's footstool or the terminal incarnation of <Olympus> in the first place, I wouldn't have gone through all that trouble and come this far.

While everyone else was making expressions of bewilderment, only Reinheit was looking at me with profound eyes.

"Interesting. You rejected <Black Cloud Foundation> and <Olympus Technology> and chose the 'third option'? Somehow, a famous anecdote comes to mind."

"Heh heh. Keuhahahaha!"

Jo Jincheol burst into laughter as well. I wondered what was so funny about my answer. Then, Jo Jincheol stopped laughing for a moment and looked at me.

"You, do you think you can be a 'Kim Dokja'?"

---

Kim Dokja.

I stopped for a moment at that unexpected name.

Why did that name come out of Jo Jincheol's mouth? Did the name 'Kim Dokja' become famous without me knowing?

Looking back, the identity of the 'Kim Dokja fragments' was revealed even among the general incarnations, so it wasn't strange that the name itself became known.

This is what's really strange.

「How do the ascended ones know that 'Kim Dokja chooses the third option'?」

Of course, I've made similar choices a few times, but I don't think my story would have been known to people like that.

Then how do the two beings in front of me know that story?

No way...

"Haha, stop joking, Jo Daehyeop."

"Ah, that must have been too big of a 'name' for a newbie."

My heart sank.

Could it be that there was another being who impersonated 'Kim Dokja' while I was away?

"You never know. 'That' also suddenly appeared in the middle of the scenario, so this newbie might end up writing the same legend. In that sense…"

Reinheit, who was smiling brightly, added while pointing his finger into the distance.

"Kim Dokja's 'third option' is coming over there."

The third option.

The moment I turned around, Reinheit said.

"However, prospective Kim Dokja, I'm giving you some advice in advance. Your 'third option' will be the 'worst option' in this city at least."

I felt the air around the area change along with the eerie feeling. I could feel a strange master approaching from behind. The two ascenders in front of me were strong enough, but the being approaching me now was stronger than all of them combined. Even without any intention of hiding their momentum, the incarnations of the group complained of difficulty breathing as they approached.

Jo Jincheol frowned and pointed.

"I-I...!"

My instincts were warning me. It wasn't simply because the presence behind me was 'strong'.

Some kind of unpleasant sensation was spreading through my entire body.

Wait, could this story be...?

"Hahahaha! I finally found it!"

A voice that felt familiar madness.

The judge said. There were three ascenders today.

One was Jo Jincheol of <Black Cloud Foundation>, and the other was Reinheit of <Olympus Technology>.

And now, behind me, the third 'Ascendant' was standing.

"Supreme King! You're here!"

A cold hand wrapped around my shoulder.

I slowly turned around and saw the large <Tamra Heavy Industries> symbol drawn in front of him.

"I didn't expect to meet you here...! Huh? What is this?"

The eyes of the Ascendant who saw my face widened.

This is difficult. Who would have thought I would meet this guy here?

A beautiful face with a more neutral face than Reinheit. A legendary madman from <Star Stream> who only follows 'Yoo Joonghyuk' around all day long.

"What? Who are you...?"

The leader of the Salvation Church, Nirvana Mobius.

I lightly shook his hand off.

"I thought you passed away in Washington East, but you're still alive."

"Huh, do you think I'd die in a place like that?"

Well, Nirvana had an emergency escape device, the stigma [No Possession].

"No, but how do you know that I left? Were you the guy who was there?"

It seemed like Nirvana didn't remember my face. I started to be active in the Washington Dome after Nirvana collapsed.

"You, that squint... Are you 'that guy'? No, no, there’s no way he could have survived this Round? But this story…"

Nirvana’s eyes narrowed for a moment.

Maybe he read the tale of 'Cheon Inho'?

But if Anna Croft’s words were true, Nirvana had never met 'Cheon Inho' in the previous Round.

Nirvana’s eyes, which had been shining anxiously, quickly changed.

"Well, that’s okay. It doesn't matter who you are."

Nirvana, who was laughing, grabbed my shoulder once again.

"What matters is the 'story' you have."

Story?

I hurriedly looked back at the story fragment shining on my shoulder.

And only then did I understand what Nirvana was so excited about.

[Story fragment 'Mad Soldier Yoo Joonghyuk' expresses his hatred towards the Reincarnater!]

Damn, I had this story fragment.

Nirvana, smiling brightly, shouted.

"Become one with this body!"

A spinning mandala appeared behind Nirvana.

"Kuaaaaak! The Ascendant has gone mad!"

"Everyone, get out of here!"

The incarnations who sensed the omen of the attack began to run away in terror.

"Oh, you're going to do something after all."

When Reinheit sighed as if he had expected this, the examiner shouted urgently.

"Start the Ascension Ceremony quickly! At this rate, that newbie will be eaten!"

"Ah, the heavens haven't opened yet. If the Orbital Elevator is to come down—"

It seems like it will take some time until the Ascension Ceremony.

That means I will have to see blood here in the end.

I nervously pulled up the stories all over my body, but unexpectedly, there was a strong ally blocking my way.

"Stop, Salvation Leader. I chose this newbie first."

Jo Jincheol, Blood Jade Sword Demon.

"Haven't you already become 'one' with enough incarnations? I can't even hand over this 'irregular' examinee to you."

And then Paradise Emperor Reinheit blocked me as if protecting me.

Honestly, I was touched.

I never thought I'd see three villains brawling over me.

[An unnamed 'Recorder of Fear' shows interest.]

[A small number of 'Recorders of Fear' show interest in the case.]

An indirect message from the 'Recorders of Fear' heard from the air.

Is it because I too am qualified to be a 'Recorder of Fear' that I can hear it so clearly?

Then can I say something like that? What kind of abilities can a 'Recorder of Fear' use?

"You're going to stop me? Who?"

The moment Nirvana smiled, the incarnations who had participated in the Ascension Ceremony collapsed, bleeding.

"You?"

Stories bloomed from his entire body.

Amazing.

I was amazed by the pure stories that Nirvana had built up.

That was truly pure 'level', comparable to the 'Narrative-grade Constellations'.

Early Narrative-grade... maybe closer to the middle stage.

Considering that he hadn't even properly brought up the sponsor synchronization, Nirvana's potential was truly amazing.

At this point, it would be strange that Cheon Inho didn't bring him in as a colleague in the 40th Round.

[The sponsor of incarnation 'Nirvana Moebius' is staring at you.]

I shivered softly at the gaze I felt from a distant place.

The sponsor of Nirvana Moebius would naturally be 'that being'.

The owner of the 'Island of Reincarnations', the being who took on the role of the third protagonist in the main story.

"Ugh, you damn cult leader!"

He must have decided that he couldn't lose his momentum like this.

Jo Jincheol and Reinheit also began to raise their own status.

Kooooo!

First, bloody gauntlets appeared on Jo Jincheol's hands. Gauntlets that felt like the naturalization of a dark curse.

I thought I knew what those gauntlets were.

「A sacred relic of the Demonic Cult that was created by slaughtering tens of thousands of incarnations and gathering the essence of their stories. Blood Jade Fist.」

One of the ten sacred relics of the <0th Murim>.

It seemed that Jo Jincheol had become the current owner of the Blood Jade Fist.

"Even if it were you, do you think you could handle the two of us at once?"

Reinheit also brought forward his own thunder spear.

"In the name of the Nebula <Olympus>, I will not tolerate your outrage."

In the name of the Nebula.

It meant that he would stake his reputation on the Nebula and share its fate.

No matter how much it was Nirvana, he would not want to turn his back on them. If things had been normal, this would have been the end of the situation.

However.

"The name of Olympus?"

Nirvana was not a normal person.

"The sky of the Ascension Platform has not even opened yet, do you think such boasting would work?"

Nirvana pointed to the sky of the Ascension Platform with a smug look and said.

"The Constellations of <Olympus> that you mentioned are probably busy worrying about the 'Giant Tale Scenario' that is happening in the upper regions. Do you think they would be concerned about the 70th scenario in the meantime?"

"You are right. But at least borrowing the power of one of the Twelve Gods—"

"Are you trying to compete with me and the power of my sponsor right now?"

The Sponsor of the Salvation Church leader Nirvana is the 'Guardian of Mandala'.

Although he is a being with several names like 'Jecheon Daeseong', his original status was almost as high as the 'Myth-grade Constellations'.

However, Reinheit did not back down.

"You are the same as me who cannot properly use the power of your sponsor."

"What?"

"Is there anyone who doesn't know that you are the son of Buddha?"

"A son who was given away. Well, I guess I'll have to show you what it's like to be a prodigal son."

"Reinheit! Avoid!"

But before the two could react, Nirvana's body moved.

「Way of the Wind.」

As expected of Nirvana, who had been reincarnated as the Wolf of Immyutar, the wind that had reached the extreme realm was lingering on the tip of the guy's feet.

In an instant, the moment Nirvana's left hand, which had taken over Reinheit's back, moved, Jo Jincheol swung his fist.

"This damned bastard—!"

The Blood Jade Fist and Mandala clashed, causing a tremendous storm to blow across the area.

Jo Jincheol and Reinheit also began to draw out a huge amount of stories from behind, as if they hadn't come this far just for show.

"No matter how strong you are, fighting the two of us in close combat—"

But before the two stories could properly begin their conversation, there was a giant palm flying through the air.

Bam

The arm of [Thousand-Armed Avalokitesvara] that had leapt out of the air grabbed Jo Jincheol and Reinheit by the necks.

Nirvana grinned and said.

"When did I say I would fight with the likes of you?"

[Incarnation 'Nirvana Mobius' activates '108 Torments Lv.???'!]

Nirvana's specialty, [108 Torments].

"Ku-kuaaaaaa!"

Bloody tears began to pour from Jo Jincheol's eyes. The highest-level mental skill, [108 Torments], had caused incredible confusion in his cognitive system.

Reinheit was also muttering the same words over and over again with empty pupils.

"Stories, my stories..."

The power to neutralize two incarnations that had reached the Narrative-grade in one breath.

Indeed, when he fought Yoo Joonghyuk before, he was at a disadvantage in terms of synergy and lost, but this was the real power of Nirvana.

"Kuhahahahaha! With such a foolish mentality, did you discuss the name of my sponsor in front of this body?"

Nirvana kicked the two Ascenders who were rolling around without coming to their senses.

"Die! Die! You guys!"

Despite the miserable appearance of the Ascenders rolling around helplessly, bleeding, no one stopped him. To be exact, they couldn't even approach him because of the difference in class.

This was the class of a being who had reached 'Narrative-grade' with the body of an incarnation.

I was the only one who was blankly staring at Nirvana.

"Oh, you still haven't run away?"

Nirvana, who seemed to have finished venting his anger, was looking at me, panting.

"So that means you want to become one with me too, right?"

I smiled as I watched Nirvana slowly approaching.

"Yes, I want to become one."

Nirvana looked a little flustered at my words.

"I-Is that so?"

"Yes."

"Ahahaha! Good! Then accept it!"

At the same time, Nirvana spread both arms wide.

[Incarnation 'Nirvana Moebius' activates 'Thought Infection Lv.???'!]

Is this the [Thought Infection] I've only heard of?

A technique that makes the infected target lose their will, settle all their desires in the 'present', and force them to become a Salvationist who follows him.

I could feel the unpleasant thoughts the guy had eating away at my mind.

"Huh? What is it?"

And after a while, Nirvana's expression changed.

"Um, why are you doing that?"

"You, why..."

I smiled, pretending to be indifferent. Of course, since I have the [Fourth Wall], mental attacks like [Thought Infection] won't work on me. Even so, he won't be able to tell that I defended his mental attack with the [Fourth Wall].

Because...

[Exclusive skill, Incite Lv.???' is activating!]

I've already [Incited] myself.

「I'm already infected with 'Thought Infection'.」

I felt [Thought Infection] being recovered with a light spark before my eyes.

I blinked in ecstasy and muttered.

"This is the feeling of becoming one with a great being…"

"What?"

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???' is strengthening!]

"I can feel it. Your noble soul. Your path of building a bond with him in the great wheel of eternity, in order to become one with only one being…!"

"Uh, how could you—"

My [Incite] rarely works on high-ranking targets. Especially if they are powerful beings like Nirvana.

However, if the content is not that great, [Incite] is effective enough.

"I meet the 'Salvation Church Leader', who follows the shadow of the great dream."

Especially if they have a twisted mental system like Nirvana.

Nirvana, who was confused for a moment, nodded as if he finally understood the situation.

"Oh, I see. You were already infected? Now that I think about it, your eyes… are definitely like that! You were already seeing the present!"

[The persuasive power of the exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', increases dramatically!]

I don't know what or how he saw my eyes, but I pretended to spread my arms and shouted.

"Church Leader! The Supreme King is waiting for you!"

"Where! Where is Yoo Joonghyuk!"

"I don't know that either! Would you like to find out together now?"

"Good!"

Looking at Nirvana, who was so happy, I thought of Han Sooyoung's words.

「"This is the best way to keep your 'strength' hidden without being noticed by the Constellations."」

It's to hide in the shadows of other strong beings and act.

[The sponsor of incarnation 'Nirvana Möbius' reveals its own modifier.]

[The Constellation, 'Guardian of the Mandala', looks at you with absurd eyes.]

Since it's come to this, why not ride the Reincarnator's bus this time?

906 Episode 50 The World After The End (9)

「(What? Was he always this crazy?)」

In the library where a gentle darkness had descended, the Demon King of Salvation frowned as he read the Youngest's story floating above the newspaper.

「Since it's come to this, should we ride the Reincarnator's bus this time?」

The debate between the kkoma Kim Dokjas who read the sentence together could be heard.

—If you want to find Yoo Joonghyuk, you should follow Nirvana.

—But can you trust Nirvana as a comrade?

—Isn't this all because of the Demon King of Salvation?

「(Shut up, you guys.)」

Among them, there was the 'King of Fear' who was mumbling something softly with a slightly sad expression on his face.

The Demon King of Salvation said with narrowed eyes.

「(Hey, do you think I won't hear you if you speak so softly?)」

The King of Fear turned his head subtly, looked at the Demon King of Salvation, and slightly moved his lips. The Demon King of Salvation's eyebrows furrowed.

「(The Youngest is like that because of my influence?)」

The King of Fear nodded.

「(Stop talking nonsense. No matter how much I am, I don't get along with a crazy guy like Nirvana. Rather, it must be your influence. The Youngest was originally a bit strange, but he never did anything like that before you came.)」

Instead of refuting that, the King of Fear waved his finger in the air. A sentence rose from the tip of his finger like smoke.

—That city is strange. I can sense an ominous imagination throughout the city.

「(I know. That's why you've been searching the library since a while ago. Hey, did you find the records you need?)」

At the Demon King of Salvation's urging, the Outer Gods scattered throughout the library suddenly stood up and started moving busily.

「(Anyway, these kids, if you don't look at them for a moment…)」

The Demon King of Salvation looked at the Youngest's records again, thinking that Yoo Sangah, who worked in a place like this, was amazing.

'New Murim District.'

In 'Ways of Survival', there were similar rebuilt cities that were born right after the destruction of Murim.

In particular, after Yoo Joonghyuk's 1,500th Round, a unique group called a 'Company' intervened in the Murim that had been eroded by capital and developed the city.

However, no matter how he looked at it, the overall system of this city was a little different from the 'Ways of Survival' that he knew.

In particular, the 'Ascension Ceremony' was strange.

「The Constellations that had already ascended to the upper scenarios would not have left behind such a 'friendly' ladder.」

If you think about it simply, it is possible that the 'Giant Nebulae' left this scenario area as a bridgehead to strengthen their power.

Tamra Heavy Industries.

Olympus Technology.

Black Cloud Foundation.

Vedas Biotech...

It seemed like they were giving the incarnations who had not chosen the proper 'Nebulae' one last chance.

But is that really all?

They think of the incarnations as consumable terminals, and they can be sacrificed for the 'Descent of the Demi-God' at any time. Were the Constellations of the Giant Nebulae that could be used simply leaving ladders for the purpose of 'recruiting new incarnations'?

「(Huh? Did you find it?)」

A kkoma Kim Dokja brought a collection of data. Ancient books that contained information from 1,500th Round.

The Demon King of Salvation quickly checked the data. Some of them were already read in 'Ways of Survival', and some looked like a pile of unused settings.

And how much time had passed?

The page the Demon King of Salvation was looking for came to mind.

「Great Fate.」

The Demon King of Salvation's expression hardened for a moment and opened his mouth.

「(Second, call the Youngest.)」

The face of the Demon King of Salvation, who had turned slightly pale, was reflected on the retina of the King of Fear who raised his head.

「(We have to escape from that city right now.)」

---

While the commotion of the Ascension Ceremony had died down, I sat next to Nirvana and had a short conversation.

"So, after the leader collapsed at that time, that guy…"

It seemed that Nirvana had never met Yoo Joonghyuk since he saw him at the Washington Dome.

"The tyrant turned into a pig?"

Nirvana's eyes would flutter open whenever I said something.

"Yes, well. Strictly speaking, he didn't really turn into a pig. Because of the scenario..."

"Interesting! The tyrant turned into a pig! What kind of pig was it? Was it a cute flower pig? Or a plump, muscular pig?"

"It was a pig that ate dirt."

"Dirt, dirt? That guy?"

"Yes, strictly speaking, he didn't really eat dirt, but he ate stories..."

Nirvana let out a hearty laugh and exclaimed, panting.

"I'm looking forward to it! I'm really looking forward to it! This time, the tyrant is a tyrant I have never met before!"

"What a pity. If only the Church Leader had been with me back then... If only I hadn't met the remnants of the Giant Nebula back then."

"Don't worry! From now on, I'm here! I'll take care of those Constellation bastards who harassed you and Yoo Joonghyuk as many times as I can!"

It felt like I suddenly had a strong ally.

Nirvana was thinking about something, and then suddenly hardened his expression and asked.

"But how do you know so much about Yoo Joonghyuk?"

"That's..."

"Why do you feel closer to Yoo Joonghyuk than I do?"

A murderous spirit blooming coldly.

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', is activated!]

I smiled and answered without being flustered at all.

"I'm honored that you felt that way."

"What?"

"Have you forgotten? The Church Leader and I are one and the same. If I'm close to Yoo Joonghyuk, then the Church Leader is also close to Yoo Joonghyuk."

Nirvana twitched his lips with blank eyes, then muttered, avoiding eye contact.

"What do you know... to say something like that?"

"I'm sorry."

Nirvana looked a little lethargic, but he didn't look that angry.

It felt strange to see Nirvana like that.

Come to think of it, Nirvana always chased Yoo Joonghyuk in the main story. But while he was chasing him, did he ever have a single conversation like this with anyone?

[Character, 'Nirvana Möbius', is kind to you!]

What kind of person is Yoo Joonghyuk, what does he like, what was he like in the last Round, and what did he do in this Round?

No one would have talked to him.

Nirvana, who always says, "Let's become one."

Perhaps Nirvana's expression was an appeal to find someone to share 'this kind of story' with.

"This Round, only strange guys are getting involved. That guy Mad Sword Emperor is one of them…"

"Mad Sword Emperor?"

Instead of answering, Nirvana stared straight ahead. On the other side, he saw Reinheit and Jo Jincheol waking up from their fainting state.

The incarnations of <Olympus Technology> and <Black Cloud Foundation> that joined in afterward were approaching us.

"How dare you point a sword at a fellow Ascendant? We will definitely hold you responsible for this!"

"We at <Olympus Technology> will remember the taboo that <Tamra Heavy Industries> broke!"

Nirvana, with a cold smile on his face, slowly stood up from his seat.

"Hold it? The likes of you? The head of the Church?"

The incarnations flinched at the murderous intent emanating from Nirvana's body and stepped back.

"Nirvana! You may be the strongest here, but do you think you'll be the same in the higher scenarios?"

"If only the Elder White Night Sword and the Elder Iron Fist, who ascended last time, were still here…"

White Night Sword and Iron Fist. They were characters whose nicknames I had vaguely heard in 'Ways of Survival'.

They were Transcendent beings who had reached the realm of transcendence, but they were strong men who had thrown themselves into the Giant Nebula like the 'Master of Spears'.

"White Night Sword? Iron Fist? How funny. Do you think the main deity would be afraid of such a bunch of rascals who couldn't even match the footsteps of the Mad Sword Emperor who ascended with them?"

Mad Sword Emperor. At that nickname that I heard so often, I quietly turned to the examiner next to me and asked.

"Who on earth is the Mad Sword Emperor?"

As expected, the examiner who liked explanations began to explain with a brighter complexion.

"He's the incarnation that suddenly appeared a few months ago. He appeared in the scenario with Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, and made a fuss in the 'New Murim District' for a while."

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint?

If I remember correctly, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint and the other Transcendents escaped the Fear Realm by riding Surya's train.

So did Breaking the Sky Sword Saint visit this scenario area with Mad Sword Emperor right after getting off the train?

"He was a great strongman who had finally appeared, so much so that even Executives from large corporations couldn't match him."

Nirvana frowned as if he had overheard the conversation.

"Huh, if he had met me, it would have been a different story."

"Haha, if he had met Nirvana, it would have been a great match. Now that I think about it, I heard you were looking for Mad Sword Emperor..."

Nirvana was chasing Mad Sword Emperor?

"The Ascension Ceremony is about to begin! Everyone, prepare for [Opening]! Ascendants, please come up to the Ascension Platform!"

A shout followed. But instead of going up to the ascension platform, Nirvana pointed to Jo Jincheol and Reinheit, who were still lying on the floor, and said,

"When the Orbital Elevator comes down, take those guys first. I still have work to do here."

The examiner, surprised, asked,

"Are you saying that you're going to postpone the ascension?"

"Yes. I have work to do with this guy."

Nirvana nodded, patting my shoulder.

Honestly, it was an unexpected turn of events. I had joked that I would take the Reincarnator's bus, but I didn't know that Nirvana would even postpone the ascension.

"Church Leader, isn't 'ascension' a very important thing?"

"Even if that's important, is it as important as becoming 'one'?"

So becoming 'one'...

"I want to hear more about Yoo Joonghyuk."

Thank goodness. That's what he meant.

That's when the incarnations came running as if to stop Nirvana.

"Lord Nirvana! What on earth are you talking about?"

They were incarnations with the symbol of <Tamra Heavy Industries> engraved on them like Nirvana.

"Don't you know how important the ascension is?"

"If you do this all of a sudden, we'll be in trouble too."

Perhaps because they belong to the same <Tamra Heavy Industries>, they seemed to be less afraid of Nirvana than the other corporate incarnations.

"Lord Nirvana, if you act so unilaterally like this, even the Chairman will be in trouble."

For the first time, Nirvana let out a short sigh at the mention of the Chairman.

"Okay. Then I'll participate in the ascension. Instead, I'll take this guy with me."

"What does that mean?"

"It means we'll ascend together."

Countless incarnations suddenly turned their gazes toward me, who appeared to ascend together with Nirvana.

"That's against the rules! And that newbie isn't even affiliated with <Tamra Heavy Industries>!"

"How can you mention ascending together with a guy whose rank hasn't been confirmed?"

Nirvana said with a hardened expression.

"This guy is my 'believer'. My believer is like one body with me! There is absolutely no problem with ascending together!"

"I understand what you are saying, but strictly speaking, it is not one body, right…"

The internal strife of <Tamra Heavy Industries> came to an end when a strong beam of light poured down from the sky.

"The Orbital Elevator is coming down!"

The Orbital Elevator.

At a glance, an elevator wrapped in splendid stories was coming down through a passage of light.

It seemed that the 'Ascendants' would take that elevator and leap to the upper scenario.

It was then that Nirvana spoke.

"Believer."

"Huh?"

"Don't look up."

The air in the area was changing rapidly.

People who had been looking up at the Orbital Elevator until then were seen lowering their heads in a hurry.

Even the arrogant Nirvana lowered his eyes as if he was angry.

A bad feeling spread through my entire body.

A distant and ominous story covering the sky. Something was looking down from beyond that sky.

I clenched my fists without realizing it.

[The Constellations of the Giant Nebula are here!]

The enemies I had to fight were now above my head.

The stars I had to drop to reach the end of this scenario.

A series of memories flowed and my blood began to boil. The story inside me was stirring.

"I told you not to look."

Nirvana had come up to me and was standing there with his hand on my shoulder.

As if protecting me, his story, filled with mandalas, was wrapping me up like a lotus.

And the next moment.

Kugugugugu!

A terrible thunderclap was heard from the sky above the Ascension Platform. Beyond the thunder ripping through the sky, the Constellations' angry voices could be heard.

"W-what…?"

The surprised people raised their heads.

"Is this how the Ascension Ceremony is supposed to be?"

When I asked, Nirvana shook his head.

"No, this is the first time this has happened."

"The Orbital Elevator is opening!"

The doors of the elevator that had fallen to the ground opened amidst blue sparks.

The inside of the elevator was revealed along with the blue-hot flames.

Whether there had been traces of a fierce battle or not, the inside of the elevator was filled with bloody shards. And.

"Uh, how…!"

There were already passengers in the elevator.

To be exact, they were passengers who had 'been in' the elevator.

"White Night Sword? Iron Fist?"

"These are the Ascendants from the last round!"

The heads of the White Night Sword and Iron Fist, which had been brutally cut off, were neatly placed on the floor of the elevator.

"Uh, how, how could this happen—!"

The astonished incarnations screamed here and there.

Beyond the horribly torn bodies of the Ascendants, there was a message from someone engraved with a sword mark on the wall of the elevator.

And only I.

「No one can escape this city.」

I could tell who the sword marks belonged to.

907 Episode 50 The World After The End (10)

---

The sword mark was identical to the sword mark I found at the examination table right after I entered the city.

A sword technique with a trajectory similar to [Breaking the Sky Sword Technique].

In other words, that message was left by someone who used that sword technique.

"Ascendant, Ascendant Murder! What on earth is going on...!"

The examiner sighed. There was a commotion everywhere.

"I heard a corporate notice has been issued!"

"The Ascension Ceremony has been canceled!"

"A new revelation has been issued from each Constellation!"

I looked at the message once more.

「No one can escape this city.」

I don't know if it was my imagination, but unlike the other incarnations, the message didn't feel that threatening to me. In fact, I felt a certain conviction in the trajectory carved into the wall.

For example...

"Are they trying to stop the incarnations from ascending to the upper scenario?"

Nirvana, who was looking up at the sky next to me, muttered in a voice full of joy.

"There's only one guy who would do something like this. The Mad Sword Emperor. That's him."

At the same time, a sound like something was being cut off in the high air was heard. The center of the Orbital Elevator that had been operating normally was cut off, and the probability of the sky collapsing.

"Orbit, Orbital Elevator!"

[The 'Orbital Elevator' has stopped functioning.]

[The 'Ascension Ceremony' is canceled.]

It seemed that someone had destroyed the center of the Orbital Elevator.

"Believer, wait here for a moment."

With those words, the body of Nirvana disappeared into the sky. He seemed to have chased after the culprit who destroyed the 'Orbital Elevator'.

That was the signal for the Executives of each company to move.

"It's the Mad Sword Emperor! That person is nearby!"

The Ascendants and incarnations scattered, and a new message floated through the room.

[There will be an announcement from each Constellation regarding this 'Ascension Ceremony'.]

[All corporate Executives and examiners in the room are requested to gather at the headquarters of their affiliated companies.]

Jo Jincheol and Reinheit, who had come to their senses, also moved. Even in the midst of this, the two of them did not forget to leave a short [transmission], perhaps because they felt sorry for me.

—See you next time, rookie.

—I made a fool of myself this time. However, my true abilities are in no way inferior to the Salvation Church. I expect your wise choice.

The examiner who brought me in also opened his mouth.

"I guess I'll have to postpone your application until the next opportunity. For now, here, take this with you."

What the examiner gave me was a temporary ID card made of hologram.

"If you have this, you'll have no problem living in the city. You're really unlucky. Why are you coming in as a new employee at this time of the year… Anyway, let’s meet again."

"Hey, wait a minute!"

It seemed like he was just going to say what he wanted to say and disappear, so I quickly grabbed the examiner.

Nirvana was also going as planned, and the attention was diverted by the murder of the Ascendant. Maybe this was the only time I could move around freely without being noticed.

"There’s a company I want to work for."

"Hmm? <Tamra Heavy Industries>?"

"No."

"You’re an interesting friend. Even after receiving such an offer from Nirvana, you’d choose another company? Well, I guess you came in as an 'irregular examinee' because you’re so talented."

When I smiled instead of answering, the examiner coughed and continued.

"The Master of Paradise’s <Olympus Technology> or the Blood Jade Fist Demon’s <Black Cloud Foundation> wouldn’t be bad choices either. If you succeed in getting hired, no matter how much of a savior he is, he won't be able to touch you."

The examiner seemed to believe that I was going to choose one of the ascended companies today.

"Not those companies."

"Then? Could it be <Vedas Biotech>? That's not a bad choice either—"

"■■■ Company, do you know about it?"

I don't know if I pronounced it correctly, but the examiner's expression changed strangely.

"What did you just say?"

"■■■ Company."

The examiner's face slowly turned pale.

I said the company name again.

"■■■ Company!"

"I-I did hear that, so stop saying that name!"

It was as if mentioning that name itself was ominous.

The examiner rolled his eyes around in case someone heard, then said in a small voice.

"I don't know how you know that company, but it's been in decline for a long time."

"Decline?"

"I'll contact you again soon. I don't know where you saw that company name, but stop having strange thoughts and just join a large company! That's good for you too!"

With those words, the examiner suddenly disappeared from the ascension platform.

Suddenly left alone, I looked at the identification card the examiner had given me and fell into thought.

If this is the case, then I have no choice but to find out various things on my own.

There were two tasks facing me now.

One, to find out the identity of the '■■■ Company' that exists in this city.

Two, to find out which scenario my 'colleagues' are in.

I thought the second question would be naturally solved in the process of solving the first question, so at first, I planned to hide behind Nirvana and gather information here and there.

From across the sky, the sound of thunder could be heard once again. It seemed that the Ascenders who had chased the 'Mad Sword Emperor' earlier were putting in effort.

Since it has come to this, why don't we look for that 'Mad Sword Emperor' person together?

If my guess is correct, that 'Mad Sword Emperor' person is...

"Benefactor."

There was still someone left in the Ascension Hall where I thought everyone had left. When I looked back, I saw a familiar face.

"Namgung Young Hero?"

It was Namgung Myung, the head of the Namgung Family that I had met at the entrance to the Fear Realm.

---

We had a short conversation while walking through the streets of the 'New Murim District'.

Namgung Myung seemed quite excited, perhaps because he was happy to see me again.

"If it's okay with you, I'd like to treat you to a simple meal. There's a restaurant I know nearby."

"Good."

However, we couldn't eat at the restaurant we visited.

"I'm sorry. I didn't know the prices had gone up this much..."

Namgung Myung said in a pitiful voice, scratching his head.

In fact, I was going to get off, but Namgung Myung strongly dissuaded me.

"No! If you go a little further in, there's a really cheap and delicious restaurant. I'll definitely treat you!"

"If that's the case..."

I entered the main alley of the 'New Murim District' with Namgung Myung.

Even from afar, the skyscrapers were dazzling.

Those buildings in the city center were probably the headquarters of 'companies'.

However, not everyone in the 'New Murim District' was living a luxurious life.

"Please give me a D-coin..."

As we entered the side street, I saw incarnations sitting all over the street. Incarnations without arms or legs. Incarnations who looked like they had been ruined by a broken danjeon were grabbing the trouser legs of people passing by.

A child reached out to me, so I hesitated for a moment and put my hand in my pocket.

This time, it was Namgung Myung who stopped me.

"Benefactor, you shouldn't do that."

"Huh?"

"Hey! Back off! This is a rascal!"

The child, startled by Namgung Myung's threat, limped and ran away in a hurry.

Namgung Myung said as if making excuses.

"Don't be fooled by appearances. There are no children here. That guy is a famous Nomadoo who has mastered the art of slaughter."

Actually, I knew that too.

Because the atmosphere I felt from his whole body wasn't that of a child.

I pretended not to know and nodded.

"Is that so?"

"Yes. You should never sympathize with those beggars. They are all former Gae-do. They enjoy provoking sympathy from newcomers who have just entered the city or luring them to their hideouts and attacking them. If Benefactor had entered this street alone, they would have definitely attacked him in a group."

Upon closer inspection, I saw that large and small violence was already taking place in the alleys.

Perhaps it was because the appearance of a child was advantageous for eliciting sympathy.

Among the beggars, there were many little kids without arms or legs, like the guy who had been hanging on to me earlier.

"Don't trust anyone. All of this city's infrastructure is built around 'D Coins', and the incarnations here will do anything to earn coins."

"That sounds like you're telling me not to trust Namgung Young Hero either."

"Yes. That's right. You shouldn't trust me either."

I couldn't tell if he was being sincere or not, but Namgung Myung's honesty didn't seem all that bad to me.

It felt like he would honestly answer any questions I asked him.

"You just mentioned 'D Coins', but what exactly is that?"

"D Coins are the currency of this city. They're special coins that can only be obtained through certain events or requests, and everyone in the city uses these coins. Since the story sensitivity is high, you can use this coin to raise the level of your story or skills, so it is very valuable in the city."

An item that can raise the level of story and skills?

There was no such fraudulent item in 'Ways of Survival'.

What on earth was the coin issued to make such a transfer possible?

"The 'D Coin' is what moves the companies. The company with the most 'D Coins' becomes the 'large company' that dominates this city."

In other words, this city is an ecosystem formed based on 'D Coins'.

Only then did I understand why the city's incarnations were abnormally strong.

Did they all use that 'D Coin' to raise their skills or story levels?

"Usually, new recruits get their D Coins stolen as soon as they enter the city, so I was very worried about the Benefactor. I can't tell you how surprised I was when I saw the Benefactor in the Ascension Hall. I never thought you would be chosen by the 'Savior'... "

"Ah, that's..."

"I heard that the Salvation Church lost all of its followers in the lower scenarios and is suffering from madness. It's the first time I've seen that madman show such a lively appearance."

I never thought Nirvana had such a secret.

It was embarrassing to admit it was a lie now, so I just laughed bitterly.

"Anyway, I'm really jealous. Since three large companies have shown interest in you, Benefactor, your ascension is pretty much a done deal."

"Ascension seems to be quite difficult, huh?"

"It's very difficult. Most people don't even get close to ascension. Especially people like me who came from small and medium-sized companies..."

Namgung Myung muttered with a dark expression.

Come to think of it, Namgung Myung must have joined a certain company too.

"Can I ask from which company Namgung Young Hero is?"

"Oh, I… "

The moment I said that, a series of messages came to my mind.

[The 'Recorders of Fear' in the area begin to communicate.]

It was a message from the Recorders of Fear.

[The 'Recorder of Fear' who did not reveal his existence says that it seems like an intruder has come in.]

An intruder?

[The 'Recorder of Fear' who supports <Olympus Technology> says that it would be better to get rid of him quickly.]

The guys continued to chatter, whether they knew I was listening to their messages or not.

[The 'Recorder of Fear' who writes <Vedas Biotech> says that he will disappear soon anyway, so you don't need to worry about him.]

Wait a minute, is that about me?

[Some of the 'Recorders of Fear' begin to record.]

It was a few seconds later that the messages from the Recorders became an incident.

"Benefactor."

Nangung Myung, who was nervous, stopped walking, and five men appeared blocking our path. The man in the lead was familiar.

Namgung Myung asked with a hardened expression.

"Hwang Minhyeok, what's going on?"

He was the incarnation of <Tamra Heavy Industry> that I had met at the entrance just before entering the city.

The man glared at me with a hostile gaze and said.

"Hand that guy over."

"This person is my Benefactor. Tell me what's going on first."

"I have no business to tell you."

Namgung Myung frowned at the faint murderous tone in his voice and asked.

"Are you trying to 'step on a newbie'?"

It wasn't hard to understand the situation.

Looking at it, all five incarnations, including that incarnation called Hwang Minhyeok, were from <Tamra Heavy Industry>. In particular, the two or three at the back were the ones who had strongly opposed me when I was chosen by Nirvana.

"Your Benefactor has already been chosen. Don't you know that if you mess with him now, you won't be able to avoid the wrath of the Salvation Church?"

"That guy is not yet a member of <Tamra Heavy Industries>."

The two incarnations standing behind Hwang Minhyeok growled and showed their momentum.

"'Double Ascension' is a power that requires a large amount of D-coins to be used once every few months! I don't know how they roasted and boiled Nirvana-nim, but do you think I would open my eyes and watch some idiot I've never seen before monopolize such an opportunity?"

As the five men showed their momentum, a sinister murderous aura spread throughout the area.

Maybe because my sense of aura had developed a lot, I could clearly see the opponent's level.

The four in front were 'Early Historical-grade'. And the one in the back was...

Kooo.

How interesting. 'Late Historical-grade'.

Even the guy's sponsor was a Constellation that I already knew well.

[The Constellation, 'Monarch of Small Fries', increases the level of harmony with his incarnation!]

I blinked blankly and came to my senses.

Wait a minute. The Monarch of Small Fries?

Isn't this a coin event?

It was already difficult because the currency used in the city was different, so I thought it was a good thing.

"Benefactor, run away."

"No, over there right now..."

"You'll die if you go."

"Coins..."

"Even if you hand over the coins, they won't spare the Benefactor!"

"If you hit them, they'll give you coins..."

"Don't worry. I won't be bought by coins just because I get hit a little."

"Then, the two of us together..."

"If I'm alone, I can somehow buy time!"

"Look here, Gungmyung-ssi."

"Even though they're a large company, if our Executives who have already ascended to the throne find out I'm stepping down like this, they won't forgive me. And my name isn't Gungmyung, it's Myung!"

His stubbornness almost rivals Kim Dokja's.

I smiled bitterly as I watched Namgung Myung stubbornly block my path. It was a sight that Breaking the Sky Sword Saint would really enjoy. Even though Murim has fallen, it seems that there is still a sense of compromise.

However, the moment I was about to say that I cannot forgive anyone who interferes with my coin event, I saw Namgung Myung's back stepping forward.

Had he changed into new clothes? On his back, the name of the company that had been covered in dirt and dust before was clearly written.

<■■■ Company>.

Damn, why doesn't he listen to people?

908 Episode 50 The World After The End (11)

"You guys are funny."

Five men, including Hwang Minhyeok, stood around us.

"Namgung Myung, I'll give you one last chance to run away."

Namgung Myung revealed his entire body without answering. He hadn't even reached the early stages of Historical-grade yet, which was natural, but this was the reality for the incarnations who had not joined a proper 'Nebula'.

The minimum requirement to become a Constellation was to accumulate 'five stories' on one's own.

If you were a Narrative-grade Constellation, even an incident where you choked on your meal would result in a legend of history, but for the incarnations who had not become Constellations, the 'historical legends' were nothing more than a coincidence.

"Hwang Minhyeok, if you were a martial artist, you should show at least a little bit of courtesy!"

Judging from Namgung Myung's status, he had accumulated three stories so far. It was a great feat that he had grown to that level on his own without the help of the 'Giant Nebula'.

"Agreement? Hahaha, if you keep that, you'll get a story?"

Hwang Minhyeok mocked and raised his status.

"You still haven't reached Historical-grade because you can't escape such anachronistic thoughts."

The men, including Hwang Minhyeok, had accumulated more than five 'historical stories'. However, the stories they had accumulated were not stories that they had 'purely accumulated on their own'.

「The Giant Nebula operates a 'Story Bus' for the incarnations of lower scenarios.」

They probably joined <Tamra Heavy Industries> and received help from the higher Constellations. They clung to their shadows, accumulated status, and received the leftover stories to become Constellations.

"Is it really necessary to send them away? It wouldn't be bad to kill them both."

The employee of the 'Late Historical-grade' who had read Namgung Myung's legend said. The other men's expressions also turned fierce at those words.

"Come to think of it, this guy was a survivor of 'contamination'."

"He's a guy who was tainted by Outer Gods' stories, so if we catch him and make him into a potion, wouldn't we get some D-coins?"

Namgung Myung shouted, his face turning pale.

"You guys, if you do something like that in the city—"

""I heard from Mo Yongshin that you deceived the supervisor and gave him false information about the 'waves'?"

"That's…!"

"The dead supervisor was from <Tamra Heavy Industries>. The audit team will soon issue an arrest warrant for you."

"…"

"You must know what happens to the incarnations captured by the audit team. It would be better for you to die here than to be dragged to the torture chamber."

Namgung Myung thought about something for a moment at the man’s words, then turned to me with a solemn expression and said.

"Benefactor, it looks like I’m done here."

"..."

"Even if you're the Benefactor, avoid me. I'll buy time somehow. Run towards the headquarters of <Tamra Heavy Industries>. Benefactor was chosen by the Salvation Church, so not everyone will be hostile to you. If you ask the headquarters for help, there will definitely be an officer who will help you."

Listening to Namgung Myung's determined voice, I thought of 'Asuka Ren' and 'Michio Shoji' from 'Peace Land'.

[The Constellation, 'Master of White Deer Lake', is watching your choice.]

"Hahaha! What a great swordsman! Do you think we'd allow that?"

The men burst into laughter as if mocking Namgung Myung's beliefs.

There must have been many people in 'Ways of Survival' who died in this way.

"Rather run away. Rather than die a miserable death that can't even be recorded in a story...!"

That's right. Their deaths won't even be recorded in a story.

[The story, 'Recorder of Things That Will Disappear', stirs.]

But even if they weren't recorded, I liked them.

Just knowing that there was another person like this alive in a place I didn't know about —

"Gungmyung, it's over now."

I gained the strength not to give up on this story.

"Would you please step back for a moment?"

"Benefactor?"

Namgung Myung looked at me, who was surprised, as I stepped forward.

—This is not an enemy that Benefactor, who hasn't achieved transcendence, can deal with! Among them, there are those who are as strong as the supervisor!

「Electrical Sound flying into my ear.」

Come to think of it, Namgung Myung remembers me as a fool who was kicked out of the Fear Realm without even achieving transcendence.

I gave Namgung Myung a light smile and walked towards the men lined up in front of me.

The men seemed to be taken aback by my actions for a moment, but soon their expressions hardened.

"Hit him."

The one who gave the order was the incarnation of the 'Late Historical-grade', probably the 'supervisor' that Namgung Myung warned about.

"Die!"

The men who said the somewhat obvious lines simultaneously took out their weapons.

Sword, spear. Each of the representative weapons of Murim.

But the stories wrapped around the weapons they took out were somewhat shocking from my perspective.

[The story, 'Nose Hair of the Sleeping Dionysus', begins its storytelling!]

I thought I smelled something bad, but it was the smell of the flying spear.

The guy who checked my expression shouted proudly.

"It seems you recognized it. It's the nose hair of the Twelve Gods!"

"Hahaha! It's too late to regret it now!"

I see. When I reach the Twelve Gods of <Olympus>, even the nose hair I pulled out will become a story of historical significance.

But I feel ashamed when I try to deal with something like that.

[The story, 'Hair of the Drunken Dionysus' begins its storytelling!]

[The story, 'Beard that Dionysus Shed While Shaving', begins its storytelling!]

I asked after easily dodging the weapons flying from three directions.

"Isn't that the <Tamra Heavy Industries>? Why do you have the hair of the <Olympus> throne as a story?"

"Shut up!"

The fierce power contained in the story brushed my hair.

Surely, a story like that is a story, so if you learn the skill, you can apply it like magic.

But that's all.

Story is the most powerful when used appropriately for the situation.

[Exclusive skill, 'Baekcheong Ganggi Lv.???', is activated!]

Why waste a story on raising 'level' so ignorantly—

Sugagak!

There's no way you can be my opponent. Before the more serious body hair appeared, I used [Baekcheong-ganggi] to cut off their talismans.

The guys groaned as they watched their weapons being easily cut off.

"Oh, how could a story with the power of a Constellation at the Narrative-grade be like that!"

[The Constellation, 'Master of White Deer Lake', is amazed at your skill proficiency!]

[The Constellation, 'Monarch of the Small Fries', shrugs their shoulders in familiar anticipation!]

In the <Star Stream>, 'combat power' is determined by 'what stories' and 'how they were built'. Even if they are of the same level, there is no comparison in actual combat between those who built their stories on their own and those who gathered scraps of stories to only increase their weight.

If these guys knew that they were of the same 'Historical-grade', even the 'Bald General of Justice' would be very angry.

"Stop and kneel."

At the command containing a very light [Incite], the men surrounding me all knelt down, coughing up blood.

"What, what is it...?"

"Huh-huh!"

Their expressions didn't even know what they had been hit with.

The incarnations of <Tamra Heavy Industries> looked at me with eyes full of distrust.

However, not all incarnations were like that.

The only one who resisted my [Incite]. The supervisor of 'Late Historical-grade' who had been watching the battle from behind opened his mouth.

"Interesting. Were you a guy who strengthened your stories with D-coins?"

D-coins?

"You knew too much just because you were a newbie. Is he really the talent chosen by Lord Nirvana?"

The supervisor who had been talking nonsense to himself suddenly closed the distance. The 'Late Historical-grade' on the board, the story that had been swung at the fist was quite impressive.

Thump!

But that was all.

Thump! The guy who got his head hit by the side of 'Unbreakable Faith' staggered.

"Kuhuk?"

I hit his head again.

Takkong! Takkong! Takkong!

"Kuaaaaak!"

Takkong! Takkong! Makkong! Takkong!

How many times did I hit his head like that? A message came from the air.

[The Constellation, 'Monarch of the Small Fries', is delighted with your strange fighting style!]

[You received 1 D-coin sponsorship!]

As expected, your taste is still the same.

"W-what is this—"

Your cabbage Constellation gave a coin to me.

The bewildered guy looked up into the air with a dumbfounded expression, and then, unable to control his anger, ran towards me.

"How dare you—!"

Teokkong! Takkong! Takkong! Takkong!

"Kuaaaaak!"

[You received 1 D-coin sponsorship!]

It's easy to make money.

Takkong! Takkong! Takkong!

[You received 1 D-coin sponsorship!]

"Takkong!"

This time, I accidentally said it out loud.

[You received 1 D-coin sponsorship!]

In that way, I quickly collected twenty D-coins and asked the staggering supervisor.

"Are you going to continue?"

Even if it's a coin event, it's difficult to tease him too much.

Anyway, the 'Monarch of the Small Fries' is Bang Cheolsoo's sponsor. Since we have a short relationship, I didn't really want to kill his incarnation.

[The Constellation, 'Monarch of the Small Fries', is satisfied with your violence.]

[The Constellation, 'Monarch of the Small Fries', is looking at you closely!]

[The Constellation, 'Monarch of the Small Fries', asks if he has seen you somewhere.]

As expected, the 'Monarch of the Small Fries' has not yet recognized me.

I thought it was probably because of my unique status as a Constellation with the body of an incarnation, as Han Sooyoung said.

I wanted to ask about Bang Cheolsoo's well-being, but now was not the right time.

"I will let you off the hook because of your sponsor, so get out of here."

Bang Cheolsoo is Bang Cheolsoo, but if these guys are a group like 'Nirvana', it would be difficult to push them too hard.

I've had enough of scolding at this point.

"Su-supervisor, I think it's time to leave for today."

The men who hurriedly got up from their seats ran away, supporting the bloody supervisor. The supervisor, who had not yet properly recognized my true colors, did not forget to say a word as he ran away.

"I will never forget this debt."

[The Constellation, 'Monarch of the Small Fries', likes the noir spirit of the incarnation.]

I don't know where the Monarch of the Small Fries can find such stereotypes of incarnations.

After the short coin event, Namgung Myung, who had been watching me, approached me.

"Benefactor... Are you okay?"

"Yes."

I was confident that I could deal with a truckload of guys who had only raised the level of of stories so clumsily.

"You got involved in this because of me. I'm sorry."

"No. They were after me from the beginning."

"They will never back down from here."

"Of course."

That was a bit of a concern for me too. I thought about using [Incite] when I sent them, but I left them alone just in case.

[The Constellation, 'Master of White Deer Lake', is looking at you closely.]

Because the guy who looked like the Constellation of Tamra had been observing me since a while ago.

"Since the supervisor failed to capture me, the audit team will definitely be dispatched next time. If the audit team comes, there is a high possibility that it will include 'Executives'. Since you helped me, maybe now the Benefactor…"

Executives.

So does that mean Reinheit, Jo Jincheol, or Nirvana will come?

"It's okay. If it's necessary, we can ask for help too."

"Help?"

"Doesn't Gungmyung-ssi have a company?"

I poked Namgung Myung's back, who was making a stupid expression, and said.

"I'd like to take a look around Gungmyung-ssi's company."

---

Namgung Myung led me straight to his company headquarters.

"I never thought that the Benefactor would be interested in our company…"

"But how exactly do you pronounce that company name?"

"It’s such an unpleasant name now… It’s hard for me to tell you the exact pronunciation."

An unpleasant name?

Why?

"They say that beings above the Narrative-grade can pronounce it without the unpleasantness contained in the name, but I still have trouble with that."

I don’t know what he meant, but I nodded.

"By the way, are you really thinking of joining our company?"

"For now."

"You might regret it."

"Why? Because it’s a small company?"

"That’s true, too…"

Normally, it would be normal to welcome the increase in employees, but Namgung Myung seemed genuinely worried about me.

"Our company currently has four employees… no, only three."

"Three?"

"There used to be a lot more members. Among the Ascendants of our company, there are some really powerful incarnations. But now… To be honest, it's not a proper company. We might have to file for soon…"

Financial bankruptcy?

"Oh, that's our company's 'head office' over there."

A building too small to be called the head office. No, it was embarrassing to even call it a building, but it was located in a place I knew very well.

I stood in front of the place with trembling steps.

「Breaking the Sky School.」

As I entered the place where the signboard had fallen, a house that had turned into ruins appeared. A dog was sitting in the yard of the house. It was a dog with one arm and leg replaced with a prosthetic limb.

The dog kept asking, and someone appeared from behind the ruined house.

"Sorry, Master. Are you hungry?"

A woman wearing a shabby uniform squatted down toward the dog and held out a small hamburger from her bosom.

woof!

"No. There are no more dumplings. I have to eat this to survive."

woof!

I watched the backs of the dog and the woman for a moment, then cautiously made a sound.

"Over there."

The woman, who flinched and shook her shoulders, looked back at me. Her eyes, which had seen my face, were filled with emotions. From question to surprise, and from surprise to shock again.

Her lips slowly parted.

"Ah."

Eight years had passed. Perhaps it was enough time to forget someone, but she recognized me.

I waved at her and said.

"It's been a long time, Kyung Sein-ssi."

909 Episode 51 8 years (1)

Kyung Sein was the first reader I met.

A muscular man who wore a name tag with the nickname 'Judge Heewon' and claimed to be a fan of Jung Heewon. A man who changed gender with the possession and cried out at the shocking loss of muscle mass.

She was now holding onto my front and bowing her head.

"Sein-ssi."

I knew that Kyung Sein was a strong person. At first, she was afraid to catch even a single ground rat, but I still remember the moment when she stood on the front lines and became a shield for her comrades.

The last place we parted ways was the 'Recycling Center'.

I wonder how Kyung Sein has been doing.

After entering the Fear Realm, I had not heard any news from my group. Eight whole years had passed like that.

[The Constellation, 'Master of White Deer Lake', donates 1 D coin for a heartbreaking encounter.]

[Some Constellations were puzzled by the sudden melodrama, but donated 2 D coins!]

Kyung Sein raised her head as the message of support came from the air. Kyung Sein, who clearly looked like she was about to cry, had completely changed her expression.

"I'm sorry. As you can see, I need some coins to repair the building."

Kyung Sein smiled brightly, her tone making it unknown if it was sincere.

"Would you like to come in for a moment? We have a lot to talk about."

---

"Benefactor, I'll wait outside. You two, talk comfortably."

After Namgung Myung left with his greetings, I followed Kyung Sein into the building.

<■■■ Company>'s building—the inside of the former Breaking the Sky School Office was close to ruins. There were holes all over the walls, and the ceiling was so badly damaged that it was hard to tell if it was waterproof or even soundproof.

There were traces of fierce battles here and there. Swords that seemed to belong to the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, and traces that seemed to belong to other Constellations.

The most noticeable of these was the sword mark carved horizontally on the wall of the training hall. I had seen it on the examination platform and in the elevator of the Ascension Platform.

It was definitely the 'Mad Sword Emperor'.

"I'm sorry. There's not much to prepare."

Kyung Sein brought out a small snack table. Two cups of tea and some wrinkled French fries.

"No. Thank you."

I remained silent, not knowing what to say, as I watched Kyung Sein sip tea with a calm expression.

I wanted to ask her how she had been, what had happened, but I didn't have the courage.

8 years. Longer than the time we had spent together—maybe even longer than the time the main story was serialized.

That time was now between Kyung Sein and me.

"Honestly, I can't believe it."

After a brief silence, Kyung Sein was the first to speak.

"Everyone thought that, ■■-ssi was already..."

Sparks lightly jumped up and down. Kyung Sein's expression changed for a moment and she changed her words.

"We believed Inho-ssi was already dead."

In a world where you can't know if someone is alive or dead if you don't contact them for a month, or even a week, it's been 8 years.

"I'm sorry."

"No. You must have had some circumstances."

There was a strange sense of resignation in Kyung Sein's voice as she spoke.

"It's always been like that."

At that moment, I felt something stirring inside me.

[The story, 'Heir to the Eternal Name', smiles sinisterly.]

Under the pretext of protecting his companions, Kim Dokja ran away, shouldering all the decisions on his own. Maybe I'm no different from Kim Dokja in the main story.

"I've been doing well. It may not seem like it, but I think I'm doing well here."

"Is that so?"

While I was escaping from the Fear Realm, I unconsciously imagined reuniting with my companions several times.

What would they be like when I met them again? How much would they have grown? What would they have been through? Is Killer King still the same?

I thought I could talk about such things without hesitation and laugh out loud.

It was an illusion.

A selfish, self-righteous, and arrogant illusion of Kim Dokja.

As I came out of the illusion, I saw Kyung Sein's face again. Her cheeks were slightly sunken, as if she hadn't been getting enough nutrition. Empty bottles of alcohol were rolling around in the corner of the living room.

Did Kyung Sein originally drink alcohol?

The questions I had swallowed inside me lingered on the tip of my lips.

What happened to the other companions? Why did Breaking the Sky School fall? Why are you here alone?

Why. No more, it seems like you're not carrying out the scenario.

I should have asked, but strangely, I didn't have the courage. I was afraid of the past years that Kyung Sein's powerless eyes hinted at.

"How have you been?"

Kyung Sein was the first to muster up her courage again. Her voice was squeezing as if she was solving the given scenario task.

Perhaps she misunderstood my hesitation, Kyung Sein added.

"Oh, there's a soundproof wall here, so you can say whatever you want. The Constellations won't be able to hear you either."

I took a moment to catch my breath and then began to tell the story.

"…So, I was in the Fear Realm."

Along with the story, I went back eight years.

Escaping from the Recycling Center, parting ways with my group, being chased by Giant Nebulae, taking refuge in the <First Murim>, and then entering the 'Fear Realm'.

Kyung Sein listened to me with a calm face. Looking at her expression, the words coming out of my mouth somehow felt unrealistic.

I thought I did my best. I believed that I had tried to save my comrades and not let this world end in tragedy.

That's why I became an exile. I had to leave my party and enter the Fear Realm to get a scenario again.

「But was that really the best I could do?」

In the meantime, I wonder if I could have contacted my party at least once. I thought they were doing well here. They would survive and return to the scenario. I would go see them again. I thought I had a chance to tell them at least once.

"Ah."

As the story progressed, a little liveliness began to linger in Kyung Sein's somewhat dry expression.

Especially when the story of entering the Fear Realm and encountering the 'Transcendent Alliance' came up, Kyung Sein had the same face I knew from before.

"I don't know if I can say this."

"Please feel free to talk."

"That's interesting. Inho-ssi's story."

That was interesting. There was a subtle sense of pain in that expression. In this situation, I tried to tell a story 'fun', and Kyung Sein listened to it as 'fun'.

We met from the beginning with that kind of connection, and now we are here.

"But why didn't you get out right away? The Fear incident was already 8 years ago…"

"I was trapped in a Time Fault for a while. When I barely got out, 8 years had passed."

Kyung Sein looked up at the ceiling with cloudy eyes as if she was estimating the time again.

"I see. That's why you haven't contacted us."

"Yes. I'm sorry."

"You weren't dead. There must have been circumstances."

It seems that I wasn't the only one who went back in time with the story.

Like air leaking out of a balloon with a loose knot, the remnants of old emotions were flowing out of Kyung Sein's mouth.

"I believed it. Even when everyone said you died, we, I, thought that way. I firmly believed that ■■-ssi… Inho-ssi couldn't have died like that."

"..."

"That's why I feel a little resentful towards Inho-ssi."

Maybe from now on, this is the 'real story' that Kyung Sein wanted to tell me.

"I'm sorry. That's all I can tell you, so I'm sorry. I don't know what you've been through. You must have been through a very difficult time that it was hard for you to talk to me about."

The story doesn't stop even if the author stops serializing. The story continues even in a world where the author is gone.

Only the readers who exist ahead of the author's imagination live the story.

"I'll try to fix it somehow."

My job from now on was to take responsibility for the history that the author didn't take care of properly.

"How?"

"I'll solve this scenario. I'll ascend together with Kyung Sein."

The key to this scenario is to leave this world through 'ascension' and leap to the next scenario.

"I'll join Kyung Sein's company."

Kyung Sein probably entered this scenario with her other colleagues. And she must have established this 'company' to carry out the scenario with them.

"Thank you for your words, but you don't have to."

"I understand you're upset. But—"

"I'm not upset, Inho-ssi."

I felt a firmness in her tone, so I paused for a moment and looked at Kyung Sein.

8 years ago, when I was at the Recycling Center, Kyung Sein called me 'Dokja-ssi.'

But now, she was calling me 'Inho-ssi.'

"Aren't you curious why the group isn't with me?"

Kyung Sein was looking at me with a face as unfamiliar as the difference in the titles.

"I'm curious."

"I know what Inho-ssi is worried about. But Inho-ssi shouldn't worry. Everyone else is safe. Killer King, Yerin-ssi... They all ascended safely and went up to the higher scenarios."

It was a story I'd always wanted to hear.

"The scenario is going well. Since 'that person' appeared, the scenario strategy has been progressing smoothly with that person as the center."

That person?

"The party is now on the verge of the end of this world."

It seemed that after 8 years, another center of gravity had appeared in the scenario that I didn't know about.

"There's no need for Inho-ssi to apologize. There were circumstances. The scenarios are nearing their end, and we don't have any problems. So it's okay."

According to Kyung Sein, this world was going better than expected.

The party was moving towards the end, and this world seemed to be avoiding the planned destruction.

It was good news.

"If there's no problem."

It had to be good news.

"Why is Sein-ssi here alone?"

Kyung Sein hesitated for a moment at my question, then muttered while avoiding eye contact.

"I just stayed here of my own free will."

I couldn't understand. Standing at the forefront of scenarios, the one who worked harder than anyone else on the scenarios was Kyung Sein. She was the one who overcame even her own fears and became a strong shield for the group.

That person voluntarily gave up the scenario?

"The reason I met Inho-ssi today was because I wanted to reminisce about the past one last time. We talked, and like when we read the novels we liked a long time ago…"

Kyung Sein slowly got up from her seat and said.

"I guess I wanted to go back to being a reader for a moment."

Kyung Sein, with a sad smile on her face, looked at me and gave a warning.

"Don't come here anymore, Inho-ssi. Thank you so much for everything."

I couldn't back down like this. There was definitely something I hadn't heard. There was a gap in the story that Kyung Sein hadn't told, or was afraid to tell.

I was about to call Kyung Sein again as I stood up.

[Today is the tax settlement due date for <■■■ Company>.]

[Pay the taxes that have been notified.]

[There are currently overdue taxes.]

[If you fail to pay your taxes, <■■■ Company> will enter the process of closing down.]

Kyung Sein frowned as she looked up into the air.

[The 'tax collector' will arrive soon to collect the overdue taxes.]

A moment later, the air rippled and a hairball-like thing poked its head out from the portal.

[Hmm, you're overdue again? You know I won't let you off this time, right?]

It was a Dokkaebi I knew well.

When I first saw the 'collector' message, I had a feeling that it might be true.

But the head that appeared beyond the swirling portal was not an unfamiliar one.

[What number is this? You really want to ruin the company, don't you?]

A Dokkaebi with soft fur like a formless one. I had seen it at the 'Twelve Zodiac Ball'.

「Dokkaebi Yeonggi.」

The spirit giggled as it spun its head around in the air.

[Huh? Why aren't you answering? Are you thinking of not paying this time either?]

Looking at that Yeonggi, I thought of the setting of the main story.

This kind of collection work is usually given to low-level Dokkaebis or demoted Dokkaebis.

Even after 8 years, has he still not escaped being a low-level Dokkaebi?

Even his personality was clearly different from the 'Yeonggi' I knew. If the original Yeonggi was a 'rookie' who didn't understand what was being said but worked hard, the current Yeonggi seemed like a guy who had met the wrong shooter and only learned strange things.

[You're not going to pay? You're not going to pay? You're not going to pay? You're not going to pay? You know what happens if you don't pay?]

Yeonggi's neck started spinning around and the atmosphere started to change like a horror movie.

"Didn't I tell you to wait a little longer!"

The one who said those words was Namgung Myung, who had hurriedly opened the door and came in.

Namgung Myung looked around at Kyung Sein, me, and Yeonggi who were standing there awkwardly, then hurriedly lowered his head and added.

"I'm, I'm sorry, Benefactor. It's not the time for tax collection yet, so I didn't expect a tax collector to come by all of a sudden..."

Kyung Sein let out a light sigh and stepped forward to stop Namgung Myung.

"I'm sorry, but I still need time to prepare."

[I think I heard that last time too—?]

"Just give me a little more time. You won't get coins that didn't exist if you keep urging me like that."

Kyung Sein's voice was quite calm as she answered. If it were the Kyung Sein I remember, she would have made a fuss and hidden behind me, and said, "Dokja-ssi, try to do something."

[Huh.]

The spinning Yeonggi's neck stopped.

[What are you so proud of? What's there to brag about not being able to pay taxes?]

"..."

[The deferrals up until now were close to special treatment. How strange. Why would the higher-ups be interested in such a small company? Anyway, that special treatment ends today. I can't wait any longer.]

"Even if you say that, it's difficult right now—"

[No. If it weren't for another incarnation, you would have a 'way to pay', right?]

Kyung Sein's face turned pale. Kyung Sein, who had been staring blankly into space, soon opened her mouth with a face of resignation.

"Okay."

[Huh. Okay. Then shall we start collecting?]

I don't know exactly what 'collecting' Yeonggi meant, but judging from Kyung Sein's reaction, it didn't seem like a good thing.

"Wait a minute."

The moment a bright light appeared on Yeonggi's fingers, I stepped forward as if to protect Kyung Sein.

"I don't know what it is, but I will pay the tax instead."

[Huh? What is this?]

I was puzzled by Yeonggi's expression as he glared at me with a bad look.

[How long have you been there?]

He didn't recognize me?

That was odd.

A Dokkaebi from the Management Bureau, who is not even another being, didn't recognize me?

[You seem like an incarnation I've never seen before, so don't meddle in things that don't concern you and just stay quiet. If you don’t want to get screwed.]

Not only that, the guy didn’t seem to remember me.

I thought it was a good thing.

"If I’m someone related?"

[What do you mean?]

"It’s my company’s business, so there’s no way it wouldn’t be related."

At those words, Yeonggi’s head suddenly turned toward Kyung Sein.

[Is this incarnation a new employee?]

Just before Kyung Sein shook her head urgently, I interjected.

"I just got hired. So I have the obligation to take on the company’s debt as well."

[There’s no way… There’s an incarnation that gets hired at a company like this? You’re joking, right?]

"Dokkaebi Yeonggi, does that matter now? You’re just going to collect taxes anyway, right?"

When I mentioned the guy’s name, Yeonggi’s expression changed once again.

[Huh, does a mere incarnation know me?]

"Uh."

[No, it seems like you don’t know. If you really knew me, you wouldn't act like that...]

Namgung Myung took a step toward me, perhaps sensing that the situation was taking a turn for the worse.

I raised my hand to him as a sign that I was okay, and continued to speak.

"You seem to be the one who doesn't know much. Are they teaching the Dokkaebis at the Management Bureau to act like that these days?"

Yeonggi looked down at me with a blank expression for a moment, as if he didn't understand what I was saying, and then laughed in vain.

But I'm also dumbfounded.

[How dare a bug...]

He even brought out his 'bug' repertoire, as if he were a successor.

"Why, you'll make my head explode?"

[Do you think you can't?]

"Have you forgotten which scenario this is? Do you still think this is a tutorial?"

A faint anger began to form in Yeonggi's two eyes. The power of the Management Bureau was in the guy's eyes, shining faintly.

[You're very confident. If you think that killing a bug will cause trouble when there are no Constellations to see—]

"Why do you think there are no Constellations to see?"

[What?]

The next moment, I let out a blast. A loud noise shook the entire garden.

There it was.

Kyung Sein, who was startled, looked back at me, and Namgung Myung, whose face turned pale, slumped down. Of course, the most surprised one was Dokkaebi Yeonggi.

[This is ridiculous…]

Yeonggi, who was startled, trembled and asked me.

[Oh, were you by any chance a Constellation?]

In times like this, it's best to just laugh silently like Kim Dokja.

[What? Why can't I see the relevant information… And the modifier… What on earth are you?]

It's probably because of the [Fourth Wall] that he can't access my information.

Yeonggi must be perplexed. A mere incarnation has the status of a Constellation, and it must be a situation where he can't even look up modifiers. I decided to help him out a little.

"If you're really curious, open the 'Dokkaebi Bag'."

Yeonggi listened to me obediently.

And after a while.

[H-how on earth?]

'Dokkaebi Bag' has a system that assigns 'membership levels' by referencing the Constellation's item purchase history.

And as far as I know, the level of my former sponsor, 'Demon King of Salvation's' Dokkaebi Bag is...

[Diamond level...?]

Yeonggi's eyes widened and he looked back and forth between the screen in front of him and me, exuding shock.

As expected, it seemed that the 'Dokkaebi Bag' level of the 'Demon King of Salvation' had been transferred to me.

I guess I'm seeing the benefit of having a good sponsor here too.

[Demon King of Salvation? The owner of this modifier must have already disappeared? Why do you have the right to use it...]

"You don't need to know that. I think this is enough proof that I have the ability to pay."

Yeonggi groaned as if he didn't want to admit it, then opened his mouth in a much more polite tone.

[Are you really going to pay your taxes in advance?]

"Yes. How many coins?"

Fortunately, I had quite a few coins.

However, the words that came out of Yeonggi's mouth were somewhat unexpected.

[100,000 D coins.]

Namgung Myung, who was next to me, shouted in protest.

"Wait a minute! There can't be that many! Last time, I'm sure…"

[You seem to have forgotten how much tax arrears there have been. All tax arrears accrue interest.]

"I know that, but…"

[The Management Office is not a poverty relief agency. And originally, you were supposed to pay 101,235 D coins, but since you, Diamond, specially agreed to pay in advance, I've reduced the rest.]

Yeonggi looked back at me and asked.

[Will you pay your tax arrears?]

"I don't have any D coins. Can't I just pay in coins?"

Then Yeonggi laughed.

[In this 'scenario area', only 'D Coins' are circulated.]

"Why don't you exchange the coins for D coins? What's the rate?"

Yeonggi's eyes started rolling at my words. Even at first glance, he had an expression that seemed to have an ulterior motive.

[If that's true, I'll exchange 10,000 coins for 1 D Coin.]

10,000 coins for 1 D Coin.

This kid must have learned how to catch people somewhere.

"Did we have coin inflation? The exchange rate can't be like that, right?"

[In principle, currency exchange is not allowed in this scenario area. This is also a suggestion I made because you are a Diamond member...]

No matter how much the coins rot, there's no way they would exchange them at that rate.

[Would you like to exchange them?]

"Would you?"

[Then let's just pretend that the tax payment never happened... ]

As if the results were visible, Yeonggi spoke with a shameless face.

I grinned.

Yeah, that's how you come out.

"I'll pay it. Before that, I have one question."

[Hmm? Go ahead.]

"What authority do you have to carry out this 'collection work'?"

Yeonggi tilted his head as if he didn't understand what I was saying and asked back.

[What do you mean? I'm a Dokkaebi in charge of the collection mission, so of course I have the authority to collect, right?]

"That's talking about other companies. It seems like the higher-ups didn't specifically issue a collection order to this company?"

The guy clearly said it with his own mouth.

The higher-ups are giving Kyung Sein's company a 'deferral close to special treatment'.

That meant that someone in the management office was 'looking after this company' so that they could defer their taxes.

[That's… ]

"I don't know where the guy who couldn't even properly explain the scenario learned such bad things and is acting like this..."

Yeonggi looked like he was hit with a sharp look. Looking at him, I somehow felt like I knew who the 'Dokkaebi who's looking after this company' was.

"Does Bihyung know that you're doing this here?"

At Bihyung's name, Yeonggi's face turned pale for a moment. I didn't miss the opportunity and continued to speak.

"It seems Bihyung doesn't know, does he?"

After hesitating for a moment, Yeonggi let out a faint sigh and answered.

[I don't know how you know that person, but even if you tell Bihyung, I can't give up on this collection.]

It was a stronger response than I thought.

Did he receive instructions from another high-level Dokkaebi other than Bihyung?

I thought for a moment and then said.

"Then give me a little more grace."

[How much...]

"A week."

[A week is too long.]

"Instead, I'll keep it a secret from him."

[…]

"I don’t know why the Management Bureau needs something like D-coins, but I can pay the taxes. I just want a little more time."

After thinking for a moment, Yeonggi answered.

[Okay. Since you seem to be close with Bihyoung, I will accept your offer. However, if you still can’t pay after a week, I will force the company’s executives to 'collect' the money.]

Yeonggi gave Kyung Sein a fierce look, then turned to me and said.

[I don’t know why someone like you is here, but I hope you have the grace of the story.]

With those words, Yeonggi disappeared beyond the swirling portal.

Namgung Myung looked at me with a somewhat impressed expression, and Kyung Sein looked at my toes with a complicated expression.

"Inho-ssi, you don’t have to go this far."

"I did it because I wanted to."

Kyung Sein’s eyes were red.

"Inho-ssi… why?"

"Why? We're colleagues."

"Why, why did you come now…"

As she was saying that, Kyung Sein's breathing began to tremble.

"Why, why on earth did you come now… Are you making me expect…"

Kyung Sein, who had been muttering quietly, began to stumble.

"Sein-ssi?"

I hurriedly grabbed Kyung Sein, who was falling forward. Kyung Sein's entire body felt hot as if it were on fire.

"Inho-ssi, you shouldn't get involved in this scenario."

"Wait a minute. Sein-ssi, the incarnation…"

I realized the moment my hand touched her. Kyung Sein's condition was so serious that I couldn't understand how she could have talked normally in such a body.

"If that happens, Inho-ssi too…"

With those words, Kyung Sein lost consciousness.

I felt Kyung Sein's pulse as she fell and checked the state of her hair.

Kyung Sein's hair was deeply damaged.

No, it wasn't just 'damage'.

It was like…

「A wound that felt like someone had ripped a part of her soul off.」

I laid Kyung Sein down neatly and held her hand.

Just by holding her hand, I could tell what kind of life she had been through. I felt like it was becoming clearer little by little what I had to do here.

I looked down at Kyung Sein who was sleeping and slowly opened my mouth.

"Gungmyung-ssi, how can I get something called D-coins?"

---

[CLICK TO READ CHAPTER COMMENTS]

911 Episode 51 8 years (3)

---

According to Namgung Myung, there were two main ways to obtain D-Coins in this scenario area.

One, obtain 'D-Coins' through the main or sub-scenarios that appear regularly.

Two, exchange 'D-Coins' for other items or stories through the 'Auction House'.

The first method could not be implemented immediately. So we chose the second method.

I headed to the 'Auction House' with Namgung Myung.

"There is another method besides this, but that is only possible for special people like you, Sein-nim..."

I felt like he was trying to hide the topic, so I didn't ask about it further. In fact, I could tell without asking.

「Dokkaebi Yeonggi tried to take a part of 'Kyung Sein's' soul.」

Thinking about it that way, it made sense that Kyung Sein's soul had been damaged. Kyung Sein must have paid the price of her debt in a similar way several times. But when I realized that fact, there were things I didn’t understand.

"Gungmyung-ssi, do you know anything about Sein's other colleagues?"

Kyung Sein said. The other colleagues were already moving towards the end in the upper scenario.

But did the colleagues I knew really agree to leave Kyung Sein here?

"I don't know much about them either. I'm embarrassed to say, but I was infected by Outer Gods during the invasion of the Fear Realm and was bedridden for several years."

The time when Kyung Sein and her colleagues were active was already 7 or 8 years ago. Therefore, Namgung Myung said he knew almost nothing about the Ascendants of that time.

"When I regained consciousness, my family had already been completely ruined. Sein-nim was the one who took me in when I was living on the streets because I couldn't adapt to the changed Murim."

"I see."

"Yes. However, I know about some Ascenders through rumors. For example, 'Flame Demon Emperor Star' who is protected by the Monkey King, and 'Black Wolf Cavalry' who carries the Archangel on his back are famous even outside of the New Murim District."

Flame Demon Emperor Star and Black Wolf Cavalry. Flame Demon Emperor Star is probably Ji Eunyu, and Black Wolf Cavalry is... Killer King?

I immediately tried 'Midday Tryst' on Ji Eunyu and Killer King.

['Midday Tryst' cannot be connected!]

Is it because the scenario area is too far to reach? Or maybe since they are in a higher scenario, it is too busy to receive Midday Tryst.

"Benefactor, we have arrived."

The entrance to the auction house soon appeared. As I entered the entrance to the auction house, I could hear the hawkers' calls from all over the place.

"Old martial arts books for sale!"

"Old martial arts equipment for sale in bulk. Come take a look!"

Among the items being sold on the street, there were famous martial arts that were familiar just by their names.

—Sky-Sovereign Sword Art.

—Three-Heart Sword of the Holy War.

Honestly, I was surprised.

'Sky-Sovereign Sword Art' and 'Three-Heart Sword of the Holy War' were exclusive martial arts of the old Five Great Families, and even among the descendants, they were things that only the direct descendants could learn…

—10 D coins.

But those martial arts were being sold for a mere 10 D coins?

"I wouldn’t be honored to meet my ancestors if I came here."

Namgung Myung tried to avoid eye contact with a bitter look in his eyes. That would make sense, because the 'Sky-Sovereign Sword Art' currently being sold at the stall was the representative swordsmanship of the Namgung Family.

Since such a martial art was being sold for such a low price, Namgung Myung couldn’t be at ease.

The martial arts books weren’t the only items being sold cheaply at the stall.

—Heavenly Iron Cloud Gauntlet.

—Heavenly Silkworm Secret Robe.

Although it wasn't a 'Black Heavenly Sword' level item, it was a famous item in the old martial arts world.

—15 D Coins.

Those items were being sold at prices that even I would find ridiculous.

I don't know about other items, but 'Heavenly Iron Cloud Gauntlet' or 'Heavenly Silkworm Secret Robe' would be worth buying for 15 D Coins.

If you give it to a person who is good at martial arts like Yoo Joonghyuk or Yerin, it would be very useful.

"Benefactor, I'm telling you just in case, but I don't recommend buying items from the Old Martial Murim."

I didn't plan on buying them anyway since I didn't have many D Coins, but I was curious as to why he was telling me not to.

Namgung Myung continued to speak.

"Items from the Old Murim are worthless in this area. In the 'New Murim District', items strengthened with D Coins are more powerful."

Come to think of it, there were quite a few weapons with 'D' in their names at the examination table.

"Items strengthened with D Coins greatly increase durability and power, and also increase skill proficiency. There is even a story that an unknown longsword strengthened with D Coins is stronger than a famous sword from the Old Murim era."

According to Namgung Myung, items strengthened with D Coins can only be dealt with by items strengthened with D Coins.

After hearing this, I think I understand why D Coins are so highly regarded in the 'New Murim'.

"Is the reason you came here, Benefactor, to exchange items for D Coins?"

"Yes."

"Do you have any items strengthened with 'D Coins'?"

"No."

"Then it will be difficult to get a high price at the auction house."

As expected, it was a difficult situation.

A total of 100,000 D Coins are needed to cover the company's debt.

But the D Coins I currently have...

[You received 5 D-Coins as a sub-scenario reward.]

That’s 25 in total.

I slowly looked around. As I looked, there were quite a few other martial artists in the auction house besides us.

I asked them while examining the symbols of their companies one by one.

"Are there any <Tamra Heavy Industries> people here?"

Namgung Myung, who didn’t understand the intention of the question, tilted his head and said.

"Huh? Of course, people from large companies do visit…"

"Then that 'supervisor' guy will come too."

The Monarch of Small Fries gave one D-Coin to a single hit. In that case, meeting that supervisor again and hitting him ninety-nine thousand, nine hundred and eighty times would be the fastest way to earn D-Coins for now.

Namgung Myung, who realized my intentions belatedly, said with a pale face.

"Benefactor, if you do that again, you'll be in real trouble. If you knew how scary <Tamra Heavy Industries> is a company..."

"Get out of the way!"

A group of incarnations pushed past Namgung Myung. Judging from the sinister aura flowing from their bodies, they were quite powerful.

Watching the martial artists of the area make their way, I checked the corporate symbols written on their backs.

—Vedass Biotech.

I wondered if there was anyone among them who had the 'Monarch of the Small Fries' as their sponsor. I watched their movements with some anticipation.

The group headed straight to the center of the auction house and soon stood in front of a machine that looked like a large scale. The scale had veins growing all over it and was writhing as if it were alive. It was an object reminiscent of the 'Fear' of the Fear Realm.

"Requesting an appraisal."

After a while, a screen that looked like a scoreboard appeared above the machine.

[The item appraisal begins!]

I saw the crowd of people gathering one by one.

"Oh, it's a new auction item. Did you get it from this collection?"

"It looks like it's from Vedas."

I and Namgung Myung also stood among the crowd.

"What is that?"

"Ah, it's the 'appraisal scale', a famous item at the auction house. It's usually used by people who want to appraise newly acquired items."

"What they brought doesn't seem to be an item from the Old Martial Murim."

"Benefactor is right."

Following that, I saw the man who seemed to be the leader of the group take out something like a small accessory from his bosom.

"That's the most valuable item in the 'New Murim'—"

The moment I saw the story embedded in the accessory, I thought I knew what Namgung Myung was going to say.

"It's an accessory from the Fear Realm."

The bizarre power unique to the Fear Realm flowed out from the accessory.

Only then did I begin to understand many things.

"Was Gungmyung-ssi in the Fear Realm at that time?"

"Yes. I also participated in the collection to obtain the parts."

"Why do they value those parts?"

"I don't know much about it, but I heard that the parts from the Fear Realm are the 'source' for making 'D Coins'."

The source for making D Coins.

Is this why we could hardly find any fragments Outer Gods in the Fear Realm?

"Oh, the appraisal results..."

The grade indicators spun like a roulette before my eyes. After a moment, the confirmed grade appeared on the screen.

[Natural Disaster Level.]

Cheering erupted from the area.

The incarnations of Vedas Biotech were seen nodding their heads with meaningful smiles.

"Oh my, a Natural isaster level?"

"Has there ever been a grade like that before?"

[The appraisal results for that part are 3000 D Coins.]

3000 D Coins.

The crowd was shocked at the huge sum that could be obtained by hitting 3,000 Takkongs.

"A mere 3,000 D coins for a single piece of tooth…?"

"If it's a Natural Disaster, then is it a piece of the 'shark' tooth?"

"It's already been two years since the last time a Natural Disaster-level piece came out. Hehe, Vedas Biotech has a big deal."

Then, [This Week's Ranking] was displayed on the electronic board.

1st place. A piece of a Natural Disaster-level Outer God tooth, Vedas Biotech — 3,000 D coins.

The incarnations muttered in envious voices.

"This week's ranking reward is Vedas'."

"That's enough to catch the eyes of the recorders. It's like he's guaranteed a super-fast promotion to the Executive level."

When Namgung Myung looked around, he was also looking up at the electronic board with envious eyes. I poked his shoulder and asked,

"Gungmyung-ssi, can anyone go and do the appraisal?"

"Yes, anyone with an Outer God attachment… Benefactor?"

As soon as I heard Namgung Myung's words, I headed straight to the front of the appraisal machine. I felt the incarnations of Vedas Biotech, who had just finished appraising, glaring at me with curious eyes.

I shrugged my shoulders and said to the guys whose eyes met mine.

"If you're done, please step aside."

As Namgung Myung hurriedly followed me and stood next to me, a small commotion broke out among the incarnations.

"What? They're appraising again? Which company is it?"

"Oh, that company…"

No matter how much the company has declined, there are still people who know its name.

"Hahaha, that's where the Namgung Family's small company is located."

"Is that person next to him a new employee? There's an incarnation that's joining that company?"

I looked around and saw Namgung Myung looking at me with expectant eyes.

"Benefactor, do you have any Outer Gods parts?"

Namgung Myung's voice was trembling.

I said to Namgung Myung, who was like that.

"Hmm, I was wondering if this could count."

On the tip of my finger, a strand of my hair that I had pulled out as a joke was caught.

Namgung Myung looked at my hair with unrealistic eyes.

I smiled and dropped my hair on the scale.

"Wait a minute! You can't put anything on the scale like that...!"

"Not just anything."

Just as the incarnations of <Tamra Heavy Industries> used 'Dionysus's hair' as a story, all the parts of Narrative-grade Constellations in this world have the power of 'stories'.

"That's my 'story'."

As I watched the hair falling on the scale, I thought of the Outer Gods I had met. Outer Gods that were Catastrophe-level, Disaster-level, and Natural Disaster-level.

「What is the 'most valuable' thing in the Fear Realm?」

If the criteria of this scale were the same as the grade criteria of the 'Transcendent Alliance'...

"He, he's crazy...!"

"What the hell is this guy coming in. He doesn't even know that if he misjudges an item, he'll be cursed by the scale—"

Soon, my hair touched the scale.

[The item appraisal begins!]

Seeing the colorful rays of light bursting out from the scale, all the incarnations including Namgung Myung opened their eyes wide at the same time.

"What the heck is going on?"

"The grade is displayed?"

The grades were changing in real time like a roulette wheel.

Catastrophe, Disaster, and…

"…Natural Disaster?"

"What is that… isn't the scale broken? This is ridiculous…!"

The moment someone's shock escaped, acrid smoke began to flow out from the scale.

「The greatest being in the 'Fear Realm'.」

I thought of the Second, who was sitting on a small chair and looking at me with a sad face.

「The understander of all Fears.」

The 'King of Fear''s rank as measured by the 'Transcendent Alliance' was as follows.

[End Grade.]

Along with the rank confirmation mark, the scale was covered in bright blue sparks.

"No, what's that—"

A commotion filled the auction hall.

"You didn't just see something, did you?"

"It's true. I saw it too."

"Does this make sense? The scale seems to have miscalculated."

The crowd raised their weight. Then the scale itself twitched, and a giant mouth-like thing appeared at the top of the scale.

[The appraisal result of the relevant department is 10,000 D Coins.]

There must have been a problem with the appraisal, because the message that came up wasn't very good.

Still, the result was clear.

"10,000 D Coins?"

A series of gasps of shock erupted from the crowd.

It was understandable.

10,000 D Coins for a single hair.

At this rate, it wouldn't be surprising if coin inflation occurred.

[Would you like to exchange the item you placed on the scale for D Coins?]

Can I exchange it right away?

"Exchange."

As soon as I agreed, the mouth at the top of the scale swelled abnormally and sucked in the hair. Then, with a whoosh, the scale's mouth began spitting out D Coins. The D Coins that poured out flashed towards me in a bright light and were absorbed.

"Wow, Benefactor… "

Namgung Myung's expression changed rapidly in real time. From bewilderment to shock, then to delight again.

I nodded and answered.

"It's easy to make money."

[The Constellation that 'Made Money By Selling Blood' is amazed by your price tag!]

10,000 per hair. If I just pull out nine more, I could even pay off the company's debt?

Hair will grow back anyway, so if I shave it all off, I could become the richest man in the <Star Stream>.

But there's one thing—

[The 'Settlement Scale' is looking at you.]

Since when? A pair of eyes sprouting from the scale were staring at me. I felt a sense of unease.

Where did the hair that this scale just devoured go?

Is it okay to continue settling accounts like this?

"You, what the hell have you done?"

A cold voice echoed in my ear.

I turned around, seeing the ones who submitted a tooth fragment earlier. The employees of Vedas Biotech, who earned 3,000 D-Coins, surrounded me with menacing expressions.

I smiled kindly and removed the hand on my shoulder.

"Just tell me."

But the supervisor, his expression hardening, threatened me once again.

"What did you do? How did you get such an appraisal?"

"You don't seem to know, but hair is precious."

It was a statement that would have made even the Great Jecheon nod, but the supervisor didn't seem convinced at all.

"Bullshit!"

The Vedas Biotech supervisor, unable to accept reality, drew his weapon at me.

I ignored him and stared up at the scoreboard in the air.

| |
|---|
| 1st place. ■?■?■?■?■?■?■?■?■? Hair — 10,000 D Coins. |

The rankings on the scoreboard had changed.

[The incarnation that takes first place in this week's appraisal ranking will receive an additional reward.]

[This week's appraisal ranking closes in one hour.]

I see, so this is why these guys are so angry. Basically, they're angry because their ranking reward was taken away.

"Just tell the truth. What the hell is that thing you brought?"

"According to the scale's description, it must be the hair of a End-level Outer God."

"There's no way an End-level Outer God could exist! They were all wiped out eight years ago! Catch this guy! He must have been involved in the illegal collection!"

It seems like it's not going to be a good idea.

Should I use [Incite] to take them out? Or should I show off my power and make them retreat?

I was contemplating which would be more effective.

[The 'Recorder of Fear' who records <Vedas Biotech> is displeased with you.]

I frowned slightly and looked up into space.

Come to think of it, I'd heard the message from the Recorder who recorded <Vedas Biotech> and <Olympus Technology> before.

They were displeased with my entry into this 'New Murim District,' and immediately after hearing the message, the thugs from <Tamra Heavy Industries> attacked.

Wait a minute, so maybe even now?

"The Recorders ordered you to kill me?"

"Wh-what are you talking about?"

Their panic made it seem like it wasn't an entirely unreasonable assumption. I recalled something I'd briefly heard at the auction.

「"If it was that much, it would have caught the eyes of the recorders. Even executives are guaranteed a high-speed promotion."」

Most of the recorders in this city had titles related to companies like Vedas Biotech and Tamra Heavy Industries. Then, we can make this assumption.

What if each company had a 'Recorder' attached to it?

"Let me ask again. Did a 'Recorder' affiliated with your conglomerate order you to stop me?"

"It's none of your business—"

"Who is it? Tell me. The Demon King of the Cinema? The Fox Who Commands the Sky?"

For your information, the 'Demon King of the Cinema' was the alias of Asmodeus, and the 'Fox Who Commands the Sky' was the alias of Bicheonhori.

[The 'Recorder of Fear' who writes for <Vedas Biotech> is startled by your remark.]

[The 'Recorder of Fear' who supports <Tamra Heavy Industries> asks how you know that alias.]

[The 'Recorder of Fear' who supports <Olympus Technology> questions who the recorder is.]

Hmm, I see.

Judging by the situation, it seems no recorder I've encountered in the 'Time Fault' has been present.

By the way, what on earth is happening that has the Recorders of Fear gathered in this city?

The Supervisor shouted indignantly.

"How dare you, a scamp, mention the aliases of the Great Recorders!"

The incarnations slowly surrounded me.

The sky then sparkled. The Constellations' messages came in.

[The Constellation, 'Monarch of the Small Fries', is curious about your response.]

[The Constellation, 'Bald Leader of Justice', enters the channel!]

[The Constellation, 'God of Wine and Ecstasy', enters the channel!]

From the Recorders to the Constellations themselves.

There are too many eyes watching. With this much attention, resolving the situation by force is a bit burdensome.

I haven't yet confirmed the capabilities of major corporations like Vedas Biotech or Olympus Technologies, and revealing my strength first would only be detrimental. So—

"Well, I understand. I don't want to fight, so let's be honest."

Let's do this.

"First of all, this hair wasn't obtained illegally. I never participated in any collection or anything. Why don't you try using [Lie Detection]?"

As I raised both hands and spoke in a disinterested voice, one of the incarnations interrogating me activated their skill as if they had been waiting for it.

Then a message flashed:

[Someone is activating 'Lie Detection'!]

['Lie Detection' has confirmed your words are true.]

The supervisor, his expression hardening, asked,

"You didn't get it illegally? Then where did you get it?"

I calmly pointed to my head.

"Here."

['Lie Detection' has confirmed your words are true.]

"No way... How is your hair worth over 10,000 D Coins?"

"How could I possibly know that? Could the scale be broken?"

"The settlement scale has never broken before!"

"Really? Then let's check again."

I plucked four strands of hair in front of everyone and placed them on the scale.

"Request appraisal."

Faint sparks appeared on the scale, and the appraisal results were displayed.

[Appraising four identical parts.]

[The total value of the appraisals and purifications within the relevant parts is 40,000 D Coins.]

"Exchange."

D Coins poured out of the air.

I leisurely collected the coins, looking back at the bewildered men.

"It seems to be broken, doesn't it? Human hair can't be this expensive, can it?"

With [Incite] activated, I slowly looked around the crowd. Then, emphasizing each word, I continued.

"The <Star Stream> isn't perfect. I once obtained a bugged item from an item called a 'Random Item Box'."

「[Incite] becomes more effective when combined with truth.」

['Lie Detection' has confirmed your words are true.]

The crowd, once filled with distrust, slowly began to see a flicker of greed in their eyes.

I watched them for a moment, then grabbed my hair again and said,

"Well. Since no one seems to believe me, I'll continue the assessment…"

The supervisor, his face abruptly changed, pushed me and stood in front of the scales.

"Get out of the way!"

That was the beginning.

"Stop! I'll do it first!"

"No, I'll do it first!"

"I'll do it first!"

"Hey, don't push me! Don't push!"

In an instant, the area in front of the scales was filled with a crowd. Watching everyone, one after another, pluck out their own hair and place it on the scales, I quietly retreated to the outskirts of the auction hall with Namgung Myung.

From a distance, I could see the scale's mouth sucking in people's hair.

And a moment later.

[The 'Settlement Scale' has detected an abnormal emotional attempt!]

A strange message rang out.

The startled incarnations turned to each other and said,

"What? That guy from before is gone!"

"Wasn't that a bug? My coins—"

The mouth that appeared on the scale began spitting out the hairs it had sucked in.

The moment those who sensed something was wrong tried to flee,

[A fee will be charged for an abnormal appraisal attempt!]

[The 'Settlement Scale' is processing the settlement!]

The scale's veins twitched, and tentacles burst out from within its mouth.

"Kuaaaaak!"

The incarnations caught in the tentacles were flowing up the scale beam. They were all incarnations who had pulled out their own hair and placed it on the beam.

Among them was the supervisor who had picked a fight with me.

"What are you all looking at! Untie this now! Quickly!"

"What is this, what is this—"

[A fee will be charged for an abnormal appraisal attempt!]

The scale's mouth opened with the message. A thud, the sound of flesh crushing. Broken stories scattered everywhere, along with streams of blood.

「"An idiot came in. You don't even know that if you misjudge an item, you'll be cursed by the scale—"」

I guess that's what they meant by 'misjudged.'

"Aaaaaaaaah!"

The entire incarnation screamed in the midst of the horrific scene.

In an instant, the auction house was in chaos.

Only the starlight twinkling in the empty sky calmly observed the situation.

[The Constellation, 'Monarch of the Small Fries', shows an expression of admiration.]

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', turns his gaze to the brutal landscape.]

[The Constellation, 'God of Wine and Ecstasy', is curious about your identity.]

[The Constellation, 'Lying Dragon', enters the channel!]

[The Constellation, 'Lying Dragon', asks what on earth has happened.]

[The Constellations of absolute evil support you with 20 D-coins!]

Along with the outpouring of support from the Constellations, angry messages from the Recorders also spread.

[The 'Recorder of Fear' who writes about <Vedas Biotech> is furious!]

[The 'Recorder of Fear' who supports <Tamra Heavy Industries> frowns.]

[The 'Recorder of Fear' who supports <Olympus Technology> shakes his head.]

[The Recorders have begun the 'narrative agreement'!]

For a moment, my vision felt as if it were creaking, and a sentence appeared before my eyes.

「The auction house was in chaos. This was unthinkable. The hair of a mere incarnation was treated as the appendage of a 'End-level Outer God'.」

For the first time since leaving the Fear Realm, I was startled.

Sentences narrated within the colorless landscape.

「The Master of the Fear Realm died eight years ago, and every single one of his appendages was collected. However, the scale had just appraised the appendage of an 'End-level Outer Ood'. The meaning was clear.」

It wasn't my thoughts, nor was it a record of 'Ways of Survival' or the [Fourth Wall].

「The 'Settlement Scale' is broken.」

It was a scene similar to when I used [□□].

Someone was interpreting the reality before my eyes to their own liking.

「The incident was immediately transmitted to the 'Management Bureau'.」

The next moment, a powerful aftershock blasted from the scale, and it immediately ceased functioning.

[A new notice from the Management Bureau has arrived!]

[A 'Probability Appropriate Determination' will soon be conducted in the area!]

[The 'Settlement Scale' will be temporarily suspended while the 'Probability Appropriate Determination' in the area is conducted!]

The incarnations sighed.

"What? Was it really a bug?"

"Then what about that guy earlier! Did he benefit alone?"

"Where did he go?"

"Supervisor! Move the Supervisor!"

Having escaped early, I was hiding with Namgung Myung in a side street of the auction house, which had become a chaotic mess.

Namgung Myung, catching his breath, asked in a tense voice.

"Benefactor, what just now... was the scale really broken?"

"I don't know."

I stared at the message from the management office blinking in the air, thinking,

「There was no such thing as a bug.」

The reason my hair received a 'End-level' rating was because I inherited the story of the 'King of Fear.'

However, someone observing this situation was denying this fact and trying to attribute the situation to a 'scale malfunction'.

The reason was clear. They didn't want me to gain any more from this situation.

[The 'Recorder of Fear' who writes <Vedas Biotech> looks at you with a displeased look.]

"Gungmyung-ssi, why are the 'Recorders of Fear' here?"

Namgung Myung's eyes slowly widened as he listened to my question, his thoughts racing.

"Benefactor, you were chosen by a 'Recorder of Fear'?"

"What are you talking about?"

"Oh... you weren't?"

Namgung Myung added, somewhat concealing his disappointment.

"I've heard that the 'Recorders of Fear' occasionally make special offers to incarnations who excel in the 'New Murim District'. In particular, those who quickly rise to 'Executive' status are often chosen by the Recorders."

The Recorders' choice?

It wasn't some kind of sponsor selection. Why would a 'Recorder of Fear' choose an incarnation?

This world isn't even a 'Time Fault' of the Fear Realm.

[You have attracted the interest of the 'Recorder of Fear' in that area.]

Huh?

[A small number of 'Recorders of Fear' are offering you a 'recording contract.']

[You can now choose the 'Recorder' who will record your story.]

Wait a minute, can't this be...

[If you accept the 'Recording Contract,' the 'Recorders of Fear' will personally record you on the 'Final Wall.']

[The 'Recorders of Fear' will spare no effort in completing an interpretation that benefits you.]

[Stories recorded through this contract will have their status greatly elevated in the <Star Stream>!]

Starting with that, countless messages flashed before my eyes.

[A Recorder, yet unsupported, wants to record your story.]

[A Recorder who enjoys large-scale fraud wants to record your story.]

[A Recorder who enjoys squinty characters wants to record your story.]

As I reviewed the suggestions from each Recorder, one message in particular stood out.

[A Recorder who hates regression wants to record your story.]

913 Episode 51 8 years (5)

I paused for a moment, rereading the nickname over and over again.

Like the Constellations, the Recorders also had their own modifiers. Just as Asmodeus was called the 'Demon King of the Cinema' and Lycaon the 'Prince of Wolves'.

However, before revealing their modifiers, the Recorders sometimes expressed their characteristics with simple rhetoric, as now.

「A Recorder who hates regression.」

With such a specific characteristic, the candidates that come to mind are narrowed down.

The first candidate is 'Yoo Joonghyuk' from the main story.

He was the first 'Regressor' to escape regression after repeated, distant regressions. Since he, too, acquired the 'Writer' trait at the end of the main story, it's possible he'd developed his powers as a 'Recorder'.

The second candidate is Han Sooyoung, author of 'Ways of Survival'.

She, too, likely wrote about regression tirelessly, so it wouldn't have been entirely surprising if she had used the rhetoric 'averse to regression'. The third and final candidate was the Monarch Slayer, Jaehwan.

As far as I know, he had also written his own story, so he could have acquired the trait of a 'Recorder' when he moved to the Star Stream.

But the fact that he would make this offer felt strangely unnatural. If it were the Jaehwan I knew, he'd be the first to attack me if he found something he didn't like...

Who could it be?

If this 'Recorder Who Hates Regression' is one of the three I predicted, then I wouldn't have much to lose by choosing this option.

The problem is if it's not one of those three.

What if there's a 'Recorder' with some nefarious intentions unknown to me, and he's using the rhetoric of 'hating regression' to deceive me...

"I won't choose a Recorder."

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name' chuckles, saying he knew you would do something like that.]

Then, the message from the Recorders came to mind.

[The Recorder of Fear who still has no support shakes his head.]

[The Recorder of Fear who enjoys large-scale fraud is disappointed in you.]

[The Recorder of Fear who likes squinty characters is intrigued by your choice.]

[The 'Recorder of Fear' who writes about <Vedas Biotech> glares at your choice.]

To tell the truth, I had no intention of accepting the offer, no matter who the Recorder was.

Because I, too, am qualified to be a 'Recorder of Fear'. I don't need anyone else's help in recounting my tale.

But Namgung Myung, unaware of this, looked startled.

"Benefactor, did you really refuse the Recording Contract?"

Instead of answering, I smiled. Perhaps sensing the ominousness in my smile, Namgung Myung began to ramble on.

"By signing with the Recorders, you'll receive incredible probabilities. You could win an impossible battle, or even escape the threat of your only life. So, if you're offered a Recording Contract, you should definitely…"

Every benefit of the <Star Stream> comes with a price. Especially if that benefit involves the most elusive aspect of the <Star Stream>: 'probability'.

Winning an impossible battle... It was a tempting offer, but I couldn't make a rash decision just because of the momentary temptation.

[You declined the 'Recording Contract'.]

[Some of the 'dreadful Recorders' are shaken by your choice.]

Tsutsutsu!

That's when sparks spread like ripples through the air.

[This guy's still the same. Did he choose no one again?]

A white head floated in the air.

I waved lightly at the Dokkaobi.

"It's been a while, Bihyung."

[Your 'Dokkaebi in charge' has been dispatched!]

The time for the 'Solo Meeting' has finally arrived.

---

'Solo meetings' with Dokkaebis take place in the 'Hat' each Dokkaebi possesses.

Is this Bihyung's 'Hat'?

A larger and more spacious space than the 'Dokkaebi' described in the main story. It was reminiscent of a hotel suite.

This must mean Bihyung's Dokkaebi rank has risen.

"You live in a nice place."

"Ahem, I'm a high-level Dokkaebi now."

The arrogant Bihyung quickly straightened and cleared his throat.

[Do you know why I called you?]

"More or less."

I was the last survivor of the 'Fear Realm.' During that time, I even traveled to another worldline through the 'Time Fault.'

"Isn't it because of the 'Returnee Scenario'?"

Normally, I should have already received the 'Returnee Scenario' and begun the process of returning. In the process, there should have been a resolution, either through a 'Returnee War' or by successfully persuading the group like Kim Dokja and regaining my true self.

[That's right. But there's a problem right now, so I can't activate the 'Returnee Scenario'.]

A problem?

[To activate the 'Returnee Scenario', I need not only the authority of the Management Bureau, but also the attention of the Constellations, and a certain number of 'Returnees'.]

"The authority of the Management Bureau shouldn't be a major issue, and there should be a way to secure the attention of the Constellations, so the final condition is the issue, I suppose."

Bihyung wiggled his eyebrows, seemingly intrigued by my answer.

[How do you know all that?]

As I shrugged without answering, Bihyung continued.

[You're right. I can manage to secure the authority of the Management Bureau and the attention of the Constellations, but... the problem is the 'Incarnations'. Right now, there are no 'Returnees' besides you.]

How could that be possible? In the <Star Stream>, a 'return' occurs on a fictional day.

[Recently, there was an event that summoned a large number of returnees. It was called the 'Return War' special…]

"I understand, but so what?"

[There was a crazy guy among the participants back then. He killed all the other participants. That's why the precious war and the scenario itself disappeared. Since that incident, the 'Returnee Scenario' has been temporarily suspended.]

Is there anyone among the precious ones who can wipe out all the returnees before me?

Who is it? Jang Hayoung?

[Anyway, that's why the 'Returnee Scenario' won't appear this time.]

I was grateful.

If a 'Returnee Scenario' were added to the current situation, it would be a hassle in many ways.

But Bihyung didn't stop there.

[Your next scenario will be a bit more difficult, though. Be prepared.]

"The reward will be that much better, right?"

["Well... but are you okay?"]

"I can tolerate difficulty adjustments as long as the rewards are good. But more importantly, could you please give me the scenario reward? I finished the Fear Realm and didn't get it."

["Oh, right. I should."]

Seeing Bihyung sweating profusely and looking into his pockets, I quickly added,

"Don't try to make up for it with some half-assed story. It's called the 'Fear Realm'."

Bihyung hesitated.

"You know what happened to me in the Fear Realm, right? I joined the 'Transcendent Alliance'. I defeated a Natural Disaster-level Fear, unleashed an End-level Fear... and at the end, you know that the Myth-level Constellations swarmed me, threatening to kill me, right?"

Bihyung hesitated for a moment before starting to search through his slightly larger pockets.

"If you think that's all there is, you're mistaken. You might not know, but I fought the Apocalypse Dragon in another worldline. If you know what happened there..."

I briefly absorbed the Apocalypse Dragon's shockwave, but the whole fighting the Apocalypse Dragon thing was a lie. If I had done something like that, I wouldn't be here now.

[This should do, right?]

I looked at the box Bihyung had pulled out.

> —An SSS-grade skill selection box.

It wasn't S-grade, or SS-grade, but an 'SSS-grade skill' selection box.

"Hmm."

I put on a disapproving expression, but honestly, I was astonished.

Even within the same 'SSS-grade' category, 'skills' and 'items' are on different levels. For example, items have a higher category called 'Relics' above 'SSS-grade', but skills end at 'SSS-grade'.

Even Yoo Joonghyuk's [Sage's Eye] was only an SS-grade skill.

And yet, an SSS-grade skill? And a 'selection box', at that. This wasn't a losing proposition.

"SSS-level skills? Are you really going to rule with something like this?"

But who am I?

"This isn't even worth exterminating a single Natural Disaster-level Fear?"

As a member of Kim Dokja Family, known as the 'Spout of Hell', I couldn't be satisfied with this small reward.

I had to get even a little more reward...

["Okay, okay. I'll give you that too."]

I honestly didn't expect another reward to drop. Considering Bihyung's aggressive nature, I thought even a SSS-level skill selection box was excessive.

"Another box?"

"I'll tell you after seeing the original."

I checked the name of the box Bihyung had handed me.

> —Limited Edition Random Relic Box.

The random part was familiar, but the name after it was surprising.

Relic? The relic I know?

> —It was recently made into a hack-only item, but was scrapped.

I nodded at the price written on the side of the box. Even if it contained a Relic-level item, I wonder who would buy it for 5 million coins per item.

And if the Relic level is even random...

"What kind of idiot would release something like this..."

Bihyung's expression darkened suddenly.

[Ahem, anyway. Is this reward enough?]

"It'll probably just contain a bunch of Historical-grade Constellation Relics."

[...I'll give you two.]

I knew it, you punk.

[You've acquired two 'Limited Edition Random Relic Boxes'.]

Yeah, this really wasn't bad.

Even if they're Historical-grade Constellation Relics, getting two at once isn't common.

After all, relics are strengthened by the user's story, so there's no need to worry about their level.

[So now...]

"Wait a minute, what about the coins? They were on the reward list, weren't they?"

Bihyung sighed lightly and shook his finger.

[You've earned a total of 2,000,000 coins as a scenario reward!]

I doubted my eyes for a moment.

Two million coins in one go?

It was even more than the reward amount.

"I guess the Management Bureau's finances are ample these days?"

[No, that's not true. I calculated it based on your achievements. You even defeated a Natural Disaster-level Fear, and you even had a showdown with the Apocalypse Dragon, right?]

"You didn't see me have a showdown with the Apocalypse Dragon, did you?"

[You said so. I believe you.]

"Isn't there some other motive?"

Bihyung's eyes rolled at my words. He really is an easy-to-understand Dokkaebi.

"If you're honest now, I'll let you off."

Bihyung looked at me and sighed, his heart sinking.

"Did you make another mistake? Or will a disaster descend upon Murim from now on?"

I began to float a scenario I could only imagine.

If a Dokkaebi like Bihyung were to unleash such a barrage of gifts, there would naturally be a plausible scenario.

In short, a great catastrophe, like a Natural Disaster slumbering in Murim, would awaken, or Yoo Joonghyuk, suddenly transformed into a beautiful girl, would awaken as the Demon King and wreak havoc...

But the words that came out of Bihyung's mouth were completely unexpected.

[Good job refusing.]

For a moment, I fell silent, unable to grasp the implications of those words. Then Bihyung sighed again and added,

[Refusing the Recording Contract.]

914 Episode 51 8 years (6)

I paused for a moment.

Is this kid praising me for turning down a Recording Contract?

"What do you mean by that?"

Of course, Bihyung was also a 'Dokkaebi' in the <Star Stream>. A Dokkaebi who wouldn't hesitate to throw in a bunch of incarnations for an interesting 'scenarios'.

He once sacrificed his life for Kim Dokja in the main story, but that was only a part of the main story.

In other words, Bihyung couldn't have said that out of concern for my safety.

[I wanted you to refuse.]

"Didn't you grumble earlier about not choosing?"

[We Dokkaebis don't like 'Recorders of Fear'.]

I hadn't heard a detailed explanation, but I felt like I understood Bihyung's feelings.

Basically, it was the Dokkaebis' role to preside over the narrative in the <Star Stream>. They exist to open channels, manage scenarios, and produce high-quality stories.

But when these idiots, devoid of any foundation, show up out of nowhere and start arguing, saying they'll 'record the stories', it's understandable they're not happy.

[Until now, the Recorders have been prohibited from directly interfering with the scenarios. Because if they interfere and start abusing narratives, the Probability of the story becomes a mess.]

That's right. Every single 'Recorder of Fear' I've encountered so far possessed immense power.

Asmodeus, Bicheonhori, Cheon Inho... If even one of them set their mind to it, even a 'Giant Tale'-level scenario could be distorted.

And indeed, they have.

[But recently, they've broken the taboo and begun to come to the forefront of the scenarios.]

"Recording Contracts."

[That's right. The Management is deeply troubled by that. This is the first time they've interfered with a scenario in this way.]

Even in Ways of Survival, there's no mention of 'Recording Contracts'. In short, what's happening in this city right now is unprecedented across all of the Star Stream's worldlines.

"So? What are you trying to say? Are you telling me not to sign any more Recording Contracts?"

["That's not all."]

Bihyung hesitated, his face uncertain whether to reveal this, then added:

["Do you... by any chance know how a Recorder of Fear is created?"]

I recalled a conversation I had with Bicheonhori.

「【I don't know exactly how a Recorder of Fear is born. Each Recorder has a different trigger.】」

Bicheonhori said.

「【Every Recorder becomes a Recorder for a different reason.】」

At the same time, Bicheonhori expressed all of those 'triggers' in a single sentence:

「Those who harbor the potential for a record worthy of the Oldest Dream.」

Of course, I had no intention of relaying that interpretation to Bihyung, so I shamelessly feigned indifference.

"I don't know."

The stupid Dokkaebi chuckled, as if he'd expected that.

[Then I'll tell you specifically. Most of the 'Recorders of Fear' are created by those lumpy guys.]

It was an unexpected answer, so I hesitated for a moment before asking.

"Can I use [Lie Detection]?"

[I swear on the Management Bureau.]

If that idiot Dokkaebi swears on the Management Bureau, it must be real.

[Some are born naturally, but most Recorders are mass-produced by those lumpy guys. They're often born when powerful people from worldlines that failed their scenarios communicate with the 'Devil of the Horizon'.]

"Why do those lumpy guys mass-produce 'Recorders'?"

[I can't tell you that.]

I thought for a moment and then answered.

"Are all the Recorders in this city mass-produced in the same way?"

[Anyway, you're a quick-witted brat.]

"I thought something was off."

Even in that 'Fear Realm', I only encountered four 'Recorders of Fear', but in the 'New Murim District', there were far more Recorders than the Fear Realm.

But if they were all mass-produced by the Recorderd, then that would make sense.

"What do you want?"

As if he'd been waiting for me to say that, Bihyung added with a feigned solemnity.

[The Management Bureau wants you to deal with the Recorders of the 'New Murim District'.]

"Are you asking me to kill them?"

[You arrogant brat, do you think you can kill the Recorders so easily? Just preventing them from advancing to higher scenarios is enough.]

"What should I do?"

[We just need to deal with the incarnations who signed the 'Recording Contract' with them.]

I see. So that was the true purpose of the 'Exclusive Meeting'.

I grinned and asked back.

"With my bare face?"

[This city's final scenario will begin soon. Whatever story you obtain here, I'll raise its rank by one level.]

It was a radical offer.

In other words, if I obtain a Legendary Tale here, its rank will be raised to Semi-Mythical, and if I obtain a Semi-Mythical Tale, its rank will be raised to Mythical.

For someone like me, who still lacks the rank to face Mythical Constellations, the increased rank of the story I'm about to obtain was a huge boon.

"Still, the risk is too great. Is there any other support?"

[I already gave you a generous reward. Full-scale support is out of the question. Even for the Management Bureau, it's difficult to intervene in this scenario area. The likelihood is too complex due to the intervention of the Recorders here.]

"If that's the case, I can't help you. If I fail, won't it make things even more difficult for the Management Bureau?"

[...I'll tell my superiors. You can receive light support if you want. If the likelihood of fallout is somewhat mitigated...]

"A tip, like how to deal with them? Like, if there's a place they only hang out in."

[You'd know better than me. You've probably seen other Recorders, haven't you?]

I said, recalling the high-ranking Recorders I'd met in the 'Fear Realm'.

"At least their faces."

["Hmm. I heard there's a subspace only Recorders can access... Well, I'm not a Recorder myself, so I don't know for sure."]

A subspace only Recorders can access?

It was quite useful information, so I decided to memorize it.

"Okay, I understand."

[So, you'll accept the request? I'll give you a sub-scenario?]

"Honestly, the reward is a bit disappointing."

[This guy really is...]

The reward was adequate, but since I was the one in control in this situation anyway, I decided to push it a little harder.

"No, think about it. In this scenario, if I obtain a Semi-Mythical or Mythical Tale, it's a gain, but if I obtain a Historical Tale, wouldn't it be a loss? Even if I raise the story level by one, it's only a Legendary one."

[No, there's no way the story you obtain here will be Historical. And a Legendary story is good, too...]

"Anyway, from my current perspective, there's no reason to clash with the Recorders. It's much more profitable to just sit back and relax before ascending, and that's why I've already prepared a Reincarnator's bus for that purpose."

[A Reincarnator's bus?]

"There is something like that."

Of course, I had no intention of just sitting back and relaxing before ascending, but still, it's all about the way you throw your cards.

I thought this would increase the reward by at least one point, but Bihyung's expression was surprisingly strange.

[Hmm. I didn't expect that. I thought you'd harbor a greater grudge against the Recorders than anyone else.]

"Grudge? What are you talking about?"

[Have you already forgotten what happened at the Recycling Center?]

I pondered what happened at the Recycling Center.

There, I confronted Lycaon, the fearsome Recorder, but I didn't particularly harbor any resentment towards him. In fact, I felt a sense of gratitude towards him.

[What? You didn't know until now, didn't you? You know the powers of the Recorders, right?]

I briefly recalled my encounter with Cheon Inho and answered casually.

"They're Recorders, so they'd record."

[That's right. When Recorders record the 'past,' it becomes 'history.' Then what if they record the 'future'?]

Recording the future?

[Anyway, you can't remember what happened back then. You're truly…]

My expression hardened involuntarily.

Future records.

I knew better than anyone else what they meant.

"Are you talking about [Fate]?"

A mischievous smile appeared on Bihyung's face. On the Star Ladder, and at the Recycling Center, I was sentenced to [Fate].

And in return for that Fate, I lost my Eldest Brother, and I even became an outcast.

A rage slowly began to boil deep within my heart. The image of my brother, repeatedly reduced to misery to fight that damned Fate, was still vivid before my eyes.

"The 'Fate' proclaimed by the Great Nebulae back then... does it have anything to do with the Recorders here?"

[Exactly.]

Bihyung laughed, his lips parted.

[Now, in this 'New Murim District', all the 'Recorders' who once wrote your 'Fate' at the request of the Great Nebulae are gathered.]

---

[You have accepted the new 'Sub-Scenario.']

After my private meeting with Bihyung, I stepped out of his cap.

[The Constellation, 'Bald Leader of Justice', asks where the hell you've been.]

[The Constellation, 'God of Wine and Ecstasy', whines that he too wants to see the Dokkaebi's cap.]

[The Recorder who likes squinty characters says that squinty characters are indeed full of secrets.]

The gazes of the Constellations and Recorders poured in as soon as I left. It wasn't surprising, considering I'd caused such an incident at the Auction House and then suddenly disappeared.

Bihyung's 'Dokkaebi Communication' rang in my ears.

—Then please take care of me. Contact me if anything happens.

'Bihyung, one last question.'

—What is it?

'Where are my comrades now?'

The information from the Recorders and the lump was important, but this was the question I most wanted to ask.

—I can't tell you. It violates the probability.

If the probability was limited even though he was merely revealing the location of incarnations, the reason was obvious.

「My colleagues have become beings of such great stature.」

After a brief silence, Bihyung spoke.

—Instead, I'll show you this.

A light finger snap was heard from somewhere.

[This week's Emotion Rankings have closed.]

[You have received the required reward.]

[You have received 500 D-Coins.]

A screen appeared beyond the D-Coins pouring from the air.

[Your Emotion Rankings will be recorded in the 'All-Time Emotion Rankings'.]

All-Time Emotion Rankings.

I checked the list before me.

As expected, there were names I recognized.

| |
|---|
| 3rd place, A Pile of Tentacles from a Natural Disaster-level Outer God, 9000 D-Coins, Kang Ilhun. |

Kang Ilhun, the name of Killer King.

6th place, the right and left arms of a Natural Disaster-level Outer God, 8,500 D coins, Lee Seyeon.

Lee Seyeon, Yerin's name.

8th place, part of the lower body of a highly damaged Natural Disaster-level Outer God, 8,100 D coins, Min Jiwon.

9th place, 85 low-damage Disaster-level Outer Gods, 7,800 D coins, Lee Dansu.

Even the names of the Editor and the Dansu ahjussi.

There lay the history of my colleagues. The history of their struggles and survival in this horrific hell.

The reason Bihyung showed this was clear. He was telling me:

See with my own eyes what happened over the past eight years. And as a latecomer, I must diligently follow in their footsteps.

Then, a message rang in my ear.

[Your current emotional ranking is '2nd'.]

[Would you like to register your name in the rankings?]

Emotional ranking 2nd.

That meant there was another person above me.

I checked the rankings again.

1st place, unidentified nail fragment, 10,000 D coins, ■■■.

The submitter's name was filtered.

I looked at the filtered name, and then again.

—Get a grip. This city's final scenario will begin tonight.

I nodded and said.

'Don't worry.'

At least in this scenario, I won't be the one who needs to get my head straight.

915 Episode 51 8 years (7)

---

Everyone has a favorite line from a story.

「Because 'I' am, after all, made up of things that aren't me.」

That line appears in chapter 252 of the main story.

The scene where Kim Dokja proves himself by being caught up in the 'real Kim Dokja' scenario.

When asked to choose his 'favorite scene', Kyung Sein always chose that scene. Even if no one else chose it as a memorable scene or line, he always chose it as one.

Whenever he saw his own memorable scene, which often received only one vote, Kyung Sein felt as if it had been written just for him.

Why did he love that scene so much?

「"Hey, bug."」

Was it because he'd been short since childhood?

「"Aren't you going to answer?"」

Or was it because his friends bullied him for being pale and thin?

「"Hey, stop harassing Minwoo. Do you want to get suspended again?"」

Or perhaps it was because he wanted to believe that all the realities surrounding him weren't 'real'.

「Across the countless fleeing 'Kim Dokjas', there was a man who knew the 'real Kim Dokja'.」

Kyung Sein pondered over that chapter for a long time, even writing it down somewhere.

He simply loved that scene.

He couldn't quite put it into words, but at least the Kim Dokja in that scene seemed to be speaking to him.

No one knows who you really are. Only you know that.

That's why Kyung Sein, who rarely read books, read that story to the end.

It wasn't as brutal as Kim Dokja's 'Ways of Survival', but it was definitely the novel he'd read the most in his life.

After finishing it once, he picked out his favorite parts and read it again, leaving comments, something he rarely did.

—I like Jung Heewon.

Perhaps that was the first online comment he left.

He, who had been afraid to even step outside his house, finally spoke out into the world for the first time.

And perhaps that one word changed his world.

—Will you come to our community?

People who were interested in his comments responded and invited him to join the fan community.

—But is your concept just to leave Jung Heewon comments all the time?

In the community, Kyung Sein could talk with people about his favorite novels. He learned how to debate and share opinions.

—But concept comments should be fun.

Perhaps countless Kim Dokjas taught him. How to speak with consideration. How to maintain eye contact when speaking. How to listen carefully before speaking.

—And before you joke, read the other comments.

The readers there taught him the obvious things his parents and teachers hadn't taught him.

He thinks it was around that time that he started exercising.

And strangely, his body began to grow. With each push-up or squat, his muscles began to grow.

As his size grew, the friends who had bullied him naturally disappeared.

Perhaps he was too amazed by this small miracle.

From then on, Kyung Sein would post photos of his muscles and write a comment about the day on the fan community every day. It was his way of surviving a life marred by minor tragedies.

"He's alive, right?"

And now, by his side were his comrades, each surviving in their own way.

"Of course he's alive."

A gentleman, yet warm-hearted, Dansu ahjussi.

"Don't worry. If he was in danger, there's no way he wouldn't have contacted me."

Killer King Cha Sungwoo, brimming with an inexplicable confidence.

"He's alive."

Cha Yerin, blunt but caring for her comrades more than anyone else.

"A new scenario will open soon. Let's prepare in advance, readers-ssi."

Even Ye Hyunwoo, calmer than anyone else, prepared for the future. Even though he possessed a character in a novel and faced death at any moment, he thought it would be okay as long as he had his companions.

He just had to read the end of this world together once more.

That was how it was, he believed.

「That day, before the 'Great Hall' opened.」

The day the 'Great Hall' opened in the sky, and 'nameless things' poured out from within. The day the Korean Peninsula's incarnations were annihilated in a scream.

The day when great Outer Gods they could never have imagined looked down upon Earth.

Perhaps, that day, the world of Kyung Sein ended.

The despair of never seeing the end of the scenarios. The fear that this world was not the 『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』 they knew.

"Dokja-ssi—"

Everyone cried out a name.

They knew he wasn't the Kim Dokja they knew. Still, they believed that if he was the 'Kim Dokja' they knew, he could solve this situation.

Tsutsutsutsutsu—

Then one day, a storm raged through the vast sky of the scenarios. A meteor fell from the sky.

"The protagonist has returned."

Killer King spoke those words, his voice as if possessed by something. It was truly strange. If Kim Dokja had returned, he would have said, 'Kim Dokja has returned', or 'He has returned'.

But Killer King spoke this way, 'The protagonist has returned'.

Behind Killer King stood someone.

「Kim Dokja was there.」

His face, his expression, his clothes—it was unmistakably Kim Dokja.

But at that moment, Kyung Sein knew. The phrase he loved was speaking to him.

The Kim Dokja standing before him now was—

"My name is."

It wasn't the Kim Dokja they had been waiting for.

"I'm ■■■."

---

With a deep exhale, Kyung Sein woke up. Her spine clenched from the cold sweat she had shed. It was all a dream. A dream from a distant time, when it was still acceptable for Kim Dokja to be called Kim Dokja.

"Ah."

Kyung Sein stared blankly into space before opening the notebook in her arms. It was the notebook she'd often open whenever she wanted to write something down. Crooked handwriting lingered on the notebook, long since it'd been opened for the last time.

I

ultimately

was not me.

The sentences she once loved now remained only in fragments. Kyung Sein couldn't recall the original form of those sentences, what they had been like.

The stories she loved were no longer in this world.

「"Sein-ssi."」

Kim Dokja, his face as pale as snow. With a calm gaze, the protagonist, who had perfectly solved every scenario that followed, spoke to her.

「"Please stay here."」

「"Why, why can't I?"」

She knows she's lacking. She knows her attributes are ordinary compared to her colleagues, and her skill proficiency is low. She trained and trained, wanting to become a tank like Lee Hyunsung, but she knew she still couldn't keep up with him.

Still, she worked hard.

She believed that if she worked hard, they would definitely recognize it.

「"We need someone to guard this place."」

There are stories like that in the world.

Like her muscle-building post, which was particularly unpopular, there are stories that, no matter how hard she writes, are rarely read.

「"Why do you say that? You—"」

She knew why Kim Dokja wanted to leave her here.

It was because she was weak. Because she wasn't helpful to the party.

But if that was the case, she wanted him to be honest. She didn't want to be left miserably like this.

「"I can do it too."」

So Kyung Sein said.

She spoke clearly, as if commenting on a story that had changed.

「"The Kim Dokja I know doesn't talk like you. You—"」

She knew she shouldn't say that, but she insisted.

「"You're not the Kim Dokja I remember."」

The next moment, she was standing on a pristine snowfield.

Amidst the flurry of snow that covered everything, he, the protagonist, ■■■, spoke.

「"Of course. Because I have no intention of becoming like that being."」

A pure white hand slowly approached.

「"Who on earth are you?"」

Kyung Sein was terrified of the being before her. This man, who called himself Kim Dokja, this protagonist, so different from her memories, she was terrified.

「"Someone called me 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'."」

A cold hand touched her forehead. Her mind felt tangled, and then she felt something being sucked out of her. She felt as if something she held dear was being taken away from her.

And after a moment, he withdrew his hand.

「"Isn't every fragment useful… Then, even if you collect a hundred percent..."」

An incomprehensible murmur.

Kyung Sein slowly knelt, exhausted. She didn't know what had happened. However, the moment his hand touched her forehead, she felt something like her essence tangled.

She was no longer the same Kyung Sein as before. Soon, a bitter cold washed over her.

「"I repeat. Please remain here, Sein-ssi. You do not need to proceed to the next scenario."」

In the biting cold, Kyung Sein nodded.

「"From now on, your existence has only one purpose."」

A talisman suddenly appeared before her eyes. It was a transmission pad. An item that sent messages from lower-level scenarios to higher-level ones.

「"Someday, 'he' will appear again in the scenarios. Then tear this paper."」

Kyung Sein nodded helplessly.

「"If you complete this mission, I will send you back to your original world after all scenarios are over."」

Kyung Sein slowly flipped through her notebook. Tucked into the end of it was the transmission pad she had received that day.

As she slowly picked up the transmission pad, the note hidden behind the talisman caught her eye.

「The real Kim Dokja.」

Those narrowed eyes she'd missed so much. His signature grin, as if he'd known it would happen.

Thinking back to that face, Kyung Sein felt like she was about to burst into tears at any moment.

"Why on earth…"

The person she'd once waited for more than anyone else.

But now…

"Inho-ssi, why did you show up now?"

The person she'd hoped wouldn't show up more than anyone else.

"It's too late now. Nothing can change."

Kyung Sein slowly picked up the paper.

All she had to do was tear this up. Just tear this up and tell him the truth, and her mission would be complete.

Her story ended here.

Kyung Sein fiddled with the transmission book over and over again with trembling hands, then sighed deeply. Then, biting her lip, she folded the book neatly back up and tucked it away in her notebook.

'I know I can't change anything.'

Just because he's back now, nothing will change.

The scenario is irreversible now. The 'being' that took the name of Kim Dokja is a great being that even the Constellations of that great nebula cannot approach.

The world is on the verge of ending.

And yet.

"This kind of scene doesn't exist…"

Kyung Sein staggered to her feet. She had to see him again. She had to tell him. He had to leave this city immediately, and that he shouldn't be promoted to a higher-level scenario. She had to tell him that.

Kugugugugu!

A sudden seismic wave. The house shook precariously.

"Executive!"

Namgung Myung, who had hurriedly opened the door and entered, had a pale complexion.

Kyung Sein nodded and stepped outside. A group of incarnations had gathered in front of the building.

"Is this the right place?"

"I'm sure. I heard he joined here."

"He's crazy. Of all the companies…"

The moment she saw them, she realized.

<Veda Biotech>.

They were incarnations of a major corporation.

"Be careful. They say the supervisor at <Tamra Heavy Industries> was taken by that guy."

"That must be because their supervisors are terrible."

"Oh, there you are."

The incarnations' attention focused on Kyung Sein's presence.

Kyung Sein took a deep breath and spoke.

"Great Heroes, what brings you here?"

"Huh, are you trying to play it safe?"

No matter how small the company was, Kyung Sein was still an executive. Yet, their attitude lacked the slightest respect for Executives. The Breaking The Sky Master, who had been lying on the floor, growled and stood up at the sight of such rudeness.

A man who appeared to be a supervisor from <Vedas Biotech> stepped forward and said,

"Give me back the D-coins you stole."

"What are you talking about?"

Kyung Sein wondered what he was talking about.

"You're not trying to play it safe, are you? I'm talking about the D-coins you obtained by exploiting a bug during the day! Because of that, I couldn't receive my ranking reward."

"I don't know what you're saying, but I think there's been a misunderstanding."

"You don't seem to understand."

The one who spoke was a man standing at the back of the group.

As the man slowly approached, the incarnations in the area parted like waves. The moment he confirmed the energy emanating from the man's entire body, Kyung Sein swallowed involuntarily.

'Executive level.'

There was no doubt. The being before him was an executive of <Vedas Biotech>.

A being with a high degree of attunement to the 'Narrative-grade sponsor', or perhaps a level comparable to the initial Narrative-grade.

In her current state, he was an opponent she could not face even if she were to revive from death.

"What happened for a Vedas Executive…"

"I was harmed by an employee of your company at the daytime auction house. I demand compensation for the damages."

As expected.

Kyung Sein asked, her expression hardening.

"Compensation, how much…?"

"50,000 D Coins."

Kyung Sein gaped at the unrealistic sum.

Why would they demand such a large amount of D Coins as 'compensation'? What kind of 'damage' would have to be incurred to justify such a large amount?

Perhaps that was why.

"Why are you laughing?"

Kyung Sein began to chuckle. The laughter soon grew louder, then more exaggerated.

"I asked why you were laughing."

Kyung Sein couldn't explain why she was laughing either. Perhaps she knew that this laughter would lead her to her death, yet she couldn't stop.

A strange sense of déjà vu kept creeping up on her. A premonition that something major was about to happen.

She knew this feeling well.

"I feel a strange sense of nostalgia."

It was fine if this was nothing more than a vain hope. Simply experiencing this sensation once more was enough.

"If you laugh one more time—"

"Why would someone laugh?"

It wasn't Kyung Sein who spoke those words. When did it start? A man stood on the fence of a house.

"She's laughing because you're funny."

It was a man with a narrowed-eyed smile, one that Kyung Sein knew very well.

—Inho-ssi.

Kyung Sein stopped laughing and sent a [Transmission].

—Run now. We must get out of this city.

But the man leaped lightly from the fence and landed beside her.

He saw the incarnations before him whispering.

"It's him."

"Really?"

The officer slowly raised his right hand.

"Deal with it."

And a terrifying wave of energy swept over the area. Before she could react, the Executive-level entity bombarded them.

Kyung Sein screamed and stepped forward.

But a lantern blocked her path.

Surprisingly, the owner of the lantern easily deflected the Executive-level bombardment.

The officers and employees shouted in shock.

The man, still not turning around, spoke.

"Don't worry, Sein-ssi."

It was clearly the back of the head Kyung Sein remembered. Nevertheless, the moment she saw it up close, Kyung Sein flinched slightly.

Even the automatically repairable 'Infinite Dimensional Subspace Coat' couldn't heal the sword marks.

Countless scars remained on his coat.

"Eight years."

Kyung Sein finally realized.

Just as eight years had passed for them, the man before him had also survived eight years somewhere. And finally, he returned to this story.

"I'm quite strong now."

The expression of the protagonist she had loved was there.

916 Episode 52 Mad Sword Emperor (1)

---

The Recorder of Fear—the 'Unchanging One' had long forgotten his true name.

But even he, despite this, never forgot, and always remembered one thing.

It was the time when he first 'possessed' a character in this world.

He had possessed someone in the <Star Stream> 158 years ago, and just before he possessed, he was leaving a comment online.

The comment he had written was on an article about an actor's donation.

—No one knew. Yoo Joonghyuk had made several anonymous donations to an unknown organization...

The headline was designed to spark controversy. How could an article about anonymous donations be published without anyone knowing?

However, since a similarly critical comment had already taken the top spot, the 'Unchanging One' had no choice but to write a different comment.

—Isn't he donating to avoid taxes anyway?

Of course, the 'Unchanging One' had no idea whether donations were truly beneficial for tax savings. But since everyone else said it, he assumed it was true, and believed it was right. No. Whether it was right or not wasn't even his concern in the first place.

—What's so great about donating his surplus money? Isn't it all just image-making?

There are many reasons why the 'Unchanging One' would write such a comment.

It could be because he'd been studying for the civil service exam, receiving allowance from his parents for three years after his military discharge.

Or perhaps it was because he'd confessed to his only female friend at 2 a.m. a week earlier and been rejected.

Or perhaps it was simply because his mother, on her way to work this morning, casually suggested, "Why don't you try working part-time?"

Or perhaps he just didn't like the actor's handsome face that day.

In any case, the important thing was that the 'Unchanging One' left a comment that day, and even more importantly, someone had left a reply to his comment. "If you were born handsome, you could live like ash, right?"

But the 'Unchanging One' was a person who didn't know what was important in his life, so he wrote another comment.

"Yeah?"

Two simple consonants. Looking back, those two consonants changed his life.

"Crazy?"

The next day, when he woke up, something like a fantasy novel unfolded in his life.

[The main scenario begins.]

An apocalypse where people must kill each other to survive.

The 'Unchanging One' realized he had possessed someone in another world. Fortunately, with 15 years of experience as a webtoon reader, the 'Unchanging One' quickly realized his predicament.

"Abilities, what kind of abilities?"

Typically, these 'possession events' grant abilities.

The moment he looked in the mirror, the 'Unchanging One' realized what his abilities were.

"What the hell?"

He had become handsome. And his good looks proved quite useful as the scenario progressed.

He easily earned most favors, and despite his weak combat prowess, he was able to recruit party members without difficulty. Even his poor performance in the scenario led to some constellations showing interest in him.

The 'Unchanging One' chose the one that seemed the strongest among them.

[A constellation that Likes to Change Gender smiles brightly.]

Thus, the 'Unchanging One' became the embodiment of the 'Constellation hat Likes to Change Gender'.

Although he endured the humiliation of being forcibly gender-changed every three days, simply being able to have a sponsor was a great blessing.

He had to survive somehow.

Simply because the world had changed, the 'Unchanging One' devoted himself to his own survival, something he had never cared about in decades.

As he diligently killed people and plundered items, the 'Unchanging One' thought to himself,

Perhaps, here, he could live the life he wanted. He might actually become as great as the actor he envied.

"Supreme King! Supreme King! Supreme King!"

That's what he thought until he saw his face.

"Yoo Joonghyuk! Yoo Joonghyuk!"

When he first heard the name, the 'Unchanging One' couldn't believe his ears.

Why, why was that actor here?

On the other hand, he was also delighted.

Perhaps because his face had become more handsome than in his previous life.

The 'Unchanging One' mustered up his courage for the first time.

"Are you possessed too? It's me!"

"..."

"You're Yoo Joonghyuk, right? You donate a lot... I'm a fan!"

Yoo Joonghyuk glanced at him with his golden eyes, then continued on his way without paying him any attention.

After that, the 'Unchanging One' never saw Yoo Joonghyuk again.

Perhaps it was only natural. The 'Unchanging One' was desperately struggling to survive in the lower scenarios, while Yoo Joonghyuk was a monster, fighting fearsome constellations as he moved from one scenario to another.

Even when the environment changes, humans don't change. He may have become handsome, but he was still the 'Unchanging One'.

And instead of chasing Yoo Joonghyuk, who had turned his back on him, the 'Unchanging One' chose to remain in the lower scenarios, resenting and cursing him.

"I knew you'd be like that, you piece of trash!"

When Yoo Joonghyuk was attacked by giant nebulae and destroyed in scenario 73, the 'Unchanging One' thought his wish had been granted.

But the 'Unchanging One' didn't know.

What the protagonist's death in this world would mean to an extra like him.

[That's the end of your story. It's been fun, poor child.]

Everyone. The scenarios failed, and the universe perished.

He prayed his sponsor.

I want to live. I don't want to die like this."

His sponsor smiled and said,

[Don't worry. Your usefulness doesn't end here. You've lived the life you wanted, so now pay the price of your contract.]

And when he came to his senses, he received the following message,

[You have successfully concluded a contract with 'Wenny Man'.]

[You have become a 'Recorder of Fear'.]

[Your modifier is 'Unchanging One'.]

Thus, the 'Unchanging One' became a 'Recorder of Fear,' floating through worldlines under the orders of the 'Wenny Man.'

And now, you, reading this story, are probably wondering:

Why on earth do I have to read 3,013 characters of this 'Unchanging One's' story?

The reason is simple.

Because the 'Unchanging One' is thinking about his own records in real time.

"How long do I have to keep recalling these records?"

In case the 'Oldest Dream' were to pry into their hearts, all 'Recorders of Fear' were obligated to constantly recall their history in a corner of their minds.

Of course, the 'Unchanging One' was certain that the Supreme Being would not pry into them, but it was still a possibility.

'If I record this scenario well, I too can rise to a higher scenario.'

Every 'Recorder of Fear' rose in stature the more magnificent the story they recorded.

'Goodbye to this tedious Murim.'

The mission he received from the Hunchback was to assist the ascension of an incarnation from <Vedas Biotech>.

He had signed a recording contract with <Vedas Biotech> executive 'Yoon Hyunseok' and was tasked with recording him.

「Executive of <Vedas Biotech>. King of the Hell Yoon Hyunseok. The contracted constellation is 'Parrot of Desire'.」

The constellation's description was a bit odd, but it was nonetheless a Narrative-grade constellation of <Vedas>.

Indeed, Yoon Hyunseok was a powerful figure, not only nicknamed 'King of the Hell', but also occasionally mentioned in 「The 100 Strongest People」, written by the high-ranking Recorder, 'The Fox Who Commands the Sky'.

In other words, from the perspective of the 'Unchanging One', Yoon Hyunseok was a convenient figure who 'could be written roughly'.

「Executive Yoon Hyunseok frowned and glared at the unidentified man. He had narrow eyes and a pale face, and he was someone he didn't like at all.」

To be precise, that was the case until a moment ago.

「Yoon Hyunseok pursed his lips and thought, 'He withstood my [King of the Hell Fist]? There's no way that's possible.'」

Yoon Hyunseok was an Executive-level incarnation, considered a potential next ascendant alongside <Olympus Technology>'s Reinheit and <Black Cloud Foundation>'s Cho Jicheol.

The incarnation of a small business, a first for him, blocked the Executive's attack.

'What is this?'

「King of the Hell Fist was the highest-level martial arts skill possessed by <Vedas Biotech>. It was definitely not a skill a random incarnation could block.」

「The narrow-eyed man grinned as if nothing had happened.」

The 'Unchanging One' glared at the narrow-eyed man, wondering.

Does he have a backer?

He'd suspected something was off from the start. Why would he suddenly show up and visit the <■■■ Company>? Why would he appraise the hair of an 'End-level Outer God' at an Auction House? The Auction House incident, in particular, was so improbable that the 'Unchanging One' had to work with the other Recorders to dismiss it as a 'bug'.

'There's no way he could have emerged from the Fear Realm.'

As far as the 'Unchanging One' knew, the only incarnation to return from the Fear Realm eight years ago was the 'Breaking the Sky Sword Saint'.

To stop the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint from running wild, all the Recorders in the city had to work together to enforce the 'Record'. As a result, the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint was now imprisoned in the city's underground prison.

'Then is he an irregular like the Mad Sword Emperor?'

Pulling his lips tightly, the 'Unchanging One' concluded.

'Whatever he is, I will eliminate him here and now.'

Although he lacked the penmanship of the high-ranking Recorders who once existed in the Fear Realm, the records he wrote possessed a probable, compelling force, akin to a small fate.

['Record' begins!]

Especially when a powerful figure like Yoon Hyunseok was the subject, his power grew even stronger.

「Yoon Hyunseok glared at the narrow-eyed man for a moment before gathering his composure. The fact that he hadn't collapsed despite being struck by his Hades's fist meant that his opponent possessed at least the strength of a supervisor—perhaps even an executive.」

Just like the day he left a comment on Yoo Joonghyuk's article, the 'Unchanging One' continued writing without even realizing what he was writing.

「He decided not to let his guard down. From now on, he's assuming his opponent is an 'Executive' level.」

In fact, Yoon Hyunseok was already strong enough even without this. He was a powerful figure in the early stages of the Narrative-grade, capable of drawing on up to eighty percent of the power of his sponsor.

With the help of the Recorder, this powerful man began to unleash his full potential.

「'I'll activate [King of The Hell Sacred Method] to its fullest potential and finish him off with [King of The Hell Fist]'s transcendent secret technique, [King of The Hell Sovereign of the Pure Garden].'」

「'If not twice, I'll use it three times. If not three times, I'll use it four times. I won't let my guard down even in the slightest.'」

「Yoon Hyunseok's [King of The Hell Fist] swept through the entire estate. Thick smoke rose. It was a brutal bombardment, leaving not a single ant to survive.」

The 'Unchanging One' nodded.

As expected, his handwriting is exquisite.

He continued writing, concluding.

A sentence that determines the character's life or death.

It was time to write his favorite scene.

「The corpse of a man with narrow eyes, horribly torn apart...」

That's when something strange happened.

「...Yoon Hyunseok smiled bitterly, anticipating what lay scattered everywhere.」

'What?'

That wasn't the sentence he had intended to write. He clearly intended to write, 「The horribly torn, narrow-eyed man's corpse lay scattered everywhere.」

The Unchanging One furrowed his brow and attempted to write again.

「The thick smoke cleared, and the horribly dismembered corpse of the narrow-eyed man…」

Tsutsutsutsu!

「…Yoon Hyunseok smiled bitterly, anticipating what would unfold before his eyes.」

The 'Unchanging One' gaped blankly.

The sentence he had just been about to write was, 「The thick smoke cleared, and the horribly dismembered corpse of the narrow-eyed man came into view.」

But then another strange sentence appeared.

And that wasn't the end.

Sentences continued to appear randomly.

「Yoon Hyunseok thought, 'Did it harm him?'」

It was a sentence he had never written before.

「The thick fog cleared, and the narrow-eyed man appeared, unharmed.」

The 'Unchanging One' stared blankly at the continuing record, his fingers beginning to tremble.

The sentences he had desperately written were disintegrating, and new sentences were being typed on top of them.

「The narrow-eyed man, who had been smiling faintly, slowly opened his eyes.」

The record had escaped his control.

The significance of this fact was clear.

「The man's gaze was clearly focused on Yoon Hyunseok. He was heading towards him, but what he was seeing wasn't Yoon Hyunseok.」

To that narrow-eyed man before his eyes—

「"Were you there?"」

An even more powerful 'Recorder of Fear' was attached to him.

917 Episode 52 Mad Sword Emperor (2)

I'd fought a Recorder of Fear before. To be precise, it wasn't me; it was the combined efforts of the Demon King of Salvation and Yoo Joonghyuk.

Cheon Inho, in the 40th Round.

I tried to recall his fighting style.

Cheon Inho, a high-ranking Recorder nicknamed 'The One Who Deceived the Stars', had never manifested 'powers' like this before.

「Yoon Hyunseok, calming down his confusion, reconsidered his thoughts. He's strong. At least 'Executive level.' Perhaps even strong enough to rival the 'Ascendants.' But how could that be? Someone who only recently entered the city could be strong enough to rival the Ascendants?」

Sentences flowed hurriedly before my eyes. Naturally, they weren't mine.

「That can't be true. If there were such an incarnation, he would have been chosen by a 'Giant Nebula' and summoned to the higher-level scenarios long ago.」

I'd seen him somewhere before, and the flow of his sentences was plausible.

With this flow, the conclusion of the story he was trying to tell was clear.

「The narrow-eyed man in front of me is definitely using some kind of trick.」

Tsutsutsu, I felt the sentences he had written cling unpleasantly to my body.

「The power to record fate.」

The power to 'realize' the sentences he had written.

Thinking back, Asmodeus, who had taken over the 'movie theater', possessed similar reality-altering abilities.

And crucially.

[Special skill, '□□', twitches.]

My [□□] possessed a similar power.

"Die!"

An Executive from <Vedas Biotech>, imbued with demonic energy in both hands, launched a flanking attack. [King of The Hell Sacred Method], [King of The Hell Fist], and even the secret technique [King of The Hell Sovereign of the Pure Garden].

On the surface, it was a repetition of the attacks he had unleashed earlier, but the words behind it were different.

「Yoon Hyunseok's lungs heaved deeply and heavily, and the breath he inhaled filled his body, boiling as if ready to explode at any moment. His eyes flashed with an unfamiliar color, transcending the enemy before him, and every sound that brushed his ears became distant and faint, like dull ripples in water.」

Wow.

「Yoon Hyunseok slowly clenched his fist. Each knuckle cracked, and thin, blue veins crawled up the back of his hand like living snakes.」

Even its name was a weighty and solemn martial art—[King of The Hell Fist]. A single, annihilating blow that completely devours and destroys a person's existence."」

Looking at the rambling sentences, I couldn't help but be amazed.

It's been a long time since I've seen such a 'brick paragraph'.

Kugugugugu!

The [King of The Hell Fist]'s powerful wind pounded my entire body like a drum, accompanied by a thunderous sound.

"Kuaaaah! Executive!"

The excited man seemed oblivious to the fact that his fellow <Vedas Biotech> subordinates were being blown away by the powerful wind.

「How much of a blast did he unleash? Yoon Hyunseok, standing in the dust-filled courtyard, muttered.」

"Did I harm him?"

「For a moment, Yoon Hyunseok flinched. 'Why did I say something like that?'」

'Because I wrote it.'

As if I had been waiting, I dusted myself off and stood up, and Yoon Hyunseok looked genuinely flustered.

[The story, 'Rewriter of Fate', lets out a loud cry!]

I survived the fate of those 'Giant Nebulae'.

If I, who am so desperate, can't overcome a few sentences scribbled by a single Recorder, that's absurd.

[The 'Recorder of Fear' writing 'Vedas Biotech' is astonished.]

[The 'Recorder of Fear' writing 'Vedas Biotech' surreptitiously glances around and calls out to another 'Recorder'.]

Another Recorder?

"Inho-ssi, run."

Kyung Sein, who had been observing the situation from behind me, stepped forward.

"The Executives aren't simply scary because they're strong. Inho-ssi, you might not know this, but each of those guys has a 'Recorder' attached to them."

I nodded in understanding. But perhaps thinking I hadn't fully grasped it, Kyung Sein continued.

"Right now, there's only one Recorder, but if they increase, even Inho-ssi won't be able to stop them. I'm fine, so run. The other Executives will soon come rushing in. If the Recorders gather and [Fate] is unleashed—"

"It's fine."

"That's what Inho-ssi says without knowing! [Fate] is…!"

"I know. [Fate] is so damn annoying."

A thunderous clap of thunder ripped through the air. The next moment, the eastern sky seemed to flash, and two figures soared through the air. Kyung Sein's face, seeing their faces, was tinged with despair.

As if to add to Kyung Sein's expression, Namgung Myung spoke.

"Benefactor, these are the next Ascendants of <Vedas Biotech>."

The Ascendants. Incarnations of the same caliber as Cho Jincheol and Reinheit had appeared again.

"Did you summon us, King of The Hell?"

"You've created another troublesome situation."

On the surface, it seemed like a normal conversation, but I could read the exchanges taking place behind the scenes between the recorders.

[The 'Recorder of Fear' who writes <Vedas Biotech> reveals his alias!]

[The Recorder of Fear, 'Unchanging One', asks for help!]

As Kyung Sein had said, each Executive-level figure had a 'Recorder' attached to them.

[The Recorder of Fear, 'One Who Writes Youth', responds to the call for help.]

[The Recorder of Fear, 'One Who Doesn't Like Twists', responds to the call for help.]

"Hmm, I've seen him somewhere."

"Could it be that you couldn't handle that one kid on your own?"

The King of the Hell, Yoon Hyunseok, frowned and retorted.

"Don't underestimate him. He withstood my [King of the Hell Fist]."

"King of the Hell Fist?"

For a moment, I saw the three Executives exchange glances. A moment later, Yoon Hyunseok stepped forward again and asked me,

"What is your identity?"

"I'm an employee of this company."

"Who asked you that? How come you're under the protection of a 'Recorder'? Are you dispatched from a Giant Nebula?"

It seems the Recorder, known as the 'Unchanging One,' has already spread word about me.

I feigned a shrug and said,

"I'm affiliated with a Nebula, of course."

"Which Nebula?"

"<Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint>."

The three men frowned again.

"Are you kidding us? I've never heard of a nebula like that."

I gave a wry smile. Still, they were Executives, so they were quite clever. They realized I had a hidden plan, so they were deliberately stalling.

[The Recorders of Fear are starting a 'Record Discussion'!]

The Recorders are probably trying to buy time to declare their definitive [Fate]. Of course, I had no intention of leaving it that way.

"Stop wasting time. Isn't this what you all came here for anyway?"

I held out my hand in the air and showed the D Coins I'd accumulated.

The D Coins emitted a dazzling light into the air, and the Executives' expressions changed.

"So there was a reason the King of the Hell called us."

"You were trying to keep all that for yourself?"

King of the Hell Yoon Hyunseok frowned at the Executives' rebuke.

"If you help me now, I'll divide it into three equal parts. I've already spoken with the Recorders."

"Good. But are you seriously planning a fight here? The other companies will notice."

"I asked the Recorders to set up a barrier."

Namgung Myung warned about the Executives, watching them slowly approach.

"Benefactor, be careful. I heard that with three Executives, they can hunt even 'Disaster-level Fears.'"

Disaster-level Fears.

"They're a little stronger than Kim Anna."

"Huh?"

"Stand back, Gungmyung."

At the same time, the officers charged.

A pure, magical barrage, unconcealing their own power.

It was a crude, unpolished fighting style, devoid of any subtlety, but there were plenty of them at the Narrative-level.

This is probably why, as scenarios progress, the difference in 'power' becomes a distinct difference in 'combat power'. Most incarnations would lose their fighting spirit the moment they saw the difference in power.

"You're a clever guy."

When I used [Way of the Wind] to evade the barrage, the officers' expressions became even more serious.

I calmly observed them. There were three officers in total. However, they were assigned two constellations.

[The constellation, 'Desiring Parrot', is observing you closely.]

[The constellation, 'Horse-Possessing Twins', senses a strange sense of deja vu in your fighting style.]

'Desiring Parrot' and 'Horse-Possessing Twins'. Although they hadn't appeared in the main story, they were constellations from Vedas, familiar to me through 'Ways of Survival'.

The 'Desiring Parrot' was Kamadeva, the god of love and desire.

And the 'Horse-Possessing Twins' were the 'Ashvin Twins'.

Since the twins were literally 'twins', it seemed they had struck a pact with the two Executives.

"How long do you think you can keep running away like that?"

"Aren't you just missing him?"

Since both constellations were 'Narrative-grade', if I gave them time, they might be able to deduce my identity.

I decided to change my strategy.

"Honestly, I'm a bit disappointed. I thought an Executive-level constellation would at least have a 'Lokapala'-level constellation."

[The constellation, 'Desiring Parrot', rages and increases its synchronisation with the incarnation!]

[The constellation, 'Horse-Possessing Twins', rages and increases its synchronisation with the incarnation!]

As the constellations began to reveal their powers, the recorders also seemed to be elated.

「As 'Kamadeva' raged and displayed his power, the 'Ashvin Twins' also revealed their true colors. How dare a mere incarnation mention the great 'Lokapala' and mock them? As a Constellation of <Vedas>, it was an unbearable shame.」

The feast of power exploded. Despite the pressure I was experiencing, I refused to back down or cower.

「Perhaps this fight will be my comeback.」

Until now, I had been conserving my energy to gauge their strength, but from now on, I no longer needed to.

「The [Soundproof Barrier] hanging over the area was blocking out the commotion.」

That's because those greedy 'recorders' were thoroughly concealing the story here, lest the other recorders and Constellations discover it.

[The constellations on the temporary channel are curious about what's happening in that area!]

It seems they even obscured the channel.

For me, it was a good thing.

「<Vedas Biotech>'s power began to gather. The power of each Executive was on a different level. Soon, the three incarnations, who had reached the early stages of Narrative-grade, filled the entire estate with their power.」

The full narrative of these men unfolded before my eyes, and the three Executives launched a combined barrage.

It had begun.

「The story of the 'Desiring Parrot' was included in [The Underworld]...」

「The story of the 'Horse-Possessing Twins' permeated the Executives' strength...」

The power of the 'Narrative-grade Constellations', with a synchronization rate of over eighty percent. In the past, simply seeing them up close would have been a breathtaking sight.

Taking the handle of 'Unbreakable Faith' from my waistband and gripping it, I recalled Han Sooyoung's words.

「"The ones you'll face from now on will be at least Narrative-grade Constellations."」

I was in no position to become as powerful as the other incarnations. Because I had lost my sponsor, and despite collecting five legends, for some unknown reason, I hadn't been granted the 'Stage of the Constellation'.

I had collected quite a few high-level stories, and even a fair amount of 'Kim Dokja Fragments', but I didn't know how to utilize them properly. That was me before I met Han Sooyoung.

「"Just one moment is enough. If you're stronger than them for just one moment, you'll win."」

So, when I asked how I could create that one moment, Han Sooyoung replied, looking at me as if I were pathetic.

「"You're 'Kim Dokja,' aren't you?"」

The moment I slowly blinked, a story began in my head.

[The story, 'Heir to the Eternal Name', purses his lips and complies with your request.]

[The story, 'King of a Kingless World', begins its storytelling.]

Until now, I could only borrow one story from Heir at a time.

[The story, 'He who stands against treachery', begins its storytelling.]

However, after the 1,863rd Round, I learned how to draw out a little more of his strength. For example,

[The story, 'One Who Hunted the King of Disasters', begins its storytelling.]

[The story, 'One Who Slaughtered the Deity of the Otherworld', begins its storytelling.]

For example, drawing on five 'Kim Dokja stories' at once.

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', begins its storytelling.]

Due to the excessive amplification of stories, a storm of probability began to ripple through my incarnation body.

"W-what...!"

The astonished Executives cried out.

The five stories within me shone brightly and aligned.

「This is the power of a forgotten star.」

The 'Demon King of Salvation' no longer existed in the <Star Stream>. However, that didn't mean the story of the 'Demon King of Salvation' had disappeared.

In a single moment, a method to unleash the power of the 'Constellation' through the body of an 'Incarnation.'

[The 'Forgotten Constellation' is re-embodied upon your flesh!]

The constellation that destroyed the Absolute Throne, slaughtered the returnees, defeated a calamity of the level of a Narrative-grade, slew the deity of the other world, and eventually ascended to the throne as the 73rd Demon King.

「"It's quite something? That's enough..."」

The constellation's heyday was being rewritten through my flesh.

「"It'll be at least as good as a Narrative-grade."」

With Han Sooyoung's words flowing through my mind, a storm of Baekcheong swept through the entire estate.

918 Episode 52 Mad Sword Emperor (3)

A suffocating storm of white and blue struck the manor.

The three Ascendants, their faces paling, simultaneously dodged.

A spark of probability erupted eerily from the dust.

Sentences then emerged.

「This power? Could that Constellation be...?」

「That can't be. That Constellation must have died then!」

「Nonsense...!」

Sentences that seemed to be the inner thoughts of the Recorders. They didn't seem to have been written directly by them; perhaps they were part of their subconscious.

"Everyone, wake up! The record is leaking!"

The 'Unchanging One' warned, and the intermittent lines of text abruptly cut off.

"Don't panic! It's the same as a Narrative-grade! And there are three of us!"

Perhaps not yet fully grasping the situation, the Ascendants seemed to be regrouping. I said to those guys.

"They're not the same Narrative-grade."

Five stars shining from my entire body. I gradually drew on the power contained within the Constellation.

[Your incarnation is overloaded!]

Power acquired after enduring the 1,863rd Round with Han Sooyoung.

AKA 'Demon King of Salvation' mode.

Use time is approximately 5 minutes.

Instantaneous combat power is 'late stage of Narrative-grade.'

"Wh, what... the level keeps rising!"

"Don't be intimidated by the level alone! I've heard information about that guy! That Constellation's combat prowess isn't that great compared to its level!"

I was a little surprised by the accuracy of the information.

As he said, the 'Demon King of Salvation' didn't have great combat skills compared to his level.

But the reason the 'Demon King of Salvation' is so scary isn't because of his 'powerful techniques'.

"Heir-ah, I'll borrow another story."

With a tsutsutsu, a new story was added to the constellation.

[The story, 'Insect Massacre', begins its storytelling.]

Story 「Insect Massacre」.

A story that unleashes overwhelming power when the opponent is 'weaker' than the story's owner.

The sphere surrounding my incarnation body began to glow even brighter.

[This story resonates with the constellation 'Demon King of Salvation'!]

The reason the Demon King of Salvation is so terrifying is because his story affinity is unparalleled among other Constellations.

The story's power, instantly activated, took control of the entire area through my body.

"That's—"

The Ascendants, recognizing the story, retreated.

But it was too late.

In a flash, Baekcheong's sword swung, slicing off the head of one ascendant.

"First, one."

Even if it were the 'Insect Massacre' unleashed by the 'Demon King of Salvation', this story, born of 'Historical-grade' origins, wouldn't work well against beings possessing a certain level of power.

For example, with someone like Yoo Joonghyuk, who had only faced overwhelmingly stronger opponents, 'Insect Massacre' couldn't fully demonstrate its capabilities.

But the ones before me were different.

"R-R-Run! We must inform the other Ascendants!"

The Ascendants before me had relied solely on their own power, crushing only weaker opponents. That was why they were dying now. Their history had become their weakness.

"Two."

「 Baekcheong-Ganggi, overlaid with Way of the Wind, decapitated another ascendant.」

As the two incarnations crumbled in vain, the constellation's terrifying scream echoed through the air.

[The constellation, 'Horse-Possessing Twins', suffer a massive blow and are removed from the scenario!]

Interestingly, the recorders who recorded them are in a similar situation.

[The Recorder of Fear, 'One Who Writes Youth', loses his records and enters a period of inactivity.]

[The Recorder of Fear, 'One Who Doesn't Like Twists', loses his records and enters a period of inactivity.]

It seems the Recorders of Fear who signed a 'Recording Contract' take a major blow when the contracted incarnation dies.

So that's why Bihyung said I only need to deal with the contracted incarnation.

In any case, this leaves only one thing.

I turned my head to see a terrified Yoon Hyunseok preparing to flee.

Normally, he would have thrown a tantrum, having been cornered.

[The constellation, 'Unchanging One', lowers the synchronisation with the incarnation.]

Unfortunately, the guy's sponsor seemed to have made an unusual choice.

"Spo-Sponsor?"

Feeling his own status rapidly diminishing, Executive Director Yoon Hyunseok wore a blank expression.

"Hey, wait. Don't come! I told you not to come!"

If he were to lower his synchronisation with the incarnation in this situation, his purpose was clear.

Since this was a losing battle anyway, he'd probably lower his synchronisation to lessen the damage to his true form.

But I couldn't just let him run away. I pulled the 'Four Yin Demonic Beheading Sword' from my pocket.

[The S+grade item 'Four Yin Demonic Beheading Sword' evolves into the holy relic 'Four Yin Demonic Beheading Sword.']

Originally, it could only be used with the power of the Big Dipper, but at the level of a Narrative-grade Constellation, it could be replaced with one's own Constellation.

My stories were imbued into the hilt of the 'Four Yin Demonic Beheading Sword', and a bright starlight was engraved on its blade.

[The constellation, 'Unchanging One', looks at you in astonishment!]

[The constellation, 'Unchanging One', implores you. If you do not kill its incarnation-]

Swinging the 'Four Yin Demonic Beheading Sword', it slashed at its chest.

Immediately, a horrifying scream and the Constellation's message were heard.

[The Constellation, 'Unchanging One', suffered a massive blow and was forced out of the scenario!]

Leaving Yoon Hyunseok behind, who had collapsed to the ground, spilling his stories, I retrieved the D-Coins dropped by the dead executives.

[You have acquired a total of 25,300 D-Coins.]

As expected of an Executive, he had quite a lot of D-Coins.

At this rate, I should be able to collect 100,000 D-Coins in no time.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name' is retrieving the stories you borrowed.]

Just then, the time limit for 'Demon King of Salvation' mode expired. I tasted blood on my tongue. I forced myself to remain calm and swallowed my breath.

A faint spark coursed through my body.

I guess five stories is still too much.

"Benefactor, are you alright?"

"Inho-ssi—!"

I saw Namgung Myung and Kyung Sein, who had retreated for a moment, approaching.

I held out my palm to them, signaling them not to move.

Yoon Hyunseok's lifeline was still attached.

"Keuk..."

Even though he couldn't use the power of his sponsor, I couldn't let my guard down forever.

I approached him, maintaining [Baekcheong-ganggi].

"S-Spare me, spare me… "

I looked down at him and said,

"I have some questions for your 'Recorder'."

When I mentioned the Recorder's existence, Yoon Hyunseok's body trembled as if struck by lightning.

[The Recorder of Fear, the 'Unchanging One', is staring at you!]

Then, as if waiting, a message flashed through my mind.

[The Recorder of Fear, the 'Unchanging One', expects your generosity!]

There was a reason I kept him alive in the first place. There was information I needed to uncover.

What on earth are so many Recorders plotting in this city?

What are the Dokkaebis thinking hiring these guys?

Perhaps this 'Recorder' before me knows all that information.

"What do I get if I spare you?"

[The Recorder of Fear, the 'Unchanging One', offers D-Coins!]

"That's not necessary."

Considering what happened to my Eldest Brother, I had no intention of letting any of them live.

Still, I finally got the information. I couldn't miss this opportunity to rip it out.

But the next moment, instead of his answer, I heard his inner thoughts.

「Just a little more time.」

Huh?

「It'll be 'that time' soon. If we take refuge in the 'Records Archive' before we lose the contract, we can avoid the end of writing...!」

Records Archive?

Sensing something odd, I was about to swing my sword at Yoon Hyunseok's arm when...

「Hahahaha! That's it! It's two o'clock!」

A bright light emanated from Yoon Hyunseok's entire body, and soon a translucent energy surged through him.

The next moment, what looked like a pen mark the guy had left rippled through the air. I reached out and firmly grasped it, and a message flashed before my eyes.

[Would you like to enter the 'Records Archive' in that area?]

Seeing the message, something occurred to me.

「"Hmm. I heard there's a separate space only the recorders can access..."」

It seems I've finally figured out where the 'subspace' Bihyung spoke of was.

---

A pure white, circular space reminiscent of a gigantic Colosseum. Fierce sentences were floating in real time above the space's margins.

「Blood Jade Fist Master Jo Jincheol shouted, "Damn it, Mad Sword Emperor! I won't miss this time!"」

「Paradise Emperor Reinheit gritted his teeth. "As expected, Mad Sword Emperor. she truly lives up toher reputation."」

「Nirvana, filled with madness, shouted, "Hahahaha! Where did you go!? Become one with me!"」

As various incidents unfolded in the city, a dozen or so recorders scribbled on the screens, examining each one.

「...Auction house unusual report...」

「...High-level fragment analysis. Currently assessing probability...」

What was unusual was that each recorder wore a mask. Most were blue or purple, but occasionally green and orange masks were seen.

The recorder wearing the orange mask spoke first.

【What happened to the order from the Nebula? Has there been any change?】

The green mask beside him answered.

【It's the same. I've protested several times, but they say the decision won't be reversed. The city will be closed in the next scenario.】

【Is that how it's going to end?】

The orange mask spoke in a dejected tone. The city's scenery was reflected in his eyes behind his mask.

「New Murim District.」

Until now, this city has been divided into two parts, the remnants of the fallen Fear Realm. Its lifespan was sustained by the power of the three.

The fragments of the Fear Realm that were occasionally unearthed were refined into 'D-Coins', and these 'D-Coins' were transmitted to the constellations in the higher scenarios, proving their worth.

However, the vitality of such a system was limited.

【If only the Mad Sword Emperor hadn't destroyed the Orbital Elevator...】

When the orbital elevator was destroyed, the D-Coin circulation route was blocked, and naturally, the Ascendants who had become stronger through D-Coins also found their path to ascending blocked.

A single incarnation brought the entire city's system to its knees.

【In fact, this was expected even without the Mad Sword Emperor. The story fragments found in the Fear Realm were practically nonexistent.】

The Mad Sword Emperor was merely a trigger. Perhaps the constellations in the higher scenarios simply concluded that the city had outlived its usefulness.

【That's true. Wasn't there a harvest worth using this week?】

【There was talk of an 'End-level fragment' being discovered during the day...】

【End-level fragment?】

【Yes. The situation was so absurd that the new recruits stepped in and altered the records. The 'Management Bureau' is also investigating the probability of the scale.】

【End-level fragment...】

【If that's true, the Giant Nebulae above might have changed their minds.】

The orange mask, who had been thinking so, shook his head.

【There's no way there's an End-level fragment of Fear.】

【If there were still such fragments, the 'Twelve Thrones' of <Olympus> and the 'Locapala' of <Vedas> would have already descended, turning the city upside down.】

【When is the next scenario launch?】

【It's in an hour.】

【The Mad Sword Emperor? Or are we just going to leave her alone?】

【A small [Fate] launch order will soon be issued from the 'Giant Nebulae'.】

「Fate.」

At that statement, the recorders in the room whispered.

【You're using [Fate] to deal with just one incarnation?】

【It's not just one incarnation. We've deployed Ascendants, but we still haven't caught him. It's an incarnation with combat power greater than that of a Narrative-grade heavy machine.】

The orange mask, listening to the recorders' conversation, asked.

【Where was he last seen?】

【Near <Tamra Heavy Industry>.】

【Then the objective is clear.】

The orange mask stared at the <Tamra Heavy Industry> headquarters on the screen.

In the basement of that company, a monster once sealed by the recorders was imprisoned.

The orange mask smiled faintly, as if thinking about something.

【Since it's come to this, let's create a proper finale. A scenario of this scale will surely interest even the 'high-ranking Recorders'.】

The objective of every 'Recorder of Fear' is clear. It was about completing the 'ultimate sentence' to be left on the 'Final Wall'.

However, not all Recorders were able to achieve this ultimate sentence. Only the chosen recorders left behind great records.

Therefore, most recorders wanted to write 'commentaries' to accompany such a 'great sentence'.

【Listen carefully, everyone. If we successfully complete this scenario, we might even be able to claim the 'commentary' position from the high-ranking Recorders who monopolize the interpretation of the wall.】

【Re-Really?】

The Recorders' eyes were filled with fear and excitement. It was understandable, before them, were the 'high-ranking recorders' of the <Star Stream>, beings they couldn't even dare to listen to, let alone look at—even their true names.

But what if they could help these high-ranking Recorders complete the 'One Sentence'...?

Just then, one of the recorders, who had been scanning the screen, ran over.

【Urgent news. Two recorders just stopped writing.】

Stopped writing. The weight of these words made all the Recorders' expressions harden for a moment. For the Recorders, the 'stop writing' was a punishment akin to eternal destruction, in terms of constellations.

The orange mask asked.

【What kind of guys are they?】

【Newbies. They're called 'One Who Writes Youth' and 'One Who Doesn't Like Twists'.】

The orange mask's eyes narrowed.

No matter what they did in this city, it was unlikely to cause an incident worthy of 'stopping writing'.

【If there was a possibility, it would be if the embodiment of the 'Recording Contract' died.】

The orange mask spoke in a grave voice.

【Perhaps it was the work of that bastard, the Mad Sword Emperor.】

【The Mad Sword Emperor.】

The tense recorders exchanged glances.

【Dispatch ascenders to the nearby area. If the Mad Sword Emperor is discovered—】

The order was finally given.

【Prepare to declare [Fate] immediately.】

---

The 'Recorder of Fear' trembled before my eyes.

【Uh, how? How could this be happening?】

To put it simply, it was like this.

He moved to this 'Recording Center' as soon as it was two o'clock, and I followed him.

He was jubilant, thinking he'd escaped safely, but then he turned to me and looked as if he were about to faint.

Hurriedly, he collected his expression and began to speak.

【W-Wouldn't you be the same 'Recorder'? But how could the contract holder and the Recorder be the same person...?】

I stared at the 'Unchanging One'.

I expected him to have some impressive appearance since he was called a 'Recorder of Fear', but he was just a young man wearing glasses. Compared to 'Asmodeus' and 'Bichonhori' I'd met before, he felt like a mere idiot. My silence must have been what the guy was thinking, as he fell to the ground and cried out.

【Please save me! I will never touch your contract again! I will not come near you! I will not add a single conjunction or adverb to your presence!】

I watched him for a moment before opening my mouth.

But no sound came out. Is it impossible to speak audibly in this space? In that case…

【Do you speak like this?】

At that moment, the 'Unchanging One' heard my voice and opened his eyes wide.

919 Episode 52 Mad Sword Emperor (4)

The 'Unchanging One' stared at me for a moment, as if in a daze.

【Why?】

【It's nothing.】

【Speak.】

The 'Unchanging One' glanced at me and began to speak.

【I'm saying this because the tone of your mantra is so good.】

【What?】

【T-That's what I mean. Usually, the tone of your mantra is influenced by the stories the recorder has written. So it's a bit strange. What stories have you recorded to give it such a tone...】

So, you're saying my voice is pleasant to hear?

Judging by the fact that he's offering such blatant praise, it seems he's quite desperate.

【I don't intend to spare you just for saying that.】

【T-That's not what I meant!】

The man bit his lip, then opened his mouth again, taking note of the situation.

【Are you perhaps a 'True Recorder'?】

【True Recorder?】

【This refers to cases where one becomes a 'Recorder' on one's own, without making a contract with the 'Hunchback'.】

According to Bihyung, there are two ways to become a Recorder.

One is to achieve the feat of a 'Recorder' on one's own.

The other is to become a Recorder through a contract with the 'Wenny Man'.

When I nodded, the 'Unchanging One' nodded in admiration.

【I see. I don't know how a True Recorder came to this city, but...】

When he heard that I was a 'True Recorder,' he rolled his eyes again, prostrating himself before me and shouting,

【Please hire me!】

It was a funny word.

He wasn't just asking me to be his subordinate, he was asking me to 'hire him'?

【I will be your 'Assistant Recorder'.】

【Assistant Recorder?】

【As you know, no matter how great a Recorder is, there's a limit to what they can accomplish alone. Especially if you're trying to use a powerful 'record'...】

I got what he was saying. Even just the previous fight was a testament to that.

The pressure felt different when facing one Recorder than when facing three at once.

Surely, the more numerous the Recorders are, the more powerful their coercive power can be.

【I know. That's probably why you granted me [Fate].】

The 'Unchanging One' took a deep breath.

【That... was really not my intention! I only interfered a little without even knowing who you were!】

【After all, you were involved in that [Fate], weren't you?】

The 'Unchanging One' responded hastily, perhaps sensing the murderous intent emanating from my body.

【I simply did as I was told. I've fallen short of the task of adding strength to the newly written [Fate], so I just added a little bit of penmanship to the final [Fate]...】

As if he realized the situation was getting worse as he continued, the Unchanging One banged his head and spoke.

【I-I was wrong! I committed a mortal sin! It will never happen again!】

【That's a truly sincere apology.】

【Those bastards! I'll tell you who all the bastards were involved in that fate!】

【Hmm.】

I pretended to ponder for a moment, looking down at him.

【I know you're lying. You were just wasting time, begging for you life, and then you ran off here.】

【This time, it's really not happening! How could I dare deceive the Recorder, whose penmanship is far superior to mine? There's nowhere to run now!】

I hadn't explicitly told him, but I'd been hearing his inner thoughts here and there.

「There aren't many opportunities to face a true Recorder.」

「I don't know what level of Recorder this person is, but he's skilled enough to easily take on at least three lower-level Recorders.」

「There's only one way to survive.」

As someone who's just become a 'Recorder', it would be convenient to have a guide.

【In that case, prove it by signing a 'Recording Contract'.】

【A Recording Contract?】

The guy's eyes widened, and he feigned indifference.

【I'm not an incarnation or a Constellation, so I can't sign a 'recording contract' with you...】

【I'm sure there are similar contracts among Recorders, too?】

The guy, who had been furtively licking his lips as if he knew that, cautiously confessed.

【If you're referring to the 'Recording Oath'...】

After a moment, the contents of the 'Recording Oath' flashed before my eyes.

| |
|---|
| The Recorder of Fear, 'Unchanging One', swears the following: |

As I was reading the oath, the man asked,

【Can I use 'Demon King of Salvation' as your modifier?】

Strictly speaking, the Demon King of Salvation was a modifier that no longer existed.

To be clear, I need to write my name here...

A pounding headache suddenly struck me. It was the kind that would come whenever I tried to recall my real name.

I bit my lip and thought for a moment.

【Write that you are making a contract with the owner of the story 'Demon King of Salvation'.】

The revised oath then came to mind.

First, the Recorder of Fear, 'Unchanging One', swears to become the 'assistant recorder' of the owner of the story 'Demon King of Salvation'.

Second, the Recorder of Fear, 'Unchanging One', will not record anything that would harm the owner of the story 'Demon King of Salvation'.

Third, the Recorder of Fear, the 'Unchanging One', swears the above oath on the 'Final Wall'.

Fourth, as long as the Recorder of Fear, 'Unchanging One', does not violate the above oath, the owner of the story 'Demon King of Salvation' will not harm the 'Unchanging One's' contracted entity.

* This oath lasts for 10 years immediately following the oath.

The oath exudes a unique sense of spirituality. The sentences felt just like a 'scenario' orchestrated by the Management Bureau.

Perhaps these Recorders are also the ones narrating the contents of the Management Bureau's 'scenario'.

【But what does 10 years mean?】

【Well, I need at least some insurance...】

【I'm sure you're just going to be stuck in a Time Fault for 10 years, killing time.】

【No, absolutely not!】

* The contracted party cannot enter a 'Time Fault' and arbitrarily accelerate the contract time.

As the boy, though he'd been crying, finished writing the special terms, the oath was sealed in a bright ray of light.

[The Recording Oath is activated.]

[The Recorder of Fear, Unchanging One, has become your 'Assistant Recorder'.]

Indeed, my writing skills felt even more vivid than before. I can't quite put it into words, but it felt like I had a small, auxiliary battery.

At this point, I'd say the safety net was in place.

I slowly looked around the 'Recording Archives', asking.

【First of all... where is this place?】

Perhaps because he had become my 'Assistant Recorder', he answered with the energy of a new employee.

【Yes. This is the 'Recording Archives'. Each scenario area has a record archive, a place granted to the recorders of the 'New Murim District'.】

【What do you do here?】

【Recorders gather here to declare [Fate] and share their own 'interpretations'.】

So, to summarize, this is like a banquet hall for recorders.

【Actually, 'True Recorders' rarely use this space. I heard that 'True Recorders' exchange information in a special way related to the 'Final Wall'.】

A special way related to the 'Final Wall'...

【However, low-level Recorders like me have almost no 'interpretations', so if we want to share even a little, we have to use this place.】

The 'Unchanging One' pointed to the 'doors' lined up at the front of the waiting room.

【These are the so-called 'Rooms of Narrative'. When you enter, you can interact with other recorders, and sometimes even plot or interfere with [Fate] to change the scenario.】

The 'Unchanging One' spoke somewhat cautiously when speaking about [Fate].

【Oh, and you must wear a 'Mask' before entering. That's the rule.】

Actually, as I approached the 'Room of Narratives', a message appeared above me as if it had been waiting.

[Please select the 'Mask' you will use after entering.]

[The list of masks will be randomly selected based on the 'stories' you recorded.]

1. Fox Mask.

2. Wolf Mask.

3. Rat Mask.

4. Maskless Mask.

5. Dumpling Mask.

The 'Recycling Center' came to mind.

Back then, I chose the maskless mask. There are more options here... After much deliberation, I decided to go with a more ordinary choice this time.

[You chose the 'Fox Mask'.]

When I put on the mask, a ray of light shone through the mask surrounding my face, changing color.

But the expression on the face of the 'Unchanging One"s face as he examined my mask was strange.

【Usually, the color of a recorder's mask is determined by their rank, which is one of seven colors.】

According to his explanation, the color of the mask given was determined by one of the following: red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, and violet.

Higher rank recorders wore masks closer to red, while lower ranks wore masks closer to purple.

In reality, the 'Unchanging One' was wearing a 'Blue Hamster' mask.

This probably meant he was in the third lowest rank.

The problem was the color of my mask.

【But your mask—】

The 'Unchanging One' glared, as if searching for even the slightest trace of color in my mask.

【It's white.】

【Didn't you say the mask's color was red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, and violet?】

【I don't know. Are the 'True Recorders' somehow different? Actually, this is my first time seeing an 'True Recorder' myself.】

Are there fewer 'True Recorders' like me than I thought?

【However, it's quite interesting that you chose the fox mask.】

Interesting?

【I heard that the creator of this 'Record Archive' also wore a 'Fox Mask'.】

That was unexpected information.

This 'Record Archive' is a subspace that doesn't even appear in the original 'Ways of Survival'.

I wonder what being created this place.

【Who created this place?】

【The 'Record Archive' is a place created by the great Recorder, the 'Fox Who Commands the Heavens', out of consideration for the lowly, lower-level Recorders.】

【The Fox Who Commands the Sky? Are you talking about Bicheonhori?】

【Do you know him?】

【I do. Bicheonhori Wang Weilong.】

So far, I've encountered Bicheonhori three times.

The last time was probably in the Fear Realm.

【Is he also a 'True Recorder'?】

If you think about it carefully, it wasn't strange.

The '100 Strongest' he wrote was a famous work within the 'Ways of Survival'.

Since Bicheonhori had been so obsessed with 'recording' in every round of Yoo Joonghyuk's series, perhaps no one could be more deserving of the title of 'True Recorder'.

But...

【Hey.】

The 'Unchanging One' was acting a little strange. He looked at me with anxious eyes, hiding his trembling voice, and asked.

【Excuse me... Whose name is that...?】

【Wang Weilong?】

【Yes.】

【That's Bicheonhori's true name.】

【Bi-bi-Bicheon... The Fox That Commands The Sky... Is...?】

【Right.】

【Oooooh!】

I hurried over and shook the guy's shoulder, but he was so unconscious he showed no signs of waking up. Judging by the bloody tears leaking from his eyes, it didn't seem to be an act.

【Hey. I told you to get up?】

Sentences poured out ceaselessly from the guy's head.

「Thetruenameofthegreatrecorder,thetruenameofthegreatrecorder,thetruenameofthegreatrecorder,thetruenameofthegreatrecorder,thetruenameofthegreatrecorder,thetruenameofthegr eatrecorder...」

...Is this all I've got to do after hearing the true name of 'Bicheonhori'?

I left the fallen guy alone and slowly stood up.

If this were true...

I had a new card to use in my dealings with the recorders.

[Would you like to enter the 'Room of Narration'?]

I checked the available rooms in the waiting room one by one.

The name of the largest room was as follows:

—Room of Fate [43/100]

This is likely the room where the [Fate] he spoke of is pronounced.

The number [43/100] likely refers to the total number of people in the room and the number of people who have entered.

I wish I could just enter, but unfortunately, a message popped up saying I had no access.

I looked around the other rooms, feeling disappointed.

Most were empty, but some were occupied.

—Main Scenario Agenda Exchange Meeting [3/10]

This was a major scenario agenda, and judging by the number 3, there were three visitors. Interestingly, there were small hashtags posted next to the room.

Transcendence

Scenario 80

It seemed to be a place to exchange information about something like this.

New Murim District

Mad Sword Emperor

After checking the last hashtag, I pressed the enter button without hesitation.

The Oldest Dream

920 Episode 52 Mad Sword Emperor (5)

---

[This room has an 'Entry Keyword'.]

I frowned at the unexpected message. I wondered if I could enter here either, but thankfully, there was a hint.

[Would you like to check the keyword 'hint'?]

I nodded, and the hint immediately came to me.

[Please answer the true name of the Recorder who created the great 'Record Archive'.]

The owner of the great Record Archive.

It couldn't have been anything other than an incredible coincidence.

【Wang Weilong.】

The moment I answered, a strange tension filled me.

Considering the room's entry requirements, there was a high possibility that there would be more useful information than I expected.

Because the 'Recorders' in this room were at least 'those who knew the true name of Bicheonhori'.

[In this 'Room of Narrative', the use of 'skills', 'stigmas', and 'storytelling' intended to harm others is restricted.]

Then, a warning message flashed before my eyes. Restricting [Skills], [Stigmas], and [Tales] that could harm one another meant prohibiting conflicts between the recorders within.

For me, it wasn't a particularly disadvantageous restriction.

[Entering the 'Room of Narration'.]

I blinked, and a sentence appeared on the pure white background.

「A Recorder is someone who shows off their butt to others.」

Written in a single stroke.

The moment I read the meaning embedded in the sentence, I realized. This was the legacy of Bicheonhori.

「Therefore, the key to becoming an excellent Recorder lies in two things: either create a pretty butt that anyone can see, or make your butt not look like a butt.」

It was a peculiar author's theory. If Giyeon hyung had been there, he would have nodded in agreement.

Indeed, the Recorder who wrote 『100 Strongest』 was different.

The background was brightly lit. In the clean room, chairs were lined up around a long table in the center. The chairs were all different shapes. Some looked like the chairs of company executives, while others resembled convenience store chairs. Some were more like benches than chairs.

I recalled a story associated with those chairs.

「The Meeting of the Seven Kings of Seoul.」

When the 'Seven Kings of Seoul' were chosen in the 'Meeting of the Kings', each king sat on that chair and discussed Seoul's future.

In essence, Bicheonhori had created this place based on that 'Meeting of the Kings'.

This, too, was an homage, if you will.

As expected, three dolls were sitting in the room.

【Then, let's begin the meeting... huh?】

The first to react was the Recorder wearing a yellow mask. He wore a peculiar mask, but more accurately, his entire face looked more like a symbol than a mask.

Is that... a 'scale'?

【A rare newcomer.】

Then, a soft voice spoke from an orange mask. It seemed to be a mask shaped like a mountain. Above the mountain, something like a cloud floated, and curiously, a beam of light streaming from the cloud seemed to engulf the mountain.

【...】

Finally, the owner of the red mask looked at me. The entire head of the mask resembled an old monitor. A mask that glowed red, like a screen—its ominous light sent a chill down my spine.

I took in the gazes of the three dolls and calmly examined their faces again.

Yellow scales.

Orange mountains.

Red monitors.

I could tell from their aura alone that these recorders were of a different class from the 'Unchanging One'.

Their masks were yellow, orange, and red, respectively. In other words, they belonged to the top three ranks of the seven tiers of 'red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, and violet'.

Even at first glance, the orange mountains and red monitors were particularly striking. Of course, it wasn't as overwhelming as when I faced Bicheonhori, Cheon Inho, and Asmodeus in the 40th Round...

【A white mask?】

【Was there a mask of that color?】

While the scales and the mountain muttered, I calmly walked over and sat down on a chair.

The chair I chose was transparent. A 'transparent chair' so transparent that you couldn't even tell if you were sitting or not.

As I chose the chair, the red monitor opened his mouth, seemingly intrigued.

【How did you get into this room?】

The tone of the question sounded like a broken television.

I calmly answered.

【I answered the question correctly.】

【Who told you that answer?】

It seems Bicheonhori's true name is a secret among the recorders.

I shrugged and said.

【Isn't this a place where information is traded? If you want to learn something from me, you'll have to pay a price.】

The yellow scale looked surprised at my response, while the orange mountain looked intrigued.

The red monitor replied in a cold voice.

【I have no intention of interacting with someone whose identity I don't even know.】

【Isn't it equally true that we don't know each other's identities? Seeing all of you wearing masks, it doesn't seem like we're here to have a deep conversation.】

The three Recorders flinched simultaneously at my answer.

I observed their reactions, then grinned and added.

【I will answer your first question for free. As for how I came to know the true name of Bicheonhori—】

Since we're not going to fight right now, there's no need to provoke undue hostility until I get the information.

So, I can answer this honestly and with a generous heart.

【I just knew it all along.】

[Someone is activating 'Lie Detection'!]

[Lie Detection doesn't seem to be a particularly harmful skill, so it seems it can be used here as well.]

['Lie Detection' has confirmed your words.]

The three Recorders reacted differently to the confirmation message from [Lie Detection].

Yellow Scale shrugged, as if surprised again, while Orange Mountain crossed his arms, seeming even more intrigued.

And...

【You 'just' knew the true name of the owner of the archives? Are you expecting me to believe that now?】

Sparks flew across the red monitor's screen.

Orange Mountain quickly intervened.

【Stop it, Hermit. Since he answered the question and entered the room, we have no right to sanction him.】

Hermit. Is that the red monitor's nickname?

Orange Mountain turned to me this time and spoke.

【And White Fox, you came here to gather information, too, I suppose. I didn't mean to be territorial. Instead, I apologize.】

I think it was said that the Recorder's mantras were influenced by the stories they recorded.

The orange mountain's mantra had a strangely gentle tone, and the rhythm evoked a certain longing in me.

【Since you're a newcomer, why don't you introduce yourself? White Fox, you have a nickname, right?】

Nickname?

Before I could even ask, Yellow Scale, with his shoulders hunched, spoke.

【You can call me 'Moral'.】

The yellow scale, with its strangely ominous, submissive demeanor—'Moral'.

I thought for a moment, listening to his mantra.

Unlike the 'Unchanging One', the three Recorders before me were somewhat higher-ranking beings. Perhaps, like Bicheonhori and Asmodeus, they too were characters from 'Ways of Survival'. Next, the nickname was revealed: 'Orange Mountain'.

【Please call me 'Cloud Mountain.'】

The orange mountain with its clear and gentle mantra—'Cloud Mountain'.

It was an intuitive nickname that suited the mask well.

I tried to think of characters related to 'mountain' or 'cloud', but there were so many of them in 'Ways of Survival', it was difficult to deduce their identities.

【'Hermit'.】

Finally, the red monitor—'Hermit'.

One character immediately came to mind when I heard the keyword 'Hermit'.

But I didn't have time to think deeply about it. It was my turn to answer.

【A nickname. I can just make up anything, right?】

I was thinking something like 'Friend of the Dirt-Eater' or 'Disciple of the Transcendently Beautiful Girl Author' would work, but Hermit spoke with sparks flying.

【What nonsense are you talking about? Didn't you read the entrance notice when you came in?】

【Entrance notice?】

【Here, you must choose a nickname that has even a slight connection to your 'story'.】

The moment I heard Cloud Mountain's comment, I had a realization.

「Either you create a really pretty butt that you don't mind showing off to anyone, or you make your butt not look like a butt.」

I see. Was that what this room's entrance notice meant?

In short, the 'nicknames' here were a kind of game devised by Bicheonhori. A 'game' where you reveal important clues about yourself to guess others' identities.

So, I had to choose a nickname that was related to me while ensuring my identity would never be revealed.

【My nickname is...】

Come to think of it, there was one nickname that would be appropriate at this point.

【'Kim Dokja'.】

Eight years after the fall of the Fear Realm. Even eight years ago, stories about the 'Kim Dokja fragments' were spreading, and recalling my conversations with Cho Jincheol and Reinheit, the name 'Kim Dokja' felt quite commonplace.

「"You think you're 'Kim Dokja' yourself?"」

It was highly likely that there were others pretending to be 'Kim Dokja' while I was gone.

In that sense, the name 'Kim Dokja' was the perfect 'butt' to reveal my identity while simultaneously concealing it perfectly.

【Hmph...?】

Someone groaned, perhaps startled by my butt.

【What did you just say?】

【'Kim Dokja'.】

Actually, I chose the nickname 'Kim Dokja' not simply to hide my identity.

「Kim Dokja is the true name of the 'Oldest Dream'.」

According to the setting of 'Ways of Survival', the 'true names' of all high-level beings in the <Star Stream> are restricted.

Especially, those of lower ranks can sometimes suffer a severe blow simply by mentioning the true name of a higher-level being. This was likely the reason why the 'Unchanging One' fainted upon learning the true name of 'Bicheonhori'.

However, the name 'Kim Dokja' alone never inflicted damage upon the speaker.

Common sense dictates that no constellation exists higher than the 'Oldest Dream', so anyone who invoked its name should have suffered a blow close to annihilation.

However, this has never occurred.

I have two hypotheses regarding this.

First, the name 'Kim Dokja' does not refer to a single being.

Second, the story surrounding 'Kim Dokja' and the 'Oldest Dream' is so distant that no one has ever been able to trace it.

Because they didn't quite understand.

But that was only for ordinary incarnations or Constellations who didn't know well. I wondered what it would be like for the recorders.

High-ranking Recorders like Bicheonhorin and Asmodeus could call out the name 'Kim Dokja' without hesitation, but what about the other recorders?

【Dare.】

With sparks flowing through the air, Hermit slammed the table in a fit of agitation.

A pale aura hovered above his monitor.

He seemed poised to attack me at any moment.

Of course, according to the room's rules, I wouldn't be attacked, so I stared at Hermit for a moment before looking around at the other recorders.

Moral looked dazed, as if he'd just experienced something unpleasant, and Cloud Mountain's reaction was difficult to discern.

Cloud Mountain spoke.

【Hermit, calm down. It's just a nickname.】

【...】

【You're an interesting person. Are you sure you want to use 'that name' as your nickname?】

【Yes. Is there anything that wouldn't work?】

【Of course not.】

Unlike Moral and Hermit, who seemed to be strangely averse to the nickname 'Kim Dokja', Cloud Mountain seemed even more interested in me after hearing my nickname.

【Now that we've finished our introductions, shall we share the keywords from the information we've shared?】

【How about we start with the newbie? Since we're only going to talk about keywords anyway, the order doesn't matter.】

At Moral's words, the three Recorders looked at me simultaneously.

They say that, but if they feel it would be detrimental to them after hearing the keywords, they won't engage in the exchange. When I refused to open my mouth, Cloud Mountain chimed in.

【If it's inconvenient, I can speak first. I could demonstrate, too.】

【Would you mind?】

I was grateful.

There was plenty of information to use as a bargaining chip, but before that, I needed to figure out how much they knew and what they wanted.

【The information I brought...】

For a moment, I felt the mask on the cloud mountain smile.

【It's about the disciple of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint—the 'Mad Sword Emperor'.】

---

921 Episode 52 Mad Sword Emperor (6)

---

A disciple of the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

There's only one person in this world who truly fits that nickname.

「Supreme King Yoo Joonghyuk.」

I, too, thought of him when I first discovered traces of the Mad Sword Emperor in the examination hall.

The question is this:

「Is Yoo Joonghyuk really the Mad Sword Emperor?」

If the Mad Sword Emperor is truly Yoo Joonghyuk, it's absurd that Nirvana didn't recognize him.

Furthermore, there's further evidence that the Mad Sword Emperor isn't Yoo Joonghyuk.

「Yoo Joonghyuk's primary weapon in the 41st Round was a 'spear'.」

What I discovered in the examination hall was clearly a 'sword mark'.

Unless Yoo Joonghyuk, who had suddenly transformed into the Breaking the Sky Sword Beauty, had once again wielded a sword.

Of course, that possibility is impossible, so common sense dictates that the 'Mad Sword Emperor' Cloud Mountain speaks of is not Yoo Joonghyuk, but someone else.

【Breaking the Sky Sword Saint... You're talking about the Transcendent imprisoned in the underworld of Murim. Was the Mad Sword Emperor her disciple?】

I froze for a moment.

Who is imprisoned where?

【Yes, that's my guess.】

Watching Cloud Mountain silently nod, I forced myself to take a deep breath. I wanted to ask about the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint right away, but I had to hold back.

The last time I saw the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint was eight years ago. I even heard that she had come to Murim with the 'Mad Sword Emperor'.

But she was imprisoned?

Who could dare imprison her?

The Ascendants? Of course, all the Ascendants in this city were strong. There were many who were comparable to the Narrative-level.

But even within the same 'Narrative-level', the difference in rank was vast. The Breaking the Sky Sword Saint wasn't just high-level; her fighting prowess was extraordinary.

No wonder she was called the 'god' of Murim. But she was imprisoned in Murim.

How on earth? Could she possibly be connected to the 'Mad Sword Emperor'?

Feeling compelled to find out, I cautiously opened my mouth, but Hermit spoke in a disgruntled tone.

【Do you think I came all the way here just to hear something like that?】

「I desperately want to hear this information, so I want to tell you to shut up.」

Thankfully, Cloud Mountain didn't back down and responded.

【That's all I need. Do you think your master feels the same way?】

...Master?

It was a bit surprising. Hermit, the 'Red Mask', didn't seem like the type of person who would claim to be someone's subordinate.

【He's not just another incarnation, but a disciple of the 'Breaking the Sky Sword Saint'. If you're a Recorder, you'd know who Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's disciples are. Your master would be quite interested in this story, right? Because—】 Hermit, momentarily showing discomfort, quickly cut Cloud Mountain off.

【So, who is the Mad Sword Emperor?】

【Are you interested?】

【Tell me, Cloud Mountain.】

【No one knows her true identity because she always wears a skull mask. She appeared like a comet eight years ago with the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, and is known as the 'Mad Sword Emperor'. Her main area of aIctivity is the 'New Murim District'.】

【You could even ask a low-level Recorder about that.】

【I'm not finished telling you yet. You heard about the recent destruction of the Orbital Elevator in the 'New Murim District', right?】

【Was it really the Mad Sword Emperor who destroyed it?】

I knew that story. I even witnessed it.

Judging by his expression, Hermit didn't seem to know that much, and Moral... seemed to be half-associate.

Hermit asked.

【Why would she do something like that? Doing something like that would incur the wrath of the Giant Nebulae.】

I was curious, too. Regardless of the identity of the Mad Sword Emperor, the 'Orbital Elevator' served as a crucial bridge for the Ascendants and the higher-level Nebulae.

But destroying it meant...

【The Mad Sword Emperor realized the purpose of the 'New Murim District' city.】

At those words, Hermit and Moral fell silent simultaneously. A cold agitation rippled through the table, and then—

[Someone is activating 'Lie Detection'!]

[The statement has been confirmed to be true.]

Hermit glared at Cloud Mountain and asked,

【How on earth did you know such information? Did you sign a 'Recording Contract' with the Mad Sword Emperor?】

【If you want to hear more, please disclose the information. I heard you brought something quite interesting today, didn't you?】

【You won't be the only one to receive the information like last time, will you? This time, there will be a 'penalty'.】

Hermit flared at the mention of the penalty.

【The information I bring is on a different level than yours.】

【Of course you would. You follow the great 'High-Rank Recorder'.】

A high-ranking Recorder...

So, does that mean 'Hermit' follows high-ranking Recorders like Bicheonhori or Cheon Inho?

Sensing my gaze, Hermit glanced in my direction and muttered smugly.

【You're lucky.】

I thought it was just a whisper, but Hermit continued, tapping the table like a keyboard.

【The information I brought is about the 'Large Fragment of the Oldest Dream'.】

It was a boastful piece of information.

[Someone is activating 'Lie Detection'!]

[The statement has been confirmed to be true.]

Cloud Mountain and Moral, having confirmed the truth, exchanged a glance and asked.

【This is quite interesting.】

【If it's a large fragment, how big is it?】

【It could possibly be comparable to the King of Fear.】

For a moment, I thought he was talking about me. At this point, there must be only a handful of 'Kim Dokja fragments' that large.

A bright light shone from the mask of Cloud Mountain.

【Interesting. So? Tell me more. What kind of fragment is it?】

【It's a newly discovered fragment. It's clearly different from the ones known so far.】

【Have the other Nebulae noticed? Where was it found? Could it be—】

【That's it. I'll listen to your information and tell you the rest.】

【Hmm…】

Cloud Mountain seemed displeased, but didn't seem to want to press on.

Now that it was certain that it was information about the 'Oldest Dream', the information from the Hermit proved worth listening to to the end.

Finally, the two men's gazes turned to me and Moral.

I tossed their gazes back at Moral.

Moral stared at me with a bewildered expression for a moment, then flinched uncomfortably and opened his mouth.

【Well... As a senior, I suppose it wouldn't be a bad idea for me to speak first.】

He continued with his characteristically gloomy tone.

【I've brought quite a bit. If any of this interests you, I'll tell you in detail...】

【I didn't expect much anyway. I guess you're just going to brush it off with some worthless garbage.】

Undeterred by Hermit's cynicism, Moral began to speak.

【Just listen.】

The first piece of information he brought was about the upper scenario area.

【'Ragnarok' will begin soon.】

Ragnarok.

Along with <Eden>'s 'Great War of Good and Evil' and <Olympus>'s 'Gigantomachia', the 'Great Destruction Scenario' that represents the Star Stream was finally about to begin. It was quite useful information, so I nodded meaningfully to Moral in interest.

But the other two Recorders seemed to have different thoughts.

【We already know that. Is there anything else?】

The second piece of information Moral brought was that the boundaries of the worldline were gradually collapsing after the destruction of the Fear Realm.

But this information didn't seem new to the other two Recorders.

【As expected, you're just making a fuss again today, are you?】

【Actually, I've done some research on the Mad Sword Emperor, but honestly, I don't know as much as you, Cloud Mountain.】

【So, what else?】

【There's been a recent discord within <Olympus>.】

The discord within <Olympus>.

Is that the beginning of that in this episode?

【The 'God of Wine and Ecstasy' has declared independence from <Olympus> with his forces.】

Dionysus's independence. This was quite interesting information, so I nodded meaningfully at him again.

Moral, emboldened by my response, was about to speak again when...

【That must have been information from months ago.】

The cold retort of Hermit cut him off.

【Are you offering to exchange information on the 'Oldest Dream' for information on something even a low-level Recorder would know?】

【That's—】

【If this keeps up, I'll remove Moral from the team next time.】

Cloud Mountain nodded in agreement.

【I'm a bit disappointed this time. Since we have a new member, it's time to change the members.】

【Now, wait a minute. It's not over yet.】

I felt like I had a rough idea of the Recorders' positions in this room.

Cornered, Moral sweated profusely and spoke again.

【This is somewhat ambiguous information, so I hesitated to share it.】

【Ambiguous information?】

【An appraisal item that has reached the highest 'Appraisal Ranking' has appeared in the auction house of the 'New Murim District'.】

【What kind of appraisal item is it?】

【It's a 'fragment of the End-level Fear'.】

A silence fell over the table for a moment. Hermit was the first to speak.

【This is the first time I've been surprised by the information you brought.】

【Are you sure it's the End-level Fear?】

The two Recorders looked genuinely astonished.

Of course, I was equally astonished.

Because that was my story.

【Has this already reached that level?】

【Perhaps 'Moral's' sphere of activity is within my vicinity.】

【The results of the 'scales' appraisal are correct, but they're not yet conclusive. The Management Bureau has determined that it's 'probable'.】

Hermit seemed to lose interest at the mention of 'probable'. But Cloud Mountain was different.

【Who brought that?】

Is it a mistake? A strange sense of impatience was palpable from Cloud Mountain, who had always been so relaxed.

【Could it be someone from the Fear Realm? A Transcendent, perhaps—】 【That's possible, but I don't think so.】

【According to eyewitness accounts, he was just an ordinary incarnation. His rank wasn't high either.】

【What did he look like? What color was his hair? What clothes was he wearing?】

Cloud Mountain's persistent questions almost seemed obsessive.

Hermit spoke in a hushed tone.

【Cloud mountain, it seems it was true that you were looking for a Transcendent from the Fear Realm.】

【...】

【There hasn't been a returnee from the Fear Realm since 'Breaking the Sky Sword Saint'. You should know that.】

It seems that's all the information known to the public. Looking at the situation, the 'Recorders of Fear' outside seemed to be unaware of the exact events that occurred inside the Fear Realm.

Cloud Mountain happened to be searching for someone inside.

I was at a loss as to what information to reveal, but I thought it was a good thing.

【It seems like everyone else doesn't know, but there's another Returnee of the Fear Realm.】

At my words, the three recorders turned to me simultaneously.

【What nonsense are you talking about? How do you know that?】

【I saw it myself.】

【What?】

【The destruction of the Fear Realm.】

[Someone is activating 'Lie Detection'!]

['Lie Detection' has confirmed that what you said is true.]

The message rang out, as if it had been waiting for it.

【That can't be. You saw it? How?】

With a quiet shock, Cloud Mountain asked in a dazed voice.

【How could you see what happened inside?】

【Did you sign a 'Recording Contract' with a transcendent?】

Faced with a barrage of questions, I feigned a smile and answered.

【Such personal questions are difficult.】

If I'm not careful, my 'butt' could be exposed.

【If you're trying to avoid it with that kind of talk—】

【You all know that there were 'high-ranking Recorders' there, right?】

The three Recorders nodded, glancing at each other.

So, everyone knew this much?

【I met the 'Fox that Commands the Sky' there.】

[Someone is activating 'Lie Detection'!]

['Lie Detection' has confirmed that what you said is true.]

Cloud Mountain was dazed, what he was thinking unknown, while Moral looked somewhat agitated.

【Did you really see Bicheonhori yourself?】

Even Hermit, who had always been sarcastic and scornful of others' information, couldn't hide his emotions.

【Tell me. What exactly happened there? What on earth did you see?】

In an instant, the control of the situation shifted to this side.

【Do you think you're qualified to hear that with the information you've brought?】

A heavy silence fell over the table. A silence where anger, curiosity, and shock strangely coexisted. As if enjoying the silence, I opened my mouth.

【Let's do this. Tell me what I'm curious about first.】

【What do you want to know?】

【The exact time of Ragnarok's outbreak. The current status of the Mad Sword Emperor. And the spatiotemporal coordinates of the large fragment of the Oldest Dream.】

The three Recorders looked at each other and nodded.

【If we tell you that, what exactly will you tell us?】

【I'll give you a choice, so choose for yourself.】

【Choices?】

For reference, the choices I presented were:

<Top Secret List of the Fear Realm>

1. The story of 'Kim Anna', the great Catastrophe-level Fear.

2. Additional information on survivors of the 'Fear Realm'.

3. The secret of the 'Oldest Dream', which Recorder 'Bicheonhori' was curious about.

The Recorders glared at the choices I offered with serious eyes.

Moral was the first to speak.

【Are you really going to tell me this? Do I just have to choose one of the three?】

【Yes. I'll tell you privately whichever one you choose.】

I smiled and whispered meaningfully.

【For your information, one of the three is a trap.】

922 Episode 52 Mad Sword Emperor (7)

---

As expected, Hermit was the first to react.

【One of the three is a trap? What do you mean?】

【Exactly.】

Sullen red eyes floated over Hermit's monitor.

【You're ridiculous. Do you think I'd make a deal like this?】

【If you don't like it, then don't.】

【What?】

【Honestly, I don't care if I don't listen to your information.】

The information Hermit had was about the 'Large Fragment of the Oldest Dream'. It was information I was curious about, but in a way, it wasn't information I 'needed to hear immediately'.

He was furious, perhaps hurt by the fact that his information was so daringly judged.

【Do you think you'll get away with something like this? You don't think I'll find out who you are? As soon as I leave this room, I'll find your contract partner and...】

【Yes, yes. You seem curious about my butt. Look carefully.】

Moral chuckled at my words.

I turned to Moral and Cloud Mountain and asked.

【What will the other two do?】

【I'll make a deal.】

Cloud Mountain was the first to answer.

Since Cloud Mountain is looking for the 'Returnee of the Fear Realm', I thought they'd naturally agree to my deal.

【I will do it.】

Moral also accepted the deal.

Perhaps it was only natural.

The information he possessed regarding the 'time of Ragnarok's occurrence' wasn't very valuable at this point, and its value would soon expire.

【Then let's just make a deal between you two...】

【Wait. I'll make a deal too.】

【You said you wouldn't?】

Hermit answered after two seconds.

【I've changed my mind.】

【I've changed my mind too. I won't make a deal with you. You threatened me.】

【That—】

A silence that seemed a mixture of bewilderment and anger. After a moment of hesitation, Hermit opened his mouth.

【That was a slip of the tongue. I apologize.】

As expected, even the most proud 'Recorder of Fear' is a Recorder. He wouldn't miss an opportunity to gain an interpretation of the 'Fear Realm'.

Moral and Cloud Mountain, who had been watching our conversation from the side, murmured in admiration.

【Just words?】

A disgruntled emoticon appeared on Hermit's monitor.

【Then?】

【Besides the spatiotemporal coordinates of the 'Large Fragment of the Oldest Dream', you need to give me one more piece of information.】

【Didn't you say that was enough earlier?】

【Shouldn't we make a deal?】

A sound like a monitor component breaking came from somewhere, and Hermit asked.

【What information do you want?】

【You said something interesting when you were talking to Cloud Mountain. You said the Mad Sword Emperor had figured out the purpose of the city called 'New Murim District'.】

【So?】

【I'd also like to hear the purpose of the city called 'New Murim District'.】

Hermit hesitated for a moment before answering.

【You're a peculiar fellow. If you know about the 'Fear Realm', you must be a Recorder of a higher-level scenario, but you don't know that information.】

I felt a pang of disappointment, but I shamelessly shrugged my shoulders.

【I wasn't particularly interested in that area.】

【Understood. Then let's make a deal by telling you those two pieces of information. However, I'll go first among the three of us. You don't mind, do you?】

【As long as everyone else is okay with it.】

The other Recorders didn't seem to want to clash with Hermit, so they didn't particularly complain about the order.

While Hermit carefully considered his options, Moral asked,

【Hermit, which one will you choose? He told us there's a trap, didn't he?】

【It's obvious. Number 1 is a trap.】

The 'number 1' they were talking about was 'the adventures of the great Disaster-level Fear: Kim Anna'.

Moral objected.

【Doesn't number 1 seem too blatantly like a trap?】

【If that guy isn't an idiot, he'd obviously have us twist our minds several times to make us choose.】

【So you're saying he's twisting our minds to make us choose number 1 instead?】

I nodded, listening to their logic with fascination.

【Have you chosen?】

【I'll listen to number 3.】

Number 3.

You made a good choice.

【Good. Then, please give me your information first.】

Something printed on the secluded monitor, and a small hologram document appeared before me.

I furrowed my brow and began reading.

There are three 'Large Fragments of the Oldest Dream' identified so far.

1. Object name: 'Demon King of Salvation'. A fragment that went missing with the closing of the 'Recycling Center'. It likely belonged to the incarnation that battled it at the 'Recycling Center'.

Honestly, I was surprised by the information, which was more valuable than I expected.

This document served as a sort of indicator of how much the 'Recorders of Fear', including the 'Unchanging One', understood about the 'Oldest Dream'.

2. Object Name: 'King of Fear'.

A fragment torn off when the 'Fear Realm' met its end. It's believed that some of it was absorbed by ■■■■■■ at that time.

Is this how they know about the King of Fear?

Perhaps that ■■■■■■ represents Asmodeus.

I continued reading the document.

3. ■■■.

Unfortunately, the information on the third fragment was filtered. This likely means that even the Recorder in front of me doesn't have a proper understanding of it. The story didn't end there.

In addition, the location of the 'Fourth Large Fragment' was observed.

The Fourth Fragment.

Finally, this was the information I was looking for.

> At this point, it's determined that the Fragment in question does not exist within that worldline.

I read and reread that passage with blank eyes.

I knew it instinctively.

This was a clue to the 'Third Kim Dokja'. These damned bastards had discovered the location of the 'Third Kim Dokja' before I did.

> The spatiotemporal coordinates of the fragment in question could not be precisely determined.
>
> However, the 'context of certain Constellations' was observed. The keywords extracted from the context were as follows:
>
> Emperor. Monkey. Sword and Shield.

Emperor? Monkey? Sword and Shield?

I mulled over the keywords several times before asking,

【Is this the answer? I thought you meant 'spatiotemporal coordinates'.】

【I didn't understand that far. However, we can make some inferences with the keywords attached. This should be valuable information, right?】

Listening to the Hermit's bittersweet laughter, I wanted to smack him in the back of the head.

【Please send me other information, too.】

【Just sent it.】

The second piece of information I requested from Hermit was about the 'purpose of the creation of the New Murim District'.

I quickly skimmed through the second document and licked my lips.

I see. I expected it, but that's really how this city was created.

【Confirmed. Now, I'll give you the information. You said you'd choose the third option, correct?】

The Hermit's third option was 'the secret of the 'Oldest Dream' that the Recorder 'Bicheonhori' was curious about'.

I wrote a sentence in the air and sent it to him.

「The secret of the 'Oldest Dream' that Bicheonhori was curious about is...」

As I wrote the sentence, old memories flooded back. That day, I had shared a secret at the inn in Bicheonhori.

「It’s about 'the food the Oldest Dream hates the most'.」

The Hermit’s head throbbed as he read the sentence.

【What is this…】

I could feel his emotions fluctuating in real time. Confusion, shock, and…

【That… what kind of food is it?】

Curiosity. The excited boy’s words were slowly intensifying.

【Tell me. What kind of story is that?】

【What?】

Since there seemed to be some misunderstanding, I thought it was a good thing and wrote the next sentence for him.

「The food the Oldest Dream hates the most is 'tomatoes'.」

The Hermit remained silent for a long time after reading the sentence. He seemed to be analyzing my sentence, or perhaps ruminating and savoring it. Or perhaps he didn’t understand it at all.

Moral, watching from the side, asked,

【Hermit, what information did you receive?】

Instead of answering, Hermit trembled convulsively and suddenly began emitting a wave of energy toward me.

【Are you trying to deceive me?】

【I expected you to get angry. But I only gave you a choice; you were the one who chose.】

【This doesn't make sense. This can't be all—】

【This is the whole story.】

[Someone is activating 'Lie Detection'!]

['Lie Detection' has confirmed your words.]

【There's no way! The 'Oldest Dream' is nothing more than that. The great 'Bicheonhori' couldn't possibly be curious about such information—】

【This is all.】

【Explain properly. What does tomato mean? What interpretation did Bicheonhori obtain?】

Since he seemed to be having trouble understanding me, I decided to be a little more friendly.

「Now, I'll explain briefly, so listen carefully. You know the prototype of the 'Oldest Dream' is Kim Dokja, right? Kim Dokja of Planet 8612, who has mastered the 'Ways of Survival'. This isn't a metaphor, it's just a fact. Tomatoes are a food Kim Dokja hates. Tomatoes! Literally, tomatoes!」

And then something strange happened.

「■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■■...」

All the messages I had sent began to be filtered.

【Gasp.】

I heard a pop, and then I saw something flowing out of Hermit's head. Something like bloody juice was dripping onto the floor.

【You... What on earth did you send me?】

Hermit's body, who had been glaring at me as if he couldn't understand, dispersed. It was unexpected. Kim Dokja's name wasn't exactly a secret anymore, and I thought this level of information would be okay since even Bicheonhori and Asmodeus would share it without a second thought... or was I wrong?

As Hermit's figure vanished in an instant, Moral, who was standing nearby, exclaimed in admiration.

【Wow... That's surprising. Information that could force the expulsion of a red-ranked Hermit. That's extremely dangerous information.】

I felt there was some misunderstanding, but since it wasn't important, I didn't point it out.

【Cloud Mountain. May I take my turn next?】

【Please continue.】

Immediately, the information Moral had sent flashed before my eyes.

It was a brief description of the approximate timing of Ragnarok and the movements of the Great Gate.

It wasn't much information, but it was essential for me right now.

【Confirmed. Which option will you choose?】

【I'm also very curious about the third piece of information.】

【Then shall I tell you the third one?】

【No, I...】

Surprisingly, Moral chose the first option.

「The story of 'Kim Anna-ssi', Disaster-level Fear.」

Honestly, I never thought he'd choose that. Perhaps he was afraid that choosing the third option would lead to ending up like the Hermit.

I briefly relayed to Moral my interpretation of 'Anna Croft', whom I witnessed in the Fear Realm.

Kim Anna, who escaped from <Asgard> and chose to become a Transcendent.

Kim Anna, who nearly died from talking on the subway on her way home from work.

Kim Anna, who ran away in panic after encountering a Disaster-level Fear.

Kim Anna, who made me coffee...

As I recited the memories, a feeling of longing arose.

I wonder if Kim Anna is doing well.

【This is...】

Moral seemed to be reading the sentences I gave him with interest.

It made sense. Even though it was merely a series of disconnected memories, a mere record of observing a single incarnation—

【This is truly remarkable. You truly witnessed the 'Fear Realm'.】

At least this record clearly depicted the 'Fear Realm'.

【Honestly, I thought I'd picked a dud, but the interpretation you gave me seems far too extreme.】

Moral, who had been watching me for a moment, hesitated as if he had something to say. It was then that his form shook with a 'tsutsutsu' sound.

【Oh, I have a summons, so I must go.】

At that moment, a sentence flashed before his eyes.

「I don't know which scenario you're a Recorder for, but—」

The sentences continued above Moral, who slightly bowed his head.

「Whenever necessary, summon this 'Moral'. I'll help you.」

It was an unexpected favor. Contrary to his actions, perhaps he's more morally sound than I thought?

I nodded in gratitude.

The two quickly left, leaving only Cloud Mountain and I in the subspace.

Cloud Mountain, who had been watching me, spoke first.

【I've also been summoned. If it's alright, let's start the deal right away.】

Considering the group summons, something must have happened in their scenario.

【Understood.】

We immediately exchanged information.

The information he gave me was about the current status of the 'Mad Sword Emperor'. As I read it, I couldn't help but feel my face harden. If this was true, I needed to get out of here immediately.

Fortunately, Cloud Mountain also seemed to be in a hurry.

【I'll choose the second option.】

As expected, Cloud Mountain chose the second option.

| |
|---|
| Additional survivor information for the 'Fear Realm'. |

I wrote down the names of the survivors I remembered and sent them. It was a list of those who escaped aboard the 'train' on the day the Fear Realm ended.

Cloud Mountain read and reread the list for a long time, then asked,

【Is this all?】

【As far as I know, that's all there is to it. And the Fear Realm has ended.】

Because he was covered by a mask, I couldn't see Cloud Mountain's expression. However, judging by the slight downward tilt of his head, I could tell he was disappointed.

[NOTE 1]

【Should I go now?】

Cloud Mountain's body nodded, and slowly began to disperse from below.

When their body disappeared up to their knees, I asked,

【Cloud Mountain, what is the name of the being you seek?】

【Is it a deal?】

【You can think of it as you wish.】

Cloud Mountain looked at me for a moment before answering.

【It's a name I can't pronounce.】

【Why can't you pronounce it?】

【If I say that name, someone else will notice.】

I nodded silently.

Cloud Mountain, watching me, asked.

【I have a question, too.】

【Go ahead.】

Now, more than half of Cloud Mountain's body had vanished. Dispersing like a mountain collapsing, Cloud Mountain asked.

【What number was the 'trap'?】

The dispersing Cloud Mountain was looking at me. I, too, saw the Cloud Mountain.

The masks we wore were tagged with the story of 'recognition blocking', and because of that, we couldn't recognize each other. And yet.

【The trap.】

Even though eight years had passed between us.

【It was the second piece of information.】

Beyond Cloud Mountain's mask dissipating in the light, I thought I glimpsed their face. I thought I could see their eyes slowly dilating.

【Wait a minute, then—】

Perhaps this was just an elaborate optical illusion we created. We might have been endlessly repeating the name of the one we were seeking, in front of a completely different person. And yet, in that moment, in front of each other's masks, we reached a common interpretation.

【Auth...!】

With a ray of light, Cloud Mountain vanished.

I stared blankly down at the spot where they had vanished. I wanted to call their name right away.

Are they truly who I thought they were? If so, why, by what path did they become a 'Recorder of Fear', or why did they have to become so?

I couldn't ask. Perhaps because eight years lay before us, and—

【It seems you've enjoyed it enough. If you've seen it all, please leave.】

Because the one who knows those eight years is here with us now.

I glared into the air and said,

【Bicheonhori, Weilong】

Note [1]: I used the pronoun 'he' by default for these recorders, but we don’t necessarily know their gender since they’re hiding their identities—and it was too confusing to individually call them ‘they’ when there were many in the room. Cloud Mountain could be a woman.

923 Episode 52 Mad Sword Emperor (8)

---

A light spark flickered in the air. A playful voice followed.

【Since when did you know?】

I felt a space opening, and a monster wearing a 'white fox mask' identical to mine appeared before my eyes.

Despite the 'perception blocking' effect, I could sense the intensity emanating from his entire body, and I was certain.

【Since you started playing pranks like the 'white fox mask'.】

Weilong, King of Bicheonhori.

The master who created this secret subspace was right before my eyes.

【Interesting. You already knew about it then?】

【Isn't it strange? I entered the space you created, and 'that mask' suddenly appeared as an option for me, as if it had been waiting for me.】

【So, do you like the mask I gave you?】

I looked at Bicheonhori, who was spinning. Perhaps because he was a high-ranking Recorder, he didn't produce any records like the other Recorders. That must mean he's in complete control of himself.

I decided to throw a rock, sending ripples through that serene mask.

【Since when have you been interfering with my [Fate]?】

Bicheonhori seemed to hesitate for a moment, then replied in a brazen voice.

【What are you talking about? Even I find it difficult to interfere with [Fate] without you noticing.】

That's right. If he had directly interfered with my [Fate], I couldn't have failed to notice the shift in the context surrounding me. However,

【If you were controlling the [Fate] of others, not mine, it would be a different story.】

What if the sentence he wrote wasn't about me?

From the 'Unchanging One' who heard Bicheonhori's true name to my entrance into this room—did all of those events truly rely on 'coincidence'? Instead of answering my question, Bicheonhori let out a light laugh, then added in a rather serious voice.

【Still, wasn't it a pleasant encounter thanks to me?】

I glared at him for a moment.

Perhaps even my encounter with Cloud Mountain here was recorded in his records.

【Is Cloud Mountain really who I think they are?】

【Is there any point in confirming that here?】

【Why did you lead me here?】

Of course, I was glad to meet him again, even briefly. But I also thought it shouldn't have ended this way.

【Is there any information you can extract from me? Are you still curious about the tomato story?】

【Really. I didn't bring you here for any particular evil purpose.】

A mysterious light began to flow from the eyes of the white fox mask.

【Now that you've become a 'Recorder', it's time you received your proper title.】

At the same time, a message rang out from the air.

[The Recorder of Fear, 'Name Maker', grins.]

I flinched and looked around.

But there didn't seem to be any other Recorders of Fear besides Bicheonhori.

So, the name 'Name Maker' must be another modifier for Bicheonhori.

Thinking about it, it wasn't strange.

He was the author of the meditation-based work, 'The 100 Strongest'. He was the historian who personally gave countless characters nicknames.

【You're going to give me the modifier of a Recorder.】

【I see.】

【Do you give all the modifier for the new Recorders?】

【Most of them.】

Bicheonhori's mask grinned.

I quietly admired his smile and said.

【I have no intention of being confined by the 'context of modifiers' you created.】

The 'name' of everything in the <Star Stream> is imbued with a story. That story grows with its existence, becoming a destiny, and eventually a crucial indicator of its existence.

In other words,

【Isn't that how you're going to bestow [Fate] on me?】

In the <Star Stream>, modifiers are the very fate of that being.

【I expected you to say that. But strictly speaking, this isn't a 'modifier' I'm bestowing. I simply choose the piece of story that suits you.】

I understand what Bicheonhori meant. Both he and I are merely recorders of this <Star Stream>. And the one who completes the record is not the one who writes it, but the one who reads it.

【It's not me who grants you power—】

【It's the <Star Stream>, right?】

Then a series of modifiers appeared before my eyes.

1. The Scribe of the End.
2. Knight of Salvation.
3. Witness of Infinity.

Perhaps these three are the candidates for modifiers.

After I remained silent for a long time, Bicheonhori asked.

【Don't you like any of them?】

【All three clearly described me in some way.】

【If you don't like any of them, you can make one yourself.】

To make one myself.

Is that even possible?

【But in that case, it'll be difficult to properly receive the blessings bestowed upon a name. The <Star Stream> is inherently harsh on those who seek to change their own fate.】

【Can I delay choosing a modifier for a bit?】

【Is there something else urgent?】

Actually, even as I listened to Bicheonhori, my mind was busy with the external scenario.

According to what I heard from Cloud Mountain, right now wasn't the time for me to leisurely choose a name.

Bicheonhori looked at me intently and then blurted out,

【Is it because of the Mad Sword Emperor ?】

As expected, hiding one's true feelings in front of a high-ranking Recorder was difficult.

When I nodded, Bicheonhori said,

【It'll be too late even if we go to her now. The Constellations of the Giant Nebulae have begun to chase that child.】

I knew the Mad Sword Emperor was in dire straits. However, what I was curious about was how he was able to grasp the Mad Sword Emperor 's situation so thoroughly.

【Bicheonhori, how far are you recording?】

Even a high-ranking Recorder can't keep track of every scenario.

If he was focusing on the Mad Sword Emperor , a mere incarnation, then the implications were clear.

【Was it you who gave her the nickname 'Mad Sword Emperor'?】

【She's a character who will be named one of the 'Top 100 Strongest People' in this world.】

I hurriedly looked around. I had to get out of here immediately. It wasn't just any Recorder, but Bicheonhori who was watching over the story.

「The Mad Sword Emperor will soon face a serious crisis.」

It meant a story worthy of a Recorder's coveted record was about to begin.

【I have to go.】

【I told you. Even if you go now, you'll be late.】

I'm already eight years late. Even if I'm even later, I can't refuse to go just because I'm late.

Bicheonhori looked at me intently and said,

【There's one way you won't be late.】

I asked, trying to grasp what he meant.

【Do you know the exact location of the Mad Sword Emperor?】

【Is that all there is to it?】

A sudden realization dawned on me.

Bicheonhori was speaking. If I accept his offer, he'll tell me how to save the Mad Sword Emperor.

【I like how quickly you talk.】

Since we were just talking about 'modifiers', perhaps the deal was to ask me to choose one of the modifiers he'd created.

But Bicheonhori's offer was unexpected.

【Read the story records I wrote, and I'll tell you how to save the Mad Sword Emperor.】

【Read the records?】

Normally, I would have readily accepted. Even if it weren't his request, the records of a high-ranking Recorder were worth reading.

The problem was timing. Now wasn't the time to leisurely read his records.

【Didn't you want to know 'where the Mad Sword Emperor is now'?】

The moment I heard those words, a strange feeling struck me.

Where is she now?

Bicheonhori wasn't simply talking about the Mad Sword Emperor's 'spatiotemporal coordinates'.

「To truly understand someone's situation, you must ultimately understand their history.」

Bicheonhori was saying.

【If you truly want to save her, shouldn't you first understand why she came to the 'New Murim District'?】

Perhaps this was Bicheonhori's trap. He could be using my identity as a 'Kim Dokja fragment' to plot some kind of scheme.

【Understood.】

Even so, I had no choice. Perhaps it was because I, too, am a reader before being a writer.

【Show me.】

【Good thinking.】

Bicheonhori nodded readily, and a dazzling sentence began to float through the air.

「This is a story about a certain madness.」

The records began to be viewed.

---

With a ragged breath, the stories scattered. Perhaps it was the wounds from the previous clash. The skull mask covering her face rattled. She had to find a place to hide.

"Find her! She's nearby!"

Hidden deep within the abandoned building, the Mad Sword Emperor took a deep breath.

[The special ability, 'Immortal', is activated!]

If it weren't for the power of 'Immortal' inherited from her master, she would have collapsed long ago.

But even with this level of ability, dealing with the enemies pursuing her was no easy feat.

[The Constellations of the Giant Nebula <Olympus> are tracking you!]

[The Constellations of the Giant Nebula <Vedas> are tracking you!]

To make matters worse, the healing power of 'Immortal' was also hindered.

[Your incarnation is currently poisoned.]

Perhaps the previous blow had poisoned it. The vitality of 'Immortal' had been fighting the poison, but fighting them in this state was a desperate attempt to end in vain.

[The 'Recorder of Fear' supporting <Olympus Technology> is looking for you.]

More than anything, there were even 'Recorders' over there. Those who arbitrarily judge others' [Fate].

'There are only two options.'

Close your eyes, use the energy of the Elaine Forest, and lie down for two hours, or find an antidote.

After a moment of reflection, the Mad Sword Emperor called out to someone in her head.

'Can you hear me?'

She called out to the Constellation that had often helped her on her journey here. But the Constellation didn't respond.

He'd been busy with his own Constellation recently, so perhaps he didn't have time to worry about this.

'What would he have done?'

The thought struck her, and she smiled wryly.

'He would have found a way.'

She felt the urge to call his name. But perhaps it was the addiction. His name, his face, couldn't readily come to mind.

Consciousness was drifting in and out of her. In her somewhat hazy state, she felt like she was hallucinating.

"Why would Heewon do something like that? You could really die. You heard what it was like. Who the hell is that person?"

She had definitely heard something like that before. It must have been right before she entered the 'Fear Realm'.

She had to answer the questions of those who asked why she was going that far, whether there was a reason for her to do so.

"That is..."

But then she couldn't answer. She lacked the confidence to explain her feelings.

Perhaps that was why she felt compelled to act. She felt that once she saved him, she would understand why. If she met him again and looked into those gentle, narrow eyes, she might be able to explain her feelings.

[Your story mutters bitterly.]

But she had recklessly entered the 'Fear Realm', where she had nearly died several times. She couldn't believe that such terrifying monsters existed. If each and every one of them appeared in the scenario, it would be a catastrophe.

Nevertheless, confronting them, dodging them, and fleeing them—she steadily advanced deeper into the Fear Realm. When she reached the Entrance, the Middle Zone, and finally the entrance to the End Zone, she was certain.

「He is here.」

At the same time, she had a premonition.

「The Fear Realm is collapsing.」

The world was collapsing, as if crushed by powerful pressure. Beyond the collapsing world, a starlight she knew so well twinkled.

"Inho-ssi."

Jung Heewon started running. She ran, calling out the star's name, whatever it seemed to be.

"Kim Dokja!"

But the star was sucked away somewhere in the fierce storm. Jung Heewon ran frantically, chasing the starlight that vanished without a trace.

She had come all this way, vowing to save him, to bring him back.

"No..."

Watching the starlight scattering in the collapsing storm, Jung Heewon slowly sank to her knees.

The sound of a train could be heard from somewhere. A train carrying the Transcendents was departing, facing a disaster that would destroy a world.

Watching the train's tail dwindle away, Jung Heewon sank to her seat.

「I want to become strong.」

She wanted to become strong. She wanted to become strong enough to protect that person. That's why she swung her sword. She came here, wanting to return what she had received, what she thought she had received.

「Some salvation is completed not by the giver, but by the receiver.」

But she wasn't even given the chance to save that person.

「Her salvation ended here.」

With a sound like a rift in time buckling across an entire region, her world was washed clean.

But at the moment she had given up everything, a faint voice came from afar.

[No, Captain! If you jump from here—]

[Stop! Breaking the Sky Sword Saint!]

At first, she thought she'd misheard. But a moment later, something appeared to be running from the distant, pale landscape. A long shadow was running towards her.

A large hand suddenly reached out and grabbed her.

But the world was crushing her faster. The giant reached out with its other hand and forcibly opened the rift between the worlds, pulling her out. But in return, it lost one of its own arms.

「Even so, some salvation is only complete when you extend a hand.」

The giant's arm was torn apart with a bang. The giant, pouring out a story from one of its arms, asked her,

[Are you really going to die in a place like this?]

And so she met her master.

924 Episode 52 Mad Sword Emperor (9)

Jung Heewon couldn't understand why the giant had saved her.

The giant ran, carrying her in its massive side.

[Your incarnation body is badly damaged.]

Only after the waves of destruction had barely moved away did the giant place Jung Heewon on the ground.

[If you continue like this, you will die.]

Jung Heewon knew this. Her incarnation body had already reached its limit. To reach the End Zone of the Fear Realm, she had exhausted her potential.

The reason she was still alive was clear.

[The story 'Regret, Exhaustion, Obsession', continues its storytelling.]

Her story was keeping her alive.

[What a peculiar story.]

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint looked closely at Jung Heewon and asked.

[Is there someone you wish to save?]

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's 'Mirror Eyes' glowed brightly and began to read Jung Heewon.

[Are you perhaps an acquaintance of 'that child'?]

Jung Heewon slowly raised her head.

That child. Though the two syllables were nonsensical, Jung Heewon realized who it referred to.

"Do you know... Dokja-ssi?"

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint nodded heavily and continued her brief story.

A man who suddenly appeared in the 'Fear Realm' one day. He joined the Transcendent Alliance, confronted the Great Nebulae and the King of Fear, and ultimately fell into the final Time Fault.

"We must meet."

Jung Heewon struggled to get up, but her body wouldn't respond.

[I repeat, you will die soon.]

Jung Heewon despaired.

She finally heard the story of the person she had longed to meet.

[Become my disciple.]

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint spoke to her, who suddenly raised her head.

[If you inherit the 'immortality', you can survive.]

The moment she heard that voice, Jung Heewon instinctively realized. Perhaps she hadn't crossed this long path into the Fear Realm to meet this person.

Jung Heewon gasped for breath and asked,

"If I become your disciple, can I protect him?"

The words were so broken that it was impossible to understand. Nevertheless, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint discerned the meaning within them.

[Do you know what it means to protect someone?]

Jung Heewon shook her head, and Breaking the Sky Sword Saint spoke.

[If the person you wish to protect is attacked by a Constellation, you must fight that Constellation.]

Constellations. Jung Heewon now knew well about those terrifying stars.

[If the person you wish to protect is attacked by a Nebula, you must confront that Nebula.]

Nebula. A vicious group of terrifying Constellations.

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint continued,

[If the person you wish to protect is attacked by a world, you must fight that world.]

"I know. That's exactly what I intend to do."

[I don't know how to protect someone.]

No one, not even Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, would know such a method. However, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint extended a large hand and added,

[But I can teach you how to fight alongside someone when they face the world.]

From that day on, Jung Heewon studied swordsmanship under Breaking the Sky Sword Saint near the Mid Zone of the Fear Realm.

[Breaking the Sky Technique, Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship, Red Phoenix Shunpo, Breaking the Sky Sword path.]

With her exceptional talent, she quickly mastered all of Breaking the Sky's techniques.

[It's been a long time since I've seen a student who has mastered the basics so well.]

A swordsman with no major strengths, but no bad habits. That was Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's assessment of Jung Heewon.

It was only natural.

Since the scenario began, Jung Heewon had trained only one swordsmanship skill.

「Kendo.」

The path of the sword, to draw the fastest and most precise trajectory.

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint observed her sword and showed her the path she should take.

[In the Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship, everyone shatters the heavens in different ways. Some shatter the heavens with flashy swordsmanship, while others cleave the heavens with an extremely refined single sword.]

She also heard a story about another disciple of the Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship.

Supreme King Yoo Joonghyuk.

The man she had been targeting, surprisingly, was her master's disciple.

"How much training does it take to become that strong?"

[That kid is special. He doesn't just have 'talent'.]

He doesn't just have talent.

Jung Heewon mulled over the meaning of that statement over and over again.

[Of course, you have incredible talent. It's been a while since I've seen an incarnation achieve 'transcendence' on their own.]

"But this isn't enough, is it?"

[What you need to overcome isn't his talent, but his time. If you want to beat him, you'll have to work several times harder than he does.]

"Still, that's the area I'm most confident in."

For several more years, Jung Heewon studied swordsmanship under the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. Through endless training and sparring, she learned the proper stance for the sword and how to confront the Constellations.

[This has taught you all the basics, so from now on, it's up to you.]

"These are only the basics?"

[The basics are enough. Those 'basics' are your greatest strength.]

"But I haven't yet broken the sky."

[To break the sky, you first need to understand what it looks like.]

"So you're saying I should carry out the scenarios?"

Ultimately, this world is made of stories.

[The story, 'Regret, Exhaustion, Obsession', wants to continue its storytelling.]

And in this world made of stories, all incarnations must walk toward the completion of their stories. Only those who walk this lonely and arduous path to the end can overcome the limitations imposed by the <Star Stream> and become true Transcendent beings.

[Yes, it's time to go back.]

With that, Jung Heewon and Breaking the Sky Sword Saint left the Fear Realm.

Looking at her master's large back as she walked ahead, one sleeve fluttering in the wind, Jung Heewon pondered.

「Why did master sacrifice her own arm to save her?」

Of course, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint had already answered.

[Because that's what chivalry is.]

But Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's words were nothing more than a tautology.

[I saved you because I had to. That's all.]

Everyone knows that saving people is the right thing to do.

But is it really justifiable to sacrifice oneself to save someone just because it's the 'right thing to do'?

However, Jung Heewon liked Breaking the Sky Sword Saint in that way.

And it wasn't simply because she had saved her.

Her master, with her back straight, looked up at the sky. Her back, unfazed by any starlight, served as a kind of guide for Jung Heewon. Proof of how far a single incarnation could rise in this terrifying world of the Star Stream.

No matter what enemies appeared before them, she felt safe as long as she was with her master. Learning swordsmanship by her side and growing stronger—she felt she could become proud when she met him again.

And ironically, her small hopes were finally shattered upon arriving at the 'New Murim District'.

Constellations of the Narrative-grade surrounded her master.

The master, blood-red stories spilling from her eyes, faced a world to protect someone, and spoke.

[Run away, disciple.]

---

In a hazy state of consciousness, the Mad Sword Emperor suddenly regained consciousness. She couldn't remember when she'd lost consciousness.

Swish, stories poured out.

The shattered stories fell from her poisoned incarnation body. Her memories slowly reconstructed, and her master's last appearance came to her clearly.

「[Run, disciple.]」

An incarnation stronger than anyone she knew. She had reached the pinnacle of [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship], a powerhouse who could even compete with the great Narrative-grade Constellations.

But even the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint couldn't stand against [Fate].

"You were hiding there, Mad Sword Emperor."

The Mad Sword Emperor reflexively activated [Vermilion Phoenix Divine Treasure]. The ruined building she had been hiding in collapsed under the slash.

The swirling dust clouds were like the chaos of her mind.

Like someone trying to escape from a chasing memory, the Mad Sword Emperor swung her sword. Her sword strikes were imbued with the stories she had experienced over the past few months.

「The time she lost her master and swung her sword like a madman.」

"I found it! It's Mad Sword Emperor! Kaaaaaaak!"

「The time she killed an ascendant.」

"This is crazy! Get out of the way!"

"She's almost at her limit! Push her!"

「Becoming a wanted person in the 'New Murim District' and being called 'Mad Sword Emperor'.」

"Too, too strong—"

"My arm! My arm! Aaaah!"

「Realizing the identity of the 'New Murim District', fighting against the corporations, and finally destroying the 'Orbital Elevator'.」

Even as the dust clouds turned into clouds of blood, the incarnations continued to surge forward without rest.

[The recorders cheering on the ascendants of the Giant Nebulae are watching you.]

The terminal incarnations of the Giant Nebulae. And the ascendants leading them were also visible.

Leading the charge were the Blood Jade Fist Demon Jo Jincheol and Paradise Saint Reinheit.

"As expected, she lives up to her reputation."

"Hahaha! We finally caught her, the Mad Sword Emperor!"

As they joined the battlefield, already in the early stages of the narrative stage, the Mad Sword Emperor gradually began to gain ground. It was difficult to fend off the attacks from the ascendants flying in from all directions. Blood spurted from her thighs and arms in an instant. Her breathing quickly reached the tip of her chin.

[Your incarnation body is in danger.]

Under normal circumstances, there would have been any way to escape. But now, her incarnation body was poisoned. Maintaining a prolonged battle with them was a huge burden.

'There's only one way.'

The Mad Sword Emperor grabbed a sword that had fallen to the ground and poured all her magical power into the blade.

Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship.

Aura.

Breaking the Sky Ryu Seonggyeol.

The fragments of the sword shattered like meteors, piercing the bodies of the rushing ascenders.

"What—"

"Kwaaaaak!"

The golden energy of Breaking the Sky Ryu Seonggyeol swept through the battlefield like a storm. The unsuspecting ascendants rolled on the ground, clutching at their pierced chests, arms, and stomachs.

[The Constellation, 'Monarch of the Small Fries', is astonished by the Mad Sword Emperor's might!]

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', is astonished by the Mad Sword Emperor's might!]

[The Constellations of the Giant Nebulae are astonished by the Mad Sword Emperor's might!]

[Beware.]

A force that could sweep away ascendants who had reached the Narrative-grade alone.

The Mad Sword Emperor, who had let out the breath she had been holding, began to stagger forward.

'I'll get out of here.'

But the moment she turned around and was about to activate [Vermilion Phoenix Divine Treasure], something grabbed her ankle.

She felt the hairs on her body stand on end.

She felt as if her feet were fixed to the ground, unable to move. She felt a blazing heat from somewhere, and then the ground around her began to burn.

A vision that set the world ablaze with just a glance.

The Mad Sword Emperor knew full well whose power this was.

[The Constellation, 'Flame of Purification', glares at you.]

Slowly turning her head, she saw the radiant incarnation of the Constellation there.

A storm of probability raged beneath the brightly open sky.

The Constellation descended upon the incarnation of the suffering ascender.

[The Constellation, 'Flame of Purification', descends upon the scenario area!]

A Constellation that surpassed even the Narrative-grade, looming over Myth-grade. One of the eight Lokapalas of the great <Vedas> was staring at her.

[Child, you have been too violent.]

The Flame of Purification, 'Agni'.

One of the Lokapalas of <Vedas> who had imprisoned her master that day.

The Mad Sword Emperor charged at Agni without hesitation.

If someone of the level of a Lokapala had appeared, there was nowhere to run. She had to confront her. Just like her master had done that day.

Transcendental Stage 4.

In an instant, her story exploded, taking over the entire area. The golden currents of energy contained in [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship] surged forth.

Agni stared at the story of Breaking the Sky's swordsmanship flying towards him and said,

[Breaking the Sky Sword Saint has a remarkable disciple.]

A swordsmanship strong enough to rip through the flames of Agni, one of the Eight Lokapalas, and inflict damage on his incarnation.

[If only a few more years had passed, another transcendent that would scorn Constellations would have been born.]

It was a strike that would have been impossible to block if the target had been an ordinary Narrative-grade Constellation. Nevertheless, Agni parried the blow. It wasn't simply because Agni was a Lokapala of Vedas.

[You will die here.]

Because the laws of this world were not on the Mad Sword Emperor's side.

[The recorders of this scenario declare 'Fate'.]

Fate. The damned curse that had bewitched her master had just been placed upon her.

「The Mad Sword Emperor knew. She couldn't kill Agni now.」

「The poisoned incarnation body was breaking apart in real time.」

「The magical power, which had reached its limit, had long since been exhausted.」

Agni's two fists, momentarily on the defensive, moved as the sentences shackled her entire body. The Mad Sword Emperor groaned at the fists imbued with a distant story. The pain felt as if her grip was being torn apart.

「With her end before her, the Mad Sword Emperor thought.」

A fiery storm pounded through her entire body.

The shattered legend flowed ceaselessly from her.

「"Why did Heewon-ssi do that?"」

The fragments of the leaked legend swirled around her.

The question that had brought her here.

「"You could really die. You heard what kind of place it was. What exactly is that person?"」

She, speechless, was helpless before that question. But her sword answered her.

A sword she had swung to protect someone, or because she wanted to protect someone. That sword spoke for her.

「At least while she swung her sword for someone, she felt infinitely special.」

The thing that made her, a nobody, special.

It was once Cheon Inho, now Kim Dokja. Protecting him. The desire to protect him.

"I—"

Perhaps she hadn't sought him out for him. She simply wanted to continue feeling this special feeling.

「I saved you because I had to. That's all.」

At that moment, the Mad Sword Emperor seemed to understand, even a little, her master's words. 'I saved you because I had to' wasn't just about righteousness.

「I save because I must, and I protect because I must.」

The truly important reason for living is bound to be tautological.

Her knees buckled, and Agni's fist approached.

「It was finally the end of the Mad Sword Emperor.」

Even in her final moments, she didn't close her eyes. Instead, she stared proudly at the fist flying towards her.

Although she hadn't been able to protect what she wanted, she glared wide open to prove she hadn't given up.

And at that moment, Jung Heewon witnessed a strange sight.

「Finally it was the Mad Sword Emperor's end.」

A sight she could witness because she kept her eyes open until the very end.

Agni's fist was slowly slowing down.

「Finally it was the Mad Sword Emperor's end.」

The world was slowly becoming covered in black and white.

「Finally it was the Mad Sword Emperor」

Amidst a landscape as if pure white snow was falling, the sound of the rules of space and time breaking apart could be heard.

「Finally it was the Mad」

The sentences of [Fate] that had bound her were scattering. The skull mask covering her face clattered and fell.

「Finally」

What filled the void of her shattered fate was a single line written just for her in this world.

「Finally, Jung Heewon slowly raised her head.」

When had it been?

A small window had appeared before her eyes.

[The Recorder of Fear, 'The One Who Rewrites Eternity', requests a 'Recording Contract' from you.]

925 Episode 53 Record War (1)

---

「"Whether we record it or not, what happened happened, and what will happen will happen. So, aren't you curious? Why, and for what purpose, do we strive to record stories?"」

—Bicheonhori King Weilong

---

【You know, right? Even if we run at full speed now, we'll be late.】

Bicheonhori was right. Even if we escape the subspace right now and go rescue Jung Heewon, we'll be late.

By the time I arrive, the [Fate] of the Recorders will be fulfilled, and the heat of Agni, the Purifying Flame, will burn everything in the area, including Jung Heewon.

Fortunately, I had a way to resolve this spatiotemporal disparity.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', begins its storytelling!]

[Exclusive skill, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint', activates!]

Being located in the subspace created by Bicheonhori proved to be a great help.

【This space, strictly speaking, is a place created by processing 'dreams'. Therefore, it's an infinitely suitable space for you to use your 'power'.】

At this point, I'm starting to suspect if the whole thing wasn't just a ruse by Bicheonhori, but now I was in no position to be picky.

Furthermore, another obstacle remained. For [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint] to activate, both I and the target had to think of each other simultaneously.

「Making her, who is nothing, special.」

Thankfully, the obstacle was naturally resolved.

「Once Cheon Inho, now Kim Dokja. Protecting that person. The desire to protect him.」

The moment I read that sentence, my breath caught in my throat.

Eight years had passed, but Jung Heewon still remembered me.

My heart pounded.

I could read her, leaning against that sentence. I would be able to see the world through her eyes once more.

I definitely should have.

[The connection with the target is currently not smooth.]

Why? Even though the activation conditions were met, the 'First-Person Viewpoint' didn't activate. What's the problem?

I turned around and saw Bicheonhori looking at me with a puzzled smile.

【Why, what's not working?】

That old man clearly knew I couldn't properly activate [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint].

【Is this why you called me here?】

【Heh heh, I don't understand what you mean.】

I let out a light sigh and concentrated. If I couldn't use [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint], there was only one way to help her in this situation.

Tsutsutsutsutsu.

That was to manifest the 'power' of the Recorder of Fear.

「It was finally the end of the Mad Sword Emperor.」

The [Fate] emblem granted by the Recorders came to mind vividly, clinging to Jung Heewon like a binding.

I reached out for the emblem without hesitation.

Tsutsutsutsu.

The moment my hand touched it, sentences overflowed through my fingers like living loaches. I gripped the slippery words tightly and applied force. Then, the edges of the sentences I touched began to crumble.

「It was finally the end of」

Bicheonhori, who was watching me next to me, sighed.

【Surprising. Have you already realized the power of 'record'?】

The power to record the legends of characters in real time. To be precise, the power to force the history of a 'specific direction'.

That was the power of 'record' that the Recorders had.

The method itself was not difficult. With a feeling similar to when using the [□□] skill, I just need to twist the sentence that comes to mind into the shape I want.

Tsutsutsutsu!

Every time I intervened in the sentence, a threatening afterstorm rushed near me.

Maybe it's because they got wrong with the 'probability' that other Recorders put in.

[The 'Recorders' cheering for the Great Nebulae express their bewilderment at the reversal of their 'Fate'.]

[The 'Recorders' cheering for the Great Nebulae once again call out 'Fate'!]

I felt the context of the story shift violently. Sentences, swarming like insects, clung to my hand. The mere touch of their handwriting elicited a sense of discomfort.

I grabbed hold of the words once more and forcefully crushed them.

「The end of the Mad Sword Emperor」

This was the way the Recorders fought.

[The 'Recorders' cheering for the Great Nebulae look around!]

[The 'Recorders' cheering for the Great Nebulae have noticed your presence!]

A battle of records to determine the future of each character—in other words, their [Fate].

「The end of the Mad Sword」

Despite the Recorders' struggles, the dominance of the records was gradually shifting to my side. Of course, it's much easier to erase existing sentences than to write new ones.

[The probability of 'Fate' is distorted!]

[Some of the 'Recorders' cheering for the Great Nebulae are hit hard and retreat!]

Bicheonhori spoke, seeming to enjoy the scene.

【Indeed, you're no ordinary Recorder.】

【I just erased a few words.】

【The better the story, the harder it is to erase.】

It seemed like I'd heard something important, but I didn't have the presence of mind to respond.

Even if the binding power of [Fate] had weakened, Jung Heewon was still in danger. Before her stood Agni, the flame of purification, half-descended. Jung Heewon, whose incarnation body had reached its limit, was in a state of peril.

As if trying to help me, Bicheonhori spoke.

【There's no time. Although they've retreated for a moment, the Recorders over there are no pushovers. They'll prepare their position and pounce soon.】

【Isn't there a way?】

As if waiting for that, Bicheonhori added.

【If you sign a 'Record Contract,' you'll be able to describe the character's future with much less probability.】

I see.

I immediately attempted the 'Record Contract'. But...

[You cannot perform the 'Record Contract'.]

When I turned around, Bicheonhori said, still smiling.

【The 'Record Contract' is a sacred ritual. Only those who hold the 'Modifier' can perform it.】

It was then that I realized something.

That cunning fox knew from the beginning that I would sign the 'Record Contract' to save Jung Heewon.

In the end, I had to choose a 'Modifier' to help her.

1. Scribe of the End.

2. Knight of Salvation.

3. Witness of Infinity.

A dazzling beam of light floated before my eyes, accompanied by modifiers.

Bicheonhori must have foreseen this situation and created a modifier specifically for me.

[The name you chose will help you.]

If I choose one of these modifiers, I will receive the blessings of a high-ranking Recorder and overcome this crisis.

【Yes. I have chosen.】

A dazzling beam of light slowly floated before my eyes, accompanied by a modifier.

Bicheonhori stared at the modifier for a moment, then licked his lips and asked.

【Are you really going to make that choice?】

【You've been watching me all this time, so you must have anticipated what I would choose.】

Naturally, the modifier I chose wasn't the one Bicheonhori had suggested.

【You know the price of creating your own modifier, right?】

I nodded.

【The combination of words you chose is too heavy and harsh. I'll ask again. Are you really going to use that slur?】

【I'm prepared. I didn't become a 'Recorder' just to change a few words.】

What was on Bicheonhori's mind at my words? For a moment, something akin to worry flashed across his eyes.

【Being a Recorder doesn't mean you can escape 'Fate'. All we can do is change the sentence to 'interpret' the predetermined future differently.】

Interpreting the predetermined future differently... I said, mulling over the words.

【Even if it's just a play on words, a twisted interpretation is fine.】

If a writer decides to intervene in a character's [Fate], they must also be prepared. No matter what events, no matter what adversity befalls them, they must navigate the entire story together with their characters. Even if it ends in catastrophe.

【If someone reads that pun and believes it, it could become reality.】

We must keep in mind that that catastrophe could become the eternity of this world.

[The Recorder of Fear, 'One Who Rewrites Eternity', requests a 'Recording Contract' from incarnation 'Jung Heewon.']

The One Who Rewrites Eternity.

That was the 'modifier' I had chosen as a Recorder.

I looked at Jung Heewon on screen, anxious.

Please accept it.

But Jung Heewon on screen simply stared blankly at the message flashing before her eyes, a confused expression on her face.

【Oh, you make mistakes too.】

A mistake?

【Any good Recorder should first listen to how the character feels before writing the 'record' they desire.】

A series of facts belatedly came to mind.

Damn, I see.

【She lost her teacher to the [Fate] of the Recorders.】

I forgot about it for a moment in the urgency.

【If you suddenly offered her a recording contract in that situation, there's no way she'd accept it...】

Bicheonhori, who had been saying that, made a dumbfounded expression.

I, too, stared blankly at the screen. As if she could see me here, Jung Heewon was facing me across the screen.

「"...Dokja-ssi?"」

How could that be possible?

She was speaking to me, as if a character had broken through the [Fourth Wall].

「"It's Inho-ssi, right? It's you, right? Right?"」

It was unbelievable. Even from so far away, Jung Heewon had clearly sensed me.

Then, sparks flew from her eyes.

[The story, 'Regret, Exhaustion, Obsession', ripples.]

[The story, 'Regret, Exhaustion, Obsession', senses your presence.]

「ImustprotectImustprotectImustprotectImustprotectImustprotectImustprotectImustprotectImustprotectImustprotectImustprotect」

A brilliant ray of light burst, a faint link appearing between me and her.

['Record contract' has been signed.]

The world's landscape shifted, and Jung Heewon unleashed [Vermilion Divine Treasure] to dodge Agni's strike.

Perhaps it was because of her different movements from before, Agni frowned and asked.

[What have you done?]

I slowly opened my mouth, assessing Agni's predicament.

【Heewon-ssi, listen carefully. The situation is truly dire.】

I wasn't sure if she could hear me clearly. She had little magic left, and her incarnation body had long since reached its limit.

【Nevertheless—】

Still, I had to speak. I had to offer even the most obvious words of encouragement. Because in this world of stories, even the most obvious words can serve as a connecting adverb that turns the tide of battle.

【We can win.】

The enemy was no less than one of the Lokapalas of Vedas. A narrative-grade constellation comparable to Surya, the 'Supreme God of Light'.

「However, with Jung Heewon now having achieved the 4th stage of Transcendence, the odds weren't against her.」

[The Recorder of Fear, 'One Who Rewrites Eternity', explains the strategy.]

If only we could properly record this battle—

[The constellation, 'Supreme God of Light', looks upon the Emperor of Light.]

[The constellation, 'God of Wine and Ecstasy', observes the Emperor of Light's battle.]

[The constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', cannot contain his excitement.]

[The Constellation, 'Monarch of the Small Fries', observes your record.]

We will be able to obtain a 'Giant Tale' comparable to 「Demon World's Spring」 in this city.

926 Episode 53 Record War (2)

【Ughh…!】

【Ooooh…】

The most expensive [Fate] they'd undertaken in the past few months was to cause a rain of cow dung to fall upon the incarnation of the God of Wine and Ecstasy, who had betrayed Olympus.

—Call [Fate] to the Mad Sword Emperor.

Meanwhile, a truly grand commission arrived. It was a request from the giant nebula <Veda> and <Olympus>.

—Tear her to pieces and kill her so she can never again interfere with the 'New Murim World'.

This commission was crucial.

The leader of the low-level recorder association, the 'Black Book Society', and the current orange-rank recorder, 'The One Who Draws the Question Mark', was planning to use this commission to 'promote his record'.

「If you reach the red rank, you can become an assistant secretary for a high-ranking recorder.」

Successful completion of the quest would allow him to work under the storied 'Fox Commanding the Sky' or the 'Demon King of the Cinema', adding footnotes to their records and becoming the 'Final Recorder'. It was definitely meant to be.

【Report. What on earth is going on?】

On the screen, the Emperor, freed from the bindings of the text, was dodging Agni's attacks.

The green mask, hastily rushing in, spoke.

【It seems an external recorder has interfered with [Fate].】

【I know. I mean, whoever it is.】

The [Fate] that had been declared had been erased, so it was natural for them to take a hit, but at the same time, ten recorders were put into a 'Recording Interruption' state.

【Is this the work of another syndicate?】

Even if they were low-ranking recorders, when ten recorders joined forces, the [Fate] became considerably more robust. This couldn't have happened unless some other record-keeping team had intervened.

【No. It was the work of a single recorder.】

【One recorder?】

The One Who Draws the Question Mark paused for a moment and asked.

【Has a high-ranking recorder appeared?】

But that couldn't have been the case. 'High-ranking recorders' had a pact not to interfere with the affairs of this 'New Murim District'.

【Unknown recorder. Doesn't seem to be high-ranking.】

【What's the modifier?】

【It's called the 'One Who Rewrites Eternity'.】

The One Who Rewrites Eternity.

It was a modifier he'd never heard of before.

That's when the screen in front of him began to flicker.

【Uh, a call from the giant nebula!】

The large screen flickered violently, and soon the face of a narrative-grade constellation appeared on the screen.

[What on earth are you doing?]

<Veda>'s Lokapala. It was the Flame of Purification, Agni.

[Why was Fate lifted?]

The recorders trembled, their lips trembling at the force transmitted through the screen. Even as a 'Recorder of Fear', it was still difficult for the lower-ranking recorders to handle the pressure radiating from a constellation of late-stage of narrative-grade.

Finally, the 'Question Marker' leaped from his seat and demonstrated his writing prowess, taking Agni's punishment for him.

【Please give us a moment. There's an obstacle.】

[Is it taking this long to kill an incarnation?]

He thought it was out of place for him to call out [Fate] just to kill a single incarnation, but the 'Question Marker' didn't show it.

[I'll take care of it right away.]

Perhaps even in <Veda>, they're overdoing it.

Even in a scenario in the 70s, it's quite improbable for a Lokapala-level constellation to 'descend' into a region with no connection.

[Remember. Your role is to properly record the stars' footprints. If I don't like the records, I can replace you at any time.]

Agni declared this and then unilaterally cut off communication.

【Those damned constellations...】

It was strange.

Even if they were arrogant constellations, they'd never been this rude to the Recorder Guild.

The green mask interjected, seemingly embarrassed.

【With all due respect, I hear Veda has been looking into other Recorder Guilds.】

【Another Guild? Where? Could it be the 'Backup Chronicle Guild'?】

【It seems to be the 'Afterglow Library' side.】

The Backup Chronicle Guild.

And the Afterglow Library.

All of these were the recorder groups that had declared [Fate] together during the previous 'Battle for the Demon King of Salvation'.

The 'The One Who Draws the Question Mark' spoke with a sob.

【We can't let those guys take our work away. Contact the obstructing recorder. There's no need for unnecessary sacrifices. Tell him you'll grant him his request if he just yields the Mad Sword Emperor.】

He doesn't know who the recorder obstructing the revision is, but judging by the fact that he sent tens of their recorders away after several revisions, it's definitely a monster.

Then it's wise for them to avoid confrontation as much as possible.

【Well, there's no response at all.】

【No response? Why?】

【It seems he's signed a 'recording contract' with the Mad Sword Emperor.】

【This damn thing.】

All recorders suffer a huge blow if the subject of their 'recording contract' dies. In other words, they can never yield.

But if they continue this deadlock, they'll eventually incur the wrath of the Great Nebulae.

Finally, the 'One Who Draws the Question Mark' made a decision.

【It's clear this guy is no ordinary recorder. However, unless you're a high-ranking recorder, abnormal revision abilities are limited to the 'contractor' of a 'recording contract'.】

All recorders naturally react more strongly to those with whom they have a 'recording contract'.

【Our goal is to eliminate the Mad Sword Emperor, so there's no need to limit [Fate] to the Mad Sword Emperor. Change the target of [Fate].】

Currently, the Lokapala of Veda has decided to use 'Half-Body Descent'.

【For the next five minutes, we will support Agni's 'Full Descent'.】

In that case, it would be a more strategic choice to use [Fate] on Lokapala to increase the likelihood.

Even if a high-ranking recorder intervenes, this [Fate] will be unstoppable.

【Let's erase the name of that recorder forever, along with the Mad Sword Emperor.】

---

「"Dokja-ssi."」

Jung Heewon bit her lip and stared into space.

It had already been five minutes since she had escaped the one-sided bombardment. Now, just standing still in Jung Heewon's incarnation body was a miracle.

[You truly amaze me, young incarnation.]

Agni was strong. A head-on collision would crush every bone in her body with a single blow.

「Still, Jung Heewon continued to move.」

Brightly glowing sentences supported her movements.

「The [Vermilion Phoenix], practiced tens of thousands of times, miraculously evaded Agni's attack.」

「The sword, never let go of her hand, deflected Agni's trajectory, imbued with a fatal force.」

Of course, I don't know how Jung Heewon lived.

But even without understanding her timeline, I can easily imagine. It was a fantasy possible only because I trusted her.

It was a sentence I could willingly write, believing that for the past eight years, she had undergone more rigorous training than I could ever imagine.

「The trajectory of the Heavenly Blade moved in her hand.」

Transcendental Stage 4.

The ultimate state, where, once fully mastered, one could stand a chance against even the most skilled constellations.

Kugugugugu.

The [Heavenly Blade Sword], barely activated, once again deflected Agni's fist. But now, it was her limit.

【If she pushes herself any further, her sword will break.】

Bicheonhori, who had been watching the entire battle with amusement, intervened.

I knew it. Jung Heewon couldn't fight anymore.

【Heewon-ssi.】

And my strategy was just beginning.

「'Are you sure?'」

Jung Heewon glanced up at the sky, as if to confirm my sincerity, then sighed lightly and her expression hardened. Then, with a strange smile on her face, she opened her mouth to Agni.

"Veda says there are only eight 'Locapalas', but how disappointing. Is this all there is? If it were the 'Supreme God of Light', he would have burned me to death long ago."

It was a provocation the usual Jung Heewon would never have made. And it was also a provocation the usual Agni wouldn't have succumbed to.

[You're talking funnily.]

But the current situation was a bit special. This fight was being watched by another Locapala of Veda.

[The constelation, 'Supreme God of Light' makes an intrigued expression.]

And then there were one of the twelve constellations of <Olympus> and a constellation of the narrative-grade from <Tamra>.

[The constellation, 'God of Wine and Ecstasy', bursts into mirthful laughter.]

[The constellation, 'Monarch of the Small Fries', chuckles.]

Of course, if that were all, Agni wouldn't have been sincere.

[Many 'Recorders of Fear' are in the process of recording.]

This fight was being 'recorded' by the recorders.

In other words, no matter how this fight ended, it would inevitably remain as a 'story'.

[If you truly desire my wrath...]

Agni's expression contorted like a vicious evil spirit.

[It is the duty of 'Locapala' to lead you to 'liberation'.]

His entire body, which had once stood over ten meters in a half-ascension state, began to grow again.

Twenty meters, thirty meters, forty meters... a hundred meters. He had already towered higher than most buildings.

[Incarnations who worship Vedas, listen up.]

The incarnations who had been hiding nearby, watching the battle, looked up at the sky, bleeding from their orifices, at the resonating sound of the mantra.

[Those who do not wish to be liberated, flee this area immediately.]

The terrified incarnations screamed and began to flee. Both ascendants and non-ascendants alike fled in a panic.

Only Jung Heewon remained unmoved, witnessing the descent of the great god.

「The heavens open, and a black beast, uttering a terrible howl, descends.」

A gigantic black goat raced through the sky and descended to earth.

「A divine being, wielding an axe, sat down on the ornately decorated black goat.」

Who could dare confront that being?

「He has three faces and many arms, yet he wears a crown of blazing flames.」

Just meeting his gaze felt like my entire body was on fire.

「He is the god of fire, Agni, the flame that purifies the universe.」

That was the true form of Agni, the god of fire, standing shoulder to shoulder with the 'Supreme God of Light'.

The moment I saw him, I was certain.

This wasn't a battlefield as plausible as the 'Great Battle of Good and Evil'.

For a power so close to its true form to be revealed in such a place meant someone else was helping.

[Many Recorders of Fear contribute to the depiction of the 'Flame of Purification'.]

Probably the work of the Recorders.

"Dokja-ssi. That..."

In scenario 70, a one-on-one confrontation with 'Locapala', who was close to complete descent. It was a truly desperate situation, but I didn't panic.

【Yes.】

Probably the same for Jung Heewon.

【I guess we've passed the point where we can call him a 'human'.】

Agni's transformed incarnation now looked less human and more like some other species.

Jung Heewon nodded and said,

「"I suppose it's more correct to think of it as a monster."」

[Exclusive skill, 'Time of Judgment', activates!]

The characteristics of the Judgement trait.

'Judge of Destruction', which activates against monsters, began to shine.

927 Episode 53 Record War (3)

---

Kugugugugu.

I could hear the sound of probability gathering around the request to activate [Time of Judgment]. However, it wasn't a moment to relax.

The key activation condition for [Time of Judgment] requested by the 'Judge of Destruction' was 'the consent of all the Constellations within the channel'.

If even one Constellation consents to the activation, [Time of Judgment] will be activated.

【Heewon-ssi, please tell him exactly what I say from now on.】

Watching Jung Heewon nod across the screen, I observed the constellation's reactions.

[Some Constellations shook their heads.]

[A very small number of Constellations question the appropriateness of viewing the 'Flame of Purification' as a 'monster'.]

The reactions were as expected.

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', asks if he's a monster at that level.]

Of course, there were other Historical-grade Constellations, including 'Bald General of Justice', who were sympathetic to us, but even they weren't likely to agree to [Time of Judgment].

For a Historical-grade Constellation, not even a Narrative-grade, to oppose a massive Nebula would be to invite disaster.

Agni laughed, perhaps thinking we were cornered.

[It was an interesting strategy, but do you dare think there's a star that can oppose <Vedas>?]

As Agni had said, the sky was calm to the point of indifference. It was only natural.

No Constellation here would think Jung Heewon could defeat Agni.

But I wasn't fazed.

"There are no Constellations, but there are incarnations."

Jung Heewon calmly recited the lines I had given her.

"If the Supreme King were here, he wouldn't have said such things."

Agni looked down at Jung Heewon, as if she were saying something out of the blue. Jung Heewon, who was actually saying it, looked somewhat worried.

She probably doesn't understand why I made her say that.

I didn't really explain.

Because—

"Supreme King? Did you just say Supreme King?"

The reason I made her say that had just appeared from among the ruins.

"Mad Sword Emperor! I knew it! You really knew something about the Supreme King!"

Nirvana, the leader of the Salvation Church, had been chasing the Mad Sword Emperor. He had finally appeared on the battlefield.

"Tell me! What on earth do you know? Why are you using the Supreme King's swordsmanship!

Agni's expression twisted at the unexpected intruder.

[Is there a child who hasn't run away yet?]

"You cheeky Constellation, isn't this body speaking right now?"

As expected, Nirvana, in a fit of madness for Yoo Joonghyuk, remained undaunted even before that Narrative-grade Constellation.

Agni murmured, glancing at Nirvana with a strange gaze.

[Is that Seokjun's pet?]

Agni sighed softly, perhaps because rumors about Nirvana had already spread to Vedas.

[I'll close my eyes once I see him. Get out.]

Agni unleashed his power, and a heavy burden fell over the area once again.

Nirvana's expression hardened for a moment, then reacted.

"Are you ordering me to do this?"

Even though he was the Leader of the Salvation Church, his opponent was a Constellation of the 'Late Stage Narrative-grade'. Even though running away was not something to be ashamed of, he showed no signs of retreating. Then it's time for someone to light the fire.

"Savior. If you help me here, I'll give you what you want."

Jung Heewon repeated my words, and Nirvana cheered.

"Good. Mad Sword Emperor! Then become one with me and—"

"The regression of the Supreme King ends with this Round."

Nirvana's eyes slowly dilated.

"If you want to hear more, save me."

The next moment, Agni's fiery heat enveloped my vision.

Thankfully, a palm pierced through the fierce flames, protecting the two. Nirvana's [Thousand-Armed Avalokiteshvara] had activated.

"What do you mean? This Round is the end? Where on earth did you hear that?"

Nirvana, glaring, added in a faintly dazed voice.

"And… why do I smell my 'follower' on you?"

I smiled bitterly. As expected of a reincarnated being, he's quick-witted.

[Foolish mortals...]

Agni's fiery anger was intensifying.

But even Nirvana was no easy opponent.

"I'm not a mortal, but a reincarnated being, you foolish Constellation."

「Thousand-Armed Avalokitesvara, charging forward with a desperate resolve, blocked the fiery anger.」

Of course, even Nirvana wouldn't be able to defeat Agni. At best, he'd only be able to hold out for a few minutes.

I had to make good use of the precious time he'd given me.

【Are you planning to use that 'method' from earlier?】

Bicheonhori already seemed to know what I was planning.

【That method?】

【A method to temporarily become a Constellation.】

【What you mentioned is a good method, though.】

If I activate 'Demon King of Salvation Mode', I can temporarily wield powers equivalent to a 'Constellation'. Then, perhaps, even briefly, it might be possible to agree to [The Hour of Judgment]. But...

「A deep, bloody scent burned from the distant stories Agni lived in.」

「The blood of the living creatures he slew with his own axe filled the surroundings like fog.」

「The ceaseless, pulsating heat burned the fog, like waves...」

The sentences of the recorders flowed in real time. The pace of the sentences was so fast that catching and erasing them one by one seemed impossible.

At that moment, a peculiar sentence flashed before my eyes.

「Agni often glanced warily at the sky. As if he was reluctant to allow anyone to interfere in this battlefield.」

【If my thoughts are correct, there will be a Constellation that will aid us.】

【Are you waiting for <Kim Dokja Company> or the Constellations of other worldlines?】

How wonderful that would be.

I shook my head with a wry smile.

【This time, it's a different Constellation.】

【There's no way a Constellation could stand against Agni.】

"Gyaaaaaaaah!"

Finally, unable to withstand Agni's heat, the [Thousand-Armed Avalokitesvara] melted.

[The activation conditions for 'Hour of Judgment' have been met.]

Amidst the message, a terrifying energy wave surged from Jung Heewon's body. Jung Heewon leaped up in one breath and activated [Vermilion God's Treasure], striking with a flash of lightning.

The black goat Agni was riding let out a cry as if in a fit of convulsion. A pitch-black story leaped into the air. Agni muttered in shock.

[No way—]

The moment he raised his head, a single Constellation shone brightly in the sky.

[The Constellation, 'God of Wine and Ecstasy', consents to the activation of 'Hour of Judgment'.]

Dionysus, God of Wine and Ecstasy. He agreed to Jung Heewon's [Time of Judgment].

Agni glared and unleashed a mantra.

[Foolish prodigal son of Olympus! How dare you side with that incarnation?]

Dionysus also unleashed an indirect message at that terrifying mantra.

[The Constellation, 'God of Wine and Ecstasy', pretends otherwise.]

Even if Dionysus was one of the twelve gods of Olympus, confronting the Locapala of Vedas head-on was a risky undertaking.

Nevertheless, Dionysus chose the 'Mad Sword Emperor'.

【Suddenly, 'Dionysus'?】

I smiled, and Bicheonhori asked, his voice threatening.

【Could it be that you planned this? Since when?】

【Since I heard the information from 'Moral'.】

Moral said. Dionysus is currently independent from Olympus. In that situation, I was certain he would take a different path than the existing Olympus.

【Could it be that you used [Fate] on Dionysus?】

【Similar.】

【Even if it were [Fate], it wouldn't be possible to force the choice of a Narrative-grade Constellation.】

That's right. Even for a Recorder, manipulating a Narrative-grade being by imposing [Fate] on them is nearly impossible. [Fate], granted improbably, has its limits, and above all, all characters possess 'free will'.

【I didn't force it.】

I shrugged and showed him the sentence I'd written.

「Dionysus thought. 'Mad Sword Emperor. A Transcendent that chooses a direct confrontation with Agni, the Lokapala?'」

Bicheonhori glared at my sentence, as if trying to discern some hidden interpretation beneath the words.

【This is all there is to the [Fate] you wrote?】

My task was simple: to make Dionysus interested in the Mad Sword Emperor.

【Dionysus will undoubtedly need a new 'base' after the independence of <Olympus>.】

For now, I thought that was enough.

Just by making him aware of the Mad Sword Emperor, Dionysus would have deemed her useful in the 'next scenario'. Bicheonhori exclaimed in admiration.

【You're truly crazy.】

【Thank you for the compliment. Please donate some coins.】

The atmosphere on the battlefield changed with Dionysus' intervention.

Kugugugugu.

Her body, strengthened to the limit by the power of [Time of Judgment], Jung Heewon's sword began to move as if dancing.

「It's not enough.」

The trajectory of the [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship], which she had swung tens of thousands of times every day, was becoming darker.

Faster, stronger. Listening to her thoughts, I slowly closed my eyes. The stage was set, so it was my turn to step forward.

「What does it take for a character to unleash their full potential?」

Bichonhori said.

【I can't give you coins, but I can lend you a line or two.】

With that, a phrase flashed through my mind. It was a line from Bicheonhori, author of 「The 100 Strongest」.

「"You can't always say life is better than death."」

A line from Jung Heewon, who was simply called the 'Mad Butcher', unable to even find her own name in the main story.

「"It would be even more so if there was nothing to protect."」

The story of her suffering, unable to protect what was precious, had been passed down across the worldline to this place.

「IhavetoprotectIhavetoprotectIhavetoprotectIhavetoprotectIhavetoprotect...」

A round that seemed to continue on for eternity. Beyond the thoughts, I felt as if I could grasp the years she had lived. Bicheonhori added with a pleased smile.

【As expected, what strengthens a stage is 'repetition' and 'utilization'.】

Above the maddening prelude laid by Bicheonhori, the history she and I had built began to flow.

「"Heewon-ssi... I love you... It's true..."」

「"What are you doing?"」

The moment I first met her at Geumho Station.

「"Can you support me from behind?"」

「"I'd love to, but my arms are like this."」

「"Support me with your back. Like this!"」

The time we were eaten by a Sea Commander and, after many twists and turns, escaped together.

「"Good job, Heewon-ssi."」

And the death of Sergeant Jung Moonho at Seoul Station.

Even the moment we witnessed the sound together.

「That's how Jung Heewon became the 'Mad Sword Emperor'.」

I intervened in her life, and she willingly became my story. She became a sword, unbreakable by any tragedy.

So now, she and I were thinking the same thing.

「I will never let you die.」

We will not let each other die.

「The Axe of God and the Sword of Man clashed in the air.」

The scenery distorted, and a violent thunderbolt struck the sky.

[The Constellation, 'God of Wine and Ecstasy', cannot take its eyes off the battle.]

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', stops wiping his head.]

[The Constellation, 'Lying Dragon' closes the book he was reading.]

[The Constellation, 'Monarch of the Small Fries, widens his eyes.]

All the Constellations in the channel were focused on the battle, perhaps not expecting such a bloody battle in just scenario number 70.

[The Constellation, 'Monarch of the Small Fries', cannot take his eyes off the battle between gods and humans.]

The pure power of the story, captivating even the Constellations of the Giant Nebulae and the small and medium Constellations.

[The Constellation, 'Maritime War God, has entered the channel.]

[The Constellation, 'Maritime War God, feels a strange sense of deja vu during your battle.]

[The <Star Stream> begins to show the presence of that area.]

As the stage grew larger, the density of probability filling Agni's entire being also increased.

[With just such a piece of history.]

A divine strike, peeking at the Myth-grade position. An axe engulfed in fiery flames struck the ground. Nirvana, caught in the raging winds of red flame, collapsed on the ground without even a scream.

A god's shadow fell over Nirvana's incarnation body.

[Do you truly believe you can stand against a 'god'?]

Nirvana struggled, trampled by Agni.

The vastly longer history between gods and humans unfolded before our eyes.

「As the flames engulfed the land, the mountain ranges blackened like giant altars, and rivers evaporated and rose into the sky. Countless starlights were absorbed and scattered by the flames, and even the sun wavered before them like a faint lantern.」

「What I heard was the language of fire, the heartbeat of the universe as flames collided with each other.」

「Purification is Agni's declaration of liberation. Mother Nature's command to be purified by fire and reborn.」

A force that became [Fate] simply by repeating history.

I saw Bicheonhori shaking his head.

【It was an interesting fight, but it was a match that was impossible from the start.】

「The God of Flame was there.」

Even I, looking beyond the screen, felt a shiver. An enemy that even a Transcendent Stage 4 [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship] couldn't cut.

I saw Jung Heewon's face darken, biting her lip.

【You provoked the Constellations too much. The Flame of Purification is a 'Locapala'. Did you really think a mere incarnation could defeat him, who was on the verge of Mythical promotion?】

Perhaps it was something I wouldn't have done before. Using Jung Heewon to provoke the Constellations and expand the stage—there was absolutely no benefit to doing something like that right away.

【What on earth were you thinking…?】

But right now, this was the only way to save Jung Heewon.

【This is my thought.】

[The aftershock of probability is coming!]

The excessive abuse of probability finally led to the aftershock of probability.

Agni frowned and stared into the sky.

[The 'Balance of Probability' is beginning to tip!]

Due to the intervention of the Recorders and the Giant Nebulae, Agni used probability beyond what was permitted in the 'New Murim District'.

「The scales of probability are fair, so if one side of the scale tilts, a corresponding 'probability' is inevitably opened up on the other side.」

In other words, the conditions for a being comparable to Agni to be powerful in this city have just been met.

[The 'Great Hall' is being created!]

The sky in the scenario turned pitch black, and the 'Great Hall' appeared.

I said.

【The 'Great Hall' has the characteristic of summoning 'otherworldly deities' with deep temporal, spatial, and lore ties to the area.】

「And the 'Outer God' most closely connected to this 'city' is...」

Tsutsutsu, a portal swirled open before my eyes.

[The story, 'King of Fear' is with you.]

The scenario was calling me.

【Watch closely, Bicheonhori.】

I glanced at Bicheonhori, who was glaring at me, and stepped into the portal.

【Because the ending I'm about to write begins here.】

928 Episode 53 Record War (4)

Two piercing eyes twinkled in the pitch-black darkness of the theater.

The sound of someone regularly knocking on the theater door. Asmodeus ignored the noise and focused on the screen.

「"Haha, hahahaha! I, I can become strong now! You son of a bitch, Kim Dokja! You didn't know that!"」

A man shouted on the screen. A middle-aged man, splattered with demon blood, was stabbing the fallen 'Dark Guardian' with a groundhog knife.

「"Immortality? You idiot! What kind of immortality is immortality in a world like this? That's why someone like you can't be a leader! Do you understand—"」

Thump, thump, thump. The knocking on the theater door grew louder. Asmodeus frowned, sighed in annoyance, then turned off the screen and opened the theater door.

【What's going on, Hermit?】

'Hermit' was an Assistant Recorder Asmodeus had recently recruited. While his writing style was gloomy, he demonstrated a talent for manifesting [Fate] in shorthand, and he was thought to be a useful one to have.

He seemed somewhat self-conscious, but he was relatively reserved. He had achieved the 'Red' rank in Bicheonhori's Record Archive, so I thought it wouldn't be a problem to recruit him...

【I told you not to come unless it was urgent.】

【Excuse me. Demon King of the Cinema, I have an urgent report to make.】

Asmodeus watched Hermit rambling on faster than he could transcribe [Fate], deciding to listen to his story.

【...In Bicheonhori's 'Record Archive'? Is that true?】

A summary of Hermit's words was as follows.

A Recorder wearing a 'white fox mask' appeared in Bicheonhori's subspace, the 'Record Archive'. But the mysterious Recorder had 'traded' information that sounded unusual at first glance.

【The food the Oldest Dream hates? Was he really suggesting a 'trade' using that information?】

【Yes, so...】

【Ahaha.】

Asmodeus's sudden laughter made Hermit look puzzled. Asmodeus cleared his throat slightly and added,

【I'm curious. That archive: which city is it connected to?】

At Asmodeus's expression of interest, Hermit's voice brightened significantly.

【The access point for that archive is—】

It was then that a small murmur was heard from a corner of the theater.

「Oh—」

A child's singing voice. While Hermit paused at the strangeness in the voice, the other children in the audience began to speak one by one.

「O o o o o o o o」

The children sang in unison.

A strange probability gripped the theater.

Hermit, feeling a terrible dizziness, stumbled.

【Ah.】

He looked up and saw Asmodeus, his expression enchanted.

As if he had forgotten the story he had been hearing, Asmodeus left Hermit behind and trudged to the audience, where he collapsed.

A moment later, a video began to appear on the torn theater screen.

「...The King of Fear is strong...」

The mere sound of the chorus made his stomach churn. The story of 'Fear' resonated within Asmodeus, and he began to cry.

【I see. A truly fitting return for you.】

Above the 'New Murim District', the King of Fear descended.

The shrieks of the Recorders of Fear. Even amidst all this, the desperate struggle of the Recorders continued, trying to write down even one more sentence.

「The forgotten Watcher of Dreams has finally revealed himself.」

「The master of the temporal rift, revered by all the stars...」

「The boy from the old house, resonating with the sorrow of the vanished...」

Gazing upon the battlefield on the margins, where the desire to write, read, and survive swirled, Asmodeus spoke to the Hermit, who was leaning against a corner of the theater, trembling.

【Look, Hermit. This world is a 'one-line battle'.】

A single line determines life and death, a single line writes someone's [Fate]. And a single line can determine the end of a world.

The crucial question is who writes that 'last sentence' and how.

【The end of the worldline is truly near.】

'Constellation hunting' was beginning.

---

「"Don't use the 'Second Mode'."」

The moment I activated the story, I instinctively recalled Han Sooyoung's words.

「"Your 'Second Mode' is still unfinished. If you misuse it, you might be consumed by the story."」

The second mode Han Sooyoung spoke of was to borrow the power of the 'King of Fear'.

[The story, 'King of Fear' is resonating with you.]

The moment I stepped into the 'Great Hall', the darkness of the world spoke to me.

【Oh oh oh oh oh oh oh oh oh oh oh oh oh】

The screams of Outer Gods scattered throughout the <Star Stream>. Distant Outer Gods, scattered across each worldline, gazed upon me.

【Ki ng of Fear】

Even though I would normally panic, I wasn't afraid. Perhaps it was because I subconsciously realized they weren't hostile to me.

【Wel co me to our play grou nd】

Of course, not all Outer Gods were so welcoming.

【The scent of cons tel la tions】

【You are ■ ■ ■ ■ ■ ■…?】

The next moment, with an incredible spark, a story flowed out from within me.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', wields his power.]

[The Giant Tale, 'Season of Light and Darkness', begins its storytelling.]

The Second Kim Dokja's main story, the Giant Tale, 'Season of Light and Darkness', was stirring.

A context incomparably more distant than the existing stories began to sweep through me.

「The 'Giant Tale' is like a natural phenomenon. Its story does not compromise with the incarnation, but only realizes itself through the incarnation's body.」

Amidst the searing pain in my brain, my sense of self gradually became blurred.

Is this why Han Sooyoung told me not to use it? I desperately recalled the story of the 'Second'. To master this story, I needed to emulate its master, even if only a little.

「Who is the 'King of Fear'?」

The source of the <Star Stream>—a being born from fragments of the 'Oldest Dream'. The master of the 'Time Fault' who dreams and delights in interpreting them.

Everyone who has ever recorded his life struggles to leave behind even a single line of interpretation, and every star that has seen him retreats in a fear that light cannot interpret —

「The Strangeness of the <Star Stream>.」

Unlike the First, who was somewhat talkative, I rarely spoke to the Second.

However, I remembered the scenery I had seen with him in the 'Big House'. His feelings about the 'Time Fault'. His Outer Gods—the compassion he showed to Outer Gods. His curiosity that did not ignore the stories of mere extras or villains.

「He was a monster born to love all stories.」

Merely maintaining my existence felt like my mind would collapse.

Barely holding onto my senses, I walked the path of the 'Great Hall'.

A path of stars and darkness. Through gazes mingled with fear and awe, the exit from the 'Hall' finally came into view.

「The 'King of Fear' will once again listen to stories.」

Ashen shade seemed to descend upon every landscape of the world.

「The King of Fear, who sees the world with his eyes closed and hears the truth with his ears plugged, will descend.」

Living things burned to death, not even a single collar left. The traces of all beings fading away were trampled upon my eyes.

「I hate sadness.」

This was the world the 'King of Fear' had seen.

[Nonsense, nonsense—]

The God of Flames, burning the earth, looked up in astonishment.

[There's no way that evil being could still be alive—!]

Have you ever seen a god terrified?

[A very small number of Constellations are attempting to leave the channel!]

I was watching.

「"If you must reveal your power early..."」

While all living things that felt 'fear' were hesitant to raise their heads, I slowly walked toward the God of Flame.

「"Show them the difference in strength clearly. No one in the <Star Stream> can ignore you. That's how you protect what's precious to you."」

The presence of the 'King of Fear' filled the entire 'New Murim District'.

「E xis tence Void E xis tence Void E xis tence Void E xis tence Contribution」

「Light Rem nants Light Rem nants Light Rem nants Light Rem nants」

「To■toto■toto■toto■toto■toto■toto■toto■to」

The maddened Recorders were spewing out meaningless sentences, confronted by a fear they couldn't interpret.

Agni, too, was watching me, reading something entirely different.

「The man who saw the end of a world was there.」

The end of the world. The scene of the 'Final Wall' reached twice through the 'King of Fear'. The possibility of an apocalypse that all Constellations both awe and fear.

[Th- Aaah, Aaaaaaah—!]

The god, having glimpsed this possibility, began to shed tears of blood from his entire body.

[Some of the Recorders of Fear are fleeing the scenario battlefield!]

Some of the Recorders, sensing ominousness, finally attempted to escape the scenario.

【Bihyung.】

At my call, sparks swept across the entire 'New Murim District'.

[The Administration temporarily prohibits departure from the scenario in this area.]

[The 'Recorders of Fear' in this area are in deep confusion!]

I will not let a single one escape. I will not let you escape the sentences you wrote. I will not let you ignore the old sorrow.

「The backlash of the destroyed [Fate] will return to those who unleashed it.」

With every step Agni took, the groans of the Recorders seemed to echo in my ears.

[The Giant Nebula, <Vedas>, cannot hide its bewilderment at your presence.]

[The Giant Nebula, <Vedas>, provides additional probability!]

Agni, barely regaining his composure after receiving the probability from <Vedas>, shouted as he endured the aftershock of probability.

[Recorders. Do not panic. That's not the real 'King of Fear'. He's already dead. His death has already been recorded! That's nothing more than the remains of a dead Fear—!]

He was right. Right now, I couldn't use the overwhelming power of 'Fear' that the 'King of Fear' had displayed.

His sanctuary, the Fear Realm, had already been destroyed, and the 'Time Faults' he controlled had all been closed.

Now, I was just Kim Dokja, wearing the 'King of Fear's' clothes.

[The Recorders of Fear begin to repair the records!]

Like cornered rats, the Recorders were gathering again. Now, they too were desperate.

It was only natural. If Agni died here, they would die too.

Looking at the Recorders, I quietly smiled.

「They have no idea what the 'King of Fear' is.」

They would now understand what it meant to achieve a balance of probability with the great Lokapala simply by 'existing'.

I slowly opened my mouth.

【Fox That Commands the Skies, Bicheonhori King Weilong.】

As if the world had stopped, all words in the world fell silent before the tranquil mantra.

【Demon King of the Cinema, the Demon God of Wrath and Justice Asmodeus.】

The sky turned pitch black, and the Constellations held their breath. The Recorders, who had stopped recording, focused on my words.

【A warning to them and all 'Recorders'. Whoever stands in my way, whoever dares to write [Fate] before me—】

As if engraving a mantra into their souls, I record their fear.

【That [Fate] will be your final sentence.】

This is a kind of apocalypse.

Agni shouted hysterically.

[Don't listen to nonsense. He is merely a shell. According to the information just now coming down from the Nebula…!]

And in the next moment, an unusual aftershock began to ripple through his body.

[What?]

The sentences surrounding him were disintegrating. All the stories that had reinforced, praised, and protected his probability were crumbling.

「In an instant, Agni realized what had happened.」

Agni, astonished, hurriedly turned and glanced into the empty air.

[<Vedas>! Right now… !]

「The power of the 'King of Fear', the 'End that No One Can Ignore'.」

With this power, all the Recorders in this scenario area have just heard 'information they should not hear'.

[All 'Recorders of Fear' entangled in the 'Fate' proclamation of the 'New Murim District' are now in a 'Recording Interruption' state.]

Agni's incarnation, strengthened by the Recorders' [Fate], weakened, and the god's incarnation, unable to contain the probability condensed within, began to swell.

[An...!]

With a blast of probability, Agni's entire body exploded before my eyes.

929 Episode 53 Record War (5)

---

[The Recorder of Fear, '...', is unable to overcome the shock of the recording interruption...]

[The Recorder of Fear, '...', lets out a terrifying scream...]

...

It was the first time I'd ever witnessed such a violent storm of messages.

The sentences that had been strengthening Agni shattered beyond recognition, and Agni's story, which had filled the incarnation body, swelled and burst forth.

[Gaaaaaaaaa!]

Agni's roar echoed through the scene, resembling a volcano erupting.

[Many Constellations within the channel are shocked!]

<Olympus>, <Vedas>, and the other Constellations of the 'New Murim District' were all engulfed in the suffocating atmosphere.

A moment later, a staggering shadow of a god appeared through the acrid smoke.

[I, can't, forgive... ]

Is the Constellation that reached 'Lokapala' truly different?

Even after being struck by that horrific aftershock, Agni remained alive. Although severely damaged and reduced to less than half his size, he still radiated a force befitting a great man.

Agni, staggering, swung his broken axe at me.

[Only you—]

Even if his strength had been diminished, it was a threatening blow for me, who still lacked the full power of the 'King of Fear'. But I didn't panic.

「The 'fighter' who protects the King of Fear will be there.」

The Mad Sword Emperror, which had endured through the ages to avenge its master, was rushing toward me.

「The sword, tinged with the light of the spirit, cut through the god's waist.」

The trajectory of Jung Heewon's [Breaking the Sky Sword] swung slashed Agni. The dehorned goat collapsed with a groan, and the god's massive body collapsed to the ground. Jung Heewon, exhausted of all her power, collapsed to the ground, as if leaving it to me.

His upper and lower body severed by the Breaking the Sky Sword, Agni’s voice leaked out from the cracks in the shattered stories.

["No, no, no…"]

Even the last of his pride, his mantra, crumbled, and the great star's wretched inner self was revealed to the world.

["Don't look at me! I said don't look!"]

A star so dazzling that even a glimpse was impossible. Where its brilliance had faded, a grotesque figure lay.

It was a tiny baby.

Its skin burned as if scorched by fire. A pitch-black body soaked in oil. From its small head, long-rotted, rotten eyeballs oozed out.

For a Constellation that had lived a life of feasting on stories, perched atop the great heavens, its true form was absurdly pitiful.

[You have achieved a wondrous feat!]

[A new 'story' has sprouted for you!]

[The growth response of the story accelerates with your wondrous achievements!]

[A new story has been born!]

Hunting 'Lokapala', the reward for that achievement was appearing before my eyes in real time.

[You have acquired the story, 'Witness to the Truth of the Stars'.]

[The story is of 'Semi-mythical' grade.]

[Another story related to this achievement is sprouting.]

I approached Agni, feeling the pulsating story.

Agni was crawling desperately. He was desperately trying to survive, to get as far away from me as possible.

【Flame of Purification.】

I called out his modifier. I accurately analyzed the Constellation context and grasped his true name.

【One of the eight cardinal directions of the Vedas. The seat of the southeast. Agni, who eats oil.】

His expression, soaked in fear, trembled, as if he already knew the [Fate] he had been given.

【I understand your sorrow.】

The King of Fear's other power is 'collection'. All beings who succumb to him and become 'Fears' are trapped in the 'Time Fault' he created.

【I hate sadness. So—】

Agni's story began to be sucked into my hands.

Agni, the flame of purification, his brilliant history as a Lokapala of the Vedas entangled with my fingertips.

【That's all I need to say.】

A shadow floated over Agni's expression. The shadow of a wall filled with distant strings began to envelop his soul.

「His ■■ was written there.」

["Ah, ah. Aaaah—"]

The Constellation cried out like a newborn baby. His trembling body seemed to reject its own ■■, yet at the same time, it seemed to finally accept it.

The soul of the Constellation, facing eternal rest, was dispersing. All of its records were seeping into that distant 'Time Fault'.

But at that moment...

[Stop.]

Someone stopped me.

A Constellation radiated a light far more divine than Agni's flame, though not as fiery.

[Wouldn't that be better? Wielding that 'power' would be a great burden even for you.]

I thought I heard a train whistle coming from somewhere.

He was so powerful that he could face me in 'King of Fear' mode. The dazzling light emanating from his entire body proved who he was.

[Foolish humans, unaware of the exaltation of the throne of God.]

The Constellation of Vedas that had stopped Kim Dokja and Yoo Joonghyuk in the Demon Realm.

【Supreme God of Light.】

The strongest Lokapala, rivaling Agni. The Supreme God of Light, Surya, directly attacked the 'New Murim District'.

[The constellation, 'Supreme God of Light', gazes upon you.]

Amidst the overwhelming whirlwind of probability, I suddenly realized what had happened.

「I thought it was strange.」

The moment Agni exploded, caught in the aftershock of probability, the scales of probability should have tilted back toward me. The opposite scale had lost its opponent, a worthy opponent for my 'class'.

But the scales didn't tilt, and the aftershock didn't blow.

「Because before me was a Sun God with even greater probability than Agni, capable of single-handedly incinerating a planet.」

His arrival here must have meant that Vedas had decided not to stand idly by.

I asked nervously.

【Have you come to fight me?】

No matter how strong I'd become, I wasn't in a position to engage in a full-scale war against a single Giant Nebula.

「Did my calculations go wrong?」

According to information from Moral, the Giant Nebulas in the upper scenarios were all focused on 'Ragnarok', making it unlikely they'd be deployed here. However, I didn't expect them to use such a powerful force to descend, even after Agni.

If I were to fight Surya now, would I be able to win?

While the situation was different from when Kim Dokja fought in the 'Demon King Selection Tournament', with the ability to use the 'Demon King of Salvation' story, the odds weren't completely out of the question.

The problem was buying time to switch modes.

[You've proven yourself sufficiently. I have no intention of continuing this war of attrition.]

Surya's light, which had been weighing on the area, was fading. Did that mean he had no hostility?

【Why are you stopping me?】

[I will take Agni's soul.]

Slowly bending down, Surya picked up Agni's torn soul. Agni's eyes closed and trembling, drooled in his arms.

[Haven't you already received sufficient compensation? Show mercy to this foolish star.]

【What will I gain in return for that mercy?】

If I could take the soul of a 'Lokapala' here, I could use it in some way for a bargain.

Not just any other Constellation, but a soul of the Lokapala class, there would be countless stars drooling.

[I will remember that mercy.]

I stared at Surya for a moment, then asked.

【You? Not <Vedas>?】

[<Vedas> has nothing to do with this.]

As if to prove his point, the probability of <Vedas> no longer seemed to be present in the sky.

[It was my will that brought me here. Agni was once my close friend.]

The light emanating from his entire body testified to the truth of his words.

「Agni is the god of flame. Strictly speaking, the source of that flame was the supreme sun, 'Surya'.」

In a sense, 'Agni' was a kind of mediator, carrying Surya's light to the earth.

Thinking about it, I began to understand why Surya had come here.

【I will remember your oath.】

I slowly withdrew my hand and said. Since Surya had already blocked my path, there was no reason to forcefully seize Agni's soul. After all, I had already defeated Agni and obtained the story.

Surya bowed his head to me in gratitude and said,

[The sun remembers your mercy, great Recorder of the stars.]

A dull horn rang out from the sky, and Surya and Agni's bodies instantly emerged from the scenario. The constellations, watching for an opportunity to intervene in the fleeting events, began to emit bright light.

[Some Constellations are indignant at the 'Supreme God of Light's intrusion into their scenario…]

[Constellations in the smaller Nebulae were surprised by <Veda>'s judgment…]

I looked up at the sky. Unfortunately for the Constellations, this was the end of the stage.

I silently summoned Bihyung, and he appeared in the sky with sparks.

[Now, Constellations. I will briefly check the channel to determine the probability.]

This was my contract with the Management Bureau.

「"When I signal, turn off the channel for a moment."」

When I signaled Bihyung, he promised to turn off the channel for a moment for inspection.

It was a favor I received in exchange for dealing with the Recorders in this area.

—This time, I was genuinely impressed. Perhaps, if it really were you…

The sound of the channel closing was heard along with Bihyung's voice coming through the 'Dokkaebi Communication'.

[Channel operation in this area is temporarily suspended!]

Feeling the starlight fading, I deactivated 'King of Fear' mode. This was to prevent the aftershock of the tilted balance beam after Surya's disappearance.

[The story, 'King of Fear', ceases speaking.]

The Great Hall closed, and my body, deprived of its external powers, plummeted to the ground.

Holding the story of the King of Fear had drained most of my energy, leaving my incarnation body with no energy left to even activate [Way of the Wind].

But...

「There was someone here who wielded [Way of the Wind] better than anyone else.」

A woman ran toward me, calling my name from afar. She, who had inherited the story of the 'Flying Squirrel' from the 'Recycling Center', activated [Way of the Wind] with all her might and rushed towards me.

"...ssi."

Kyung Sein called out, embracing me as I fell through the air.

"Dokja-ssi."

Holding my incarnation body, scorched by the probability, Kyung Sein was calling me Kim Dokja again.

I gently placed my arm around her shoulder, holding back tears, and said,

"I told you. I'm quite strong now."

Jung Heewon, who got up from afar, was looking this way.

We stared at each other for a moment.

Just by exchanging glances, we could tell what each other was thinking.

Jung Heewon was the first to speak.

"You're alive."

I nodded and replied.

"Yes."

Without asking any further questions, Jung Heewon approached silently, leaving me wanting more. There was much to say and hear, but for now, it was time to simply savor this quiet reunion.

The mighty Constellations had vanished, and the once-extinguished sky was brightening again. The long night had passed, and dawn was dawning on the 'New Murim District'.

Even though a Constellation had disappeared tonight, the scenario still continued.

"Let's go see the end of this world together."

Soon, word would spread among the Constellations.

The news that an Outer God who had defeated one of the Locapalas of the Vedas existed in the 70th scenario would spread throughout the Star Stream. The Battle of Agni was merely a prelude to the great war that was about to begin.

[Your story resonates.]

As if to prove that truth, the story pulsing within my heart began to beat violently.

Perhaps, by now, across the sky, that guy is thinking the same thing I am.

[Someone in the higher scenario has noticed your return.]

I smiled, thinking of him.

「So, wait in the ■■ of all these worlds, my brother.」

The 'Final Record' of this worldline will soon begin.

930 Episode 54 8 years ago (1)

---

「So, who exactly is 'Kim Dokja'?」

—Great Dokkaebi Halong.

---

Management Bureau's Korean Peninsula branch.

Bihyung was constantly sweating profusely, bowing his head to his superior on the screen.

—So you're saying you abused your 'probability-appropriate judgment' without even receiving permission from your superiors?

The Great Dokkaebi's voice was sharp. Bihyung calmly responded.

[It was a likely situation. If we had left it as it was, the 'New Murim District' would have been destroyed by the probability aftermath. It was unavoidable for the proper progression of the scenario.]

For the proper progression of the scenario. Could there be a more plausible excuse for a Dokkaebi who was running the scenario?

Great Dokkaebi Halong licked his lips with a disapproving look and said.

—<Veda> will absolutely not tolerate this.

[What can we do if they don't? Even if they are a Giant Nebula, they have no right to interfere with the administration's affairs.]

—It's not that simple, Bihyung.

Of course, Bihyung understood why Halong was troubled.

The Great Dokkaebis are the closest thing to being the 'next Dokkaebi King'.

All their actions are directly linked to their own future glory, and because of this, the vain great dokkaebis often make choices that conflict with each other in the same scenario.

This was the case with the 'New Murim District'.

「Eliminate the 'New Murim District' Recorders.」

「Indifference to the Great Nebula's interference with the scenario.」

The two Great dokkaebis gave conflicting orders, and Bihyung followed the first. This was because it came from his direct superior, the Great Dokkaebi 'Baram'.

As a result, the Great Dokkaebi Halong was somewhat resentful of Bihyung for disobeying his orders.

—Who defeated Agni?

[It's an incarnation called Cheon Inho.]

—Cheon Inho?

Upon hearing the name, Halong pondered something and then asked.

—Could it be that the 'Evil Sophist' was involved?

[No. There's no evidence of direct involvement from a high-level Recorder of Fear.]

But Halong still seemed suspicious.

[As you may know, he's one of the incarnations who used to operate under the name 'Kim Dokja'.]

—There must have been so many of them. Anyway, if someone strong enough to defeat Agni is strong enough to rise to the higher-level scenarios, there's a chance they'll be promoted sooner or later.

[It will be.]

—Watch closely. <Vedas> might contact you again.

[Does this mean <Vedas> will once again throw in probability?]

—Since they lost one of the Lokapala, it's not impossible.

[He defeated Agni according to the scenario's legitimate probability. The Giant Nebulae would no longer have any justification for interfering with the sub-scenarios.]

—What?

[Encouraging newly blooming stories from being trampled by other 'Giant Stories'. Isn't that the duty of our storytellers?]

Bihyung absentmindedly remarked, then was startled by the fact that he had said so himself.

Halong, his eyes narrowing even more, asked back.

—Since when have you been concerned with such things?

[I'm sorry.]

—Just do what you're told. If you keep doing this, you'll be fired.

When did he begin to consider the true nature of a storyteller? He doesn't know. Perhaps it was when he first met him at Geumho Station, or when he saw him scribbling down the story of the ground rats, ignoring both Dokkaebis and Constellations. Or else—

「[Until my last breath, I will speak of you.]」

Perhaps it was because he happened to glimpse a story fragment floating around in the 'Fear Realm'.

「"I wanted to see your story through to the end."」

Bihyung couldn't understand why his voice remained in that story. Why, what, for what reason, and to whom had he spoken?

[Are you alright?]

A spirit with a worried expression approached from behind the disconnected screen. Bihyung shook his head, shaking off his thoughts, and answered.

[It's alright. What can they do up there? This is our responsibility.]

[What about the postponed scenario?]

The main scenario, originally scheduled to proceed, was pushed back due to Agni's excessive probability.

[Resuming in the afternoon.]

The final scenario of 'New Murim District' will soon begin.

Bihyung muttered, peering at the screen on the other side with a confused look.

'I've done enough, you rascal.'

On the screen, a blond man, supporting his colleagues as they walked, suddenly looked back at Bihyung and locked eyes. Knowing it was an illusion, Bihyung held the man's gaze for a long moment, a bitter smile forming on his face.

---

After defeating Agni, we returned straight to the mansion.

"So this was master's residence."

Jung Heewon surveyed the mansion of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint with a mixture of emotions.

All the way back to the mansion, Jung Heewon briefly recounted the events that had transpired. While the story was exactly as I'd read from the records of 'Bicheonhori', hearing it from Jung Heewon's own lips felt new.

"I'm sorry I'm so late. I should have come see you sooner."

"No, Heewon unnie."

Kyung Sein quickly waved off Jung Heewon's apology. Watching their conversation after so long, I, too, felt a strange sense of emotion. Come to think of it, these two have been friends ever since Geumho Station.

Jung Heewon was even Kyung Sein's favorite character while reading.

Eight years ago, that was definitely the case.

"When I first heard the rumors about the Mad Sword Emperor, I thought it might be you."

"…"

"You were busy trying to rescue Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, right?"

From what I heard, Jung Heewon had been working to rescue Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, who was imprisoned underground in the 'New Murim District' for the past several months.

"Yes, but ultimately failed."

Is destroying the 'Orbital Elevator' related to that?"

Jung Heewon nodded with a grave expression to my question.

"Yes, that's right."

"But it was too dangerous. The Orbital Elevator…"

Jung Heewon's eyes lit up at my words.

"Does Dokja-ssi know the true nature of the 'Orbital Elevator'?"

"I heard it's a passageway for ascending to a higher scenario."

The chosen ascenders ascend to a higher scenario via the 'Orbital Elevator' when the Ascension Ceremony begins. That, as far as I knew, was the reason for the 'Orbital Elevator's' existence.

"That's a true explanation, but it's not the whole story."

Jung Heewon, after hearing my words, stared at the sky beyond and added,

"The Ascenders have all trained their stories and incarnations to the limit through 'D-Coins'. Their bodies, trained through unnatural means, are practically extremely condensed 'D-Coins'."

I had a rough idea. That's because I'd heard similar information from Cloud Mountain in the archives.

"The Constellations of the higher scenarios consider the ascenders as 'well-groomed prey'."

"So, all the ascenders who ascended..."

"Not all of them, but I heard that most are captured by 'Giant Nebulae' and have their 'D-Coins' extracted."

It was horrific. In other words, the Ascendants here were nothing more than a sort of intermediary, transporting the condensed 'D-Coins' to the higher-level scenarios.

"So you destroyed the 'Orbital Elevator' on the Ascension Platform?"

"Yes. If we destroy it, the city's attention will be drawn to it. The Constellations in the higher scenarios would naturally focus on restoring the orbital elevator, and I believed I could use that opportunity to rescue the imprisoned Master."

"But it didn't work out."

"Yes."

The reason for Jung Heewon's failure was simple: the Constellations' response was too swift. The moment they recognized Jung Heewon's presence, they immediately mobilized the 'Recorders of Fear', dispatched Agni, one of the Lokapalas, and even unleashed [Fate].

There couldn't have been a more precise and powerful response.

Even if Yoo Joonghyuk had been there, not Jung Heewon, he wouldn't have survived.

"If you hadn't come, I would have died. Thank you again."

Jung Heewon's bow felt strangely unfamiliar, so I smiled awkwardly.

"It took eight years..."

Jung Heewon, who somehow heard those words, raised her head and looked at me silently.

[The story, 'Regret, Exhaustion, Obsession', mutters.]

What kind of story is that?

"I've finished organizing the dorm. You two, please rest inside for a moment."

Namgung Myung emerged from the inner courtyard and guided us to our quarters.

Jung Heewon and I were both exhausted from our confrontation with Agni. It was time to take a break for the next scenario, whether it was by consuming the 'Daehwadan' or the 'Essence of the Elaine Forest'.

[The 'Main Scenario' will resume in 8 hours.]

Just then, a scenario alarm sounded.

We had just finished a tough battle, but it wouldn't give us any time to rest.

[Your wondrous achievements are being spread throughout the <Star Stream>.]

[The Constellations, impressed by your efforts, have donated a total of 24,000 D-Coins to you.]

Soon, the other Great Constellations will learn of Agni's defeat.

<Vedas> had sacrificed a great deal of its fortunes in this incident, so it couldn't intervene again. Nevertheless, there were still many powerful enemies left in this city.

The good news is that whoever the enemy is, we're not alone anymore.

"Before that, first, can I join the company?"

Kyung Sein paused at my words. Then Jung Heewon chimed in.

"Oh, me too."

Kyung Sein looked back and forth between me and Jung Heewon several times, her expression looking as if she might burst into tears at any moment.

"Are you really going to join our company? Both of you?"

Kyung Sein, her eyes wide as lanterns, stammered and asked again. Jung Heewon and I exchanged glances and nodded again.

Kyung Sein looked at us with a complex expression and said,

"But you two would be treated much better if you joined another company."

Her expression seemed happy, sad, and perhaps even worried.

I added, trying to keep her from feeling too burdened.

"I think this is the only company that will accept us now, right?"

"Huh?"

"It seems you've already forgotten who we just beat up."

Kyung Sein's eyes widened faintly at my words.

"I think we should be begging you to accept us, right, Heewon-ssi?"

"Yes. I beg you, Sein-ah."

Kyung Sein bit her lip and lowered her head.

"Even if you two come, I won't be able to help you in any way. Just like back then, and…"

"Sein-ssi."

I interrupted Kyung Sein and lightly placed a hand on her shoulder.

"Thank you for being alive."

My gratitude was sincere.

A reader whose only source of information was reading a single novel had survived through 70 scenarios. I knew better than anyone how difficult that was.

Kyung Sein, who had been staring blankly at me, wiped her eyes and smiled bashfully.

"Everything has changed, but you, Sein-ssi, seem to be the same as you were eight years ago."

I smiled back at Kyung Sein, then suddenly realized something and asked,

"Sein-ssi, but is it okay for you to call me by 'that name'?"

When I met Kyung Sein recently, she called me 'Cheon Inho'.

"I heard from Gungmyung-ssi that saying that name feels uncomfortable."

I glanced at the logo engraved on their backs.

<■■■ Company>

The word that goes in that '■■■' must be 'Kim Dokja'.

If I'm right, Kyung Sein was hesitant to call me by that name for some reason.

"Ah... Myeong-i mentioned it."

Kyung Sein slowly lowered her head and replied.

"That's right. Saying that name isn't easy."

For a moment, her eyes seemed to sparkle with something like pure white snow.

"Every time I say that name, I feel a strange, uneasy feeling inside, should I say... So, I tried not to call that name if possible."

Kyung Sein raised her head again, her eyes clear.

"I don't know why, but ever since you defeated the 'Flame of Purification', I don't mind calling that name anymore."

Since I defeated Agni?

[Your wondrous achievements are widely known in the region.]

[The constellations that praise you await your next move.]

Perhaps it has something to do with the story I built in this scenario.

[The story, 'He Who Witnessed the Truth of the Stars', growls.]

「He Who Witnessed the Truth of the Stars was a quasi-mythical story obtained after defeating Agni.」

Since we have a contract with Bihyeong, I should soon be able to upgrade this story to 'Mythical' level with the help of the Management Bureau.

But before that, there was something I needed to know.

"Sein-ssi, would you please tell us now?"

"Yes?"

"What happened eight years ago?"

"Ah..."

It was time to really listen.

What had happened to Kyung Sein and her companions over the past eight years?

Why were they torn apart, and she was left here alone?

Kyung Sein, who had been hesitating, slowly spoke.

"That's right. It's you, Dokja-ssi, who deserves to know."

Of course, I had a hunch.

Perhaps this story had something to do with why she feared the name 'Kim Dokja'.

"This might be a long story, is that alright?"

"It's alright."

Kyung Sein paused for a few breaths before speaking again.

"Eight years ago, on that day when Dokja-ssi disappeared and the Fear Realm was destroyed..."

But why?

"Someone came to see us."

I'd only heard a few words, but suddenly, it felt as if cold snow was falling all over the world.

Kyung Sein began to speak in a voice that seemed to dream of that day.

"He said he came from the 'Snow Field'."

931 Episode 54 8 years ago (2)

Five months after the monsters of the 'Fear Realm' appeared in the scenarios.

"We've finally come this far."

Killer King and the readers finally arrived in the 'First Murim'. This was before the 'First Murim' was reborn as the 'New Murim District'.

"The injured, come this way!"

"If you need the 'Essence of the Elaine Forest', follow that man!"

"Okay, the sick, this way!"

The Inho faction at Geumho Station. And even the followers of the 'Beggar Sect' near Seoul Station.

The legacies of Kim Dokja's 41st Round were gradually gathering in the higher-level scenarios.

[The Constellation, 'The Last Ark', is deeply moved by the appearance of the incarnations.]

There, the group also encountered a familiar Constellation.

"Cheongae-nim!"

Cheongae, the Dragon Head Ark of the Beggar Sect. He had been hiding in Murim after suffering a major blow when the Fear Realm appeared, and he had welcomed the group.

"I see. So you're his colleagues?"

Cheongae told the group about what had happened.

How Kim Dokja and Yoo Joonghyuk had come to Murim.

How Yoo Joonghyuk, now a child, had eaten Murim dumplings.

How Kim Dokja, after causing numerous troubles, had entered the Fear Realm to protect the First Murim.

Someone was moved to tears upon hearing this story.

"As expected, Dokja-ssi was here. The real 'Kim Dokja'."

Kyung Sein and her group were elated.

Here was the Kim Dokja they remembered.

They had come to the right place.

"So this is the Breaking the Sky Swords Saint."

Finally arriving at the manor where Breaking the Sky Swords Saint resided, the group was overcome with emotion.

They might soon meet Breaking the Sky Swords Saint. Perhaps with her help, they could track Kim Dokja's whereabouts.

"Unfortunately, the lord is out of town."

The one who greeted them was the former head of the Namgung family, Emperor's Sword Namgung Jincheon. After the 'Fear Realm Incident', his energy had deteriorated significantly, so he resigned from his position as head of the family. He had been living in the Breaking the Sky manor, caring for his son, who hadn't awakened for months.

"Where is Breaking the Sky Sword Saint?"

"She entered the Fear Realm with her disciple. Frankly, I'm surprised she had allies other than the Supreme King."

Perhaps due to the shock of the 'Fear Realm Incident', Namgung Jincheon seemed to struggle even with brief conversations with his companions.

Getting additional information from him seemed difficult, and the group's pursuit ran into trouble.

"This is where our plan goes awry."

"If we can't get help from the Transcendents... what should we do?"

"Is there any way for us to enter the Fear Realm alone?"

"Even if we find a way, if we go in alone, we're certain to be annihilated."

Despite their arduous efforts, they couldn't find a way into the closed 'Fear Realm', and so naturally, they settled in the 'First Murim World'.

They tended to the injured martial artists, and occasionally fended off the 'Nameless Things' that crossed dimensions.

"Damn, those guys are out here too."

Perhaps because they were near the 'Fear Realm', the 'Nameless Things' were quite numerous.

But the group wasn't ordinary anymore. After successfully completing the 'Recycling Center', they had each trained themselves in their own ways.

"Ye Hyu-woo! Formation X!"

Under Killer King's command, Ye Hyunwoo's [Armed Fortress] activated.

"Invincible Castle Master Tech Tree. Stage 10 activated."

As the Armed Fortress revealed itself according to the contract with the 'Defense Master', the 'Nameless Things' that had torn through the dimension quickly collapsed into a hive.

"Yerin-ah!"

Cha Yerin followed suit, dispatching the larger entities with a dazzling performance.

"Wow, where did they come from—"

A force so powerful that even the Murim people were amazed.

Even after entering the 'First Murim World', the group continued their training. They mastered new martial arts and explored hidden pieces, the kind Kim Dokja would have found.

「But things didn't go so smoothly.」

This happened when Killer King and Ye Hyunwoo were away to handle Scenario 32 on the Korean Peninsula.

"What is that?"

'It' suddenly appeared in the vast Murim sky. The sky changed color, and the Murim people screamed and bled.

「That was a calamitous fear—an Outer God that Murim would later call the 'Eight-Forked Wandering'.」

A gigantic cephalopod, reminiscent of the 'Dream Eater', wriggled its legs as it crossed the 'Great Hall'.

【Kakakakakakakakakakaka】

Kyung Sein also knew that such monsters often appeared near the Fear Realm.

Cheongae had clearly warned her.

But Kyung Sein trusted herself and her companions. With the group they had now, they could face any enemy. They weren't weak anymore—that's what she clearly thought.

She had thought.

「We can't fight something like that.」

When she came to her senses, Kyung Sein found herself unconsciously taking a step back. Her legs trembled, and a cold sweat ran down her spine. Her mouth—

"IwaswrongIwaswrongIwaswrongIwaswrongIwaswrong—"

She kept repeating the same words.

She looked around and saw that Lee Dansu was in a similar state. Lee Dansu, kneeling and coughing up blood, stammered with a pale face.

"Se, Sein-ssi."

Amidst all this, there was one comrade who remained calm and burning with fighting spirit.

Cha Yerin stumbled out of the manor, blood pouring from her mouth.

"No! Yerin-ssi!"

Cha Yerin had suffered internal injuries from a previous scenario that even the 'Essence of the Elaine Forest' could not heal.

"You can't move yet!"

According to the divine prescription, the wound could only be healed with a 'Sacred Oil' item.

Sacred Oil is a rare item not available in lower-level scenarios.

Killer King, Ye Hyunwoo, and Ji Eunyu were all traveling between different scenarios, executing the constellations' 'personal scenarios', all to obtain the Sacred Oil that would save her.

"It's okay."

Yet, Cha Yerin had revealed herself outside the manor to protect her companions.

"Both Sein-ssi and Dansu ahjussi were injured, right?"

Kyung Sein and Lee Dansu were also seriously injured in the previous scenario. While their injuries weren't as severe as Cha Yerin's, their combat capabilities were significantly impaired, making them equally unable to fight.

"Please take care of my back."

Kyung Sein knew perfectly well when she would make that face, her tone surprisingly calm and her expression serene.

「Cha Yerin has decided to die now.」

Kyung Sein screamed as she watched Cha Yerin leap into the sky, her fists clasped in both hands.

What if Killer King, or Ye Hyunwoo, had been there? Or Ji Eunyu, who was exploring a different scenario area, disagreeing with the group's cautious approach?

No.

Kyung Sein knew. No matter which of them was present, a monster like that couldn't be stopped. The only one who can protect the group from that monster—

「Only one person.」

The giant cephalopod's legs twitched, then struck Cha Yerin's incarnation body with a loud noise. The sound of something exploding was heard, and Kyung Sein sank to the ground.

「At that moment, a pure white flash of wind blew from the sky.」

A warm yet sharp wind.

Kyung Sein knew what that wind was.

「Way of the Wind.」

When she raised her head, she saw the legs of an Outer God pouring out stories from the sky.

【Kaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaah】

A terrible scream. Then someone stood down in front of her while holding the fainted Cha Yerin in their arms.

"Everyone, wake up. Are you just going to collapse in a place like this?"

It was the time she heard that voice. Nevertheless, the moment she heard the voice, she got goosebumps. Because that voice was the voice that Kyung Sein had imagined countless times while listening to a certain story.

"I'll tell you how to attack from now on."

A white coat fluttering in the wind.

Giving a glimpse of that familiar back, Kyung Sein rose from her seat as if possessed.

Someone grabbed her shoulder.

"Kyung Sein."

It was Killer King.

Kyung Sein glanced back and forth between Killer King and the man in front of her, saying,

"Killer King-ssi, could that man—"

She wanted to ask. But even without asking, Kyung Sein had a vague idea of who he was.

As if to confirm this, Killer King nodded with a blank expression and muttered,

"The protagonist has returned."

---

When Kim Dokja first appeared, Kyung Sein didn't believe it.

Even after defeating the Outer God, 'Eight-Forked Wandering', with Kim Dokja's help, Kyung Sein still couldn't trust him.

"Now? That doesn't make sense. He can't be the real Kim Dokja."

Because he said he was 'Kim Dokja'.

"No matter how similar he is to Kim Dokja, he's not that person. Everyone knows that."

At least in this world, the 'Kim Dokja' she knew was someone else.

A person who always smiled with narrowed eyes. A person whose tousled blond hair flowed in the wind, a person who sacrificed himself for the group as if he had several lives left.

A person who always seemed to be looking toward a distant ending unknown to them. A person who, even though right next to them, seemed to exist beyond a thick wall.

「That was the 'Kim Dokja of this world' that Kyung Sein remembered.」

She came all this way to save him, to meet him again.

But here, she met another Kim Dokja.

A face that seemed to be a product of the very word 'Kim Dokja'. A person who appeared with a sorrowful smile, cleared the scenario, and rescued the group.

The moment Kyung Sein saw him, she felt an inexplicable sense of rejection.

That person wasn't Kim Dokja.

"Min Jiwon... No, if Ji Eunyu-ssi was here, she would definitely—"

"Kyung Sein, he's a help to us."

Killer King added in a calm voice.

"Since his appearance, the stagnant scenario sections that had been blocked have begun to clear up."

"I know that. But—"

"That guy is Kim Dokja."

Kyung Sein opened her lips in confusion, watching Killer King calmly pronounce the name 'Kim Dokja'.

"How… Can you say that?"

Kyung Sein, though she rarely showed her emotions, deeply trusted Killer King. It wasn't just because Killer King had read the main story more than anyone else in the group.

Killer King wasn't just someone who read a lot, but someone who felt a love for this story more than anyone else.

He endured life by reading and rereading a single story. In a way, he was a man who infinitely resembled Kim Dokja.

With someone like that, she thought he would naturally recognize the 'real Kim Dokja'. She believed he wouldn't deny the 'Kim Dokja' who had been with them.

"Of all people, how could Killer King—"

Killer King's face darkened. For a moment, information flooded through Kyung Sein's mind.

A thought occurred to her.

「Killer King recently discovered a scenario where he could obtain the 'Sungyu Fruit' with Kim Dokja's help.」

Killer King—Cha Sungwoo—was in a position where he absolutely had to save his younger sister, Cha Yerin. In that situation, regardless of whether that 'Kim Dokja' was real, he would have no choice but to protect him.

Kyung Sein, who had turned her head, spoke again.

"Dansu ahjussi, you too, say something."

At that, Lee Dansu, who had been silently looking down at the floor, raised his head.

"Sein-yang, I believe Inho-ssi is 'Kim Dokja'."

"Right? After all, the real Kim Dokja—"

Kyung Sein's expression brightened.

As expected, Dansu ahjussi was different. He knew who the 'real Kim Dokja' was.

"But that man is definitely 'Kim Dokja'."

"Huh?"

Following Killer King, now Lee Dansu.

Kyung Sein's lips trembled.

She was angry. Shouldn't he have not said something like that to them, let alone anyone else?

But Lee Dansu's expression, raised, was unusually strange.

"Sein-yang, have you ever thought about that?"

Lee Dansu, who always had a pleasant smile, asked in a strangely gloomy voice.

"The Inho-ssi we knew... did he really want to become 'Kim Dokja'?"

For a moment, her heart sank.

"We've cleared every scenario relying on Inho-ssi. We've nearly died countless times, and we've come this far relying on his life."

It was a question she'd never considered.

Did the 'Kim Dokja' she knew really want to become 'Kim Dokja'?

"That friend... we call him 'Kim Dokja' as we please."

Now the group knew.

「"My name is ■■■."」

He resembled Kim Dokja, and like him, he saved them, but his real name wasn't 'Kim Dokja'.

"Perhaps we've been burdening Inho-ssi too much up until now."

A faint breeze blew from outside the manor. A white-faced man they knew well was walking across the manor. His figure, illuminated by the dazzling sunlight, looked like the protagonist, tearing through the pure white space and striding towards them.

Lee Dansu muttered in a feeble voice.

"Perhaps it's time to stop tormenting Inho-ssi."

932 Episode 54 8 years ago (3)

Immediately after hearing Killer King and Dansu's opinions, Kyung Sein's interactions with the group drastically decreased.

The reason was clear.

Lee Dansu and Killer King had begun working on individual scenarios, following the suggestion of the new 'Kim Dokja'.

"I heard a 'Sungyu Fruit' might open in Scenario Area 37. I'm planning to go there and see."

"Should I come with you?"

"No, Lee Dansu and I decided to go together. You stay here and watch over Yerin."

Perhaps it was out of consideration for Kyung Sein.

Watching Killer King and Lee Dansu depart, Kyung Sein suddenly remembered Ji Eunyu's words.

「"Just because we've read the same story doesn't mean everyone will agree."」

Ji Eunyu had left the group early and begun acting independently. When Kyung Sein asked if she really had to leave, if they couldn't carry out the scenarios together, Ji Eunyu only gave her a vague answer.

「"If you made everyone think the same way, then it wasn't a good story in the first place."」

Kyung Sein often pondered what that meant. Of course, there was no easy answer. She could only speculate that perhaps, Ji Eunyu, as an editor, could see something different from everyone else.

「While everyone else was making their own choices, she was the only one stuck here.」

If she had been an editor, a reader who had read the same book a hundred times, or even someone with a special story— would she have made a different choice?

She pondered it, but couldn't figure it out.

Of course, humans can't truly become strangers.

"Sein-ssi."

She turned around, startled, and Kim Dokja was standing there.

"I'm sorry. It seems I surprised you."

"No."

"May I sit down?"

"Please."

The two sat on a bench in front of the manor and watched the crowds pass by. People moving materials through the alleyways, moving and moving again.

"Move slowly!"

After the outbreak of the Fear Realm, the existing ruling structure of Murim completely collapsed.

The giant trees that formed the axis of Murim died, and the giant breakwaters collapsed.

The incarnations, having lost their center of gravity, scattered and sought out other scenario areas.

Of course, some incarnations still remained in Murim. Those who struggled to rebuild the ruined Murim and reclaim the landscape they remembered.

"Move here! This way!"

Looking at such people, the businessman would often feel a strange sensation. Would all that sweat and toil bring back the Murim they longed for? Even if Murim were to revive, even if countless trees were planted in this world and a forest were to be recreated—would it really be appropriate to call that world a Murim?

"Why have you come?"

"Do you need a particular reason to visit your comrades?"

A person with the same face as the 'Kim Dokja' she remembered. Kyung Sein thought as she looked at the man's face.

Perhaps someone who could get closer to 'others' than anyone else in this world, someone who mercilessly understood 'others' and sometimes used that as a weapon in battle.

Perhaps Kim Dokja had come to her this time to use that weapon.

"What did your companions say?"

Kyung Sein repeated to herself. She didn't know what kind of sweet talk he had given the others, but she would never be fooled. She was firm, as if she were building a [Fourth Wall].

"Did they tell you to try to persuade me because I don't recognize you as Kim Dokja?"

But what Kyung Sein overlooked was that his opponent was more adept at breaking the [Fourth Wall] than anyone else in the world.

"Do you hate me, Sein-ssi?"

Instead of answering, Kyung Sein averted his gaze. I hate you. She wasn't sure if that was the appropriate expression.

"I respect your feelings, Sein-ssi. I'm not Sein-ssi, so I can't fully understand your hostility towards me, but…"

Kim Dokja paused, then looked up at the distant sky.

"Do you like novels?"

"I do."

"Then, shall we talk about them for a moment?"

"No."

"Then you can just listen. Because I like talking."

Kim Dokja grinned and began to tell his story without permission.

"There's a novel I used to like."

Naturally, Kyung Sein knew what it was. Kim Dokja was talking about 'Ways of survival'.

"I don't remember everything clearly anymore, but I definitely liked that novel. I especially admired its protagonist."

Kyung Sein was about to say she knew what it was, but held back and kept her mouth shut.

"The protagonist in that novel regresses time and time again. He lives a hellish life over and over again, simply to see the end of the world."

Why? Even though it was a story she clearly knew, hearing it from Kim Dokja's own mouth, it sounded new. Kim Dokja continued.

"Of course, someone who was an ally in the last Round becomes an enemy in this Round. In some Rounds, all the companions love the protagonist, but in others, they all betray him."

Kyung Sein listened intently, forgetting to respond.

"When I first read that passage, I hated the companions who betrayed the protagonist."

"…"

"It was painful to see my ignorant companions follow someone other than the protagonist. I hated them for protecting the new character who had taken the protagonist's place, without even knowing the protagonist's history or what he had sacrificed for them."

Kyung Sein wondered which Round the Yoo Joonghyuk he had been talking about was, but she realized this conversation wasn't just about the 'Ways of Survival'.

"It's okay if I'm not Sein-ssi's Kim Dokja."

Meeting Kim Dokja's calm eyes, Kyung Sein was speechless.

"If you don't want to call me 'Kim Dokja', then you don't have to. That's your right, Sein-ssi."

Just by meeting his gaze, Kyung Sein felt as if he could read her every thought.

Feeling faintly dizzy, Kyung Sein asked,

"What do you want from me?"

"Sein-ssi, you just need to find the ending you want. I will, too."

"What ending do you desire?"

"For all 'Kim Dokja's' to return to their proper place."

Kyung Sein stared blankly at Kim Dokja. The man had the face of the 'Kim Dokja' she envisioned. For a moment, Kyung Sein felt an inexplicable wavering.

"I don't know where I should return to."

"…"

"Am I Kyung Sein, or someone else? I don't even know what kind of story I'm supposed to tell. I have no idea how the rest of the group is enduring all this."

Kim Dokja listened to her in silence. Sensing the pity hidden in his silence, or perhaps ignoring it, Kyung Sein continued,

"I'm no help anymore. My body is somewhat sturdy, but compared to Hyunsung-ssi, I'm nothing, and compared to my colleagues, I lack talent."

Kyung Sein also trained diligently. Like everyone else, she diligently honed her skills and refined her story.

However, her growth was limited. The character she possessed was initially a secondary character. Her growth potential and talent were meager.

Furthermore, she wasn't chosen by a powerful sponsor like Killer King, Lee Dansu, or Ji Eunyu.

"I'm probably not needed for the 'ending' you want to see."

The moment she said those words, Kyung Sein trembled involuntarily. Her fear of the new 'Kim Dokja' wasn't simply about maintaining loyalty to the 'Kim Dokja' she trusted.

She was scared.

"You don't have to take care of me. I just want to stay here like this. I'll stay here while I wait for the Kim Dokja I want."

That was Kyung Sein's choice. It was the only way for her, who was no better than anyone else, who might soon be discarded from the scenario, to become special.

「Kyung Sein thought this was it.」

She'd worked hard and gotten this far. If the Kim Dokja she'd been waiting for never returned, that was fine.

If she were a character, her ■■ would undoubtedly be here.

"Sein-ssi."

Kim Dokja said, looking at Kyung Sein.

"Let me correct what I said earlier. I understand you a little."

"Do you understand? What?"

Kim Dokja didn't answer. He simply stared at Kyung Sein with slightly sad eyes.

At that silent gaze, Kyung Sein unconsciously let out a sharp voice.

"How can you understand this?"

"I've had similar thoughts as you, Sein-ssi. I've also suffered from the thought that I wasn't of any help to my colleagues and was only a nuisance to the scenario."

Kyung Sein listened blankly.

"There was a time when I hated my colleagues for arbitrarily moving towards a different ending, leaving me behind. I definitely resented them for constantly pushing me back when I wanted to stay here."

"You're Kim Dokja, right?"

"You don't know what kind of Kim Dokja I am, Sein-ssi."

Kyung Sein was speechless for the first time. That was right. She didn't know what kind of Kim Dokja he was. She didn't know if he was the 'Demon King of Salvation', the 'Watcher of Light and Darkness', or the 'Prisoner of the Golden Headband'.

No, perhaps that 'Kim Dokja'—

"I, like you, Sein-ssi, am just one of countless 'Kim Dokja Fragments'."

Kyung Sein paused and asked.

"What does that mean? Could it be that you've possessed someone too?"

"No, I was born with a body. Instead, unlike you, I landed outside the scenarios."

"Outside?"

"Just a vast, endless snowfield stretching out like a vast ocean. I was born and raised there."

A vast, ocean-like snowfield.

Kyung Sein couldn't tell if that was a metaphor or not. She'd never heard of a Kim Dokja like that, nor imagined one.

Nevertheless, his story was certainly true. A small fragment, dormant deep within his soul, testified to that.

"Perhaps, if no one had taken me in, I would have starved to death there, never knowing my own name."

A tragedy told in a frighteningly calm voice.

Kyung Sein felt confused.

"That's where I first met you."

"Us?"

"Snowdrops often fall there."

[NOTE 1]

At some point, dark clouds began to gather in the sky. Rain began to fall lightly. Kim Dokja continued, looking up at the drizzling raindrops.

"Sein-ssi, I know what kind of life you've lived."

"…"

"I know how hard you've worked, how much you've endured to help your colleagues."

"Wait a minute."

Her heart pounded and she felt dizzy.

"Stop it."

「Maybe this person really is Kim Dokja.」

It felt as if someone was forcibly imprinting those words on her mind. She didn't want to think about it. Just thinking about it was painful.

If he really was Kim Dokja, if he was the Kim Dokja they knew—why had he only just appeared before them now?

"I'm sorry."

Kim Dokja was apologizing as if answering that question.

"I was foolish. I should have come here long ago. I should have resolved the scenarios with you myself. Instead of just watching, I should have tried to change the story myself."

Looking at those strangely bright eyes, Kyung Sein felt as if he were about to collapse at any moment.

"It's late, but I intend to change things now."

It was then that thunder rumbled. The sky opened with an unusual gale. A cluster of pure white light flickered. Through it, distant beings descended.

[The Constellation, 'Flame of Purification', descends into this scenario!]

[The Constellation, 'Omnipotent Sun', descends into this scenario!]

[The Constellation, 'Terminator of War', descends into this scenario!]

[The Constellation, 'Monarch of the Small Fries', descends into this scenario!]

Kim Dokja, already standing, stepped forward as if to protect her.

"Uninvited guests have arrived."

Constellations. And these were no ordinary Constellations. A sinister aura enveloped the vast sky. These Constellations were at least as powerful as Narrative-grade, and even rivaled the main force of the Giant Nebulae.

Kyung Sein instinctively sensed this.

Those Constellations hadn't appeared here out of favor.

[Are there frag ments of the Old est Dream here?]

Kim Dokja smiled at the Constellations' call.

"It seems they've come to find me."

933 Episode 54 8 years ago (4)

Kyung Sein grabbed Kim Dokja's sleeve like a madman.

"Dokja-ssi."

Forgetting that she had unconsciously called the man 'Kim Dokja', Kyung Sein hurriedly pulled Kim Dokja's sleeve.

"We have to run."

The Constellations hadn't discovered them yet. It wasn't too late to run. Whether using [Way of the Wind] or purchasing a scenario escape ticket from the 'Dokkaebi Bag', they had to escape from here. Otherwise—

"No, Sein-ssi."

Kim Dokja's gaze was fixed on the manor. Cha Yerin was there, currently recuperating.

Kim Dokja knew. If he left this place, those Constellations would take their companions hostage.

"Please call the other companions."

Kim Dokja's words seemed to fly into her heart anew.

「Comrades.」

Kim Dokja, before him, truly considered them companions.

"You?"

"I'll buy you some time."

Kim Dokja's back was small as he turned. Just as Kyung Sein had once read, his slender torso swayed as if ready to break in the gust of wind. Watching his back sway as if ready to break in the wind, Kyung Sein realized something.

「Even if I call my companions, there's no way we can deal with those Constellations.」

The Constellations of <Vedas>, <Olympus>, <Isgard>, and <Tamra> were there.

[A Giant Nebula is supporting the probability of the Constellations.]

The <First Murim> was a 20th-level scenario area. A place where the original Constellations could never descend.

Those Constellations were revealing their true colors in a lower-level scenario, enduring enormous losses.

Each and every one of them reached the level of late-stage Narrative-grade. If just one of them unleashed their full power, the party would be annihilated without a trace.

Kim Dokja was advancing, determined to confront these Constellations alone. Under the pretext of calling their comrades, he gave Kyung Sein an excuse to escape, and he continued on alone.

「Just like the day he first became the 'Oldest Dream'.」

The 'Kim Dokja' he truly wanted to protect wasn't the Kim Dokja before her. Yet, he was undoubtedly Kim Dokja.

"I can't leave you alone."

Kim Dokja slowly turned his head and glanced at Kyung Sein. His eyes were slightly surprised.

"If you're Kim Dokja, then I'm Kim Dokja too."

Kim Dokja's head slowly moved at Kyung Sein's words.

"If that's so, then so be it."

Kim Dokja smiled brightly.

"Instead, whatever you see from now on, don't be surprised."

Before she could even ask what that meant, the Constellations in the sky twinkled for a moment.

[Were you there?]

He took a deep breath, and four Constellations appeared before his eyes.

Tsutsutsutsutsu.

Four brightly shining stars. When the Constellations, who should never have descended into a lower scenario, simultaneously revealed their powers, all incarnations were plunged into a state of near-death.

The incarnations of Murim, just beginning to rebuild, collapsed to the ground, groaning. Some were even gasping for breath, foaming at the mouth.

The unconscious incarnations might have been fortunate. The moment they unleashed their immense power, Kyung Sein felt as if she were about to lose her mind.

"Ah. Aah. Aaaah..."

Kyung Sein collapsed, groaning, unable to overcome her fear.

The Constellations glanced at her as if she were an insect, then turned to Kim Dokja.

[Fragment of the Oldest Dream. Why did you break your promise?]

As the omnipotent sun Apollo uttered these words, the other Constellations, as if they had been waiting, began to speak.

[There was no mention of you directly interfering with the scenario, was there?]

[What brought you here? Have you forgotten our promise?]

With each successive mantra, blood flowed from Kyung Sein's ears. Her head ached as if it were going to split open. Her entire body trembled incessantly.

They were on a different level. She couldn't believe she had to fight against such things to see the scenario's conclusion.

Yet, as if he wasn't afraid of such Constellations, Kim Dokja smiled and spoke.

"Let's skip unnecessary conversation. You didn't come here just to protest, did you?"

Perhaps it was the subtle condescension in his tone that caused the Constellations' expressions to change.

[What did you just say?]

"You came to covet me, didn't you?"

[What did you say?]

"There's no need to try to deny it. I paid a price to descend here, so you must have thought this was your chance. Don't you?"

Kyung Sein listened blankly to Kim Dokja's words. At that moment, Kim Dokja no longer seemed like the 'Kim Dokja' she knew from the story.

"Are you going to deny that you came to thrust those ugly teeth at me?"

Kim Dokja slowly walked. One step, then two. Each time he approached the Constellations, their shoulders trembled in shock.

"I have no regrets. After all, we received everything from the <Star Stream>. So, it would be right to return it to the <Star Stream>."

For a moment, the surrounding scenery seemed to change. An icy wind blew from somewhere.

Kim Dokja was walking alone along the lonely path in the Snowfield.

[The story, 'Messiah of the Snowfield', begins its storytelling.]

Kyung Sein and the other Constellations stared at him, as if entranced.

「All the stars in the world were shining down on him.」

At that moment, Kim Dokja's coat fell to the floor. His tie followed, and then his dress shirt. With every step he took, Kim Dokja's clothes fell to the floor.

The Constellations watched him, holding their breath. Kim Dokja, now stripped of even his shoes, stood before the Constellations. His naked body was exposed to the sunlight.

The moment she saw that white back, Kyung Sein was thrown into confusion. While clearly a human body, Kim Dokja's body didn't feel human at all. No, it wasn't flesh in the first place. In other words, it was—

「A story about a story. A myth about a myth.」

Kim Dokja, shining brightly in the starlight, was there.

Apollo, the Omnipotent Sun, Vidar, the End of War, and the Master of Baekrokdam were all kneeling.

A single image formed on their empty retinas.

The single being that filled their universe commanded:

"Take whatever you wish."

The moment permission was granted, the Constellations rose from their seats.

Apollo was the first to move. A harsh mantra burst from his lips.

[M-my— I— What I'm going to do— that's right—]

His eyes, which had been struggling to reject the legend in front of him, slowly began to turn red. His out-of-focus pupils shook, and a wild beast-like noise came out of his mouth.

[Geuaaaaa!]

Slamming down on all fours like a beast, Apollo mawed at Kim Dokja. Like a lover clutching their beloved, Apollo seized Kim Dokja’s shoulders with trembling hands and buried his teeth into him.

As blood-colored stories erupted, the other two gods sprang to their feet.

[OhOhOhOhOh!]

A primal hunger, utterly devoid of dignity or honor, consumed them. The flickering stars wept as they panted. There were no 'Twelve Gods of Olympus,' no 'Lokapala,' no 'myth-grade constellations.'

Only sick, ravenous stars, craving the story before them, remained.

Apollo savagely gouged into Kim Dokja's shoulder, Vidar ripped at his arm, and the Master of Baengnokdam stooped to bite his ankle.

[Oooooooo—]

A single story pierced their souls.

A story that violently overwhelmed the soul of the reader.

A story dominated their souls.

As if he admired such Constellations, Kim Dokja smiled and offered his flesh.

And then, until the very end, he gazed upon the one Constellation that resisted his story.

"Agni. Come closer."

The only Constellation that had not torn his flesh, Agni, the 'Flame of Purification', was there.

Agni, who had set fire to his entire body and burned himself, resisted his own desires with bloodshot eyes.

[I am, the great, Lokapala.]

A story spilled from his pale, trembling lips. Agni, who had struck his own head with an axe, roared and declared,

[I, will not eat.]

Finally, Agni, still holding onto his pride, let out a sorrowful howl and fled the scenario.

Kim Dokja stared silently at the spot where Agni had disappeared.

The other three Constellations, startled, knelt as if in apology.

[I apologize, 'Oldest Dream'.]

Kim Dokja spoke to the Constellations, who had prostrated themselves as if worshipping a god.

"No."

Then, looking up at the sky with an expression of unwavering calm, he added,

"Eventually, <Vedas> will come."

[It will.]

Kyung Sein was confused. She couldn't comprehend the scene unfolding before her eyes.

Why did Kim Dokja speak like that? Why had he given his body to the Constellations? She couldn't understand. She couldn't understand anything. However, one thing was certain: the moment Kyung Sein laid eyes on Kim Dokja's naked body, a terrible thought gripped her.

「I want to become one.」

Even though she knew it was a thought worthy of Nirvana, Kyung Sein couldn't stop it the moment she laid eyes on Kim Dokja.

The thought finally stopped after Kim Dokja picked up the clothes that had fallen on the floor and put them on.

"I have entrusted my blood and flesh to you, so one day I will come back to find myself."

The Constellations bowed their heads in embarrassment at Kim Dokja's words.

Looking down at the crowns of the Constellations, Kim Dokja continued,

"It will be a long road. It may be a road that will never end. But like my brother, I too will walk that road. And thus, I will complete the ■■ of this worldline."

The Constellations sighed. The three Constellations answered simultaneously.

[I will illuminate your footsteps.]

"Until I reclaim myself, what I have given you is yours. In exchange—"

A piercing light flashed in Kim Dokja's eyes. Reflecting the light of the Constellations, it warned them.

"You will rebuild this ruined city."

The divine command fell, and the Constellations, raising their heads, trembled.

"In the fertile land of fear, coins made of my blood will spring forth."

The Constellations, obeying that command, howled simultaneously. A bright light erupted from their bodies. The Constellations' omens moved according to the covenant.

「The blessings of the stars will bloom and scatter over the city. And so, with the blood and flesh of dreams, the reconstruction of a new heaven and a new earth will begin.」

As the Constellations of <Olympus>, <Asgard>, and <Tamra> illuminated the entire city, the dying trees began to rise again.

It began to regain its vitality.

Kim Dokja continued,

"You will prosper the city until my brother arrives here. Thus, you will prepare the final story of the <Star Stream>."

「This place will become a forest of fear. It will become a cradle where the flesh and blood of dreams will be gathered to create a single god.」

Growing trees formed a forest. Above the ruined Murim, structures symbolizing each Constellation rose like the Tower of Babel.

Kim Dokja and the Constellations gazed upon the new city for a long time.

The incarnations, filled with joy and emotion, gathered before the Constellations' structures.

Apollo, seeing this, smiled with satisfaction and opened his mouth.

[The humble servant of the story asks the name of this land.]

Kim Dokja answered,

"From now on, this place will be called the 'New Murim District'."

934 Episode 54 8 years ago (5)

---

That was the end of Kyung Sein's story.

During the conversation, a strong spark began to flow through Kyung Sein's body, and after spouting a sermon, she fainted. Just telling this story seemed to have taken a heavy toll on her incarnation body.

Jung Heewon and I laid Kyung Sein down on the bed and watched the white shards of serpentine hovering above her head.

"Will she be okay?"

"She'll be okay."

Kyung Sein groaned, as if having a nightmare. Jung Heewon gently placed a hand on Kyung Sein's forehead and asked.

"Even if I hear it, I don't understand. Are you saying another Dokja-ssi appeared besides Dokja-ssi?"

"..."

"And that Dokja-ssi was devoured by the Constellations... What on earth is that all about?"

Jung Heewon must have had a hard time understanding it.

I shook my head vaguely and answered.

"I'm not entirely sure."

My mind was in turmoil.

「Snowfield Kim Dokja has fully intervened in the 'Scenario'.」

The Kim Dokja I'd first met.

The Kim Dokja who always waited for me in the Snowfield, who visited me countless times in my dreams. The Kim Dokja who enjoyed drinking tea and often wore a sad smile—the Kim Dokja who had been raised by the 'Evil Sophist' and tore apart his brothers—had appeared in the 41st Round.

「He voluntarily gave his story to the Constellations.」

I had some idea why he'd gone to such lengths.

According to the story I'd previously read in Goo Seonah's memories, Snowfield Kim Dokja was a being strong enough to subdue his other brothers by force.

Kim Dokja was a being of such a caliber that even Mythical Constellations couldn't treat him lightly.

If such a powerful being had manifested in the scenario, there should have been a backlash of probability.

But there was no backlash.

「"After all, we received everything from the <Star Stream>. So, it would be right to return it to the <Star Stream>."」

Perhaps he offset the backlash of probability by giving his flesh to the Constellations.

Come to think of it, Cheongae, the Dragon's Head Ark of the Beggar Sect, had made a similar choice. He had lowered his status, participated in a lower-level scenario, and become the laughing stock of other Constellations.

Though the circumstances were different, it would make sense if Snowfield Kim Dokja had made a similar choice.

The question was why he made such a choice.

「Why did the Constellations transform after consuming Kim Dokja's flesh and blood?」

「If Snowfield Kim Dokja truly treated my party as comrades, why did Kyung Sein remain here?」

Complex questions surged through my mind like a tidal wave, then vanished.

For now, only one thing was certain.

「"You will prosper the city until my brother arrives here."」

This city was probably built to await 'me'.

Perhaps Snowfield Kim Dokja rebuilt this city, knowing I would one day return from the Fear Realm.

"Dokja-ssi."

I raised my head and saw Jung Heewon looking at me with a slightly tense look.

I nodded slightly and stood up. I had many questions, but this was not the time to rack my brain.

[The 'Main Scenario' will begin soon.]

The main scenario of the 'New Murim District' was finally about to begin.

---

"The original main scenario of the Fear Realm was 'Ascension Ceremony'."

Namgung Myung gave us a brief briefing on the main scenario of the existing 'New Murim District'.

According to Namgung Myung's explanation, the main scenario of the 'New Murim District' was originally 'Ascension'.

"Collecting D-Coins for Ascension, joining a company, and achieving a certain level of rank were the original 'main scenarios' of this area."

Here, incarnations who received support from their company and achieved a high rank became 'ascended beings' and left the city via an 'Orbital Elevator'.

This was the main scenario of the 'New Murim District,' which was inspired by the Fayer light line (the 'Ascension Ceremony') of Murim.

"Fayer light line."

A martial arts myth in which an ordinary person attains enlightenment through long practice and becomes a sage.

A question suddenly occurred to me.

What does it mean for an ordinary person to become a sage?

「To abandon the five desires and seven emotions of humanity and attain divine status, reborn as a new being.」

Kim Dokja, who had given his body to the Constellations, gazed at the city with alien eyes.

Perhaps that's what he wanted from me...

"Even if you ascend to a higher level through the Ascension Ceremony, you can't become like the Constellations you dream of."

My thoughts were interrupted by Jung Heewon, who had been silently listening to Namgung Myung.

"All ascended to higher scenarios become prey to the constellations. The D-coins collected here are offered directly to the constellations."

Namgung Myung, wide-eyed at Jung Heewon's explanation, asked.

"Then why did the Mad Sword Emperor destroy the 'Orbital Elevator'?"

"Because someone had to break that chain."

I thought of the shattered 'Orbital Elevator'.

That day, inside the elevator that crashed into the Ascension Platform, the severed heads of ascended beings and a single message were left behind.

"No one can escape this city."

Perhaps Jung Heewon wanted to frighten the incarnations to prevent further casualties.

Perhaps sensing my gaze, Jung Heewon added in a slightly darkened voice.

"I didn't intend to kill the ascended. I only intended to destroy the 'Orbital Elevator', but the Constellations possessed their bodies and appeared..."

I had a rough idea of the situation. I decided to ask something I'd always wondered about.

"Where did you get that information, Heewon-ssi?"

I'd been curious ever since I first heard Jung Heewon's story.

The secrets of the 'Orbital Elevator' and the 'New Murim District' weren't information an ordinary incarnation could know.

Perhaps Jung Heewon had a Recorder like 'Cloud Mountain' or 'Moral'?

"There's a Constellation that's been helping me since my master was imprisoned."

Constellation?

"Is it perhaps the 'Demon-like Judge of Fire'?"

Jung Heewon shook her head.

I had naturally expected it to be Uriel, but it was a surprise.

Jung Heewon hesitated for a moment, then carefully scanned the sky above and answered.

"The Constellation that helped me is the 'God of Wine and Ecstasy'."

Dionysus, the God of Wine and Ecstasy.

Come to think of it, he had supported Jung Heewon even when she used [Time of Judgment]. I was about to ask how she had come into contact with him, but Namgung Myung spoke in a somewhat agitated voice.

"Benefactor, perhaps now is your chance."

"Yes?"

"A chance to change Murim."

Upon closer inspection, Namgung Myung's expression was strangely excited. The moment I met his expression, I sensed a deeply repressed emotion within him.

In other regions, this emotion might have had many different names, but at least in this Murim it had a set name.

「Consciousness.」

The oldest emotion that drives this Murim.

"If what the Mad Sword Emperor said is true, the other incarnations will certainly not remain silent."

Was the Namgung family's bloodline truly different?

The moment he heard Jung Heewon's story, he seemed to dream of revolution.

"Many incarnations are dissatisfied with the corporate system of control. The reason they haven't rebelled is because they believed anyone could 'ascend' if they tried."

Anyone can ascend to heaven with effort and become as powerful as a Constellation.

The only ladder passed down to the weak, the incarnations. As long as that ladder remains unbroken, the incarnations' desires will be focused on one thing.

But that ladder was recently shattered by the Mad Sword Emperor.

"If the martial artists who have discovered the secrets of the scenario join forces, perhaps we can restore the old Murim. We might be able to return to the days when justice and chivalry were known."

In my opinion, the old Murim wasn't such a good place.

But I also understood what he meant by 'romance'. At least back then, there were people who pondered what chivalry meant, what humanity meant, and what this forest they inhabited was all about.

Kugugugu.

Dark clouds gathered once again in the gloomy sky. I could feel the aftershock of probability drifting through the air.

[The main scenario is delayed.]

It was an ominous omen. Nothing good has ever happened because the main scenario was delayed.

[Someone has invoked 'Fate' upon you.]

As expected.

I smiled bitterly and surveyed the possibilities surrounding me.

It must be the work of <Vedas>.

Those guys who lost Lokapala Agni to me were plotting revenge against me once again through [Fate].

「Kim Dokja of the 'New Murim District' will lose his 'precious thing'.」

The message of [Fate] then rang out.

But even after confirming the message, I wasn't flustered or shaken.

[The story, 'One Who Rewrites Fate', growls.]

I've already faced [Fate] before, and I know how to destroy it.

So [Fate] isn't scary.

In fact, what's important is the stage where [fate] will be written.

[A new main scenario has arrived!]

We immediately checked the scenario contents.

[The 'Tourism Altar' will open soon.]

Tourism Altar?

<Main Scenario #70 — Tourism>

Category: Main

Difficulty: S

Clear Conditions: Offer 30 or more 'Tributes' to the 'Altar' located in the center of the 'New Murim District'.

Time Limit: ???

Reward: 50,000 D-Coins, access to the higher-level scenario.

Failure: —

Offer 'Tributes'?

This was a scenario we'd never seen before. The strange thing was that it said to offer 'Tributes', but didn't actually tell us how to obtain them.

Wait a minute. This...

[You can now see the list of 'Tribute Holders'.]

I checked the list, feeling ominous.

<List of Tribute Holders>

King of Fear — 100

Salvation Cult Leader Nirvana — 35

Blood Jade Fist Demon Jo Jincheol — 20

Paradise Lord Reinheit — 20

The method of obtaining tribute in the 'New Murim District' was simple.

「Hunting other incarnations who already possessed 'Tributes'.」

Namgung Myung sighed, and Jung Heewon frowned.

I said.

"It seems the Constellations have taken the initiative."

There was no way such a scenario could have come down so timely.

Perhaps this was due to the influence of the 'Giant Nebulae' on the Management Bureau.

[A large temporary channel will open soon.]

And the Management Bureau judged this scenario 'likely to pique the interest of the constellations'.

[Many Constellations are waiting to enter the channel.]

Soon, the 'New Murim District' will become an arena for incarnations fighting for tribute.

Jung Heewon said nervously.

"They'll be coming soon."

The 'King of Fear' and 'Mad Sword Emperor' on the list likely refer to me and Jung Heewon.

In fact, the following message had been flashing before my eyes for a while now.

[You currently have '100' tributes.]

[An altar will appear in the central area of the 'New Murim District' in three hours.]

[If you deposit tributes into the altar, you can proceed directly to the next scenario.]

I had already acquired all the tributes needed for the 'route'. I could have completed the scenario by simply waiting three hours and arriving at the altar.

The other incarnations will likely flock here to hunt me and Jung Heewon.

"The incarnations won't come."

But Namgung Myung's thoughts seemed a little different.

"Why do you think so?"

"The benefactor's skills are probably already widely known among the incarnations."

Now that I think about it, Jung Heewon and I had defeated Agni, the 'Flame of Purification', the great Lokapala of Veda. Having witnessed Agni's miserable fate, no incarnation with any common sense would target us.

"They'll choose a much safer method."

"Killing each other?"

"That's one option, but I doubt members of the same company would readily commit murder. Rather, they'd hunt a target they deemed relatively safe and possessing a large amount of tribute, as a group."

A target possessing a large amount of tribute and being relatively safe?

Does such a being exist in this Murim?

"Dokja-ssi."

My eyes met Jung Heewon's at that moment, and an eerie premonition flashed through my mind.

[The incarnation with the 'largest tribute' will soon be revealed.]

The Constellations in the sky twinkled as if mocking me.

Perhaps I wasn't the primary target of this scenario from the beginning.

「A person who pondered what a chivalrous spirit is, what humanity is, and what this forest they inhabit is.」

A loud explosion, like a building collapsing, was heard from afar.

[The incarnation with the largest 'tribute' in the 'New Murim District' is...]

A moment later, the list updated before my eyes.

| Breaking the Sky Sword Saint Namgung Minyoung — 500 |

As if we had agreed in advance, we ran out of the garden at the same time.

935 Episode 55 Giant Tree (1)

---

「Even without a forest, trees grow. No matter how much they grow, no one would call them forests.」

—Breaking the Sky Sword Saint Namgung Minyeong.

---

Leaving Kyung Sein in Namgung Myung's care, we raced through the streets of the 'New Murim District'.

We saw incarnations engaged in fierce battles all over the Blue Dragon Castle.

"There! Chase them!"

The martial artists were chasing the incarnations listed on the 'Tribute Holders List'.

"No! Not me!"

"Kwaaaaak!"

"That guy just stole my tribute!"

The 'New Murim District' was in utter chaos.

[Many Constellations rejoice in the struggle of the incarnations.]

[The Constellation, 'First Heavenly Demon', shakes his head in disappointment.]

[The Constellation, 'Emperor of Power', rejoices at the vibrant energy of Murim for the first time in a while.]

Constellations, appearing from nowhere, watched the entire scene.

「Even though we'd reached the 70th scenario, the scenery before our eyes was no different from the subway in the first scenario.」

To survive, to ascend to a higher scenario, they harmed one another. They killed those who had once been comrades, and those who had been indebted to them. They plundered those who greeted them with a smile, and stabbed those they respected in the back.

"Aaaaah! Don't chase me! I told you not to come!"

Among them, there was a familiar face.

The man who had judged me when I first entered the 'New Murim District'.

I think he was called 'Jeon Yeongwoo', a second-class examiner.

[An incarnation with five tributes is approaching.]

He, too, seemed to be an incarnation on the 'List of Tribute Holders'.

"Kill him!"

The examiner, an arrow pierced through his thigh, hurriedly took a step forward and fell to the ground. A magical arrow, imbued with magic, took advantage of the opportunity to strike.

"Eek!"

The examiner hurriedly protected his head and ducked.

Kagagang!

The arrow deflected off my sword. The incarnations, who had spotted me from afar, stopped in their tracks, wary.

I extended my hand to the fallen examiner and asked.

"Are you alright?"

"Well, you…"

I had received a small favor from him before. Of course, his intention was to sell me out to another company, but he had clearly been kind to me, a newbie.

"There! There's a human with 100 tributes here!"

Instead of grabbing my hand, the examiner pointed at me and shouted. Then he got up and limped away.

I watched his back for a moment.

「Perhaps the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint has seen this kind of 'forest' for a long time.」

Those who, to protect their own roots, would not hesitate to kill the roots of other trees.

The place where the roots of such trees intertwined was Murim, where the law of the strong reigned supreme.

"Wait, 100 tributes?"

The incarnations, who had belatedly discovered me, approached me hesitantly.

"There's another one for 40 next to him."

"That person—"

Jung Heewon, standing beside me, sighed softly and pulled out her broken skull mask.

A belated roar of shock echoed.

"Oh my God, it's the Mad Sword Emperor!"

"Haaaaaa!"

"The Slayer of the Ascenders!"

Before Jung Heewon could even begin to assert herself, the incarnations all turned their backs and began to flee. Jung Heewon shook her head, looking at the incarnations, then added,

"You're still the same, Dokja-ssi."

"What do you mean?"

"You trust people too easily. From now on, be careful who you reach out to."

Jung Heewon looked at my hand, which was wandering in the empty air, and said,

"Not everyone in this world deserves to be saved. Sometimes, it seems like you, Dokja-ssi, want to save everyone."

Not everyone deserves to be saved. I couldn't understand how Jung Heewon had arrived at that answer. However, her answer made me feel a little sad.

「The incarnations who have proven their worth through long scenarios have gathered here.」

The incarnations who proved their worth in the first scenario and finally reached scenario number 70.

Clearly, both they and we struggled to survive and made it this far.

「What did we prove back then to survive?」

Did we even prove something in the first place?

And what did my brother want me to see and feel here?

Kugugugu!

Explosions continued throughout the city.

There were about five locations where the explosions were coming from.

Probably the headquarters of the company.

I turned to Jung Heewon and asked.

"Do you happen to know where Breaking the Sky Sword Saint is imprisoned?"

"I only know that it's in the basement of a certain company."

Jung Heewon had been exploring the 'New Murim District' to rescue Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. However, even she seemed unable to pinpoint the exact location of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's imprisonment.

I recalled the list of companies currently representing the 'New Murim District'.

If they were capable of imprisoning someone as powerful as Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, it had to be one of them.

"There are Constellations that faced you back then."

Jung Heewon recalled her memories.

"Agni, the Purifying Flame. Apollo, the Almighty Sun. Vidar, the Ender of War."

Agni of Veda, Apollo of Olympus, and even Vidar of Asgard. Coincidentally, they were all Constellations that descended here to meet 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

What's unusual is that Asgard, to which Vidar belonged, didn't have any subcontractors here.

"The owner of Baekrokdam."

A beastman of Baek Toknam, a Constellation affiliated with Tamra. As expected, it was the one who ate the stories of 'Kim Nokja of the Snowfield'.

Of course, not all Constellations were like this.

"The White Flame Dragon of Sighs."

One Constellation was presumed to belong to the Black Cloud. And—

"There was also a guy called the 'Drinking Demon'."

A Drinking Demon.

It never appears in the main story, but if I recall correctly, it was a Constellation affiliated with the White Cloud.

"One of those Constellations must be the culprit."

"It's not the White Cloud or Black Cloud Foundation. I've already thoroughly investigated those areas."

I glanced at each location where explosions were coming from.

The area where the explosion was heard was limited, so visiting them all in order would be a viable option.

But right now, I was marked with [Fate]. If I chose the wrong path, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint could be the first to be attacked by the ascended heavens.

I looked up into the void and spoke in my head.

'Unchanging One, are you listening?'

Unchanging One.

It was the Recorder I had met when entering the 'Record Archives' a while ago.

He was originally a Recorder who wrote the records of <Vedas>, but now, through a contract with me, he had become my 'Assistant Recorder'.

[The Recorder of Fear, 'Unchanging One', answers your call.]

He seemed to be listening, and he immediately responded.

I picked out a few questions that needed to be answered immediately and asked him.

'Do you know who the guys who put [Fate] on me are?'

The 'Unchanging One' seemed to hesitate for a moment, then quickly answered with a sentence in the air.

「The Afterglow Library.」

The Afterglow Library?

「A record group formed by low-level Recorders.」

「Like the 'Black Book Society', they participated in the 'Fate Record' of the Demon King of Salvation.」

Judging by the description, they seem to be similar to the 'Recorder Group' who stopped me last time.

In that case, there's no need to hesitate any longer.

'I will rewrite [Fate] now.'

Confronting the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint while holding [Fate] was risky, so I immediately unleashed the power of the Recorder. But...

Tsutsutsutsu!

The moment I touched the [Fate] they had written, a strong spark enveloped my hand.

The repulsive force was incomparable to the previous time I modified [Fate].

It was strange. Surely, this was a [Fate] bestowed by the 'lower-level Recorders'?

[The Recorder of Fear, 'Unchanging One,' says modifying fate is not recommended.]

'Why?'

[The Recorder of Fear, 'Unchanging One,' says that fates with inaccurate definitions and weak enforcement are sometimes difficult to modify.]

I reviewed the sentence of the [fate] I had received.

「Kim Dokja of the 'New Murim District' will lose his 'precious thing'.」

As the 'Unchanging One' had said, this [Fate] contained points of interpretive uncertainty.

「One, can you clearly identify me as the target of that [Fate]?」

I am called Kim Dokja by people, but in reality, the body I possessed was not 'Kim Dokja'.

So, is this [Fate] truly targeting me?

「Two, what exactly is the standard for 'precious things'?」

「Fate hadn't even properly defined whether 'precious things' were people, objects, or something conceptual.」

[The Recorder of Fear, 'Unchanging One,' says this 'Fate' doesn't need any revision.]

I understood what he was saying.

「Fate, with its uncertain definition, was difficult to revise, but there was a way to circumvent it.」

That's probably what the 'Unchanging One' wanted to say.

I nodded and asked a second question.

'Do you by any chance know about the confined area of Breaking the Sword Sword Saint?'

He seemed to have prepared an answer, as the sentence immediately came to mind.

「It's highly likely he's imprisoned in the basement of <Olympus Technology> or <Tamra Heavy Industries>.」

「Both companies have underground prisons that imprison 'Fear'.」

It's a shame the locations of <Olympus Technology> and <Tamra Heavy Industries> weren't clearly specified, but the fact that the options were narrowed down to two was a significant gain.

'Good. Wait until I call again.'

[The Recorder of Fear, 'Unchanging One', serves your command.]

I quickly relayed the information I'd discovered to Jung Heewon.

Jung Heewon seemed surprised at how I'd figured it out, but instead of asking, she said,

"<Olympus Technology> is west of Blue Dragon Castle. <Tamra Heavy Industries> is southeast."

There were two options. Ultimately, we had to choose one.

But unfortunately, before we could choose, there were those who had chosen us first.

"Is that the Mad Sword Emperor?"

"Strike! We'll go first!"

They were the ascendants and incarnations of each company.

"Gungmyung-ssi, things are going differently than you expected."

Namsung Myung said the martial artists would avoid us after seeing our prowess. But it seems not everyone was like that.

"There's no way those guys could have defeated Agni!"

"Even if that's true, they're injured. If we all fight together, there's nothing to fear!"

The incarnations of the companies surged forward, their voices roaring. It was a truly immense crowd, hundreds of feet in all.

Perhaps behind them were the incarnations who instigated this.

I kept a close eye on the five ascended beings leading the incarnations at the rear of the group.

Jung Heewon, who had been observing the situation, drew her sword and said,

"Dokja-ssi, go first. I'll follow soon. I can handle those guys on my own."

The moment I saw Jung Heewon's back, a message of fate echoed in my head.

「Kim Dokja of the 'New Murim District' will lose his 'precious thing'.」

I shook my head and stood beside her.

"No, we'll move together this time."

"Even if we don't—"

"I know you're not yet in a position to fight properly."

Jung Heewon was strong. However, her injuries from her battle with Agni hadn't fully healed. Furthermore, if her opponents were ascended beings, and with so many of them, her chances of winning were slim.

"The same goes for you, Dokja-ssi."

Jung Heewon also had a clear understanding of my condition. In reality, I wasn't in a position to unleash the same powerful attacks I'd unleashed against Agni.

I'd already used 'King of Fear' mode once, so I couldn't use it for the time being. I could still use 'Demon King of Salvation' mode, but I had to conserve it.

If I exhausted all my strength here, I wouldn't be able to save the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

"So, we should move together."

"Yes?"

"Follow me."

I grabbed Jung Heewon's arm and started running.

"Where are we going? This way…"

My running direction wasn't west, where <Olympus Technology> was, or southeast, where <Tamra Middle School> was.

"Whether we go west or southeast, there will be even more incarnations waiting for us. No matter how strong we become, we can't face the entire Murim."

"So you have some kind of plan?"

"Heewon-ssi, why do you think they're chasing us?"

Jung Heewon thought for a moment and answered.

"Isn't it because of the tributes?"

The tributes. The core of this 'scenario', the sacrifices necessary for ascension.

I smiled faintly and answered.

"We have a total of 140 tributes. And the 'altar' ritual requires 30."

"Huh...?"

"Isn't that strange? Even if they take all our tributes, only four incarnations can ascend. That means they can't all ascend."

"Then why are they...?"

No sooner had she finished asking than the Ascendant's question came from the back of the line.

"I will award 3,000 D-Coins to the first one to take the head of the Mad Sword Emperor!"

The incarnations, emboldened by the ascendant's declaration, accelerated and began to pursue us.

Jung Heewon, realizing something belatedly, spoke.

"Couldn't—"

"That's right."

The given 'tribute' is limited, and not everyone can ascend through this main scenario.

No, not everyone wanted 'ascension' in the first place. Even if you become stronger and advance to a higher scenario, you'll only end up as the tail of a dragon at best.

There are those in this city who have given up on ascending, declaring themselves masters of the ruined forest.

"When all the ascendants leave, who do you think will rule this place?"

Jung Heewon answered with a hardened expression.

"Those with the most D-Coins, I suppose."

[The Constellation, 'White Flame Dragon of Sighs', nods.]

[The Constellation, 'Drinking Demon', watches your every move.]

[The Constellation, 'Omnipotent Sun', glares at you.]

I nodded, gazing at the stars that twinkled indifferently.

Jung Heewon asked again.

"So what? To stop them—"

"It's simple. We just have to respond the same way they do."

"They're a corporation. No matter how rich you are, you can't have more coins than them."

I spoke, watching the road to the 'auction house' approaching.

"Normally, that would be the case, but..."

This city was made of my brother's flesh and blood. Therefore, the most 'valuable' things here were already decided.

"It's different in this 'city'."

Perhaps, as Namgung Myung said, the time had come for a wind of change to blow through this Murim.

However, this change would be somewhat different from what Namgung Myung had envisioned.

936 Episode 55 Giant Tree (2)

"Over there."

I entered the auction house with Jung Heewon. Faint remnants of sparks lingered in the auction house square.

[The 'Probability Appropriate Determination' has now ended.]

I remembered that the last time I entered, a 'Probability Appropriate Determination' had occurred at the request of the Recorders.

"S-Save me..."

Was there a fight here too?

Stalls were scattered everywhere, and weapons were strewn about.

Among the dead incarnations sprawled out, eyes closed, others were lying dead, attempting an ambush.

"Keuk."

One of the assassins, slain by Jung Heewon's blade, rolled back his eyes and died.

"Don't let your guard down."

I nodded, watching Jung Heewon brush away her bloodied sword.

「It's no different from 'proving worth'.」

Perhaps all 'scenarios' are ultimately variations on 'proving worth'.

As long as we live within this story, we must forever prove ourselves, yet perhaps we meet our end without ever proving anything.

And every failure becomes a story.

"But why are you here?"

"To find out the value of my story."

We gathered useful items throughout the auction house and made our way to the center. There, I found the item I was looking for.

「Settlement Scale.」

A device that values 'parts' from the Fear Realm and exchanges them for 'D-Coins'. The scale was clean, indicating the 'personality compatibility assessment' had been completed.

I left Jung Heewon, who was puzzled, behind and approached the scale. This time, a pair of eyes sprouted from the scale stared at me again. I met their eyes, plucked a strand of hair, and placed it on the scale.

[The corresponding part? What is the appraisal result? 10,000 D-Coins? It is.]

This time, the appraisal result was the same. Jung Heewon, who belatedly realized what I was trying to do, spoke.

"Dokja-ssi, that thing?"

"Yes. I'm going to exchange D-Coins now."

"Do you know what that is? It's a suspicious device at first glance."

Jung Heewon was right. I still don't know for sure what this 'scale' is connected to.

The scale eye that had actually checked my hair had been trembling unusually for a while.

I said, without taking my eyes off the scale eye,

"This is the only way for now."

I immediately pulled out the hair.

"Aren't you pulling out too much?"

A clump of hair came out.

Fortunately, Cheon Inho had a lot of hair, so pulling out a few dozen strands wouldn't be a problem.

I placed the hair straight on the scale.

[Appraising 255 parts of the same type.]

[The total appraisal results for this part is 2,550,000 D-Coins.]

"I guess I need to extract more."

"How about just cutting them off? That'll pull out the hair roots."

"Uh..."

I hadn't even considered that.

"Turn around here."

Jung Heewon lightly ran one hand over my head, then swung her cool sword, snipping off every last bit of my hair. In an instant, the severed hair scattered into the air.

Jung Heewon nodded, seemingly satisfied.

"It's a bit neater now."

I gathered the hair with [Way of the Wind] and placed it on the scale.

[Appraising 1,408 additional parts of different sizes.]

That was when faint sparks erupted from the scale.

[Your actions affect your 'Fate'.]

The 'Unchangeable One' spoke.

[Fate, with its uncertain form of justice, is difficult to modify, but there are ways to circumvent it without modification.]

And my plan was to exploit this very vulnerability of [Fate].

「Kim Dokja of the 'New Murim District' will lose his 'precious thing'.」

When I first confirmed that [Fate], I remembered what I had said.

「"You don't seem to understand, but hair is inherently precious."」

The sparkling hair began to be literally 'calculated'. The stories, scattered in light, flowed into the mouth of the scale.

Ultimately, the definition of 'preciousness' differs from person to person.

And in this <Star Stream>, that definition is based on the 'stories' accumulated by each individual.

[You have lost something precious!]

[Your 'Fate' is about to be realized.]

At the same time, messages from the Recorders echoed through the air.

[The 'Recorders of Fear' who bestowed your 'Fate' are suffering a major blow!]

[Some 'Recorders of Fear' are objecting to the 'Fate's' realization.]

[The probability of the <Star Stream> is shifting!]

[Your Fate is only partially realized.]

Is this how it will be?

It was a shame.

Despite my past remarks, 'hair' isn't truly precious to me.

Still, the fact that the influence of [Fate] has weakened was enough of a result.

[Settlement complete.]

But the moment I was about to take the D-Coins before me, I felt as if something was watching me from the vast expanse of space within the jaws of the settlement scale.

[The Constellation, 'The Oldest Liberator', looks at you.]

I jerked, raising my head.

Just now, that was...

Tsutsutsutsutsu!

Sparks swept through the air again, perhaps because the exchange of too many D-Coins had disrupted the probability of the incident.

[Some 'Recorders of Fear' have pointed out the probability of this incident.]

[The Management Bureau is not responding to this request.]

However, this area has already been 'determined as probable', and no further probability reviews will be initiated under the same pretext.

Even if a request were made, Bihyung would block it.

"There they are!"

I saw a crowd gathering from afar. Incarnations rushing to take the tribute from me and Jung Heewon.

I collected the D-Coins in front of them, as if to show off.

This is only a small amount in D-Coins, but if converted to actual coins, it's impossible to even guess how much it would be worth.

The incarnations, their eyes widening, stopped one by one.

"What... how much is that?"

Large amounts of wealth arouse desire in people.

"That's ridiculous—"

However, when the amount far surpasses what ordinary humans can imagine, people tend to feel awe rather than greed.

Not even a hundred thousand, not a million, but ten million D-Coins.

[The Constellation, 'First Heavenly Demon', is astonished by your wealth!]

[The Constellation, 'Emperor of Power', is greedy for your wealth!]

Even the Constellations were astonished, and silence fell over the area.

[Everyone in the area is temporarily overwhelmed by you.]

Even the Ascended at the back of the crowd stared blankly at me.

I grinned and spoke to them.

"So many of you came here just to catch me."

I summoned some D-Coins into my palm and waved them gently.

"Do you want them so badly?"

I swung my arm with all my might, scattering 10,000 D-Coins worth of goods into the air. The incarnations gaped in amazement, watching the coins scatter like snow.

"Pick them up!"

Several incarnations frantically reached for the coins.

I looked down at them from the platform and said,

"If you pick them up now..."

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', activates!]

"You'll have to live your whole life bending over."

The incarnations reaching for the floor hesitated and raised their heads. I continued, stomping on the coins as if to show them off.

"You'll never escape those damned 'coins'."

Under the influence of [Incite], some of the incarnations trembled, others lowered their heads.

And others protested strongly.

"What do you want me to do?"

"We have no chance of ascension anyway! If we don't collect at least some coins—"

I nodded and accepted the words.

"I know. You'll feel like nothing."

The martial artists who had been shouting fell silent one by one.

"To survive in this damned city, you need at least a lot of coins. In this world, everyone lives for themselves. That's what you all think."

"That—"

"But is that really what you truly mean?"

A chilling silence descended upon the room.

[The Constellation, 'First Heavenly Demon', listens to you.]

[The Constellation, 'Emperor of Power', listens to you.]

[The Constellation, 'Last Ark', listens to you.]

[The Constellation, 'Protector of the Jangpanpa', listens to you.]

The incarnations, and even the Constellations that intuitively perceive the scenario, were listening to me.

"This is not the Demon Realm. This is not Earth, <Asgard>, or <Olympus>. This is—"

I looked around the street.

Atop the ruined streets stood towering humans, no longer leaning on each other.

"This was once Murim."

My brother named this place the 'New Murim'.

"Until the companies showed up and cut down all the trees."

A city born from the destruction of the forest.

A base for humanity to reach the Constellations of the higher scenarios.

"Remember why you gathered here. Was it to earn coins? Was it really the reason you chose 'Murim' over other Constellations—was that really it?"

Even if it wasn't D-Coin, coins can be collected anywhere.

Yet, among all the cities, they chose 'Murim' and settled here.

「The incarnations who settled in Murim once dreamed a similar dream.」

A romantic city where one could learn martial arts, practice repeatedly, and attain enlightenment, reaching one's ultimate self. That was Murim.

"So? What do you want us to do now?"

An Ascendant shouted.

"What difference does it make just because you say so? This is already a city ruled by coins! A world ruled by Constellations, by Nebulae! No matter how plausible you may sound, that fact remains!"

"It can be changed."

"Impossible! No human can stand against the corporation and the Constellations—"

That's right. This is an impossible dream.

"Constellations, Nebulae, corporations. Are they really that great?"

That was the case until just a few days ago.

[The story, 'One Who Witnessed the Truth of the Stars', begins its storytelling.]

A story was being told.

A story of a mere human breaking a star, of defeating Agni of the great <Locapala>, of revealing the true nature of the stars to the world unfolded before my eyes.

"Ah, ahh—"

Some groaned at the story.

"Huh—"

And others were gripped by fear.

Even so, everyone was reading the story, their eyes riveted.

In the end, it was stories that moved people. They made them fight against despair, they persevered on the edge of a precipice.

"Remember. There was a time when you, too, did not bend."

Of course, I didn't believe the incarnations would be persuaded by this. Like the residents of the Recycling Center, their emotions would be fleeting.

Still, what I needed now was that 'moment'.

"There was a time when you, too, did not kneel before against Constellations, and did not despair in the face of overwhelming power."

If only I could remind them, even for a moment, of the forest they had lost.

"We have already been defeated!"

And then a voice was heard.

"What does the Small Alliance want us to do?"

It was a small but powerful voice, like an echo from an ancient forest.

All the incarnations in the hall turned to where the voice had come from. To my surprise, the examiner who had pointed me out and fled earlier was standing there.

I looked down at him for a moment, then turned to the crowd.

"You were the ones who lost, not 'Murim'. So, please uphold the 'covenant' of Murim."

Covenant. Some looked puzzled at those words, while others tilted their heads in confusion.

I looked at them and added,

"Please protect the one who upheld the convention of Murim to the end on your behalf."

At that moment, everyone's expressions became similar.

At least one person, someone in this Murim who had upheld their own convention to the end.

Everyone here knew that name.

"Breaking the Sky Sword Saint."

Someone muttered, and someone else answered.

"Come to think of it, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint is also on the list…"

It wasn't the influence of [Incite]. A long-standing nostalgia for Murim was spreading through the crowd like a ripple.

"But even that Breaking the Sky Sword Saint was defeated by the Constellations—"

"Back then, didn't the Constellations attack all at once? Now, one of them is gone. And then there's that small thief."

"If only we could rescue Breaking Sword Saint now…"

Many of them had been saved by Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. Some owed their lives to her, others attained enlightenment.

Those who respected and revered her spoke up, one by one.

"Where is Breaking the Sky Sword Saint imprisoned?"

"Find Breaking the Sky Sword Saint! We must protect her!"

The Ascendants chanted as if to dissuade them.

"Everyone, wake up! You are— AAAAAH!"

Someone's blade pierced the Ascendant celestial's back.

"Find Breaking the Sky Sword Saint!"

Jung Heewon and I leaped through the chaotic auction hall and onto a nearby tower. Watching the crowds of people moving through the auction house in search of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, Jung Heewon asked,

"Have people really changed?"

Even amidst this, I looked at the incarnations frantically picking up the D-Coins dropped by the dead incarnations and answered.

"Would people change just because they heard a few words?"

A single story cannot change the essence of existence.

Existence is a collection of stories, and countless stories are needed for a single soul to change.

"Everyone is just swept along by fleeting emotions. Most likely, their goal is to seize the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's offerings or to steal the coins of the dead incarnations and run away."

"Then why, Dokja-ssi—"

"I wanted to give them a justification. A justification that they could still live as martial artists."

With a more powerful [Incite], I might have been able to persuade them. But perhaps the reason I ultimately didn't do so was because I, too, wanted to believe in the 'romance' of martial arts that Namgung Myung spoke of.

[The Constellation, 'Emperor of Power', savors the nostalgia of martial arts.]

[The Constellation, 'First Heavenly Demon', reminisces about the old Murim.]

[The Constellation, 'Last Ark', feels a strong longing.]

The gazes of the Constellations, radiating bright light in the sky, all turned to one place.

Jung Heewon, who had been observing the direction of the light from the top of the tower, finally seemed to grasp my intention and spoke.

"So that's what you were after."

I nodded.

I don't know if there's still any 'romance' left in this Murim.

However, one thing is certain: there still exist Constellations that consume that 'romance'.

"It seems Breaking the Sky Sword Saint is over there."

"It's on the <Tamra Middle School> side."

I activated [Way of the Wind] and moved there with Jung Heewon.

All along the way, we encountered people chanting the name of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

"Still, it seems many people remember Master."

"It can't be helped."

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint Namgung Minyoung was the very embodiment of romance in Murim.

The most powerful transcendant. A ruler of Murim who, despite possessing such immense power, didn't wield it easily.

"Breaking the Sky Sword Saint! Save Breaking the Sky Sword Saint!"

"Over there!"

Yoo Joonghyuk once asked Breaking the Sky Sword Saint,

「"With such immense power, why don't you rule Murim? If you step forward, wouldn't Murim be unified?"」

To this, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint replied,

「"[Disciple. If everyone must submit to a single justice, can it be considered right, even if it's a compromise?]"」

Finally, we arrived at the crowded headquarters of <Tamra Heavy Industries>.

"What is that... what is it?"

As Jung Heewon asked, a loud alarm bell rang in my head.

Leaves had completely covered the entire area, including the company's headquarters. Beneath those leaves, the incarnations possessed by the Constellations were rolling on the ground in a horrific state.

I stepped forward as if to protect Jung Heewon and said,

"Heewon-ssi, please step back for a moment."

Jung Heewon stared ahead with trembling eyes. Perhaps she had sensed what this 'forest' was.

「Can a single tree become a forest?」

The answer to that question was perhaps right before my eyes.

And for the first time, I thought about the 'tributes' in this scenario.

The scenario likely arbitrarily measured the strength of the incarnations and assigned them the number of 'tributes'. My offering was 100. Jung Heewon had 40.

And Breaking the Sky Sword Saint—

| |
|---|

A forest made of a single tree.

The moment I sensed the story embedded in the foliage, I had to accept reality.

「If only one justice becomes a 'world', can it still be called justice?」

A gurgling sound accompanied the sound of the forest before my eyes.

[A Natural Disaster-level Fear has appeared in the 'New Murim'!]

The god who had long protected Murim had become the Fear of this world.

---

"Heewon-ssi."

"Let go."

"No."

Jung Heewon glared at the forest with reddened eyes. I understood her feelings.

The corpses of the incarnations were strewn around the forest. Tree roots had burst through the ground, burrowing into the corpses like tentacles, sucking up their nutrients. Through this nourishment, the forest was growing in real time.

"Please calm down. I'll find a way."

Jung Heewon's eyes were gradually becoming filled with madness. She had acquired the 'Mad Butcher' trait. And Mad Butchers aren't good at controlling their emotions.

I had planned to use [Incite] if necessary, but unexpectedly, Jung Heewon's eyes were slowly regaining their composure.

[Character 'Jung Heewon' is strongly affected by your words and actions.]

"Understood. It'll only be for a moment."

It was unexpected. I felt like she could rush into the forest to rescue Breaking the Sky Sword Saint at any moment. Perhaps this had something to do with my understanding of the characters.

In any case, I had gained some time, so it was time to explore the forest.

I summoned Heir and immediately brought up a story about the 'King of Fear'.

[The story, 'Friend of All Narratives' sings with his eyes closed.]

As the story's song filled the area, the story of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint could be felt throughout the forest.

No matter how many times I thought about it, the conclusion was clear.

「Breaking the Sky Sword Saint became 'Fear'.」

All fear is rooted in stories. The 'Alien Traffic Light' was the same, as was the 'Festival Tunnel'.

So, could 'existence' also become 'Fear'?

Considering that the foundation of existence is story, it wasn't impossible. For example, even the aliens possessed a clear sense of self, yet within the Fear Realm, they reigned as 'Fear' as a phenomenon. The problem is, this isn't Fear Realm.

[The D-Coin is responding to your story.]

I felt the fragments of the 'D-Coin' writhing at my fingertips.

A thought suddenly occurred to me.

The D-Coin is a substance made from my brother's flesh and blood. Yet, beyond that forest, I sensed a power identical to this D-Coin.

"It seems someone fed the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint some D-Coins."

"D-Coins?"

"Yes, a lot of them."

The D-Coin fundamentally contains the power of 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'. This is why skills and items enhanced with D-Coins gained abnormal powers.

「Then what would happen if you fed that 'D-Coin' to an incarnation?」

All beings are made of stories, so eating a 'D-Coin' would strengthen the being's stories.

The problem lies in the situation where this strengthening exceeds a critical threshold. If the D-Coin-enhanced story ran wild within the incarnation, becoming so powerful that it manifested outside of the incarnation.

"Who did this?"

"Probably them."

The moment I looked up into the sky, a familiar star twinkled.

[The Constellation, 'Master of Baekrokdam', smiles sinisterly.]

[Many Constellations condemn the impulsive actions of <Tamra Heavy Industry>!]

As expected, it was the Constellations within <Tamra>. The one responsible for this incident must be the master of that Baekteukdang.

"Breaking the Sky Sword Saint! Where are you! We're here!"

"Find Breaking the Sky Sword Saint!"

The incarnations who had been subjected to my [Incite] finally arrived in the forest. Perhaps the [Incite] had weakened, their eyes now glowed with a deeper greed than before.

「This is a chance to acquire a large amount of D-Coins and tribute.」

Even without using [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint], their inner thoughts were palpable.

Ultimately, this was the current state of Murim. A Murim devoid of agreement and consumed by capital.

"Hey, hey, don't push!"

At that moment, several incarnations stepped into the forest. At the same time, as if waiting, stems stretched out and engulfed them.

"Kwaaaaah! What the heck!"

The captured incarnations were instantly stripped of all their D-Coins.

"My, my coins!"

"Ugh!"

The incarnations, drawing their weapons, swung their swords, and the stems instantly pierced their torsos. Screams erupted from all directions.

"This is a cursed forest!"

"Damn it, the headquarters of the <Tamra Heavy Industries> is contaminated with Fear!"

With this, the rules of the forest became clear.

One, this forest takes the D-Coins from intruders. Two, this forest annihilates the presence of hostile intruders.

A Fear of utterly ordinary logic, and that's why I couldn't understand it.

The 'Fear' born from the story of the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint was so simple?

"Is that the 'Breaking the Sky Sword Saint'?"

The Ascended beings who had been observing the situation nearby appeared one by one.

"A forest that absorbs D-Coins. How interesting."

The Ascendant from each company were gathering in front of the forest. They had already acquired sufficient tribute for their 'ascension'.

Someone I recognized.

"That means clearing this forest will yield a massive amount of 'D-Coins', I suppose."

Reinheit, having recovered from the blow he received from Jung Heewon, was leading the group of Ascended beings.

"Anyway, that's interesting. The story of becoming a tree."

The story of Reinheit, the Lord of Paradise Castle, was activated.

"As it happens, I possess a similar technique."

Reinheit's skin hardened like the epidermis of a tree. Powered by Paradise's 'Perpetual Motion Machine', his massive body began to grow, extending its roots into the ground. Soon, the tree transformed into a humanoid giant.

[The story, 'Giant Tree of the Forest' begins its storytelling.]

The giant tree's feet, reminiscent of massive tree roots, began to advance into the forest.

"All, follow the Lord of Paradise!"

The horde of Ascendants, recklessly destroying the forest, advanced, and more and more people were flocking into the forest. Some were after our tribute.

Whether to save Breaking the Sky Sword Saint or to protect us, we had to enter the forest.

"Heewon-ssi, as you know, this forest is a trap."

The incarnations trapped in this forest will become its sacrifice. The vast amount of D-Coins will be absorbed by Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, and ultimately, it will become the portion of <Tamra Heavy Industry>. Of course, that was only if no one had been able to interpret this 'forest'.

「As long as this forest is 'Fear', there must be a way to interpret it.」

It would have been easier to clear the level if I had the 'King of Fear' mode, but for now, I had to delve into the interpretation myself.

"Before we begin, let me tell you a few things."

I continued, rummaging through my coat.

"Judging by the energy I sense from the forest, the inside is likely similar to a 'Fear Realm'."

The most important aspect of a Fear Realm was 'abnormal status'. This forest, in particular, was characterized by a 'Natural Disaster-level' of Fear. Considering the forest's unique location, the likelihood of contracting a mentally polluted status effect was extremely high.

[Would you like to use the 'Limited Edition Random Relic Box' item?]

"Yes."

It was finally time to use the item I had received from Bihyung when I made the contract.

Limited Edition Random Relic Box. It's random, but in reality, these types of draw items in the <Star Stream> had predictable outcomes.

[The relic of the Wei Ingeum Constellation appears!]

As expected, two low-grade relics appeared.

[You have acquired two relics, 'Ambassador's Rosary'.]

At this point, I was beginning to suspect that Ambassador had entered into a merchandise contract with the <Star Stream>.

"Dokja-ssi, that item."

"Yes, that's right."

Ambassador's Rosary.

Unlike the items obtained from the Ambassador's statue at Dongdaemun Station, this item was a true 'relic'.

Moreover, it was an 'anti-demon' item that I needed immediately.

"It's a set item with the sack I gave you earlier."

At my words, Jung Heewon fumbled around in her pocket and pulled something out. Seeing the item she handed me, I was startled and asked,

"You still have it?"

"It's the first item you gave me, Dokja-ssi."

She took out the 'Great Master's Scepter' that I'd procured for her early in the scenarios. Jung Heewon still kept the piece of cloth, now too embarrassing to even call it a giant.

A strange feeling of guilt washed over me.

"Would you mind giving it to me for a moment?"

I took the scepter and used some of the 'D-Coins' on it and the prayer beads.

[Enhance the item using 100,000 D-Coins!]

[The item, 'Great Master's Scepter', evolves into a holy relic!]

[All stats of the 'Great Master's Scepter' are greatly enhanced!]

[The appearance of the 'Great Master's Scepter' changes!]

The scepter, having absorbed a large amount of D-Coins, transformed into a white coat.

Jung Heewon beamed and accepted the scepter.

"It looks just like your coat, doesn't it?"

Jung Heewon lightly put on the scepter. Fortunately, it fit Jung Heewon's body perfectly.

"It suits you well."

Following this, she put on the enhanced Great Master's Prayer Beads on both wrists, and a miraculous light began to swirl around Jung Heewon's body.

[A powerful anti-demon aura protects the user!]

I nodded.

With this level of armor, even entering the forest would be safe for a while. It'll be alright.

"What about you, Dokja-ssi?"

"I'm fine."

"Nothing like that. Just sleep. Use one of the lords, Dokja-ssi."

"I'm really fine. I have strong willpower."

"It's a pack."

We entered the forest straight away. The branches that spotted us flew into the air. The moment Jung Heewon drew her sword and tried to counter them, stories bloomed all over her body.

[The story, 'Disciple of the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint' begins its storytelling.]

For a moment, the flying branches flinched and then returned to their original position.

「Disciple of the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.」

It was the story that Yoo Joonghyuk had.

"It seems she recognizes you, Heewon-ssi."

We used [Way of the Wind] and immediately ran through the forest path.

How long had we run along the path swept by Reinheit's giant tree? The roar of the vanguard soon drew near.

That's when an ominous feeling of foreboding struck me.

"Heewon-ssi, wait—"

The scent of stories had changed on my nose. The forest's 'pattern' had shifted.

The moment Jung Heewon turned to me, a large number of stems burst from the ground, entangling Jung Heewon and me.

"Ah."

I tried to break the stems with brute force, but they wouldn't break.

It was impossible. Even without using a special 'mode', I could now exert strength comparable to that of a Historical-grade.

After struggling for a while, Jung Heewon said,

"It won't break."

Jung Heewon's current strength was comparable to that of most Constellations. But even Jung Heewon couldn't break the vines?

"Over there, over there!"

Just then, I noticed the vines swaying against the tied cage.

The potent incarnations were approaching.

Their objective was obvious, even without asking.

What could I do?

I sighed lightly, and just as I was about to activate 'Demon King of Salvation' mode,

"We'll rescue them!"

The men quickly rushed over and began swinging their swords at the vines entangling me and Jung Heewon.

"They're tough to cut!"

"Keep cutting at the same spot! We'll get there!"

The vines, which wouldn't break on their own, were instantly severed when several joined forces. It was a bizarre occurrence. Incarnations, barely above the initial rank of Historical-grade, were cutting a vine that even I and Jung Heewon couldn't?

Even stranger was their attitude.

"Great Swordsman, are you alright?"

For some reason, they seemed genuinely delighted to have saved us.

"Save the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint!"

A forest story could be heard sporadically amidst the chants of the advance guard.

「"If one tree can't make a forest, how many trees does it take to make a forest?"」

We mingled with them and advanced toward the center of the forest. Soon, the sound of weapons began to be heard. A fierce battle was raging just ahead.

"I'll break through!"

"Everyone, fall back!"

"The left is dangerous! Support from there!"

A massive thicket enveloped the center of the forest. Thorny vines protruded through the thicket like tentacles, engaging in a fierce battle with the incarnations.

Reinheit, who was dealing with the large central thicket, shouted,

"I'll break through the center, no matter what! Take care of the smaller bushes! I'll risk my life to open the way!"

The one there was undoubtedly one of the Ten Evils—Reinheit, the Lord of Paradise.

"We must save Breaking the Sky Sword Saint!"

But the man shouting this seemed genuinely there to save Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

"Breaking the Sky Sword Saint! Breaking the Sky Sword Saint is inside!"

It was strange. The incarnations gathered here were all affiliated with different corporations. They had simply entered the forest to acquire more D-Coins, to steal tribute from others.

"We're advancing! Watch your step!"

So what exactly was this scene?

"Ahhhh!"

The incarnation at the forefront, fighting the thornbush, was seriously injured, and another couple of incarnations rushed in to save him.

"Huh! Get out of the way quickly!"

An incarnation swung their sword and died. Another incarnation threw themself at them to protect them.

"I will be your shield!"

The incarnations who had bravely charged into the bushes met a gruesome end. The upper body of an incarnation, torn from its waist, rolled on the ground.

Before their last breath, they muttered something with a rapt expression.

"No! I'll die! Kill me first!"

Jung Heewon, who had been watching blankly, stepped forward and grasped the hilt of her sword. I instinctively grabbed her wrist.

"Heewon-ssi."

Startled, Jung Heewon turned to me and sheathed her sword again.

[The story, 'Regret, Pipe, Obsession' interrupts its storytelling.]

I saw a faint emotion flicker in her eyes, then disappear.

I got goosebumps.

A status abnormality so powerful that even Jung Heewon, wearing the Ambassador Samyeong's holy relic set, found it difficult to touch.

"Protect each other! We can win if we fight together!"

Listening to the deeply elated cries of the incarnations, I thought about the master of this forest.

「What kind of person was Breaking the Sky Sword Saint?」

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. The strongest Transcendent and Yoo Joonghyuk's teacher. Heir to [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship] and the god of the <First Murim>. A descendant of the extinct Giant God Clan.

「How can you call a place with only trees a forest?」

With every step toward the forest's center, her voice seemed to echo in my ears.

「Even if not a single blade of grass grows on this land.」

Perhaps this was the answer given by the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint herself.

The answer of the Transcendent, who had long and deeply pondered the meaning of Murim.

「If a group of people with the same beliefs unite.」

An unprecedented fervor welled up deep within my heart. It was a feeling not only I but also any martial artist in the First Murim would feel.

「Only then does this place become 'Murim'.」

People, consumed by an unnatural madness, blindly saved each other and died.

Only then did I realize the true nature of the abnormal state that befell this forest.

「This forest forces 'negotiation' upon those who enter.」

938 Episode 55 Giant Tree (4)

---

The forest was filled with majestic declarations coming from all sides.

"I'll block it! Make way!"

"No, I'll block it!"

"I'm the one sacrificing!"

People risking their lives for each other. It should have been a moving scene. If it weren't for the effect of 'Fear', it certainly would have been.

Jung Heewon, her expression hardened, called out to me.

"Dokja-ssi."

Jung Heewon seemed to have noticed something strange in the people. Perhaps it was even stranger that they didn't notice. Those who had previously been after our coins were now sacrificing their lives to clear the forest path.

"Is this the forest's effect?"

"I think so."

"You said this forest was created by the Master's stories. But why—"

"Perhaps it's that."

I said, looking at the people risking their lives for each other.

"It must be the 'story' that Breaking the Sky Sword Saint has always wanted."

I thought about Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

That she trained with a sword that would shatter the heavens her entire life. That she was Yoo Joonghyuk's master. That she was also a god of Murim. That the martial artists revered her. That she betrayed them.

But Jung Heewon probably remembered something different from me about Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

"That can't be true. There's no way my master would want something like that."

Looking at Jung Heewon, I slowly opened my mouth.

"What do you think justice is, Heewon-ssi?"

Jung Heewon hesitated for a moment at the sudden question before answering.

"Upholding justice."

"Then what is justice?"

"Protecting the weak."

I knew Jung Heewon would answer that way.

「Justice. Standing on the side of justice, helping the weak.」

A place to help the weak, to ensure they never become alone.

Perhaps the 'forest' Breaking the Sky Sword Saint dreamed of—Murim was similar to that.

"A disaster that a single tree cannot prevent can be prevented by many trees. That was Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's guiding principle."

I pictured a giant tree nestled in a barren land.

The tree that first proved the land's potential.

When a plant realizes that a place is habitable, one by one, plants begin to sprout and form colonies.

"My master always said that. Heaven can never be destroyed by one person alone."

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint knew that destruction would one day come to Murim. Perhaps she dreamed that when the disaster that would destroy it came, people would become each other's trees.

"That landscape, perhaps, depicts her despair."

No matter how large and magnificent a tree grows, it cannot change the entire ecosystem.

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint must have known this too. She was the god of Murim, protecting it, but she could not change it. The scene before my eyes was the realization of that god's small wish.

「A forest of knights, where everyone sacrifices their lives for one another.」

The dream she had longed for was finally realized after she returned to Murim as a Fear.

"We have to stop it."

Jung Heewon took a step forward.

"We can't just leave it like that."

I held her back and said.

"It's not your place, Heewon-ssi."

"If we leave them alone, they'll all die."

"You told me, didn't you? Not everyone in this world deserves to be saved."

"I don't particularly want to save those people."

"Really?"

"I just don't want my master to kill them."

Looking into her blazing eyes, I finally understood what she meant. Jung Heewon didn't want those damned Constellations to tarnish the story of the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

I sighed softly at her and replied.

"Understood."

"Will you help me?"

"Yes. But blending in with them like this isn't a good idea."

"But Master—"

"The true nature of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint isn't that bush."

This forest is merely a 'phenomenon' in the story.

「This isn't a proper interpretation of Fear.」

If this Fear truly belongs to Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, interpreting Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's desires would naturally destroy it.

If so, fighting that meaningless bush, shouting 'justice' and dying, as the story desired, could also be a way.

「Of course, that's only if that's truly 'what Breaking the Sky Sword Saint wants'.」

I looked back at the people dying, shouting for justice. Clearly, at this moment, they were sincere.

But what was that sincerity for? Can sacrificing one's life for someone always be considered noble? Can justice imposed by others truly be called justice?

Did Breaking the Sky Sword Saint truly dream of such a world?

「The one who aimed her sword at the impossible sky.」

Even though she knew humans couldn't destroy the sky, she never gave up her banner of destruction.

At least, if it were the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint I knew, if it were her, the one who had been Yoo Joonghyuk's teacher, she wouldn't have dreamed such a dream.

「The 'landscape' the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint dreams of isn't here.」

I carefully examined my surroundings and began walking toward a heavily overgrown area.

"Wait a minute. That way—"

It's dangerous. I knew it. At a glance, the undergrowth path over there seemed much deeper and denser than the one Reinheit and the other incarnations were ploughing through.

"The forest is where paths are created as people walk."

The moment I stepped through the bushes, vines flew in as if they had been waiting. I didn't resist, but was entangled in them. I saw Jung Heewon reach out to me as I was being sucked in.

I spoke to Jung Heewon.

"Heewon-ssi, think back to your initiation into [Breaking the Sky Kendo]."

"Huh?"

Before I could even answer, the vines pulled me into the bushes. A strong, suffocating sensation gripped my entire body. Despite feeling the vines threatening to suffocate me, I surrendered my body without much fear. The vines wrapped around me, as if examining my incarnation body, then slowly released me.

As expected, it was as expected.

[A Natural Disaster-level Fear, '■■■■ ■■', responds to you.]

The vines placed me deep within the forest.

「The sky remains where it is, and only humans resent it.」

Initiation into Breaking the Sky Kendo means understanding one's own anger toward the stars.

In other words, it means coming to a keen realization that the sky exists regardless of one's emotions.

The logic of this forest wasn't to steal 'D-Coins' or to threaten intruders.

「This forest reacts to the 'emotions' of those who enter it.」

The incarnations were robbed of their D-Coins because they feared losing them, and they were attacked because they feared the forest would attack them.

A moment later, Jung Heewon, engulfed in vines, landed beside me. She stood up, stunned, and stumbled toward me.

I extended my hand and smiled.

"You did as I said."

Jung Heewon must have successfully recalled the introductory training method of [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship].

"The vines suddenly stopped attacking? How did you figure that out?"

"Fear is forcing a certain emotion, so I simply thought the opposite."

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint had once said something like this in the Ways of Survival.

「"Justice is cold rage."」

If that sentence is true, then at least the justice Breaking the Sky Sword Saint desired would begin with a calm mind.

"It feels just like the moment when the scenario first started!"

Ooooooooo.

The eerie howl coming from afar sounded like a human calling for help, or perhaps the name of an unknown beast living in the forest.

We'd somehow passed the first barrier, but we hadn't yet encountered Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. We'd only just passed the bark of the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint tree.

"What next? Where do we go?"

"Just a moment."

I frantically read the stories circulating throughout the forest. If this Fear originated from the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's story, there must have been a hint in the stories I'd read.

How long had I been moving, desperately recalling the 'Ways of Survival'?

"There's something ahead."

Jung Heewon was the first to stop. We hid among the nearby trees, surveying the situation.

After holding our breath for a moment, we sensed a presence up ahead.

Could it be that some incarnation had entered this forest before us?

"Breaking the Sky Sword Saint!"

Someone called Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's name. Even at first glance, it was a roar filled with majestic magic.

"We've come to save you! Where are you!"

The moment I heard that roar, I got goosebumps. Because I, too, had heard that voice before.

"Breaking the Sky Sword Saint! Captain! Answer!"

Captain. I knew well the people who called Breaking the Sky Sword Saint that way.

"They're the Transcendents."

They were the Transcendents of the Transcendents Alliance who had escaped by train.

「"Our Youngest, has the end come?"」

The people who had called me 'Kim End-nim'. They, too, had visited this forest after hearing news of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

"Breaking the Sky Sword Saint—!"

Surely, if they were the Transcendents, they would have passed the first gate unscathed by the 'covenant' imposed by this forest.

Even in this terrifying forest, there existed a force they could trust and rely on. And above all, the fact that those Transcendents were here—

「Yoo Joonghyuk might be nearby.」

I unconsciously stepped out of cover.

[Currently, 'Midday Tryst' cannot be activated.]

Even though eight years had passed since the destruction of the Fear Realm, and even 'Midday Tryst' was impossible to communicate with, if that damned Regressor was nearby...

I slowly walked forward, just as I was about to call out to the Transcendents.

Kugugugu.

A corner of the forest trembled slightly, and something emerged from the bushes on the other side.

The Transcendents greeted it with delight and opened their mouths.

"Breaking the Sky Sword Saint!"

The figure who had emerged from the bushes certainly looked familiar.

A half-breed of the Giants. A martial arts master who had dedicated her life to pursuing martial arts that would shatter the heavens.

「Breaking the Sky Sword Saint Namgung Minyoung.」

But the moment I saw its form, a chill ran down my spine. What the heck is that?

The feeling that something I thought I knew was becoming something I didn't know.

「■■■■ Namgung Minyoung.」

I looked around, and Jung Heewon was trembling too.

「■■■■ ■■■■.」

Alarm bells rang in my head.

I had to stop them. No, I had to run away from here immediately.

"Breaking the Sky Sword—"

The heads of the Transcendents who had uttered those words rolled on the floor like toys. The sound of something being torn apart followed.

Each and every Transcendent of the 'Transcendent Alliance' was at least a being approaching the level of a Great-grade Constellation.

Those powerful beings perished without even a scream.

I barely managed to open my mouth to speak.

"Heewon-ssi, run."

The smell of those 'Natural Disaster-level Fears' that had long rotted away in the Time Fault.

All my stories defined what she had become.

「Outer God.」

It wasn't simply that she was an Outer God. I'd faced Outer Gods countless times before. The problem was her strength.

"That being—"

A pitch-black figure spotted me and rushed towards me. Suddenly, I thought I might actually die this time.

"It possesses power comparable to a Mythical Constellation."

939 Episode 55 Giant Tree (5)

---

The approaching Breaking the Sky Sword Saint—I had a gut feeling the moment I saw her, now an Outer God.

Not all Constellations classified as 'Myth-grade' are equal. Just as the 'Demon King of Salvation', who had just reached Myth-grade in two days, and the 'Seat of Lightning', were not on equal footing.

「But she’s not an opponent I can face now.」

Even using 'Demon King of Salvation' mode, my maximum output was at the late-stage of Narrative-grade. While there was only a difference between the late-stage of the Narrative-grade and the early-stage of Myth-grade, the scale of their power was on a whole other level.

I looked around and saw Jung Heewon standing frozen, her feet frozen.

「The primal power of the 'Fear'.」

Just as an ordinary human would freeze when confronted by a beast, all beings below Narrative-grade would lose their fighting spirit in the face of a Myth-grade

Constellation. Of course, guys as crazy as Yoo Joonghyuk would charge regardless of their opponent's status—

"Heewon-ssi! Come to your senses!"

Jung Heewon didn't budge despite my shout. She must have been overwhelmed by the Mythical status, completely out of her mind.

Damn it.

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint was charging toward me.

I quickly closed the distance between us and raised my voice.

"Nameless Fear, reveal your name immediately!"

I didn't know exactly what 'that thing' was disguised as the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. To interpret the Fear, I first needed to identify its source.

[The story, 'Friend of All Narratives', continues singing.]

「All Fears will reveal their names before the throne.」

Is this because I had forcibly unleashed the power of the 'King of Fear'? I felt a shiver run through my body, and dizzying sparks began to course through my veins.

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's pitch-black eyes stared at me.

【Na me】

Those who ask for the name of something are obligated to bear the weight of that name.

[The Constellation, 'First Heavenly Demon', glares.]

[The Constellation, 'Emperor of Power', groans at the power of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.]

[Many Constellations point out the probability of the scenario!]

The Constellations, belatedly confirming the power of the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, flashed a fierce light in the air.

Tsutsutsutsutsutsu!

[The Natural Disaster-level Fear, 'Impossible Chivalry', is looking at you.]

The Impossible Chivalry. That was the name of the Fear into which the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint had evolved.

Faced with that Fear, I opened my mouth again.

"I…!"

There are various ways to interpret Fear when faced with it. You can assimilate into it, or understand it.

"I have not come to harm you!"

Or you can [Incite] Fear.

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', activates!]

"Breaking the Sky Sword Saint! Wake up! Don't you know who I am? It's me! Kim End, the youngest of the Transcendent Alliance!"

I roared like a madman at the approaching Fear.

"We fought together, didn't we? In the final scenario of the 40th Round—you were there when the Fear Realm was destroyed!"

My words evaded her like a fish slipping through a coarse net.

In fact, inciting a Fear on the scale of a 'Natural Disaster' was absurd. But there was no other way right now. I had to buy time, no matter what.

Now, less than ten paces remained between Breaking the Sky Sword Saint and me. It was time to take a gamble.

"What will Kyrgios think when he sees this?"

No matter how coarse the net, if you keep casting, something will inevitably get caught.

"How pathetic! This is why they say the world is a paradox! Why do you talk so much!"

For the first time, something resembling emotion flashed across her pitch-black eyes.

I seized the opportunity and continued to babble.

"Remember your disciple! That damned handsome man with your exact style! What would he say if he found out you were fooled by a story and ended up like this!"

Her steps, which had been drawing near, suddenly stopped.

"Do you know why he comes to you every time he regresses? Why, despite so many betrayals, he trusts you? Why does he confide in you alone—"

The moment I spoke, a pitch-black energy began to flow from Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's entire body.

【Yoo Joong hyuk】

"Yes, that's right. Yoo Joonghyuk! If you've come to your senses, you should go slap that damned disciple's ass…"

The moment I met Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's gaze, I realized something.

「This isn't the kind of 'Fear' I can persuade or incite.」

The aura of D-Coins rippled through her body. The coins, made from my brother's flesh and blood, were disrupting my [Incite] and strengthening Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

「But even if it were Kim Dokja's flesh and blood, is it possible to bestow such powerful power upon an incarnation?」

「Is it even possible to transform a Transcendent into a Mythical Fear?」

Cold sweat ran down my spine.

"Dokja-ssi."

Jung Heewon, just as she regained consciousness, turned to me. I gave her a slight nod and stepped forward.

【Di ? Sci ? Ple】

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, approaching, muttered something incomprehensible as she raised her hand. A sword energy that seemed at least several dozen meters thick was surging from her hand.

【I'm sor ry】

If I get hit by that, I'll die. Even if the Great Demon King of Salvation descends, not the Demon King of Salvation, he can't stop it.

「Therefore, the difficulty of this scenario is clearly abnormal.」

I summoned the 'Unchanging One'.

"Unchanging One! Now is the time!"

There was a reason I was desperately trying to buy some time.

[Many Constellations doubt the probability of this scenario.]

I needed time to describe this absurd situation in even the slightest detail.

Ultimately, the story of this world is driven by the probability of the Constellations.

All scenarios are regulated by the Constellations that watch over them.

[The Constellation, 'First Heavenly Demon', agrees with the unfairness of the scenario.]

[The Constellation, 'Emperor of Power', agrees with the unfairness of the scenario.]

Of course, the reason they were pointing out the probability wasn't simply because of the scenario's difficulty.

[The Constellation, 'Omnipotent Sun', declares that a mere human could never attain the level of Myth.]

[The Constellation, 'Blacksmith of the Volcano', shakes its head.]

[The Constellation, 'God King of Thunder', says a mere half-breed of a giant is...]

They simply cannot tolerate a mere mortal daring to claim a higher status than themselves.

[The Constellation, 'One Who Draws the Boundaries of the Seas', expresses strong displeasure.]

The next moment, sparks flew through the air, and the record of the Constellations' approval gained momentum.

The probability of the <Star Stream> finally began to shift.

Those who manage this world's scenarios are the ones who make that probability a reality.

[Huh, the appearance of a Myth-grade Outer God! How did the Murim incarnations come to face such a great ordeal?]

A Dokkaebi.

[Simple, one-sided academic discussions are no fun. Okay, shall we impose some rules?]

A message floated into the air, accompanied by a seemingly joyful, intangible voice.

[A new sub-scenario has been created!]

Asking the name of the Fear, asking questions to buy time, gathering the Constellations, and completing the records to persuade them.

All of this preparation was solely to reach this moment.

[The sub-scenario has arrived!]

<Sub-scenario — Defeating Fear>

Category: Main

Difficulty: ???

Clear Conditions: Defeat the Natural Disaster-level Fear, '■■■■ ■■'.

Time Limit: —

Reward: ???

Failure: The destruction of Murim

The scenario came down like an emergency order.

The content was simple:

Defeat Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, who had become an Outer God.

Looking at the scenario alone, the situation didn't seem to have changed much, but from my perspective, things were a little different.

「Every scenario has a 'strategy'.」

The fact that 'Fear' has become a scenario means at least a feasible 'strategy' has been created.

As the scenario was created, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint paused for a moment, and I exchanged glances with Jung Heewon.

'Heewon-ssi.'

Jung Heewon replied.

'Are you sure?'

I nodded.

And then, as if we had agreed in advance, we started running.

「Even if Breaking the Sky Sword Saint absorbed D-Coins, there's no way she could cross the 'mythical' boundary so easily.」

This scenario is based on the records I relayed to the 'Unchangeable One'. In other words, this scenario exists to explain Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's 'unreasonable strength'.

The moment Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's slowly moving eyes fixed on me, I pointed into the air and shouted.

"Yoo Joonghyuk!"

Of course, Yoo Joonghyuk wasn't there. Fortunately, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, whose intelligence had been slightly diminished, followed my finger and stared blankly into space.

「Perhaps Breaking the Sky Sword Saint is exerting mythical power under a few constraints.」

I stared at the pitch-black bush where Breaking the Sky Sword Saint had first appeared.

"Over there!"

「In other words, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's strength is only effective within this forest.」

Perhaps, deep within this forest, something that gave rise to the 'Myth-grade Breaking the Sky Sword Saint' must be hidden.

And of course, the place it was hidden was—

「The place guarded by the 'Impossible Chivalry'.」

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's sword moved. A strike reminiscent of Zeus or Odin's thunderbolt, a strike that would shatter the heavens.

"Now!"

The moment the lightning struck, we were thrust into the pitch-black bushes by a hair's breadth.

We staggered to our feet, a pain that felt like our bodies were being crushed.

"This isn't the end. They'll catch up soon."

Before Breaking the Sky Sword Saint could find us, we first had to understand this forest.

[You have entered 'Myeonggyeongmok.']

However, the moment we were confronted with the spectacle before us, both Jung Heewon and I were momentarily lost in our own minds.

Myeonggyeongmok.

It referred to the titanic ability to read others' emotions. But what unfolded before our eyes were not eyes.

What unfolded before our eyes—

「How far can one person's universe extend?」

A gigantic tree, its size almost beyond comprehension.

"Ah..."

The tree, stretching toward distant galaxies, branched into dozens of branches, covering the sky.

The moment I reached out to the tree, a story spoke to me.

「"What a handsome fellow. What's your name?"」

「"Are you saying you wish to learn swordsmanship from me?"」

Only then did I understand what this giant tree was. It was Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's annual rings. It was the sum total of the history she had built while reigning as the god of Murim.

Jung Heewon muttered, unable to hide her awe.

"So this is... Master."

"No, not the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint we know."

"Huh?"

Even if she reigned as a deity of Murim for a long time, could the story of one person be this vast?

「The reason she became a 'Natural Disaster-level Fear'.」

I looked up at the sky. Then, the memories clinging to the branches spoke to me.

「That was Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's first death.」

Every branch that reached the sky was etched with her death.

「"Run away, Joonghyuk-ah."」

Some Breaking the Sky Sword Saints died in a combined attack by the returnees.

「"I'm sorry I couldn't keep my promise."」

Some Breaking the Sky Sword Saints died fighting the Constellations to protect Yoo Joonghyuk.

「"You can become stronger."」

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint was neither a Returnee nor Reincarnated. There was no way Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, living the life of a mere human, could have experienced so many deaths.

「All these deaths are 'recorded' in Yoo Joonghyuk's memories.」

Memories spanning thousands, if not tens of thousands, of years, etched onto the tree twinkled brightly like stars.

「"Master, I have come to see you."」

Every time Yoo Joonghyuk visited Murim, he would come to her and tell her what had happened in the past.

No, to be precise, he didn't even need to tell her. By simply releasing the mental barrier, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint could access Yoo Joonghyuk's history through the [Myeonggyeongmok].

「Only those who regress remember everything.」

Perhaps that statement was false.

There was at least one person, a tree that had endured his years with him.

「The one who had been Yoo Joonghyuk's companion through all those times.」

The master Yoo Joonghyuk trusted more than anyone else, and relied on more than anyone else.

「"There will come a day when I have nothing left to teach you."」

Every time Yoo Joonghyuk returned, this tree would have continued to grow. Hearing of his tragedy, remembering his death.

「"The day will surely come, disciple, when you will become a Transcendent without my help, when I will no longer be needed."」

It would have accumulated rings.

「"But even when that day comes, come to Murim once more. In this forest, to me, who will still remember nothing—"」

The one who listened to his story, grieving the fate of her disciple, who must fight alone against the destruction of the world.

「"Tell me your story again."」

From now on, I must cut her down.

940 Episode 55 Giant Tree (6)

"Dokja-ssi."

When I looked up, Jung Heewon was shaking her head, still holding my wrist.

"Even for you, Dokja-ssi, this is unacceptable."

Jung Heewon's eyes were filled with determination. She had already sensed what I was thinking.

"If we leave this tree alone, Murim will be destroyed."

The sub-scenario's core objective was to eradicate the 'Impossible Justice', a Natural Eisaster-level Fear. And to do so, I had to cut down this giant tree before me.

"It's Master."

As if responding to Jung Heewon's words, the tree spewed out a story.

「"Will you become my disciple? Then take this sword."」

Jung Heewon grabbed the sword. In her trembling grip, the swordplay of Mikazuchi Munechika trembled.

A blade sharpened, imbued with the power of D-Coins.

Jung Heewon turned on me with the blade that had protected me until now.

[Natural Disaster-level Fear, 'Impossible Justice', smiles brightly at you.]

I calmly met her eyes, trembling with anxiety.

「This was Jung Heewon's justice.」

Was her justice forced by this forest, or did she realize it herself?

"Heewon-ssi."

I took a step toward her, and she took a step back.

"Don't come near me."

"This tree is not the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint."

I looked up at the tree. I gazed at the branches that stretched out toward the sky, their ends seemingly endless.

"This tree—"

Undoubtedly, the history of the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint was imbued within this tree. But can we truly say that the very collection of histories constitutes that very existence?

Her soul had blossomed completely into Fear, and she was no longer here.

What remained here now was the history of Yoo Joonghyuk, learned and mastered through the [Clear Mirror Vision] over the years—the sorrow endured by the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint of all world lines.

[The story, 'Friend of All Narratives', trembles painfully.]

With a feeling of dizziness, the stories she had experienced jumbled together in my ears.

Some knowledge is hell.

The forest, humans, Murim, her disciple, Yoo Joonghyuk.

For a moment, in a state of Fear that felt like my head was going to burst, I gasped for breath and barely managed to finish speaking.

"It is I."

Perhaps my brother had already anticipated this moment.

He in the Snowfield, who hated me becoming Kim Dokja, who wished to be reborn as something other than Kim Dokja, may have been preparing this space—this Fear—for me.

My brother was speaking. The end we seek after such a gruesome struggle is nothing more than a giant tree.

「Can you cut this time?」

There lay the history of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's fight to protect her disciple.

The Master's struggle to lighten his burden, even if she couldn't return with her disciple.

「"Next time, try this method."」

As the Rounds continued, the Master's words continued.

「"You don't have to obsess over the sword. You have your own speed, so training other martial arts might also be a solution. In that sense, in this Round..."」

She sacrificed her own life.

「"Based on the enlightenment you imparted, I modified the moves of [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship]."」

She strengthened Yoo Jonghyuk in the next Round.

But even that help had its limits. At some point, her disciple's growth surpassed her own capabilities. Breaking the Sky Sword Saint ultimately realized that what she could offer him wasn't her talent or her martial arts prowess.

「Impossible Justice.」

It was her spirit.

A will that would not break no matter how many times it was shattered.

Even amidst human persecution, she never knelt, but looked up to the heavens, and ultimately challenged the authority of the Constellations.

「"Disciple. Don't lose your faith."」

What percentage of Kim Dokjas must gather to become a complete Kim Dokja?

I don't know the answer. Breaking the Sky Sword Saint likely didn't know either.

「"I will die again. The things that are precious to you will leave you time and time again."」

Instead, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint silently counted the years her disciple had lived.

「"Don't lose your smile. Don't forget the taste of Murim dumplings."」

My brother must have read this story before me.

「"In every Round, there were people who loved you. Even if one day you forget everything, even if you despair over the scenarios and give up on life, don't forget that even for you, there were definitely people who loved you."」

This story must have made him sad, despair, and sigh.

「"In those moments when the pressure is too much and you crumble, it's okay to give up. It's okay to put aside what's precious to you for a moment, to throw everything away and run away. That's okay. You deserve it. Because only you have the chance to save this world, only you deserve to give it up."」

And he told me this story.

「"When your wandering ends, come find me in the next round. Then I will accept you as my disciple. Life will begin again, as if nothing had happened, as if no tragedy had ever occurred. And so, spring will pass, summer will pass, fall will pass, and winter will pass. Disciple, live like that. Even if the scenarios never end, even if you can never escape that curse—"」

Snowfield Kim Dokja was asking. Can you destroy this, and reach the scenario's conclusion with your own flesh and blood, imbued with this story?

「"You are someone's hope simply by being alive."」

Blood seemed to flow from my skin where it touched the tree.

"I don't know what you're talking about," Jung Heewon said.

I looked at Jung Heewon and replied.

"Yes. I don't have the confidence to explain it either."

I now consider this tree 'me'. How could I fully convey such a crazy thought to Jung Heewon?

"You don't have to try to explain it. I won't understand anyway. I'm not Dokja-ssi."

[The story, 'Disciple of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint', begins its storytelling.]

"So I will stop Dokja-ssi."

The aura emanating from her body grew stronger and stronger.

This was the true effect of this 'forest'. A forest that empowered those who carried out their own agenda.

Jung Heewon's [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship] was evolving in real time.

"Heewon-ssi, you're currently being consumed by the effects of 'Fear'."

"I'm only trying to protect my master."

"That tree isn't the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint."

"I can sense my master's story. This tree is her."

"If Heewon-ssi protects that tree, people will die."

"They deserve to die."

"I know you're not serious."

"No, I'm serious."

Jung Heewon continued, her voice filled with determination.

"Dokja-ssi, I'm not driven by grand ethics or morals. Of course, I don't want to be a crazy murderer. But..."

Not all justices can be as fair and impartial as the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. No, perhaps such a fair and impartial justice might actually be far removed from a humane one.

"There are things more precious to me than those nameless people. People who are precious to me. Protecting them is more important to me."

In that sense, Jung Heewon's current justice was more humane than anyone else's.

Protecting the precious people before her.

That justice also resembled Kim Dok-ja's. To carry out that small justice, Kim Dokja ultimately had to break into countless pieces.

So, as a member of Kim Dokja, shouldn't I also have something to say?

"Is that so?"

This justice is firm. Therefore, it must never be shaken by cowardly means like [Incite].

"Dokja-ssi?"

"If that's truly your resolve."

With each step I took, Jung Heewon's sword trembled.

"I will accept it."

She hesitated and backed away as I approached without hesitation.

"If you come any closer—"

I gripped her cold blade with my hand. And then, thrusting it straight into my heart.

"No!"

Jung Heewon, who had cried out hysterically, belatedly withdrew her sword.

[Character 'Jung Heewon's' special effect activates.]

[Character 'Jung Heewon' is consumed by 'madness.']

Stories were leaking from my chest, where the sword had pierced it. Jung Heewon, who had been blankly watching, screamed and approached.

"Dokja-ssi! Are you okay? Are you okay? Are you okay? Are you okay?"

Jung Heewon repeatedly asked if I was okay, like a madman. I grabbed her shoulder and tried to calm her down.

"Heewon-ssi."

"Bleeding. You're bleeding. It keeps bleeding."

The tip of my chest was slightly pricked, but since I quickly retrieved the sword, it wasn't a deep wound.

I held her shoulders more firmly with both hands and reassured her.

"It's okay."

Jung Heewon's eyes continued to waver.

"I, I..."

"Heewon-ssi didn't stab me."

「"There are things more precious to me than those nameless people. People who are precious to me. Protecting those people is more important to me."」

That was Jung Heewon's justice.

And I truly believed it.

"And I won't cut down this tree."

"...Huh?"

"Actually, I think Heewon-ssi is right."

This tree was definitely not Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. Yet, it was clearly part of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

"There's someone who absolutely must see this tree."

The only being in this universe capable of defying time. Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's memories had to be passed on to him. He had to know how long she had endured, what kind of life she had endured, and what she wanted to give him.

[The Natural Disaster Fear, 'Impossible Justice' responds to your justice.]

"But before that, there's something I have to take care of first."

I said, letting the stories welling up in my chest scatter into the air.

"Why don't you stop watching and come out? My head's been spinning from all that whining."

With my words, light shone from the tips of the branches of a distant tree. It flashed.

A dozen or so Constellations slowly descended from the sky, accompanied by a hair-raising sensation.

[I can't believe it. Is there really a story with such a scent?]

[He was right. I never thought he'd find his way here.]

[Is that guy really that 'being'?]

A mantra murmured, and at the center of that mantra stood two mighty, silent Constellations.

One was a tall, handsome Constellation with a bright, artificial sun overhead, and the other two were Constellations covered in rough wolf skins.

The two Constellations, feeding on the flesh and blood of my brother, were finally on the verge of reaching the level of Mythical Constellations.

"Apollo, the Omnipotent Sun. Vidar, the Terminator of War."

Facing me, Apollo spoke.

[We've finally met, 'Fragment of Discarded Dreams'.]

"Did you bring 'Breaking the Sky Sword Saint' to this state?"

[She was the one who chose it. We merely granted the mortal's wish to form a forest of her own.]

The Breaking the Sky Sword Saint tree must be growing in real time even now. The tree that devoured <Tamra Heavy Industry> will soon devour all the incarnations, forming a single forest of its own.

Thus, this tree will alone become 'Murim'.

"Do you plan to collect all the D-Coins scattered throughout the city at once through Breaking the Sky Sword Saint?"

Instead of answering, the Constellations remained silent. Observing their expressions, I asked again.

"Did my brother tell you to wait here?"

[Brother?]

A strange mockery flickered across Apollo's face.

[Do you think you can dare impersonate his brother?]

"And yet, you can't take your eyes off the story I've been telling you."

I haven't fully recovered from my 'King of Fear' power yet. They were too numerous for me to fight them using only my 'Demon King of Salvation' mode.

That's why I deliberately got stabbed by Jung Heewon's swordsmanship and let out a story.

If only I could divert the attention of the Constellations for a moment longer.

"Answer my question, and I'll even spare you a finger."

[You arrogant brat.]

"Why, of all times, did you make the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint out of wood? Was this also something my brother ordered?"

[Fragment of a discarded dream, it's beyond your imagination.]

But the Constellations, seemingly unwilling to give me time, refused to answer and began to surround us.

[Subdue them.]

I pushed back the still-half-conscious Jung Heewon and raised my voice.

「Why did they have to make Breaking the Sky Sword Saint out of 'wood' now?」

It could have been done simply to collect the city's D-Coins, or perhaps to lure me. But even that didn't quite add up.

「Why did it have to be 'now'?」

If they were simply targeting me or planning to hoard D-Coins, they had plenty of opportunities before.

But they had waited eight years, and only after I showed up did they put their plan into action.

Eight years.

A thought suddenly occurred to me.

「"You will prosper the city until my brother arrives here. And thus, you will prepare the final story of the <Star Stream>."」

Snowfield Kim Dokja said. The final story of the <Star Stream> would be completed through this city.

What came to mind was the words of Moral I'd encountered in the 'Archive'.

「【'Ragnarok' will soon begin.】」

I knew what 'Ragnarok' was.

A grand narrative and scenario of destruction for <Asgard>. A fateful twilight that signified the end of the gods.

「The World Tree will tremble, all trees will scream, and the Serpent of Twilight will devour their roots.」

Once 'Ragnarok' begins, all of Asgard will be engulfed in the flames of Musheim. Then, even Yggdrasil, the World Tree that forms the foundation of <Asgard>, will be consumed by the flames.

"You, could it be—"

Yet, just before that great apocalypse, a new tree was growing here.

A tree formed from the memories of the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, imposing the dream of peace upon the entire world.

"Are you planning to create the next 'World Tree' here?"

The Constellations held back their laughter.

941 Episode 55 Giant Tree (7)

---

[The Constellation, 'Terminator of War', expresses strong hostility toward you.]

According to folklore, Vidar, the 'Terminator of War', was a Constellation that played a crucial role in Ragnarok.

He was the son of Odin, the 'One-Eyed Father', and a central Constellation in Asgard.

Because of this, he must have been quite offended by my mention of the 'World Tree'.

"Now I understand the situation."

I smiled and slowly turned to them.

"So you plan to use me as fertilizer for this 'tree'."

There are several ways for a Constellation of folklore to leap to mythical status.

One is to steadily build up a series of stories, large and small, reaching the realm of myth through a gradual rise to mythic status.

However, this method takes a long time, and there's no guarantee of reaching mythical status. That's why some Constellations prefer the traditional method.

It was to trigger a 'Giant Tale Scenario' and become the ruler of destruction and creation.

For example, <Hongik> nurtured the Divine Dansoo, and <Asgard> nurtured the World Tree Yggdrasil.

「These guys intend to use the tree of the 'Breaking the Sky Sword Saint' as the foundation of a new world.」

"It would be more beneficial for you, the ones who realize the 'Giant Tale' through me, than to consume me immediately."

Even by taking my fragments, you could elevate your original status.

However, fundamentally, only the 'Oldest Dream' can properly process the 'Kim Dokja Fragments'. Therefore, even if you consume me, they won't be able to properly digest the stories of the 'Oldest Dream'.

Therefore, they plan to process me into a 'story' they can digest.

"Didn't my brother promise you again? If you ascend with this tree, he'll recognize you as a Myth-grade Constellation in the new world?"

[That's not something you need to know—]

"Do Odin and Zeus know about what you're doing?"

[...]

"They don't seem to know."

If a lower scenario was so big that it grew the seeds of the 'World Tree', and the higher scenarios didn't notice, then I had to assume a cataclysmic event was unfolding there.

I don't know, but it probably means there's a major conflict between Giant Nebulae, or a clash between Myth-grade Constellations.

[I don't need to hear any more. Deal with it.]

With a loud explosion, over a dozen Constellations simultaneously unleashed their attacks at me. These attacks ranged from the late Historical-grade to the mid Narrative-grade.

In the past, they would have been quite intimidating.

"You seem to be mistaken—"

I blinked slowly, and I felt the story within my body spinning furiously.

[I haven't been idle for eight years.]

With this mantra, the story within me began to speak.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', begins its storytelling.]

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', begins its storytelling.]

Pitch-black wings protruded from the wingtips, deflecting all the attacks from the incoming Constellations. A blue-white lightning flashed from the red horns atop my head, and with a twitching sensation in my right arm, the story of the Demon King of Salvation manifested.

[The story fragment, 'Sword Master's Right Arm Stung by His Colleague', begins its storytelling again.]

On the day the Star Ladder descended, the Demon King of Salvation used one of his story blades to its fullest potential, slicing down the Constellations.

I could now emulate that monstrous story interpretation skill of that day.

「I am Kim Dokja.」

The [Incite] I had been harboring within me manifested, and a surge of Baekcheong-ganggi instantly decapitated several nearby Constellations.

Apollo and Vidar widened their eyes in shock as they watched the late Historical-grade and early Narrative-grade Constellations fall with a single blow.

[You've reached the late Narrative-grade?]

I grinned and retorted.

[Why, why shouldn't we?]

As the confidently charging Constellations suddenly lost their momentum, Apollo, finally regaining his composure, uttered a warning.

[Just because he's late Narrative-grade doesn't change anything. He's alone. Keep your distance and gradually weaken his power.]

At Apollo's command, the Constellations reorganized their battle lines. Small bows appeared in the hands of the Constellations that had escaped the range of [Baekcheong-ganggi].

「The Standard Artemis Bow.」

I also knew this item. It was mass-produced by Olympus in Hephaestus' workshop in preparation for the 'Gigantomachia'.

Although it was a replica of a sacred relic, it was crafted from amethyst metal, so its power rivaled that of a sacred relic belonging to a Constellation of considerable power.

[Shoot.]

I activated [Way of the Wind] and dodged the incoming arrows. Those I couldn't dodge, I deflected them with my blade. Each shot put a heavy strain on my right arm, but I could still withstand it.

「That flame is the driving force behind the sun chariot.」

Apollo, who had been observing the situation, seemed to have decided this couldn't go on, and was the first to intervene. As Apollo's chariot began to move, the artificial sun radiating light behind him erupted in flames.

I deliberately avoided the creature's flames by focusing on the tree, the very essence of the 'Impossible Justice'. In an instant, the air around the area boiled and the forest began to scream.

Vidar, unable to bear it any longer, shouted,

[Apollo, stop! Are you planning to burn down the entire World Tree?]

Their goal was to use me as fertilizer for this tree. As long as this limitation existed, even at a slight disadvantage in terms of combat power, I had a chance of victory.

And contrary to their claims, I wasn't alone.

"Heewon-ssi!"

With a clap of thunder, the head of a Constellation that had been firing arrows was severed.

[Kwaaaaak!]

Jung Heewon, with her 'Mad Butcher' trait in full effect, was rampaging through the Constellations.

[The story, 'Disciple of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint' continues its storytelling.]

Perhaps it was because this space was made up of the stories of 'Breaking the Sky Sword Saint'. Jung Heewon, without even using [Time of Judgment], was demonstrating combat prowess on par with me, a late-stage Narrative-grade fighter.

[Mad Sword Emperor! It's the Mad Sword Emperor!]

The Constellations, belatedly noticing Jung Heewon's presence, began to respond, but in an instant, their forces were already halved.

[Omnipotent Sun! You never said that person was with him!]

[How could a mere incarnation—]

It's worth fighting. If we steadily reduce their forces one by one, leaving only Apollo and Vidar...

[Tamra! How long are you going to just watch!]

Apollo's mantra rang out, and the southern sky lit up.

Damn it, things couldn't be resolved that easily.

[The Constellations of Nebula <Tamra> gaze upon the battlefield!]

This is the territory of <Tamra Heavy Industry>, even within the 'New Murim District'. The Constellations that originally occupied this area have finally begun to intervene.

[You came in first like a rat, and now you look pathetic.]

A flash of light emanated from the sky, accompanied by an eerie sensation. I raised my head and saw over fifty Constellations falling.

A tremendous spectacle of light filled one side of the sky.

With the words of the 'Ways of Survival' flashing through my mind, I immediately recognized them.

「'The Five Hundred Generals'.」

The Mythical Constellation of Tamra—the descendants of Seolmundae Halmang, the 'Island of Pregnancy', and the key figures who enabled the small Constellation Tamra to stand against the giant Constellation.

They were led by a long-haired goddess with an uncanny waist.

[The Constellation, 'Master of Baekrokdam', reveals her true character.]

Master of Baekrokdam. One of the great generals of Tamra, leading the Five Hundred Generals.

「General Halla.」

The great general of Tamra, representing the Korean Peninsula alongside Hongik, finally revealed her true form.

Apollo, narrowing his eyes, rebuked her.

"Halla, why are you so late?"

Perhaps it was because some of the Five Hundred Generals, the main force of Tamra, were strong. An ominous air of probability was flowing through the skies.

"Dokja-ssi."

Jung Heewon, standing beside me, spoke nervously. I exchanged a glance with her and then looked at General Halla.

General Halla, too, was a Constellation that had consumed my brother's flesh and blood. I had been thinking that perhaps it was time for her to appear. The fact that she had even descended here with some of the Five Hundred Generals must mean she was serious about this matter.

[General Halla, I have heard of your reputation.]

I deliberately tried to speak to her. Unlike other Constellations, the 'Master of Baekrokdam' had not been one to cast a hostile gaze upon me.

As if to confirm this, Halla gazed deeply into my eyes and replied.

[Little Constellation of the peninsula, things have turned out badly.]

As expected.

Halla knew I was from the same peninsula.

Perhaps she'd heard the story from other Constellations, like the Goryeo Swordsman or the Maritime War God.

[Is your presence here something Hongik agreed to?]

[We Tamra do not seek Hongik's permission.]

[Why are you interfering in this? Wasn't Tamra a noble Constellation? Surely a Constellation like you wouldn't be aiming for the position of Seolmundae Halmang?]

Perhaps because I mentioned Seolmundae Halmang, a Mythical Constellation from Tamra? General Halla replied with a subtle expression.

[Child, I've heard rumors about you. Just as I've heard, you're quite the talker. I, too, would like to witness more of your story, but alas, time in this world doesn't allow it. Although your story ends here, your convictions will live on through the Shindansu.]

[Shut up, Halla. This tree will become the World Tree.]

Halla glared at Apollo with a slightly annoyed expression, then smiled gently at me and continued.

[Don't worry, we'll send you off in peace. We've prepared a special end for you.]

As General Halla raised her sword into the air, a cloud of probability appeared, gathering in the air like a dark cloud.

['Fate' is being recorded.]

Fate. The Nebula <Tamra> had directly influenced the Recorders.

「Kim Dokja will be absorbed into the 'Impossible Justice'—a Fear worthy of a genius.」

The word [Fate] was written with a great deal of probability. It seemed that the Recorder group known as 'Janggwang Library', who had previously bestowed [Fate] on me, had now joined forces with <Tamra Heavy Industry>.

[Halla, don't let your guard down. He has twisted 'Fate' before.]

[There's no need to worry about that. Our <Tamra> also staked its existence on this 'Fate'.]

As if certain that I could not change [Fate], a flicker of sympathy flashed across General Halla's eyes.

[Your Fate is about to be realized.]

The shadow of the tree grew slowly. The dark shadow covered the area, drawing everything in.

「This [Fate] is unavoidable.」

The fact that [Fate] was declared so quickly meant, though perhaps not, that the Grand Narrative of <Tamra> had been sacrificed to the realization of my fate.

All directions were surrounded by <Tamra>'s five hundred generals, <Olympus>, and the Constellations of <Asgard>, and my [Fate] was about to be realized.

I thought of my brother, who must have foreseen all this, and my other brothers who must have been watching.

How would they, Kim Dokja, have handled this situation?

What would be the most 'Kim Dokja-like' action right now?

[So you're asking me to be the sacrifice now? Right?]

The answer wasn't difficult.

[Good. Listen.]

General Halla smiled brightly, unsure of how she had perceived my words.

[Child of the Peninsula, <Tamra> rejoices in your sacrifice—]

[But if you're going to offer a sacrifice, wouldn't it be better if there were more?]

I took off my coat. Then I tore even the shirt I was wearing.

Stories dripped from the still-healing wound on my chest. From afar, I saw the Constellations' gazes change as they recognized my stories.

[I wonder how far your patience will go.]

Gripping my 'Unbreakable Faith', I made small cuts all over my upper body. As stories began to flow out in even greater quantities than before, the area soon became filled with the scent of my blood.

A Constellation took a step toward me.

[Wait. What are you all doing!]

I heard Apollo's bewildered cry, but the Constellations were already approaching me, as if possessed. When a story they desire is right before their eyes, there aren't many Constellations who can resist turning the page. That's why they're called Constellations.

I smiled at them and said,

[Why do you love 'stories' so much—]

Constellations.

Embracing the stories of incarnations they've never seen before, feeling angry, sad, happy, and willing to shine their light for them—

[Aren't you curious why?]

Beings who ultimately desire to become 'one' through a contract.

「The Constellations, having smelled the scent of the story, suddenly transformed and began to rush forward.」

General Halla, Apollo, and Vidar belatedly stepped in to stop them, but the situation was already out of control. In fact, their eyes were filled with desire.

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', activates.]

It will be difficult for them to suppress their desires. Because—

[Halla. Apollo. Vidar.]

They've already tasted this story once.

[Come back. The story you desire is here.]

As the shadow of the tree spread across the area, the story my brother had bestowed upon them was reenacted on stage.

[The story, 'Star Communion', begins.]

In an instant, the Constellations rushed in, sinking their teeth into my torso like beasts. Even as I felt the story being torn away, I smiled and remained conscious.

[You ate my blood and flesh.]

The Constellations, belatedly regaining their senses, wavered in their eyes. Unable to laugh or cry, the Constellations, intoxicated by the story, groaned.

I looked down at them and said,

[Now we will share our fate.]

Soon, the shadow of the tree, now pitch-black, swallowed up all the starlight.

[Your 'Fate' will be realized.]

942 Episode 55 Giant Tree (8)

---

I already anticipated they would use [Fate]. High-ranking Constellations always prefer to eliminate their enemies in a safe and secure manner.

「Kim Dokja will be absorbed by a Natural Disaster-level Fear—the 'Impossible Justice'.」

When [Fate] was unleashed, I had already separated my stories. I would feed the Constellations the stories I didn't need immediately, and take the ones I absolutely needed.

[The Constellation, 'Almighty Sun', requests 'Fate Revocation'!]

[The Constellation, 'Terminator of War', requests 'Fate Revocation'!]

[The Constellation, 'Master of Baekrokdam', requests 'Fate Revocation'!]

The Constellations that consumed my stories belatedly sent a message. However, contrary to their wishes, the [Fate] text would not change. Because,

[You are using the power of the 'Recorder of Fear'!]

[The 'Assistant Recorder' is sharing your record.]

I, too, was burdened with the probability of this [Fate].

All my Recorders' powers were aiding in the realization of [Fate], ensuring that the [Fate] bestowed upon me would not be scattered.

[All the Recorders of the 'Afterglow Library' are greatly alarmed!]

Normally, even if I had intervened, the Recorders would have somehow interfered with [Fate]. But this time, that was not possible. Because this [Fate] was bestowed upon me.

「I myself am strengthening the fate of my 'death'.」

Naturally, the entity with the greatest influence on the realization of 'death' through one's own will is oneself.

[The 'Afterglow Library' failed to reverse that 'Fate'!]

[The Constellation, 'Almighty Sun', trembles and cries out your name!]

Amidst the screaming of the Constellations, a familiar cry rang out.

"Dokja-ssi!"

I saw Jung Heewon reaching out to me. Her eyes, bloodshot as she finally grabbed my wrist, swept away.

"Hold on! Hold on tight!"

The tree's shadow sucked in all the starlight in the area, including me, but not Jung Heewon.

I held onto Jung Heewon tightly and spoke.

"Don't worry."

This [Fate] cannot be changed.

"Let's meet again."

At the last moment, my fingertips crumbled, and I saw the story blossoming from Jung Heewon's entire body.

「Disciple of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.」

As long as that story blossomed, this tree would not harm her.

[A Natural Disaster-level Fear, the 'Impossible Justice', receives the blessing of 'Fate.']

[You are Kim Dokja.]

Darkness enveloped my vision. In the deep darkness, I could faintly sense the presence of Constellations, drawn together. The Constellations floundered as if mired in a sticky swamp, constantly repeating their own stories.

[Why 'Fate'...!]

[Where are you all! What the heck is going on!]

Considering that higher-level Fears are classified as a type of Outer God, this tree could be considered a considerably high-ranking Outer God even among the 'Outer Deities'.

And the true nature of all 'Outer Deities' lies outside the scenario.

In other words, we, swallowed by this tree, were practically outside the scenario.

Tsutsutsutsutsu!

[The effect of 'Recorder of Fear' is activated!]

[You have strong probability immunity in 'Outside the Scenarios'.]

The Constellations, isolated from the 'Scenarios' for the first time since birth, were bewildered.

[Kaaaaaaah! Help! Apollo!]

The Constellations, accustomed to the abundant 'Scenario' pressure, were suddenly bloated, like creatures exposed to low pressure.

[No! No!]

The stories that had tightly wrapped around their bodies began to flow out.

「Eateateateat」

「Holdonholdonholdonholdon」

「Mythmythmythmythmythmyth」

Soon, the Constellations became indistinguishable from Outer Deities.

The shadows of the trees engulfed the Constellations, who had lost their selves and become like 'Nameless Things'. The tentacle-like shadows sucked in the brightly glowing stories.

[The 'Impossible Justice' begins to qualify as the 'World Tree.']

The starlight of the Constellations extinguished one by one, and I felt the tree's tentacles approaching me.

I spoke to the tree.

[Do you want to eat it?]

Losing my incarnation body here was a great blow to me. But I had the [Fourth Wall] and the story of the 'King of Fear'. At least as long as this world took on a form similar to the 'Fear Realm', I wouldn't die even if I were absorbed by this tree.

[Then try eating it.]

Indeed, the tree seemed to know this, observing me and not readily devouring me.

How much time had passed?

Soon, the tree's shadow, having made its decision, enveloped me.

[A Natural Disaster-level Fear, the 'Impossible Justice', absorbs you.]

I felt my incarnation body being sucked somewhere. Finally, I was entering the source of this 'Fear.

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', is activating!]

Protected by the [Fourth Wall], I maintained my consciousness, breathing slowly.

「"Listen, disciple. This is the most basic breathing technique to combat 'Fear'.」

A breathing technique Cheok Jungyeong once taught me.

It utilized 'story fragments', the first thing you acquire upon entering the Fear Realm.

[Story fragment, 'Fictionalization', continues its storytelling.]

To continue the 'story' to combat the infinitely expanding cosmic void. To cherish the relationships you've formed throughout your life.

Even if this entire history were nothing more than a fleeting dream fabricated by this universe—

「"Continuing that insignificant story is the only way we can endure this universe."」

With each breath, memories surfaced. This time, the people the master recalled were those he met in the 'Fear Realm'.

Cheok Jungyeong. Kyrgios. Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. People who called me 'Kim End'.

What happened to the other Transcendents who rode the train? Is Kim Anna doing well?

What happened to Commander Cheonghuh, Deputy Commander Ryunard, and Deputy Commander Karlton?

And above all...

I heard a murmur from somewhere. Slowly opening my eyes, my five senses began to return one by one. The feeling of warm sunlight. The familiar air on my nose. The bustling chatter of people.

When I opened my eyes again, I found myself standing among the people walking along the street.

"Who did you say was participating in this 'Martial Arts Tournament'?"

A vaguely familiar sight.

I'd been here before. No, I knew this place even before I arrived.

"This time, perhaps..."

The streetscape I'd written about, read about, and experienced.

「This is the 'First Murim Tournament'.」

A place that no longer existed in the 41st Round. A world destroyed with the birth of the 'New Murim'.

That world was preserved within Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's tree.

「To properly interpret Fear, we must understand its underlying theme.」

I calmly surveyed the streets. Even within the same 'First Murim', not all 'First Murims' of the 'Ways of Survival' were 'the same place'.

This tree's name was the 'Impossible Justice'.

Considering that the name of a Fear embodies its underlying theme, a clue to its interpretation must also be hidden somewhere within this memory.

「What was the 'Impossible Justice' that Breaking the Sky Sword Saint dreamed of?」

But no matter how much I searched the streets, nothing seemed to offer a clue.

Come to think of it, I didn't know much about Breaking the Sky Sword Saint to begin with.

That she was half-breed of the Giants. That she was revered as a god of Murim. That she pursued fair and just justice above all else... This kind of information wasn't necessarily mine; it was something everyone in Murim knew.

"...Huh?"

A faint aroma of food wafted from somewhere. A Murim specialty I knew well.

「Murim dumplings.」

As I inhaled the fragrant aroma of dumplings, I briefly felt the urge to forget all Fear and just eat some dumplings.

Led by the smell, I took a few steps forward and saw a group of people lying like vagrants near a long-established dumpling shop. Most were martial arts practitioners who had been expelled from their sects, or had their martial arts skills stripped away and their dantian destroyed.

They had lost hope in the scenario and were stuck to this street like weeds.

"Get out of here. This is my place."

Even in the world of weeds, there were strong and weak. The vagrants were picking up dumplings someone had dropped, and they were fighting over the crumbs.

I watched the vagrants' struggle for a moment, thinking.

「No Fear exists without a reason.」

Vagabonds attacked each other for various reasons. Some because they were one-armed, others because they were missing an eye.

In this world of martial arts, the 'weak' meant being different. Some could be weak, others because they were too big or too small.

"Damn that giant-tribe bitch."

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint was a member of the Namgung family, but had long been persecuted by the family simply because she was half-breed of the giant-tribe.

So, did she want to seek a compromise for the 'weak'?

[A Natural Disaster-level Fear, an 'Impossible Justice' is watching you.]

Considering her 'fairness', it wasn't an absurd thought.

But was that really the only reason Breaking the Sky Sword Saint became 'Fear'?

Even if she was a 'god of Murim', was there any reason why her motives had to be divine?

"Mmm, delicious."

"As expected, these are the dumplings of Murim."

Even so, watching the people waiting in line to get dumplings, I truly wanted to put my fear aside and just eat a dumpling...

[The Constellation, 'Demon-like Judge of Fire', gleamed with curiosity.]

Startled by the message coming from the air, I looked around.

Uriel?

But I quickly shook my head.

This world was within the memories of 'Breaking the Sky Sword Saint'.

If that's the case, then that indirect message must also be Uriel's, written in the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's memories.

But was there anyone in this 'First Murim' who could catch Uriel's attention?

"You son of a bitch! That's my scraps!"

"He's going to eat them!"

Just then, a shout came from somewhere. I turned around and saw the vagrants who had been vying for space were lynching another vagrant.

[The Constellation, 'Demon-like Judge of Fire', looks at the unfamiliar incarnation with pitiful eyes.]

The man, badly beaten, was thrown to the ground.

I walked toward him, as if drawn by the smell of dumplings.

Even in the midst of the lynching, the man held onto the dumpling wrapper clutched in his hand.

The moment I saw that rough, familiar hand, a phrase from 'Ways of Survival' came to mind.

「There are people in this world who are handsome from the back of their heads.」

Come to think of it, there was only one reason why the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint would choose to be 'Fear'.

A variety of emotions surged and then subsided simultaneously.

I slowly crouched down, looked down at him, and spoke.

"Are you hungry?"

Eight years later, I hadn't seen the back of his head, and it still looked like I wanted to punch him.

"Joonghyuk-ah."

[CLICK TO READ CHAPTER COMMENTS]

943 Episode 55 Giant Tree (9)

My heart froze at the words I'd thrown at him. Joonghyuk-ah. I don't call Yoo Joonghyuk that.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', chuckles at you.]

Is this because I've absorbed so much of 'Kim Dokja's' story?

I couldn't tell. Is what I feel when I see Yoo Joonghyuk his? Or mine?

Or perhaps both?

Even though I knew my words wouldn't be conveyed, I spoke to Yoo Joonghyuk again.

"The dumpling you're holding."

I wouldn't normally do this.

This scene was recreated through the memories of Breaking the Sky Sword Master. I couldn't, and shouldn't, interfere with these memories.

"You'll definitely get a stomachache if you eat it."

The Yoo Joonghyuk before me wasn't the Yoo Joonghyuk I'd spent the '41st Round' with. The description of 'Ways of Survival' flowing through my mind revealed to me who Yoo Joonghyuk was before me.

「That day, Yoo Joonghyuk was terribly hungry.」

This was a story from a time when the title of Supreme King wasn't yet fitting.

「It had been a long time since he'd felt so hungry. He had to eat something. To live and move, to not die here. Even if it wasn't something he made, he had to eat and survive.」

Looking at the dried dumpling wrapper in his hand, I felt the sentences in my head vividly replayed before my eyes.

「That damned Prophet—Anna Croft said. Go here. If you go here, you'll find the clue to saving the world.」

Yoo Joonghyuk's early Rounds, as poignant as the dried dumpling wrapper, were right here.

「We need the strength to defeat the Holy Chaos. We must be equipped to fight against those damned high beings.」

Gods who far surpass human limitations. Yoo Joonghyuk sought Anna Croft's advice to defeat them, and, as a 'mortal', arrived in the 'First Murim' in search of the power to slay the Constellations.

「A 'Transcendent' is here.」

A legendary mortal said to bring down even the stars in the sky. Learning of its existence, Yoo Joonghyuk set out to find its traces in the 'First Murim'.

「"Anyone who knows about the Transcendent, come forward. I'll buy any information about it."」

Along the way, he experiences trial and error, makes foolish moves, and is even deceived by the Black Knights.

「"Yoo Joonghyuk-ssi, this is the martial art of the Transcendent."」

Anyway, Yoo Joonghyuk, who has committed only foolish acts in the early Rounds, ends up stripped of his possessions, a beggar, and living on the streets of the 'First Murim'.

"But do you really have to eat those dumplings?"

Even after hearing my advice, Yoo Joonghyuk refused to give up the stale dumplings. I sighed lightly. I knew. This was Yoo Joonghyuk. A Regressor who defied his predetermined fate head-on. If the dumplings he was about to eat were rotten, he would train and train himself until he could eat them without dying. That was him.

「Even if this is a recreated memory, wouldn't it be okay to trade a dumpling for something like that?」

The moment I reached out to him, a huge shadow covered us. A chill that blotted out even the hot sunlight. Startled, I raised my head and saw a tall martial artist standing there.

She passed me by and approached Yoo Joonghyuk.

"You're a very handsome guy."

Watching the slowly moving scenery, I realized the significance of this moment anew.

Perhaps Breaking the Sky Sword Saint—the 'Impossible Justice'—had wanted to show me this moment.

「This was the source of this 'Fear'.」

It wasn't anger toward the Constellations or hatred for the humans who persecuted her that led her to choose to become this 'World Tree'.

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, with a giant hand, grabbed Yoo Joonghyuk by the scruff of the neck and asked,

"Are you hungry?"

This conversation began simply to feed a dumpling to her disciple, exhausted from prolonged starvation.

「That was the first meeting between Breaking the Sky Sword Saint and Yoo Joonghyuk in the Second Round.」

---

Intermittent explosions. The screams of the incarnations who had entered <Tamra Heavy Industry>.

Kyung Sein and Namgung Myung were hiding in this chaotic landscape, watching the Constellations occupying the <Tamra Heavy Industry> area.

"CEO, is the Benefactor alright?"

Five hours had already passed since Kim Dokja and Jung Heewon entered the <Tamra Heavy Industry> headquarters.

[The 'Destruction Scenario' is currently in progress.]

A scenario where they strip each other of their 'Tribute' and take it away, that scenario was suddenly transformed by the appearance of a single tree.

"CEO."

Kyung Sein didn't respond to Namgung Myung's call. She was staring at the tree of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

[A Natural Disaster-level Fear, the 'Impossible Justice', is taking root in the area.]

The area around <Tamra Heavy Industries> was covered in a lush forest, and the vines that stretched out were soon reaching the headquarters of other companies.

"Kwaaaaah! Run away!"

"I'll eat you!"

In just a few more hours, the 'First Murim', would be obliterated by that tree. That single tree would eventually form a forest, growing endlessly and becoming the source of a new universe.

"CEO, we must move now. The incarnations are gathering on the southern planet."

Kyung Sein looked toward the southern planet. Incarnations who didn't belong to any corporation were gathering. Those who couldn't be chosen by the major corporations or collect the Tribute necessary for Ascension.

"All fellow practitioners of Murim, gather together! The time has come to protect our 'Murim' together!"

"Let's go save Breaking the Sky Sword Saint!"

Our Murim. Kyung Sein couldn't quite remember the last time she'd heard such an expression. It still felt strange that such incarnations existed in this city.

"Why aren't they all running away?"

Ascension wasn't the only escape route. The incarnations could have survived if they had made a pact with another sacred being or Nebula and fled to another 'Constellation context', or even took refuge in the area where the former 'Fear Realm' once stood.

But the incarnations didn't do so. Those who had previously coveted each other's Tribute were simply joining forces to confront the advent of a disaster that threatened to destroy Murim.

[Natural Disaster-level Fear, 'Impossible Justice', stares at the 'New Murim'.]

Perhaps this was the effect of Fear. The tree's appearance had awakened a certain agreement long forgotten by the martial artists.

Even Namgung Myung's eyes had been flickering with a faint heat for some time.

"They've designated this place as their ■■."

"■■?"

"Everyone can choose where they die, right?"

"Dying here would be a waste of time, you know that."

Kyung Sein continued, her voice strangely agitated.

"This is no longer a scenario we should intervene in. Soon, the Nebulae will appear, and a war will break out over that tree. There's no room for certainty in that."

"…"

"You and the people are now ruled by Fear. That Fear is forcing false beliefs upon you."

This situation was clearly abnormal. Just moments ago, those who had been collecting Tribute and aiming for Ascension were now gathering with one heart and one mind. For the sole purpose of protecting this city, now a city with nothing left to protect, even its name meaningless.

"If this is the effect of Fear, then that's not a bad thing. If only intoxicated by this Fear could I, and the people, find the courage to do so."

"Such courage..."

"I know, CEO."

A light flashed from a corner of the sky. For a moment, Namgung Myung's face, backlit, looked strangely distorted.

"The 'Murim' we are to protect no longer exists. Is that what you mean?"

[The 'Sangwanggo' Recorders are interfering with the records of the area.]

The stories left by the Recorders of Fear were blossoming beneath Seoul. One by one, the protagonists of these stories were appearing in Murim.

[The Constellations of <Asgard> gaze upon the area.]

[The Constellations of <Vedas> gaze upon the area.]

[The Constellations of <Olympus> gaze upon the area.]

The Constellations, sensing the emergence of the World Tree, finally began to exert their influence on the battlefield.

Tamra, in particular, had deployed its main force, dominating the skies of the battlefield with a truly terrifying ferocity.

Kyung Sein had also heard of their formation.

「The Five Hundred Generals of <Tamra>.」

As the massive force of the Nebula, rarely seen even in grand scenarios, gathered, the night of Murim became as bright as day.

「A magnificent 'Giant Story' rarely encountered even once in a lifetime.」

Namgung Myung added in a trembling voice amidst the spectacle of the stars.

"It might be a fool's demise, as you say, CEO. It's entirely possible that I, and the other martial artists, will simply be swept away by the emergence of the 'Giant Story'. But if this is the final story of Murim, then even this ending isn't so bad. Humans eventually die, don't they?"

Humans eventually die. Faced with that obvious truth, Namgung Myung's eyes shone as brightly as the sacred fire of the heavens. An expression only someone who has accepted their own fate and prepared for the end of their story can wear.

「Perhaps this is the final gift from 'Breaking the Sky Sword Saint' to the martial artists.」

The god of Murim, who loved Murim, offered these incarnations the final opportunity to live as 'martial artists'.

"I want to be recorded as a legendary tale."

Given this opportunity, Namgung Myung continued.

"My Murim has already ended once. Rather, it feels like this is the opportunity to write again."

At that moment, Kyung Sein realized. This man, these people, weren't tainted by Fear. They truly knew.

「They chose this scenario as their final stage.」

Kyung Sein, as if in protest, said, "What's the point? It's just a story. It's just a story. What's the point of writing it down—"

"A story is something you tell someone someday. Damn it."

Kyung Sein was stunned by Namgung Myung's unexpected words.

"I want to personally create the image of 'Murim' that will be etched into the stars."

Kyung Sein knew the people who had said such things.

「"Yes, perhaps I might fail."」

The companions left her here and went off in search of the next scenario.

「"But he'll understand. He'll read the story he loves, telling him that we lived to the end. That's enough."」

Namgung Myung asked, his expression identical to that of her companions back then.

"How about you, CEO?"

"…"

"I understand you stayed here alone when the other corporate leaders left. What did you want to prove, CEO?"

What was she still here to prove?

Enduring a faint wave of dizziness, Kyung Sein spoke.

"I wasn't here to prove anything in particular."

Head down, she continued, squeezing out the words.

"When all my colleagues left for the higher-level scenarios, I was outwardly angry, but secretly happy."

Here, she wouldn't have to take risks. She wouldn't have to venture out, and she wouldn't have to face the terrifying Constellations.

"The others probably knew too. That I didn't want to fight. That's probably why no one asked me to come with them."

Snowfield Kim Dokja said.

「"Someday, 'he' will appear again in the scenario. Then tear this paper."」

From then on, her role was set.

When a new Kim Dokja appeared here, she would tear the transmission slip and notify 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

She reached into her pocket and held the transmission slip she had received that day. The texture of the cold, soft paper. Feeling its alluring texture, Kyung Sein confessed,

"I'm a coward. I don't have any grand convictions or great causes. I can't risk my life for such things. I can pretend, but I've never truly done so."

If she tore this slip, her mission would be accomplished. 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' would keep his promise, and she would be able to escape this story.

"I want to live. Just surviving—that's my only goal."

She would be able to return to the universe where all of this was fiction, as if nothing had happened.

"You'll despise me. You'll call me a coward without courage. You'll think there's no point in trying to survive like that."

Instead of answering, Namgung Myung paused for a moment, observing the battlefield. A few minutes passed before he spoke again.

"I once heard a story from the Constellations that were after D-Coins. They say there's a very old god in this universe who loves stories, and he dreams of all the stories of the universe."

Kyung Sein raised her head.

"I don't have any religious beliefs, but after hearing that story, I briefly thought it would be nice if such a god existed. It means that even if I live a mediocre life, at least one person is watching over me."

From a distance, the lush forest swayed. Kyung Sein muttered to herself, blending the forest's noise with her own.

"I wonder if that god is watching me, too?"

"I don't know for sure, but if such a god exists..."

Namgung Myung said, slowly walking toward the southern Earth.

"I, too, would like to make a slightly more interesting choice for that god."

Namgung Myung turned and walked away, leaving Kyung Sein alone. Pulling the transmission unit from her pocket, Kyung Sein stared down at the blank piece of paper.

Just tearing the paper.

Perhaps it was a simple task. Yet, why couldn't she do such an easy task?

「She felt like there was more to be written on this piece of paper she had to tear.」

Having read this story only once, did she have the right to wonder what would happen next?

Perhaps she, too, was overcome by fear. But in that moment, Kyung Sein was certain. If Kim Dokja were reading this story, she would be recorded like this.

「Kyung Sein didn't tear the transmission unit.」

Having made up her mind, everything became clear. The death she had so feared felt as light as a single line in a story.

I must help Kim Dokja. I must go to that forest.

And at that moment, the transmission unit glowed brightly, and words appeared on the paper.

「"As expected, you made that choice."」

Kyung Sein's eyes widened in surprise. Though she couldn't hear the voice, she knew immediately whose writing it was.

Kim Dokja, who had given his story to the Constellations and built this 'New Murim'.

Snowfield Kim Dokja was speaking to her.

「"It seems you've chosen the 'Kim Dokja' you desire, so I'll ask you now."」

Kyung Sein's hands trembled. Snowfield Kim Dokja had known from the beginning that she wouldn't tear up the transmission unit.

So, what purpose did this 'transmission unit' serve?

「"Sein-ssi."」

In the distance, the forest began to glow brightly. The final chapter of this scenario was finally about to begin.

「"Are you truly willing to risk your life for a 'story you've read once'?"」

944 Episode 55 Giant Tree (10)

---

I accompanied Yoo Joonghyuk on his second round of swordsmanship in the memories of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. I saw Yoo Joonghyuk sweating profusely, repeatedly slashing every day.

Watching Yoo Joonghyuk practice his swordsmanship while being beaten on the butt by Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, I suddenly remembered the first time I learned swordsmanship from Kirgios.

Of course, Kirgios didn't hit my butt like Breaking the Sky Sword Saint (if he had, he would have recorded it), but he didn't spare specific insults to 'large creatures' whenever I made a mistake.

Perhaps both Breaking the Sky Sword Saint and Kirgios learned from the same teacher, so their teaching methods were similar.

「Memories were like sentences with the occasional conjunction missing.」

Some memories flowed quickly, others slowly. Perhaps this is what Yoo Joonghyuk remembers—and the stories Breaking the Sky Sword Saint read. This tree was showing me that story once again.

"Go to Changcheonbong Peak in the <First Murim> and pick a white rhododendron."

Yoo Joonghyuk's journey to master [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship],

"Jang Bodo has appeared in the <Fourth Murim>. It's the 'Secret Land of Master Hyeonhak'. Enter the secret land and retrieve the elixir left behind by the master."

At the orders of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, he went to Changcheonbong Peak, visited Master Hyeonhak's secret land, and visited the Demon Cult.

"Go to the Demon Cult of the <Third Murim> and retrieve the Everlasting Ice. It's been so hot lately, I haven't felt the motivation to teach martial arts."

Most of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's requests were absurd, but Yoo Joonghyuk readily carried out her outrageous orders.

"Go to Shaolin and steal the Daehandan. Beware of the Ddaengjung."

I also saw Yoo Joonghyuk, who had been captured and rendered bald by the greatest Shaolin monk, Shin Seung. Seeing that Yoo Joonghyuk in person was a remarkable experience, but it didn't make me laugh.

While Yoo Joonghyuk was going through all that, I could do nothing. All I could do was keep my eyes wide open, trying not to miss a single moment of the memories he had experienced and the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint had preserved.

After watching their story intently, I realized why Breaking the Sky Sword Saint had entrusted Yoo Joonghyuk with such a tiresome mission.

Every life is precious because it's only once. Once a choice is made, it never comes back, and it becomes a story.

But what about Yoo Joonghyuk?

For him, who can change his choices countless times, what meaning does life have?

「He climbed Changcheonbong Peak for the first time and saw a starless landscape.」

Seeing the empty sky for the first time in a world plagued by the gaze of the stars.

「In the secret realm of Master Hyeonhak, he encountered a divine being who saved people.」

Witnessing the symbiosis that exists in Murim of Dosan Geomrim.

Yoo Joonghyuk carried out the orders of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, discovering scenes he had previously missed in the world of scenarios.

"Breaking the Sky Sword Saint."

And in the process...

"Why?"

"No."

Perhaps Yoo Joonghyuk gained a better understanding of the world he sought to save.

「Breaking the Sky Sword Saint taught Yoo Joonghyuk 'the way to survive'.」

Living means connecting with this world, forming connections. Saving someone and being saved again.

For the Regressor, who, in his quest to save this world, lived a life unrelated to its people, that experience was essential.

「And so spring passed, and summer passed.」

Time can be short, or long. It can be written in a single sentence, or even a book. They spent such time together—

「Autumn came, and winter came.」

Finally, they became master and disciple.

「The end of the second round was drawing near.」

Snow was falling from the sky.

Perhaps this would be the last winter of the second round that Breaking the Sky Sword Saint and Yoo Joonghyuk would spend together.

I sat on the veranda next to Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, watching Yoo Joonghyuk practice his sword.

Breaking the Sky God. Yoo Joonghyuk, shirtless even in the middle of winter, swinging his sword. Watching the sweat that had formed in his veins crystallize and drip down, I thought of Kim Dokja.

「I wish this story would never end.」

Sometimes, knowing the ending of a story can be painful. Even knowing that it would ultimately end in tragedy, Kim Dokja read it again and again.

And like Yoo Joonghyuk, who struggled to save the world, Kim Dokja must have constantly considered the possibility that this story wouldn't end in tragedy.

「Since every sentence is already written, all the reader can do is fathom its meaning.」

Just as Yoo Joonghyuk ultimately couldn't reach the ending he desired, Kim Dokja also faced the same tragedy time and time again.

Faced with a predetermined tragedy, all humans can do is explore its meaning. To somehow prove that this entire world wasn't meaningless.

If Yoo Joonghyuk's job was to fight the world, Kim Dokja's job was to fight meaninglessness.

"What are you thinking about?"

I wondered if it was because I was so lost in thought. When Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, sitting next to me, spoke, I quickly looked up.

"I asked you what you were thinking about."

Only then did I realize Breaking the Sky Sword Saint was asking me.

The question, "Since when—" flashed through my mind, but that wasn't the point.

This world of memory was realized by Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

It was only natural that she discovered me, intruding into her memories.

"I was thinking you were a truly sad person."

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint turned her head and looked at me. Sensing her gaze, I continued speaking.

"You must have been watching this landscape alone for a very long time."

Snow must have fallen in her world for a long time. Recalling this landscape, she must have searched for clues her disciple hadn't discovered in the previous round.

"You must have seen this world countless times."

"But it only happened once. There's no turning back, no turning back."

That's right. We reread that one-time story over and over again. Reading it, we live our lives anew.

"Did you know I was coming?"

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint nodded slightly and replied.

"I heard your story from the Outer Gods of the Fear Realm."

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint didn't stay in the Fear Realm with me. She only participated in the final battle, so she wasn't fully aware of what I had done in the Fear Realm.

"What were they talking about?"

"They said you seemed like someone who wanted to embrace every story in the world."

I pondered that for a moment before replying.

"I'm no one like that. I just write what I want to write and read what I want to read."

"In the stories you want to read."

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint turned her head again, looked at Yoo Joonghyuk, and added,

"Is that child included?"

I paused for a moment before answering.

"Yes."

It was a confident answer, surprising even myself. I didn't even have to wonder if it was Kim Dokja's or mine. Perhaps, at that moment, every Kim Dokja in the world was thinking the same thing.

Listening to the soft falling snow, I asked Breaking the Sky Sword Saint,

"Is there something you'd like to ask me?"

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint was now an Outer God, and she must have learned some of the secrets of this world, and perhaps even understood her own fate and that of her disciple. Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's lips moved slightly, as if shaking a giant tree.

"How many more regressions will my disciple experience?"

I couldn't readily answer. Perhaps I could have said something like this:

「"Your disciple will experience 1,863 regressions. And on the 1,864th, he will finally reach his desired ending."」

But was that really the future that 'that Yoo Joonghyuk' would experience?

The Breaking the Sky Sword Saint before me was the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint of the '41st' round, and the Yoo Joonghyuk she spoke of was the Yoo Joonghyuk of the '41st'.

"That guy..."

And I already knew what kind of end Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st round would meet—what he would lose at the end of this world.

"He's failing, isn't he?"

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint spoke, her voice laced with deep sadness.

"Even after enduring such a terribly long time, he can never find happiness."

"I don't know yet."

I bit my lip, as if erasing a sentence already written, then opened my mouth again.

As she had said, the ending of the 41st round had already been written. But—

"I came here to rewrite this story."

Only after I had said it out loud did I realize how desperately I had longed for it.

"I will do whatever it takes to make that guy reach his desired ending."

"Even if that ending ends in failure?"

"Breaking the Sky Sword Saint."

I met Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's piercing eyes. The power of chaos pulsated within her clear, ethereal eyes.

Feeling the tingling energy of the Outer God suffocating my entire body, I managed to speak.

"I know why you became a 'tree'."

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint had been with Yoo Joonghyuk's life, more intimately than anyone else.

She was a mortal who understood others' emotions better than anyone else. Unlike Yoo Joonghyuk, whose emotions gradually wore away with each round, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint must have had to relearn the past rounds of 'A Newly Encountered Disciple' with each round.

And she must have had to accept that her disciple had already been her disciple forty times, and that she had lost him forty times.

Therefore, the reason she became 'Fear' is simple.

"You don't want your disciple to suffer from 'stories' anymore."

The Constellations said it. Breaking the Sky Sword Saint absorbed the D-coins herself.

The meaning was simple.

「Breaking the Sky Sword Saint chose to sacrifice herself and become the 'World Tree'.」

I continued, watching the stories flowing from her body.

"The stories of this world—all scenarios—are created through 'conflict'."

Since the constellations love conflict, all scenarios are born from it.

"Conversely, if 'conflict' disappears from this world, the scenarios will disappear."

All characters who seek to prevent the world's tragedy share similarities.

The Second Kim Dokja opened the 'Fear Realm' for the forgotten, ultimately attempting to turn the entire world into a 'Fear Realm'.

To protect those he loved, he 'killed' everyone around him.

Han Sooyoung, who had been created as an 'avatar' in the 1,863rd round, and Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, who now forces an 'Impossible Justice' on all beings, were the same.

Even now, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's tree is probably covering the 'New Murim District' in real time. Having grown by devouring everything in the city, it will soon break through the upper scenarios and engulf the <Star Stream>.

Finally, the tree, which has become a single world, will impose only one 'consensus' on its forest.

"Breaking the Sky Sword Saint."

The foreign narrative flowing from Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's body began to intensify.

There stood the master, who had grown from the tragedy of her disciple. Her disciple, who had dedicated his life to saving the world, but ultimately failed.

There was only one thing the master could do for her disciple.

"Are you planning to destroy all 'scenarios' in the <Star Stream> for Yoo Joonghyuk?"

---

[CLICK TO READ CHAPTER COMMENTS]

---

945 Episode 55 Giant Tree (11)

Her silence was soon a confirmation.

As expected, she was an Outer God, intent on destroying this Star Stream.

"Do you think it's a proper conclusion for you to be the first to yearn for that world, just because your disciple will despair of it?"

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint looked at me silently and then withdrew.

"Do you think this world is worth protecting? Do you believe that the <Star Stream>, which uses all existence as mere material for narrative, is still worth continuing?"

Kim Dokja once said something similar. When Anna Croft asked if he, too, was fighting to protect this world, Kim Dokja replied,

"We'll have to wait and see whether this world is truly worth protecting."

But even Kim Dokja ultimately chose not to destroy the <Star Stream>.

Neither the gawking of the Constellations nor the cruelty of the scenarios were reasons to destroy this world.

Perhaps Kim Dokja had concluded: despite all the tragedy, this world was worth preserving. Even in a world where aspirations were firmly established, meaning still existed.

"Yes."

Accepting tragedy.

"Because this damned world exists, so does your disciple."

Calmly reading the already written sentences and moving forward.

"And that world, that guy never gave up on it."

In some worldline, Yoo Joonghyuk might have given up on his mission. Han Sooyoung is telling the story. She might not have continued writing, and Kim Dokja might not have been interested in 'Ways of Survival'.

But at least in the worldline I know, things were different.

Han Sooyoung wrote 'Ways of Survival', Kim Dokja read it, and Yoo Joonghyuk lived his life to the end.

There were Constellations who loved that story. The faint starlight gathered to reveal the ending, and a story that didn't exist in the original was born.

Perhaps the laws of this universe can change just a little bit like that. I believe in that possibility.

"Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. Stop the expansion of the tree. Your disciple is not as weak as you think."

Facing the radiant Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's 'Mirror Vision', I continued my story.

"Do not destroy the <Star Stream>. If you completely become a Fear, you will lose your sense of self. Having lost your sense of self, you will lose control of the world to the nebulae, and ultimately, this forest will become a playground for the Constellations. The scenario won't end with 'a single justice', as you think."

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint must know this. The ending she desires won't come. In this world, where everything, as she always does, becomes the subject of a story, even her justice is merely part of the story.

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint raised her head and looked up at the sky.

"The Constellations are gathering outside the forest."

"I know."

The Constellations' intentions were clear. They would uproot this giant tree, beyond their control. They would then take it to the higher scenarios and use it as a breakwater for the great apocalypse.

"I'm not afraid of the Constellations."

I've already seen the end of worldlines several times. I've seen the endings Kim Dokja showed, Cheon Inho showed, and Han Sooyoung showed.

I know the new school Constellations are powerful. I know how distant the stories that drive them are, and how foolish it is to fight against them.

But in the 1,863rd round, the Apocalypse Dragon appeared. Even when I descended, and when Yoo Joonghyuk died in the 40th round, everyone said the same thing: this story is over. But neither Han Sooyoung nor Cheon Inho gave up, and they reached a conclusion even Yoo Joonghyuk couldn't see.

"If you don't give up, you can definitely fight back."

Instead of answering my words, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint gazed silently at the winter sky. A faint crack of light was forming across the pitch-black night. The Constellations were attempting to infiltrate this 'tree'.

[Sad Recorder of the stars.]

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's Mirror Vision Eyes looked at me, and I looked back at her. Our story resonated, and the surrounding scenery began to change.

[I ask you if you have the strength to prove your justice.]

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's manor vanished. The expansive veranda vanished. The barking cries of the Breaking the Sky Sword Master and Yoo Joonghyuk's swordsmanship slicing through the air dispersed.

What unfolded before me was a bloody battlefield. I knew this stage well.

「This was the 'final battle site' of the second round's Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.」

I saw the returnees lying on the ground. Martial arts practitioners who had returned from other worlds. Those who had gained strength from other worlds and descended as disasters to seek revenge on this 'Murim'.

「Returnee War.」

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint had single-handedly prevented disaster here and protected Murim.

A powerful aura emanated from Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's body. I could feel the power of an Outer being enveloping her entire being.

[Natural Disaster-level Fear, 'Impossible Justice', is watching you.]

It felt like staring into an endless abyss. The Breaking the Sky Sword Saint standing before me was the same being who had emerged from the bushes earlier and blocked Jung Heewon.

[What is your justice?]

A golden aura rippled from her hand, then took the form of a sword.

Breaking the Sky Divine Sword.

Since no metal in this Murim could fully withstand her story, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint had forged her own story to create a sword. She said.

「A sword abandoned to cut down the stars in the sky.」

Later, the Meteor Shower, created by Yoo Joonghyuk, also applied the supernatural power of the Breaking the Sky God.

To counter the immense fighting spirit emanating from her body, I, too, drew up my magical power. The flowing magical power naturally blended with my mantra.

[My justice is.]

As I slowly inhaled, the story within me began to speak.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', begins its storytelling.]

This forest grants strength to those who uphold their principles. Therefore, I, too, must have a duty to prove my principles here.

「What is my justice?」

I lack the upright convictions of Kim Dokja, the grand ambitions of Han Sooyoung, or the tenacious persistence of Yoo Joonghyuk.

[My justice is—]

Nevertheless, even I, like you, have a vision I long to see.

[A world where Yoo Joonghyuk can eat 'dumplings made by others' with peace of mind.]

The flying Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. Slashing her blade with all my might, I continued my mantra.

[People who love one person's story—living together in the 'Big House' they desire.]

'Unbreakable Faith' shone brightly. The giant story contained in the swordplay was pushing back the power of the outside world.

[It's to ensure that those who still refuse to give up on their stories—won't be saddened by their story's ending.]

[Your 'giant story' responds to your will.]

Han Sooyoung said. The 'Giant Story' I possess responds to the 'story I want to write'.

Perhaps, on the day this 'Giant Story' becomes a 'Super Giant Story', the world I long to see will also meet its end.

Kagagagagak!

We exchanged sword strikes in silence. Despite the help of the 'Giant Story', I was slowly falling behind. This was partly because my proficiency in the 'Giant Story' wasn't high, and partly because Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, who had become a 'Outer God', was an entity outside the standard.

Within this 'forest', her status was... A level approaching Mythical.

Having been devoured by the stories, unable to smoothly activate either the 'Demon King of Salvation' or the 'King of Fear' mode, she was an unbeatable opponent for me.

Nevertheless, I persisted and swung my sword because I knew from the start she wouldn't harm me.

Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship.

Great Move.

Breaking the Sky Meteor Shower.

A meteor shower, destined to knock down the stars, descended upon me. I used [Way of the Wind] to dodge the trajectories and advance forward.

「To write and read this 'world' presented before me to the end.」

At present, I can neither freely wield the stories of the 'Demon King of Salvation' nor the power of the 'King of Fear'. But even I, a mere mortal, can do something.

「"Believe in the stories you've built. What you've experienced is who you are. Your job is to give meaning to that story, to give it a name."」

This was the power of the stories I had purely accumulated.

With the overflowing energy of the 'Giant Tale', [Bookmark] and [Incite] simultaneously activated in my mind.

「"I am 'Kyrgios Rodgraim'."」

I saw Breaking the Sky Sword Saint hesitate for a moment as she confirmed the lightening of [Electrification] surging through my body.

[That ability—]

For a moment, I became electric, retracing the Meteor Shower's trajectory and arriving right in front of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. The moment her eyes widened, 'Unbreakable Faith' stirred. [Way of the Wind] exploded like a howling wolf, and the electric wave of [Baekcheong-ganggi] pierced through the gap created by the explosion.

The blades pierced like solid fangs. Something ripped deeply, and only after passing Breaking the Sky Sword Saint a dozen steps did I finally stop. As the power of [Electrification] dispersed, a faint sense of exhaustion washed over me.

When I turned around, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint was still standing tall. Silvery wisps of light were fluttering before her.

[Who taught you this technique?]

This technique, a fusion of the powers of [Way of the Wind] and [Electrification], was something I mastered while studying under Han Sooyoung in the 1,863rd round.

「Wind Wolf Slash and White Wolf Slash.」

[I learned it from everyone I met.]

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint seemed to ponder something for a while after hearing my answer, then said,

[I have seen your justice.]

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint slowly turned, her wounds already healed. Wind Wolf Slash and White Wolf Slash were techniques I had practiced to cut down even the most stellar Constellations with a single stroke, but as expected, they were no match for Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

A lump in my throat twitched as I watched Breaking the Sky Sword Saint slowly approach. In the end, I wondered if I should use the story of the 'King of Fear'.

[Stand back, young Recorder.]

As Breaking the Sky Sword Saint uttered her mantra, a single flash of light pierced the sky. Breaking the Sky Sword Saint swung her sword toward the sky as if protecting me. Breaking the Sky Divine Sword, which had deflected the flash, let out a soft sword sound.

Frowning, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint raised her head and saw Murim’s sky shatter like broken glass. Constellations emerged from the cracks of scattered light.

[Found it.]

They were Constellations I knew well.

I'd clearly seen the stories swallowed by the tree, but it seemed only a small number were destroyed that way.

The number of Constellations appearing on the battlefield easily exceeded three hundred.

[The possibility of a 'Giant Story' is stirring in the scenario.]

A battlefield so large that the likelihood of a 'Giant Tale' scenario was building.

The three Constellations that occupied its center were the aforementioned three.

[This is our chance to seize the core of the World Tree.]

Apollo, Vidar, and Halla.

The three Constellations, having taken my brother's story and reached the border of Mythical Constellations, radiated a bright light, glaring at me and Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

Apollo glared coldly at me, then turned to Breaking the Sky Sword Saint and commanded the Constellations.

[Take care of them.]

The Five Hundred Generals of <Tamra> moved. Each of them was enough to cause disaster to a small planet. They were all simultaneously revealing their power to Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

The first Constellation to land on the ground roared and swung their massive spear at Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint gazed at the Constellations with indifferent eyes and opened her mouth.

[With such a mere justice.]

The Constellation's spear shattered like a toy.

[You intend to face me?]

The moment the general's eyes widened, his neck was already flying through the air. It was a speed too fast for the naked eye to detect.

「Breaking the Sky Sword Saint hasn't been using her full strength until now.」

I had a vague sense of it, but even so, the goosebumps on the back of my neck wouldn't stop. The true power of a Natural Disaster-level Fear was awakening within Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's entire body.

[Don't back down! That bastard—]

Before he could even utter his mantra, the Constellation was torn in two. No one could block her sword.

「Why does the 'First Murim' worship the 'Breaking the Sky Sword Saint' as a god?」

The answer was right before my eyes.

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, transformed into an Outer God and the very embodiment of fear, had finally become Fear itself, achieving the stranglehold of the stars she had longed for.

[Did you really intend to listen to my story with such a justice?]

With each swing of the sword, the stars in the sky went out one by one. Stars that had lost their lore crumbled and shattered, and the terrified Five Hundred Generals retreated, unable to hide their shock.

「They chose the wrong battlefield.」

This is the world of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

Unless even a Myth-level Constellation descends, there's no way to deal with her.

Currently, there are no Myth-level Constellations in the Great Nebula to dispatch here.

[Ah, Apollo! Vidar!]

[Kuaaaaak! Get out of the way!]

Common sense dictated that Apollo, Vidar, and Halla should have acknowledged their shortcomings and retreated.

But they did not retreat.

[It's true that some 'Fears' are comparable to 'Myth-level' ones.]

With a seemingly intriguing remark, Apollo from the sky landed on the ground. Halla and Vidar followed.

Apollo opened his mouth with a faint smile.

[I have a gift prepared for you, foolish forest god.]

A faint sound, like a scream, could be heard from afar. Listening closely, I realized it was a story.

[The story, 'Returnee War', begins its storytelling.]

A trembling, sorrowful story. The moment I realized the story's true identity, goosebumps ran down my spine.

At that moment, I realized where I was. This was the final stage of the second round. The final battlefield of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

「Breaking the Sky Sword Saint of the second round will die here, under the combined attack of the Heavenly Demon and the Blood Demon.」

['Staging' begins!]

946 Episode 55 Giant Tree (12)

Amidst the undulating scenery, 「Staging」 was activated. The implications were clear.

「Apollon and the Constellations have obtained the tale of the second round's 'Returnee War'.」

['Staging' is truly activating.]

[It seems that the 'Demon of the Horizon' gave the real thing.]

The Demon of the Horizon.

They had succeeded in obtaining the tale of another worldline through a deal with a sponsor.

[Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.]

But I wasn't panicked.

[This 'Staging' isn't perfect.]

'Staging' doesn't normally activate with tales alone.

The key conditions for a proper 'Staging' are the 'main characters' and 'tales' that will recreate the relevant history. The likelihood of the story being staged is further enhanced when historical locations or 'mediation' are included. But the Constellations had activated 'Staging' with just a single story. That meant they had forcibly recreated the stage, leveraging the probability of the Giant Nebula.

[A stage activated in that manner cannot function properly. I will help. If we fight together—]

Tsutsutsu, sparks flew through the air at that moment. The surrounding scenery grew even darker. The approaching Constellations—especially Apollo—saw the powerful narrating power pulsating through their entire bodies.

['Staging' intensifies!]

That couldn't be.

Even with a Giant Nebula, there was no way they could recreate such a forced stage.

As if reading my thoughts, Apollo spoke.

[Did you think it was an 'incomplete stage'?]

Two heads dangling from the creature's waistband were visible. One was unfamiliar, but the other belonged to someone I knew well.

「Blood Demon, Yeom Baekho.」

The head of the Blood Demon, who had driven Breaking the Sky Sword Saint to her death in the second round's battle, hung on Apollo's waist, staring at me. Goosebumps slowly crept up my spine as I watched the bloody tears streaming from its eyes.

「Only then did Kim Dokja understand the design of this stage.」

To recreate this stage, the Constellations had traveled to other 'Murim' regions, harvesting the heads of the Blood Demon and Heavenly Demon.

Furthermore, perhaps using a special method, the Blood Demon survived, writhing with only his head remaining.

[It's time to complete the stage, you poor mortal.]

Apollo rammed the Blood Demon's head into the center of the artificial sun floating behind him.

Aaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaa—!

The Blood Demon's head opened its eyes and let out a terrifying scream. A torrent of stories flowed ceaselessly from its gaping mouth.

[The story, 'Master of the Blood Cult', begins its storytelling!]

Transplanting a living Blood Demon into an artificial sun to recreate it as a 'character' required for this stage.

「This was Apollo and the Constellations' plan.」

Even Vidar had inserted the head of the Heavenly Demon into the maw of his sacred relic, the 'Wolf Skin'.

Incidentally, Vidar's wolf skin possessed the power to borrow the stories of the 'incarnations' it devoured.

[The effect of the item, 'Wolf Skin of the End', is activated!]

[The reproducibility of 'Staging' is enhanced!]

I never would have thought those lazy Constellations would prepare so thoroughly just to take down a single Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

[Strike.]

At Apollo's command, the Constellations charged towards Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

[The story, 'Returnee War', continues its storytelling.]

The flurries of spears and swords flying from all directions were ominous. Like martial artists using formations, the Constellations, gathered together, were blocking the sword of the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

[You otherworldly monster! You're finally weakened!]

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's body was covered in wounds. Her arms, legs, back. As the sudden explosion of stories drifted through the air, Apollo's artificial sun shone brightly.

[Get out of the way.]

The Blood Demon embedded in the artificial sun opened its mouth, and a flash of light erupted, striking Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's left arm.

「Anti-flame flash.」

Apollo's stigma, unquenchable until its target was reduced to ashes.

As the blazing flames spread, burning her left arm to a pitch-black ember, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint cut it off without a moment's hesitation. Her left arm fell to the ground, crumbling like rotten wood. The Constellations, seizing the moment, thrust their swords once more.

[Now! Kill!]

Watching Apollo's artificial sun reload its flash once more, I stood beside Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

[I will help.]

The enemy numbered in the hundreds of Constellations. Even if I joined the battle now, it might not have much of an impact on the battlefield. However.

[I will try to prevent this 'Staging'.]

In the '40th round', I fought the Blood Demon as 'Cheon Inho', and I even inflicted a spirit of magic possession on the Blood Demon with [Incite].

As I vividly recalled that memory, I felt the slumbering story within me awaken.

[The effect of the trait, 'Record Repairer', activates!]

「"There's no place for you in the <Star Stream>. You're nothing more than a speck of dust, not even a supporting role. Accept that fact, and you'll feel better. Go back to where you used to live. And never show your face again."」

[The story, 'Gaslighting Expert', temporarily awakens!]

One of my traits manifested, and the story of the 40th round began to inhabit my entire being.

Of course, this history wasn't related to the 'Blood Demon' of the 41st round.

Nevertheless, some history can transcend worldlines and manifest its influence.

Indeed, the Blood Demon's reaction to my story was peculiar.

"What, whatwhatwhatwhatwhatwhatwhat—"

[The 'Staging' begins to shake!]

The Blood Demon's expression, pierced by the artificial sun, distorted like a vicious slaughter, and he began to tremble.

Halla tilted her head at the Blood Demon's strange reaction and asked.

[What is it? Apollo. What's going on?]

Apollo was equally strange. His face paled, as if he'd eaten something rotten, and he glared at me.

[That guy unleashed a strange story on the stage.]

He seemed to have realized I was the culprit disrupting the 'Staging'.

[Kick out the uninvited guests.]

I said, swatting away the weapons rushing toward me.

[The uninvited guests are not me, but you.]

I leaped onto the stage of the 'Returnee War.

[The Constellation, 'First Heavenly Demon', watches your exploits!]

[The Constellation, 'Maritime War God', awaits your transformation!]

The Constellations charging toward Breaking the Sky Sword Saint turned to me. I sneered faintly at the sight of the Five Hundred Generals, each wearing the rags of dead martial artists, trying to enhance the stage performance even a little.

[What do you hope to become by taking over the stage of the incarnations like this?]

[Shut up!]

A blind arrow grazed my side. All the Constellations gathered here were at least Narrative-grade. It was clearly a critical situation. The power of the stage incarnation was powerful, and the number of enemies was simply too great.

「I smiled at them.」

The 'Kim Dokja' within me was awakening.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', rejoices in you.]

The history of resisting Fate and fighting against the Constellations commanded me on my behalf.

「Use the power of the King of Fear.」

The moment the fearful story, imperfectly floating within me, was about to reveal its true form once again.

[Not yet.]

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's large hand gripped my shoulder. The shadow of a giant loomed overhead. She, who had activated [Immortal Immortality] and [Protective Strength] to withstand the Constellations' attacks, stood in my way.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', glares at 'Breaking the Sky Sword Saint Namgung Minyoung'.]

The sparks that flew wildly burned Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's right hand, turning it pitch-black.

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint silently endured the pain and spoke.

[This is not a space granted to you.]

Vines sprouted from the ground, entangling my limbs. Before I could even call Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's name, the Constellations stirred. It was a breathtaking sight, as if all the Constellations in the world were pouring down on her. Breaking the Sky Sword Saint silently readjusted her grip on her sword.

「Breaking the Sky Yuseonggyeol.」

The secret energy of [Breaking the Sky Sword Saint] erupted once more.

Kwakwakwakwakwakwakwa.

Stories blossomed from her entire body.

A boundlessly magnificent and beautiful story blossom.

The sword's shattering shattered into thousands of fragments, piercing through the Constellations. The 'Returnee War' wasn't necessarily a battlefield unfavorable to Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

「This is the power of a mortal who has reached the pinnacle of transcendence.」

During the Noble War, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint single-handedly annihilated 90% of the Blood Cult and Demonic Cult and successfully repelled most of the disasters.

「Amidst the cries of disaster filled with vengeful spirits, the indifferent Breaking the Sky Sword dominated the battlefield.」

The Constellations that supported the Blood Demon and Heavenly Demon suffered significant losses due to Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's actions. Later, the 'Returnee War' became an opportunity for the constellations to become wary of the existence of the 'Transcendental Alliance'.

[Kuaaaaaaah! Why! The 'Stage Effect' was clearly activated, but why—]

The narrative unfolded on the stage. The more Breaking the Sky Sword Saint exerted her power, the more the Constellations were helplessly swept away. Perhaps Yoo Joonghyuk had seen Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's back countless times.

「There was a master of the Regressor, feared even by the Constellations.」

It’s truly a martial arts that had reached the realm of god. Perhaps a single individual's power could shatter the 'Stage'—a fleeting hope.

If it weren't for a single sword that had pierced, waiting for an opening, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint would surely have succeeded in destroying the Constellations’ stage.

「And then a single sword pierced the god's waist.」

Halla's mantra was heard.

[You are truly an incredible incarnation.]

With a thud, a pitch-black blade pierced breaking the Sky Sword Saint's abdomen.

I knew that sword.

「Heavenly Demon Divine Sword.」

The divine relic of the Demon Sect that had fatally wounded Breaking the Sky Sword Saint in the second round.

[The influence of 'Staging' is strengthened!]

Halla, holding the Heavenly Demon Divine Sword, spoke with admiration.

[I acknowledge you, great mortal.]

As Halla's story began to infuse her swordplay, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's body began to freeze. Constellations' attacks rained down on her frozen body.

「Thus, the end of the 'Returnee War' was drawing near.」

Seeing Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's body crumbling, I cried out in a fit of rage.

[Breaking the Sky Sword Saint! Release me!]

But the vines, as if responding to my command, tightened their grip on me.

At that moment, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's body unleashed another explosive blast. Halla's incarnation body was flung away with a roar of shock, and Breaking the Sky Sword Saint called out to me.

[Sad Recorder of the Stars.]

I gazed into her eyes.

A gleam of light.

Her eyes, facing my ■■, burned like bright stars.

No, perhaps it was her.

Perhaps it was the starlight in the sky she had gazed upon all her life. To shatter the sky contained in those eyes, she had swung her sword for all those ages.

[Do you still think you can fight the world?]

Her [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship] moved. With each trajectory, the starlight in the sky flickered. The sky was so lush with stars that a single sword could cut through it.

[You can fight, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. Unleash this now. It's not too late. You can change history.]

I felt the passage of time slowly slowing. It was proof that this 'stage' was drawing near its conclusion.

Nevertheless, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's expression remained composed. As if sitting on the veranda sipping a cup of tea, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint spoke to me in a calm and serene voice.

[It was the first time my disciple brought a friend to Murim.]

Memories flowed through her clear vision.

「"Breaking the Sky Sword Saint."」

When I first visited Murim with Yoo Joonghyuk, now a child, to enter Fear Realm—I told her that.

「"Isn't there really a single tree left in this Murim that you seek to protect?"」

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint continued, as if answering that age-old question.

[My disciple is a mistrustful person. His distrust was so great that he would often vomit even food prepared by his master.]

Explosive stories began to rise from her body. The story blossoms took the form of pitch-black trees, instantly covering the ground, soon blocking out even the starlight and forming a forest.

[When we first met, you asked me how many trees it takes to make a forest.]

In the pitch-black forest, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's eyes shone with a dazzling starlight.

[I've protected this Murim for a long time, but I still don't know the answer.]

Only when I met her eyes did I fully realize what Breaking the Sky Sword Saint had been protecting all this time.

「She wasn't protecting 'Murim'.」

Since Yoo Joonghyuk's return began, what she had protected was simply a landscape for one person.

A place where the returning man, exhausted from his long journey, would temporarily block the starlight for him when he turned around.

The Constellations roared, trying to destroy the forest. The forest leaves rustled violently, erupting in a deafening roar.

[However, no matter how many trees there were—]

As night faded and dawn broke, starlight began to slowly filter through the forest she had created. In that poignant yet beautiful landscape, I finally understood Yoo Joonghyuk.

[I wish the place where my disciple stood could be called a forest.]

The reason he never gave up on the scenarios, despite being betrayed, hurt, and despairing so much.

「Yoo Joonghyuk has long resembled his teacher.」

Even if only one tree remained in the forest, he would not give up on it.

[So, please take good care of the forest, young Recorder.]

A giant tree was falling before my eyes.

947 Episode 55 Giant Tree (13)

---

I tore at Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's vines with all my might. My right arm, barely extended, touched her back.

[Breaking the Sky Sword Saint! Stop!]

I couldn't understand. The Breaking the Sky Sword Saint I knew would never do something like this. She was the teacher of the Regressor. She was a fierce competitor who never gave up on a fight if there was even the slightest chance of victory.

「"This is the first time my disciple has brought a friend to Murim."」

My heart pounded with unease. Starlight bloomed throughout the crumbling forest.

[Pass on the 'story' to my disciple.]

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's hand shoved me. With just a light shove, I plummeted, as if being sucked into the ground. A suction force, unavoidable even with [Way of the Wind], was pulling me downward.

[Breaking the Sky Sword Saint!]

At the last moment, I unleashed my power as the Recorder. The sentences I held tangled at my fingertips.

[Exclusive skill, '□□', activates!]

It was an uncertain gamble. Nevertheless, if this story was the 'Returnee War, there was one 'record' I could gamble on.

In an instant, the [Fate] I had written was sucked toward Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, and in an instant, the starry landscape faded away.

In the encroaching darkness, the story of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint faded. A painful sensation surged through me, twitching at the base of my heart.

「Why me again?」

My breathing became labored, and I found it difficult to breathe.

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', repeats its painful story.]

A destructive impulse consumed my mind, and my thoughts drifted away and then closer. In my endless descent, all kinds of stories flowed into my ears. They were all stories of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

「"She's a woman of filthy blood. Don't associate with her."」

The childhood of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, born of mixed blood with the Giants.

「"You cannot inherit Namgung's martial arts."」

The sorrow of being abandoned by the Namgung family.

「"I worked harder than you. I trained harder than you!"」

The cries of fellow martial artists frustrated by Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's talent.

「"If you were born half-human, half-god, you might be able to challenge the throne of the heavens."」

The voice of Yoo Hoseong, the master she met in the 'Time Fault'.

「"Interesting. Do you wish to ascend to the throne of the stars in a mortal body?"」

The despair she felt for the first time upon facing a Mythical Constellation. And—

「"Teach me the sword."」

Her disciple.

[You have approached the source of the 'Impossible Justice'.]

When I opened my eyes in the darkness with that message, my feet were on soft dirt. I took a deep breath and blinked, slowly adapting to the dark. The scent of water reached my nose. I knew it without anyone having to tell me.

「This is a 'forest'.」

It was puzzling. Why was there such a 'forest' inside the World Tree?

I slowly looked around and saw creatures raising their heads from the deep jungle. No, strictly speaking, they weren't 'living things'.

Beings that were a mixture of different stories.

I knew the names they called them.

[Nameless Things.]

One by one, they gathered, surrounding me.

Some even extended their long antennae, as if searching for prey, carefully scanning my stories.

【What】

And then one of them spoke.

【Whatwhatwhatwh

【Let'seatlet'seatlet'seatlet'seatlet'seatlet'seatlet'seatlet'seatlet'seat】

I wonder if I smell delicious. Whether it's an Outer God or a Constellation, when they see me, they'll put their snout first.

When the 'Nameless Things' opened their mouths all at once, their sharp fangs shone white in the dark.

I don't know why there are these things inside Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. I didn't mean to hurt them, but if they showed their hostility first, there was no way for me.

I warned the guys lightly.

[Go back, otherwise—]

In an instant, the swarm of 'Nameless Things' shuddered violently and opened a path. At first, I thought they were reacting to my words, but upon closer inspection, I saw something approaching from afar.

The sound of waves echoed from somewhere. Salty air brushed my nose, and goosebumps slowly rose from my toes.

[You.]

An Outer God with a long, streamlined body. A fin resembling a shark's.

The 'Fear' I knew so well was there.

[You're alive!]

With the crash of waves, the creature thrust its massive fin toward me.

【TeethTeethTeethT

One of the few Outer Gods I tamed in the 'Fear Realm'.

I thought it died when the 'Fear Realm' was destroyed, but surprisingly, it was still alive.

Judging by its fluttering movements, it seemed to be still healthy, but a closer look revealed a few missing teeth. As I gazed at the gaps in its teeth, a thought suddenly occurred to me.

「The corporations were collecting the 'Fears' that survived the 'Fear Realm'.」

What if the 'Fears' captured by the corporations were trapped underground in <Tamra Heavy Industries> along with Breaking the Sky Sword Saint? And what if the 'World Tree' blossomed and brought all those Fears into this forest?

【Whoohoohoohoohoohoo—】

A long howl echoed from somewhere, and the entire forest shook violently. A headless dragon roared through the sky, and the gigantic Fears scattered throughout the area rose one by one.

「"All those dreams cannot become a single Oldest Dream. Therefore, there must be a place where abandoned dreams gather."」

A record echoed in my head. It was a phrase I knew very well. I had read it myself in the 'Fear Realm'.

「Apocalyptic Fear, a Prophecy of the End.」

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint told me,

Please take care of the 'forest'.

「"Beyond time and space, there will be a very big house that is not bound by the laws of the Dokkaebis."」

A very big house.

【Teethteethteethteethteethteethteeth!]】

With the roar of 'Tooth Fin', powerful Fears began to gather.

「The 'Fear Realm' wasn't destroyed.」

The Outer Gods, whose mere presence threatened me, were approaching, their bodies large and small, tossing and turning.

「Breaking the Sky Sword Saint had preserved the 'Fear Realm' within her forest.」

[The 'Fourth Wall' responds!]

At the same time, something stirred within me. With the help of the 'Demon King of Salvation', the Fears dormant within the [Fourth Wall] were awakening.

【Ooooooooooooooo—】

The Fears, raising their heads to the void, let out a mournful cry. As if remembering that cry, a mixture of joy and sorrow, the record continued.

「"There, all dreams are free as Fear. In the incomprehensible snowfield of dreams, the King of Fear will smile, neither light nor darkness."」

I had always thought the prophecy of the end was over. But perhaps I was mistaken. The story of the Fear Realm was not over, and the Fears that needed to be recorded still swarmed upon this margin.

[The old Fears sense your presence.]

Only then did I realize why Breaking the Sky Sword Saint had prevented me from using my power.

[The Fears of 'Murim' listen to your story.]

I felt the gazes of Fears glaring at me from the pitch-black darkness. Not all of them were kind to me. I sensed hostility from some, anger from others.

I took a deep breath and looked up at the Fears staring down at me. The 'Tooth Fin' guarding me growled, while the Fears of the abyss dripped black saliva at me. I grinned at them.

[Yes, you're all very hungry.]

With a roar, the Fears charged.

[The story, 'King of Fear', begins its storytelling.]

I realized that this was the final test of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. If I survived this...

「"When that day comes, the boundary of Fear will open, and the King of Fear will descend."」

In this <Star Stream>, the 'Fear Realm' will open once again, and the end that the Constellations feared will begin.

---

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint briefly gazed into the darkness of the forest where Kim Dokja had fallen, then closed the passage. As soon as the flow of time returned to normal, the Constellations' weapons and energies were pierced into her arms and legs.

The Constellations cheered as they watched her stagger.

[Enough! She's almost down!]

Even as the excruciating pain surged through her, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint thought of the Recorder, who had reached out to her in her final moments.

[Someone is sharing your 'story'.]

[The Recorder of Fear, 'Unchanging One', assists with the recording.]

Record. Perhaps this was the last gift the young Recorder left her. The child, too, had sensed it. That her story in this worldline ended here.

With a thud, the Heavenly Demon Sword pierced her chest.

[Still holding on? You possess remarkable vitality.]

As if to counter the murmurs of the Constellations, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint swung her sword once more.

[The story, 'Returnee War', is nearing its end.]

Raising her head, she saw a familiar sight. The corpses of martial artists strewn everywhere. Constellations bearing the stories of the Heavenly Demon and the Blood Demon were approaching her.

As if observing her end, the Constellations that adorned the sky radiated pure white light and gazed upon her.

[Constellations, though my story ends here.]

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint smiled impassively at the Constellations.

[One day, my disciple will come to you.]

She couldn't understand why she would say such a thing. She had no right to say such things.

Strictly speaking, she was Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's 'thought', and therefore, she wasn't even Breaking the Sky Sword Saint. More than anything, she hoped her disciple wouldn't fight for her. She hoped he wouldn't challenge those cruel Constellations.

She wanted him to end his long tragedy and simply find happiness.

[Disciple?]

The Constellations burst into laughter. It was Hanra who stepped forward, stopping them.

[I will remember you. Close your eyes, great mortal.]

With Hanra's mantra, the Heavenly Demon Sword pierced the air and flew.

The Breaking the Sky Divine Sword broke, and time slowed once again.

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint realized this was the end.

「There was a scene she wanted to see one last time.」

In her final moments, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint recalled a memory from the moment she first mastered [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship].

「"Master, can a human really cut 'heavens'?"」

To her question, the invincible Yoo Hoseong answered.

「"Even if we can’t do it, the next generation, or the generation after that, will be able to."」

In his characteristically slow voice, Yoo Hoseong looked up at the sky and spoke.

「"If no one gives up, the day will surely come when we accumulate mortality and reach eternity."」

Even if we swing our swords with all our might, even if we pour our lives into every single day, the Constellations remain as distant as eternity.

[The story, 'Returnee War', continues its storytelling.]

Remembering her teacher's empty voice, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint gripped her sword.

「"Then I won't be able to see that scenery."」

As if squeezing out her last words, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint swung her sword once more. The halved sword emitted a final, bright light.

「"I want to see that scenery with my own eyes."」

But her exhausted story was unable to block the Heavenly Demon Sword's sword strike and was scattered. Halla's sword strike flew towards Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's heart.

[The 'Fate' someone had bestowed upon you is coming true!]

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint accepted her fate. Never once in her life had she taken her eyes off the sky, so she kept them closed until the very end.

「Breaking the Sky Sword Saint didn't miss that scenery this time either.」

A strange sound was heard from across the sky.

A sound as if the boundary of the universe was shattering. In a moment when the noisy Constellations fell silent, a single trajectory appeared in the vast sky.

「It was just a single sword strike.」

A trajectory shattered time and space, tearing through the sky. As countless Constellations burst apart, unable to even scream, Apollo let out a terrified cry.

[What, what on earth is happening—?]

No Constellation could answer that question. However, for the first time, the Constellations looked up to a sky higher than their own.

「The sword of destruction she had long dreamed of was there.」

Once again, the trajectory tore through the sky.

Amidst the falling Constellations stood a man. A being who had alone carried on the long-held desires of mortals for generations.

「Finally, a man who had become a giant tree that could even despise the heavens was there.」

A being who had learned her martial arts, her faith, her fighting spirit, and reached the other side of transcendence. The martial artists who had long admired her called her by this name, expressing their respect for her.

"Get away from my master."

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's disciple, the Supreme King Yoo Joonghyuk.

948 Episode 55 Giant Tree (14)

A phrase suddenly flashed through his mind.

「...Breaking the Sky Sword Saint...」

When he first heard that story, Yoo Joonghyuk thought he had finally gone mad after years of training.

To him now, it wasn't particularly unusual.

He had already experienced 41 regressions, repeatedly losing his memory as he repeated his life. He had been captured and tortured by Constellations, and even entered the belly of a deity from another world.

And that wasn't all. He was now being tortured by a stabbing monster from another world, so it wouldn't be surprising if he suddenly lost his mind and became delusional.

"Concentrate. Your mind is wandering."

Yoo Joonghyuk steeled himself once more. Just as he had said, a new realm was now before him. The realm he had longed for, the realm where he could mercilessly tear apart those Constellations.

「...It's dangerous... but...」

「If only I could see it one last time.」

But with each successive sentence, his concentration continued to drift.

"Thoughts keep coming to me."

Jaehwan frowned, dumbfounded by Yoo Joonghyuk's words.

"Thoughts? Are you trying to joke?"

"I'm not kidding."

It had been hundreds of years of training. Training utilizing the time density of a highly compressed Time Fault. The end of that training was just around the corner. And yet, amidst all this, you're talking about distracting thoughts?

"You pathetic bastard."

Jaehwan, staring blankly into the empty air, suddenly reached out and grabbed the sentence floating through space and time.

「...If I miss this opportunity...」

Stories writhed painfully in Jaehwan's strong grip.

"This guy is the culprit. I'll get rid of it."

Faced by Jaehwan's impatience, Yoo Joonghyuk hurriedly stepped in to stop him.

"Wait. Such a story can't suddenly appear. We need to find out where it came from."

Jaehwan's lips twitched in annoyance, but his eyes quickly glowed golden. His [Suspicion] was discerning the origin of the story.

"It came through an item you possessed."

"Item?"

"Midday Tryst. Is there such an item?"

Startled, Yoo Joonghyuk immediately checked the item. Then, the item activation message actually appeared before his eyes.

['Midday Tryst' is currently active.]

He wondered where the story had come from, but it seemed to have seeped into this channel.

"Is that him?"

Frowning, Yoo Joonghyuk considered it for a moment before calling out to someone.

"■■■."

The message was immediately filtered.

Yoo Joonghyuk tried to correct the name.

"Kim Dokja."

The story, as if responding to the name, grew even stronger.

「…Breaking the Sky Sword Saint looked up at the sky one last time.」

Yoo Joonghyuk's eyebrows twitched. It was a story about his master, a story he knew well.

A story he'd wanted to change countless times—but never could.

A story that taught him despair and vengeance, a story that shaped him into who he was.

The fact that he was hearing this sentence now, of all times…

"Someone seems to be looking for you."

Yoo Joonghyuk's mind was deeply disturbed. He was on the verge of the final stage of his training, and he couldn't just leave.

Nevertheless, the words written in the story were earnest.

Jaehwan looked down at Yoo Joonghyuk for a moment, then turned to the direction the story had come from. The power of [Suspension] radiating from his eyes was staring down the path it had flowed from.

"I can send you away for a moment with my power."

Yoo Joonghyuk, who had been silent, raised his head. Perhaps reading the emotion in his eyes, Jaehwan spoke again.

"But if you leave now, you'll never reach beyond the meadow. But if you dare, I'll let you go."

Beyond the meadow, Yoo Joonghyuk now knew for sure that such a realm existed. The man before him was precisely that realm.

Beyond the limits, a monster capable of confronting even those fearsome Mythical Constellations, Jaehwan was such a being.

"I."

Yoo Joonghyuk knew this was a fate that would never happen again. If he left here, his contract with Jaehwan would end.

Nevertheless, Yoo Joonghyuk thought. If this story meant the situation he was thinking of —

"It seems you're already made up your mind."

Yoo Joonghyuk nodded.

Looking at Yoo Joonghyuk, Jaehwan muttered softly, perhaps thinking about something.

"Sometimes, it's important not to forget your purpose of becoming stronger."

As Jaehwan spoke, his pupils clouded for a moment. Perhaps he was reminiscing about something old.

Yoo Joonghyuk didn't know what Jaehwan had lost to become this strong. However, the strength of a being is largely determined by the magnitude of the loss it has endured. Considering the fact that it was proportional, he cautiously guessed that Jaehwan must also be harboring an immense amount of sadness.

Jaehwan asked again.

"Are you going now?"

"Can you send me off?"

Jaehwan nodded.

"But there's a condition."

"Condition?"

"You won't use the 'spear' in this fight. "Because you're not ready to use it yet."

Yoo Joonghyuk pondered for a moment, then nodded.

"And what else?"

"I can't send your incarnation body there myself."

"What do you mean?"

"If I use my power to throw you there, your body won't be able to withstand the impact."

"Then how are you going to send me there?"

Jaehwan's lips twisted into an inexplicable smile.

"It's not necessary for the 'incarnation body' to go there yourself."

Yoo Joonghyuk suddenly stood up, overcome by a sudden sense of foreboding.

"Wait, you—"

"Go."

Jaehwan's palm touched Yoo Joonghyuk's back. And in the next moment, Yoo Joonghyuk felt as if his soul was being shaken.

"Go, prove to this world that you've endured here."

Yoo Joonghyuk's soul, ejected from his body, traversed the <Star Stream> like a meteor. Across the vast starlight, Yoo Joonghyuk headed to the world of the scenarios.

Under normal circumstances, entering the scenarios with a pure soul would have been impossible.

But this time, the circumstances were special.

「This place is a kind of Fear.」

[Natural Disaster-level Fear, 'Impossible Justice' reacts to 'Yoo Joonghyuk's' justice.]

Under the protection of [Fate] written by someone, the power of 'Fear', which grants strength to the strong justice, manifested.

「That justice was born solely to avenge his master.」

With a dazzling beam of light, Yoo Joonghyuk felt skin forming over his soul. His incarnation body, overlaid with someone's memories, was regenerating on the battlefield of the past.

「Yoo Joonghyuk knew this battlefield.」

The battlefield that had taken his master. A Returnee War caused by the calamities that had returned to the 'First Murim' out of hatred for the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

「Back then, Yoo Joonghyuk was weak. That's why he couldn't protect his master.」

[What the hell is that guy!]

The Constellations in the sky roared at Yoo Joonghyuk's appearance.

A probability aftershock raged.

His coat fluttered among the falling Constellations.

[Kwaaaaak!]

Yoo Joonghyuk descended to the center of the battlefield, his sword piercing with a rippling, pulsating energy.

A temporary body gained through the effects of 'Fear'.

The air of the scenarios filled his lungs for the first time in a while.

Yoo Joonghyuk quickly absorbed the information from the battlefield.

「Stage.」

「The fallen Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.」

「Constellations.」

[Sage's Eye emitted a dazzling light and began to read the situation.]

[What! What are you doing!]

[Where do you dare say we are! An incarnation in this sacred battlefield...]

The sword moved, and the heads of the Constellations fell like toys.

Yoo Joonghyuk's sword was neither the 'Jincheon Sword' nor the 'Heukcheon Demon Sword'. It was simply a broken sword floating in the skies of the battlefield.

That single broken sword. Holding it, Yoo Joonghyuk ran relentlessly across the battlefield.

「It was a familiar scenario to him.」

Yoo Joonghyuk, covered in pitch-black yet divine energy, seemed to descend upon a mountain of scholarly writings. Dozens of Constellations were slaughtered in an instant, and eventually, the higher-ranking Constellations stepped forward.

[Is that guy the so-called 'disciple'?]

Vidar uttered an unpleasant mantra and released his energy. His wolf skin emitted a mysterious light and began to pour out stories.

[The story, 'Conqueror of the Sect', begins its storytelling!]

[The story, 'Conqueror of the Hundred Thousand Great Mountains', begins its storytelling.]

The story of the Heavenly Demon, the leader of the Demon Sect.

The essence of that story was being recreated through Vidar's incarnation body.

「The Master of the Hundred Thousand Great Mountains endured a thousand years solely for revenge.」

The story of the Heavenly Demon, who returned as a disaster, single-mindedly seeking revenge against Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

Yoo Joonghyuk immediately recognized the story.

"The power of the Heavenly Demon. Were you using this as a stage transformation?"

The Heavenly Demon was the key protagonist of the 'Returnee War'.

As the story of the Heavenly Demon blossomed in earnest, wounds large and small began to appear on Yoo Joonghyuk's new body.

[The Constellation, 'Maritime War God', observes the situation with a complicated gaze.]

Vidar, smiling with satisfaction, poured his power into the Heavenly Demon's fist.

[There's a certain pleasure in the struggle between mortals.]

As if this were the end, Vidar's fist struck Yoo Joonghyuk.

[The story, 'Returnee War', continues its storytelling.]

As if he had hit a solid wall, Yoo Joonghyuk's left hand caught his fist.

[What—]

A look of bewilderment crossed Vidar's expression. It was a blow that no ordinary incarnation could have withstood. Even without the effects of 'stage transformation', he was already a Constellation approaching mythical status. How could a mere incarnation have withstood his blow—

"I."

Starlight blazed in the eyes of the disciple, who resembled his master.

"How many times do you think I've killed the Heavenly Demon?"

Vidar's eyes widened, realizing belatedly that something was wrong.

「For Yoo Joonghyuk, the 'Returnee War' wasn't a 'one-time event'.」

[The story, 'Returnee War' reacts to the memories of incarnation 'Yoo Joonghyuk'.]

The sword light surged before his eyes.

This instant, Vidar couldn't come to his senses.

[Kwaaaaaaaah!]

With a helpless scream, Vidar's entire body was reduced to tatters.

「It was a mistake for Vidar to borrow the story of the Heavenly Demon.」

Yoo Joonghyuk had already prevented the 'Returnee War' and killed the Heavenly Demon several times. That age-old story was already influencing the 'stage'.

[The very foundation of the 'stage' is beginning to shake!]

Vidar, who had just finished drawing a handful of story, hurriedly prepared to deviate from the scenario. But Yoo Joonghyuk's sword was a little faster. The moment the halved blade finally sliced through Vidar's neck,

[This is not your stage.]

With a harsh crack, Halla's Heavenly Demon Sword struck Yoo Joonghyuk's sword.

Halla's eyes were deep.

She stared at Yoo Joonghyuk with a stern gaze and added,

[You, a young mortal, have achieved something remarkable. I sense the dignity of a nobleman in you. I have no desire to harm your descendants—]

Halla, who had been speaking up to that point, fell silent. More precisely, she could no longer continue.

"Is there anything left to say?"

Yoo Joonghyuk's sword, moving in a strange trajectory, sliced through Halla's lower body. Apollo stepped in to take Halla's place, who was paralyzed by shock.

[Kill him first!]

With Apollo's shout, the Five Hundred Generals charged at Yoo Joonghyuk simultaneously. Yoo Joonghyuk dodged their fire and stood beside Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

"Master."

The Master he had finally encountered after a long time was not the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint he remembered. Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, already half-transparent, opened her lips as if trying to convey something to him. It seemed like a call to run, and another to survive.

Yoo Joonghyuk lifted Breaking the Sky Sword Saint onto his back and laid her down under a nearby tree.

It was a shade where starlight couldn't reach.

"Stay here."

The shadows of the leaves swayed darkly over Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's face. Yoo Joonghyuk looked down at his master for a moment, then gazed into the vast sky.

The Constellations, blazing with radiance, raced toward him. The sky overflowed with Constellations possessing immense power, unmatched by anyone in the Star Stream.

Nevertheless, Yoo Joonghyuk remained calm. It wasn't simply because he had grown stronger through his training.

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, watching her disciple's back, moved her lips with difficulty.

[Joonghyuk-ah.]

It was the disciple's back she had seen countless times. The Regressor, running forward with his eyes fixed on the ground. The disciple turned around.

Only at that moment did Breaking the Sky Sword Saint realize something.

「Perhaps the last sight she longed to see wasn't the trajectory of [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship].」

The disciple's eyes were filled with starlight. A star, invisible to her vision, flickered within his.

「Even if this forest were made of a single tree.」

Breaking the Sky Sword Saint gazed at the sky, as if gazing into her disciple's eyes. Then, her disciple looked up at the same sky.

[What a distant star.]

Perhaps it was because the starlight was so thick, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's eyes couldn't see the star her disciple was looking at.

In the fading light, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint asked,

[Can you do it?]

Yoo Joonghyuk swung his sword in silence. Cracks spread across the sky, and stars began to fall.

Looking at the shattered night sky, Breaking the Sky Sword Saint pictured a tree stretching its branches toward the stars.

A tree that bears no fruit or leaves. A tree that grows solely to destroy this world.

[The story, 'Returnee War', concludes its storytelling.]

In the shade cast by the tree, the God of Murim finally fell into a deep sleep.

---

A series of violent tremors echoed around the World Tree.

The Constellation of Tamra—the 'Ruler of the South Sea Dragon Palace'—who had been observing the World Tree's movements from the skies of the 'New Murim' spoke in an anxious voice.

[What's the situation internally?]

One of the Five Hundred Generals prostrated himself in shame and said,

[Contact with General Halla has been lost.]

[What about Apollo? What happened to Vidar?]

[We can't contact them either.]

That couldn't be possible. As far as he knew, Halla, Apollo, and Vidar had acquired fragments of the 'Oldest Dream' and were near-Mythical Constellations.

But what could be happening inside that could cause all three to lose contact simultaneously? There were only two possibilities to consider.

One, that the 'World Tree' was a 'Fear' far more powerful than they had imagined.

Second, that within that 'World Tree' lay a being more powerful than even the Constellations approaching Mthical level.

In either case, it was not a pleasant situation for them.

The Ruler of the South Sea Dragon Palace, relying solely on Halla's words, had brought Tamra's main force here without the consent of the Mythical Constellation 'Seolmundae Halmang'.

If the Mythical Constellations were to catch wind of this—

[Dragon King, we've received a call from Olympus.]

[Tell them I'm busy. I don't have time to receive such a call right now—]

A dizzying thunder rumbled from afar.

The Five Hundred Generals, their faces paling, added,

[The 'Thunderbolt' has contacted us directly.]

Zeus's name sent a violent shiver through the Dragon King's eyes.

[Buy time, somehow. They mustn't find out.]

[Dragon King. Even <Asgard>…]

[<Hogeun> has contacted us!]

It was the worst possible situation.

<Tamra> had already deployed the 'Five Hundred Generals', including Halla, risking a critical power vacuum in a higher-level scenario. If any sabotage from other Myth-level Constellations were to occur, <Tamra> would face annihilation.

[It's futile. The 'Myth's' seat is right before our eyes—]

Looking around, the other Myth-level Constellations seemed to be thinking similarly.

[We must halt this plan, South Sea Dragon King.]

[Not only the Lightning Constellation, but the other Myth-level Constellations must have realized the situation. Right now, we can cut off Apollo line's tail.]

[If by any chance the Myth-level beings discover this plan… ]

The 'World Tree Cultivation Plan' of the 'New Murim District' was a scenario carried out without the consent of the Myth-level Constellations.

If the Myth-level Constellations were held accountable for this incident, not only Tamra, but all the Myth-level Constellations involved in this story would bear the responsibility.

The Constellations that entered the World Tree had lost contact, the World Tree was out of control, and the arrival of a Myth-level Constellation was uncertain.

[All Constellations of the 'New Murim District', including the Five Hundred Generals, listen up.]

After a brief moment of deliberation, the South Sea Dragon King finally made a decision.

[I will seal the 'World Tree' from now on.]

949 Episode 56 Myth (1)

---

「I believe that day, <Murim> was reborn.」

—The last survivor of the Namgung family, Namgung Myung

---

When Apollo opened his eyes, the first thing he saw was the vast sky.

A vast universe with no end in sight. An eternal void where any story could be written, yet where even a story written could never be complete.

The Constellation, staring into that terrible void, howled in Fear and began to fill its surroundings with its own stories.

「The great throne of lightning has discovered the floating island of emptiness.」

Later, he heard that he was born on a forgotten island floating on a 'Time Fault'.

「The god, with his own lightning strike, erected four pillars to secure the island.」

A radiant lightning strike lifted the island, hidden within the Time Fault, above the surface of the scenario. Because of this history, the island was named 'Delos'.

「A woman who could not give birth anywhere on earth finally gave birth to a Constellation on an island...」

There, the woman gave birth to the child of the 'Thunderbolt'. A brilliant ray of light filled the entire Time Fault. His name was chosen based on that ray.

「That Constellation is called 'Apollo'.」

A Constellation born on the Isle of the Void.

The legend of his birth protected him in the lonely world of scenarios.

The son of a Mythical Constellation. Chosen as a Constellation from birth—a being destined to become one of the Twelve Gods of the lofty <Olympus> from the moment of his birth.

He was none other than Apollo, the 'Almighty Sun'.

[The story, 'Child of the Forgotten Castle', cares for you.]

He opened his eyes, his soul fixed on his incarnation body, and heard a story from a distant and ancient time.

As Apollo pondered the story, someone spoke to him.

[Have you opened your eyes, my brother?]

The story of Apollo, one of his brothers born before him, revealed who he was.

[Master of the Skywalk.]

When Apollo recognized him, Hermes stroked him lovingly and whispered.

[Congratulations, brother, on being born as the '14th Apollo'.]

---

When he opened his eyes again, Apollo realized his incarnation body had been destroyed.

The last memory that came to mind was the sword light engulfing him. And the dazzling gleam of the incarnation's eyes.

'Did I get hit by that thing?'

Apollo bit his lip, concentrating on his story.

[The story, 'Child of the Forgotten Castle', raises you.]

His origin story was restoring his incarnation body. He briefly regained consciousness, but the story remained intact. It was only natural. He was one of the Twelve Gods of the Nebula Olympus.

[The story, 'Epic of Light' continues.]

Even if he dies here, his story will not disappear.

「The Twelve Gods of Olympus are immortal.」

All his stories are stored in Olympus's 'big data', so as long as Olympus remains intact—and as long as its leader, the 'Seat of Lightning', remains intact—he can be resurrected.

「He is the 'fourteenth' Apollo.」

There were already thirteen Apollos born before him.

All the Apollos, each dedicated to the greater glory of the Nebula Olympus and their father, the 'Seat of Lightning', built stories in their respective realms, and died after fulfilling their missions.

「The Sun God.」

Some Apollos were revered as sun gods.

「God of prophecy and poetry.」

Worshipped for 'prophecy' and 'poetry'.

「God of music and reason.」

He also achieved fame for his art and intellect.

「Sharpener of the forest.」

He was once a renowned figure, the brother of Artemis.

[All your 'stories' prove you.]

All of these were his own history. But at the same time, they weren't his history. They were the stories of other Apollos of the past—the first, second, third—up to thirteen generations.

「Rebirth is the number, and all twelve seats must reprove themselves.」

Hermes, the 'Master of the Skywalk'—who had inherited his own story for the seventh generation—advised him with pity.

[Poor Apollo. Unfortunately, you in this generation were not born with exceptional talent.]

Over the course of fourteen generations, Apollo accumulated a vast number of stories. However, having many legends didn't necessarily mean a Constellation was strong.

Unnecessarily bloated legends sometimes threatened the Constellation.

The 'Tale of the Bow' ignored him, the 'Tale of Prophecy and Poetry' favored Hermes, and the 'Tale of Music and Reason' ignored him.

Only the 'Tale of the Sun' protected him, but that wasn't enough.

[This generation's Apollo is a lousy one. He's been around for quite some time, and he still hasn't discovered any new stories?]

[What a waste of his sullen appearance.]

[Why not become an idol for the <Star Stream>?]

Amidst the evaluations of the other twelve Constellations, Apollo silently carried out his scenarios. He sometimes followed the orders of the 'Seat of Lightning', and like the other Constellations, he also had incarnations. However, due to his lack of discernment in identifying incarnations, the incarnations he chose all died before even making it to the scenario stage.

[Tsk tsk, if only the 13th Apollo had been astute.]

As his failures continued, Apollo became more and more intimidated. His actions became more timid, and he participated less frequently in higher-level scenarios.

Despite being criticized as the 'Incompetent 14th', he never gave up on finding his own incarnation.

「I just need to find one good incarnation. If I can find one who will pioneer the story for me, I will be free from incompetence.」

Then, by chance, he discovered the incarnation Daphne, the one the 'River God' had been interested in. Apollo, enamored with Daphne, continued to court her.

[The Constellation, 'Almighty Sun', wishes to welcome incarnation 'Daphne' as its incarnation!]

But Daphne rejected Apollo, and even hated him so much that she requested a 'deus ex machina' from the 'River God', becoming a laurel tree and breaking free from her contract with him.

"You damn stalker. I'd rather be a tree than have someone like you as my sponsor."

After that, a story arose for him.

[The story, 'One Abandoned by the Tree', consoles you.]

Perhaps it was then that he began to hate trees. But who would have thought he would suffer such a miserable fate within a tree?

'Damn tree.'

Apollo, barely regaining his strength, took a deep breath and gazed at the battlefield.

More than half of the Five Hundred Generals were already incapacitated.

[Stop him!]

[Kwaaaaak!]

A man, covered in blood, roamed freely among the Constellations.

[The story, 'Noble War', trembles.]

Apollo belatedly remembered his nickname.

「The Puppet of the Oldest Dream.」

The incarnation of the Korean Peninsula, called 'Supreme King' by the Constellations of the <Star Stream>.

「A being known to defy the time of Chronos.」

Even within <Olympus>, there were attempts to recruit him. Even the noble Master of the Skywalk didn't stop courting him, trying to lure him into the gates.

When he first heard the rumors, he thought the theories were exaggerated. He assumed they were just stories made up by zealots who loved to rave about the incarnations.

However, the moment he witnessed Yoo Joonghyuk's actual battle, Apollo forgot his own situation and was lost in a fleeting moment of emotion.

「It's beautiful.」

There is a story that captivates even the gods' aesthetic sense. The life of a mortal who overcame the jealousy and hatred of the Constellations and ultimately ascended to their throne. His story illuminated the battlefield.

「I envy him.」

A being who alone could become the 'protagonist' of a complete story. That man—Yoo Joonghyuk—existed.

That's why Apollo was jealous of him, hated him, and revered him all at the same time. Because he wanted to become like that man.

With the end of the world fast approaching, he was no longer the protagonist of a story.

「He couldn't, like the Third Apollo, slay the evil Python.」

「He didn't have enough followers to build temples and spread prophecies like the Fifth Apollo.」

「He couldn't, like the Seventh Apollo, attain the power of healing and purification, and incarnate Asclepius, the god of medicine.」

「He couldn't, like the Eighth Apollo, disobey his father.」

「He couldn't, like the Eleventh Apollo, make love to Calliope, the wife of Muses.」

Their most glorious days were past, and there were no two hundred left in this universe for Apollo to be the protagonist.

And yet, he remained a mortal sin.

「I want to build a story.」

He wanted a proper story, not just a half-assed one. A story of his own. A story where he was the protagonist. A record that could be retold in this <Star Stream> for eternity.

Reading Apollo's desires, his father, the Seat of Lightning, offered this advice.

[Then become a myth.]

These were the words of a great Constellation, already a myth.

[If you become a myth, you will never be forgotten in the <Star Stream>.]

From that day on, Apollo lived to become a myth.

He obtained fragments of the 'Oldest Dream'. He gathered Constellations of the same caliber.

To create a story that would never be forgotten, he revamped the destruction scenarios and nurtured the 'World Tree' that would survive the destruction.

[Halla! Vidar! Where are you!]

Finally, his myth was on the verge of completion.

If only it hadn't been for the appearance of that damned incarnation.

[Apollo.]

Halla and Vidar, already writhing with their bodies destroyed, called out to him.

It was only one incarnation. To that one incarnation, all the Constellations approaching 'mythical level' were defeated.

[We must run. That thing is a monster. Take us quickly…]

At that moment, Apollo understood his role.

「If I can't become the protagonist of a story.」

Apollo slowly bent down and grabbed Halla's head.

[Apollo?]

His right hand moved in an instant, ripping Halla's head off.

「I will become the villain, infinitely closer to the protagonist.」

Vidar, seeing this, crawled away with a shocked expression. Apollo grabbed Vidar by the back of his head and, as expected, ripped off his head. Grabbing the heads of the two gods, Apollo's gaze revealed his artificial sun, half-shattered.

「To become a 'sun' that will be remembered forever.」

Apollo embedded the heads of two Narrative-grade Constellations into his artificial sun. Fueled by the new Contellations' stories, his artificial sun began to burn red.

[Some Constellations in <Olympus> have noticed your evil deeds!]

[Some Constellations in <Tamra> condemn your actions!]

[The Constellations in <Asgard> are showing hostility toward you!]

His story began to be tainted with the criticism of the Constellations.

[The story, 'Lover of the Muses', is deeply disappointed in you.]

[The story, 'Light and Reason', is deeply disappointed in you.]

…

Apollo abandoned the history he had built. He abandoned the history of rewarding good and punishing evil, and he abandoned the reputation he had built as the god of light.

And so, all that remained for him was desire.

「To become a myth.」

The Five Hundred Generals who witnessed Apollo's atrocities roared from all sides.

[The omnipotent sun has gone mad!]

Apollo laughed.

His story was repeating itself.

[It should have been this way from the beginning.]

The 'Fragment of the Oldest Dream' possessed by Halla and Vidar was being transferred to him.

The power to understand the essence of this world.

As his consciousness expanded, Apollo felt the presence of a thick 'wall'.

The wall where all the stories of this world were written.

He was being recorded on that wall.

[The Constellation, 'Almighty Sun', rises greatly in rank!]

A sense of overwhelming freedom began to dominate his entire being. Passing the boundary of the mythical level, his consciousness leaped high above the wall. Yoo Joonghyuk, noticing the change, was running towards him, but he paid him no mind.

Yoo Joonghyuk had already vanished from his sight. At that moment, he was gazing upon the highest point of the sky.

[Father.]

Now he felt he could call the name he had never dared to call.

[Zeus, Seat of Lightning! I have arrived!]

At that moment, Apollo left his body and entered a completely different realm.

He had once heard a story. There was a place only the great 'Mythical Constellations'—those who had long perfected their narratives and reached their own conclusions—could reach.

「He blinked, and there was a round table.」

Mythical Constellations sat at a large round table. Even the Constellations of the mythical order, those that created a world, were staring back at him.

The Island That Conceived.

The Spear That Demarcated the Seas.

The Master of December 25th.

The One Responsible For the Cycles of the Universe.

The Master of Abydos.

Apollo shuddered at their gaze and approached the round table. At its edge sat the Constellation he admired.

[I can finally see your seat.]

The great 'Seat of Lightning' turned to him.

This was the position of mythical-level he had longed for.

There was one empty seat at the round table. Apollo realized it was his seat and approached it.

It was only when he placed his hand on the back of his chair that Zeus spoke.

[You cannot sit there.]

Since when had it been? All the Mythical-level Constellations had been glaring at him.

[This isn't your place.]

With a terrible pain, his soul began to be pushed out of the Round Table.

Apollo's lips twitched. But the Round Table wouldn't even allow him to speak.

'Why?'

At the last moment, Apollo saw a white-faced man taking the empty seat he had assumed was his.

'Why—'

It was a man he knew well.

950 Episode 56 Myth (2)

---

With a terrible thunderclap, Apollo felt his soul shatter. At the last moment, he reached out once more.

「The man was definitely a face he knew.」

Strangely, however, Apollo couldn't tell who the man was. Was he the 'being' who had fed him flesh and blood, or the 'child' who had interfered with his plans for the World Tree? Or was it a 'different being' that was neither here nor there?

「The mythical Round Table scattered like dawn before Apollo's eyes.」

Apollo howled as he opened his eyes, as if waking from a trance.

[Father—!]

Yoo Joonghyuk, running across the battlefield of the annihilated scenario, swung his sword.

"I am not your father."

The sharp blade grazed Apollo's shoulder. Apollo let out a pained scream as fragments of the myth flew.

[Ah, ah, ahh—]

It was the throne he had longed for.

A mythical throne. The epic of the eternal stars.

That story vanished right before his eyes, forever beyond his reach.

[Ahhhhh!]

All of Apollo's stories began to run wild. From the first life to the fourteenth life. All his stories were screaming with pain.

[The Constellation, 'Pure Moonlight Hunter', warns!]

Appolo's eyes, lost in his rage, darkened, as if he hadn't even heard his sister's warning.

「Corruption.」

Yoo Joonghyuk frowned.

The Constellation's corruption was on the verge of reaching mythical proportions. The implications of this phenomenon were clear.

[A new 'Demon King' is about to appear in the <Star Stream>!]

Demon King. Demon Kings had appeared in the <Star Stream> countless times before.

But has there ever been a case where a Constellation belonging to the twelve gods of <Olympus> became a Demon King through 'Corruption'?

[Demon King, 'Creator of Discord', cannot hide his excitement!]

[Demon King, 'Unfathomable Severity', welcomes the new Constellation's corruption!]

Since when, the Demon Kings themselves have been observing the scenario through their own retinue.

Apollo burst into maniacal laughter.

[Yes, if I don't ascend to 'myth'—]

Bearing the gaze of the demon kings, who would have normally despised him endlessly, Apollo accelerated his decline. In the mind of the 'Almighty Sun', his long-held stories lamented.

「He was once a warrior who defeated the medicinal dragon.」

「He was a man who loved prophecy and poetry, and adored Yuzu.」

「He pioneered the art of prophecy, benefiting the mortal race, and even challenged his great father...」

Yoo Joonghyuk had heard the story too. Yoo Joonghyuk gazed at Apollo with his blazing eyes, and said,

"They say you can only reach certain realms by abandoning all the stories you've accumulated."

Apollo frowned, as if deeply offended by Yoo Joonghyuk's words. How could a mere scribe understand the sorrow of a Constellation? How could a mere mortal comprehend the despair of having to throw away all his stories in the blazing heat?

"But that's how you will reach the realm you desire."

The moment Apollo saw the story embedded in Yoo Joonghyuk's swordsmanship, his mouth fell open involuntarily.

"Do you think the ending you desire will be there?"

The story embedded in the swordsmanship was wailing.

The sorrow of losing someone. The regret for a past unchangeable.

The moment he heard the voice of a distant story, unbelievable to have been built by a single human, a realization struck Apollo.

[You.]

The human before him was one who defied the time of Chronos. A being who alone, rewinding the time of this world, lived his life.

[You truly understand my story.]

Sometimes, a Constellation finds great comfort in the mere fact that a story similar to its own exists in this universe. Apollo felt the same way at that moment. The moment he was understood by the mortal he had despised and ignored, he felt both profound joy and despair.

「This was his ■■.」

To end his life in a contest with the only living being in this world who could understand him.

He had lost track of the profound story. Apollo declared.

[I will do my utmost, Puppet of the Oldest Dream.]

The artificial sun began to burn with pitch-black flames. One by one, the Constellations began to cast their gazes upon the fallen incarnation.

[The Constellation, 'Pure Moonlight Hunter', sinks into deep sorrow.]

[The Constellation, 'Speaker of Justice and Wisdom', turns its gaze away from the sun.]

[The Constellation, 'Master of the Skywalk', records the brother's final appearance.]

[The Constellation, 'God of Wine and Ecstasy', falls silent at the brother's final moments.]

The Constellations of Olympus watched Apollo's end.

The flames of the artificial sun consumed everything in the forest. The incarnation, the stage, the Constellations. Waves of light overflowed from Apollo's entire body, as if he himself would be consumed by the blazing flames.

[Kaaaaaaah!]

[Damn Apollo! Stop!]

Seemingly ignoring the other Constellations, Apollo continued to spew flames.

[A Natural Disaster-level Fear, the 'Impossible Justice', is in agony.]

It was clear that if this continued, the entire forest would be engulfed in flames. Yoo Joonghyuk focused his magical power on his sword.

「The Regressor began to run, slashing at the encroaching flames.」

With each sword thrust, the sound of divine history shattering could be heard. A fierce flame, powerful enough to incinerate even the Constellations of the stories of the Gods, engulfed his entire body.

"This level of flame."

But even Apollo's flame, which could burn even the Constellations, could not consume the Regressor's soul.

"I've experienced it countless times."

The indomitable spirit, unfazed by anything, sundered the flames and reached the artificial sun.

Yoo Joonghyuk plunged his broken sword into the artificial sun without hesitation. With a roar, the mirror shattered, and the artificial sun, too.

[The story, 'Noble War', concludes its storytelling.]

As the sun, imbued with the stories of the Blood Demon and the Heavenly Demon, shattered, the stage effect ended.

Apollo, having lost the sun, gazed at him.

[You are indeed strong, Puppet of the Oldest Dream.]

Despite losing the sun, Apollo's dignity remained intact. As if he could recreate that mere sun over and over again, a new 'artificial sun' was forming behind him.

Yoo Joonghyuk replied without any change in expression.

"I will destroy it as many times as you want."

[Yes, that is how you have lived.]

At that moment, Apollo's eyes became clouded. With eyes that once loved 'prophecy', Apollo was reading the story of the Regressor.

[But unfortunate puppet. You will never reach the end you desire.]

"That is not for you to decide."

[You will be eternally unhappy. With such a brilliant story, at the end of this world, you will be the most terrible of all. You will face tragedy. So—]

The completed artificial sun gradually inflated and once again spewed black flames.

Apollo, gracefully stepping back, threw himself into the sun and said,

[I will save you from this place.]

The ocean, guiding the black flames, soon swallowed Apollo's incarnation body and rose into the sky.

Apollo, who had become the black sun itself, spoke,

[Remain here with me as an eternal 'story'.]

Black flames blanketed the sky in black. In the black flames, where even breathing was difficult, Constellations, unable to withstand the scorching heat, began to fall.

Yoo Joonghyuk glared at the black sun with a grave expression.

Now, even the effects of 'Staging' were gone.

Jaehwan's warning rang in Yoo Joonghyuk's ears.

「"Remember. You cannot use 100% of your power in soul form."」

Even if he used the ultimate power of [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship], it seemed difficult to bring down that sun.

That meant only with a 'sword'.

「You must not use a 'spear'.」

Yoo Joonghyuk took a deep breath, and the shape of a long spear appeared in his right hand.

He remembered his promise. But even if he had to break his promise to Jaehwan, he had a duty to avenge his master here.

「Just once is enough.」

Perhaps because the technique hadn't yet been perfected. His right hand, condensed with stories, began to tremble precariously.

[Many Constellations are astonished by your power!]

It wasn't a technique he could show them anymore.

But just once...

Kugugugugu!

The black sun spewed out a corona. The rippling wave of flames instantly covered the sky and surged down to the ground. It was faster than expected, and Yoo Joonghyuk's face hardened.

「Time is running out.」

Yoo Joonghyuk bit his lip, aiming his unfinished spear at the sun. A cool shadow fell before his eyes, and he suddenly felt a sense of relief.

「Something was blocking the sun's flames.」

A vast forest loomed before his eyes.

No, perhaps it would be more accurate to call it a forest?

「A forest made of a single tree.」

He could see Fears rising within the pitch-black shadows.

【Ooooooooooooooooooo】

The Fears that slumbered beneath the forest's surface. The shark, at the center of those Fears, was approaching him, boasting its streamlined body.

[Catastrophe-level Fear, 'Tooth Fin', reveals its majesty!]

The Constellations in the sky emitted light as if in shock. The man's blond hair sparkled in the starlight filtering through the forest's shadows.

Yoo Joonghyuk chewed on the bright hair, looking at it. He muttered.

"You're late."

The man replied with a smile.

"You're the one who's late, aren't you? If you'd rushed over when I contacted you, this wouldn't have happened, right?"

The two men stared at each other for a moment, then simultaneously looked up at the burning forest sky.

The eight-year reunion was brief.

「Because, for the past eight years, their goals have been the same.」

A brightly shining story began to envelop the two.

[The potential of a 'giant story' is about to blossom.]

The sound of writing on the wall could be heard.

"How much stronger have you become? Can you kill a Mthical Constellation now?"

「Kim Dokja asked.」

"If I use a spear."

「Yoo Joonghyuk answered.」

"Is that so?"

Of course, he reacted as if he expected that level of power from Yoo Joonghyuk.

Seemingly displeased with that response, Yoo Joonghyuk quirked his thick eyebrows and asked,

"How much stronger have you become?"

"Me."

The man looked up at the sky in silence. Yoo Joonghyuk joined him in looking up. Strangely, at that moment, Yoo Joonghyuk felt he couldn't quite grasp what the man was looking at.

"Still not enough."

Perhaps that's why, Yoo Joonghyuk instinctively called the man's name.

"Kim Dokja."

The black sun's flames began to encroach through the shadows of the show.

Yoo Joonghyuk continued.

"Once we defeat that bastard, that's when the real war will begin."

He knew it without even asking.

Probably by now, the Constellations of each Giant Nebula outside the World Tree would have swarmed to capture them.

"If we fail this time—"

"The world will end."

Kim Dokja spoke calmly, and Yoo Joonghyuk glared at him. Kim Dokja shrugged and smiled.

"Aren't we people who are used to destruction anyway?"

「Perhaps only Yoo Joonghyuk in this world understood Kim Dokja's joke.」

"No matter how many times you experience it, you never get used to it."

「Likewise, only Kim Dokja understood that it wasn't a joke to Yoo Joonghyuk.」

"I know."

Finally, as if the time had come, the shadows of the forest began to open again. The fears of those who cried out in unison. Kim Dokja spoke in harmony.

"It's time to go see the conclusion of the final round."

Yoo Joonghyuk nodded.

951 Episode 56 Myth (3)

---

Since the outbreak of the 'Destruction Scenario', the incarnations of small and medium-sized corporations, who had been stationed in the southern region, finally began to move.

"Let's save the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint!"

The Constellations of the companies, sensing their movements, also sent indirect messages to the incarnations.

[The Constellations belonging to the Nebula <Black Cloud> warn the incarnations!]

[The Constellations belonging to the Nebula <White Cloud> scold the incarnations, telling them not to act rashly!]

Normally, the incarnations of the companies would have been frightened by the Constellations' messages. But today's incarnations were different.

"Hmph, you cowards who couldn't even descend to the scenario region—"

"Get out! It's embarrassing to have been affiliated with your company!"

The incarnations knew now.

Those Constellations would not interfere with the 'New Murim District' scenario.

[The Constellations supporting small and medium-sized businesses are greatly perplexed by the incarnations' reactions.]

Right now, a 'destruction scenario' was unfolding in the 'New Murim District'. If this scenario were to be confirmed as a disaster, the Constellations caught up in the scenario would face eternal destruction, along with their own legends.

「Constellations fearing eternal destruction will abandon the scenario from the moment the 'destruction scenario' begins.」

On the other hand, the incarnations gathered in the southern district of the 'New Murim District' were ones who had prepared themselves for even such a death.

Rather than choosing another 'sponsor', they chose to remain in this 'New Murim District' and witness its end.

Nevertheless, they still hesitated.

「What if this truly is their final battlefield?」

It was then that someone's cry rang out.

"The expansion of technique has stopped!"

The power of Fear emanating from <Tamra Junggong> was weakening.

"The power of the technique is weakening!"

It was Namgung Myung who spoke those words.

The incarnations nearby, coincidentally, questioned Namgung Myung's words.

"The technique's power is weakening? Is that true?"

"How do you know that? Who are you?"

The people asked, and Namgung Myung, who had been hesitating, stepped forward.

"I am Namgung Myung, the head of the Namgung family."

"Namgung family…"

A short sigh escaped the martial arts community at the mention of the now-extinct family. Everyone here remembered the name.

"The head of the Namgung family. I heard you were infected by the legends of the Outer Gods. You're still alive?"

"They say you can sense the power of Fear, and it's true."

"I've heard of the Namgung family's reputation. Eight years ago, during the Fear Realm incident, he was the one who fought until the very end."

Short murmurs erupted everywhere. Confused eyes, one by one, focused on Namgung Myung, and someone asked.

"Namgung sohyeop, do you have something to say to us?"

He asked that question not because Namgung Myung was the strongest incarnation here.

「They needed a justification.」

The incarnations who had been protecting the 'New Murim District' until now were now without a place to go.

They were tired of searching for another 'sponsor'. They had somehow managed to adapt to the 'New Murim District', but not because they loved the new Murim, but because they could not leave this land.

"All of you gathered here were once 'Murim people'."

For their sake, Namgung Myung opened his mouth.

"I often miss Murim, but I cannot bear to say that the Murim I remember was a good place."

The crowd listened to him in silence.

"The 'Murim' I remember was brutal. The weak were despised, and the powerful ruled everything. Where today's corporations once stood, there were powerful families. There were many who acted violently because they possessed martial arts prowess or had supporters."

A few of the incarnations nodded. They, too, remembered those days.

"But even in a forest overflowing with such rascals, stories were ours."

Namgung Myung's gaze slowly swept the crowd. There were those who had once been members of the Five Great Families or the Nine-Fold Faction, and the remnants of the Blood Cult or the Demonic Cult. There were also martial artists from small and medium-sized sects who had fought for regional hegemony.

Now, in a world where all those groups had vanished, people stood on a single stage.

"Even as we harmed or saved each other, fought or reconciled—that forest was undeniably 'ours'."

Throughout the long history of martial arts, the forest had been a stage solely for humans.

「The stage humans had lost.」

Someone bit their lip, and someone lowered their head in shock.

Only then did the incarnations realize what they had lost, and one by one, their anger erupted.

"I don't know what corporation you all gathered here belong to. However, if you were at least martial artists, please don't ignore this world's aspirations. Please—"

As if sensing their anger, Namgung Myung spoke.

"Please protect this breath."

The martial artists raised their heads and looked toward <Tamra Junggong>. It wasn't the Murim they remembered. Nevertheless, at that moment, the incarnations all recalled the same story.

"We will likely die. Perhaps this place will become the ■■ of which the Constellations speak. But even if that happens—"

Namgung Myung turned his back and began to move toward <Tamra Heavy Industry>.

"I want to see my end as a martial artist here."

With those words, a cheer erupted.

The martial artists began to run toward the forest.

"Reclaim the God of Murim!"

"Let's save the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint!"

"Everyone, follow the family head!"

Namgung Myung also roared with an agitated expression. Perhaps he knew this was all a futile endeavor.

Nevertheless, this stage was the last tribute the current incarnations could offer to the forest that protected them.

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', cheers on the incarnations of Murim.]

[The Constellation, 'First Heavenly Demon', immerses himself in the scent of the old Murim.]

[The Constellation, 'Last Ark', encourages the incarnations of Murim.]

Some Constellations sympathized with the will of the Murim people, and from somewhere, Recorders who showed interest appeared.

[The Recorder of Fear, 'Unchanging One', begins to record.]

[Some Recorders join the record of the 'New Murim District.']

Have they heard rumors that a 'Giant Story' will be born here? The Recorders, who had arrived belatedly to offer even a single sentence, were recording the lives of the incarnations.

「The 'Impossible Justice' has already ended.」

As the forest's power weakened, the 'justice' that had brought them together vanished. Now, no one was forcing them to agree.

「Still, the martial artists ran toward the forest.」

It didn't matter who had ignited the fire in their hearts. At this moment, they were the forest's indigenous people, fighting to protect their ancient homeland.

[Fools. Retreat!]

A bolt of fire fell from the sky, and several martial artists running at the forefront were slaughtered.

[The Constellation, 'Ruler of the South Sea Dragon Palace', issues a fiery command!]

The South Sea Dragon King, a legendary Constellation from Tamra, was warning the incarnations.

And that wasn't all.

Some of Tamra's Five Hundred Generals had not ventured deep into the forest. And the Constellations of other major corporations were gathered at the forest entrance, keeping the incarnations in check.

[The Constellation, 'One Who Became a Saint in a Day', frowns.]

Among them was a Constellation from <Asgard>.

A Narrative-grade Constellation from <Asgard>, dispatched in a hurry after hearing that contact with Vidar, the 'Terminator of War', had been lost.

[Vidar, what a pitiful goal.]

The 'One Who Became a Saint in a Day'—Bala—calls out, carelessly detonating the rushing incarnations.

[South Sea Dragon King. How long will it take to seal it?]

[Preparations will be complete soon.]

[Hurry up. If the Myth-grade Constellations invade, everything will be in shambles.]

Not all Constellations feared the 'destruction scenario'. Some even saw 'destruction' as an opportunity. The Narrative-grade Constellations gathered here were no exception. Growing the World Tree to reach 'mythical' status would be a good strategy, but if that proved difficult, sealing the World Tree for practical gains wouldn't be a bad idea either.

「If they can just sort this out before the Mythical Constellations arrive, they'll be recognized for their efforts.」

The Constellations, gathered to feast on the crumbs of such a grand tale, unleashed their ferocious rage upon the humans.

[Get out, you insects.]

Namgung Myung glared, watching the incarnations melt before his eyes.

The Murim people, barely gathered together, were dying in vain.

He had to clear a path somehow. All these deaths couldn't be in vain—the moment he reached that point, someone clapped him firmly on the shoulder and stepped forward.

「Hair fluttering beautifully. A beauty with an androgynous appearance radiated vigor with every step, clearing the path.」

Along with the feeling that the surrounding air was being sucked in, a thunderous Lion's Roar, reminiscent of the mantra of a Constellation, rose and rang out.

[Where are my followers!]

Some of the Constellations, overwhelmed by the force, stammered out their words.

[W-what—]

[What the hell are all these weirdos gathered here! Are they throwing a festival without me?]

Savior Nirvana.

The strongest ascendant, having recovered from his injuries, stood at the forefront of the Murim community.

"The Savior has arrived!"

As Nirvana's [Thousand-Armed Avalokitesvara] began to slaughter the Constellations in front of him, the Murim community, their spirits lifted, continued their charge.

The South Sea Dragon King, watching this, asked the surrounding Constellations,

[What the hell is that guy?]

[He's an incarnation of the Buddha.]

[The Buddha? Did that old islander have such an incarnation?]

No matter what the Constellations babbled, Nirvana pushed forward without hesitation, plunging through the waves of Constellations.

「I must find my disciple.」

That sentence alone dominated his mind.

「He didn't know why, but the moment Nirvana was carried by the disciple, he felt something like an old longing.」

In a hazy memory, the disciple's voice carrying him into the manor.

「"You're resting here, aren't you?"」

Nirvana knew. The disciple had clearly been drawn in by this stage. So now, it was his turn, the church leader, to save him.

Kugugugu.

It was then that a harsh vibration rose and spread through the forest. For a moment, the forest's interior split open, releasing a sage.

[Huh? What's that smell?]

Nirvana instinctively raised his head and muttered in a commanding voice. Slowly, his eyes began to dilate. It was unmistakable. There was no way he could have confused the scent of this story.

[Ahahahahaha! Yoo Joonghyuk! You're finally here!]

An excited Nirvana wandered through the forest.

He continued to run towards it.

The Constellations stopped him as he ran with a mad expression.

[Hold on.]

A torrent of ripples, resembling waves, swept over Nirvana, and a mass of magical energy reminiscent of Mount Tai fell upon his head.

Nirvana, fully activating [Thousand-Armed Avalokitesvara], roared.

[You damned bastards! The Supreme King is there! He came to meet me!]

Nirvana was a powerful incarnation. However, the Constellations were too numerous for him to handle alone.

Finally, he, who had been on the defensive, gathered the palms of [Thousand-Armed Avalokitesvara] and received the power of the Constellations.

"Move."

An incarnation leaped forward, using his [Thousand-Armed Avalokitesvara] as a stepping stone.

The momentum of [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship] slicing through the sky.

Nirvana's complexion brightened.

[Mad Sword Emperor! You're here!]

Jung Heewon's sword strike, slicing through the air, began to cut through the Constellations.

Jung Heewon roared, and Nirvana roared. But they could not defy the individuality of the Constellations.

The moment the seal, which had spread in ten hours, was about to cover the tree, a dog barked from somewhere.

「There was a lone individual there.」

Breaking the Sky Master let out a long question and leaped toward the seal. Kyung Sein, riding on her back, gained momentum and soared into the air.

「It was a very small gap.」

A small gap, like the gap between two sentences. Kyung Sein, who had squeezed into the gap, spread her arms and legs wide to complete the seal. She blocked it.

Tsutsutsutsut!

A fierce storm of probability swept over her, burning her entire body. Terrible pain surged through her, but Kyung Sein bit her lip and endured it all.

「Kyung Sein knew she wasn’t a great person.」

She wasn’t as sincere or outstanding as the other readers.

「But even she had scenes she wanted to see.」

Kyung Sein’s exclusive trait activated, and her entire body hardened like story metal. A level of hardness comparable to Lee Hyunsung’s [Steel Transformation].

「Kyung Sein used all her D-Coins to strengthen her incarnation body.」

Some might say,

"The Kyung Sein used all the D coins he had to strengthen his incarnation."

Someone will say.

Didn't you just read this story once?

「"Can't I like a story that I've only read once?"」

With Cha Yerin's voice in her head, Kyung Sein's story began to unfold.

「"There’s no need for qualifications to like something, right?"」

Perhaps reading a story is simply… It doesn't just mean reading the story.

「"But why do you, Judge, like Jung Heewon?"」

「"Ah, that's right."」

Memories of staying up all night chatting with unknown people. People she met simply because she happened to like a certain story.

「The history that created the current Kyung Sein was there.」

"Euaaaaaaaaaa!"

All the stories she had accumulated resisted the seal of <Tamra>.

The South Sea Dragon King, his expression hardened, gave an order to the Five Hundred Generals.

[Kill her.]

Arrows slashed through the air.

The arrows of the Constellations struck her cracked skin. Despite spitting out endless streams of crimson blood, Kyung Sein remained conscious. Blocking the narrowing passage, Kyung Sein resisted, and resisted.

The end of this world was predetermined.

She knew it, and perhaps all the other readers knew it too.

「And yet, if there were just one loophole.」

Someone, upon that margin, drew a different interpretation. If only they could write it.

"CEO!"

Namgung Myung's shout was heard from afar.

The moment she saw Namgung Myung's expression, Kyung Sein smiled bitterly.

「She truly realized she had entered a novel.」

She was in that story.

「She will never return to the world she once belonged to.」

Sentences were being written just for her.

「She will never see the next chapter of this story.」

Namgung Myung's expression, the astonishment of the Constellations, dictated the next sentence.

「Kim Dokja of the 'New Murim District' will lose his 'precious thing'.」

With the sound of [Fate] coming from somewhere, Kyung Sein's body began to crumble little by little.

Her vision was charred black by the aftershock of probability. Her body disappeared like a page torn by someone.

However, there was a certain sensation enveloping her.

As if written just for her, someone was carefully holding her in his arms. Now, blind, Kyung Sein could not see his face. There was none.

「She could only 'read'.」

The sound of a seal breaking.

Beyond the seal, Fears were awakening.

Amidst the shadows of the forest, ancient Outer Gods soared, flapping their wings repeatedly.

[A new 'Giant Tale' has been born!]

Fear began to howl, devouring the Constellations in the sky.

[Giant tale, 'Forest of Stars and Humans', has been born.]

Reading the sentences that seemed to end in a flash, Kyung Sein imagined another version of herself somewhere, reading this entire story.

In that world, she would be reading this scene, biting or laughing, rejoicing or saddened.

Without a single clue as to how long it had taken for these words to be born, she would simply blink like an excited Constellation. Without even knowing whether she liked this story or not, she would simply read the next sentence.

「That day, deep in the forest, a myth was born to stand against the Constellations.」

Imagining herself like that, Kyung Sein followed the story's end with eyes that could no longer see.

952 Episode 56 Myth (4)

It didn't take long to defeat Apollo.

He was a Constellation who had reached 'mythical' status through a leap of faith, but he couldn't properly control his own rampaging stories

[I—]

As the 'Fears' arising from the Forest of Fear roared and charged, the black sun's corona shattered.

The pitch-black sun listlessly shed stories that weren't its own. Vidar's and Halla's stories let out resentful cries.

「And then Yoo Joonghyuk's sword moved.」

The blade gliding gracefully sliced through the dazzling light. For a moment, the sunlight was disrupted, and Apollo's face appeared through the split shadow of the black sun.

"I envy you all."

Apollo's voice, even the strength to utter his mantras, vanished. Watching Apollo, about to leave, I briefly considered another possibility for him.

"If it were another world—"

He was still a villain in the 40th round.

But I didn't bother telling him that story. Instead, I said,

"Yes, maybe it would have been different in another worldline."

I don't know if that comforted Apollo. However, in his final moments, he looked at me with a strange expression.

「A god who hunted evil spirits and passed down prophecies and poetry for humans.」

Surely, such a worldline exists. However, in this one, his role was merely a medicine man.

Sugagak!

Apollo's legend crumbled under the simultaneous sword strikes of me and Yoo Joonghyuk.

[The Constellations of the Nebula, <Olympus>, remember the end of the 'Almighty Sun'.]

The Constellations scattered, and the black heat that had threatened the forest subsided.

[You have achieved an incredible feat!]

[You have acquired a new story!]

As soon as I defeated Apollo, stories poured from the air.

I saw the roaring Fears around me chomping down on a few fallen story fragments.

[A vast amount of 'Loss' has been collected.]

[The 'Loss' you have collected is recorded on the Final Wall.]

The 'Kim Dokja Fragment' Apollo held was also absorbed into me.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', begins to devour!]

A faint heat bubbled near my heart.

Memories possessed by 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

「If we are the same Kim Dokja, why is there a distinction between the real and the fake?」

Perhaps this was what motivated Apollo.

Following this, the scenario interpretation reward message also appeared.

[You have successfully interpreted the 'Impossible Agreement', a Catastrophe-level Fear!]

[Interpretation suggestion: Trees and wine, a small shade for humanity under the sky.]

[You are possessed by the power of Fear.]

I felt the power of the 'Impossible Agreement', a Catastrophe-level Fear, seeping into me.

[Sub-scenario—'Eradicating Fear' completed.]

[You have earned 2,000,000 coins as a sub-scenario reward.]

The extraordinary reward details made feel amazed for a moment.

Even so, a sub-scenario rewarding millions of coins?

Considering the coin inflation caused by D-Coins, it's understandable, but...

[You've acquired an exclusive trait as an additional reward for completing the sub-scenario.]

[You've acquired the exclusive trait, 'Abyssal Understanding'.]

[This trait greatly increases your affinity for stories!]

[Your understanding of unfamiliar stories greatly increases!]

And now, I've even got an exclusive trait.

The trait I just received was exactly what I needed.

[The main scenario content has been updated!]

[You have acquired 500 additional tributes!]

The 500 tributes were a reward from the 'Breaking the Sky Sword Saint' in this 'main scenario'.

Only those who acquired this tribute could escape through 'Ascension' in the 'Ascension Scenario'.

[You currently have the 'most tributes' in the scenario area.]

However, the 'Impossible Agreement' was no longer a scourge of Murim. In other words, the incarnations no longer needed to acquire tribute to escape the 'Destruction Scenario'.

[The 'Destruction Scenario' is currently in progress in that region.]

So, it would be natural for the 'Destruction Scenario' to be withdrawn soon...

But is the scenario still ongoing?

Amidst a sense of foreboding, Yoo Joonghyuk, having collected the scattered stories, quickly approached. He glanced around the spot where the deep sun had disappeared and said, "I'm going back now."

Where the sun had vanished, a swirling portal appeared. Perhaps if we ventured out there, we could escape the forest.

"I understand. You came in spirit form, didn't you?"

Yoo Joonghyuk nodded.

If 'Midday Tryst' was far enough to not reach properly, then Yoo Joonghyuk must have been somewhere separated from this area, both in time and space.

"Still, I see you received the message."

"You sent a story."

I sent a story about the 'Returnee War'. To be precise, I intertwined the story of the 'Returnee War' with Yoo Joonghyuk's [Fate].

「The long-returned one will return to the forest ruled by the Constellations.」

It was a gamble I could take, knowing that Yoo Joonghyuk would never abandon his master, no matter the circumstances.

"But this time, it's too late."

We were staring at the spot where Breaking the Sky Sword Saint had just moments ago. The figure that had been shedding pitch-black tears had vanished.

"Breaking the Sky Sword Saint's soul was never here."

"Was it a thought form that remained here?"

I nodded.

This 'Fear' was originally a condensation of the stories Breaking the Sky Sword Saint left behind. Her soul had likely left the scenario area long ago.

Perhaps it was the price of her thoughts and true stories evolving into 'Fear'.

「"I always been late."」

[Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint], activated in real time, was reading Yoo Joonghyuk. Even in such a vast shadow, Yoo Joonghyuk still couldn't rest.

He knew I was reading him, yet he didn't show it.

"Have you acquired the forest?"

The only consolation I could offer him was to record this horrific story to the end.

"To a certain extent."

I felt the 'forest' of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint stirring within my shadow.

The Fears that emerged from the forest included those on the scale of a Natural Disaster, including the 'Toothed Fin'.

The Fears bared their white fangs at me.

Yoo Joonghyuk, staring at these Fears, said,

"It couldn't have been easy."

Indeed, I nearly died fighting those creatures. Strictly speaking, I couldn't say I was handling them properly.

"I could talk for half a day if I wanted to."

I added, gazing at the distant passageway in the sky.

"I guess we'll have to wait until next time."

In the distance, I could see the portal entrance gradually narrowing. The situation was clear.

「Someone is deliberately narrowing the passage.」

Yoo Joonghyuk, sensing the situation, hardened his expression and said, "It looks like they're trying to seal this place completely."

"I have a rough idea of what they are."

Apollo, Vidar, Halla, and numerous other Constellations had fallen victim to this 'World Tree'.

But a scenario of this scale wouldn't have been planned by just three Narrative-grade people.

The Constellations they'd plotted with would have made their move by now.

「We have to get out now.」

I knew it instinctively. If I didn't escape now, they'd keep me trapped here until this round's ■■ arrived.

I looked around and saw Yoo Joonghyuk's soul body vanish. Having exhausted all the given probability, he was returning to his original location.

"Let's meet again."

Yoo Joonghyuk replied,

"Survive."

It was a brief greeting for a reunion after eight years. But it was enough. We knew each other were alive, and we knew we were struggling to see the end of this world.

「All that remains is to confirm the stories we've built so far.」

I launched [Way of the Wind] with full force and ran. The surrounding scenery was pushed back.

I leaped into the portal. Time and space felt distorted, and in the distance, something blocked the narrowing entrance.

「"Why do you like Jung Heewon?"」

Story fragments drifted through the air.

「"That's..."」

I felt a deep symphony.

「"Strange... Why can't I remember..."」

Cracks appeared between the faintly glowing incarnations. The arrows of the Constellations penetrated through them.

I reached out and embraced her.

"Sein-ssi."

Kyung Sein, whom I held weakly, closed her eyes. I couldn't say thank you or sorry. At that moment, a single emotion dominated me.

「I want to shatter all the Constellations in the sky.」

Stories began to overflow from my body.

[The Constellation, 'First Heavenly Demon', can't take its eyes off you.]

[The Constellation, 'Maritime War God', can't take his eyes off you.]

[The Constellation, 'Bald Commander', can't take his eyes off you.]

The Constellations I knew were watching me.

[All the Constellations of the Nebula <Olympus> are watching you.]

[All the Constellations of the Nebula <Asgard> are watching you.]

[All the Constellations of the Nebula <Vedas> are watching you.]

My enemies too.

[The Recorder of Fear, 'Fox Who Commands the Sky', records you.]

[The Recorder of Fear, 'Prince of Wolves', records you.]

[The Recorder of Fear, 'Demon King of the Cinema', records you.]

Even Recorders who devour this story. And—

「And there was a single reader of this story.」

Looking at the sky, ablaze with bright starlight, I finally understood how this entire story began and how it must end.

「The stage opened.」

The shadow of a giant pine tree spread across the floor.

[The story, 'King of Fear' begins its storytelling.]

With a piercing sensation in my back, gigantic wings spread out as if to protect me.

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', begins its storytelling.]

The Fears began to unfold. Fears of Catastrophe, Disaster, and Natural Disaster level, all reaching out toward the Constellations. Among them, the one who took the lead in biting the incarnations was 'Toothed Fin'.

【TeethTeethTeethT

Beings abandoned by the scenario and turned into 'Fears''

I had only one promise to make to them.

「"I will show you the ■■ of this world, too."」

Just a small space. An ancient fear was rising above that space.

The World Tree of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint grew into a pitch-black shadow, piercing the starry sky.

[The Constellation, 'Ruler of the Southern Sea Dragon Palace', cannot hide his surprize.]

The Constellations pierced by the branches of the World Tree writhe, spewing out stories.

「The world born from the blood of the annihilators will despise the old heavens.」

Several Constellations, sensing the strange turn of events, began to retreat into the darkness.

[Some Constellations are preparing an emergency scenario exit!]

The ruler of the South Sea Dragon Palace, belatedly realizing the situation, pointed at me and spoke.

[Don't panic, everyone! If we catch him, it'll all be over. He's just a single Narrative-grade incarnation. He...!]

The Constellations that had been rushing towards me were devoured by the Fears that erupted around me.

Glancing at the fading starlight, the South Sea Dragon King's mantra subsided.

[He...!]

A massive spark ignited throughout my body. I desperately used my unique traits and stories to quell the aftershock. With a calm expression, I walked towards the Constellations.

It was then that I felt a strange sense of urgency.

「I felt a sense of being watched from a gigantic round table.」

Simultaneously, a change occurred within me.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', has completed its predation.]

[Your 'Kim Dokja Fragment' count has exceeded the critical threshold.]

The Constellations screamed in the sky stained with fear. The Constellations that once enjoyed stories were no longer there.

「And thus, the story that the Constellations fear was born.」

I approached the South Sea Dragon King.

The South Sea Dragon King, whose entire body had been bitten by the Outer Gods, pointed at me, spitting out stories.

[How.]

The creature staggered back, overcome by the poison, and began to shout.

[How! A Constellation, a being not even human, by a being that didn't even make it to the final scenario, how on earth could…!]

The South Sea Dragon King, who had been speaking up to that point, fell silent.

My image was reflected in the Constellation's eyes. The Constellation's emotions were transmitted in real time through its swaying eyes.

Shock, grief, and awe.

[Could it be…]

The blade of 'Unbreakable Faith' slashed at the creature's neck.

「The Constellations must see this.」

I raised my head, suppressing the endless stream of stories swirling within me.

「They must know that this story has finally reached this point.」

Only when I reached this high sky did it begin to sink in.

Even though so many Constellations had fallen, the sky was still studded with countless Constellations.

[All the Dokkaebis of the 'Management Bureau' exceptionally acknowledge your 'rank'.]

But now, only a few twinkle above me.

[The <Star Stream> announces your 'rank'.]

I slowly turned around and saw the Fears staring up at me. Forgotten things, barely able to record their own sanctity in the fleeting moments, howled and prostrated themselves before me.

[Your rank is 'Mythical'.]

With a feeling like a hazy veil was being lifted, the message came.

[You have earned the right to witness the world's ■■.]

953 Episode 56 Myth (5)

The Demon King of Salvation scanned the headlines on the newspaper on the table.

『Today's Kim Dokja』.

The newspaper was worn and torn here and there. Nevertheless, it remained faithful to his duty: to tell Kim Dokja's story.

「It's been a long journey.」

Several kkoma Kim Dokja, seeing the sentences neatly appearing on the newspaper, had tears in their eyes. The Demon King of Salvation looked at them for a moment and said,

「(It's not over yet, so don't make a fuss about it.)」

Just because he'd reached mythic status, it didn't mean it was over. The Youngest had never failed to reach the realm of myth in the fights he'd faced.

Furthermore, the Youngest had less time accumulating stories than them, so he was bound to be at a disadvantage in actual combat.

「(We was lucky this time, but...)」

A stage adaptation of「Returnee War」. If even one of the three—the World Tree of Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, and the appearance of Yoo Joonghyuk—had not been in place, the Youngest would have lost his life in this fight.

Furthermore, the help of the recorders who actively protected the Youngest's records was also significant.

[The Recorder of Fate, 'Unchanging One', assists the 'Rewriter of Eternity' in his records.]

One was the assistant Recorder the Youngest had taken in: And—

[The Recorder wearing a scale mask assists the 'Rewriter of Eternity' in his records.]

The other... seemed to be one of the Recorders the Youngest had met in the 'Record Archives'. He was likely nicknamed 'Moral'.

「Whenever you need it, call upon this 'Moral', just once. I will assist you.」

Even then, he had shown favor towards the Youngest, so it was not surprising that he assisted in this record. In any case, it could only be explained by good luck.

「Come to think of it, Kim Dokja's stories were always like that.」

A scenario where even the slightest deviation would lead to certain death. The Demon King of Salvation finally recalled the time when he had finally become a 'Myth-grade Constellation'.

「(You don't even remember, do you?)」

Turning his head at the reprimand, he saw the face of the Second, who had been sleeping, his blanket rolled up like a mat.

The Demon King of Salvation chuckled at the Second, who blinked absentmindedly, and gestured to the newspaper with his chin.

「(The Youngest has finally reached the Myth-grade.)」

As if he already knew, the Second Kim Dokja—the King of Fear stretched slightly and stood up. The Second, who had flown in with his fairy-like wings fluttering, examined the words the Youngest had left behind.

「In the shadow of the World Tree, the Outer Gods roared. As if searching for their roots, their history, their lost origins.」

The Outer Gods who had accompanied the second in the Fear Realm were there. The forgotten beings of the <Star Stream>. The Fears, having lost their 'Time Fault' and their hiding places, finally exhaled in the Youngest's shadow.

「(I'm sure that's not the Fear Realm you dreamed of, but...)」

The King of Fear read and reread the sentences on the newspaper with unreadable eyes. He discerned the blank space beyond those sentences—the breath of the Outer Gods nestled within the shadow of the vast World Tree. Only then did he exhale softly and say,

「(They aren't forgotten.)」

The Fear Realm was destroyed, and the world the King of Fear dreamed of vanished. Yet, the Outer Gods were still recorded in this story.

「This was the Youngest's story.」

A story too eloquent to be described. The Youngest's story was neither a narrative of 'Salvation' nor a narrative of 'Fear'.

However, it could be expressed this way. If someone had written everything in this world, yet something remained unwritten—the Youngest would be the one to write that 'leftover blank space'.

Both Kim Dokjas knew this well, and therefore, they understood that the Youngest would inevitably be the protagonist of this worldline.

「(This is where it's going to get really tough. Now that the Youngest's status has been revealed, the other Constellations won't sit still.)」

The Youngest had grown stronger, but he was still practically alone. Meanwhile, the other Constellations already possessed immense power.

「(Not only Mythical Constellations, but even Outer Gods from distant worldlines would have noticed the Youngest's presence.)」

The birth of the 'World Tree' was an equally momentous event. A story that embodies the birth and destruction of a world. The Youngest had seized the power of the World Tree, and those who would surely target him would emerge. And most of all...

「(Now he'll make his move, too.)」

The King of Fear nodded slightly at the words of the Demon King of Salvation. At that moment, every Kim Dokja present was thinking of a single Kim Dokja.

「Snowfield Kim Dokja.」

The mastermind behind this world's story, the Demon King of Salvation, and the King of Fear, had both encountered him before.

「(One strange thing.)」

The King of Fear spoke, and the Demon King of Salvation nodded, as if already knowing.

「(Why didn't he intervene in the Youngest's case?)」

Given the circumstances surrounding the intervention of Constellations like Agni, Vidar, and Apollo in the 'New Murim District', 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' was clearly aware of the 'World Tree Scenario'. Nevertheless, he remained hidden until the scenario concluded.

「(Perhaps he needs the Youngest, too.)」

The Demon King of Salvation thought. If 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' hadn't intervened in this case, it meant this was the case he wanted.

「Snowfield Kim Dokja wants the Youngest to become stronger.」

The reason wasn't clear.

Perhaps the Youngest's presence was necessary for the ending he desired.

The King of Fear, who had been contemplating something nearby, suddenly spoke.

「(Perhaps that's not the only reason.)」

The Demon King of Salvation turned to the Second as if he asking what he meant, then flinched and realized something. All eyes of the other Kim Dokjas, excluding the King of Fear, were focused on the incident.

「All Kim Dokjas were focused on the incident.」

It made sense. This incident was the largest the Youngest had ever caused.

But here's the problem.

「(All Kim Dokjas.)」

The Demon King of Salvation, his face flushed, pulled out his smartphone. He immediately pressed the '3' button.

「The Third Kim Dokja must have witnessed this incident, too.」

He hadn't expected the Third to answer. He was always in airplane mode, and he knew he'd hear a message saying the phone was off or in a no-call area.

Nevertheless, the Demon King of Salvation dialed the number with a strange premonition, and to his surprise—

The ringtone began ringing.

Someone answered the phone with a 'call', followed by an unidentifiable noise and a scream.

「(Hello? Is this the Third?)」

And—the voice of the man who once answered the phone in place of the Third.

—...We...need...

Continuing with a distorted voice, the call ended. But that was all it took for the Demon King of Salvation to realize what had happened to the Third. Glaring at the disconnected call, the Demon King of Salvation slowly raised his head, his expression tinged with faint anger.

「(That bastard has discovered the coordinates of the 'Third'.)」

---

[The 'Destruction Scenario' is currently in progress.]

I stared blankly at the message that was repeatedly echoing through the air.

Even after the main and sub-scenarios had concluded, the message of the 'Destruction Scenario' continued unabated.

Namgung Myung, who was also looking up at the message, muttered,

"Maybe it wouldn’t be bad to continue living in longing."

Namgung happily told everyone about it, as if he had gained some profound insight from the message. As if this was the moment they had all been waiting for.

"Our Murim was liberated from the Constellations by facing destruction."

Three days had passed since the 70th main scenario ended. During those three days, I practiced handling the 'World Tree' and observed the status of the new 'Giant Tale'.

I also checked the scenario rewards. Some of them would be of great help in future scenarios.

However, I deliberately left some of them unopened. I decided to save them just in case, in case something happened in the higher-level scenarios.

「People no longer used D-Coins.」

The martial artists who had relied on D-Coins now seemed to be struggling to regain their former Murim.

They voluntarily returned their D-Coins, and I used them to grow the World Tree.

「Watching the people rejoicing at the liberation of Murim, Kim Dokja felt a strange sense of alienation.」

Perhaps the reason I didn't feel any particular emotional turmoil while watching them was because I had now become a being slightly different from an ordinary human. I briefly contemplated the round table that seemed like a hallucination the moment I ascended to the myth-grade, then turned to Namgung Myung and said,

"What happened to Sein-ssi?"

"Ah, Divine Doctor is waiting."

With Namgung Myung's help, We were able to invite Divine Doctor, who was in another scenario area.

As we headed straight to the Namgung family's manor, Divine Doctor's face came out to greet us.

"It's been a while."

Divine Doctor smiled brightly, as if remembering me. I had been indebted to him before entering the Fear Realm.

After a brief handshake, I asked about Kyung Sein.

"How is she?"

"Unfortunately..."

As expected. Even Divine Doctor's power seemed too much to restore Kyung Sein. I went straight into the manor to examine her condition.

「Kyung Sein's incarnation body was in a truly dire state.」

Her incarnation body was pierced by the arrows of the Constellations, pierced with holes. The malice of the Constellations stained Kyung Sein's entire body black.

"Dokja-ssi."

Kyung Sein slowly opened her eyes and looked at me.

"I'm fine. Don't try any harder."

"..."

"You know it's not just a wound, right?"

Since we first met, Kyung Sein's 'soul' had been damaged.

It was as if a part of her soul had been ripped away by someone. Perhaps it was a scar left when 'Kim Dokja fragment' she possessed was taken.

And who could possibly do something like this...

"Is that from Snowfield Kim Dokja?"

Kyung Sein shook her head weakly at my question.

"No."

Kyung Sein took a deep breath and spoke in a straight, precise voice.

"I gave it to him."

She gave it to him. Kyung Sein said.

"Dokja-ssi, I think you're right, but I don't think he's wrong either."

I knew what Kyung Sein meant.

"But can that be the reason your reading should end?"

Kyung Sein coughed.

With each successive attack, her incarnation body gradually opened. At this rate, her incarnation body would dissipate in less than thirty minutes.

I had no intention of leaving it like that.

[Preparing exclusive skill, 'Special Preservation'!]

I had summoned Divine Doctor to buy three days of time in order to use this skill I learned from Han Sooyoung in the 1,863rd round.

"Don't worry, Sein-ssi."

[Special Preservation.]

A skill that sealed a near-death incarnation body, delaying its demise.

"You will not die."

It wasn't my favorite method. Nevertheless, this method, used by Han Sooyoung in the 1,863rd round, was the only way to prevent her death.

After hearing my brief explanation, Kyung Sein asked,

"If you use that, my time will stop, right?"

"Yes."

"No."

I hadn't expected Kyung Sein to say that, so I was taken aback. Kyung Sein lightly grabbed my hand and continued.

"Then I won't be able to read this story."

I was about to ask what she meant. For a moment, I felt Kyung Sein's grip tighten. A faint, yet powerful emotion flickered across her retina.

"I heard a story about a library."

"…"

"A library only the 'Kim Dokjas' who entrusted their lives to you can enter."

I stared blankly down at her. Who on earth had told her that?

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', chuckles.]

The culprit was clear.

「Perhaps some reading doesn't end even after the reader dies.」

Kyung Sein smiled at me.

"I want to enter that library too."

954 Episode 56 Myth (6)

My stomach churned. Kyung Sein's body was gradually becoming transparent. The stories floating above her surface were speaking to me.

「I want to read.」

What kind of feeling is it to want to read something? Where does the desire to sacrifice one's life, to expend one's entire existence, to understand someone else, come from?

「Just because I was born into this world.」

Reading something, being moved, rejoicing, or feeling sorrow, spending a lifetime. I still don't understand why this series of actions exists and continues.

But humans are born that way, and Kyung Sein and I will live that way too.

"Understood."

Kyung Sein's face brightened at my words. In the dispersing light, Kyung Sein's stories began to slowly be absorbed into me.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', begins to feast.]

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', activates!]

"Thank you, Dokja-ssi."

Stories flowed from Kyung Sein's body as she slowly closed her eyes.

「The place where I first met that person was Geumho Station.」

It wasn't as old as the legends of the Constellations, but it was a legend nonetheless.

「The person who existed only in novels was truly before my eyes.」

The door to the manor opened abruptly, and someone entered. She knew who it was without even turning around.

"Sein-ah."

Jung Heewon, her voice trembling, sat down and looked down at Kyung Sein as she disappeared.

Kyung Sein couldn't see Jung Heewon. However, her story continued to speak.

「I learned from that person's tenacity. I learned how to overcome hardships, and how not to despair easily.」

Jung Heewon grabbed Kyung Sein's wrist with a trembling hand. Kyung Sein's scattered story spread like sunlight across the back of Jung Heewon's hand.

「I learned not to give up hope even after death.」

Scenes flowed through the margins between sentences.

「I learned how to willingly hold the hand that was extended. Even if the fingertips were as sharp as blades, I learned the courage to grasp them.」

The history of Jung Heewon's life, a history built layer by layer to save others—and herself—was there.

「That was her reading.」

Kyung Sein desperately imagined someone who existed only as a sentence. With each sentence of Jung Heewon's story, Kyung Sein's life expanded.

「"I am Jung Heewon."」

Some people can live simply by loving someone. They gain strength from it and overcome life. Perhaps that is their myth. And the manifestation of that myth was right before my eyes.

[Story, 'Heewon' dwells within you.]

The story that finished its storytelling took hold within me.

Kyung Sein had probably arrived at the library in the [Fourth Wall]. There, with an innocent expression, she would be reading this story with the other Kim Dokjas.

"Dokja-ssi."

「Jung Heewon called me. The moment I turned to look at her, my heart felt tight, as if it had been clogged. Perhaps it was because I had acquired Kyung Sein's story.」

"Sein-ah."

The story, which had drifted like a reverberation, lingered in the corners of my heart and then disappeared.

Jung Heewon reached out, as if groping for the air. I looked at her hand, lost in its direction, and replied,

"Sein-ssi will continue reading this story."

I couldn't tell whether Jung Heewon would understand. Nevertheless, I had to say it. Jung Heewon heard it, and answered me in her own language.

"I will take revenge."

A strong grudge flickered in Jung Heewon's eyes as she raised her head.

"This world that has brought Sein to this—I will end it."

I started to say something, then simply nodded.

---

I shook my head at the words of Namgung Myung and the Murim people.

"There's no need for that."

From this point on, this wasn't a scenario that ordinary incarnations could enter. That's precisely why the special scenario jump method called 'Ascension' existed.

"In higher scenarios, the pressure of the incarnation body itself is different."

Stories also have gravity. The larger the scenario area dominated by the incarnation, the greater the pressure on the incarnation body.

If Namgung Myung, without the [Fourth Wall], had mistakenly entered a higher scenario, he could have lost the pressure and his head could have exploded.

"I know it's a burden."

Nevertheless, Namgung Myung and the Murim people's resolve remained firm.

"Still, there might be a way."

With those words, Namgung Myung turned toward the World Tree.

[Natural Disaster-level Fear, 'Impossible Justice', is looking at you.]

The essence of the World Tree, left behind by Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, had been assimilated into my shadow, but the form of the World Tree still remained on this 'New Murim District'.

Namgung Myung stared into the interior of the form and said,

"Yesterday dawn, I discovered a peculiar place inside the World Tree."

A peculiar place. The moment I heard the story, I somehow knew what Namgung Myung would say.

"There was a place inside the bushes where time flowed slowly."

After the fall of the Fear Realm, the Murim people lost the way to enter the 'Time Fault'. The training ground where they could cultivate within the overwhelming density of time and level up their realms had disappeared.

But within that World Tree, a place to replace that 'Time Fault' existed.

I looked at Namgung Myung, strangely aroused, and said,

"You know it's reckless, right?"

"The Murim people are reckless people by nature."

Namgung Myung was now talking about becoming a Transcendent. I tried to offer Namgung Myung some advice, but stopped short. He seemed to already know what I was talking about.

"I will definitely come to help."

Namgung Myung's words were true.

Those who dedicated their lives to ascending to a higher realm, to attaining the ultimate in martial arts through sheer effort. They were Murim's people.

As I raised my head, I suddenly felt as if a vast forest was looking down on me.

[The giant story, 'Murim', is watching you.]

A forest thick with mortal history—a forest that has long continued the story of this land.

As I gazed at that forest, it occurred to me that perhaps the transformation of the Murim people was also a legacy passed down by Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

"Before you leave, Divine Doctor has asked you to stop by briefly."

I nodded briefly and headed straight to the manor where Divine Doctor was.

The manor of the Namgung family. As I entered the manor, I saw the Namgung family, reunited around Namgung Myung, rebuilding the manor here and there.

I remembered briefly staying here with Yoo Joonghyuk during my first visit to Murim.

"Are you there?"

At my message, Divine Doctor came out. Perhaps because he had been nursing all night for the past few days, his complexion was pale.

"The Salvation Leader hasn't woken up yet."

Divine Doctor was in charge of Nirvana's treatment.

"But he's a strong incarnation, so he'll recover quickly. It's not like his core was damaged."

I owed Nirvana a debt. If I hadn't met him in this scenario, things would have been difficult.

"But are you really planning to move up to the higher scenarios?"

"Yes."

"It wouldn't be a bad life to just stay here and act as king. Everyone would follow you."

"That's not why I came all the way here."

Divine Doctor looked at me intently, then asked with a faint smile,

"You've become a Recorder of Fear, haven't you?"

As expected, Divine Doctor had noticed.

I nodded, and Divine Doctor asked again,

"Do you understand the stories better now?"

When I first met Divine Doctor, he had said something like this to me:

「"To control the stories, you must know them well. How much do you know about them?"」

I faithfully followed Divine Doctor's advice back then. To look into them to understand them, to think about them constantly, even when I was sleeping or doing other things.

"A little."

"Hmm, is that all?"

The moment those words left my lips, the stories stirred within me.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', is looking at you.]

As I absorbed more Kim Dokja fragments, as 'Heir' grew stronger, a certain image emerged within me.

A man in a white coat with a pleasant smile. He liked to look up at the sky, but also liked to lower his head to read. As the image became clearer, something inside me felt like it was fading.

I called the man's name in my head over and over again. And as I did, the name seemed to draw closer to me. Closer, closer, closer, until finally, it erased my own name and replaced it with—

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', powerfully activated!]

When I came to my senses, Divine Doctor was staring at me with startled eyes.

"I'm sorry. I was distracted for a moment."

Divine Doctor lightly squeezed my shoulder as if it were all right.

"Some stories, the longer you look into them, the more you lose track of whether you're looking into them, or they're looking into you."

"Still, I can't stop looking, can I?"

"You must not stop."

"Are you living like that, too?"

Instead of answering, Divine Doctor simply chuckled. Then he raised his head and gazed at the sky.

"Now, you can see the secrets of the heavens, too."

The secrets of the heavens. Perhaps that's how Divine Doctor described the vast flow of stories surrounding this world.

"The atmosphere is ominous. The sky is too quiet."

I agreed.

After the conclusion of the 'New Murim District' scenario, all the Constellations observing the scenario area disappeared.

As if someone had artificially carved out this world.

I tried calling Bihyung, wondering if something had happened to the <Star Stream>, but he didn't respond.

"It must mean the situation in the higher scenario is dire. They say 'Ragnarok' is imminent."

"Maybe that's not the problem. I think—"

Divine Doctor's words trailed off. Before they could continue, someone burst through the gates of the manor.

It was Namgung Myung, who had left to investigate the area near the Ascension Hall earlier. Judging by his expression, something unusual had occurred.

"Benefactor, we have a problem."

---

The main scenario of the 'New Murim District' was originally completed when an 'Ascendant' of a certain rank ascended to a higher-level scenario.

Each corporation actively supported these ascendants and welcomed them as allies in the higher-level scenarios.

In other words, this 'New Murim District' was a kind of barracks where the Nebulae would develop their next generation of forces.

[Your corporation is '■■■ Company'.]

[You have met all the requirements for Ascension.]

To be precise, that was the case until I arrived here.

"They say all the Orbital Elevators required for 'Ascension' have been removed from the higher-level scenario area."

I knew that the Orbital Elevators had once been destroyed by Mad Sword Emperor Jung Heewon. But this time, the orbital elevator infrastructure itself had been demolished in the upper scenario area.

"Is there no other way to ascend?"

"There is a way, but..."

According to Namgung Myung, the Nebulae operating each company can summon ascenders from the 'New Murim District' using their own probability.

"Normally, if you recall the name of your company in the Ascension Hall, you'll receive a response from the upper scenario area..."

My company is '■■■ Company'.

"No response, right?"

"Yes."

That must mean that those affiliated with my company in the upper scenario area aren't looking for me. Thinking about that, I felt a slightly ominous feeling.

"I'll just go to another area and find a way to reach the upper scenario area."

"That's also difficult right now. The portals leading to the old Fear Realm and the passages connecting to other scenario areas are all cut off."

For a moment, I couldn't believe my ears.

"All the passages are cut off?"

"Yes. As if someone had intervened... In effect, the 'New Murim District' is now isolated from the <Star Stream>."

It was then that I realized what was happening.

「Kicking the ladder away.」

The moment I ascended to the 'mythical' level, the Constellations in the higher scenarios must have sensed my status.

And some Constellations probably didn't want me to ascend to the same scenario as them.

Jung Heewon, who was watching from the sidelines, growled.

"You're saying they're going to prevent him from even ascending."

"Benefactor, I'm sorry, but if this is the case, there's only one way out."

I knew what Namgung Myung was trying to say.

「If I change my company, I can advance to a higher scenario.」

The Constellations were telling me now.

If I want to advance to the next scenario, choose their 'Nebula'.

Of course, I had no intention of playing along with them.

"No, there's a way to advance to the next scenario without changing my company."

"Huh?"

"Because there's still a passageway connected to the outside world."

"What—"

I pushed Namgung Myung's doubts aside and continued walking. Namgung Myung suddenly muttered, realizing where I was going.

"Benefactor, you can't possibly…"

"That's right."

There was just one 'passageway' that even those powerful Constellations couldn't stop. That was because it was beyond the power of the Constellations.

"Ah."

As I entered the auction house, Jung Heewon sighed, as if she had realized my intentions. Where my steps had stopped, there was a giant scale.

「Settlement scale.」

The scale occupied the center of the Auction House. The 'settlement system' of this 'scale' was clearly connected to the 'outside'.

「It's a form of Fear, but it's a Fear that isn't under the influence of the 'King of Fear'.」

As I stared at the scale, I felt its eyes also staring at me.

「I thought I knew who the owner of this 'scale' was.」

A race capable of interfering with the scenario and freely borrowing and using the power of the 'other world'.

「The being who turned the ending of the 41st round into hell.」

"I request a deal."

At my call, I felt the being beyond the scales gaze at me.

"The Demon of the Horizon, no—"

Perhaps, this was the more fitting name for him.

"The Wenny King."

955 Episode 56 Myth (7)

---

The exact nature of the 'Wenny King' is not detailed in either the 'Way of Survival' or 'ORV'.

However, several clues about him clearly exist.

The first time the creature appeared in the main story was when Shin Yoosung of the 41st round emerged.

More precisely, when Kim Dokja possessed Shin Yoosung of the 41st round.

But its true identity was not simply that of a 'Constellation with a peculiar taste'.

「Anna Croft's Contract Holder.」

The entity that effectively brought 'Prophet Anna Croft' into being.

This very creature was the sponsor behind her receiving the 'Eyes of the Great Demon' and securing the backing of <Asgard>.

「The one who alters his own existence.」

That was one of his modifiers.

<Asgard>'s Star - The God of Mischief, 'Loki'.

But his true identity wasn't Loki. He was one who had wandered the <Star Stream>, endlessly shifting his existence, a powerhouse formidable enough to even check that 'Dokkaebi King'.

「[You've never heard this story, have you? It's not even preserved as stories now. Only the 'Apocalypse Dragon', driven mad by the repeated cycles of time, might barely remember it.]」

An existence as ancient as the primordial calamity, the 'Apocalypse Dragon'.

"You won't answer?"

I looked at the 'Settlement Scale' and spoke again.

「I have no certainty that the being beyond this is the 'Wenny King'.」

Nevertheless, several pieces of circumstantial evidence pointed to him.

「An entity capable of interfering with the scenario.」

「An entity that is not merely a Constellation.」

「An entity that can wield the ancient 'Fear' of another world and enjoys 'deals'.」

Considering these various conditions, several figures came to mind. But when imagining an entity capable of devising a treacherous device like the 'Settlement Scale', the category narrowed drastically.

"Seems you're not curious about what lies beyond the Final Wall?"

No sooner had my words fallen than a sinister aura stirred beyond the 'Settlement Scale'.

"That's why you're gathering the 'Kim Dokja Fragments'. isn't it? To peek beyond the wall. Constantly shifting your identity to interfere with the scenario, even antagonizing the Management Bureau—"

A thick, bloody stench began permeating the air. From within the scales came a sound like flesh being crushed. Realizing something was terribly wrong, Jung Heewon grabbed my sleeve.

"Dokja-ssi."

The moment I inhaled to respond, the world spun upside down. It felt like every piece of common sense I knew was being smashed into the ground. I was connected to something.

[The owner of the 'Settlement Scale' is watching you.]

Come to think of it, I'd had a similar experience when I'd caught a strand of hair in the scales before.

If my memory served me right, back then I'd definitely made brief contact with the 'Oldest Liberator'.

The 'Oldest Liberator' was the final form of Jecheon Daeseong, a Constellation that didn't exist in this worldline.

In other words, this 'scale' was also connected to the outside of this worldline.

「Someone's universe was there.」

A floating thread of truth whirled toward me

「Teeth-bite-teeth-bite-teeth-bite-teeth-bite」

I recognized that story immediately. It was the story of the fear I had tamed—the 'Tooth Fin'.

Why is this story here?

As I tilted my head in puzzlement, I spotted a small tag beneath the story.

「500,000 coins.」

500,000 coins?

Looking closer, I saw price tags attached to each story floating nearby.

「880,000 coins.」

「1,000,000 coins.」

「4,800,000 coins.」

Many stories were unfamiliar to me, but one installation stood out.

「"■■ah. We can ■■ the world."」

I stared blankly at the story's price tag.

「Valuing...」

Had this story not been priced yet?

As I bowed my head, I felt the threads forming my hands twitch.

「Every story in the world has a 'price' assigned to it.」

This seemed to be the law governing the 'space' within this scale.

In that instant, I suddenly wondered.

「Then how much value would 'I' be assigned here?」

As if reading my inner thoughts, I heard the sound of the scale's beam shifting in the darkness. Clang. The sound rang out. It rippled out like a bird's cry, deepening the folds across the entire universe.

And clang.

It sounded like a weight dropping onto a giant disc. Each time the sound echoed, the surrounding sacred flames flickered uneasily.

Thud. Thud.

The intervals between the sounds grew shorter and shorter.

Thud. Thud. Thud. Thud. Thud. Thud. Thud. Thud. Thud—

Soon, it swallowed every other sound in the vicinity.

The sound of something breaking. The moment when all of spacetime tilted and twisted.

[Enough.]

A mantra echoed through the darkness. It was a voice so unpleasant and cold it felt like it was tearing through the inner walls of my heart.

I heard someone ticking off a scale, like an alarm clock.

[Those who collect discarded dreams all have peculiar thoughts.]

In the silence that enveloped the area, the owner of the scale gazed at me with gleaming eyes.

[So, did you bring something more valuable than 'hair' this time?]

The moment I saw his face, several faces came to mind at once.

He looked like Ji Eunyu, or Dansu ahjussi. Or like Killer King, or like Yerin-ssi. Upon closer inspection, he resembled Kyung Sein.

And...

He also resembled me.

Or perhaps he wasn't any of them. For a moment, I realized something.

「The owners of those faces have all brought 'Fear' to the 'Settlement Scale' and appraised it.」

The people I confirmed were all readers whose names had been on the 'Appraisal Rankings'.

[Hmm, if it's difficult to appraise with the 'Settlement Scale', then that's a bit problematic...]

The faces that had seemed like different people in real time had become fixed.

It was Kim Dokja's face.

However, even though they had the same Kim Dokja face, I could now tell them all apart.

Looking at Kim Dokja's face, smiling brightly before my eyes, I recalled the record at the top of the 'All-Time Appraisal Rankings'.

| |
|---|
| 1st Place, Unidentified Fingernail Fragment, 10,000 D Coins, ■■■. |

As expected, the owner of that ranking seemed to be 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'. The 'Wenny King' before me had already met and traded with 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

[Since there's no answer, perhaps you've come to sell yourself? If so, you'll need to prepare a larger scale. The scales here aren't suited to your weight—]

"I have no intention of selling myself."

I quickly added.

"I've come to make a deal with you."

At the word 'deal', the Wenny King smiled inexplicably.

[Yes, what have you come to trade, fragment of the 'Oldest Dream'?]

I wasn't particularly surprised or flustered. There was no way a being of the caliber of the 'Wenny King' wouldn't know who I was.

The 'Eyes of the Great Demon' glowed crimson.

In his eyes, the past and future of this worldline trembled.

"What I'm dealing with is this."

I looked into his eyes and said,

"Your future."

[My future?]

The Wenny King tilted his head for a moment, then smiled with amusement.

[You know my 'future'?]

I recalled the final scenario of the main story.

In the final scenario, the Wenny King reached beyond the 'Final Wall' with the Dokkaebi King.

I clearly remembered his end.

"You."

He was a superhuman, beyond the norm, but he wasn't the main character of the story. Because of this, I could only understand a fraction of his records. But even in those few, I could clearly sense the emotion.

「A very ancient loneliness.」

The loneliness of someone who has lived for an excruciatingly long time in this vast universe.

"Aren't you living your whole life to glimpse beyond the 'Final Wall'?"

Constellations that have explored all the world's stories and still crave stories. Anyone who has gazed into the universe composed of such Constellations for a long time will inevitably ask the following question:

"Why do stories exist in this world?"

The Wenny King answered in a voice that revealed no particular agitation.

[That's a huge question. There is no 'being' who can answer such a question.]

I nodded. I, too, don't know the answer to that question.

"But there are things I can tell you. For example."

I continued, examining the countless clusters of stories floating in the darkness—the price tags.

"What lies beyond the 'wall' you once knew, and what became of you who saw it?"

This was a gamble for me, too. If I revealed this truth to the Wenny King, there was no guarantee that the very foundation of this universe wouldn't be distorted again.

"Aren't you curious?"

Still, I had no other means of bargaining. The Wenny King was one of the most powerful beings in this worldline, and there were probably few stories he didn't know. This knowledge I possessed was the only one he might have missed, even if only a little.

The Wenny King paused for a moment, as if trying to grasp my meaning. He then gazed at the tangled stories floating in the air and opened his mouth.

[Your brother also came to me.]

I nodded.

The brother he was talking about must have meant 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

He was Kim Dokja, who had come closer than anyone else to the 'Oldest Dream'.

If he had visited here, he must have come to trade something.

"What did he trade?"

I thought he might not tell me, but the Wenny King answered with an inscrutable smile.

[He asked me for one thing in exchange for his story. It was quite amusing to me. No one had ever asked me that before.]

"What was his request?"

[He asked me to make him a mere incarnation of the 'Scenario' in exchange for a portion of his story.]

Goosebumps slowly rose from the tips of my toes.

I had a vague idea of what 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' had been pursuing during the past eight years while I was gone.

[So I asked. You've already become closer to the being you desire. So why do you want to go back to the beginning?]

The story, floating in the air, spoke for me, the reason why Kim Dokja, who had become closer to the 'real Kim Dokja', returned to his incarnation body and tackled the scenarios at the end of the world.

I knew it, he knew it, and perhaps every other Kim Dokja knew it too.

「"Because I think it'll be more fun."」

A piece of floating fingernail—perhaps that piece was proof of Snowfield Kim Dokja's deal with the Wenny King.

I checked the price tag attached to the fingernail.

「Stop measuring value.」

The inability to measure value and the cessation of value measurement were completely different concepts.

In a voice as clear as the distinct difference between the two, the Wenny King spoke to me.

[Unfortunately, I have no interest in my own future.]

"Is it because it's more fun not to know?"

The Wenny King laughed without answering.

I reviewed the plan in my head. I had considered the possibility of the Wenny King reacting in this way. The only question was this: Is there another 'story' about me that the Wenny King might be curious about?

[But I am interested in the future you will see.]

Suddenly, I raised my head and flinched.

Since when had it been? The distance between me and the Wenny King had become incredibly close.

His 'Eyes of the Great Demon' shone brightly before my very eyes.

「Future Vision, the vision of this world's future.」

I wondered. Anna Croft couldn't read my future. So, what about the Wenny King? Will he see the end of this world I'm about to face?

[You, perhaps.]

For the first time, a faint tremble filled the voice of the Wenny King, who gazed at me with swirling eyes.

[Have you ever heard of a 'very large baby'?]

---

[CLICK TO READ CHAPTER COMMENTS]

956 Episode 56 Myth (8)

---

The moment I heard that question, I remembered what had happened with Han Sooyoung in the 1,863rd round.

「"There's definitely a 'huge baby' somewhere in this universe."」

Han Sooyoung said. She believed there was a 'huge baby' in this universe, and that baby, she believed, was the source of all these stories.

I stared straight into the Wenny King's eyes and asked,

"You're curious about the origin of this universe, aren't you?"

For the first time, a hint of emotion flashed across the Wenny King's face. A flicker of excitement flickered deep within his eyes.

[As expected, you knew.]

Despite living for so long, the King still loved stories.

[Did you hear it from her?]

Perhaps the Wenny King had already guessed I'd heard this information from Han Sooyoung.

I paused for a moment, then nodded and continued.

"That's right."

[That's right. At this point, she's probably the only one who's reached the truth of the universe.]

"You have that same expression on your face, don't you?"

[What do I look like?]

Like a child desperate to solve a question right now.

"You look envious."

The Wenny King smiled.

[Me? Do I really look like that?]

Looking at him again, he seemed less like a child desperate to solve a question and more like an old man who'd never wanted to know the answer.

Looking at that expression, I thought about the 'story' that would determine the end of this world—the ultimate dream of all Constellations.

「A Single Story.」

Completing a Single Story, dedicating it to the [Final Wall], and creating an immortal record.

The Wenny King before me, and the other Mythical Constellations, are probably living towards that conclusion.

But as that conclusion draws near, they will feel a complex ambivalence.

「The desire to know the end of a story, and the wish that it would continue forever.」

The fact that even the Oldest Beings in this world couldn't escape such instincts struck me as quite tragicomic.

[Did she say anything else?]

"I think I should ask that."

I shook my head and quickly added,

"What exactly is this 'huge baby' you speak of?"

The universe of the 'TWSA' I'm talking about began in the mind of a boy. Han Sooyoung wrote that, and I believe it too.

But Han Sooyoung, in the 1,863rd round, didn't think so.

「"Do you really think a mere boy's imagination could shape the universe?"」

Even if Kim Dokja, as a child, provided that 'imagination', the being who 'realized' it wasn't Kim Dokja. That was why Han Sooyoung proposed the concept of a 'huge baby'.

[You're foolish. You could have used that as an excuse to make a deal with me.]

"Don't you already know that I don't know?"

The Wenny King nodded, seemingly satisfied with my answer, and asked back.

[Aren't you afraid of knowing the truth of the world?]

The Wenny King looked up at the sky. Perhaps not, but in this <Star Stream>, there are few Constellations higher in the sky than that one.

I didn't know what world the Wenny King was gazing at, or what he felt as he took his last breath in the main story.

All I could see was the price tags of the stories piled high like snow on his history.

[That everything we knew was just a part of the Great Being's dream—a ridiculous stage he devised. Isn't it truly terrifying to realize that we possess no innate value or meaning?]

Listening to those words, I felt as if I could vaguely understand why he put a price tag on stories. I thought for a moment and then answered.

"I'm not afraid. I always think about it."

I recalled the world I'd lived in for a long time. Memories gradually fading as I entered the <Star Stream>. In that world, where scenarios, Dokkaebis, and Constellations were all fictional stories, people were still part of a stage someone had created.

On stage, people played the roles of good, bad, or the audience. From their respective positions, they argued, made mistakes, killed, or pointed fingers at someone.

They called the events on stage an inevitable reality, blamed the actors involved in the tragedy, and at the same time, indulged in it. They fueled their lives with it.

Thinking about this, I began to understand why Kim Dokja was so able to adapt to the world of 'Ways of Survival'.

Perhaps Kim Dokja survived in this world not simply because he was a reader of 'Ways of Survival' or because he was a master of the 'Fourth Wall'.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', nods at your thought.]

He was able to adapt so well to this world because he had already lived in the 'ruined world' before coming here.

The Wenny King tilted his head in confusion, perhaps sensing some sentiment in my response.

[Your brother said something similar.]

"What did he say?"

[He said there was nothing to fear, since it was an ending he had seen countless times.]

An ending he had seen countless times.

I couldn't fully fathom the feelings of Snowfield Kim Dokja, who had relayed those words.

[Even I don't know much about the huge baby.]

After a short pause, the Wenny King began to speak.

[I only guess that its existence exists beyond the distant wall, in the 'deep sea of ■■■', where the first records were created.]

The deep sea of ■■■.

It was a story I had once heard from the 'Recorders of Fear'.

"Why are you so readily sharing that information with me?"

He, who placed a price on every story, couldn't help but value the information I shared. So, the reason the 'Wenny King' was sharing it with me now was clear.

He believed I would reach that place someday.

With a dark smile on his face, the Wenny King nodded and said,

[If you ever visit that place, show me the scenery. That's the condition of my deal with you.]

"Do you know why I came to negotiate?"

[Didn't you come here to ask for a transfer to a higher scenario?]

As expected, engaging in a power struggle with a being of the Wenny King's caliber wasn't easy.

[The Constellations might complain, but I can send you and one of your companions to the higher levels with my own strength.]

He even knew exactly what I needed.

I smiled bitterly at the Wenny King and asked,

"Thank you. But did you ask my brother the same thing?"

The Wenny King gave a sly smile instead of answering. He probably meant he couldn't tell me that much.

[Are you willing to make a deal?]

"I will."

[Then let's get started right away. The timing isn't bad.]

The timing isn't bad?

[The Constellations and the Bureau were just distracted.]

I pictured the empty skies of the 'New Murim District'. Apparently, the sudden disappearance of the Constellations and the Bureau wasn't a coincidence.

"Is something happening in the higher-level scenario?"

[You have a knack for thievery. If you want to know that, you should leave something more significant than a hair.]

"Should I at least clip my fingernails?"

[If possible, how about pulling them out whole?]

We glared at each other, eyes narrowed, then simultaneously relaxed our expressions. Both he and I knew this deal couldn't go through.

[Just kidding.]

"I was joking, too."

I already felt uneasy about giving him hair, and I had no intention of giving him fingernails.

Licking his lips, the Wenny King waved his finger in the air, and a portal began to swirl and form. As I approached the portal, the Wenny King spoke, as if he'd forgotten.

[Oh, I almost forgot. I have a gift for you.]

"I'd rather not. Gifts like that usually end badly."

[Your brother gave it to me.]

I turned around and saw the Wenny King smiling at me, as if he'd expected me to. A small piece was spinning like a top at his fingertips. Just a glimpse from afar was enough for me to realize what it was.

「A fragment of a fingernail left behind by 'Snowfield Snowfield Kim Dokja'.」

The sublime quality of the story felt in the fingernail.

The Wenny King spoke with a hint of regret.

[I recently received this from the recorder recording his stories. He told me to tell him when you come here.]

My brother, too, seemed to have anticipated my search for the 'Wenny King' to advance to a higher scenario.

It wasn't strange.

Just as I was Kim Dokja, so was he. It was only natural that he was thinking what I was thinking.

"If it's a gift from my brother, I should accept it."

The moment I slowly reached out for the nail fragment he handed me, a fragment stirred within my heart.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', growls.]

Heir was wary of that fragment. The closer it got, the clearer the fragments contained within became.

A faint fear rose within me. Snowfield Kim Dokja had left such a story fragment here, even before the final battle of the worldline. His confidence was astonishing, and at the same time, I was curious about the fragments he had left behind, even at the risk of such a loss. The moment I finally read the first sentence of the story, which was right before my eyes,

「That day, in the 41st round, Kim Dokja returned.」

I realized what this story was about.

「"Who… are you?"」

「"Who do you wish me to be?"」

The story was about a protagonist.

「"I am Kim Dokja."」

And it was about the people who knew that protagonist well.

「"From now on, I will lead the scenario."」

I gazed at the rippling story with trembling eyes.

「Before me lay the myth of the past eight years, personally built by Snowfield Kim Dokja.」

Even without reading, emotions seeped through the margins of the sentences. They were the emotions of the people who had created this story together.

Listening to the voice of the Wenny King, I discerned glimpses of those emotions.

[If you don't want it, it's okay not to accept it. However.]

In the midst of the flowing emotions, countless people called out a single name.

「"Kim Dokja."」

People called out his name, rejoicing or mourning.

「"Kim Dokja?"」

They mourned or marveled.

「"Kim Dokja!"」

They sometimes admired him.

「"Kim Dokja..."」

Or they were relieved.

「There, unknown to me, were the eight years of Kim Dokja and his companions.」

The fingertips reaching for the story flinched. It was a first time I hesitated to read anything. Because,

「It seemed like there was nothing for me to write in this story.」

The Wenny King added, as if he found my reaction amusing.

[Your brother said you must have many questions, and that if you open the story, you will find the answers.]

My face was reflected in the Wenny King's red retina. An expression so clear and undeniable, it was impossible to deny.

And so, for the first time, I learned about myself.

[There are stories whose endings are so intriguing yet so terrifying to see.]

I have that expression on my face as I turn the last page of a book.

[So that's how the story is to you, Kim Dokja.]

957 Episode 56 Myth (9)

---

I couldn't answer anything to the Wenny King's question.

All I could do was listen helplessly to the story's trailer, like a prisoner in a cage eating a rationed meal.

「"It’s the Demon King!"」

Only 8 years. During those eight years, my brother accumulated numerous stories.

「"A new Demon King has appeared!"」

In that story, my brother liberated the Demon King of the Demon World.

「"<Gigantomachia> will start soon!"」

「"Fight together!"」

「"Kim Dokja! Kim Dokja!"」

He went through the giant story of <Olympus> and liberated the giants of Tartarus.

「"It is a precursor to the Holy War of Good and Evil."」

「"If this continues, the apocalypse dragon will wake up."」

「"The battle between the demon world and Eden will soon begin. If you don't prepare for everything—"」

It wasn't just that. He killed the 'Seeker of End' group and prevented the outbreak of the Great War of Good and Evil during the Demon World event— 'Blue Witch's Night', which is one of the precursors to the Great War of Good and Evil.

「"Just like you and me, good and evil are just part of a grand story."」

He also personally led the Outer Gods who invaded the Constellations of the nebula and sent them back to the 'Island of the Reincarnation'.

「"Is this really what only one incarnation has accomplished..."」

Those who saw his stories revered or worshiped him. Or there were people who were jealous or in awe.

「"Savior..."」

And in the end, they were overwhelmed by one emotion.

「"He is the savior of the scenarios."」

A story blinked before my eyes. It was a story that deserved to be called an epic.

A being that all the stars and incarnations of this <Star Stream> will envy, having cleared a number of 'giant story scenarios' in just eight years and reached the realm of 'myth'—

My brother has become that kind of person in scenarios over the past eight years.

「But strangely enough, I felt sad about his story.」

The greater the sense of déjà vu felt in the story, the greater the sadness.

Why do I feel sad reading this story?

When I raised my head, the Wenny King was still waiting for me.

[Will you continue reading?]

A story that shines as if asking me to read it in more detail.

Perhaps if I read this story to the end, I will be able to get an important clue about my brother. And by absorbing this story, I will be able to get one step closer to the brother waiting for me in the higher scenario.

Nevertheless, I couldn't readily reach out to the story.

"I."

What would Kim Dokja do. No, as a reader before I am Kim Dokja, I wonder what I want to do with this story.

The light of the story was getting stronger. Finally, seeing how the story couldn't stand it anymore and was about to start its storytelling, I also opened my mouth.

---

It was Jung Heewon who greeted me as I escaped from the residence of the Wenny King.

"Dokja-ssi."

Jung Heewon, who hurriedly ran, held my hand and asked.

"Where on earth have you been? You suddenly disappeared into the scales, and no matter how much I searched, I couldn't find you—"

"You've been waiting a long time, sorry."

Jung Heewon's right hand was fluttering with a golden sword. She looked back at the 'Settlement Scale' and said.

"I was just wondering if I should just destroy it."

Looking at Namgung Myung pouring out cold sweat behind Jung Heewon, it seemed like if I had come back a little later, the scale would have been split in two.

[The story, 'Destruction, Regret, Obsession', concludes its storytelling.]

"Why do you look at me like that?"

"Nothing."

I thought, avoiding Jung Heewon's gaze with a embarrassed face.

「What would Jung Heewon have become in the original 41st round?」

Even though we reunited for the first time in 8 years, we couldn't talk much about small things with Jung Heewon. We just kept each other's backs in the implicit belief that we had the same goal.

With Bicheonhori's consideration, I witnessed part of her life record, but that may not be all of the last eight years she spent.

「I wonder if this person’s life would have been a little better with the story I changed.」

Maybe it's because I went to the residence of the Wenny King. Complex thoughts never stopped. I thought I had done my best so far, but I wasn't sure if the path I had taken was really the right path.

"Who bullied you again?"

"Huh?"

"You look like you've been bullied by someone."

Jung Heewon was looking at me with a serious look. I looked back at her. Over the past eight years, faint scars had formed on her face. They were scars that were hard to spot unless you looked closely.

"Who is it? The Constellations? Olympus? Asgard? Vedas? Who should I beat first?"

"Heewon-ssi."

I'd merely called her name, but Jung Heewon suddenly frowned.

"Why? Are you saying something strange again?"

"Huh?"

"Aren't you in a desperate state, alone, like the tragic male protagonist?"

"..."

"That's right. Like, 'Now, it's really dangerous. We might have to risk our lives.' Will you still go with me?' That's what you're going to ask, right?"

Honestly, it was so direct that I couldn't say anything in response. Perhaps my expression was quite amusing. Jung Heewon's expression softened and she spoke.

"Why are you even asking? You already know the answer. You're just asking because you're genuinely curious. Or—"

Jung Heewon sighed as I hesitated, my lips quivering.

"Okay. Ask again. If you need confirmation, I'll give you the same answer as many times as you need. Until you feel safe."

"..."

"Until you can trust me. I'll answer you again and again until you trust me as much as I trust you."

What makes a person's heart? How can someone with such a strong and shining heart exist in this tragic world?

「Jung Heewon was there.」

No god, no Constellation can shape a person's heart.

The experience of risking her life for someone else. Her history of unwaveringly drawing her sword in the face of injustice, big or small, and protecting or failing to protect what was precious. Every choice she made must have made her shine so brightly today.

[A portal leading to the upper scenario has been created.]

The portal promised by the Wenny King swirled in the air.

We exchanged brief greetings with Divine Doctor and Namgung Myung, who had come out to see us off.

"Then shall we go?"

I said.

"Let's go."

Jung Heewon replied.

Stepping into the portal, we entered an elevator resembling a small capsule.

「Orbital Elevator.」

It seemed like The Wenny King, too, had his own 'Orbital Elevator'.

[Your 'ascension' credentials have been confirmed.]

However, perhaps because the equipment was older than the Constellations', the elevator creaked the entire way up. Perhaps the noise was amusing? Jung Heewon said.

"Didn't you ever feel that way when you were young? I was always afraid of falling when riding an elevator."

"I wonder if I could survive if I jumped when it fell. I often wonder that."

"Did you feel that way too, Dokja-ssi?"

"But these days, elevators are equipped with advanced safety devices, so they say they never fall."

"Really? They always fall in movies."

"That's just a movie."

The moment I said that, the elevator's jolt intensified. I wondered if it was really falling, but a cosmic landscape appeared outside the elevator window.

It wasn't the Star Stream we knew.

Scattered throughout the universe were not Constellations, but legends. Perhaps we were currently riding the 'Orbital Elevator' and passing through the domain of the 'Wenny King'.

Soon, legends came flooding back to me like a scene from a movie. They were legends collected by the Wenny King.

「"But would germs count as life? Aren't they invisible?"」

Surprisingly, some of the legends I recognized were familiar.

「"Isn't it true that God is invisible too?"」

Contemplating an ending so distant it was almost invisible, I was at Geumho Station that day. The events that had occurred with the Life Cult leader, Kim Cheolyang. My story began there.

「"Excuse me, what is your tendency? My name is Jung Heewon."」

「"I'm Cheon Inho."」

And then I met Jung Heewon. There was no way that story would just flow by at that exact moment. This must be some prank by the mischievous Wenny King.

Looking back, Jung Heewon was also watching the story drifting outside the window.

「"Shall we stand back to back?"」

「"If it's alright, may I ask you a favor?"」

Among them were stories of our shared journeys, where we had overcome life-threatening hardships together.

「He wasn't Jung Heewon's father.」

「He simply read this story, and was the spectator brought here. And yet, on this tragic stage, he spoke the single line he had rehearsed all along.」

There were also scenarios where, despite my best efforts, I couldn't protect anyone.

「"Well done. Heewon-ah."」

Jung Heewon's father. Hearing the final words of Sergeant Jung Moonho, possessed by a reader, I called out Jung Heewon's name once more.

"Heewon-ssi."

Jung Heewon turned to me. I thought, watching the stories flowing across her eyes.

「As Jung Heewon said, perhaps it was a question that didn't need to be asked.」

We've already overcome countless hardships together, and we know how strong the other is. We understand what they want to protect. And yet—even though we know each other—we still can't help but ask each other.

"Are you okay?"

I didn't ask if she was okay. Because I knew she wasn't. And she, knowing my feelings, answered.

"I'm okay."

We're not okay. Because we weren't okay, we asked each other if we were okay, and we answered yes. Whenever there was a void between us, we willingly filled it with each other's words.

That entire series of actions became a solid record of our actions.

"Since I first started following you, I've never regretted it."

That's probably how we ended up here.

"But you've got a strange story."

"That's because you keep making people angry."

We snickered at each other. I spoke again.

"Eight years have passed, and you're still the same, Heewon-ssi."

"It's only been eight years."

"Eight years is a long time."

What was going through her mind when she heard me say that? Jung Heewon stared blankly at my face and then said in a very serious voice.

"Yes. It's been a long time. Maybe it's enough time for someone to change."

It was as if she'd read my mind. Perhaps it wasn't I who possessed the [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint], but her.

"But just because someone changes doesn't mean it's necessarily for the worse. You've changed, too. And so have I."

"That's certainly true. Perhaps I'm no longer the person the group remembered me as."

"So it'll be okay. You, me, and everyone else. Even though time has passed, even though we've become different people, the history we shared together hasn't changed."

Only after hearing those words did it occur to me that perhaps I'd asked if it was okay because I wanted to hear those words. Perhaps it was I who truly wanted it to be okay.

"Let's believe in that history."

"Thank you."

I recalled the story of 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' that the Wenny King had shown me.

To the Wenny King's question of whether I'd read it, I shook my head and answered.

「"If this is truly an interesting story, I want to read it with them."」

Perhaps we'll go through the same things again. We might fight, get hurt, and lose something precious.

「Still, we'll read this story.」

We asked each other repeatedly if we were okay, sharing trivial stories.

"You seem so resilient most of the time, but at times like this, you secretly—"

Jung Heewon, her lips pursed, was about to add something when suddenly, The elevator felt like it was tilting.

"Dokja-ssi," said Jung Heewon, her face flushed.

I felt an unusual vibration in the elevator. I nodded, watching the floor sway precariously, as if it might fall at any moment.

"It looks like we've entered a movie."

"I don't think there's any safety measures in here. Can I survive if I jump the moment I fall?"

"You're still joking, so I guess you're really okay."

"I like movies."

[Approaching the upper scenario area!]

Then, the pressure of the upper scenario began to press upon us.

Constellations twinkled in the distance. Their starlight, at first glance, was unfriendly. All that could protect us from this terrifying threat was an old joke.

"Then you might hate it from now on."

And then, from somewhere, a story's voice came.

「At the end of the world, the twilight of the stars finally begins.」

The mere hearing of the immense story's awe-inspiring power was dizzying. The final chapter of the Great Destruction scenario, where even Mythical Constellations couldn't guarantee life or death.

「All the stories of the universe will hold their breath before eternal life.」

'Ragnarok' awaited us.

958 Episode 57 Twilight of the Gods (1)

---

「"Isn't it fascinating that, from the universe's perspective, something as simple as the twinkling of a single star can determine the day and night of a world? From my perspective, destruction is the same thing."」

—The Wenny King

---

Ragnarok, the twilight of the gods, was one of the representative 'giant stories' of the Star Stream, along with Olympus's 'Gigantomachia', Emperor's 'Journey to the West', and Eden's 'Great War of Good and Evil'.

Nevertheless, Ragnarok was never described in detail in the main story, in fact, because it was excluded from the scenario strategy route chosen by Kim Dokja.

「If a 'Ragnarok' of the Great Destruction were to occur, the Star Stream would have entered the process of complete annihilation.」

What would the original 41st round have been like? Did Yoo Joonghyuk experience Ragnarok? Or did he die before? Or if not—

"Dokja-ssi."

Jung Heewon's voice brought me to my senses. The universe was rippling like waves, starlight shining down on me. The Orbital Elevator swayed precariously, as if it might explode at any moment.

[Oh, no.]

At the same time, the Wenny King's words rang in my ears.

[We've been discovered. Be careful.]

I cursed inwardly.

That's right. There's no way that Wenny King could safely take us to the 'higher scenario'.

[Even I can't avoid the gaze of every Constellation. Especially not in this 'scenario'.]

I wondered what he was talking about, but I didn't have time to think about it in detail.

[The Constellation, 'Goddess of Love and Cats', bewares of you!]

[The Constellation, 'One Who Lost His Words to the Wolf of Destruction', roars at you!]

[The Constellation, 'Thursday Thunder', unleashes divine punishment on the wicked forces of Hell!]

I don't know why, but it seemed like there had been a misunderstanding.

No. Maybe it wasn't a misunderstanding. After all, things haven't been so good with the <Asgard> since the 'Star Ladder' incident.

"Hold on tight, Heewon-ssi."

I held my breath, staring at the lightning bolts flying toward the 'Orbital Elevator'.

In any case, the scenario area would be reached in a single breath.

The moment Thor's lightning struck the Orbital Elevator, I manifested the power of the 'Demon King of Salvation'. [Way of the Wind] was imbued in my outstretched wings.

I grabbed Jung Heewon's wrist and launched myself upward. As the Constellations' quest for me rapidly retreated, I felt a rippling void curtain brush past us.

[Entering the upper scenario area!]

A system message echoed in my head. I slowly closed my eyes, the weight of the 'Giant Story' weighing down my voice. I looked around and saw Jung Heewon lightly releasing her hand.

"This is an unexpected turn of events. I knew you'd start fighting right away."

Jung Heewon must have felt the story's pressure grow even stronger, but her expression remained composed. She must have been delighted that Jung Heewon had grown enough to withstand the story's thunderous, higher scenario.

"You shouldn't let your guard down."

"That's right. But where is this place?"

I looked around with Jung Heewon. We had landed on a somewhat desolate entrance. After walking a short distance along the entrance, a small holographic sign appeared.

[The 'ticket booth' is ahead.]

Ticket booth. Jung Heewon glared at it for a moment, as if grasping the hidden meaning of the word, and then asked,

"Are they selling tickets?"

"I suppose so."

"A 'Ragnarok' scenario, huh? Selling tickets when the world is on the brink of destruction?"

"The Constellations enjoy even their longing as a story."

They revel in the stories of the incarnations, and even their own demise is a show.

It's likely they were so obsessed with stories that they burned everything they had to become Constellations.

"Let's go."

Since we'd passed through the void veil, there had been no sign of the Constellations approaching, so we proceeded along the access road at a leisurely pace.

Footprints, large and small, were imprinted throughout the access road. Some appeared human, others like those of giants or benevolent beings.

「Accumulation leading to longing.」

I recalled the mention of this access road in 'Ways of Survival'.

「Everyone, at their own pace, participated in the naming. To be the last of this world, to be recognized.」

I walked among the jumbled mass of footprints, searching for those I recognized. The footprints of those who had walked this path before me. Suddenly, I could hear the voices of my companions, looming over the two hundred feet between those footprints.

「"Friend."」

Those footsteps, slightly gloomy yet resolute, seemed to belong to Dansu ahjussi.

「"Kim Dokja will be me."」

The confident and strangely arrogant footsteps seemed to belong to Ye Hyunwoo.

「"Author-nim."」

The footsteps, with their precise strides, seemed to belong to Ji Eunyu.

「"I'll go first."」

Some of the footsteps, hesitating and turning back every now and then, seemed to belong to Cha Yerin.

Of course, all these thoughts could just be my delusions. The group might have already forgotten me. Eight years may have changed them, and 'Kim Dokja' might already have a different meaning for them.

Nevertheless.

「All these records were just my one-sided effort to remember them.」

I looked back and saw the footprints of me and Jung Heewon. Although they were clearly ours, they were also imprinted with the footprints of others, not just ours.

「"I'm Kyung Sein."」

Kyung Sein.

「"I don't know why, but I've always been a little lucky..."」

Jung Jaewoo.

「"Just go back to that point. There's nothing to be afraid of."」

Goo Seonah.

I walked, and walked again, engraving the names of the readers I'd met. How far had I walked?

「"I'll wait, Kim Dokja."」

When we finally stood before the tactile marker that seemed to belong to Killer King, a building reminiscent of the Colosseum stood before us.

It was strange. A building this massive should have been visible from afar. Perhaps there was some special story concealing the building itself.

[Ticket booth.]

There was a short line in front of the ticket booth. There were about five or six customers waiting. It seemed like I had to buy a ticket here to enter 'Ragnarok'.

"Why am I of this rank!? What criteria—"

Judging by the slight scuffle in the front row, it was going to take some time.

Jung Heewon, somewhat relaxed, let out a dejected voice.

"It's like entering an amusement park."

"You know how scary movies that start like that are."

"Stop scaring me."

Seeing that we could chat like this over a doomsday scenario made me think we weren't in our right minds. Anyway, as we waited in line, exchanging light banter, a man standing in a corner of the ticket booth caught my eye.

Wrapped in a thick black cape, he looked around suspiciously.

I averted my gaze, feeling it wouldn't be good to get involved, but sure enough, the man spotted us and approached us.

"Are you guys planning to enter the battlefield?"

His voice was gravelly, as if he'd smoked several packs of cigarettes a day.

I briefly met Jung Heewon's eyes and nodded slightly, and the man smirked, as if he'd expected me to. He smiled.

"You look like newcomers. You don't have to get tickets at the ticket booth. I just happen to have tickets for two people."

I replied, looking at the man's blackened front teeth.

"We'll just buy them at the ticket booth."

"It'll be expensive, right?"

"It's okay. I have some coins."

"It's not just the price. You know what happens if you enter through the official route, don't you? If you're unlucky enough to get a wrong grade and end up in a strange place..."

The man stopped talking and glanced at me, then beamed.

"You guys. You came all this way without knowing anything, huh?"

"In any case, I have no intention of buying tickets on the black market."

"Don't worry about the price. I'll give you the tickets for free."

"Free?"

Jung Heewon beamed, and the man nodded vigorously, holding out two tickets from his pocket.

"Yes. Even if I'm a merchant, I can't charge you the same price as someone who is new here. Here."

I stared down at the ticket the man offered me and said,

"No, I won't take it."

"What? Why?"

"We want to enter with dignity."

The man's expression changed at my answer.

"You know what this ticket is, don't you?"

For a moment, I felt ominous. The man took a step closer and asked,

"Shouldn't you be entering through that 'ticket booth'?"

The air in the area slowly shifted. The man's distorted expression darkened, and his lips moved. It was [Transmission].

—I can sense it. You have a contract with an Outer God, right? Who? Who did you contact? ■■■■? Or ■■■■■■■? The man with the forked tongue took a step closer to me.

Jung Heewon, her expression hardened, placed her hand on the hilt of her sword.

—You must come here. The army of hell awaits you.

I stopped her and asked the man,

"What are you talking about?"

"Are you planning to pretend you don't know?"

The man glared at me with frustration, then spat out.

"Think carefully. You don't have to side with the Constellations and see the world's ■■. Don't you know? How insignificant the ideals of those cowardly Constellations are. What meaning does the end of everything hold for this universe?"

The man, having spoken passionately, took another step closer. He then held my wrist with one hand, trying to hand me the ticket.

"Hurry up and win. This battlefield needs you. A talent like yours, I'll have to write a letter of recommendation myself, even if it means—"

At that moment, something strange happened. The hand that had grabbed my wrist began to turn a bright red.

The man, who had hurriedly grabbed my wrist as if burned by a hot fire, screamed. The ticket he'd dropped fluttered and fell to the floor.

The man, who had been staring blankly down at his hand, suddenly raised his head and looked up at me.

"See…"

I felt something stirring inside me.

[The story, 'King of Fear', shows signs of discomfort.]

The pale man suddenly fell to the floor and muttered.

"See you."

"What…"

"Oh great master. Oh King of Fear. The final coordinates of the distant Apocalypse Record..."

"Excuse me."

"Ugh, ugh. Ugh—!"

As I approached, the man who had started the fight trembled and began to run away in a hurry.

As the sound barrier he had deployed disappeared, the noise of the area returned to my ears.

Jung Heewon asked, dumbfounded.

"What just happened? Do you know the way?"

"It seems similar."

I gave Jung Heewon a vague explanation, but I knew which group the man who had spoken to us was a member of.

「The Seeker of the End.」

The man who had just disappeared was a member of the 'Seeker of the End', the core force behind this grand narrative, 'Ragnarok'.

I looked down at the two tickets that had fallen to the floor and tried to pick them up.

Jung Heewon asked,

"Are you going to use them?"

In the meantime, the line had thinned considerably, and it was soon our turn.

Somehow, the very beginning of this grand narrative scenario felt unusual.

Pay the fair entrance fee to enter the battlefield, or use the black market ticket you happened to get?

「What choice would Kim Dokja make?」

I slowly opened my mouth.

959 Episode 57 Twilight of the Gods (2)

"No. I won't use it."

What choice would Kim Dokja have made? A true Kim Dokja wouldn't think like that.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', finds your thoughts amusing.]

In the past, I would have laughed at my thoughts, but now I felt no particular emotion.

「A Kim Dokja who isn't Kim Dokja can still be Kim Dokja.」

After meeting and parting ways with so many readers, I may have come to terms with that fact to some extent.

Jung Heewon observed me blankly and then asked,

"If you weren't going to use it, why did you pick it up?"

"The more options, the better."

I answered, looking down at the ticket the ticket seller had given me.

The ticket seller was probably surprised to see me because he sensed the story of the 'King of Fear' within me.

Jung Heewon, who was examining the ticket with me, asked.

"Just looking at it, it doesn't seem like an ordinary ticket."

"That's right. This ticket isn't a 'regular admission ticket'."

"What do you mean?"

I briefly explained to Jung Heewon what I knew about 'Ragnarok'.

According to 'Ways of Survival', the apocalyptic battlefield of 'Ragnarok' unfolds into two major factions.

「One is the power of the Constellations, including Asgard.」

The first faction, naturally, was the Constellations of Asgard, which held the source of the giant story.

In reality, most Constellations—especially those or incarnations of the 'absolute good' lineage—often chose this faction and participated in the battle.

Of course, not all Constellations chose this side.

「The forces of disaster and hell, dreaming of the world's end.」

Some Constellations of absolute evil, beasts, or even slightly deranged demon kings sometimes chose the latter. The 'Apocalypse Seekers' who had handed me the tickets were of the same type.

"These tickets are an invitation to the second power."

"It's a horse in the middle of disaster."

I could vaguely guess why the ticket scalper had approached us.

Jung Heewon and I had come here under the protection of the 'Wenny King', and in the process, they must have sensed the power of the Outer Gods.

The 'Apocalypse Seekers', who react to otherworldly powers, must have sensed the nuances of the Outer Gods in us.

"Should I just use those tickets? Stand on the side of disaster and kill all the Constellations."

"If disaster wins, the world will yearn for it."

"Isn't that what you came for?"

I wondered if Jung Heewon knew how much comfort this brief flirtation brought me.

While standing with Jung Herwon and discussing which Constellation to start with, it was already our turn.

The ticket booth employee, upon spotting us, smiled meaningfully and asked, "You won't use that 'ticket'?"

I shrugged as the employee pushed up his glasses with his index finger.

"Yes. I won't."

"A pig?"

"Just that."

When I tried to brush it off, the employee narrowed his eyes and said,

"The recipients of that ticket are determined. They are either under the protection of a Constellation of 'absolute evil' or are incarnations of fallen Constellations. In rare cases, they are tainted by otherworldly stories..."

The employee's eyes glowed bright, as if he could identify me. But it wouldn't be easy. I'd completely suppressed the stories of the 'King of Fear'.

The employee, who had been staring at me with a disapproving expression, turned to Jung Heewon and concluded.

"And those who harbor a deep grudge against the Constellations also receive the invitation."

"Well, it applies to a variety of reasons."

"With that ticket, you can become a member of the Hell Army. Without going through the unreasonable rank-based system, you'll be sent straight to the battlefield of 'Ragnarok'. If even the ticket scalpers were offering free tickets, you'll probably—"

"Aren't you going to sell your tickets?"

"We've finally got some talented people here."

The ticket booth employee's eyes flickered with surprise as he saw us.

[Someone is activating 'Cold Observation'.]

「Cold Observation is a skill that allows you to estimate the combined stamina, agility, and strength of an opponent, regardless of whether they possess a 'Mental Barrier'.」

The employee's expression brightened considerably, as if he was quite pleased with my and Jung Heewon's stats.

"One of them seems to be a Transcendent. You're an Incarnation? Or a Constellation?"

"Which do you think it is?"

The employee looked confused. It made sense. Since I'd reached myth-grade, my control of my rank had become even more refined. Now, unless it was a Constellation sensitive to stories, it wouldn't be easy to gauge my rank.

"If you're going to keep messing around, I won't be giving you ticket."

"I'm not a Constellation."

While I was acknowledged as a Myth-grade, strictly speaking, I wasn't a Constellation.

[Someone is activating 'Lie Detection'!]

['Lie Detection' has confirmed the truth of your words.]

I saw the employee nod.

I thought that's what he'd be using.

"You seem to have entered through ascension. Who recommended you? Which company do you work for?"

"I didn't receive a separate recommendation."

When I answered that, the employee's gaze grew even more strange.

"Do you have a sponsor?"

"No."

"There's no sponsor?"

The employee pondered my words, then began scribbling something in the air.

"The entrance fee is 5,000 coins."

It was cheaper than I expected.

After paying the coins, a message flashed before my eyes.

[Your evaluation rank is 'Mid-Low Warrior'.]

I paused for a moment, staring down at the ranking chart.

Mid-Low Warrior? Me?

I, who had reached the equivalent of a 'Mythical Constellation', am a 'Mid-Low Warrior'?

No, does that mean all those above me are mythical?

As if sensing my doubt, the employee added apologetically,

"You should have been given a higher rank, but unfortunately, the 'sponsor' bonus points are important in this 'ranking process'."

"Isn't it better without a sponsor?"

"Would a normal incarnation have made it this far without a sponsor?"

Well, that was true.

Only a lunatic like Kim Dokja could make it to the final scenario without a sponsor.

['Scenario 85' is currently in progress in that area.]

The Colosseum before us is, in fact, 'Scenario 85'. If any incarnation has made it this far without a sponsor, it's either one of two things:

A fraud. Or a truly insane person.

Jung Heewon, who was watching the conversation from the side, asked,

"Is there a disadvantage to receiving a low rank?"

"Disadvantage, so to speak. It might be a bit of a hassle. Let's see, you..."

After saying that, the employee began observing Jung Heewon.

"Do you have a sponsor?"

"No."

"I see."

"How much should I pay?"

"One thousand coins."

One thousand coins? No, you took five thousand from me, didn't you?

Before I could even file a claim, the employee scribbled something in the air and handed me Jung Heewon's rank chart. After examining the chart, I feigned envy and looked at Jung Heewon.

"Heewon-ssi, tell me the truth. Who is the person you've been secretly hiding behind?"

"If there was, would I have suffered all this?"

Jung Heewon's rank evaluation was as follows:

「Special-rank warrior.」

It was strange. There's no sponsor, yet I'm mid-level and Jung Heewon is special-rank?

"The Transcendent is an exception. There's a special order to treat them favorably."

An order to treat the transcendents favorably. The Constellations, who despise mortals, suddenly issued such an order?

"It's been a while since I've seen a Transcendent this well-trained. If you wish, I can connect you with the highest-ranking deities of Asgard right away. Someone as talented as you could become an Einherjar, a commander on the Great Field."

"What's an Einherjar?"

"That's... well, it's a good one. It's a position everyone inside desires."

"No. I want to achieve everything with my own strength."

The employee nodded, as if he'd expected that.

"So all human transcendents are like this. Okay, I get it."

Surprisingly, the employee readily let Jung Heewon go.

Honestly, I couldn't understand this. If she had truly been a talented individual, he should have worked harder to recruit her, but the employee's resignation and discouragement were too swift.

Jung Heewon, who had been studying her own rank chart for a while, turned to me and asked,

"How good would a special rank be?"

"It'd be just below top rank."

"It feels strange. I never received a rank like that in school."

Jung Heewon, who had been sneaking a glance at my rank chart, asked in a much quieter voice,

"Should I change it with you?"

"He's watching."

"Then I'll secretly change it with you when I get back in. I'm feeling the pressure of this rank."

"That guy's staring at us."

"But class assignments don't change based on rank, do they?"

"I don't know about that either."

"Does the war start as soon as you enter?"

The employee, who had been listening to our conversation, looked dumbfounded, then chuckled.

"War? You guys really don't know what 'Ragnarok' is."

"You don't have to go in and start a war, do you?"

"If something like that really starts, everyone dies. Well, even if it doesn't start, the unlucky ones will die anyway."

Before I could even ask what he meant, the employee's eyes began to swirl.

"It's almost time for the 'next battlefield' to open. You might even receive a summons offer. Please choose carefully. Even if you die in the first battle, if you performed well, you'll have a chance to be resurrected..."

[You have been granted entry into 'Scenario 85'.]

[Would you like to enter this scenario?]

As we nodded, the swirling eyes of the staff began to draw us in.

"Not everyone can be 'resurrected'. May the blessings of the story be with you all."

As the incarnation body was sucked into the employee's eye, the sound of crows cawing could be heard from somewhere. Two giant ravens danced in circles directly above my head.

I immediately recognized them.

「The ravens of Lord Odin.」

Hugin and Munin. They were the servants of Odin, the 'One-Eyed Father'.

The circle the ravens drew soon took the shape of a giant eye.

「Every time the master of dreams blinks, the birth and death of the universe accompany him.」

An eye that watched over everything on earth.

The moment my gaze met that eye, I felt an inexplicable elation.

「Only those who receive the gaze will become the new lords of power.」

I felt as if all the starlight in the universe was illuminating me. My incarnation's senses opened simultaneously.

When I blinked, feeling it, I was inside the Colosseum.

Ohhhhhhh—!

Deafening cheers. Majestic mantras erupted from all sides.

Amidst the immense ripples of power emitted by the gathered Constellations, the story within me stirred.

After taking several deep breaths, I slowly blinked, and the surrounding scenery came into view.

I was sitting in the audience with Jung Heewon.

Ohhhhhhh—!

Constellations bursting upward one after another.

I saw Constellations filling the audience. From the Historic-grade Constellations to the late Narrative-grade Constellations, or even beyond. It was my first time seeing so many Constellations gathered in one place. The mere presence of them created a scene of immense probability.

[Go! Fight! Kill them all!]

[Kuhahahahahaha!]

The Constellations that let out hearty laughter were clearly the Constellations I remembered.

However, the strange thing was that their expressions conveyed a subtle sense of resignation and frustration.

Among them, there were some Constellations I recognized.

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', anxiously wipes his head!]

Had the story been damaged? The Bald General was staring off into space, wiping fragments of stories from his head.

[The match is currently in progress.]

I turned my gaze, wondering what he was looking at, and saw a giant screen installed in the center of the Colosseum. Beneath the screen was a vast map, and on it, like miniature figures, were running around.

[A new main scenario has arrived!]

[You have entered the halls of the great 'Valhalla'.]

[You can select a battlefield within the hall.]

[The 1263rd battlefield is currently in progress.]

On the screen, Constellations and incarnations were slaughtering each other. They ripped out each other's hearts and beheaded each other without hesitation.

A phrase from 'Ways of Survival' naturally came to mind.

I see. Perhaps this scene of 'Valhalla' I'm seeing now is...

「Ragnarok, 999th round.」

'Ragnarok' had slightly different developments in each of Yoo Joonghyuk's rounds.

Unlike other rounds where the main battlefield opened immediately, the 999th round of 'Ragnarok' had a unique filter.

「Those who entered 'Ragnarok' through the ticket booth in the 999th round will enter the 'Battlefield' of the Preliminary Battle via Valhalla.」

This was the Preliminary Battle system.

「Only those who win the 'Battlefield' of the Preliminary Battle will become great 'Einherar' and advance to the higher battlefields.」

In essence, only those who won this Preliminary Battle would have the chance to enter the true 'Ragnarok'.

Perhaps confused by the situation, Jung Heewon asked.

"Why are they fighting when they are on the same side?"

"It's probably a Preliminary Battle to select elite soldiers."

"Really? We'll be going to the battlefield anyway, so why hold such an event?"

Jung Heewon was right. We'll all be fighting on the same side once we advance to the higher battlefields anyway, so why bother holding something like a Preliminary Battle to select elite soldiers?

「"War? You guys really don't know what 'Ragnarok' is."」

Recalling the employee's words that suddenly came to mind, we watched the match on screen.

The match consisted of two groups fighting on a small battlefield.

The battlefield layout... Wait, where have I seen that before?

Jung Heewon seemed to have a similar thought, saying to me,

"That seems a bit like a game."

"Yes. That seems right."

If my guess is correct, the skirmish battlefield was similar to the main scenario in the main story, where Kim Dokja participated in the 'Demon King Selection Tournament'.

「Mythical Battlefield.」

The game was won by acquiring all of the specific 'emblems' on the battlefield or by killing all the participants in the opposing group.

I haven't checked the detailed description yet, but this battlefield also seemed to be composed of similar water.

—Damage! Aaaah!

—Save me! Save me! If I die this time, it's over!

Blue and red dots were displayed on the map. Judging by the rapid decrease in red dots, the blue team seemed to have an overwhelming advantage.

[As expected, he's the third son of Bishamonten!]

[The owner of the Three Blue Spears!]

Judging by the cheering, the team wearing blue seemed to be the Constellations of the <Emperor>.

If Bishamonten's third son is 'Natha', then the owner of the Three Blue Spears would be 'Irang Jingun'.

Both are legendary. As the <Emperor>'s main force, who had recently ascended, it was only natural that their mediocre skills would be no match for them.

It seemed as if the red team, in crisis, would be the first to come forward, but the outcome of the match was decided in an instant.

[Team 'Fengshen Yanyi' won the 1263rd battlefield.]

The victorious blue team was seen advancing to the next battlefield amidst cheers. Meanwhile, the incarnations of the losing team were saying, "Huh? I guess we're not dead."

Surprisingly, the incarnations who had been beheaded or had their hearts ripped out in the competition were alive and well. However, their pale, ashen faces didn't quite resemble those of the living.

[All members of the defeated faction are summoned.]

A total of twelve members were summoned to the throne.

[The 'Execution Ceremony' begins.]

Then, the incarnations' bodies were tied in mid-air, and a giant guillotine appeared above their necks.

The Constellations snickered from all around, as if they were enjoying the sight.

[Hmm, whose fate is it this time?]

[What do you think? This time too...]

[Well, it's already decided.]

A message from the stadium came up along with the voice of the Constellation.

[The 'Execution Voting' begins.]

[All Emperors can choose a 'wealthy person' of the party by assigning a position in the sarang.]

[Those selected as 'resurrected ones' will be excluded from the 'Execution' and will be re-elected. They can participate in the preliminary battle once.]

[Listen carefully to the final messages from the participants and vote.]

The faces of the losing team's participants zoomed in on the screen, one by one.

"S-save me! Please save me! I can do better! There's so much I haven't shown you yet!"

The incarnations, facing death, were crying out. They begged for their lives, that they could do better next time. They didn't want to die. Watching them repeat the same words with different faces, I recalled the staff member's words.

「"Even if you die in the first battle, if you performed exceptionally well, you'll have a chance to be resurrected..."」

I wondered if that was what he meant.

"That bastard! We lost because of him! He deserved to die!"

"It was because of you! Damn it! Save me! Please!"

The Constellations' laughter grew even louder as they exchanged insults on the scaffold. Jung Heewon groaned, clearly displeased with the situation. As each person's will flowed, the final incarnation finally arrived. It was the incarnation that appeared to be the commander of the Red Team.

"Please."

Bright blonde hair rippled across the screen.

I stared blankly at the commander, her face bloodied.

"Please save them."

She was an incarnation I knew well. Perhaps as ambitious as Yoo Joonghyuk. However, her inflexibility and lack of eloquence made her enemies easily.

"Save others, not me."

At the end of this world, a person who dreamed of a 'Perfect Night' where all the Constellations had vanished.

She, who had been like that, was begging to the Constellations.

"I now—"

My colleague, who wasn't Korean but had a Korean name. I remembered her name for the first time in a while.

"I don't want to continue this damned game."

Kim Anna-ssi.

960 Episode 57 Twilight of the Gods (3)

---

Eight years ago, immediately after escaping from the Fear Realm, Anna Croft and the Transcendents took refuge on the 'Isle of Reincarnators'.

[Prophet of Asgard.]

The great King of Reincarnators. The master of the 'Isle of Reincarnators', Sakyamuni, offered her protection from the Nebulae, but with one condition.

[In exchange for staying on the island, you and the Transcendents will be required to perform a small service on the island.]

"Service..."

[It's nothing special. Maybe just helping with chores on the island.]

"How long can we stay?"

[Five years.]

Five years. That was the time promised to the Prophet Anna Croft by the King of Reincarnators. In some ways, it was a long time, but in others, it was also a short time.

Now, there was no Fear Realm to protect her, and the King of Fear was gone. And outside, the Constellations of <Asgard> were targeting her.

"Why five years? Not more?"

[Because you have a predetermined 'Fate'. The island cannot defy providence.]

Fate. Anna Croft bit her lip and asked again.

"I heard there are recorders who can change [Fate]."

[The 'Fate' that resides within you cannot be easily modified.]

Anna knew this.

The [Fate] given to her was formed through a contract.

No recorder can easily tamper with a [Fate] bound by a sacred contract.

"Can you see my future?"

[Don’t you already know?]

Anna nodded.

Her core ability was [Future Sight].

At some point, predicting the exact future became difficult, but she remained closer to the 'future' than anyone else. She knew her own future. She simply wanted to receive confirmation from Shakyamuni.

[Five years later, the 'God of Mischief' will seek you out.]

The God of Mischief. Anna Croft knew who he was. He wielded otherworldly power and opposed the 'Management Bureau'. He was also the Constellation of Asgard who had sponsored her with the 'Eye of the Great Demon'.

[Some times pass quickly, some slowly. Use the five years given to you wisely.]

After five years on the island, Anna Croft was banished. And as if by promise, the Constellations awaited her outside the island.

[I've come to get you, Prophet.]

They were the Constellations of Asgard.

"You too are sick of this."

Because she already knew the future, Anna Croft wasn't flustered. She didn't even think about resisting. Even she couldn't face a dozen Constellations, including a Constellations of the highest order, alone.

And above all else…

[You betrayed Asgard and aided a threat designated by the Nebula.]

She had a reason to be captured here.

[As the representative incarnation of Asgard, you must know the gravity of your sins.]

"You say you're the representative incarnation, but what have you done to me?"

She protested, but the Asgard Constellations paid no attention.

In an instant, the Constellations subdued her, bound her hands and feet with story metal, and spoke.

[Should she have been sentenced to 500 years of slavery in Muspelheim?]

The one who came to fetch her, representing the alabaster Constellations, was a a constellation following Heimdall, the Guardian of the Great Horn Bridge.

[The great 'One-Eyed Father' has specially entrusted you with a mission.]

Bard, the 'Guardian of the Boundary'. He brandished a massive spear made of stag antler and announced Anna Croft's fate.

[Participate in the preliminary battle of 'Ragnarok'. Then we will forgive you for betraying the Nebula.]

---

Anna Croft opened her eyes with a start, feeling a surge of relief. Her head was spinning, and she kept feeling nauseous.

'Again.'

Holding her grip on the dirt, she managed to regain her balance and stood up, her surrounding battlefield in full view.

[The 'Preliminary Battle' will begin soon!]

[The 1265th battlefield opens!]

Looking at the desolate landscape of the grassland, Anna Croft thought about Yoo Joonghyuk.

Perhaps the Supreme King felt this way.

The first, second, third, fourth... Even the Supreme King, who had repeated dozens of such regressions, must have welcomed each new world with this same feeling.

[The majority of Constellations have approved your resurrection.]

[You have been designated as the 'Resurrected One'.]

Unknown. All she knew for sure was that this damned game would repeat itself again.

[You were automatically summoned to this battlefield by your contract with <Asgard>.]

Anna Croft was confident when she first arrived. She hadn't been idle for the past five years, after all.

[You have entered the main scenario area.]

[Main Scenario #85 — The rules for the 'Outpost' are revealed.]

She had obtained information about 'Ragnarok' through her deal with the Buddha, thoroughly analyzed it, and trained accordingly.

「Only those who have obtained the final prophecy at the twilight of the gods will be able to stand on the battlefield of 'Vigrid'.」

The stage for advancing to 'Vigrid', the main battlefield of 'Ragnarok'.

The rules for this 'Outpost' were simple.

* The victory conditions for the 'Outpost' are as follows:

1. A Skirmish involves as few as two teams and as many as eight teams, depending on the size of the battlefield.

2. The team that collects all the 'Prophecies' scattered across the battlefield wins.

3. The team that kills all enemy units on the battlefield wins.

Either collecting all the 'Prophecies' scattered across the battlefield or killing all enemy units.

A Skirmish could be won by meeting either of these two conditions.

The problem was the additional rules required to meet these conditions.

* Additional rules for 'Skirmish' are as follows:

1. Each 'Skirmish' team consists of 'twelve' members.

2. The twelve team members are randomly selected (though they may also be recommended if supported by a Constellation).

3. If there are not enough members, each team's commander can use the 'Summon Cost' to select additional team members.

Even though it was information she knew well, Anna Croft read the same sentence over and over again, wondering if there might be some rule she hadn't read.

Of course, there was no such rule. Nevertheless, she read the sentence over and over again, hoping to delay the tragedy that was destined for her, even if only a little.

「She remembered her first battlefield.」

She had confidently entered the first battlefield. She had been sufficiently prepared. However, there was one unexpected variable—her [Future Sight] wouldn't work on this 'battlefield'.

「"Anna! What should we do now?"」

She couldn't figure out why. Perhaps the battlefield had been designed specifically to block her [Future Sight], or perhaps it was a plot by <Asgard>.

「"Save me... Please save me!"」

She couldn't simply lament the fact that her [Future Sight] had been blocked. No matter the situation, all she could do was give it her all. She fought with all her might, and narrowly lost. One silver lining was that defeat didn't mean the scenario was over.

5. All members of the defeated team will be placed on the ‘execution platform'.

6. The incarnations on the platform will be executed after the 'final speech'.

7. Only one incarnation chosen by the Constellations on the platform can become the 'Resurrected One'.

The resurrection system was the true charm of this 'preliminary battle'. Even if the team's luck was poor, if 'she did well', she could still get another chance.

「"Choose me."」

Atop the execution platform, Anna confidently addressed the Constellations.

「"I did my best. Give me one more chance. I can show you an even more magnificent performance."」

Given the stunned looks of her fellow participants, Anna believed this was the right thing to do for the greater good of this world. The Constellations granted her request.

[You have been designated as the 'Resurrected One'.]

And so the next battle began.

This time, having tried once, she thought she could do better. Still unable to see the future, she fought with all her might.

This time, the result was a disappointing defeat.

「"Please save me."」

Anna Croft pleaded once more. The Constellations granted her request once again.

「"Please save me."」

Then, similar events repeated themselves. She fought with all her might, lost, and begged the gods.

「"So, me."」

Please save her, please give her one more chance.

「"Next time, really—"」

Ten times, then twenty.

Anna Croft began to realize something was amiss.

「"Anna?"」

When did it begin? One by one, those close to her began to be summoned. They were the remnants of Zarathustra, whom she had never believed were still alive.

「"Jade?"」

「"Oh, Anna! We finally met!"」

She lost Jade in the 589th battle.

「"Marin."」

「"I'm glad I could be with you."」

She lost Marin in the 874th battle. It was the same in the 911th battle, and in the 934th battle.

One day, as she watched and watched those familiar faces disappear one by one,

「"I."」

She stood before the Constellations.

「"I'm sorry. I can't do well."」

For the first time, she let herself go.

「"I'm not as great as you think I am. I don't deserve to be resurrected."」

The Constellations laughed. A long caw of a crow was heard from somewhere, followed by a mantra.

「"Child, do you think we saved you because you're so great?"」

The executioner's blade fell, and her comrades' heads were cut off.

The battlefield opened once more. She was defeated again. She lost her comrades.

And then she realized.

「"She was never meant to win this 'battlefield' from the start."」

The match, which seemed to have been lost by a narrow margin, was in fact rigged to suit the Constellations' preferences.

[The majority of Constellations rejoice in your defeat.]

An overwhelming number of Constellations cheered her enemy. Faced with the increasing odds and the shrinking 'Summon Cost', her team was annihilated every time.

Anna Croft felt something inside her crumble. No matter what she did, she couldn't win.

A battle. All her summoned allies died, and she was constantly resurrected.

[You are currently a 'Commander'.]

And she stood on the battlefield once more.

[The summoning cost you have been given is 100D.]

[Constellations supporting each team can invest their probability to increase the team's 'Summoning Cost'.]

Listening to the system messages that followed, Anna slowly sank to her knees.

At one point, she even hoped for a miracle. Perhaps an incarnation as powerful as the Supreme King would be summoned to her team.

But that never happened, and the incarnations she trusted in all but one died without exception.

From that moment on, she had only one wish:

「That no one she knows be summoned to this battlefield.」

In a dazzling beam of light, the random summoning began.

[Your team members have been randomly summoned.]

Anna Croft studied their faces anxiously, as if opening a deck of cards. Most of them were unfamiliar faces.

That was until she turned over the last card.

"Anna."

As if a tragedy had been destined, a familiar face was there. A woman waved at her with a warm smile she'd long remembered.

"You... You are really here."

Anna Croft called her name in despair.

"Selena Kim."

Selena Kim. One of the original members of 'Zarathustra'. Ultimately, she, too, had been dragged into this battlefield.

[Many constellations rejoice, anticipating your tragedy.]

This 'Random Summoning' was, in name only, a random summoning, but it could have been recommended by the Constellations.

So, this too must have been the work of the Constellations.

Anna Croft calmly assessed the situation and began speaking to Selena Kim.

"Selena, request the Constellations of <Asgard>. We must escape from here immediately."

There was no way to save Selena Kim.

"They must have another ticket to the 'main battlefield'. You must escape, even if it means making a dirty deal. You alone—"

"Anna."

Listening to Selena Kim, who shook her head silently, Anna Croft belatedly realized what was going on.

"You volunteered? Is that true?"

"Yes."

"Why did you do that?"

"I heard what you've been through here."

Surely, it wouldn't be surprising for Selena Kim to do something so reckless.

Anna Croft let out a deep sigh and shouted reproachfully.

"Did you even know where this was?"

"Anna, don't give up. You can overcome this."

"You don't know anything."

Anna Croft looked at the randomly summoned incarnations. At first glance, they looked like a ragtag bunch.

"Really, you don't know anything."

They were the terminal incarnations of each Nebula, then abandoned.

[Your team currently has ten members.]

[You can summon additional allies to aid you in battle using the 'Summon Cost'.]

Selena Kim spoke again, seemingly aware of her intentions.

"I know you can't use [Future Sight]. But not knowing the future isn't necessarily a disadvantage. You never know. Just as I came here, there might be other allies we don't know about—"

As soon as those words left her mouth, a message rang out from the air.

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', claims to be your ally.]

Selena Kim's expression brightened.

"See? I told you! If it's him—"

"Bald General of Justice."

Anna Croft cut Selena Kim off, looking up into the air.

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', looks at you.]

"I can't accept your help."

"What—"

"If you lose again, you will be annihilated."

Only after hearing those words did Selena Kim seem to realize what was going on.

"No way."

Anna Croft nodded.

"That Constellation has already used probability to help me several times."

She didn't understand why that Constellation on the Korean Peninsula, with whom she had no connection, had gone to such lengths to help her.

However, Anna Croft was grateful to the Constellation, and that was why she couldn't rely on his help any longer.

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', is furious and confident she can win this time.]

"I appreciate your kind words, but I don't have enough 'Summon Cost' left to summon you anyway."

Bald General of Justice (Mid-Rank Warrior)

—The strongest tank on the Korean Peninsula!

—Summon Cost 250D

Bald General of Justice's minimum summon cost was 250D.

However, the summon cost given to her was only 100D.

['Summon Helper' will end soon.]

Just then, the enemy team's helper summoning seemed to be coming to an end.

[The Constellation, 'Thunder-Eater', prepares for battle!]

The enemy team's main helpers were the Constellations of <Vedas>. Among them, the most crucial was the Narrative-grade Constellation 'Thunder-Eating Bird'. Even at the lowest level, he was a warrior approaching 'high-level' status.

"Anna, we don't have time."

There were no two resurrected in a single match. If she lost this match again, she would lose Selena Kim.

"Yes."

Taking deep breaths, Anna Croft thought about Yoo Joonghyuk.

What would Yoo Joonghyuk do in a situation like this?

No, not Yoo Joonghyuk—

「What would 'he' do?」

Memories of the man's subtle narrowing eyes forced Anna Croft to smile bitterly. Even though she knew it was a futile thought, Anna Croft often found herself lost in thought about him.

Standing before a blank space, unwritten by past or future, he was unafraid to fulfill the role assigned to him.

"Let's find... an assistant."

[Use the 'Summoning Scroll'.]

[Check the list of warriors on standby.]

Anna Croft controlled her breathing and unfolded the 'Summoning Scroll'.

The warriors she could summon with the current 'Summoning Cost' were at best 'mid-level'.

Still, she was in no position to be picky. Even then, it was only when the opponent complied.

[The target refused the summoning.]

[The target refused the summoning.]

As expected. Anna bit her lip as she listened to the repeated summoning rejection messages.

At that moment, Selena Kim, who had been examining the summoning scroll with her, spoke.

"Anna. What about this warrior? The introduction is a bit strange, though…"

Anna Croft looked to where Selena Kim had spoken. At the end of the scroll. A single line of introduction was written on the border between a mid-level warrior and a low-level warrior.

> —Myth-grade Constellation hiding its power.

It was a foolish introduction. A Myth-grade Constellation couldn't possibly be on the list of 'mid-level warriors'.

Still, Anna Croft couldn't help but laugh when she saw the name written above the introduction.

> Demon King of Salvation (Mid-level Warrior).
>
> —Summon Cost: 100D

A mixture of a premonition of 'no way', and a sense of despair of 'it can't be', Anna Croft used 'summon' as if possessed.

And a moment later.

[The target responded to the summoning.]

A message was heard.

961 Episode 57 Twilight of the Gods (4)

A dazzling halo of summoning light rose. Selena Kim spoke, as if suddenly reminded of something.

"Anna, if it's the 'Demon King of Salvation'—"

"It's the man we met at the Washington Dome."

But there was no guarantee that this was truly him. He vanished with the destruction of the Fear Realm, and his whereabouts remained unknown for eight years. Eight years was a long time.

「Some times pass quickly, some slowly.」

Those eight years, which to the Constellations seemed like fleeting moments, often felt like time had stopped for Anna Croft. Perhaps it was the memories of the 40th round's meeting with him and the Fear Realm. For the past eight years, Anna Croft has been using [Future Sight] frequently. Knowing that [Future Sight] frequently malfunctioned after the Fear Realm Incident, she pursued his shadow in the navigable futures.

Eight years have passed. And Anna Croft has never encountered him in any future.

"It can't really be him, though."

"Why do you think so? There aren't many beings with that name."

Anna Croft shook her head at Selena Kim's comment.

"This isn't the first time."

"Huh?"

Over the course of hundreds of battles, Anna Croft had seen similar names on the list of allies. Names like Kim Dokja, the Demon King of Salvation, and the King of Fear.

"The allies' nicknames are chosen by the allies themselves."

At first, Anna was hopeful. She hoped it could be him. She hoped he had truly returned from that hellish Fear Realm Incident.

But the summoned were foolish, unaware of where they had been summoned. They were incarnations. All of them had participated in the 'sponsored summons' of the Constellations.

It was a vicious prank by the Constellations, who had overheard her battle.

"Then again..."

"He's obviously just an idiot imitating him."

The real her wouldn't have wasted 100D on someone like this, wasting her chance to summon. That would only bring amusement to the Constellations who played such a mischievous prank.

"But why did you summon this person?"

"That's..."

And why did she choose this person?

It was difficult to explain the exact reason. Perhaps she was glad to see that name again at this very moment, when her comrade Selena Kim was already in the fight. Or perhaps her [Future Sight] had malfunctioned for so long that she had gone slightly crazy.

But a romantic recorder might record her current state of mind like this:

「Even if this was nothing more than a mischievous prank by the Constellations—the moment she saw that name, this world... The universe, the <Star Stream>, seemed to be speaking to her.」

"I don't know."

She knew she shouldn't say that. Most of the incarnations summoned by the Constellations' pranks were those who had been inevitably collateralized by the Constellations.

Anna Croft thought of the countless Kim Dokjas, the Demon Kings of Salvation, and the Kings of Fear who had died before her.

Perhaps this time, she wouldn't be able to save the summoned. So now, her story was nothing more than a stinging resignation to an unchangeable tragedy.

"Without a glimpse of the future, I can only make such ordinary choices."

The summoned finally emerged from the hazy smoke. Anna Croft gazed at him, her eyes glowing crimson. Just as she was about to examine what kind of idiot it was this time, the eye that had activated [Eye of the Great Demon] began to sting. Anna Croft held her breath involuntarily. She had experienced something similar before.

"Now you understand."

The moment the man's voice rang through the smoke, Anna Croft felt the boundaries between past, present, and future blur for a moment. Even as she wondered if this moment might be a plaything of the Constellations, and as she swore she couldn't be shaken, her mind refused to listen.

It was true. There were many incarnations in the world who bore the nickname 'Demon King of Salvation'. But,

"That's how people who can't see the future live."

There was undoubtedly only one man who could say something like that with a sly smile. Still, Anna harbored doubts to the very end. Was this all an illusion created by the Constellations? Was her malfunctioning [Future Sight], her 'Eye of the Great Demon' displaying a delusion?

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', remembers you.]

A story, flowing from his entire being, confirmed his identity.

"Have you forgotten my face?"

Selena Kim stepped forward in place of Anna Croft, who was still unable to respond.

"My goodness, it really was you."

"Selena Kim."

Watching the two people firmly shaking hands, Anna Croft struggled to regain her senses. As the scene she had longed to see became reality, a strange resentment welled up within her.

"Why did you come, you...?"

"You summoned me."

"You're not the kind of person who would come just because I called."

Their reunion after eight long years. Anna Croft felt uncharacteristically bitter in the face of such a reunion.

"I."

Anna Croft, her lips pursed, lowered her head and stuttered.

"How much I—"

She couldn't tell the man before her the whole story. During her stay on the Island of the Reincarnation, and after entering the prelude to Ragnarok, she had used countless methods to search for his life or death.

How many carrier pigeons and messages she had sent, she couldn't tell.

The man never responded, and so Anna Croft was certain of his death.

And now, just as she was finally able to resign herself, she finally felt the long-awaited return of her life. Just as she was about to let go of her beliefs and even her life, he reappeared.

['Summoning Helper' will end soon.]

Anna Croft raised her head and thought with her sluggish mind.

"Run away."

"Huh?"

"Run away. Even now, I'm sure you can get another ticket."

The man looked at Anna Croft carefully and asked again.

"Do you really want that?"

Anna Croft nodded.

"Yes."

The man smiled brightly.

"Interesting."

The man said, taking a brisk step closer.

"You're afraid I'll die now."

Anna Croft instinctively took a step back.

"No. I just…"

The hastily crafted excuse struggled to hold together. The man stared at Anna Croft in silence. Though he simply stared, Anna Croft knew that his gaze was reading her.

It was the same before. Someone who could read and guess people's minds at will. And even more so because it was so accurate. Her relationship with him had always been one of injustice.

"I hate that you came here."

And yet, for the past eight years, Anna Croft had missed that injustice a little.

"How on earth could you possibly answer this summons? Did you even know where this place was in the first place?"

The man she met after eight years still gazed at the sky with those same unfair eyes.

"This is the playground of the Constellations. The coliseum of the Constellations that wish to postpone 'Ragnarok' forever."

As if responding to the man's gaze, a dizzying number of Constellations twinkled in the sky.

With their presence intact, this stage would never be destroyed.

"You came all this way knowing that?"

The man answered, as if he wasn't at all afraid of the starlight.

"Yes."

"Why?"

"You summoned me."

Anna Croft thought. Even if she had been able to use [Future Sight], she wouldn't have known what to say now.

And as always, the man easily filled the void of the future she couldn't fill.

"I'm sorry I'm so late, Kim Anna-ssi."

The man still called her by a strange name.

Faced with his sly tone, all Anna Croft could do was act like 'Kim Anna', as the man had said.

"... Yes."

With a deep sigh, Kim Anna barely took a step forward and extended her hand.

"It's been a while, Kim End-ssi."

It was their first reunion in eight years.

---

The first thing I did upon entering Valhalla Hall was to come up with a nickname.

「Kim Anna-ssi is in danger.」

It was clear how the situation was unfolding.

['Summoning the Helper' begins!]

The summoning of the helper, and the game's content. This 'preliminary battle' was undoubtedly inspired by the 'Mythical Battlefield' of the Demon King Selection Tournament.

Somewhere, the 'Mass-Production Maker' smiled meaningfully. In this seemingly imaginary landscape, I pondered.

「If there's a difference from the 'Mythical Battlefield', it's that there's a 'summoning system' here.」

Each team's commander could summon additional allies using their 'summoning costs', and indeed, the summoning was still ongoing.

[…The team summoned the 'Thunder-Eating Bird!']

[…The team summoned the 'General of Vanara'!]

The newly added enemy of Kim Anna seemed to have quite a lot of 'summoning costs'.

[Your required summoning cost is 100D.]

Fortunately or unfortunately, my required summoning cost wasn't high.

[I wonder which idiot will respond to that team this time.]

[Will it be that same idiot again?]

I turned my head to the Constellations' conversation, and saw the General wiping the fragments of stories flowing from his head. Only then did it begin to make sense. Was that why the General was in that state?

I thought again. I looked at the nickname creation window.

「I have to make Anna Croft summon me.」

With Anna's personality, she would surely meticulously review every summoned. So there was no way she wouldn't see the nickname I'd created.

The problem was what kind of 'nickname' to choose.

Several candidates quickly flashed through my mind. The first one that came to mind was 'Kim End'.

Perhaps if I chose 'Kim End', Anna Croft would definitely recognize me. And of course, 'Kim End' was a name proven by the history she and I shared.

Nevertheless, I ultimately chose not to choose that name.

Because...

「Anna Croft said. Don't save herself, save her comrades.」

I don't know what happened, but when I met Anna Croft again after eight years, she was a different person.

If it were me, I wouldn't know.

If she thought of me as a colleague, she might not have called me with the name 'Kim End'.

"So you named yourself 'Demon King of Salvation'?"

"Yes."

"No, why on earth?"

"You don't like the 'Demon King of Salvation', do you?"

"Me?"

"You lost allies with Asgard because of the Demon King of Salvation, and that's why you ended up like this. I was sure you would hate that name."

"…"

"Seeing you summoned me, it seems my prediction was correct."

I nodded, secretly pleased, but Kim Anna's expression was strange.

"You really—"

I wondered if it was just my imagination.

Is it just me?

Kim Anna, whom I hadn't seen in eight years, seemed to have become a little more resentful.

I understand. According to 'Ways of Survival', even Yoo Joonghyuk's personality was at its worst when he had regressed about 500 times.

Kim Anna sighed lightly and spoke.

"Okay. Let's leave that aside. So what are we going to do now?"

"We have to fight."

"Do you think this is a winnable fight?"

"We've cleared worse scenarios, haven't we?"

"If you're trusting my [Future Sight], I'd tell you to escape immediately."

As expected. I'd expected it.

"Is [Future Sight] blocked?"

Anna Croft nodded gravely.

"Yes. My [Future Sight] won't work on this battlefield."

The fact that [Future Sight] didn't work meant that there was a hidden element in this scenario that was interfering with [Future Sight].

「And I knew full well when her [Future Sight] would break down.」

I'd felt it from the moment I entered the battlefield. Every breath of air in this world had a terribly unpleasant stench.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', bares his greedy teeth.]

The green meadows of the stadium. I could see at a glance the stories flowing vigorously beneath the plains.

Looking at them, I understood precisely why Anna Croft's [Future Sight] had been completely ineffective on this battlefield.

「This 'outpost' battlefield is made of my brother's flesh and blood.」

---

Anna Croft continued.

"To be precise, it wasn't like this from the beginning. The noise was intense, but there were times when I could see a glimpse of the future."

I nodded and read my brother's stories, which I could sense from the battlefield.

In fact, this battlefield wasn't entirely filled with my brother's blood and murder. In this battlefield, I felt not only my brother's stories, but also the true stories of the Outer Gods, the vengeful spirits of the incarnations.

[The 1265th 'Outpost' is about to begin.]

The battle had already been repeated 1265 times.

"I see what's going on."

The incarnations who participated in the 'Outpost' were all ascended from lower-level scenarios. Some, like the 'New Murim District', had strict screening requirements, while others had more lenient conditions.

「This battlefield is steeped in the stories of the dead incarnations.」

Unlike other rounds, the 'Ascended' in this round used 'D-Coins' in the lower-level scenarios to enhance their incarnation bodies and abilities.

'D-Coins' are a fusion of my brothers' stories and the power of the Fear Realm. The incarnations who used these stories to enhance themselves died here, and as a result, this 'battlefield'—

"This battlefield is a kind of highly concentrated story—the very essence of 'Fear'."

It became a vast land of stories.

[Your stories are reacting to the battlefield.]

I couldn't even begin to imagine how many incarnations had perished here.

「A myth forged with the blood of the incarnations.」

If some of my brother's stories were ingrained in this battlefield, it wasn't surprising that Kim Anna's [Future Sight] was limited. Her [Future Sight] would be disrupted whenever Kim Dokja intervened in the future.

[Five minutes left until the battle begins.]

Kim Anna spoke urgently at the system message that appeared.

"We're really running out of time."

"Let's start with our participants."

I wondered if there might be even one familiar face. Perhaps another reader, or a major character I'd met.

"U, uu, ugh…"

"I'm going to die. I'm going to die."

But most of those summoned to our team were in poor condition. Most of them had nameless Constellations as their backing, or were abandoned after being used as terminal incarnations of a vast Nebula.

It was strange. Still, if they had come this far through the 'Ascension' system, they should have possessed basic combat prowess.

"Please, spare me. Please, spare me. I won't do it again. Constellations. Please."

"My, my coin, my coin—!"

Why were all the members of this team like this?

"Has it always been like this?"

Anna Croft nodded silently at my answer. Perhaps she had been fighting unfairly in such extreme conditions for so long.

"I never expected anything like that."

Since even Yoo Joonghyuk, who had been through over a thousand rounds, wouldn't have made such a face, I tried to make a joke.

"I'm here."

"Even so, you're just a mid-level warrior…"

"Because I hid my power."

"The Ragnarok ranking system is never wrong. Your rank won't change even if you hide your power."

Anna Croft, still seemingly disbelieving, sighed deeply and added,

"And even if you did indeed hide your power, this will be difficult."

If she, who had experienced the Fear Realm with me, could say this, then there must be more to this scenario than I knew.

"The Constellations that participated as helpers this time aren't 'first-time participants'."

As expected.

As soon as I heard her words, I looked around at the enemy members. All members of the enemy side were at least 'Narrative-grade' Constellations or their incarnations. Three stood out:

The General of Vanara.

The Thunder-Eating Bird.

The Founder of Humanity.

The selection was so impressive that it brought to mind the 'Demon King Selection Tournament'.

Judging by the perceived 'level', all three had grown in power since the main story's 'Demon King Selection Tournament'.

Anna Croft glared at the Constellations and said,

"I've already fought them several times."

"Could you elaborate?"

"The team that wins the 'Outpost' isn't necessarily promoted. Those who win on the battlefield remain as spectators and can continue to participate in the 'Battlefield'."

From the moment I first heard Anna Croft's story, I suspected such a system might exist. The number of Constellations occupying the Colosseum's audience was far greater than I expected.

「The Colosseum of the Constellations, who wish to permanently postpone 'Ragnarok'.」

The stars here are all cowards, fearing the annihilation of the world.

In other words, they were deliberately building up their strength through repeated 'preliminary battles' and holding off on participating in the main battlefield.

Like a veteran who, even after reaching a high level, refuses to leave the beginner hunting grounds and continues to slaughter.

"We can't win."

The despair she'd endured was finally beginning to dawn on her.

The situation was indeed dire.

[Team 'Zarathustra' currently has 11 members.]

In the midst of all this, our team was even one member short.

"Can we summon an ally again?"

"We don't have enough summoning costs."

"How do we acquire costs?"

"You can either receive support from the Constellations or exchange them with 'D-Coins' acquired during the match."

D-Coins? Wait, then…

[Trading goods is not possible within this battlefield.]

I see. Can't I give it to her?

"And even if it costs a small amount, there are no warriors we can summon anyway."

"Why?"

"In this situation, who would help our team? At least a Constellation on the Korean peninsula was helping us until recently…"

It was clear who that person was.

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', cheers for your strength.]

This time, perhaps I didn't have the cost to summon that General. It was a contentious situation for me. Perhaps Kim Anna summoned me instead of the General.

I spoke to her as if to comfort her.

"Don't worry. We have warriors who can help us."

"Even if we have warriors, they're not of average rank—"

"A special prize warrior."

Anna Croft's expression changed for the first time at the mention of special rank. But her complexion quickly darkened.

"I don't know who that is, but summoning a special-level warrior will require at least 10,000 summoning costs. You won't be able to collect that much in one match."

"Of course. In this match."

Anna Croft tilted her head at my question and asked back.

"What do you mean?"

"Let's focus on the match for now. What did you say the pool would be like?"

Anna Croft briefly explained the match's mechanics. She gave two key points to remember:

One, never lose.

Two, pay attention to the 'Prophecies' that randomly appear during the match.

As expected, the Prophecies were similar to the 'Crests' that appeared in the 'Demon King Selection Tournament'.

"There are disasters or objects that appear alongside the Prophecies. Defeating or destroying them will grant you the Prophecies..."

"So your team's power will be boosted."

"How did you know?"

"I know of similar games. So how many Prophecies are there in total?"

"This battlefield is small, so there will be three Prophecies."

"So collecting them all means victory."

"Theoretically, yes."

Anna Croft also explained special devices like 'bush'.

"I understand. 'Bush' are places used in times of emergency or to conceal oneself from enemies."

"Yes. That's useless if the enemy is using an item related to [Intelligence], though... Oh, and each bush has its own additional effects."

"Effects?"

"For example, some bushes increase attack or defense simply by hiding in them, while others impose specific penalties. Since the battlefield itself is based on 'Fear', the effects of bushes are somewhat imperfect. I heard that sometimes entering a bush can cause a player to go missing."

"Go missing?"

"Yes. They say there are those who disappeared during the 'outpost' like that. I've never witnessed them in any of the battles I've participated in, though…"

This is interesting information.

I mentally summoned the 'Unchanging One'.

[The Recorder of Fear, 'Unchanging One', responds to your call.]

It seemed he had been eavesdropping on our conversation. I told him to look up the relevant records and then returned to Anna's story.

"Our side is at a disadvantage in terms of combat power, so the best we can do is hold out until the prophecy is revealed. And…"

"We must somehow secure the first prophecy."

Prophecies strengthen the team's combat power, so in this situation, this was the only strategy with a chance of success.

But Kim Anna looked utterly unsure.

"Actually, it's been the same strategy all along."

"Have any of those operations ever been successful?"

"We've stolen the first prophecy a few times…"

So, despite stealing the first prophecy, they've never won. Anna Croft, taking a few deep breaths, continued.

"We must seize the first prophecy at all costs. That way, we have a slight chance of victory. The problem is, the battle is likely to end before that. In most battles, our team is annihilated before the 'first prophecy' is announced."

"…"

"Kim End-ssi."

"Yes."

"Why are you laughing?"

Anna Croft, frowning, was about to say something when something like a small firecracker exploded above her head.

[The 'Skuld's Golden Dice Hall' has opened in the 'Valhalla Hall'!]

Selena Kim, who was listening nearby, let out a small groan, and Anna Croft, her expression crumpled, cursed in a Korean manner.

"The damn party has begun."

Skuld's Golden Dice Hall.

I'd heard of this before.

[The 'Constellations' Wager' begins.]

The gods' gambling hall, opened whenever a major story event takes place in <Asgard>. I had a rough idea of what it was like. Perhaps, with each match, the stars would place bets on the winner and loser.

[There are currently no bets on this battlefield.]

But there were no bets on this battlefield. Perhaps it was because they had decided it wouldn't even be decided in the first place.

I opened my mouth, looking at the system message.

"Let's use the same strategy this time. We'll hold out somehow and until the first prophecy appears."

"It'll be tough. They have no reason to waste time—"

"I have a plan."

Kim Anna narrowed her eyes, as if thinking about something in my words.

"I won't listen to that plan."

"Why?"

"You're planning to sacrifice yourself again."

How on earth did Kim Dokja's image become so ingrained that even Kim Anna was thinking this way?

I waved my hand, looking aggrieved.

"I don't make sacrifices."

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', nods.]

Anna Croft sneered.

"Are you telling me to believe you when you spout such stories?"

I paused, meeting Kim Anna's trembling eyes for a moment.

[Waiting time ends.]

I saw her eyes slowly turning to despair. Without ignoring her despair, I spoke in a clear voice.

"Kim Anna-ssi, it's been eight years."

[The 1265th battlefield opens.]

[The match begins.]

A vast meadow opened up. A cloud of dust rose in the distance.

"Just as you've been through many things, so have I. I can't share them all right now, but __"

As soon as the battle began, the Constellations charged, shattering the ground.

"At least I can tell you one thing for sure."

Looking at the Constellations approaching with a menacing air, I added calmly.

"They will never end the match before the 'First Prophecy' begins."

963 Episode 57 Twilight of the Gods (6)

"What the heck...?"

Anna Croft added urgently, watching the Constellations rushing toward her.

"This isn't the time to be complacent! They've already won countless matches! They probably used their summoning costs differently—"

I could sense it, too. The Constellations rushing toward me all had a special aura surrounding them.

[The participants on that team have used the 'Incarnation Body Enhancement Pack II'!]

The Incarnation Body Enhancement Pack. I expected that, but the 'summoning costs' earned through matches aren't limited to 'summoning helpers'.

Judging by the way they swarmed in from the very start, it seemed like they were going to tear us apart before the First Prophecy was even spoken.

[Trample on them.]

The mantra resonated majestically. The 'Thunder-Eating Bird' flying at the forefront roared.

[The Constellation, 'Thunder-Eating Bird', has acquired an acceleration buff!]

Orb-like objects were placed throughout the skyway.

The 'Thunder-Eating Bird' swallowed the objects with its massive mouth, accelerating even further and unleashing lightning strikes at every obstacle in its path.

Anna Croft shouted, looking at the pitch-black grassland path.

"Everyone, run!"

The incarnations, their faces paling, began to flee frantically.

But Anna and the incarnations knew this. There was no way to escape that Constellation. Within ten seconds at the latest, we would face that mad birdhead.

「What if I used the stories of the 'Demon King of Salvation'?」

I weighed the stories within myself, comparing their scales to mine.

In a sense, now that they perceived me as a 'low-level warrior' offered an opportunity.

"Kim Dokja! You too, hurry—"

"It's okay."

The distance between me and the 'Thunder-Eating bird' was now a stone's throw. It would reach us in five seconds.

"I told you."

Four seconds.

"Those guys..."

Three seconds.

"Absolutely not, the game will not end until the 'First Prophecy' appears."

Two seconds.

"Stop that nonsense, please... ah."

A desperate Anna Croft turned to me, her expression a testament to her resignation. She stumbled, then hugged me, as if sacrificing her own incarnation body to save me.

And then, lightning struck from the pitch-black sky.

One second.

A deafening blue. The lightning struck right before my eyes, incinerating the meadow a fraction of an inch ahead. The 'Thunder-Eating bird' folded its massive wings and landed in front of me. The majesty of the Constellation, the Narrative-grade Constellation, revealing its gigantic incarnation body alongside the gale, was truly magnificent. I recalled the information about him.

「The thunder-eating bird—'Garuda'. One of the eight mountains of <Steady>, the right-hand man of Vishnu, the 'Guardian of Time', one of the mythical trinity of <Vedas>, the king of birds.」

Could he possibly display this level of power by the 85th scenario, even if it were only a matter of probability?

「This was the true power of the 'Narrative-grade Constellation'.」

If it had been a while ago, I would have been intimidated by its imposing presence, but now I was completely unfazed.

Garuda, his massive wings folded, gazed down at me, his golden beak twitching as if in awe of me.

[This is the first time I've seen an incarnation like this, and you're so brave. What is your identity? What city gate did you come from?]

Ignoring him, I lightly patted the half-conscious Kim Anna on the shoulder and offered her food and shelter.

"It's okay. That bird can't harm us. It's well-trained."

Following this, other Constellations arrived.

The second to stop before me was a giant ape clad in massive armor.

「Hanuman, the General of Vanara」

With a cry of, Hanuman lowered his massive club and let out a thunderous roar.

[You damn bird-head! I told you to slow down! You haven't killed them all already, have you?]

Garuda, who snapped a discontented question, wiggled his long beak and replied,

[We haven't killed a single one yet. Did we really receive a hold order?]

[Yes!]

[Every hour? Is there a someone here protected by the Giant Nebula?]

Garuda shook his massive bird-head, seemingly in incomprehension.

Anna Croft, who had finally regained her senses, looked at me with a puzzled expression.

—What have you done now?

"You don't have to use Transmission. Those guys don't care what we say."

I watched the Constellations, their massive incarnation bodies swell, chattering away. Like gourmets facing a boring meal, they were busy exchanging mantras, ignoring us.

Anna Croft, glancing furtively at me, continued to ask,

—Have you obtained the blessing of some Mythical Constellation? Have you joined a Giant Nebula?"

"If so, why would I stay here? Why would I join another team?"

—Then how...

I shrugged and looked up at the sky.

"Simple."

There was a faintly twinkling golden dice symbol.

[A 'bet' is currently underway on this battlefield.]

Then the Constellations in the audience watching the match began to glow brightly. I glared at the sinister light, then grinned and added,

"I suppose that means someone doesn't want us to 'die'."

[Come on, come on, this isn't a match you see every day!]

Skuld, the god of gambling and lending, continued to solicit customers with his fierce pronouncements.

But no spectators showed up. That's understandable.

[Team Zarathustra vs. Team Vedas]

The difference in strength between the teams was so great that even a bet wouldn't be possible.

[Ugh, this is a total mess.]

[Why are you even offering a bet on something like this? You seem to have lost your touch, Skuld.]

Skuld's expression hardened at the sarcasm coming from all around, and he licked his lips.

[Haha, audience members. Don't be like that, why don't you bet—]

[Who would bet coins on a match like that at a time like this? Huh?]

A time like this. The Constellations were right.

Recently, the Constellations' spending throughout Valhalla Hall had significantly decreased.

It's already been three years since the hall opened. Over the years, thousands of battles have been held, and thousands of bets have been made. Most of the Constellations that were considered 'whales' on the board have moved to the main battlefield, leaving only cautious charlatans and fools who only wager small amounts of money on the betting table.

This was a difficult situation for Skuld, who relied on betting fees to make a living.

He needed to somehow create a provocative betting game to get the Constellations to participate, but there was no sign of a major game opening...

Skuld was about to abandon the betting game when a dazzlingly gleaming head obscured his vision.

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', is looking at you.]

Skuld also knew this Constellation. It was a Constellation of the highest rank on the Korean Peninsula. It had managed to climb to the 'Valhalla Hall', but it wasn't destined to rise above that. One of the listless Constellations, languishing in this hall, waiting for the battle on the 'main battlefield' to end.

[Oh, right, bald. What's going on?]

At his question, the missionary silently reached into his pocket and pulled out a D-coin.

[Huh? You want to join the bet?]

The missionary nodded, and Skuld chuckled and asked.

[Which team are you betting on?]

The missionary, his face broken and his pronunciation difficult, stuttered as Skuld's expression contorted.

[Are you serious? You're betting on that team?]

The missionary had called out the team as 'Zarathustra'.

Skuld hesitated for a moment, then asked again.

[You know what team that is, don't you? If you bet on that, you'll definitely lose.]

The missionary smiled as if it was okay. Skuld watched him quietly before speaking.

[I've heard the rumors, but you really are out of your mind. Why would you bet on that team? Do you even have a favorite incarnation?]

Skold was well aware of the rumors about the Ambassador of the Mission. The story of a mad Constellation repeatedly supporting a prophet's team whose defeat was certain.

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', smiles bitterly.]

Skold had seen Constellations like the Ambassador of the Mission countless times.

A Constellation that burned all its stories and dedicated its life to a single story.

It was a common mistake made by Constellations gripped by the fear of impending destruction.

[Staking all its remaining light on the last story of its choice. A romantic story, but...]

Skold added with a bitter smile.

[Those coins won't even open the 'bet'.]

The Bald General took out a total of 300 D-Coins. This was far short of the minimum required to open the bet. But that wasn't the only problem.

[And is now the time for you to make a bet? You haven't forgotten that the repayment of the loan you borrowed last time is just around the corner, have you?]

The General' shoulders flinched at the mention of a loan.

To remain in Valhalla Hall, you must continuously deposit a certain amount of coins, or D-coins.

And the General had already borrowed coins from Skuld once to cover the repayment.

[The loan is due in three days. If you don't have the coins by then, you'll have to pay them in shills.]

The General lowered his head, and Skuld patted his shoulder with a mock, sinister smile.

[Well, if you really want to participate in the bet, there's a way.]

Skuld said to the General, who slowly raised his head as if asking what was going on.

[You know a lot of Constellations from other Korean peninsulas, don't you? Bring them to the betting table. Then I'm willing to make an additional loan, if that's the case.]

The ambassador's face slowly flushed red.

[The Constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', says he has no intention of betraying his comrades.]

Skuld smiled wryly. It was an expected response.

He doesn't know what lies within that small piece of land, but based on his experience, the Constellations on the Korean Peninsula have a strangely strong mutual trust.

That's why Skuld's true intention was this.

[Or, there's another way. Stake every 'story' you have, and I'll lend you about 5,000 D-coins.]

At the mention of 5,000 D-coins, the General's head snapped up again.

Skuld's even more sinister words lingered in his ears.

[Your goal isn't to make money from that 'game', is it? You want to save the prophet of <Asgard>, right?]

In fact, Skuld knew the missionary's purpose. It wasn't about betting coins because the missionary believed that the 'Zarathustra' team would truly win.

「A match where a bet is placed can attract the attention of the Constellations.」

The moment a 'bet' is deemed worthwhile, the main incarnation of the match is highly likely to be designated as the 'Resurrected'.

[If you bet on that incarnation, they'll likely be designated as the Resurrected next time. You hope that incarnation survives, no matter what.]

The General didn't answer.

Skuld murmured.

[You're so cruel. Knowing that incarnation wants to die more than anyone else, why are you trying to save her? Do you want her to despair even more? Or—]

The General remained silent. Skuld added with a sigh.

[Anyway, the match is about to begin. What are you going to do? Do you want to borrow coins?]

The General's eyes slowly began to glow.

Skuld already knew the General's answer. He didn't know why he wanted to revive that incarnation. However, a Constellation devoted to a story will often sacrifice its own life for it. The 'Bald General of Justice' before him was in the grip of such madness.

Suddenly, the General Samyeondae's lips parted in a twisted manner, and just as Skuld was about to open his mouth with a satisfied expression,

"Samyeongdae-nim, you were here."

Someone barged in between them.

Skuld frowned at the unexpected intruder and said,

[I'm sorry, but we're in the middle of an important conversation—]

"Nice to meet you, too, General. Do you remember this? I still have the mat you gave me. Of course. It's my most prized possession."

[Look here.]

"You want to make a bet? Why? Are you bored?"

The intruder, oblivious to Skuld's reaction, clasped both of the ambassador's hands and began to chatter. He treated him as if he were his own grandfather.

"General, have you ever heard of voice phishing?"

[…]

"You don't know? Yes, that could be true. It's okay. Anyway, there are so many scary scammers out there. These days, it's so dangerous. How could you borrow money so recklessly?"

[…]

"If you look closely, you're a good person? No, come to your senses. Ambassador, you're being gaslighted. I know because I've been fooled by those narrow-eyed people all the time. They're just scamming you to get your story."

Skuld's mouth fell open in shock. He'd been criticized for running a gambling ring, but this was the first time he'd been insulted like this by a complete stranger.

No matter how he looked at him, he was a complete stranger. How could he have the nerve to…

"Huh? Why did you have to bet on her? Huh, that's the point?"

That's when he noticed the incarnation's equipment. Although it was grimy here and there, the equipment was steeped in a deep story. The incarnation's robust muscles were also visible.

The incarnation finally sighed deeply, looked at him, and then strode over to him.

"How much does that bet start at?"

Skuld pondered for a moment before answering.

[You need at least 1,000 D-Coins to make the bet count. If you want a bigger bet, you'll need at least 10,000 D-Coins.]

"Ten thousand D-Coins?"

[Why? Is that too much?]

Skuld knew. No Constellation would bet 10,000 D-Coins these days. Even so, the reason he'd asked such an absurd amount was simply to discourage ambassador Samyeongdae and that uninvited guest.

But...

"Let's do it."

Smiling, the incarnation pulled the D-Coins from his pocket.

"It's cheaper than I thought?"

Skuld doubted his eyes several times, counting the D-coins the incarnation had pulled out. The missionary, watching from the side, also widened his eyes.

「It's a 'big deal'.」

The moment Skuld saw the D-coins, that was the only thought that filled his mind. But the moment Skuld reached out for it...

"Wait."

The incarnation grabbed his wrist and said.

"I'll make one condition."

964 Episode 57 Twilight of the Gods (7)

Samyeondaesa recalled the moment he first entered the 'Valhalla Hall'. The explosions of cannons and the excited voices of the incarnations.

「"Samyeondaesa-nim."」

The young incarnation's face sparkled with a strange fervor.

「"We've come this far. We've made it. Maybe we can even make it to the final scenario."」

The incarnation he had chosen after much deliberation.

When he first saw the incarnation, the Samyeondaesa hesitated to become their sponsor. Because of their poor overall stats, the incarnation had been shunned by the other constellations.

[The constellation, the 'Careful Star', says it would be foolish to become the sponsor of such an incarnation.]

His observation of that continent's scenario was merely a coincidence. The incarnation of the Korean Peninsula scenario, which he had been observing for a long time, had gone missing, and the Samyeondaesa wandered around the early scenarios for a while, perhaps hoping for a 'what if'. Another hopeful hope: that he might discover another incarnation.

Of course, even Samyeondaesa knew well that such a thing wasn't common. Some stories only happen once in a lifetime, and only after they've passed do we realize that fact.

Nevertheless, the constellations lingered and wandered the lower scenario regions because their thirst for stories could only be quenched with stories.

「"Help me! Help me!"」

Even if it wasn't the same story.

「"Please—!"」

The incarnation he discovered was a boy from Connecticut, California.

An incarnation of a different nationality than Samyeondaesa.

With the Korean incarnation already under his control, he couldn't possibly enter into a contract with an incarnation of another nationality.

[The constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', is observing you.]

He still can't forget the incarnation's first words, which startled him as he glanced at him.

「"Do you happen to know incarnation Kim Dokja?"」

Only upon hearing the name did the Samyeondaesa realize.

「In fact, the incarnation he truly desired was 'Kim Dokja'.」

But so many constellations desired him, that Samyeondaesa naturally fell down the pecking order of potential partners.

So, at some point, Samyeondaesa decided to become his fan instead of his sponsor.

He doesn't have to be his incarnation. He just wanted to support him. He wanted to enjoy the story of his life together and witness the ■■ of the world he pursues.

But with the end of the Fear Realm, he magically disappeared, leaving only Samyeondaesa, who had supported him, alone.

[The constellation, 'Maegeumjijon', leaves the channel in search of a new story.]

[The constellation, 'Seoaeilpil', leaves the channel in search of a new story.]

Even as the surrounding constellations left the channel one by one, Samyeondaesa remained, hoping that Kim Dokja might reappear somewhere in the world. That's how the past eight years of Samyeondaesa flowed.

「"I want to be like that person."」

Even now, Samyeondaesa couldn't quite explain why he chose to become the sponsor behind the incarnation. Perhaps it was because his blond hair resembled Kim Dokja. Or perhaps his narrowed eyes reminded him of Kim Dokja.

[Samyeondaesa became the sponsor behind 'Noah Kim'.]

Or perhaps it was simply because he knew Kim Dokja.

「"Samyeondaesa, this is a secret."」

Traveling with him was enjoyable.

He was eloquent, and for some unknown reason, he was very fond of Kim Dokja.

「"Samyeondaesa, you may not know this, but I've known you since the beginning."」

He often spoke incomprehensibly. Perhaps even in that way, to Samyeondaesa, he resembled Kim Dokja.

「"I can't explain it well, though."」

Contrary to his initially poor abilities, the incarnation often solved scenarios with surprising ideas. He thought and acted like Kim Dokja, and often, in his sleep, he would tell him strange novel stories.

「"If I knew it would become reality, I would have read more... But the translation here is..."」

Thus, the Connecticut-born incarnation and the Korean-born constellation steadily worked their way through the scenarios. They cleared scenarios 20, 30, and 40. In this way, Samyeondaesa gradually forgot about Kim Dokja.

It wasn't the same joy he felt watching Kim Dokja's story, but he felt a distinct happiness as he built up his story.

Finally, when he reached scenario 80, his incarnation asked,

"Master, will we meet again soon?"

There comes a time when every constellation must give up on its own scenario. The moment he realized that this was the end of the story his life could unfold, the story his light could illuminate.

Some constellations crumble in frustration, while others, seeking to elevate their status, take on even more powerful incarnations.

In that respect, Samyeondaesa was truly fortunate.

"You said you were in scenario number 80, Samyeondaesa."

The incarnation he had nurtured finally reached his scenario.

The moment all constellations yearned for had arrived for him.

[See you in scenario number 85.]

Samyeondaesa was filled with anticipation.

He could finally meet his incarnation. With him, perhaps he could even work on the second half of the scenario he had previously abandoned. He could join forces with his incarnation to complete the scenario, and perhaps even reach the end of this world.

[Fight! Make the Korean Peninsula's status known! Never give up!]

With that single anticipation, Samyeondaesa participated in 'Ragnarok'. He fought against the enemies in the preliminary battle. He aimed his spear and sword at unfamiliar constellations of unfamiliar nationalities, ultimately beheading them.

Leaving behind the wailing screams of the incarnations, he made excuses, believing that this was all inevitable. Believing it was a task he had to undertake to meet the incarnation.

And finally, when he returned victoriously to the audience of this Valhalla Hall...

[The execution ceremony begins.]

His incarnation was on the scaffold.

---

"So that's what happened."

Samyeondaesa's story was disjointed and incoherent. The story on his face was muddled.

Nevertheless, Jung Heewon listened attentively to the end.

[The constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', is touched by the consideration of the incarnation 'Jung Heewon'.]

He hadn't expected Jung Heewon to say anything. In fact, even if Jung Heewon had said something, Samyeondaesa wouldn't have been able to hear it. His mind was already seething with the incarnation's final voice.

「"Samyeondaesa."」

The incarnation, waving at him from the execution platform, used his final opportunity to speak to his superior.

「"I'm sorry I couldn't keep my promise."」

He still remembered the moment the executioner's blade fell and the incarnation's head fell.

The incarnation rearranged the ridges on his face and barely managed to continue his speech.

[My incarnation was on the 'Prophet's' team.]

In this prelude to 'Ragnarok,' there was a team whose 'defeat' was certain.

The incarnation had heard the rumors well. However, he never imagined that his incarnation would be on that team.

[At first, I hated the Prophet. I thought my incarnation died because of her.]

The constellation, having lost his incarnation, went half-mad.

[If it weren't for her team, my incarnation wouldn't have died.]

All the souls who failed to resurrect in 'Ragnarok' were absorbed into the land of the 'Outpost' and became part of a grand narrative.

On the land where his incarnation died and disappeared, Samyeondaesa cried out quietly.

[That's why I started sponsoring the Prophet.]

The incarnations who receive sponsorship gain the attention of the constellations, and those who receive attention are designated as the next 'Resurrected One'.

[I knew she would be resurrected even without my sponsorship. And yet, I did it anyway...]

As Skuld said, his sponsorship stemmed from a rather base desire.

Samyeondaesa wanted the Prophet, who had caused his incarnation's death, to suffer. He wanted her to be tortured for eternity within the chains of resurrection created by the constellations, clinging to the flimsy thread of hope.

[I watched the Prophet die like that, over and over again, ten times, fifty times, a hundred times... I saw her companions lose and lose again.]

But sitting in the audience of constellations, laughing, chattering, and cursing, watching the Prophet's downfall, Samyeondaesa was overcome by a strange sense of disillusionment.

That day, for the first time, Samyeondaesa noticed that the Prophet, now on the scaffold, was desperately crying out for something.

「"Kill me. I want that incarnation to live, not me."」

As if awakening from a long hypnosis, Samyeondaesa belatedly confirmed the story of the deceased incarnation.

「"I'm sorry I couldn't keep my promise."」

Words he hadn't heard because he was so focused on the voice of the incarnation before his death.

Those words rang in Samyeondaesa's ears.

「"Please! Constellations! Save that incarnation! I want him to live!"」

The expression on the Prophet's face as she cried out, pointing precisely at his incarnation. Looking at the prophet, and then at the constellations mocking her, Samyeondaesa wondered, 'Who truly killed his incarnation?'

[I still supported the prophet. However...]

Samyeondaesa gradually increased the amount of support. He sold stories and relics. Every time he did something like that, he knew the ladder to the 'next scenario' would break. Yet, he couldn't stop.

[On a whim, I suddenly wanted to see a certain scene.]

Valhalla Hall filled with cheers. Looking at the audience of constellations, gathered like a solid castle, Samyeondaesa said,

[Just once, to see her win.]

He knew it was impossible. Nevertheless, Samyeondaesa sponsored his coins as if reciting a mantra. He sponsored the prophet and bet on her team. He poured all his coins into it. When his coins were almost depleted, he borrowed money from Skuld.

Knowing full well that it was irreversible, knowing that if he continued like this, this would truly be his last ■■, the missionary did it.

[I'm grateful to you.]

And just now, his last bet was complete.

[You bet on Team 'Zarathustra'.]

The match began, and the battlefield opened. With wild cheers, the constellations on the screen lit up.

[Thanks to you, I was able to make the 'final bet'. If I'd gone this far, even that dead child would understand.]

The golden dice rolled violently in the air.

It was spinning. It was evidence that the constellations were flocking to the gambling table.

[Someone bet on Team 'Veda'.]

[Someone bet on Team 'Veda'.]

…

The bet just kept growing.

Perhaps the scale of this gambling table would be one of the largest since the opening of 'Valhalla Hong'.

[But let me ask you one thing.]

But the scale of this table wasn't simply because Jung Heewon bet so many coins.

[Why on earth did you... place such an 'additional bet'?]

At the ambassador's words, Jung Heewon saw the 'additional bet condition' flashing in the air.

[There is an 'additional bet condition' in this match!]

[All spectators can bet on the 'additional bet condition'!]

[The 'additional bet condition' is 'when the match ends'.]

1. The match ends before the first prophecy appears.
2. The match ends after the first prophecy appears.

That was the 'additional bet' that Jung Heewon had proposed to Skuld.

「"I'll bet on Team 'Zarathustra'. However, I'll place an additional bet on 'the match ending before the first prophecy appears'."」

It was puzzling.

There was absolutely no reason to make such an outrageous bet. Nevertheless, Skuld accepted Jung Heewon's offer.

「"How about an additional 100,000 D-coins?"」

Not just 100,000, but a whopping 200,000 D-coins had flowed into the betting table, and he had no reason to refuse.

[You can never win this bet.]

Samyeondaesa already knew from his long experience. Skuld's 'Golden Dice Special' was a game orchestrated by the so-called big shots.

[Someone bet an additional 5,000 D-coins on 'The match ends after the first prophecy appears!']

As a huge amount of coins flowed into the gambling table, naturally, hidden whales emerged, eager to gobble up the blind money.

But Jung Heewon remained calm.

"No, it's all going according to plan."

The next moment, as if by magic, a surprising change appeared in the stadium.

[Oh, ohhh—!]

Amidst the cheers of the crowd, Samyeondaesa also widened his eyes.

The constellations that had been rushing towards Team Zarathustra, as if ready to crush them at any moment, stopped one by one, leaving their targets right before their eyes.

[Hahahaha! I knew it!]

[Just playing with them!]

Amidst the excited crowd, Samyeondaesa felt goosebumps.

[You, no way.]

Gazing at Jung Heewon, who silently watched the match, Samyeondaesa was amazed by the incarnation's insight.

[To buy the Prophet a little more time…]

The constellations within the battlefield had already conspired with the Skuld's 'big hands'. Therefore, the current situation was clear.

「The constellations within the stadium will not end the match immediately in order to seize Jung Heewon's amassed wealth.」

Jung Heewon likely anticipated this. Jung Heewon had invested a whopping 200,000 D-coins to buy time for Team Zarathustra.

「If this development continues, the Prophet's team can avoid annihilation until the 'First Prophecy' appears.」

Samyeondaesa, moved by Jung Heewon's determination, secretly wiped away tears.

"What are you talking about? I bet to win?"

Jung Hweewon muttered something strange.

"Oh, by the way, I don't know how to split that money if I win."

[What on earth are you talking about—]

Samyeondaesa grew anxious. Upon closer inspection, he saw that this incarnation truly intended to win the bet.

[The Prophet's team will truly win…]

And a moment later, Samyeondaesa's eyes widened. While no other constellations noticed, Samyeondaesa was the only one who recognized the incarnation.

Jung Heewon, who was watching the same scene, said,

"Isn't that obvious?"

Screen 4: A man approaches the still constellations of 'Veda' with a menacing air.

Amidst the magical scenery, Samyeondaesa stared blankly at his coat fluttering in the air.

「"Someday, I really want to try a scenario like Kim Dokja."」

Jung Heewon said, as if she understood Samyeondaesa's feelings.

"He's over there."

The incarnation that had been missing for the past eight years was there. The incarnation he had searched for, the incarnation he had longed for. Watching the man gazing up at the constellations with a long, ancient smile, Samyeondaesa realized what was about to happen.

Perhaps,

[The story of the 'Demon King of Salvation' begins its storytelling.]

It would be his and his incarnation's favorite story.

965 Episode 57 Twilight of the Gods (8)

—You really made that bet?

Anna Croft, having heard everything I said, looked as shocked as I had when I read the 'Apocalypse Prophecy'.

"Yes, well."

—We could have failed. If the constellations hadn't intervened in the bet, we could have been annihilated.

I looked at the 'golden dice' shining brightly in the air and said,

"I knew they'd intervene."

Before answering the summons, I told Jung Heewon about the bet in the 'Hall of Golden Dice'.

「"When the betting table opens, be sure to place a bet according to the 'betting conditions' I mentioned. I'll give you the D-coins in advance."」

The D-coins in the Ascension Hall are also used in higher-level scenarios. However, judging by the state of Valhalla Hall, the 'D-coins' in this area were already practically drying up.

"They absolutely need D-Coins to survive. There are only two ways to secure them in this area: win the game or—"

—Steal them from other incarnations or constellations.

I nodded. As expected, the clever Kim Anna had already figured out my intentions. Well, it was even stranger that Anna Croft, a former Las Vegas gambler, didn't know that.

「Skuld's 'Hall of Golden Dice' is one of Asgard's core corrupt events.」

All the bets in the hall were rigged by Skuld, the organizer, and a few 'whales'.

"With the blind money rolling in, there's no way they wouldn't act."

—Do you have any idea what you could do with that much D-Coins?

200,000 D-Coins. Enough to build a team of elite warriors, or even better.

In short, if those D-Coins were converted into summoning costs…

—You were definitely going to win the next match.

"Does that mean we're giving up this match?"

—You could be the next one to be resurrected.

"Then you're going to die."

—I'm not afraid of death anymore.

Do people who've experienced the same world hundreds of times all say similar things?

A gloomy story permeated her body, having endured hundreds of 'preliminary battles'.

And I knew what that story foreshadowed.

「Regression depression.」

Kim Anna suffered from 'regression depression'. If Yoo Joonghyuk had heard about it, he'd have been so shocked he'd have eaten dirt.

In any case, knowing the symptoms, I couldn't just ignore it, so I spoke.

"You're okay, but what about Selena Kim?"

'Regression depression' is a mental illness that corrodes the spirit of the incarnation, but there's one extreme solution: to place an even heavier burden on the regressor's heavy shoulders.

"If you give up so easily, what are the people who trusted you and participated in this competition going to do?"

This was the contradiction of 'regression depression'. The more the regressor reflected on their responsibilities and duties, the more they struggled to regain their sanity amidst the pain. Reclaim it.

Of course, the price would be worse the next time depression struck, but for now, there was no other way.

"Get your head together. We haven't lost yet."

Fortunately, it seemed to have worked, as Anna Croft's gaze began to brighten.

—Anyway… It's a shame you used the D-Coins like that. If it were those D-Coins…

"I also know how much 200,000 D-Coins are worth."

But here, I absolutely had to use them.

"If I was just going to win one game and move up, like you said, I wouldn't have used them either."

—What's that…

"Anyway, since we have time, let's do what we can. Let's…"

I slowly turned my gaze. Anna Croft also turned her head in my direction.

There.

There was Selena Kim, concentrating, making a specific hand gesture.

「Search Fox.」

Selena Kim's unique skill, which allows her to search the battlefield by summoning small fox guardian spirits.

I slowly opened my eyes and asked her, "Have you found the 'Bush'?"

Selena Kim nodded and relayed something to me through telepathy. For a moment, I felt the eyes of the battlefield turn towards me.

Anna Croft's telepathy came.

—Isn't that why you've been talking so much...

I gave a faint nod to the clever Anna Kim.

[The Constellation, 'Thunder-Eating bird', is wary of you.]

[The Constellation, 'General of Vanara', wants to uncover your scheme.]

[The Constellation, 'Founder of Humanity', is curious about what you're up to.]

They're pretending not to hear me, but... There's no way those sinister bastards wouldn't listen to me. An incarnation that's undeniably intimidating from the moment they meet is babbling such nonsense. What constellation wouldn't be interested?

—Was your goal from the beginning to buy time to find the 'bush'?

I deliberately opened my mouth to keep the constellations' attention on me. That way, Selena Kim's search foxes could be active.

「The missing bush. A 'Disaster-level Fear' that's said to randomly appear during every match. The incarnations who go missing through this bush have never returned to the stadium or the 'Valhalla Hall'.」

I had just received information about the various bushes hidden in this area from the 'Unchanging One'.

I briefly glanced over the bushes' appearance conditions and then slowly turned around.

There were the incarnations of our team, still trembling in fear.

Overwhelmed by the constellations' aura, the incarnations were frozen in place, unable to fight or flee. I stared at them silently, opening my mouth.

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite LV.???' activated!]

"Everyone."

I felt everyone's gaze focused on me.

"I won't ask you to fight with me."

With the current level of [Incite], I could temporarily awaken the constellations from their fear.

"This is a battle with no clear chance of winning, so why risk your life fighting?"

Regardless of how they got here, the fact that they've reached Scenario 85 means they're among the elite in their region.

These incarnations have accumulated a fair amount of stories and have a certain understanding of the mechanics of this 'Star Stream'. They don't need complicated words of encouragement.

"Run. It's not shameful, so run until the very end. That's the last fight you can have on this damned battlefield."

The words I delivered with [Incite] were just empty, meaningless words anyone could say. Words I wouldn't have even bothered to utter.

"Survive, please."

Even so, the reason I opened my mouth to speak was simple.

「For some, even the courage to run is a luxury.」

Words telling them not to give up. Words telling them to live. Words that could be spoken purely for the sake of someone's survival, in a world filled with spectacle and mockery.

"Follow me, everyone! I know where the bushes are!"

Selena Kim exchanged glances with me and began to run, and one of the previously hesitant incarnations began to chase after her.

"Uuugh!"

"I've been trying to die here all this time—"

"Die only! I won't die!"

As if trying to give meaning to my empty cheers, the incarnations began to run away, screaming desperately.

However, the unfortunate truth was this:

[The constellation, 'Thunder-Eating bird', laughs derisively.]

This <Star Stream> was particularly cruel to the desperate struggles of the incarnations.

[I never said I'd let them go, though.]

A bolt of lightning struck from the air, and the Thunderbird's lightning struck right in front of Selena Kim's nose.

"Kwaaaaaaa!"

The incarnations running ahead screamed and fell to the ground.

The reason the constellations refused to let us go was clear. They were holding on, not killing us, because of the stakes in the 'bet'.

The reason they were holding us back now was probably to save them the trouble of searching for us, who had been scattered.

I briefly held back the dark clouds created by the Thunderbird. I looked at him and walked towards him.

"Newbies need to be treated warmly. Do you think your game will work properly if all the newbies quit? Oh, you didn't read that far?"

[Huh?]

"『Even a novice can master the game in a week』."

[How did you get that item...?]

I took a quick breath, then circulated the story in my heart strongly.

「'Demon King of Salvation' mode is activated.」

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', begins its storytelling!]

Along with the dazzling story that enveloped my entire body, [Way of the Wind] took hold at my feet. I soared into the air, overlaying [Baekcheongganggi] on my 'Unbreakable Faith'. I swung my sword towards the sky, and a surge of electricity struck the dark clouds in the sky. The dark clouds, crushed by my attack, instantly disintegrated.

[Go.]

The incarnations, hastily regaining their senses at my mantra, began to run again. Perhaps because they were concerned about me. The constellations didn't rush to chase the incarnations.

Instead, on the battlefield. They were curious about my display of aura.

[As expected, he's got a hidden plan.]

Unlike in 'New Murim District', the constellations didn't seem overly flustered despite my aura.

[Didn't I say so?]

[It seems he's sponsored by some small or medium-sized constellation.]

The 'Demon King of Salvation' mode radiates aura comparable to that of a late-stage narrative-grade.

But over there, there were three constellations that reached the late-stage narrative-grade.

Even the rest of the team were at least mid-stage narrative-grade, so it seemed they wouldn't lose their composure.

[I don't know which one, but it wouldn't be bad for entertainment.]

The constellations each began to radiate aura, as if ready to easily trample on me.

[The Constellation, 'Thunder-Eating bird', releases its aura!]

[The Constellation, 'General of Vanara', releases its aura!]

[The Constellation, 'Founder of Humanity', releases its aura!]

Anna Croft hurriedly intervened in the heated atmosphere of the battlefield.

"Constellations! Everyone, please stop! Have you forgotten that there's a wager at stake?"

The 'General of Banaras' responded with a sarcastic remark.

[The wager was 'that the match wouldn't end until the first prophecy was fulfilled'. The match wouldn't end just because one of them was killed.]

Watching the approaching constellations, I pulled Anna Croft back.

Anna Croft spoke, seemingly frustrated with the situation.

—Why on earth is this happening?

Did I do something wrong? With all the incarnations fleeing, we can't even have a final showdown.

"It's right to save at least one more person, Miss Kim Anna. You should go too."

—No.

"I don't need your help. You don't even know the future, so even if you stay by my side, it's useless."

In the thick silence, the pain she felt was palpable. But right now, there was no time to dwell on it.

"Help Selena Kim. You know this is her 'first match'."

"It's not just the constellations that are at risk on the battlefield. Are you just going to let them die like this?"

While lacking in strength and skill, no player has gained more experience in this 'outpost' than Anna Croft. Just having her with them will greatly increase the survival chances of Selena Kim and the Incarnations.

[A new story is sprouting within incarnation 'Anna Croft'!]

If she can successfully complete this 'outpost', she will receive compensation for her long suffering.

So—

"You haven't forgotten your plan, have you? Hide well and gather the 'prophecies'. That's the only way we can win."

At least she can't die here.

"Don't worry about me. You know who I am. I'm the Evil Sophist, the One Who Deceived the Stars…"

—You're not Cheon Inho, are you?

I never expected her to say that.

That's right. Now, I wasn't 'Cheon Inho' to her. I wasn't the 'Evil Sophist' or 'the One Who Deceived the Stars'.

—Mr. Kim End-nim.

She called me by a name that only meant something to me.

—If you say that, then there must be a reason. I guess I'll have to listen to you again, helpless and stupid.

"It's nice to hear that. Have I gained some trust now?"

—I don't trust you. I just…

With the rustle of her clothes, I felt Anna Croft turn away. She had finally made up her mind.

—I'm just trusting your 'bet'.

Hearing her footsteps retreat, I let out a light sigh.

—The person I know, the one who puts their life on the line, would have no reason to make such a risky bet.

It seems I couldn't fool her, even if I didn't know about others.

I looked up at the small golden dice that had been floating above my head for a while. This small dice was a symbol that only appeared to those who participated in the bets of the 'Hall of Golden Dice'.

[Could it be, that guy... made a bet?]

Several of the constellations frowned, as if they had belatedly noticed the symbol.

A small golden dice was also floating above their heads.

[Hahahahaha! Could it be that someone had placed a coin on the Prophet's team? Is that right?]

"But."

[You're crazy. You don't really think they'll win, do you?]

"Are there people who bet money thinking they'll lose?"

[What nonsense are you talking about? Do you really believe you can collect all the prophecies?]

"Oh, actually, that's a lie."

[You're currently participating in a bet at the 'Hall of Golden Dice'.]

[You bet on Team 'Zarathustra'.]

"Actually, I can win even without collecting prophecies."

[You placed an additional bet on 'End of match before the first prophecy appears!']

The constellations, with bitter smiles on their faces, turned to each other and said.

[You're in good spirits. How much did you bet? 1,000 D-coins.]

[Still, you seem like a good player. You must have bet around 10,000 D-coins.]

Listening to their advice, I recalled the words of the 'Mass Production Manufacturer'.

「"Coins are truly fascinating, aren't they? They're just numbers, but depending on the number of coins, the constellations can mock someone, be jealous of someone, or even show their greed."」

[No, he might have bet as much as 100,000 D-Coins.]

The 'General of Banara' bared his teeth and thrust his club at me.

[No matter how much you bet, the outcome of this bet won't change.]

"You think so?"

That was when the constellations' expressions changed.

[Wait! Wait. Just now…]

I could tell even without activating [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint]. They were probably hearing something unusual right now.

[Someone bet on that team.]

[What? Some crazy guy—]

[How much did he bet?]

The voice of the Mass-Production Maker overlapped their expressions, which were changing in real time.

「"The real fun comes when the amount of those coins gets really large."」

Some amounts elicit ridicule, some envy, and some greed.

And some—

[That's, like, impossible! No matter how crazy—]

"Why are you all doing that?"

The mere existence of it inspires a kind of awe.

The constellations began to back away, as if they could see the numbers floating above my head.

I grinned at them.

[Your stake for this bet is 10,000,000 D-Coins.]

966 Episode 57 Twilight of the Gods (9)

---

Skuld was the first to realize the odds were stacked against her.

"How much?"

Looking at the number that appeared before her eyes, Skuld asked like an idiot. But no one could answer her question. Even the employees running the 'Golden Dice Hall' had never seen such a number before.

—10 million D-Coins.

Someone muttered in a trembling voice.

[Not even the grand prize... Is this really the amount one person bets?]

The 'Valhalla Hall' opened, and wagers of all sizes were made. Some were so large that they drew gasps from the constellations. Prominent constellations fought fiercely, and the defeated constellations were scattered into the legends of the battlefield. Among them were battles waged by mythical constellations, and even legendary incarnations now elevated to the 'main battlefield'. Skuld looked at the all-time prize money rankings recorded on the stone tablet in the 'Hall of Golden Dice'.

—5th place in all-time total prize money.

The battle between Feihu, the incarnation of the Emperor, and Ranbir Khan, the incarnation of Papyrus. And the constellations of the Small and Medium Constellation Alliance.

Skuld, too, vividly remembered the atmosphere of the time. The participation of the representative incarnations of the Emperor and Papyrus, creating a truly spectacular spectacle, came to mind.

—Total prize money of 8.78 million D Coins.

Yet, even in such a match, the total prize money was only 8.78 million D Coins.

Skuld looked at the rankings even higher.

—4th place in all-time total prize money.

The fierce battle between the incarnations of Archangel Jophiel and the incarnations of the Great Heavenly King against the constellations of Papyrus. The unexpected rookies delivered a remarkable performance, and the match left no one in doubt until the very end.

—Total prize pool: 9.92 million D Coins.

Even that bet didn't exceed 10 million D Coins.

Just looking at this, you could tell just how enormous the stakes were.

Not even the total prize pool, just a single bet of 10 million D Coins.

She could only remember one match of that scale.

—Highest prize pool of all time

It was a match between Mitra, the 'Master of December 25th' of <Vida>, and '■■■'—the unmentionable 'Master of the Erased Margin'.

—35,973,200 D Coins

That was the match with the largest amount of D Coins ever wagered.

—Highest single bet: 9 million D Coins.

But even in that match, 10 million D Coins had never been wagered at once. To begin with, the gigantic castle was a bet that couldn't be made without this kind of courage.

[There must be something wrong. At this point, no whale can secure 10 million D-Coins.]

No whale currently in the hall could wager 10 million D-Coins at once. Those that were still promising had departed for the 'main battlefield'. For greater achievements, to carry out the 'real scenario' in that distant aspiration, to reach the final goal.

The final record—a truly southern story. Of course, if it succeeds, it will.

'Could it be an unknown myth-grade constellation?'

Skuld thought of the 'special warrior' who had previously bet 200,000 D-Coins.

But even if that special warrior had the support of a myth-grade constellation, those myth-grade constellations wouldn't possess such an absurd amount of D-Coins. That's understandable. Ten million D-Coins, when exchanged, could affect the entire <Star Stream>.

Skuld pondered for a moment, then a certain constellation's epithet suddenly came to mind.

[Perhaps the 'Mass-Production Manufacturer'?]

That old man was the only constellation that could wield such economic power alone.

But the other employees quickly shook their heads.

[I sent him a message, and he said he only built the stadium and wasn't interested in the hall's bets.]

[So, who exactly is he?]

[I heard there's a planet with a recent 'Orbital Elevator' problem. Could someone have swiped the D-Coins from the Ascension Zone?]

[There's no way an Ascension Zone still has that much D-Coins—]

Skuld paused. There was only one Ascension Zone where a massive amount of D-Coins could still be mined:

'New Murim District'.

A staggering amount of D-Coins lay dormant in the 'New Murim District', but the constellations rarely touched it. This was because the 'Fear Realm', the border area of the 'New Murim District' was connected to the dimension of the Outer Gods.

The story of the Olympus fleet recklessly entering the Fear Realm and suffering massive damage was so well-known that many high-ranking constellations avoided even the area's vicinity.

[I recently heard that a doomsday scenario had occurred in the 'New Murim District'.]

But what if some madman appeared, swept up all the D-Coins in the district, and entered 'Valhalla Hall'?

[Someone placed a bet on ...!]

[Someone placed a bet on ...!]

…

The betting amount increased in real time.

It should have been fun, but Skuld couldn't shake the feeling of unease.

[The results of betting on Team 'Zarathustra' are increasing!]

The hall was now in a frenzy. Some constellations, having learned that someone had bet 10 million D-Coins on 'Zarathustra', began a test bet.

The amount wasn't large, and 'Veda' still had an overwhelming number of bets, but the problem was what if something unexpected happened?

[The total prize pool is approaching the all-time ranking!]

Skuld spoke, her voice rising.

[Has the bettor's identity been verified yet?]

[This is a pseudonymous bet, so verification is not possible. However, there's a rumor that one of the participants in the match is the bettor.]

[We're verifying the identities of all participants!]

「What if this whole situation was planned by someone?」

What if those 200,000 D-Coins, what if the entire development up until now, was simply a ploy to attract the constellations of the hall?

The recorders, having smelled the rumor somewhere, began scribbling ominous records.

「What if the Prophet's team, 'Zarathustra', wins here?」

The likelihood of that happening was slim.

[Due to excessive D-Coin betting, an unusual atmosphere began to flow through 'Valhalla Hall'.]

All the constellations of Team 'Vedas' were veterans.

But even so, what if something like that really happened?

「Perhaps the final days of 'Valhalla Hall' could arrive.」

Skuld wiped the cold sweat from her forehead and asked.

[What happened with the whale gathering?]

[Some whales have already participated in the bet. The rest have informed us they will wait and see.]

The opponent had a wealth of 10 million D-Coins. A mediocre whale was no match for him.

[Send a message to the 'chairman' of the hall.]

Skuld, staring silently at the screen, concluded her speech.

[It seems like a mythical figure will have to step forward.]

---

10 million D-Coins.

The 'Thunderbird', having noticed my bet, let out a shriek.

[That can't be true. Such a bet is impossible!]

It's surprising. None of them could possibly bet that amount.

Perhaps a narrative-grade constellation hiding its power like the 'Mass-Produced Manufacturer' would be understandable.

[The Constellation, 'Ancestor of Humanity', tells you not to panic.]

Meanwhile, there was a constellation that maintained its composure. Indeed, it seemed not all constellations were overwhelmed by the 'numbers' of the coins.

[If someone is willing to bet 10 million D-Coins on this game, it must be one of two things. Either they're a wealthy constellation that can easily afford to bet that much, or they're a fool who's betting their entire fortune on a bad gamble.]

Manu continued speaking with a calm gaze, as if analyzing me.

[No matter how I look at it, he doesn't seem that wealthy. He's quite wealthy, but there are plenty of constellations around here with similar ranks.]

The constellations, who had been caught off guard by Manu's words, quickly regained their composure.

[If we kill him here and now, we can take his D-Coins. If that happens…]

Manu trailed off, but I could still read the aftermath: all the constellations there had vanished.

[You might become a key player in the 'main battlefield'.]

Acquiring a massive amount of D-Coins won't instantly elevate you to 'mythical' status.

But you'll at least gain a comparable rank. Then, they probably believe, they might become key players in the 'main battlefield'.

[Why are you laughing?]

"If you were meant to go to the 'main battlefield', you would have gone long ago."

I glanced at the constellations in front of me and said.

The qualifications for the 'Main Battle' are simple.

「Win at least one game of the 'Outpost'.」

None of the constellations before me now met this qualification.

The constellations earned the right to participate in the 'Main Battle' long ago, and voluntarily refused to participate.

"I understand why you remain here, repeating the game."

They are not like Yoo Joonghyuk or Anna Croft, who were forced to repeat the same world.

So to speak, they were 'voluntary regressors'.

Those who remain in the Outpost forever, refusing to advance to the next scenario.

「These are the ones who fear death.」

The constellations, standing on the brink of 'Ragnarok', collapsed in their seats, fearing they would lose all the stories they had accumulated.

"You are not worthy to see the ■■ of the world."

Like the wanderers who waited for someone to finish the main scenario, these are cowards who long for the desperate battle of the 'Main Battle' to end quickly. That was it.

[There's nothing more to hear.]

Manu, his expression hardened coldly, shouted, aiming his spear.

[Kill them!]

With those words, the constellations moved. Manu's spear flew, and Garuda's thunder rained down.

I barely managed to dodge the spear and deflect the thunder, but this time Hanuman's massive club flew towards my back. I barely managed to activate [Way of the Wind], but it only grazed the story's body and sent it flying.

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', is activating!]

I thought, enduring the pain.

In a sense, Manu was right. In reality, my chances of winning against them weren't great.

「In order to earn 10 million D Coins, I vomited out all the D Coins I had absorbed into stories.」

This was insane enough, but there was an even more serious problem.

「In exchange for exchanging the coins, the power of the 'King of Fear' can't be unleashed here.」

What raised me to a mythical status was the World Tree of the 'Breaking the Sky Sword Saint' and the story of the 'King of Fear'. However, because I had extracted a large amount of D-Coins from my stories, the only power I could use right now was the 'Demon King of Salvation' mode.

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', continues its storytelling.]

To make matters worse, this mode would last for another ten minutes.

Seeing that I couldn't easily seize a counterattack, the constellations' expressions began to soften.

[He was nothing special, after all.]

[I'll take care of him quickly and go capture the others!]

The golden dice in the air began to spin furiously, watching me cornered in a one-sided defensive position.

[The betting amount for this bet is increasing!]

While checking the betting amount updated in real time, I continued to fend off the constellations' attacks. Even with [All-Personification] activated, the attacks from the constellations at the late narrative-grade were threatening.

Narrative blasts erupted from my forearms and thighs.

[All the constellations in Valhalla Hall are watching this match.]

Amidst the pouring gazes, the constellations' faces erupted in sinister smiles.

Judging by the ceaseless flash of coin symbols, it seemed a barrage of support was underway, something I was unaware of.

The next moment, a massive saga began to gather attention around Manu's opera.

[The Constellation, 'Progenitor of Humanity', has used the 'Steady Kill' item!]

Alarm bells rang in my head.

[Steady Kill.]

A one-time cost item obtained from the 'Outpost'.

I had heard of this item's effects through the 'Unchanging One'.

「A single strike guarantees a doubled power hit against a target in the Silver Area.」

This attack cannot be dodged or deflected.

I turned and began to flee. With all my might, I activated [Way of the Wind], relentlessly searching the desolate grassland.

「I have to find it.」

I heard the sound of Manu's spear being fired. The downside of the One-Point Kill is that its speed decreases as its power increases.

「According to Selena Kim, the coordinates where the target bush is hidden are within fifty meters of here—」

The bush wasn't easily visible. It was only natural, since I was new to this battlefield.

Manu's spear was within striking distance. I smiled wryly and turned my back to block it.

And at that very moment...

"I knew this would happen."

Someone grabbed my waist tightly. Here it is.

I was thrown to the ground, still clutched by my waist. Then, to my surprise, the floor suddenly caved in, and I felt my body being sucked into another dimension.

[Entering the 'Bush'.]

Looking for the 'bush'-like structure was a mistake. Surprisingly, this 'bush' existed as a trap beneath the floor.

Thanks to the bush's special effects, Manu's spear narrowly grazed my back and bounced out of the space.

"I'm in your debt. Thank you."

I turned to my rescuer. There, Anna Kim, who I'd assumed had gone to help Selena Kim, was glaring at me with angry eyes.

"You said you believed my bet, didn't you?"

"I said I believed your bet, not you. Why on earth did you do this?"

Kim Anna examined the wound on my back, where Manu's spear had grazed, then cut her palm and squeezed the blood out. Her special trait, the power of the 'Elixir Maker', manifested, and my wound began to heal quickly.

"Thank you."

"There's no need for gratitude. You're going to die soon anyway."

"Why are you treating me when I'm going to die anyway?"

Kim Anna couldn't answer.

I spoke for her.

"Even if we know the world's destruction is certain, we still have to save those who are dying today, don't we?"

"…"

"Yoo Joonghyuk was like that too."

Kim Anna's face brightened for a moment.

"Is the Supreme King coming to help?"

"It's a good thing he's here, since you're here."

Kim Anna's expression darkened again. I smiled comfortingly and said,

"Don't worry. I'm here."

"What on earth were you thinking when you did something like this?"

It's understandable, even for our Kim Anna. I suddenly barged into the match, provoked the constellations, forced the incarnations to evacuate, and even made a strange bet, drawing the attention of Valhalla Hall.

"I want to end the regression."

"Huh?"

"You know that, right? If you win this match, your regression will end, but eventually, someone will fill your void."

Some regressions never end.

Because this world wants a regression.

"So, to end this game properly—"

[The stakes on this bet are rising!]

"The only way to make those who want this game quit the game themselves."

[The stakes on this bet are rising!]

[The stakes on this bet have finally broken the all-time rankings of the 'Hall of Golden Dice'!]

Even in the 'Valhalla Hall', it's not easy to raise this amount of money. Many constellations must have staked their entire fortunes on this match.

"Now they'll have to return to 'Scenarios'."

However, Kim Anna, whose thoughts were only negative after a long regression, still looked unconvinced.

"Even if your plan is correct, you need to win this match to make it happen. That too—"

"Before the first prophecy appeared."

Then I sensed the presence of constellations from above. The ones who had hesitated at my entrance into the bushes had finally rushed in to finish us off.

But I wasn't fazed at all. Because this fight was only just beginning.

"No. It was impossible. Unless even the Supreme King comes…"

"Kim Anna-ssi."

I took a slow breath. Then I felt a story stir deep within me.

"As I said before, Yoo Joonghyuk won't come. Because—"

All conditions are met.

"There's no need."

Watching the constellations rushing towards me, I checked the elements necessary for this stage.

「Thunder-eating bird.」

「General of Banara.」

「Progenitor of humanity.」

「Thick bush.」

「Battlefield of myth.」

The ground beneath my feet rippled. This battlefield, which had absorbed countless fragments of Kim Dokja, seemed to be reading and reacting to the stories embedded within me.

「Giant story.」

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', responds to your will.]

[Giant story, 'Spring of the Demon World', begins its storytelling!]

The pages of [Bookmark] began to turn in my mind.

The story I had read, and every Kim Dokja in this land had read.

Along with the rippling scenery, the stage we had read was reenacted before my eyes. A story I, the original Kim Dokja, would never have been able to recreate.

But now, having reached myth-grade, it was different.

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', is activated!]

[Your incite affects the reading comprehension of 'Bookmark'!]

"I."

Facing the dazzling fury of the constellations, I inserted the final piece needed for this 'stage'.

"I am Yoo Joonghyuk, who participated in the 1,864th 'Demon King Selection Tournament'."

['Staging' begins!]

967 Episode 57 Twilight of the Gods (10)

---

I felt the pages of 『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』 turning before my eyes.

"This story...?"

Anna Croft's eyes widened. Even she, who can't use [Future Sight], will see this story.

Spring in the Demon World. A giant story that occupies the Introduction part of Kim Dokja's 'Introduction, Development, Turn, and Conclusion'.

Originally, to fully utilize this story on stage, I needed the help of the members of <Kim Dokja Company>.

[The probable conditions for staging a 'Giant Story' are not sufficient!]

But that's only when unfolding the entire stage, and what I needed was a 'part of the stage'.

[You fool. Did you think we wouldn't find you if you hid in the bushes?]

Just then, the constellations that had entered the bushes spotted me. Led by Garuda, the 'Thunder-Eating Bird', Hanuman, the 'General of Banaras', Manu, the 'Progenitor of Humanity', and the nine constellations lined up behind them. They seemed determined to defeat me within this bushes.

[The effect of 'Bush' is activated!]

[The bushes in question are a 'Chaos Bush'.]

Anna Croft, having confirmed the name of the bush, calmly spoke.

"Kim Dokja. The distinctive feature of this bush is its large rock."

As expected of a returning expert in skirmishes, she had a precise grasp of the bush's properties.

"Events occurring within this bush are not observable from the outside."

I nodded.

In fact, I had also heard of the effect of the bush through the 'Unchangeable One'.

「Chaos Bush. Events occurring within this bush are free from all external observation, including from the audience.」

In other words, no matter what happens within this bush, no one outside will know.

"There must be another effect besides that, right?"

"Did you know?"

Anna asked, surprised.

Actually, the second effect didn't require any explanation.

[The effect of 'Chaos Bush' temporarily weakens the binding force of probability!]

Because the effect was already activating right before my eyes.

[The Giant Story, 'Samundra Manthan', begins its storytelling!]

The Giant Story, 「Samundra Manthan」[1].

One of the creation myths representing <Vedas> was awakening before my eyes.

[NOTE 1]

[The players of Team 'Vedas' are blessed by the constellation, 'King of Thunder'!]

The blessing of Indra, the King of Thunder.

If the strongest Lokaphala had lent his strength to the 'Giant Story', then <Vedas> must have made a good bet on this one.

[Ooooooooooo!]

Garuda, Hanuman, Manu, and other constellations screamed in joy. With a pounding in my head, <Vedas>'s giant story began to unfold.

「Understanding is as meaningless as counting the foam on a milky sea.」

If I hadn't attained this level, I would have lost my mind just witnessing that scene.

「Only those gods who participate in the great 'Samundra Manthan' will attain eternity.」

A gentle sensation spread throughout the subspace, and soon the area was transformed into a vast, unseen world. It transformed into a sea of milk. A massive shaft then rose above the sea, and the ocean began to swirl violently.

「One of the creation myths of Vedas—the Samundra Manthan.」

The ritual created by the Vedas' gods to fight the Asuras in the past—the Samundra Manthan.

Originally, it was a much larger creation myth, but perhaps they only recreated certain passages to fit this subspace.

[Ohhhhh! Ultimate wisdom! Ancient intelligence! Great will!]

The white light emanating from the sea was being absorbed into the bodies of the constellations.

Indeed, that light was the very core of this giant story.

The elixir of immortality, realized through the Samundra Manthan—'Amrita'.

The constellations, temporarily empowered by Amrita, began to unleash a merciless blast.

The three constellations, which had been at the late stage of narrative-grade, had grown to the point of rivaling the representative constellation of Vedas, 'Lokapala', and the other constellations, too. It began to radiate a level of power that reached the level of the late-game legends.

And that wasn't all.

[Ooooooooooo!]

The already large incarnations of the gods had grown even larger than before. They were so large that it was almost believable if someone told me they were their true forms.

I measured the power of the constellations and said,

"It seems our arrival here isn't a coincidence."

As soon as we entered this thicket, the giant legends of Vedas moved. Furthermore, the structure of this thicket seemed perfectly suited to concealing the events of the skirmish.

I squinted, and a record appeared in the air with a light spark.

「Members of Team 'Zarathustra' will inevitably enter the 'Chaos Bush'.」

As expected. It seemed Vedas had written a [Fate] on the Recorders of Fear in advance.

Given this situation, it wouldn't have been surprising if the first bush Anna Croft and I entered was the 'Chaos Bush'.

The ranks of the gods Anna Croft, having confirmed this, raised her voice in a tense tone.

"We need to get out of the bush immediately."

But the entrance to the bush was completely blocked by the constellations.

Anna Croft, biting her lip, summoned all her magical power and spoke.

"I'll try to buy some time, and in the meantime—"

"If you're still going to rant like that, just close your eyes and raise your hands in the corner."

"Huh?"

"Or maybe you should eat dirt."

"What—"

One of the effects of the 'Chaos Bush' was to weaken the binding force of probability. If that were the case, it wasn't entirely unfavorable to me.

Tsutsutsutsu.

The story flowing through my body took on an even more powerful force.

"In case you forgot, there's a giant story here too."

[The giant story, 'Spring of the Demon World', is imbued on your right arm.]

In terms of sheer scale, 'Spring of the Demon World' wasn't quite up to par to 'Samundra Manthan'.

Anna Croft, realizing this, spoke again.

"With a story of that magnitude—"

"The 'Giant Story' over there is powerful, but it's not entirely theirs."

Now it was time to demonstrate the fruits of my training with Han Sooyoung in the 1,863rd round.

"Don't worry. I've read this story so many times I'm sick of it."

「"If you're going to write a new story, you have to take responsibility for the ones you've already written."」

Hearing Han Sooyoung's voice in my head, I considered the stories I'd read.

As if unable to contain their increased power, the constellations in the front row began to rush towards me.

[Ooooooooo!]

Concentrating the 'Giant Story' on my right arm, I recalled the conditions for staging.

Characters, story, location.

The characters on stage were fulfilled by the constellations and my [Incite], and the story was no different. The location, while imperfect, was also a 'Battlefield of Myths'. It could be fulfilled with a stage similar to a 'preliminary battle'.

[The requirements for 'Staging' have been partially met!]

['Staging' is in progress!]

However, this alone wasn't enough to create a 'stage' that could defeat the constellations.

More than anything, I was currently imitating Yoo Joonghyuk with [Incite].

I needed something to supplement the lack of stage presence.

Whoosh.

At that moment, the 'Thoughts of Almost Everything' wrapped around my arm in the form of a bracelet reacted.

I grinned and looked at it.

Yes, it's finally your time to act.

It's been a long time since I acquired this 'Thought'. Until now, I hadn't been able to utilize it properly, but from now on, it would be different.

「"There's a limit to how much I can teach you anyway."」

During the 1,863rd round's training session, Han Sooyoung was preoccupied with finding a way for me to grow in the shortest possible time.

「"The techniques I taught you here will inevitably be subject to probability constraints. Even if you were to learn it, it'd probably only be usable in the final scenario. But if you were to give it an item from here, it would also be subject to probability constraints. So, I thought…"」

The form of 'Thought', which had received my story, was changing in real time.

「"What if I taught it all the relics I possess?"」

Thus, during the 1,863rd round, Han Sooyoung and I taught 'Thought' the mimicry forms of countless items.

Of course, contrary to Han Sooyoung's expectations, this method didn't completely avoid probability constraints.

Perhaps due to excessive mimicry learning, 'Thought' was severely bound by probability immediately after the world line transition.

However, here, where probability constraints were weakened, it was a different story.

[The mimicry proficiency of 'Thoughts of Almost Everything' has increased explosively!]

[The mimicry learning of the item 'Thoughts of Almost Everything' has been completely completed.]

"Black Heavenly Sword."

The moment I opened my mouth, Thoughts transformed into a pitch-black sword.

Episode 1,864: Yoo Joonghyuk's exclusive weapon—Black Heavenly Sword.

[The reproducibility of 'Staging' has greatly increased!]

The entire landscape began to ripple and change. The place that had been the bush of the 'Outpost' had transformed into the 'Battlefield of Myths'.

But the transformation was so natural that the constellations rushing toward me hadn't yet noticed it.

Feeling the immense rumbling within my heart, I gripped the hilt of the 'Black Heavenly Sword'.

The battle would be decided in a single moment. In that single moment, all the decisive words would be uttered.

「I am Yoo Joonghyuk.」

Now I know. No matter how brilliant my [Incite] skills are, I can never become someone else.

「"No matter how elegant a lie, a lie is still a lie."」

Sometimes, lies reveal what truth is. It's only permitted to those who know. To tell a well-crafted lie, you must understand the truth just as well.

「"There's no need to be afraid. The world doesn't really care what 'reality' is anyway."」

Anna Croft, who had been blankly watching me from the side, let out a short groan and asked.

"How—"

I looked at her. Our eyes met, and Anna Croft's shoulders trembled violently. She knew I wasn't Yoo Joonghyuk. And yet, at this moment, she was overwhelmed by the lie that deceived even her own senses.

"Supreme King?"

I activated [Vermilion Divine Treasure] at the rushing constellations. With the effects of [Incite] and [Bookmark], Yoo Joonghyuk's traits burned through my mind.

[Exclusive trait, 'Ruler of Entertainment, activates!]

One of Yoo Joonghyuk's most powerful traits from the 1,864th round.

「As long as this stage is a 'game', Yoo Joonghyuk becomes closer to God than any other constellation in this world.」

Manu, the Progenitor of Humanity, felt a strange sensation.

He aimed his spear at me, shouting,

[Wait! Stop! That guy, something—]

But by the time his spear reached me, I was already gone.

A panicked Manu looked around frantically and shouted,

[Where! Where on earth—]

And then thunder rumbled through the sky.

「From the distant sky, a bird fell, its neck impaled by a giant sword.」

"Kyaaaaak", the Garuda in the sky screamed.

[What—]

Manu shouted, his eyes wide, and Hanuman roared and swung his club. But it was no use.

「The moment the panicked 'General of Banara' retreated, a flash of light flashed through the dirt on the ground.」

Because, unknown to them, this entire story had already been completed.

[How could such a history—]

Manu let out a gasp of horror as he watched Hanuman's head be severed in an instant.

I looked at Manu and the constellations of Vedas, and said,

[I guess Agni hasn't heard my story yet.]

At the mention of Agni, Manu's face began to turn pale. Something seemed to be belatedly dawning on him.

[W-Wouldn't it be? You...?]

As I approached the stars, Manu and the other constellations began frantically searching for an escape route.

[Tell the mythical constellations of 'Ragnarok'.]

But unfortunately, I was the one standing in front of that escape route.

「At that moment, Yoo Joonghyuk looked as if he understood everything about this 'game'.」

The fully embodied 'Giant Story' began to speak through my body. The Supreme King, now possessing a mythical status, declared to the constellations of Vedas:

[The fear you forgot has returned to the Star Stream.]

968 Episode 57 Twilight of the Gods (11)

Skuld watched the stadium, biting her fingernails.

[What the hell is going on? Why isn't anyone coming out?]

A considerable amount of time had passed since the constellations on Vedas' side entered the thicket. Judging by the inability to observe the interior from the audience, the bush they entered was a 'Chaos Bush'.

「The appearance of the Chaos Bush must mean that Vedas has inserted probability.」

If Vedas had stepped in, the conversation with the recorders would have been over, and [Fate] would have been rigged without a hitch. Furthermore, Skuld had already made a separate announcement to the chairman, so there was absolutely no way Team Vedas would lose.

[The current total wager from Veda bettors is 8,754,300 D-coins.]

The total D-coins wagered by Vedas in this match alone exceeded 8 million. Even from the perspective of the Great Nebula, this was a battle they absolutely could not afford to lose, so there was no chance of an unfortunate incident. At this point, not only [Fate] but even the grand narratives of Vedas would have been used.

Skuld was well aware of this fact. That's why she couldn't quite understand her own anxiety.

[The constellation, 'Observer of the Indelible Traces', warns you.]

The Observer of the Indelible Traces.

She was Urd, Skuld's sister and observer of the past. It had been a while since Urd had interfered in the betting table.

[Urd, what's going on?]

Consultation had recently been lost with Verdandi, who governed the present, so hearing from her sister was a welcome change.

[Did you see something?]

But Urd didn't respond.

And a moment later, a strange message came from the air.

[The constellation, 'Observer of Indelible Traces', is astonished!]

[The constellation, 'Observer of Indelible Traces', is astonished!]

[The constellation, 'Observer of Indelible Traces', is astonished!]

With a burst of sparks, Urd's presence vanished.

[Urd?]

A vain mantra rang out, but Urd's reply remained unanswered.

Skuld instinctively knew.

'Something has happened to Urd.'

But who could harm her, the one who controls fate?

A spark of probability radiated from the stadium once again, and Skuld stared blankly at the scene.

The image reflected only the exterior of a sinister bush. Yet, as she gazed at it, Skuld felt increasingly strange.

She knew the principles of that bush, and she had a clear understanding of its inner workings. But why did that obvious bush feel so terrifying today?

Looking at the exit through the swaying bushes, Skuld felt as if a vast abyss was gaping open, ready to swallow her whole.

「If, what Urd saw—」

Since when? Even the constellations and incarnations in the bustling audience remained silent, their gaze fixed on the insignificant bush. As if they sensed a momentous event was about to unfold in the Valhalla Hall.

[The match has ended.]

[…has won the 1265th battle…]

The moment the match-ending message sounded, Skuld leaped to her feet. The moment she had been waiting for had finally arrived. However, perhaps due to the aftershock of probability raging through the arena, the winner confirmation message was not properly displayed.

[You crazy bastards, how much probability did they even use?]

If this much trouble was happening in Scenario 85, there would have been considerable bloodshed even in <Vedas>.

But with the chairman personally stepping in and the stakes coming in, it wasn't a loss for the giant nebula.

[The betting in the 'Golden Dice Hall' is over!]

The settlement, radiating such dazzling light, was the first since the 'Golden Dice Hall' opened. For a moment, the constellations throughout the hall gaped in awe at the radiance.

Excited cries of constellations echoed from all around, asking who won and what the profit ratios were.

And the next moment, the 'execution stand' opened in the center of the arena. The audience's expressions hardened as they saw the faces of the contestants being summoned one by one.

Skuld's shoulders also trembled.

[No.]

Someone spoke, and as if waiting, the 'Execution Squad' event began.

The first to speak was a giant bird.

[AAAAAAAAAAAAH!]

Along with Garuda's resentful screams, the system message, muffled by the aftershock, became clear.

[Team 'Zarathustra' has won the 1265th battle.]

---

When I returned to 'Valhalla Hall' in a dazzling ray of light, I was greeted by a splendid waiting room.

[You were first in the 'Outpost.']

[The 'Hall of Golden Injections' has delivered you an urgent message.]

[The 'Hall of Golden Dice' apologizes for the temporary delay in settlement and requests a secret meeting.]

It seems this victory has caused quite a stir in 'Valhalla Hall'.

I rejected all the messages that piled up and then disabled [Incite].

['Deactivate 'Demon King of Salvation' mode.]

A powerful rebound briefly sent me into a state of dizziness. Perhaps the reason I felt somewhat more resilient was because my incarnation body had become somewhat stronger by the time I reached the 85th scenario.

「This was a tough fight.」

If my proficiency with [Incite] and [Bookmark] had been slightly lacking, and above all, if I hadn't finished learning the mimicry of 'Thoughts on Almost Everything', this would have been an unwinnable fight.

'Thought', now in its bracelet form, hummed, and I lightly tapped its main body.

"Well done."

If 'Thought' hadn't acquired the mimicry forms of 'Robin Hood's Strong Bow' and 'Black Heavenly Sword', the 'Demon King Selection Tournament' stage would have been an incomplete recreation.

[You've achieved an incredible feat!]

[Your match will be listed in the Battleground rankings.]

[You can check the list of matches in the Battleground rankings in the waiting room.]

[You've acquired a new story!]

And a new story.

[You've acquired the story, 'Slayer Beyond Records'!]

[This story is a 'Quasi-Mythical Tale'.]

A quasi-mythical tale, it will be absorbed by the 'Giant Story' within the public domain, but acquiring a quasi-mythical story in a single match was still a significant achievement.

By the way, have Anna Kim and Selena been summoned here yet?

I quickly scanned the messages and then surveyed the waiting room.

The winner's waiting room was a kind of reception room, a place for comfortable relaxation. A large, circular table sat in the center of the room, and on it were dishes that looked delicious at first glance.

「The Right Arm of the Kaizenix Ancestor」

「The Lungs of the 9th Circle Archmage」

「The Frontal Lobe of the Maddened Lich」

Of course, it was called food, but in reality, it was stories. They felt just like food from the Underworld, so I couldn't bring myself to eat them. But…

Whoosh.

'Thought' vibrated again.

"You want to eat?"

It was strange. 'Thought' had never wanted to consume stories before. Perhaps its eating habits had evolved as it acquired a massive amount of mimetic forms.

Whoosh.

"Understood."

Come to think of it, it used to make strange sounds like "Joba" and "Shijo"... Now that it was calmly complaining of hunger, it must have grown up. I felt both proud and regretful at the same time. As I brought some of the dishes from the living room near 'Thoughts,' part of the bracelet opened like a beak and immediately began crunching on the stories.

[The item, 'Thoughts of Almost Everything', consumes the 'Lungs of the 9th Circle of the Archmage'!]

From somewhere, I thought I could hear the pained gasp of the wizard.

Perhaps these stories, too, had fallen from the incarnations who died in the skirmish.

As I continued to feed it stories, contemplating this and that, other incarnations appeared in a flash of light.

"Huh—"

They must have been engaged in a battle with something, as all the incarnations were covered in dust.

"Uh, uh-huh?"

I could see the expressions of the incarnations changing in real time as they turned to each other, making strange noises.

The 'victory message' must have flashed before their eyes as well.

Finally, one of the incarnations, his eyes tearful, turned to me and asked: "Did we win?"

As I nodded, one of the incarnations screamed.

"Ahhhhh—!"

Some cried out, while others collapsed, sobbing.

I don't know what they endured before being summoned to the 'Outpost'.

I don't know if their cries were a sense of relief at being alive, or despair at the scenario's distant future. Since I don't know their sorrow, I can't console it.

"Anyone died?"

All I could do was confirm their names and add a few dry remarks.

It occurred to me that perhaps it wasn't just 'Thought' that had changed during the scenario.

Just as 'Thought' had become a boring item, perhaps I, too, had become a predictable person.

"Members of the winning team will automatically resurrect even if they die. So, there's no need to worry."

Where the voices came from, Anna Croft and Selena Kim were standing.

"You really did it, you."

After a brief reunion with the brightly smiling Selena Kim, I turned to Anna Croft. Even with the long-awaited victory of the 'Outpost' within sight, Anna Kim's expression didn't seem particularly bright.

[Exclusive trait, 'Understander of the Abyss', activated.]

She stood blankly, staring at the massive hologram screen installed in the reception room.

The screen showed scenes from the stadium and the execution ceremony that had just begun.

The constellations, long consumed by the deaths of the incarnations, were now making their 'final statements' to postpone their own.

[I, I cannot die here—]

There was no longer any dignity or nobility of the narrative-grade constellations. With expressions and voices no different from any other incarnation, they were screaming in despair.

[Myth-grade constellations! Are you watching? This is not right!]

The audience, which would normally have laughed and chattered at such losers, was silent this time. It had to be that way. The constellations in the audience were probably seeing their own futures through the scaffold.

[Just one more chance, just one more chance—]

And Anna Croft, finally finished with her long fight, was watching the stars' final demise.

The execution platform. The place she had stood hundreds of times. And finally, standing there, the constellations.

"Kim Anna-ssi."

Watching her back, I suddenly thought of Yoo Joonghyuk.

What had Yoo Joonghyuk been thinking, facing the end of all those scenarios?

"I feel strange."

Her long shadow swayed in the light of the drawing room.

"I thought standing here would be a relief."

It was the first time I'd heard Anna Croft's voice so candid.

"I thought I'd be truly happy."

Above the execution platform, the constellations, facing death, were emitting their final rays. Gazing at the starlit landscape, I nodded.

"Yes, I knew that."

Neither I nor Kim Anna-ssi knew how to explain this feeling.

What was certain was that, now that we were finally on par with the distant constellations, the landscape we saw had changed. Now we knew with certainty what stories those once brilliant stars were made of.

"What do we... see at the end of all this? Kim Dokja, do you know?"

"I don't know either."

All we could do was watch the insignificant stars extinguish one by one on the scaffold.

"Because we don't know that, we can't give up this story."

The giant blade swung, and the constellations began to be beheaded. Each time a constellation's light went out, the light in the drawing room flickered faintly. Perhaps it was my imagination? The shadows around me seemed to grow longer. I thought I heard a thump, thump, coming from somewhere. At first, I thought it was the constellations' heads being slit.

The sound repeated with frightening precision.

Only when I realized I was unconsciously overwhelmed by that brief echo did I realize what had happened.

「Someone was knocking on the drawing room door.」

I felt my entire body tense. The moment I slowly turned toward the door, Anna Croft, her expression hardened, grabbed my wrist.

"Kim Dokja, you must not open the door."

Her eyes, which had lost their strength during the skirmish, radiated a faint red light.

Perhaps, in that moment, something caught her [Future Sight].

"Right now, beyond that door—"

Hearing her trembling voice, I too sensed the presence beyond the door.

A presence distinctly different from any other constellation.

Having now reached myth-grade, I too could clearly see it.

"There is a myth-grade constellation."

The master of this 'Valhalla Hall' had come to us.

969 Episode 58 Myth-grade Constellation (1)

---

There was another knock. I smiled faintly at Anna Croft, who was still looking at me with worried eyes.

"Don't worry. I told you I'm myth-grade, too."

"Now I'm not even sure if you're using [Incite] or not."

I stared at Anna Croft, who was smiling bitterly, for a moment before joining her in grabbing the doorknob.

"Opening."

「In the world of 'Ways of Survival', the owner of 'Valhalla Hall' changes every time.」

The owner of 'Valhalla Hall' was sometimes a forgotten mythical constellation from <Asgard>, and sometimes a constellation from another nebula. From my perspective, it didn't matter. After all, if a 'mythical constellation' truly came with hostility, there was no way to avoid it.

But at least the one who came this time knocked politely. That meant, at least, he wasn't here to fight me.

As I opened the door, a dazzling light enveloped me. For a moment, I felt as if the universe itself was blooming and fading before my eyes.

「A myth was before my eyes.」

I don't know much about the beginning and end of the universe. However, there must have been a moment when the primordial light was born. There must have been a moment when it illuminated the universe and created the landscape. Some stars will long for that light, yearn for it, and yearn endlessly. After so much yearning and yearning, some stars will embrace that light. Perhaps we may reach an interpretation of this.

[This is my first time seeing this, Demon King of Salvation.]

What I now see is an interpretation of such light. A beautiful and splendid interpretation. To reach that interpretation, that constellation must have read and reread a single story for eons. And thus, finally, it has reached that primordial fragment.

[Congratulations on your victory.]

A humble mantra, resembling a gentle light, resonated.

As the light gradually faded, the constellation's face came into view. A neutral expression, radiant, translucent skin. Clothing that exuded a restrained yet noble air. Even the enormous ring of light rising behind him.

"Nice to meet you."

I knew who this constellation was.

"Lord of December 25th."

[Do you recognize me?]

A mythological constellation from Vedas.

Lord of December 25th, Mitra.

I have no direct connection with him in this worldline.

However, the 'Demon King of Salvation' I read about does. According to the story, Mitra had confronted the Demon King of Salvation, who had just entered the 41st round.

I recalled the appearance of Mitra in the story and thought,

「This isn't the normal state of a 'mythical constellation'.」

He certainly still posed a tremendous threat. If I were to confront him with full force, I wouldn't have the confidence to win.

Even so, the 'presence' I felt from him was somewhat different from the 'mythical constellations' I'd seen in other worldlines or stories.

The strangely faded radiance of his back. And the small wing on his shoulder, which remained.

No matter how I looked at it, he had lost some of his original prestige.

But even in that state, I knew full well that if he so chose, this 'Valhalla Hall' would be devastated. He was a walking natural disaster. That was the 'mythical constellation' before me.

"There's no way I wouldn't know. Your copyright dispute with Eden over the December 25th rights issue is a famous one."

[There was that one time, too.]

Mitra let out a light laugh.

It was a beautiful smile, like sunlight shattering on waves.

"Since you came to see me, that means you're now the owner of 'Valhalla Hall', right?"

[That's right.]

"The match was a fair one."

Mitra is a constellation belonging to Vedas. Then, perhaps, he came to avenge Garuda and Manu, constellations from Vedas who were killed by me.

[I know. I didn't come to blame you for that.]

Mitra shook his head calmly, his expression devoid of hostility.

Still unfazed, I asked in a calm voice.

"Then why did you come?"

Whether of a lower rank or not, the opponent is that 'mythical constellation'. A pillar of a gigantic nebula, a being who ascended to the highest throne in this <Star Stream> world. I couldn't take the expression on his face, which seemed to have lived for tens of thousands of years, at face value.

[I've come to ask a favor.]

"You know, I suppose, that a request from a being can never be considered a 'request'."

Mitra smiled again, perhaps finding my words quite amusing.

[A pure request, in the truest sense of the word.]

What on earth could possibly be the request that a mythical constellation would use such language?

But before I could ask, the constellations appeared behind Mitra.

[Chairman! Great Light! No!]

They were the staff of the 'Hall of Golden Dice', including Skuld.

[You shouldn't compromise your pride! You—]

But their words were cut short. Mitra slowly raised his right hand, placed a long finger to his lips, and all sound in the area died down. Skuld and the other constellations prostrated themselves on the ground, gasping for breath.

I realized what had happened.

「This was the status of a 'mythical constellation'.」

Before the gravity of his absurd 'story', all the other stars were robbed of even their own voices, struggling to maintain their existence.

I was the only one who didn’t bow before him.

Mitra looked at me and said,

[I saw your entire fight.]

He saw my fight. It was an impossible expression. Because my 'fight' took place within the 'Chaos Bush', unobservable from the outside.

But as I met his mysterious eyes, I felt the truth in his words. Perhaps Mitra, using his interpretation of light, had glimpsed into the forbidden thicket.

[I bet—]

Mitra, who had reached that point, furrowed his brow slightly.

A spark of probability flickered in the air. Something strongly restricted his speech.

Mitra stared into space for a moment, then carefully chose his words before continuing.

[Can you forgive the stars?]

I couldn't understand what Mitra was saying. Suddenly coming to me and asking for forgiveness for the stars?

Even more strange was the way I felt shaken by his words.

Is it because I had just seen the constellations on the scaffold? Or perhaps because I, too, was now standing in the same landscape as them?

「There are feelings that those who survived until the 85th scenario cannot help but share.」

Since no one is innocent of the original sin of the scenario, in a sense, all those who survived until the 85th scenario were accomplices.

Those who accepted the scenario's rules and condoned someone's death. We have all lost someone precious at least once, and killed someone out of fierce hostility at least once.

[Please show them kindness. Please stop this tragedy, just this once.]

Standing above that tragic history, the great mythic constellation pleaded with me.

[If you forgive the stars, I will stand on your side.]

Mitra took another deep breath and spoke.

[And all the constellations in this Valhalla Hall will also stand on your side.]

Sparks struck from the air again, even more fiercely than before. The sparks soon pierced Mitra's entire body, burning his incarnation body with pitch-black flames.

「Someone is interfering with Mitra's intervention.」

But who could possibly do such a thing? What being could possibly control a mythic constellation that had descended in scenario number 85?

Even as his entire body burned, Mitra continued to speak.

[Don't you need strength too? If you wish to be 'the last one', if you wish to become the 'Oldest Dream' of all this world—]

His incarnation body began to disappear like light crumbling. His incarnation body was being repatriated somewhere.

I belatedly reached out, but all I could catch was the shards of sunlight.

I couldn't tell where he had disappeared to, but a sight suddenly came to mind.

「The Round Table of Mythical Constellations.」

Perhaps Mitra had been repatriated there.

As Mitra vanished, the pressure that had been weighing down the area was instantly lifted. Skuld and the other constellations, gasping for breath, staggered to their feet and looked at me.

Perhaps it was because of the courtesy Mitra had shown me. Skuld bowed her head to me as if he were Mitra himself and continued speaking.

[Please, we also implore you. Due to the probability of the 'Hall of Golden Dice', we can only delay the compensation payment for today. Once the 'settlement' begins, no one will be able to stop it.]

It was the first time I'd seen a narrative-grade constellation tremble so terribly.

I stared at Skuld with a dry gaze and asked,

"What do you want me to do?"

[That—]

Skuld, who had just finished speaking, was thrown back with a strong impact. Skuld's story cascaded down the floor. The staff of the 'Hall of Golden Dice' hurriedly supported Skuld.

A swirling portal opened in front of them.

[The probability of the nebula, <Olympus>, is moving!]

[The probability of the nebula, <Papyrus>, is moving!]

[The probability of the nebula, <Tree of Guardians>, is moving!]

A series of constellations emerged from within the swirling portal.

Narrative-grade constellations. The moment I saw the aura emanating from their bodies, I had a gut feeling.

「These are the constellations of the 'Main Battlefield'.」

A rugged and noble presence. The spirit and confidence that only those who have challenged the scenarios without giving up can possess flowed through them.

[Is it that person?]

Judging by the atmosphere, it seemed they had come to see me once again. Perhaps they were envoys representing each of the great nebulae.

The problem was that among the envoys, there was a face I already recognized.

[The constellation, 'Ferocious War God', reveals its status.]

I pushed back Anna Croft and the other incarnations with my hand and said,

"Anna Croft-ssi, please step back."

One of the twelve gods of Olympus.

Ares, the Ferocious War God.

Long ago, he descended into the scenario and engaged in a fierce battle with the first, the 'Demon King of Salvation'.

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', reacts to the 'Ferocious God of War'.]

At that time, Ares was defeated by the Demon King of Salvation and lost a great deal of stories. Then, he discovered me, possessing the story of the 'Demon King of Salvation'. That foul-tempered Ares.

There was no way he wouldn't pick a fight with me.

Indeed, Ares strode towards me as soon as he spotted me. I was preparing to secretly activate [Incite] once more, but Ares stopped exactly three steps ahead and spoke.

[It's a pleasure to meet you.]

I thought I'd misheard, but Ares spoke again.

[I have a proposition for you.]

---

As expected, Ares, the Ferocious War God, was an emissary from <Olympus>.

「Emissaries from each nebula will visit the winner of the preliminary battle and offer to recruit their forces.」

The main battlefield of 'Ragnarok' is the confrontation between the <Asgard> constellations and the forces of Hell.

Even within the same faction, affiliation would vary depending on the constellation, so Ares had come to bring me to the <Olympus> camp.

"Are you telling me to join your ranks again?"

Given Olympus's past behavior, it was obvious what they were going to propose, even without hearing it.

Honestly, I found it incredibly shameless. After tormenting me and my comrades so much, now you want to scout me?

[I didn't say anything like that…]

Ares then raised a large finger and scratched his cheek, adding,

[I'd appreciate it if you did.]

"What is your real purpose?"

Considering Ares's personality, he could have easily been offended by my rude tone, but he continued politely, unfazed.

[You've sufficiently proven your mettle in the 'Skirmish'. You've proven that you can lead an army on your own.]

I'd never seen Ares with such a long tongue before, so I listened to him with some admiration.

[And I saw what you did in the 'New Murim District'.]

In the New Murim District, I killed Apollo, the 'Almighty Sun', one of the twelve gods of Olympus. Now, it seems the other gods of Olympus have learned of this.

I asked, my nerves still high.

"So, have you come here for revenge?"

Apollo, like Ares, is one of the twelve gods of Olympus. So, even if he immediately brandished his sword of vengeance, I would have no recourse.

But what Ares offered wasn't an attack, but an unexpected offer.

[Requesting an alliance.]

For a moment, I thought I'd misheard.

"An alliance?"

[Exactly.]

"You say alliance, but you're going to enslave me for 300 years by bringing in an unfair contract."

[Has Olympus ever done anything like that to you?]

Never to me. But they've done it to Yoo Joonghyuk from another worldline.

[I repeat, I will not do such a thing.]

"Can you swear on the River Styx?"

An oath on the River Styx is the heaviest guarantee the gods of Olympus can make. I didn't think he'd go that far, but surprisingly, Ares nodded obediently.

[I swear.]

Ares' appearance was so different from what I remembered, I honestly couldn't hide my bewilderment.

But it was too early to be surprised.

[We, <Olympus>—]

Ares took a deep breath, looked at me with piercing eyes, and spoke.

[From now on, we have decided to treat you with the respect of a 'myth-grade constellation'.]

970 Episode 58 Myth-grade Constellation (2)

---

I've heard countless nonsense from <Olympus>, but this was a first.

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', scoffs.]

Using the story of the 'Demon King of Salvation', you want to honor me, who killed one of the twelve gods of <Olympus>, as a being equivalent to a 'myth-grade constellation'? That <Olympus>?

[I think I understand what you're thinking.]

"Aha, you've probably looked back on your own history, haven't you?"

Instead of answering, Ares slowly turned his head and gazed at the scenery of the 'Valhalla Hall'.

Beyond the screen, the constellations in the hall were causing a ruckus. Most of them were those who had bet coins in the Golden Dice Hall. They were screaming, wailing, using force, and being dragged away.

But not everyone was in such turmoil. Some constellations, meanwhile, were contemplating sub-scenarios. To acquire new incarnations, or to find new stories to immerse themselves in, forgetting their 'Valhalla Halls'.

[How do they appear to you?]

I paused, beginning to speak.

[The story 'Demon King of Salvation', gazes at the landscape of the 'Valhalla Hall'.]

I felt the story within me staring at the constellations.

Surely, I—Kim Dokja—hated them. But even that hatred, in this world, was merely fuel for the story.

[You must know by now. There are things you can't help but see once you reach the 85th scenario.]

I vaguely understood Ares's meaning. It was the same feeling I had when I watched the executioner with Anna Croft.

[The stars are here because they love stories.]

I couldn't deny those words. Yet, the reason I couldn't help but speak was perhaps because there was still a part of me that believed I was 'human'.

"What you did is unforgivable."

[…]

"Do you think the history of slaughtering and humiliating the incarnations can be justified with such romantic reasons?"

[I have no intention of justifying it.]

Ares said this and looked down at Valhalla Hall again.

A constellation, being dragged away for failing to repay a debt to the Golden Dice Hall, was raging. Watching the constellation finally subdued and suffering a miserable death, Ares spoke.

[That person's modifier is 'God of Peace and Relief'.]

Honestly, he seemed more suited to being called 'God of Wrath and Gambling' than 'God of Peace and Relief.'

[He stayed in this 'Valhalla Hall' and helped many incarnations in lower-level scenarios. Many incarnations in North America survived thanks to his good deeds.]

It was an unbelievable story. To me, the 'God of Peace and Relief' looked like a crazy old man going crazy over a gambling debt.

Ares spoke again.

[The star speaking next to him is the 'Caregiver of Light and Compassion'.]

The constellation Ares pointed to was a gentleman speaking to the 'God of Peace and Relief' being dragged away. The gentleman on the screen—the 'Caregiver of Light and Compassion'—was constantly speaking to the dragged constellations.

[He must be contracting to take in the incarnations of the constellations being dragged away.]

Honestly, I was a little surprised. Taking in the incarnations of fallen constellations?

[He's taking in and nurturing abandoned incarnations like that. But the higher-ranking constellations in the Great Nebula know what that star is really doing.]

On the screen, the 'Caregiver of Light and Compassion', having received a haggard incarnation, wore a kind smile.

[All the incarnations he takes in are used as low-level mercenaries on the 'main battlefield'. They become what's called a 'meat shield'.]

"..."

[And among the incarnations collected, those that seem completely unpromising are sent off as ingredients for banquets like the 'Gourmet Association'.]

"Then that deal—"

[Yes. It's a form of human trafficking.]

I wanted to go and stop the deal right away. But Ares, seeing my expression, shook his head.

[Even if you leave, nothing will change.]

"Still, isn't it better than staying still?"

[You're not even a constellation. Stopping them won't solve the fundamental problem. Are you going to collect the abandoned incarnations?]

Hearing Ares' words, I felt a strange sense of déjà vu. Why was I seeing another constellation as I looked at his expression right now?

[Even if those incarnations remain in this 'Valhalla Hall', there's no future for them. It would be better to wish them the blessing of the story. If they're lucky, they might be able to find a new sponsor in the 'Main Battlefield'.]

Then the screen changed again. This time, the person appearing on the main screen was a constellation I also knew.

Ares smiled dryly, perhaps already aware of this fact.

[You must be familiar with that constellation.]

He was the 'Bald General of Justice'.

A constellation that had been Kim Dokja's longtime supporter and had fought alongside him in the 'Demon King Selection Tournament'.

[What does that constellation look like to you?]

"…"

[That constellation treated you very well, didn't it? Then, would that constellation be considered a good constellation?]

That's right. If there's such a thing as a 'good constellation', it would undoubtedly refer to Samyeongdaesa. Nevertheless, I couldn't quite open my mouth. After all, Samyeongdaesa also observed the lives of the incarnations.

Countless incarnations came and went for his 100 coins. Countless comedies and tragedies must have unfolded before his eyes. He must have felt joy and sorrow reading those stories.

On the screen, Samyeongdaesa gazed upward with blank eyes. The symbol of the shining golden Hall of Dice. D-Coins were falling towards him, radiating a bright beam of light. Perhaps he, too, had bet on this bet.

[That constellation has poured out all its stories over the years for the Prophet who caused the death of his incarnation.]

Samyeongdaesa gazed blankly at the D-Coins falling over his head, then at the empty scaffold.

What words were etched in his mind right now? Was he rejoicing at winning the bet, or lamenting his inability to feel joy even in this situation?

Finally, it was Ares who spoke for me.

[This universe is too dark to read. That's why beings who have become stars must burn themselves to create light. But when you burn yourself to read the stories, there are times when you gradually lose track of what's going on.]

"…"

[Things you once held dear disappear somewhere, and only miscellaneous stories that have crept in from somewhere occupy your mind.]

I turned to face Ares, who spoke without answering.

At that moment, he wasn't the 'Ferocious God of War' I knew. He seemed like the 'Mass-Production Maker', or the 'Queen of the Darkest Spring'.

[And yet, all we can do is read a single line of stories over and over again. That's the tragedy of the damned star born into this <Star Stream>.]

It was truly strange, but he also seemed like Kim Dokja.

"The 'Ferocious God of War' I knew didn't speak like you."

He was the god of war. One of the twelve Olympian gods, who would use any means necessary for victory. Sometimes petty, often tenacious. And strong.

"Are you reborn too? Or do you have amnesia?"

[In the sense that they must burn themselves to read stories, all stars are like amnesiacs.]

"When you burn something, it leaves a mark."

I glared at him and continued.

"No matter how many famous stories you've read or how great your achievements, the marks of the burn will never disappear. They will eventually grow like soot. Records never disappear."

Ares, instead of denying my words, simply looked at me with a pitying look.

[You're right. But if you continue to be haunted by those marks, you won't survive the next scenario.]

"I don't think that's something I should hear from a mere narrative-grade."

Ares's expression changed at the mention of narrative-grade.

[Yes. You're now a 'myth-grade' one.]

For a moment, a myriad of emotions flashed across Ares's face. He licked his lips, seemingly hesitant, before finally asking me.

[What kind of scenery do you see in your world?]

I wonder if the constellations who have stayed as narrative-grade for a long time are still curious about the world of the myth-grade.

Ares hesitated and continued to ask, as if he had heard something from somewhere.

[Is there a Round Table scenery, as rumored? Or is there a completely different cosmic landscape?]

Perhaps that desire is what has driven Ares, the 'Ferocious God of War', to live on.

"Even if I explain, you won't understand."

I had made up a story because I didn't want to say anything, but Ares nodded in response.

[I suppose so. He said the same thing.]

He?

[Anyway, I think you should carefully consider the alliance proposal. Even if you've reached myth-grade status, there are monsters in Ragnarok that even the myth-grade constellations fear. <Olympus> has been your enemy until now, but now it could become your ally.]

"Why are you so desperate to recruit me? Why are you suddenly bending your pride? Don't you possess many myth-grade constellations?"

Ares remained silent for a moment, observing the Valhalla Hall before muttering softly with an inscrutable expression.

[We simply want to see the next story.]

When I turned my head, Ares's incarnation body had vanished. For me, who had expected a fierce battle, it was a somewhat disappointing ending.

So, did <Olympus> change its mind in order to recruit me?

While it felt real that I had indeed attained myth-grade status, I also felt somewhat complicated about this new aspect of Ares. Next to enter the reception room was the narrative-grade constellation of 'Papyrus'. As soon as he entered, he declared to me in an overbearing manner, as if ordering me.

[Demon King of Salvation! Come under the protection of our <Papyrus>! …Huh? Why are you laughing?]

Yes, there must be things that remain unchanging like this.

After chasing away the narrative-grade constellation of <Papyrus> with [Incite], the last constellations to come to me were the narrative-grade constellation of <Guardian Tree> and the judge of <The Underworld>.

[The constellation, 'Goddess of the Morning Star', gazes upon you.]

As expected, the leader of the <Tree of Guardians> was the 'Goddess of the Morning Star', Vakarine, who had a connection with Kim Dokja from the 'Gourmet Association'.

On the other hand, the judge from the <Underworld> who accompanied her was a somewhat unexpected guest for me.

"If it were Olympus's offer, I'd already declined."

[I'm not here as a representative of Olympus.]

I know that. The <Underworld> and <Olympus> are clearly distinct groups. Still, just in case, I asked.

"Did the Father of the Rich Night ask you to bring me?"

At this point, the ruler of the <Underworld> was Hades, the 'Father of the Rich Night'.

If I had to choose a single constellation to ally with, I'd feel more comfortable allying with the <Underworld> than <Olympus>. I thought we'd finally meet them in 'Ragnarok', but the Judge said something unexpected.

[He's not currently the ruler of the Underworld.]

Hades doesn't rule the Underworld? Then is it Persephone?

[The current ruler of the Underworld is the 'God of Wine and Ecstasy'.]

Dionysus, the God of Wine and Ecstasy.

Come to think of it, other recorders in the 'Archives' said something similar. Dionysus became independent from Olympus and formed a new power.

Did that mean the Underworld?

[Demon King of Salvation, let's get straight to the point. We want you to join us.]

"If it's us, does that mean the two nebulae are already allied?"

Vakarine and the Judge nodded simultaneously at my question.

I couldn't believe it, but the <Tree of Guardians> and the <Underworld> are allied.

"What on earth is going on up there?"

If those proud nebulae were joining forces, it meant the scenario unfolding on the 'main battlefield' would be too much for even the nebulae to handle.

I wondered if I could hear some relevant information, but Vakarine shook her head with a dark expression.

[I can't tell you that.]

Perhaps there were restrictions on sharing information about higher-level scenarios here.

Perhaps it was because I seemed disappointed, but Vakarine hesitated for a moment before speaking.

[What we can tell you is that you don't have much time to choose. The 'Valhalla Hall' will close soon. Please choose the stars you will join before it's too late.]

After saying that, Vakarine seemed to ponder something, then added with a slight spark:

[Unless you want to become another 'Kim Dokja'.]

971 Episode 58 Myth-grade Constellation (3)

---

If I don't want to end up like other Kim Dokjas, choose the stars I'll be with?

I barely managed to maintain a sense of composure as I stared at the 'Goddess of the Morning Star', Vakarine, and the Judge. I couldn't tell how much they knew.

"What do you mean?"

In situations like this, the best response is to squint.

Vakarine stared at my squinted eyes, then tilted her head and muttered.

[Are you pretending not to know? Or are you really asking because you don't know?]

She activated her detection skills several times, as if trying to gauge my intentions. But with my [Fourth Wall], there was no way that would work.

[Hmm.]

I guess a seasoned, myth-grade constellation is different. Vakarine, unconcerned with her failed skill, calmly exchanged glances with the Judge, then asked me again.

[I thought you were the same as the 'Master of the Erased Margin', weren't you?]

"The Master of the Erased Margin? Who is that?"

Vakarine calmly responded to my impudent question.

[He was the top ranked player in the 'Hall of Golden Dice' before you arrived. You can check it here, so feel free to check it out now.]

Would you mind waiting for me to check it out for myself?

Perhaps because <Tree of Guardians> and the <Underworld> are somewhat smaller than the previous nebulae, I could definitely feel their consideration for me in small details.

Perhaps that means they desperately need 'mythic' power.

Seeing no reason to refuse such a favor, I followed Vakarine's suggestion and immediately looked up the historical rankings for the skirmishes.

After agreeing to a few information security messages, the historical rankings immediately appeared before my eyes.

[You currently hold the title of the highest-ranked player in the 'Hall of Golden Dice' history.]

[Your story resonates throughout the 'Hall of Valhalla'!]

The screen changed with a light congratulatory message.

—1st place. The 'Demon King of Salvation' and the Prophet's team, 'Zarathustra', and the 'Vedas' team.

This ranking is based on the bet amounts recorded in the 'Hall of Golden Dice'.

The matches I participated in involved tens of millions of D-Coins, so regardless of the match content, it wasn't surprising that I ranked first.

What caught my eye was the match ranked second.

A match with a bet amount only slightly lower than mine.

I carefully observed the participants in that match.

—2nd place. The match between Mitra, the mythical constellation of <Vedas>, 'Lord of December 25th', and '■■■'—the 'Lord of the Erased Space That Must Not Be Mentioned'.

Surprisingly, the participant in the match was Mitra, the owner of Valhalla Hall.

As if reading my expression, Vakarine spoke.

[It seems you've confirmed the match.]

"What exactly is this match?"

The fact that Mitra had engaged in a skirmish wasn't surprising. A cataclysmic event like Ragnarok could easily involve even the mythical constellations residing in the highest-level scenarios.

The problem was the outcome of the match.

—Mitra, the myth-grade constellation, defeated.

I remembered the shock of my first sight of Mitra. I vividly recalled the sight of the constellations, unable to resist the gravity of the light he radiated, prostrating themselves. Mitra, even when not in peak condition, was capable of such power.

And Mitra, who had been defeated?

「Even within the entire <Star Stream>, the defeat of a 'myth-grade constellation' is a rare occurrence.」

Who were these myth-grade constellations? They were the foundation of a nebula, the ones who established the nebula's core giant story and ushered in the creation of the world.

Riding on the backs of giant stories, they manifested omnipotent power.

Such a great being was defeated in a staggering 85th scenario.

[That's why the 'Master of December 25th' was unable to participate in the main battlefield and became the master of this hall.]

Only after hearing her words did I understand why Mitra remained here instead of participating in the 'main battlefield'.

While it's possible that a constellation at the level of Mitra wasn't designated as a 'Resurrected', in any case, a defeat of that caliber would inflict enormous damage on their stories itself.

Perhaps he received this 'Valhalla Hall' management scenario to minimize the damage.

"Who is the master of the erased space?"

'■■■'—the 'Master of the erased space' that must not be mentioned: he was the mysterious being who defeated Mitra. I had a rough idea of who he was, but I still asked. At the same time, I also expected the constellations wouldn't answer. That's how they always were.

But surprisingly, Vakarine seemed to be pondering it for quite some time.

[Vakarine.]

As the judge uttered a worried incantation, Vakarine raised her head, as if she had made up her mind. A story was slowly starting to speak.

I was honestly impressed. Right now, that narrative-grade constellation was using its power to pronounce just one person's name.

[He is 'Kim Dokja'.]

With a tsutsu sound, a strong spark flew through Vakarine's body. Simply saying the name had affected the probability.

It was strange. 'Kim Dokja' was a common name, and when Vakarine pronounced it before, no sparks had flown.

So why was there a backlash now—the reason was simple.

「The 'Kim Dokja' that Vakarine spoke of just now refers to a single, specific 'Kim Dokja'.」

A name that could only be called with precise probability.

I remembered how the beings of the 'New Murim District' had difficulty pronouncing that name.

Perhaps even with the same name, the probability required to pronounce it varied depending on the precision with which it was identified.

And if it was a 'Kim Dokja' that even the 'Goddess of the Morning Star', who had surpassed the late narrative-grade, would struggle to pronounce—

[We are gathering our strength to confront him.]

No matter how much I thought about it, there was only one person.

「Snowfield Kim Dokja.」

My brother had finally surpassed even the status of a mythical constellation, defeated the fearsome Mitra, and moved on to the next scenario.

And to confront him, the <Tree of Protection> and the Underworld had joined forces and offered me a proposal.

If that were the case, there was only one possible outcome.

"Is he perhaps on the side of 'Calamity'?"

Vakarine didn't answer my question. She simply took a deep breath and continued her speech.

[Probably, many other nebulae will contact you, not just us.]

"After all, isn't the upper-level scenario a showdown between <Asgard> and Calamity? Is there a reason you need to go to such lengths to recruit me?"

[We need you.]

"Are you going to keep saying only what you want to say?"

[We've read the revelation.]

"Revelation?"

The judge stopped Vakarine once again, perhaps because the answer was unexpected.

[Vakarine. If you reveal too much information—]

[I think this is okay. He deserves to know, too.]

The spark of probability flowing through Vakarine's body intensified. She looked at me with unwavering eyes, speaking clearly.

[Every nebula has no choice but to recruit 'Kim Dokja' to win the final war. That's why we're recruiting you.]

As soon as she finished speaking, a sliver of wisdom flowed from Vakarine's lips. Revealing that information had a fatal effect on her.

Nevertheless, I couldn't stop asking questions.

"What do you mean? Are you saying that the other nebulae have already recruited 'Kim Dokja' one by one?"

As my anxiety grew, my questions became more rapid.

"And what exactly did you mean by that first statement? If you don't want to become like other Kim Dokjas, choosing a star is—"

[You're too greedy.]

Vakarine replied with a bitter smile.

[Check the ranking records. The answer you seek will be there.]

With those words, Vakarine's incarnation body began to disperse. She had finally exhausted all probability.

The Judge looked at Vakarine with a bitter expression, then turned to me and added,

[The <Tree of Guardians> and the <Underworld> await your wise choice. May the great Dionysus be with you.]

After the Judge and Vakarine disappeared, I gazed at the empty space they had left, lost in thought.

At least, my meeting with the constellations had ended without a hitch.

「My brother is on the main battlefield of 'Ragnarok'. And the 'other Kim Dokjas'—perhaps my comrades are there too.」

I should have looked into the Wenny King's records. The thought crossed my mind, but even thinking back, it was the best decision at the time.

Knock.

A knock on the door. I opened it, wondering if any of the constellations that had visited me were still there, and a welcoming face greeted me.

"If you're alive, you should tell me you're alive!"

It was Jung Heewon.

---

I briefly relayed to Jung Heewon what had happened since the match.

"Have you really become a mythical constellation?"

Jung Heewon seemed to have a hunch that I'd win, but it all seemed unrealistic.

"Did you bet enough D-Coins?"

"Yes. You said it would more than double? It hasn't arrived yet, though…"

I've also bet 10 million D-Coins, so the potential reward will be at least double that.

「With this, we've acquired enough resources for the upper battlefield.」

Now, the next problem is for everyone to safely move on to the 'main battlefield'.

"Heewon-ssi, you'll have to fight your 'outpost' soon, too."

Actually, this was also a concern.

Jung Heewon hadn't fought her 'outpost' yet.

Even if she was a special-level warrior, if the opposing side was swarmed with late-stage constellations of the narrative grade, she wouldn't have a chance.

"Don't worry. I'm confident I can win."

"Of course you would..."

"But who is that person? I think I saw her at the game earlier."

In the direction Jung Heewon pointed, there was a figure waiting for me, standing with an indifferent expression and awkward posture.

"Oh, let me introduce you."

Come to think of it, was this the first time the two of them had met in person? Since they'd be working together from now on anyway, it wouldn't be a bad idea to get to know each other beforehand.

"Heewon-ssi, this is Anna Croft-ssi."

"Anna Croft-ssi? Are you Korean?"

"Anna Croft-ssi, this is Jung Heewon-ssi."

Anna Croft sighed at my hurried introduction and extended her hand to Jung Heewon.

"Nice to meet you. My name is Anna Croft."

Jung Heewon, her eyes wide, grasped Anna's hand, perhaps already aware of her reputation.

"Anna Croft? Are you the 'Anna Croft'?"

"Yes. She's known as the 'Prophet' outside."

"Wow, I never thought I'd see that Las Vegas gambler in person."

"I've heard rumors about you, too. The Mad Sword Emperor."

"It's an honor."

It seems I was overly suspicious of their social skills.

[The story, 'Regret, Exhaustion, Obsession', begins its storytelling.]

[The story, 'Comrade of the Fear Realm', begins its storytelling.]

While the two were chatting lightly, I checked the ranking records from the skirmish. It was because of Vakarine's last words.

「Check the ranking records. The answer you seek will be there.」

I looked back at the match between 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' and Mitra. I wanted to see the details, but unfortunately, it was banned. It was only natural, since it was a story that exposed the corruption of a myth-grade constellation.

I continued to look through the ranking list. Soon enough, I found a match.

—4th place. The battle between the incarnation of Archangel Yophiel and the incarnation of the Great Heavenly Star against the narrative-grade incarnations of Papyrus.

If it's the incarnation of Archangel Yophiel, then... It must be Killer King. And the incarnation of the Great Heavenly Star... was most likely Ji Eunyu.

I don't know why she, who was supported by King Mihu, was listed as the incarnation of the Great Heavenly Star, but if King Mihu of this round was able to wield the power of the Great Heavenly Star, it wouldn't be entirely surprising.

—Archangel Yophiel, Team Victory.

Heaving a sigh of relief at the fact that the two had safely advanced to the 'Main Battlefield', I continued to check the 'Main Battlefield' records. And soon enough, I discovered another match record.

It was a match ranked 24th in total prize money.

—Baekcheongmunju, the incarnation of 'Sneaky Schemer', and Team Olympus.

Baekcheongmunju and the incarnation of the Sneaky Schemer. I held my breath without realizing it.

Baekcheongmunju must be Master Kyrgios, the 'Paradoxical White Cheong'.

With a strange name like 'Sneaky Schemer'. As far as I know, only one person chose that constellation as their sponsor.

「Dansu ahjussi.」

The problem was the result of that match.

—Team 'Olympus' won.

"What?"

I couldn't believe my eyes. I reread it several times, wondering if I'd misread it, but the record remained unchanged. The team that won that match was Olympus.

But how could that be? Even if the opponent was Olympus, they lost while Master was still there?

I continued reading the record.

—Kyrgios Rodgrim, the White Blue Paradox, was chosen as the Resurrected for that match.

If a team loses in the 'Preliminary Match', only one person from the losing team is designated as the 'Resurrected'. That Master had come back to life here...

「Dansu ahjussi is dead.」

I felt all the strength drain from my body.

「I'm too late this time, too.」

My trembling fingers continued to read the record. I wanted to know every single line about Dansu ahjussi. I wanted to know how he died, what on earth happened in the match.

But while I was looking at the record, I came across a strange line of text.

—'Missing Bush' confirmed to be activated in the match.

Missing Bush.

—Some participants went missing in the 'Missing Bush'.

My heart pounded.

—The following is the list of missing participants.

With a flash of lightning, I found the name I was looking for at the end of the list.

—Incarnation Lee Dansu.

972 Episode 58 Myth-grade Constellation (4)

---

I informed Jung Heewon that I had discovered Lee Dansu’s name within the 'ranking records'.

She was already shaken by the sheer scale of the game we had witnessed, but the news regarding Dansu ahjussi left her truly stunned.

"So he’s actually... still alive?"

"It is highly probable."

"But what on earth is that 'bush'?"

As I was mentally searching for a way to simplify the explanation, it was Anna Croft who spoke up on my behalf.

"As you saw during the match, a 'bush' is a localized event zone that generates randomly in each arena. Fundamentally, it's a place for participants to hide, but special events can trigger depending on the specific properties of that bush."

"Ah, so like that thicket from earlier..."

Anna Croft nodded, acknowledging Jung Heewon's realization.

"The one we entered was a 'Chaos Bush'. It possessed the properties of 'Observation Prevention' and 'Probability Reduction'."

"Then is this 'Missing Bush' something similar?"

"The Missing Bush can manifest if very specific conditions are met, though the probability is infinitesimally low. Selena Kim attempted to track it down in previous scenarios, but she never succeeded."

I had expected as much. I had also tasked Selena Kim with investigating the phenomenon, but I hadn't truly expected the Missing Bush to surface so soon.

"Then what's our move? We have to find that bush to get to Dansu ahjussi..."

This time, we had to find the 'Missing Bush' at all costs. Fortunately, Anna Croft already held the key.

"The probability of a Missing Bush appearing is lowest in a 'Small Battlefield'. To find one, we need scale."

The skirmish arenas were categorized into small, medium, and large formats. While most matches were held in the 'small' format, medium or large battlefields were occasionally triggered when multiple teams formed massive alliances or special events occurred.

"When a 'Large Battlefield' opens, the likelihood of a Missing Bush manifesting increases exponentially."

In other words, to rescue Dansu ahjussi, we had to force our way into a Large Battlefield. Jung Heewon spoke up, her voice steady with newfound resolve.

"Dokja-ssi, you've already cleared your 'Preliminary Battle'. I'll handle the search alone."

"No. I can’t let you walk onto that battlefield by yourself. Anna Croft and I will go with you."

Anna Croft, seemingly resigned to being dragged back into the meat grinder, looked at me with a pensive gaze. However, it was Jung Heewon who interjected first.

"You shouldn't be participating in the 'Battlefield' anymore. You've already satisfied the entry requirements for the upper-level scenario."

"Even if the conditions are met, there's nothing stopping me from re-entering. Just as the other constellations have done—"

"Have you forgotten what you just did?"

Jung Heewon asked, gesturing toward the chaotic roar of Valhalla Hall.

"Do you think those bastards will leave you alone if you set foot in the arena again?"

The wails of the constellations who had lost their fortunes filled the air. By now, the stars had likely gauged the extent of my power. If I returned to the battlefield, they would be waiting for me, fully prepared.

But I was in no position to compromise.

"Heewon-ssi. If our positions were reversed, would you have let me enter that battlefield alone?"

"That's..."

"I feel the same way. I have no intention of leaving my comrades to die while I watch from the sidelines."

Jung Heewon's expression shifted subtly at the word 'comrade'.

[The story, 'Regret, Impoverishment, and Obsession', nods.]

She cleared her throat and spoke again.

"Fine. If that's how it is, Dokja-ssi... but on one condition. You must enter the same battlefield as me. You stay by my side. Understood?"

"I understand."

"Then I'll go ahead and see if I can find anyone else to fill the team. I doubt we'll have many volunteers, given the circumstances."

Anna Croft waited until Jung Heewon had walked a significant distance away before speaking.

"She cares for you quite deeply."

"I feel the same."

Anna Croft smirked, her eyes searching mine.

"I suppose she still has no idea how truly devious you are, right?"

"Yes. I've played the part well."

"She's going to be terribly disappointed eventually."

"My plan is to never get caught."

Anna Croft let out a sharp, sarcastic laugh.

"Then why did you let me find out everything about you?"

"Because you already knew I was a bad guy, didn't you?"

She looked at me with a flicker of genuine agitation in her eyes. I met her gaze and asked simply:

"Will you join me on the next battlefield?"

It was an absurd request. I was asking someone who had just crawled out of hell to jump right back into the fire. But I had to ask.

"I really need you. Both for this skirmish and the main battlefield of 'Ragnarok'."

"You overestimate me. My [Future Sight] is blocked—"

"[Future Sight] isn't the only weapon in your arsenal."

People mocked her for losing her prophetic edge, but Anna Croft was a formidable incarnation even without her foresight. Even Yoo Joonghyuk, who despised her, would have been forced to acknowledge her raw competence.

Anna Croft looked at me for a long moment before letting out a weary sigh.

"Your lip service is exhausting. It's not like I have much of a choice anyway... so, is your grand goal to rescue your old friends from the arena?"

"Exactly. Are you in?"

"Getting there is one thing, but we have a more immediate problem to solve first."

"I know."

Forming a team was fine, but to save Dansu ahjussi, we needed to actually find a 'Large Battlefield' to enter. Such stages were rare and didn't open easily. Especially with Valhalla Hall in its current state of disarray.

"I have an idea."

Fortunately, our brilliant Anna Croft already had a plan.

When we returned to the heart of Valhalla Hall, we were met by Skuld and the rest of the Golden Dice Hall staff. Behind them, bowing as if in apology, stood Mitra—the Lord of December 25th and Chairman of Valhalla. It appeared he had managed to stabilize his incarnation body in the interim.

"We meet again."

Mitra looked even more gaunt than before. He had clearly burned through a massive amount of probability just to solicit my help.

"Why did you vanish earlier? Did the Round Table summon you?"

Mitra’s eyebrows twitched, clearly not expecting me to be so blunt.

[You are aware of the Round Table?]

"I haven't seen it personally, but I've heard the whispers."

It was a hazy memory, like a dream that felt both distant and vivid. The moment I had ascended to 'Myth-grade', I had caught a fleeting glimpse of the Round Table—the seat of the mythical constellations.

In truth, 'round table' felt like an inadequate description.

It was a terrifyingly black, elongated oval. In a sense, that table was a universe unto itself—a vast, dark void that expanded without end.

[Be wary. They are beings who will go to any lengths to curate the playground they desire.]

"Aren't you also a mythical constellation?"

[Beings like me are no longer afforded the title of 'Myth'.]

"May I ask what happened to you?"

[You surely have an inkling of the situation, don't you?]

As I suspected, Mitra's current state was the result of his encounter with 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

He continued, his voice laced with bitterness.

[Every myth is eventually obligated to yield to a newer one. For those of us being pushed out, there are only two paths: burn your stories into nothingness and vanish, or cling to a new myth and live as a parasite.]

"Which path did you choose?"

[Have you considered my proposal?]

That was his answer. He hadn't given up on his story yet. He was dreaming of the day he would reclaim his place in the great narrative and exact his revenge.

"You said you'd stand on my side if I helped you."

[I swear it on the weight of all my stories.]

"Then tell me exactly what you want."

[Do not collect the winnings from your last wager.]

"Are you asking me to act as if the bet never happened?"

[Not at all. If the bet were erased, your own story would lose its potency. I am asking that you simply do not take the D-Coins.]

It was a bold request. I decided to test him.

"And if I refuse?"

[The constellation, 'Lord of December 25th', is observing you.]

"Are you planning to fight me?"

Mitra stared at me with unblinking eyes before slowly shaking his head.

[I think not. Your victory was legitimate. If you refuse, I will harbor no grudge.]

That wasn't quite the level of assurance I needed. I pushed a bit harder, provocation in my tone.

"I've dismantled your constellations from <Vedas> several times now. I've killed 'Thunder-Eater' and the 'General of Vanara'. And yet you claim you won't hold a grudge? Are you being sincere?"

[I guarantee it on the honor of <Vedas>.]

He was serious. He was testifying to me using the full weight of Valhalla Hall's reputation. It was time for me to make my move.

"I cannot simply walk away from the entire bet."

[Then what do you propose?]

"Let's turn it into a debt."

[A debt?]

"You're afraid that if every constellation who lost their coins is dragged to the 'Main Battlefield', the entire ecosystem of Valhalla Hall will collapse. Am I right?"

Mitra's silence was his confirmation. I continued.

"So, I'll lend the D-Coins back to them. I will return my winnings to the losing constellations as an interest-free loan."

Mitra stared at me, clearly not expecting this particular curveball.

"If they have relics or stories of value, I can appraise them myself and write off the debt accordingly."

[You intend to run a pawn shop for the constellations?]

"Something like that."

Mitra let out a bewildered laugh. In truth, I was simply proposing to do exactly what the 'Golden Dice Hall' had been doing since its inception.

"If I return the lost bets as debt, they won't have to pay up immediately."

Settlement. It was a specific mechanic within Valhalla Hall.

「All constellations residing in 'Valhalla Hall' are subject to a 'Settlement Fee'.」

It was effectively a residency tax for constellations who preferred to linger in the 'Preliminary Battles' indefinitely rather than risk the 'Main Battlefield'. Even now, stars were being forcibly dragged to the front lines because they couldn't afford their stay.

Mitra, having listened in silence, asked with a hint of skepticism:

[It could take eons for that debt to be settled. Many of the stars here are malicious; they would steal your coins the moment you turned your back. Are you truly prepared to just hand them over?]

"I never said I'd just hand them over."

[Then?]

"There are conditions."

And this was the crux of why we had come to Mitra in the first place. As the brilliant Anna Croft had said:

「"There is only one being with the direct authority to manifest a 'Large Battlefield' within this hall."」

A star capable of opening the gate we needed.

"Open a Large Battlefield for us."

As the Master of Valhalla, Mitra possessed that authority. He widened his eyes, clearly weighing my intent.

[Why would you ask for that? Do you truly intend to dive into a large-scale conflict?]

"That's the plan."

[Your audacity is remarkable. If a Large Battlefield opens, every constellation in this hall will have their sights on your head. If you've just loaned them D-Coins, the situation will only worsen.]

If I died, their debts would vanish. Naturally, more constellations would flock to the arena just for the chance to kill me. I had already accounted for that.

"It doesn't matter. It'll just make for a better bet."

Mitra looked at me with genuine curiosity before nodding.

[I accept your terms. From this moment, the 'Golden Dice Hall' owes you 10 million D-Coins. In exchange for this contract, you are granted the right to participate in the newly manifested 'Large Battlefield'.]

Mitra raised a hand, and his power began to churn. The entirety of Valhalla Hall shuddered as a massive, swirling quagmire formed in the center of the stadium.

The power of creation. A battlefield was being forged within that swamp, like a primordial soup being stirred. Dirt spread under a canopy of artificial starlight, and life began to flicker into existence upon it.

The moment a microcosm of the universe began to take shape—

Tuduk.

A sound echoed, like something being wrenched out of place in the far distance.

[The constellation, 'Lord of December 25th', is visibly unsettled.]

Only Mitra and I heard it. It was the sound of space-time creaking, tangling upon itself.

[No.]

Mitra's whisper was drowned out by a violent storm that suddenly tore through the dark sky of Valhalla. Fragments of stories were being sucked from the storm and dumped into the stadium. No, those weren't just stories.

「Records.」

The dense clusters of information that dictated [Fate] were pouring down like a deluge, overwriting the shape of the battlefield.

「And so, the final arena of the prelude is born.」

The land Mitra had carefully crafted was instantly reduced to a graveyard of ruins. Dark clouds choked out the clear sky.

「The cowardly stars who hid from the war will finally be called to account.」

[Fate has manifested, overriding the authority of the 'Myth-grade' Mitra.]

Even without Mitra saying a word, I knew whose hand was at work.

「The 'Round Table' has intervened.」

973 Episode 58 Myth-grade Constellation (5)

---

Countless lightning bolts struck the hall. Amidst the raging aftershock of probability, a battlefield several times larger than Mitra had envisioned manifested in the center of the hall.

[There has never been a story like this.]

Mitra, gazing into the churning void, muttered with a pale face.

[Round Table... are you determined to destroy all my myths...!]

Mitra's expression, once noble, transformed into that of a cornered demon. Sentences of probability poured from the sky like a deluge. They weren't mere interventions from a scribe or a nebula’s forced [Fate]. They were the natural order of the cosmos—the <Star Stream> itself.

[Zeus! Odin! Ra! Nuwa! Fuxi! Can you truly hear me?]

The myth of Mitra's birth and death defied the natural order of the universe, but the impending odds were too powerful for the ancient myth to resist. Mitra's fingertips began to crumble into pale dust. He turned to me, his gaze heavy with humiliation.

[Demon King of Salvation, I may not be able to keep my promise to you.]

With those words, Mitra's incarnation body was enveloped in a blinding halo of light.

"Wait—"

I reached out, but I stopped. It wasn't just Mitra. The surrounding constellations were also being engulfed in identical halos.

[Ah, ah. This is— Light!]

[No! Stop this!]

The constellations of the 'Hall of Golden Dice' were being forcibly transported.

"Kim Dokja."

Beside me, Anna Croft was fading. In the distance, Jung Heewon was running toward me, her form already dissolving into radiance.

"Dokja-ssi!"

And then, the light claimed me too. As I felt the world shift, the realization struck me.

[A 'Giant Battlefield' has been born in 'Valhalla Hall'!]

A distant laughter echoed through the transition—a strange musical note, a soft whisper telling of the beginning and the end of the world.

「Thus, the long festival of the constellations will finally come to an end.」

Along with the records engraved into the Round Table's universe, the final battlefield of 'Valhalla Hall' was opening.

[From now on, all beings in 'Valhalla Hall' will be summoned to the 'Giant Battlefield'!]

Back when I was writing web novels, I once asked Kiyeon-hyung how to bring characters to life. (Now that I think about it, I'm not sure why I asked him of all people.)

"You have to write as if you were the character," he advised.

"So, do you always write as if you were one of them?"

"Yes."

"But all your characters speak strangely."

"What's wrong with my lines?"

"All your characters laugh like 'Heh heh,' don't they?"

"Because I laugh like that, too."

Thinking I'd asked the wrong person, I went to Ji Eunyu with the same question.

"You shouldn't empathize with your characters too much," she replied. "If you do, only the writer finds the story entertaining."

"But without empathy, won't they lose their vividness?"

She looked puzzled. "Ultimately, characters are the writer's alter ego."

"So should I empathize or not?"

"You should write so the reader can empathize."

"Do you know who your readers are?"

In the end, I never found the answer. I knew nothing about my characters, and even less about the people who would read them. Once I acknowledged that, I lost my grasp on myself as a writer.

What are characters? Are they creations, or are they independent entities merely borrowing my language? How do I write for people I don't know? Who am I, writing an unknown story for an unknown audience?

"Ugh."

When I opened my eyes, I was met with the pitch-black ruins of what looked like a Buddhist altar. Pillars of light flickered in the distance.

[Ugh, ughhhhhhhh!]

[No! Get me out of here!]

The screams of summoned constellations snapped me back to reality.

「We've entered the battlefield.」

A record flashed through my mind. At times like this, it’s helpful to format your thoughts into sentences—to act as if you were the character in the script.

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', activates!]

It wasn't hard to grasp the situation. I had suspected something like this might happen from the moment I entered Valhalla.

「In the face of the Great Destruction, it was a miracle that a system like 'Valhalla Hall' had lasted this long.」

For the constellations on the Main Battlefield, Valhalla was a necessary evil. It provided elite soldiers, but it also drained the potential of those who hid there, resulting in a net loss of strength. This scenario was inevitable. However, as Mitra said, the timing was premature.

Was this solely the will of the 'Round Table'? The answer appeared immediately.

[The main scenario has been updated!]

With a tsutsutsu sound, the face of a Great Dokkaebi manifested in the sky.

[I deeply apologize to the constellations who were startled by this sudden development.]

I recognized him instantly.

「Great Dokkaebi Baram.」

His appearance was met with a chorus of indignant roars.

[What is the meaning of this!]

[Summoning us to a battlefield without warning? Is this the Bureau's idea of management?]

[This is a violation of our status!]

This wasn't some low-level scenario; it was Scenario #85. It was a late-stage arena filled with Narrative-grade beings. Their sense of entitlement was absolute.

[The constellation, 'Brash Swamp Predator', indignantly points a finger at the Administration Bureau!]

[The constellation, 'Gourmet of the Quiet Isle', laments the Administration Bureau's tyranny!]

[The constellation, 'Master of the White Castle', surveys the battlefield with displeasure.]

The modifiers were familiar—members of the Gourmet Association. They, too, had been lounging here instead of fighting.

[I understand your grievances.]

Baram continued, ignoring the outcry.

[However, constellations, we cannot allow this festival to continue indefinitely.]

He surveyed the field with a calm, piercing gaze.

[Is 'Valhalla Hall' truly what you desire? Is it the non-existence you wished for—waiting for others to clear the path while you exhaust your remaining starlight in a cage?]

The resentment subsided for a heartbeat. His words had struck a nerve.

[Have you forgotten the thrill of your first scenario? The memory of your first item? The days you spent accumulating your first stories? Gaining allies, slaying arch-enemies, completing the impossible—have those memories truly faded?]

The story of the <Star Stream> flowed above the ruins.

「"You crazy bastard! If you don't kill, you'll die too!"」

「"It doesn't matter."」

Surprisingly, it was my story.

「The first scenario—the scene of 'Proof of Worth'.」

The stars watched. Yet, what they saw was different for each of them.

「The stars see the same story, yet they each read a different one.」

They were likely recalling their own 'Proof of Worth', their own ancient origins and distinct eras.

[Eventually, all starlight will extinguish, and the universe will return to silence. The moments we cherished will be reduced to a single line, or perhaps nothing at all.]

Like the manager of a failing amusement park, the Great Dokkaebi spoke with somber weight.

[Scenario #85 is a high-level stage, but it is not the end. Burn everything you have. Enjoy the struggle. Pioneer the tale. You are still within the scenario.]

Even without [Incite], Baram's speech was moving. But some emotions only affect those willing to feel them.

[Is the Bureau calling this a 'scenario' now!]

[Great Dokkaebi! Are you mocking us?]

[I paid a fortune in residence fees for Valhalla!]

[Where is the Chairman? This is a scam!]

[Yes... something that should never have happened has happened.]

Looking at them, I thought of the incarnations who had risen in the New Murim District.

「Some memories possess no power.」

To reach this stage, these stars had survived countless tragedies. They had lost everything and gained the world. And now, at the summit, they were obsessed with a single fear.

「I don't want to fall.」

They didn't want to be eliminated. They didn't want to die. Rather than being remembered as a great line in history, they preferred to remain eternal spectators in the shadows.

[Chairman! Reveal yourself!]

I understood that sentiment. I wouldn't call it wrong. But they had to realize the truth by now.

[Cancel this immediately! What are the Great Nebulae doing?]

The rules of the world they enjoyed were finally being applied to them.

[Main Scenario #85 – The End of Sloth]

Category: Main

Difficulty: ???

Clear Conditions: Survive the 'Super-Large Battlefield' and join the 'Main Battlefield'.

Time Limit: None

Reward: ???

Failure: Death

[Survival Conditions]

—Hunt a 'warrior' stronger than yourself.

—Or hunt five or more warriors of the same rank as yourself.

—Hidden 'sanctuaries' will appear on the battlefield at regular intervals.

[Sanctuary Rules]

—When a Sanctuary appears, a five-minute timer starts.

—After the timer expires, the twenty participants standing within the Sanctuary's light will be transported to the 'Main Battlefield'.

Amidst the chaos, I read the window. A massive battlefield—the first of its kind in Valhalla history. The goal was simple: survive.

The first condition was brutal. Intermediate warriors had to hunt Advanced-level or higher. Advanced had to hunt Special-level.

The second was no easier: five warriors of your own rank.

The final condition was the only one that seemed feasible for those unwilling to fight.

[My goodness... we actually have to do this?]

[Let me out! I'm telling you to let me out!]

Most of them hadn't participated in a real scenario in eons. They were content to watch incarnations, sustaining themselves on the stories of others. Risking their own lives was a forgotten concept.

[Kill a constellation stronger than me? That's insane...]

Like children in the first scenario, the constellations grew wary, distancing themselves. Some fled into the bushes. Others tried to find strength in numbers.

[Is there any constellation willing to join us?]

[We need a team! If we unite, we can overcome this!]

The first to call out was a high-ranking constellation from the border regions.

[If anyone wants to— Kaaaaaaak! Wait! What are you doing!]

An arrow pierced his shoulder before he could finish.

[Kill him.]

Five or six constellations swarmed from the shadows like lynxes. In an instant, the Great-grade constellation was torn apart, his story disintegrating before he could utter a final word. Their leader bit into the severed arm of the dead star and spat it out.

[Intermediate? Worthless. Find me an 'Advanced' or higher.]

I recognized him immediately.

[The constellation, 'Black Wolf Reaper', lets out a ferocious howl!]

The Black Wolf Reaper—Anubis, the Narrative-grade constellation from <Papyrus>. I quickly ducked behind cover, checking my status.

[You are currently a 'Special Warrior'.]

My value had skyrocketed after the previous battle. If I were caught, I’d be the ultimate prize.

[Run! It's Papyrus!]

As the wolves led by Anubis roared, the surrounding constellations scattered in a panic. I held my breath, waiting for them to pass.

[There was definitely a scent here...]

Anubis sniffed the air near my hiding spot, but his eyes slid right past me.

[The story, 'Pebble and I', begins its storytelling!]

I was currently nothing more than a stone.

[Hmm. Did I misread the trail?]

I wasn't afraid of them, but now wasn't the time to move. I waited for the pack to recede, but then, a hand tapped me on the shoulder.

It should have been impossible. Under the effect of 'Pebble and I', I was undetectable.

Unless... there was only one person who could find me like this.

974 Episode 58 Myth-grade Constellation (6)

"Kim Dokja."

Only after hearing her voice did I breathe a collective sigh of relief.

"Anna."

「'Pebble and I' does not work on anyone who has ever shared the effects of the story. Anna Croft had once shared this story with me, so she found me completely unaffected by its masking effect.」

However, Anna Croft, who was now clutching my shoulder, seemed to be in an erratic state.

"Are you hurt?"

Anna shook her head as if it were nothing, wiping a smear of blood from her forehead. Judging by her ragged breathing, she had clearly been chased by someone powerful on her way here. Before I could speak again, she placed a finger to her lips and initiated a [Direct Transmission].

—The constellations are coming.

A moment later, a group of constellations appeared, their presence loud and intrusive, from the direction she had fled. These were the ones pursuing her.

—The <Emperor>'s forces.

With Anna's warning, I identified the constellation leading the charge. It was a handsome man carrying a massive red bow on his back—one that seemed even taller than he was. He wore character-themed pajamas that looked absurdly out of place on a battlefield, looking around with a gloomy, perpetually annoyed expression as he clutched a white arrowhead. I knew him well.

「Sun Hunter, 'Hou Yi'.」

He was a legendary constellation said to have shot down nine suns with his arrows. It appeared the forces of <Emperor> participating in this skirmish were under his command.

—Were they hunting you?

Anna Croft shook her head.

—To be precise, they rescued me.

—Rescued you?

According to Anna, the <Emperor>'s constellations, led by Hou Yi, had saved her from a group that had surrounded her earlier.

—The Emperor is attempting to recruit me. They want me to join their vanguard on the 'Main Battlefield'.

This 'Large-scale Battlefield' was the last chance for major nebulae to scout the elites of Valhalla. In that sense, a Prophet like Anna Croft was a prize worth claiming. Though she was despised by Asgard, with Valhalla already teetering on the edge of collapse, the Emperor had no reason to fear the petty disapproval of other nebulae.

—Why didn't you accept? The Emperor stands a real chance even in the final scenarios.

Anna’s eyes widened in genuine bewilderment.

—Are you serious?

—Yes. You’ve already been abandoned by Asgard, haven't you?

When we met in the past, within the Realm of Fear, she was already being systematically hunted by her own nebula. Relying on the Transcendent Alliance had been her last resort, but now that refuge was gone. Accepting a call from another giant nebula was, logically, her best survival strategy.

Anna Croft shook her head stubbornly.

—I am sick of giant nebulae. And…

She hesitated, casting a fleeting glance at me.

—You have no intention of joining them either, do you?

—Of course not.

—Then be quiet. We must be careful of [Detection].

I nodded. Hou Yi was a constellation who had reached the pinnacle of Transcendence, much like Cheok Jungyeong. At this range, even a whisper could be picked up by his senses.

[What a dismal battlefield. The souls of incarnations who perished in despair are screaming everywhere.]

Hou Yi had been mentioned briefly in 'Ways of Survival', but his personality had never been fleshed out.

[Do not weep. In the end, all stars are destined to return to a single dream. Both the brilliant sun and the pebbles on the roadside will ultimately become nothing more than the dust of a story.]

Judging by his tone, he was a surprisingly sentimental constellation. The subordinates approaching him prostrated themselves immediately.

[O Sun Hunter!]

Hou Yi didn't respond. He simply gazed at the artificial sky, lost in thought. His followers, familiar with his temperament, waited in respectful silence. Finally, as a star streaked across the sky, Hou Yi spoke.

[I heard there are Transcendents who escaped the Realm of Fear. Is there any news? What of Jungyeong? What of Namgung Minyoung? Or Kyrgios?]

I felt a jolt of surprise at the names he uttered.

[I came here to learn the fate of my comrades.]

[The Five Emperors promised that if you complete your mission, they will mobilize the Bureau's full intelligence to locate them.]

The 'Five Emperors'—he was referring to the Myth-grade constellations of <Emperor>. Hou Yi scoffed at his subordinate's words.

[You are always the same. Always planning to manipulate me. What star do you want me to bring down this time?]

It made sense. Hou Yi wasn't a central figure in the 'Journey to the West' scenario, the pride of <Emperor>. Like Surya or Dionysus, he didn't necessarily align with the overarching will of his nebula.

[So, what is my task?]

[The Emperor has issued two commands. The first is to recruit the Prophet from <Asgard>.]

[The woman who fled? She clearly has no desire to join us.]

Hou Yi frowned, looking annoyed.

[There is no need to force her. She will learn her place once she advances to the higher scenarios. She will realize that hiding behind the starlight of a Nebula is the only way to stay safe.]

[A mission I can afford to fail, then.]

[However, the second mission must be fulfilled at all costs.]

[And that is?]

The subordinate paused before speaking with cold precision.

[We are to capture the 'Demon King of Salvation'.]

Anna Croft flinched beside me, but I wasn't surprised. This was the logical progression. With the 'Round Table' in motion, there was no reason for other mythic entities to stay idle.

[The Five Emperors ordered that he be brought in without fail. They have authorized the use of the 'White Arrows' if necessary.]

[The White Arrows?]

I swallowed hard. Hou Yi was a constellation of the Sun, but he possessed a specific relic that posed a mortal threat even to Myth-grade beings. Hanging from his flank were ten glowing white arrows.

「A mythical relic—the 'Ten Fingers of God'.」

They were forged from the severed fingers of 'Di Ku', one of the Three Emperors.

「If I am struck by those arrows, even I will be in danger.」

Hou Yi looked genuinely startled by the authorization.

[Really? You understand the implications of using these.]

[The order is absolute.]

[These arrows are meant to bring down stars of calamity. Is this 'Demon King of Salvation' truly such a threat?]

[Reports suggest he possesses status beyond the late Narrative-grade. Possibly even early Myth-grade.]

[A constellation I have never heard of. Is it an Outer God? Or perhaps a Transcendent who ascended?]

[I heard he is an Incarnation.]

Hou Yi’s expression shifted to one of genuine intrigue. He lightly stroked his bow, a slow, inscrutable smile spreading across his face.

[If that is true... then this might actually be interesting.]

I wondered if it was my imagination, or if his gaze had just flickered toward the very bush where Anna and I were hiding. He tilted his head, then looked away.

[Let us prepare. We must secure the 'Demon King of Salvation' before the first Sanctuary closes.]

I watched their movements, a realization dawning on me.

—Did they try to find my location through you? Is that why you ran?

Anna continued to monitor the Emperor’s forces.

—I simply didn't want to be a piece on their board anymore.

If I abandoned her now, I’d never hear the end of it from my comrades. Maintaining 「Pebble and I」, I grabbed Anna’s wrist and began to move. Fortunately, the Emperor's forces remained unaware of our transit.

—First, we need to find Heewon-ssi.

That was the priority. If the rules of the Giant Battlefield held, she would be a prime target without a team.

—And we need to find the 'Missing Bush'. It has to have manifested by now.

That was our true objective.

—If we find it, we can bypass the clearing conditions and survive the scenario.

—Are you really going in there?

—Yes.

—But we don't know where it leads. It could be a death trap.

It was a massive risk. Even 'Ways of Survival' was vague about the destination of the 'Missing Bush'. But if my intuition was correct...

Thud.

A heavy footstep shook the earth. I turned my head.

Thud.

The constellations of <Emperor>, and even the <Papyrus> hunters in the distance, froze as if entranced.

—Kim Dokja...

Anna’s voice was trembling. The air on the battlefield vibrated with a suffocating pressure. It was a cocktail of greed, anxiety, fear, and warped joy. There was no mistaking this sensation.

「I knew the origin of this sound.」

It was the sound of a star of immense status colliding with the weight of its own story.

—A Myth-grade constellation.

In the direction of the ruined forest, a Myth-grade being was unleashing its full status. Fleeing stars and hunters alike turned back, drawn like moths to a primordial flame.

「The instinct to be part of a great record.」

Anna grabbed my sleeve.

—You cannot go there.

She was right. Usually, I wouldn't take such a risk. But there was a reason I had to.

—No, I must.

It wasn't just curiosity about a clash between myths. It was a voice—a story only I could hear.

[The story, 'Regret, Impoverishment, and Obsession', continues its storytelling.]

A familiar story was screaming for me. Anna’s expression hardened as she read my intent.

—No way…

As if synchronized, we bolted toward the forest. To anyone nearby, we would have looked like two very fast stones rolling through the debris. When we reached the treeline, I froze. The pressure was so thick it was hard to draw breath. Great-grade constellations that had rushed in were screaming.

「Eternity. The dawn of the universe. Light following the first point of creation.」

With a collective shriek, the stars nearby dissolved into pure light. Unable to withstand the unfiltered status of a myth, they were being vacuumed into a vortex of tales.

Standing beside me, Anna was gasping for air, her eyes fixed upward. A giant of light was shining brilliantly in the absolute darkness. It was a Myth-grade being with an appearance reminiscent of a colossal archangel.

「Mitra, the Lord of December 25th.」

I knew he was strong, but seeing him unleash his true nature was a terrifying reminder of what I was now up against.

[Protect the Chairman! The Sanctuary is appearing!]

It seemed the Sanctuary was manifesting in this very forest. Skuld and the remnants of the Golden Dice Hall were huddled there, protected by Mitra's radiance.

[Kaaaaaaah! Chairman! Chairman—!]

Then came the scream. It was wrong. Mitra was there, protecting them with the great light of myth that none should be able to defy. Yet, the circle of light was shrinking.

「As if the darkness were slowly devouring the light itself.」

Thud.

The footsteps I had heard earlier—they weren't Mitra's.

Thud.

With every step, Great-grade constellations simply vaporized. It was a monstrous feat—incinerating stars with the mere sound of a stride.

「Something was staring back from the darkness of the beginning.」

Mitra roared and swung a fist of pure light, but the darkness caught it. It coiled around his arm, effortlessly snapping his one remaining wing.

[Ooooooooooo—!]

A horrific scream tore the sky in half. Mitra's massive form began to buckle under the weight of an impossible violence. When the master of that darkness finally stepped into the light, my breath stopped. The one who had broken Mitra's wings—I knew him better than anyone.

975 Episode 58 Myth-grade Constellation (7)

'Ways of Survival' features a multitude of beings born from the 'Primal Darkness'. The most prominent example was the 'Wenny King', a creature born alongside the 'Dokkaebi King' in the first Myeongyang. Then there were those who reached the Primal Darkness through the weight of their own myths—beings like the ruler of the abyss, Abaddon, or the lord of the spirit world, Hades. Some had even plummeted into that darkness through their own corruption, such as the Archangel Michael or the high-ranking Demon Lords. Regardless of their origin, every being that embraced the Primal Darkness shared a singular trait.

「They were already mythical, or existence itself had brought them infinitely close to it.」

The star that had materialized before my eyes was no exception. I knew I would see him eventually, but I never expected to encounter him like this.

"Anna Croft-ssi, stay back. No matter what happens, do not approach."

I shoved her behind me and stepped forward. As if triggered by my movement, a record surged before my eyes.

「The pitch-black shadow of a light dragon shimmered within the thick darkness. Merely meeting its gaze was enough to choke one with pure murderous intent. The most sublime and solemn entity in this universe coiled there, watching me.」

I swallowed hard and recited his epithet.

"Abyssal Black Flame Dragon."

The star that ruled the Nebula <Black Cloud>—the one who had been Han Sooyoung's sponsor in the original story.

「Why is he here? Why has he descended to attack Mitra?」

[No... run...!]

Mitra, struggling beneath the dragon's weight, let out a ragged cry. I looked up at the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon. The entity revealed within the darkness had taken the shape of a colossal black dragon. I opened my mouth to pay my 'respects'.

"Master of the Great <Black Cloud>."

The Black Flame Dragon I remembered was a high-tier Narrative-grade. But the beast before me now was undeniably Mythical. Even the malice radiating from its form was fundamentally different—darker, heavier. How had this happened? Why had he become such a sinister, mythical disaster? I didn't have the luxury of wondering. I needed to buy time.

「The rebound from the 'Demon King of Salvation' form is still tearing at me.」

My strength hadn't fully recovered. If I clashed with a Mythical-grade constellation now, I wouldn't just be reduced to fragments; I'd be erased. And if I failed, Jung Heewon would die with me. I spotted a transparent thicket at the edge of the mythical battlefield.

[The story, 'Regret, Exhaustion, and Obsession', continues its storytelling!]

Heewon's voice resonated from within. She and several other incarnations were huddled inside a transparent barrier. I recognized it immediately.

「Exposed Bush.」

Its function was simple: you could be seen from the outside, but you were immune to damage.

[The 'Exposed Bush' will expire in five minutes.]

The immunity was a one-time grace period. Jung Heewon was tending to the wounded, likely having sought refuge there the moment the myths began their clash. But the bush was situated right at the feet of the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon. Once that timer hit zero, they would be obliterated by the mere aftershocks of the fight.

「I have to stop this fight before that timer runs out.」

"Abyssal Black Flame Dragon!"

He didn't listen. He simply began to crush Mitra beneath a massive, scaled foot.

[Ooooooooooo—!]

Hearing Mitra's screams, I took another step.

"Can't you hear me?"

A Myth-grade star wouldn't hear the voice of a mere human. I drew a deep breath and cast my incantation.

[Abyssal Black Flame Dragon! You, who are closer to being the 'Final Dragon' than anyone else... how did you end up like this?]

The dragon's head turned slowly toward me. It felt as if the universe's abyss was peering into my soul. I pushed the 'Giant Story' to its limit to keep from collapsing under that gaze.

[I am asking why a Great Constellation such as you is acting as a pawn on this trivial stage.]

In the original text, the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon was a candidate for the 'Final Dragon of the Apocalypse'. But here, he didn't look like a herald of the end. He looked like a puppet.

「Snowfield Kim Dokja blocked the signs of the Holy Demon War in 'The Night of the Blue Witch'.」

The pieces clicked. Because that war never happened in this 41st round, the 'Final Dragon' was never born.

「The prevention of that war... did it break the Black Flame Dragon?」

I didn't know if this was the intended plot of this worldline, but the result was clear.

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', is activated!]

Deprived of his destiny, he had been consumed by rage and grief, spewing forth a narrative of corruption.

[Are you willing to abandon your pride just because you failed to become the Final Dragon? Did you endure for eons just to become a mindless disaster on a battlefield?]

I never claimed he was a 'good' constellation. He was a being who aspired to be the worst disaster in the <Star Stream>. But...

「There was always a certain purity to the Black Flame Dragon.」

I only knew him through records—perhaps they were just Han Sooyoung's filtered perceptions. But that's how we read people.

「The dragon who reveled in Kim Dokja's misfortune but shared a mischievous bond.」

「The immature constellation who believed himself to be a fifteen-year-old child, hiding a bandaged hand.」

「The star that fought to protect a single reader until the very end.」

[That isn't the dragon I knew.]

When we claim to understand someone, we are always telling ourselves a story.

[The constellation, 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon', roars!]

I kept talking, even as the pressure threatened to crush my ribs.

[Even if this is my own arbitrary misreading. Even if this isn't the story of this worldline.]

The story of the 'Demon King of Salvation' poured out of me. I projected the image of the dragon I remembered.

[That was you. I read it. So—]

I was trying to turn reality into one giant incitement.

[I know this isn't your will.]

[The constellation, 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon', winces in pain.]

The darkness began to shift. Sentences poured out of the void as if to argue with me.

「The Abyssal Black Flame Dragon frowned at the insect before him. How could a human he had never met speak so recklessly of his soul?」

"No... that wasn't you."

「He was an evil dragon. This <Star Stream> was destined to become the ultimate disaster. He was the star that would defeat Mitra here and claim a higher place in mythology.」

[How long will you surrender yourself to a 'record' written by someone else?]

The dragon's massive form stilled. I looked into the shadows behind it. The primal darkness. And then, I heard it. A laughter I loathed.

【That was quite the moving speech.】

I should have known. A star with such a massive ego doesn't just become a 'Mad Dragon' overnight. The world turned a sickly, pale gray. Spacetime warped into the clock of the 'Recorders'. Behind the dragon stood a man in a pitch-black gothic suit.

"Asmodeus."

【It has been a while, Kim Dokja.】

He studied me, his eyes narrowing.

【I've heard the rumors. Have you truly reached 'Myth-grade'?】

"Yes."

You can't lie to the 'Recorder of Fear'.

[What are you doing here?]

【What does a Recorder do? I am recording.】

[Release the Black Flame Dragon. Now.]

[There will be a price.]

Asmodeus laughed.

【A price? From me? You are in no condition to threaten anyone. Do you think you can defeat the 'Mad Dragon King' I am currently writing?】

[Is that the best name you could come up with? Your naming sense is as poor as your record.]

【Sharp tongue. Let's see if it can save you.】

The scenery shattered. The dragon lunged. I spun my 'Giant Story' like a shield. But the dragon's tail bypassed space-time, striking me from a blind spot and wrapping around me with crushing force.

"Hmph...!"

Kudududuk. The stories of the 'Demon King of Salvation' groaned under the pressure.

【As expected... a Myth-grade earned only with a tongue. This is Scenario #85. Did you truly believe you could best a Mythical dragon? I look forward to the expressions of the Great Beings when I present them with your head...】

I didn't panic.

"Really?"

Asmodeus's smile faltered.

"Are you truly curious about that?"

"Black Dragon! Finish him—!"

[The constellation, 'Demon King of Salvation', unleashes his status!]

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', activates to its fullest!]

I poured my essence into a single mantra.

[I am here!]

The voice resonated across the entire battlefield.

[The 'Demon King of Salvation' is here!]

Silence fell. The stars twinkled in anticipation.

[The constellations of the Great Nebula, <Asgard>, have confirmed your location!]

[The constellations of the Great Nebula, <Vedas>, have confirmed your location!]

[The constellations of the Great Nebula, <Olympus>, have confirmed your location!]

Asmodeus regained his sneer.

【The Mythical ones on the main battlefield are too busy for you. If you thought they'd come for you—】

[I know they're busy. But that isn't who I called.]

The sound of a bowstring being pulled taut echoed, as if the Earth’s axis itself were being strained.

[The constellations of the Great Nebula, <Emperor>, have confirmed your location!]

A brilliant white light pierced the horizon. Hou Yi was aiming.

「The Ten Fingers of God.」

Asmodeus roared in realization, but he was too late.

[Release him, evil dragon.]

The arrow of the sun ignited the sky.

976 Episode 58 Myth-grade Constellation (8)

---

The 'Ten Fingers of God' wielded by the Sun Hunter were sacred relics representing the absolute will of Emperor Di Ku, the third of the Five Emperors.

「The direction his arrowhead points is the decree of the Emperor himself.」

The <Emperor's> 'Giant Story' coiled around the relic like a living serpent, causing every star in the vicinity to let out a collective, trembling sigh.

[Oh, ohhh—]

[The White Arrow of the Emperor!]

The constellations, recognizing the artifact, couldn't suppress their fervor. It was only natural; according to Bicheonhori's '100 Strongest', that arrow was the very relic that had elevated Fei Hu into an incarnation comparable to Yoo Joonghyuk.

「In several worldlines of 'Ways of Survival', Fei Hu, the exclusive incarnation of <Emperor>, inherits that arrow.」

The fact that Hou Yi still wielded it meant that Fei Hu had yet to succeed the Sun Hunter’s lineage in this particular round. Asmodeus, staring at the white-glowing arrowhead, narrowed his eyes and hissed.

【Emperor... are you truly prepared to confront me now?】

Hou Yi’s brow furrowed. He, too, seemed to have finally pierced through the disguise to sense the Recorder’s true identity.

[I am, Great Recorder.]

【I did not ask a mere Narrative-grade. Is this an action sanctioned by the Myth-grade entities of your nebula?】

[I am indeed just a Narrative-grade constellation, however...]

Hou Yi didn't hesitate. He pivoted the arrowhead toward the Black Flame Dragon.

[This arrow is anything but 'mere'.]

I studied the relic in his grasp. Each of the 'Ten Fingers of God' possessed a distinct, specialized power. And the one he held now—

「The second finger of Di Ku.」

I felt as if an entire epoch of history were being compressed into a single point. A cold sweat traced a path down my spine. Just looking at that arrow made me feel as if I were standing face-to-face with 'the one who gave birth to the King of Kings'.

「Di Ku was watching.」

The monarch who had crushed countless stars across endless battlefields, the sovereign who had woven an impenetrable narrative through eternal war—he was pointing his index finger directly at us.

「The index finger of the God who issues the command.」

The heavens began to press down. Every star belonging to <Emperor> across the universe focused its gaze on this spot. The flickering, howling, and screaming of the stars echoed the arrow's intent.

「His finger, pointing toward the end of the world, transcends all probability to gather the eyes of the cosmos.」

A single thread of narrative, spun from the collective starlight of every constellation in the sector, was threaded into Hou Yi's bow. The moment he released it, I was struck by the hallucination of a falling star crashing toward me.

【You are truly serious, then.】

Asmodeus gritted his teeth. The sentences radiating from his form began to forcibly reconstruct the Black Flame Dragon's story.

「In the forgotten abyss of the ancient dragon, an ominous egg hatched.」

「That dragon shall grow into a merciless disaster, devouring both light and shadow, until its infinite greed consumes every spark of starlight in existence.」

Seeing those emblems, I recalled the <Black Cloud Foundation> from the New Murim District—a corporation designed to farm D-Coins and train ascendants.

「But the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon I knew would never run such a tedious organization.」

The Black Flame Dragon reigned as the head of <Black Cloud>, but he never 'ruled'. He was like Yoo Joonghyuk—a sovereign who existed as a symbol rather than an administrator. The fact that he had established a foundation in the lower scenarios was a glaring anomaly.

「What if this entire architecture was Asmodeus's design?」

A pillar of pitch-black flame erupted from the dragon's maw. It resembled [Black Flame], but it was far more solitary, far darker—a flame of absolute contradiction, closer to void than light.

「Breath of the Abyss.」

The flame, seemingly devouring all ambient light, collided with the Emperor's White Arrow.

[Every constellation in the vicinity is captivated!]

[Some constellations have been blinded by witnessing the clash of myths!]

A heart-pounding pressure enveloped the battlefield. Witnessing it felt as though the very essence of the universe was being wrung out. Through the deafening roar, I watched the lights of the blinded stars extinguish. I desperately expanded my status to shield my incarnation body.

[You have witnessed a Great Battle!]

[The seeds of a new story have begun to sprout!]

A surge of adrenaline raced through me. This was the raw elation of witnessing a high-level battlefield firsthand.

[The constellations of <Emperor> stand as a vanguard behind the Sun Hunter!]

But the clash wasn't over. Framed by a backdrop of brilliant constellations, Hou Yi stood in the sky, his face pale but determined.

[What a magnificent beast you've created.]

A vortex of black dust swirled. At the heart of the light and shadow, the dragon—now twice its original size—gleamed with crimson eyes.

Ohhhhhhh—!

Even with my Myth-grade status, that roar nearly shattered my focus. The dragon, bolstered by Asmodeus's records, possessed terrifying power. Despite a massive wound on one wing, it had neutralized the 'Finger of God' with minimal damage. Hou Yi muttered under his breath.

[Are you drawing upon the Nebula's probability in addition to your own?]

I saw it too—the Grand Narrative of the nebula embedded in the dragon's scales.

[The probability of the Nebula, 'Black Cloud', resides within the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon!]

In this version of the story, the souls of every evil dragon who had perished in history now resided within him. This narrative had been fueled by the massive amount of D-Coins harvested from the lower scenarios.

[A colossal amount of 'D-Coins' has been expended!]

[The Abyssal Black Flame Dragon's activity has been temporarily restricted!]

【My turn now.】

Asmodeus smiled with triumph. Hou Yi's complexion turned ashen.

「The Ten Fingers of God require a recovery period after the first strike.」

Until the reload was complete, Hou Yi had to face a Mythical entity with only his own strength.

【Stars of the Emperor, did you think you could rewrite my record with a few fingers?】

Perhaps if he had fired multiple arrows at once, the outcome would be different. But with the first shot blocked, Asmodeus had seized the momentum. Or so he thought.

"Actually, I think he already changed it."

Asmodeus blinked, looking around in confusion. A sentence manifested in the air.

「The Black Flame Dragon's tail, pierced by the arrow’s light, began to bleed.」

Only then did Asmodeus realize.

【No way.】

From the start, Hou Yi’s goal hadn't been to kill the dragon, but to rescue me. I had seized the moment of impact to slip through the dragon’s grip. From across the battlefield, Hou Yi sent me a [Direct Transmission].

—Run, Demon King of Salvation.

It was an unexpected gesture from a constellation of <Emperor>.

—The Emperor desires you. You must not die here.

Whether it was loyalty to his nebula or his own inherent code, I couldn't say. But I had a debt to repay.

—If I leave, you and your followers will be slaughtered.

—It does not matter.

Hou Yi looked ready to embrace death. Retreating with Jung Heewon and Anna Croft when the 'Exposed Bush' expired was the logical move. But I couldn't do it.

「I can never ignore a character with an expression like that.」

I sent a message back.

—That’s a pathetic thing to say. Kyrgios or the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint would be ashamed to hear it.

Hou Yi’s eyes snapped to mine.

—How do you know those names? Where are they? Who are you?

—Are you curious?

I gave him a meaningful smile.

「Hou Yi accepted the Emperor's contract solely to find news of his lost comrades.」

I didn't know the location of every Transcendent, but I knew enough about the Sword Saint to make a deal.

—Let’s fight. We’ll forge a legend here by toppling a Myth-grade entity. Do that, and I’ll tell you everything I know about the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.

Hou Yi stared at me, stunned.

—Are you insane? That is a monster empowered by a Great Recorder.

—The record.

I smiled and added:

—I can rewrite that, too.

I turned toward the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon. His eyes, radiating a lethal abyssal aura, were locked onto me. He was undeniably a Myth-grade being, but there was a hollow resonance to his story—as if the source was corrupted. Asmodeus spread his arms, a predatory grin on his face.

【I knew you wouldn't run. Your greed is your greatest flaw. Do you truly intend to challenge me?】

Normally, I wouldn't dream of engaging Asmodeus directly. I glanced at Jung Heewon, still shielded by the 'Exposed Bush', and spoke.

[Yes. Let's finish this, Asmodeus.]

The power of [□□] surged. The world began to lose its color. Despite the lingering backlash, the Recorder's authority allowed me to override the local probability.

「The forgotten constellation once again reveals its light in the night sky of the <Star Stream>.」

The legends I had built began to manifest upon my body.

「King of a Kingless World.」

「He Who Opposes the Treacherous.」

「He Who Hunted the King of Calamity.」

「He Who Slayed the Deity of Another World.」

「The Demon King of Salvation.」

Using the knowledge gained from Han Sooyoung, I replicated the status of my former self.

「The constellation of the 'Demon King of Salvation' is etched into the abyssal firmament.」

[Your 'Giant Story' responds to your will!]

The original form was Narrative-grade, but now, I was drawing out power that rivaled the pinnacle of that status. If I synchronized my other abilities—

[The constellation, 'Demon King of Salvation', descends upon the battlefield!]

The battlefield fell silent. A voice whispered from the shadows of a nearby constellation.

[Is he... is he also a Myth-grade?]

In terms of pure weight, I was no longer inferior to the entities before me. However, Asmodeus's expression shifted into something unsettling.

It wasn't just shock; it was something closer to pity.

【Have you been recording 'yourself' this entire time?】

"What if I have?"

【Do you not know why Recorders never record themselves?】

I paused. I didn't need [Lie Detection] to feel the weight of his words.

【Recorders must never [Record] their own existence. No one who values their soul would dare. If you continue to use that power, you will eventually lose the very thing you are trying to save. You have broken the ultimate taboo...】

For the first time, Asmodeus was speaking a fundamental truth.

【In the end, you will be erased from the 'Final Records'.】

977 Episode 58 Myth-grade Constellation (9)

---

After a brief silence, I asked.

[What exactly does that mean?]

It wasn't simply because I was puzzled by his question. Right now, I needed to buy time.

【It means exactly what it sounds like. A recorder who records himself cannot be included in the 'Final Record'.】

That couldn't be true. I had seen recorders document themselves before. The 'Unchanging One' was the prime example.

【I know what you're thinking. But think carefully. What is the true purpose of 'records' and 'recorders'?】

[What are you trying to say?]

【You are different from other recorders. You are the one who seeks to record this world while simultaneously executing its scenarios.】

[So?]

【Characters have their roles, writers have their roles, and readers have their roles.】

I held my breath. I never expected to hear such fundamental logic from Asmodeus.

【If one being occupies all those spaces, how can the story flow properly?】

I thought I understood his point. Ultimately, a story must flow into empty space. If one being occupies every role, the story has nowhere to go.

【Reflect on your path. If you want to survive this entire story, so be it.】

I stared at the empty space of the skill—[□□]—that flickered before my eyes. The void was beautiful, alluring, and terrifyingly distant. It was a blank space that seemed to suck one in if stared at for too long. On that blank canvas, I had written countless sentences. Sometimes I wrote words of encouragement; sometimes, I wrote of someone's death.

「I knew that every time I used this power to record myself, the price was fundamentally wrong.」

The blank space rippled as if it would swallow me at any moment.

「What does it truly mean to record myself?」

Is it even possible to record oneself in a novel? Is the recorded 'me' even 'me'? No, in the first place—

「Who exactly is 'I'?」

As if trying to settle those questions, I finally spoke.

[It doesn't matter.]

【What?】

[If you were going to stop because of a few words, you wouldn't have become a recorder in the first place.]

Asmodeus chuckled, as if he had expected that much.

【Well, I suppose that's why even the Black Flame Dragon was so captivated by you.】

[What do you mean?]

Instead of answering immediately, Asmodeus lowered his head to look at the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon. Within the achromatic field of vision, the dragon was breathing in slow, heavy rasps.

【Aren't you curious? Why did the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' end up like this?】

[At this point, it seems you were the one who succeeded only with your tongue.]

Asmodeus seemed determined to prolong the standoff. I could guess his intentions.

「An ancient story has begun to boil within the Black Flame Dragon.」

Asmodeus was using a 'crest' to prepare for a second attack. Having sensed that I, too, could wield 'myth-grade' status, he was likely preparing a strike to wipe me and the constellations out in one sweep. But I, too, needed time.

「It is difficult to defeat the Black Flame Dragon with my current strength alone.」

I could sense the Sun Hunter's gaze from afar.

「The Sun Hunter's new arrows will soon be loaded.」

Even for the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon', it wouldn't be easy to resist the 'Ten Fingers of God' a second time. If my prediction was correct, the arrow he was preparing would be something special.

「Whichever of us finishes 'preparing' first will hold the hilt.」

I spoke, masking the truth.

[Stop talking nonsense and leave the Black Flame Dragon alone. I don't know what tricks you're using to manipulate him, but—]

【Manipulation? Do you believe I used some nefarious scheme to make him this way?】

[Otherwise, he wouldn't have changed like that.]

A gloomy, destructive aura flowed from the dragon's entire body. The story at its core conveyed the dragon's emotions in real time. I carefully identified that feeling.

「A profound sense of loss.」

I didn't know what the Black Flame Dragon had lost. However, Asmodeus held something over him, and as a result, the dragon had fallen into madness.

[Did you steal from him?]

Even as I asked, I didn't expect a straight answer. Both of us were just stalling for time.

【Why do you think I stole from him?】

Unexpectedly, Asmodeus's expression turned serious.

【If I leave him here like you did, he'll completely collapse. The only reason he can carry out the scenario now is because of my 'record'.】

[…]

【Poor Black Flame Dragon. Looking at his expression right now, I can't even imagine how sad he must be.】

I knew this was Asmodeus's trap. I shouldn't ask any more questions. But the moment he spoke, the question escaped me.

【Don't you really know? He became like this because of you.】

[What nonsense is that? I've never had proper contact with the 'Black Flame Dragon' in this worldline.]

The smile on Asmodeus's face deepened.

【As you know, many strange things have happened in this worldline.】

The moment he spoke, an ominous feeling washed over me.

【Those who shouldn't have intervened have interfered with the scenario, and in return, this worldline has been completely distorted.】

Even though I thought it was impossible to draw, a plot twist was already forming in my head.

「How did the Black Flame Dragon obtain 'myth-grade' power?」

Even as the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon', he couldn't have attained mythical status without the 'Great War of Good and Evil' and the protection of the Apocalypse Dragon. However, I knew of one possible plot.

【If you're curious, read it yourself.】

[The story, 'Heir of the Eternal Name', warns you!]

My story was screaming at me. It told me I shouldn't read that—that if I did, I'd never be able to return to who I was. Nevertheless, I reached out to the dragon. As if responding to my gesture, sentences filled with pitch-black blanks began to flow toward me.

—Kim Dokja.

I closed my eyes, and the dragon's voice reached me. But it wasn't calling for me.

—Where are you?

I knew who the Black Flame Dragon was calling.

「In the universe I know, the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' had already reached the power of a mythical constellation.」

The great disaster of the 1,864th round. An ancient story was challenging me.

—Aren't you going to tell me more?

In the deep darkness, his story began to project. The Black Flame Dragon I knew well. The star that contracted with Han Sooyoung and continued the scenario with <Kim Dokja Company>.

—Tell me more.

The dragon in the story roared. Having gained the power of the 'Final Dragon of the Apocalypse', he was fighting the 'Nameless Mist'.

—Tell me your story isn't over yet.

The Black Flame Dragon was there. With Uriel and the Great Sage, he danced passionately on the stage created by humans. I watched him from the audience. Then, an audience member standing next to me spoke.

—Why do I look so happy over there?

Another Black Flame Dragon stood there. I tried to answer with a blank expression, but then my eyes met the dragon on stage.

—There you were.

A chill ran down my spine as the stage lights went out. In the darkness, Asmodeus asked:

【Do you now understand what you have done?】

All beings move in pursuit of their favorite stories. Just as Uriel and <Kim Dokja Company> did. And perhaps the 1,864th round's 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' came to this worldline just like them.

「Because Kim Dokja began writing a new story.」

He possessed himself in this worldline and observed my story.

【Now, look. The monster of this worldline you created.】

I gazed at the dragon before me. He was the 41st round's 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon', but also the 1,864th round's. But the laws of this world do not permit such an 'overlapping of beings'.

「The broken film theory.」

Not all constellations were as fortunate as Uriel. Worldlines overlapped, souls mingled, and for some, their very existences became entangled.

「What becomes of a star that has seen the end of the 'story' it longed to reach? Will they be happy, or will they be saddened that the entire journey was taken away?」

Thus, the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon became a Mad Dragon.

【Kim Dokja, do you think the romance you envision is still a memory everyone longs for?】

From beyond the records, the 'Demon King of the Cinema' spoke.

【Do you naively believe that by recalling those memories, you and <Kim Dokja Company> will reach the grand house of your dreams?】

Asmodeus continued to mock me.

【Those trapped in memories will perish while holding onto them. You will witness their destruction and face the destined end of this world.】

As if issuing a banishing order, the breath of the Abyss began to form in the dragon's maw. To my surprise, his breath had already recharged.

【So, please remain calm and be defeated.】

Embrace the things you cannot change and writhe in sorrow. As if possessed, I approached the Black Flame Dragon. The smile on Asmodeus's face deepened. I placed my hand on the dragon's massive body.

[The stories of the constellation, 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon', are responding to you!]

The stories that had driven him to madness began to entangle themselves in my fingertips.

[I already know that this world is not normal.]

Asmodeus's eyes wavered at my calm voice. Sensing the dragon's stories, I continued.

[I also know that some people can never be saved, and some stories cannot be changed.]

The dragon looked down at me. I began to pull out the thorns embedded in its body, one by one. With each thorn removed, the dragon flinched and roared.

【What are you doing, Kim Dokja?】

Asmodeus growled.

【This is nonsense. Even if it’s you, do you think you can handle the madness of a myth-grade constellation?】

The thorns began to flow into my body. The dragon's memories ran wild, crushing my blood vessels and tearing through my muscles. I took them in with my whole body. Thorns poured out from my mouth, and my legs shook. Yet, I endured.

[The exclusive trait, 'Understander of the Abyss', aids your understanding.]

With each thorn removed, the dragon's gaze changed. His eyes, once plagued by madness, returned to a calming crimson. The breath he had been preparing dissipated.

「The Abyssal Black Flame Dragon grew by devouring the hearts of the twelve Demon Kings…」

「The madness of overlapping worldlines corrupted the dragon's mind…」

「The roar of a mythical dragon, unstoppable by anything…」

Asmodeus's hastily added words descended upon the dragon. The moment the Black Flame Dragon moved to shake me off, I whispered.

[I'm sorry.]

I held onto his massive frame and unleashed [Incite].

[I'm sorry for making you read the story alone.]

The 'Kim Dokja' speaking these words was not the one the dragon hoped for. And the dragon listening was not the one I remembered.

[I'm sorry I couldn't tell you the story you loved.]

I don't know who I am, but I must continue this story.

[Abyssal Black Flame Dragon, this story is not a burden you should bear. So from now on—]

Because this is the only way to understand who we are.

[I will record you.]

With a roar that made the world creak, the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' stopped moving.

【Kim Dokja!】

I saw Asmodeus rushing towards me, his expression terrified. He was forced to materialize and use physical force, but it was too late.

「The Sun Hunter's strike is finally ready.」

Because my sentence was finally complete.

「The Fourth Finger of the Emperor—'The Ring Finger That Breaks All Bonds'.」

As if he had been waiting, the Sun Hunter released his bow.

【Damn it! Stop—!】

This arrow's power was the power to interfere with the absolute 'promises' of the <Star Stream>.

[Get out of here, Asmodeus.]

In other words, this arrow could temporarily sever all bonds existing within the <Star Stream>.

「Even a sacred 'record contract'.」

The arrow, flying like a flash, pierced Asmodeus' heart.

---

Asmodeus's eyes were etched with pure disbelief. The white arrow of the divine being, still buried in his chest, pulsed with a blinding radiance as it unleashed its intended authority.

[The effect of the sacred relic, 'Ten Fingers of God', is activated!]

The strike was an undeniable success. Yet, seeing Asmodeus's bewildered expression and hearing the tremor in his voice, a cold sense of foreboding washed over me.

【How could this... happen...】

It was Asmodeus. Could that twisted Demon King, the architect of the Cinema and a veteran of the records, truly have been caught so completely off guard?

【...Did you truly expect me to say that?】

I knew it. Asmodeus glanced toward Hou Yi, who was watching from the horizon, before shifting his gaze back to me.

【I commend the effort. Using the Emperor's arrow to sever my tether... it was a quintessentially Kim Dokja-like strategy.】

[I'll take the compliment, but it isn't what I'm looking for right now.]

Asmodeus’s entire presence began to vibrate with a sinister frequency. Despite the arrow piercing his origin, he showed no sign of agony. Instead, he gripped the shaft with a steady hand, his eyes locking onto mine with an intense, predatory focus.

【However, this is not enough to stop the record.】

[The constellations of the nebula, <Emperor>, are astonished by the resilience of the Great Recorder!]

I was reminded once more why he was the 'Recorder of Fear'. Even other recorders trembled at his name.

【Borrowing the power of others will never bring you the conclusion you crave.】

His words weren't even imbued with [Incite], yet each one felt like an arrow of its own, piercing through my mental defenses.

【If you truly wish to be Kim Dokja, you must not hesitate. You must learn to interpret, destroy, and deny the world with a violence greater than anything you have read.】

For a moment, his face looked strangely mournful. Beneath the mocking facade, I sensed a simmering, ancient rage. Just as my own emotions were inextricably tied to Kim Dokja’s, Asmodeus held a chaotic mass of feelings within him that had never been fully recorded—a melting pot of unwritten grief.

The sentences overflowing from his status began to suppress the light of Di Ku.

「The one who had stepped beyond the boundaries of history to conquer death itself stood before me.」

Even I had to admire his sheer tenacity. If even the Emperor's arrows couldn't subdue him, what options were left? Would I truly have to face the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon in a fight to the death? Could I even pull off the 'Great King of Fear' form in my current state?

【Even if it were me. In the end, you—】

Asmodeus’s voice faltered. A faint sound echoed through the achromatic field.

「...」

It was thin, like the buzzing of an insect or the distant chirp of a bird. No. As I listened closer, the sound took on a heart-wrenching clarity.

「...」

It was the cry of a child. Asmodeus's brow furrowed as he glared into the empty air.

【Are you truly trying to interrupt me now?】

「...」

【Even you... at a time like this...】

「...」

Who was he talking to? His expression shifted rapidly—from anger to frustration, and finally, to a weary resignation.

A strange premonition gripped me. Was he actually talking to that being?

【Yes, I understand. Enough. Silence.】

【I couldn't help it. Even a recorder has a heart. Especially the incarnation body of that dragon, whom I once...】

The murmur echoed one last time, and Asmodeus let out a heavy, defeated sigh.

【Fine. I will leave the Black Dragon behind. I have no choice.】

Asmodeus's incarnation body began to blur, losing its definition. He was voluntarily withdrawing from the stage.

[The Recorder of Fear, 'Demon King of the Cinema', has suffered a critical blow and is exiting the scenario!]

[The Recorder of Fear, 'Demon King of the Cinema', has redacted his own records, mitigating some of the penalty!]

[The effect of the 'Ten Fingers of God' temporarily severs the contract between the Recorder and the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon!]

I reached out as he faded.

[Asmodeus!]

His inscription manifested before my eyes one last time.

「Asmodeus offered a leisurely smile, as if delivering the perfect exit line for a villain.」

【Kim Dokja, do not let this myth-grade status go to your head. Your true enemy is already orchestrating the end of this world, far beyond your reach.】

[...]

【Fight to the bitter end with that masterful tongue of yours. I truly wonder... what sentence will eventually mark your death?】

He vanished completely, leaving only a faint afterimage that slipped through my fingers.

【I leave the Black Flame Dragon in your care—for the time being.】

The moment he disappeared, a deluge of messages erupted in my mind.

[Your monumental achievements resonate across the <Star Stream>!]

[You have acquired a new 'Mythical Story'!]

[The Administration Bureau is deeply moved by your rapid growth!]

[Several Great Dokkaebis have requested a 'Private Meeting' with you!]

[Various nebulae invite you to participate in the 'Context of the Constellation'!]

[The Recorders of Fear are searching the 'Records Archive' for your history!]

[You have been granted a temporary 'Recording Contract'!]

[You are now the acting Recorder for the constellation, 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon'!]

「Yes. You are finally coming.」

I must have lost consciousness for a few minutes. When the world finally stopped spinning, I felt someone roughly shaking my shoulder.

"Kim Dokja!"

Anna Croft's face was ashen. She was gripping my shoulder with enough force to crack the bone.

"It... it hurts, Anna."

"Are you awake?"

"Yes. I'm fine. Mostly."

I gently pried her hand away. My shoulder felt like it had been through a hydraulic press. Anna supported my weight as I tried to steady my breathing.

"Are you certain you're alright?"

"Yeah. What about Asmodeus?"

"Asmodeus?"

I realized she didn't know his true name. In this worldline, he was only known by the title 'Demon King of the Cinema'. I didn't have the energy to explain the complex history of the 1,864th round.

"What about the Black Flame Dragon?"

Anna pointed toward the ground. There, curled into a defensive posture, lay the pitch-black form of the dragon.

[The Abyssal Black Flame Dragon's complete descent has been terminated.]

With Asmodeus's probability withdrawn, the dragon had lost its anchor. It was dispersing slowly, its presence no longer justified by the scenario's rules.

[The constellation, 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon', is looking at you.]

I felt a strange, hollow longing in that message. I couldn't tell which version of him was looking at me—the one from the 41st round or the one I remembered—but the goodwill was unmistakable.

"Dokja-ssi!"

Jung Heewon had emerged from the 'Exposed Bush' and was rushing toward us. She checked my face with frantic eyes.

"Are you okay? Where are you hurt?"

"I'm fine, Heewon-ssi. Are you safe?"

"I'm alright. But... how did you do it? That dragon looked like it was going to destroy the world, but the moment you stood in its way, it just... stopped."

[Several constellations wish to hear the details of your feat!]

I couldn't exactly explain that I'd just had a high-stakes debate with a primal demon king.

"I just held his attention for a while. A staring contest, you could say."

[Some constellations are moved by your indomitable spirit!]

[You have acquired a new story!]

[You have acquired the mythical story, 'Adversary of the Dragon'!]

[You have acquired the legendary story, 'Master of the Staring Contest'!]

'Adversary of the Dragon' was a rare prize, usually reserved for those who survived the Apocalypse scenarios. The staring contest one was... well, a bonus.

But the peace didn't last.

"Kim Dokja!"

Anna Croft's voice was sharp with warning. I turned to see the surrounding constellations closing in. These were the hunters of the various nebulae who had been lurking, waiting for the myths to exhaust each other.

「To stop the dragon, I had effectively summoned every predator in the region to my location.」

The real battle was only just beginning. Every star here wanted a piece of a Myth-grade target. The first to step forward were the Narrative-grade stalkers from <Papyrus>.

[The constellation, 'Black Wolf Reaper', unleashes its status!]

The air grew thick with aggression, but the constellations held back, eyeing each other warily. No one wanted to be the first to draw the 'Demon King of Salvation's' ire.

[Demon King of Salvation.]

It was Anubis, the Black Wolf Reaper, who spoke first.

[I have come to collect you. Join <Papyrus>.]

The arrogance was staggering. Even Olympus had learned to tread carefully around me.

"And if I decline?"

I still held the status of my 'Demon King' form. I wasn't about to bow to a wolf just because he was baring his teeth. Anubis didn't seem surprised.

[You are free to refuse, of course.]

His eyes shifted away from me, settling on Jung Heewon and Anna Croft. Both women tensed instantly. Anubis hadn't given up; he had simply changed his leverage.

[However, <Papyrus> will remember this decision. We have a very long memory.]

I felt a cold smile touch my lips. It wasn't exactly a subtle threat. I gripped my scepter, weighing my options. I was outnumbered, and my stories were fraying.

「Can I protect them both if I unleash the 'Great King of Fear' now?」

I was prepared to pay the price, but then—

[Step back, Anubis.]

A giant wreathed in light stepped between us.

[An announcement is issued to all constellations present!]

Mitra, despite his tattered wings and broken status, stood as a shield before me.

[If you lay a hand on the Demon King of Salvation, you will answer to me.]

He was still a Myth-grade constellation. There wasn't a Narrative-grade being on the field willing to gamble their life against him. Anubis snarled, his teeth clicking together.

[We withdraw.]

As the <Papyrus> forces retreated into the shadows, the other constellations followed suit. They had realized that, for today, I was untouchable. Mitra turned back to me once the field was clear.

[Demon King of Salvation.]

I faced him, my guard still up. He was a constellation of <Vedas>, after all. They were just as greedy as the rest. But instead of an attack, the massive entity slowly lowered himself onto one knee.

[I offer my sincere respects to you.]

The staff of the Golden Dice Hall followed his lead, prostrating themselves in the dirt.

[The constellation, 'Lord of December 25th', pays its respects!]

[The constellations of the Golden Dice Hall offer their tribute!]

It was a surreal sight. The records of the 'Unchanging One' flickered in my mind. This was the moment—the formal recognition of the 'Demon King of Salvation' as a true Myth-grade existence by the Master of Valhalla.

My heart hammered in my chest. I felt a tectonic shift in the rules of my reality.

「This universe is nothing more than a game of dice played by the gods.」

The world felt suddenly distant, a dizzying sensation pulling at my soul, much like when I had first ascended.

「And in that great game, he has finally earned his own dice.」

[You have earned the right to participate in the 'Round Table of Myths'!]

979 Episode 58 Myth-grade Constellation (11)

---

The Mythical Circle.

When I first reached the status of 'Mythical', I briefly glimpsed its impossible landscape. But back then, I didn't truly feel like a part of that world. I was a mere visitor—an observer who could witness its scenery but lacked the authority to interfere with its events.

[This is likely the greatest gift I can offer you now.]

A die of iridescent hues ascended from Mitra's right hand, radiating a brilliance that pierced through the gloom.

[The constellation, 'Lord of December 25th', has transferred his 'Dice of Destiny' to you!]

The die traced a line of light through the air and settled firmly into my palm. The sensation was unsettlingly familiar, as if it had belonged to me from the very beginning. I knew exactly what it represented.

「Mitra has transferred his seat at the 'Round Table of Myths' to me.」

This 'die' was my invitation—my ticket into the Round Table of Mythology.

[When a star reaches the level of myth, they possess a crystal of their own story, condensed to its absolute limit.]

I belatedly realized the true identity of the die spinning in my hand. It was a fragment of a legend, forged at the very moment Mitra first ascended to the status of a Myth.

[You did not attain Mythology through the path of a 'constellation', so you never received your own. Therefore, take mine.]

A low rumble of thunder rolled through the artificial sky as Mitra made his declaration.

[Some constellations are moved by the decision of the 'Lord of December 25th'!]

[The constellations of the nebula, <Vedas>, strongly contest the judgment of the 'Lord of December 25th'!]

Mitra looked up at the firmament. Immediately, the heavens fell into a terrified silence.

[The constellation, 'Lord of December 25th', reveals his true nature!]

[The constellations of <Vedas> obey the will of the 'Lord of December 25th'.]

He was a being capable of enforcing his own will, even in defiance of a Great Nebula.

What I had now received was the concentrated essence of such a mythical entity, carved from the core of his own story.

[The sacred relic, 'Dice of Destiny', has been acquired.]

Mitra, having surrendered the die, wore a complex expression of deep regret and profound relief. I realized that now was the time to seek an honest answer from him.

"Mitra, what exactly is the 'Round Table'? And what purpose do these dice serve?"

Even in 'Ways of Survival', the 'Round Table' was never specifically described. It was only mentioned as a secret banquet hall where the 'mythical constellations' gathered. Since even the original Kim Dokja had never been invited, I was woefully lacking in information.

[The Round Table is the place where the fate of the world is decided. And only those who hold the dice have the right to interfere with that fate.]

Mitra gazed silently at the sky, as if reading the constellations written across the void, and added:

[Only the chosen mythical constellations may enter the Round Table banquet. There, they manipulate the ultimate probability of the <Star Stream>.]

"Is it really alright for you to give me something so significant?"

[It doesn't matter. I have no desire to return to that table. Even if I did, there would be little left for me to do. But for you... it may be different.]

Mitra smiled weakly and began to help his fallen subordinates to their feet. One by one, the constellations of the Golden Dice Hall regained their strength, bolstered by Mitra's grace.

[If you truly seek the ■■ of all these stories, you will eventually have to pass through that hall.]

He spoke with a weariness so heavy that the entire scene felt like a retirement ceremony.

"Are you no longer curious about your own ■■?"

[Is there any constellation that does not wonder about the end?]

"Then why give me the dice?"

Every star exists only to reach the final conclusion of all stories. Born for that purpose, they cannot help but exist for it.

Yet Mitra had just laid down the only tool that would allow him to participate in that final gamble.

[When I first chose to remain in 'Valhalla Hall', many thoughts crossed my mind.]

The harsh radiance emanating from his form had dimmed. He was no longer using coercion; he was simply speaking the truth.

[A desire to avenge my defeat. A desire to punish the 'Round Table' for discarding me. I wanted to shake the Star Stream once more by becoming the center of a new legend.]

"And now?"

Through the die, I could vaguely sense the weight of Mitra's history.

Mitra, who had lost his duel with 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' and was relegated to the master of 'Valhalla Hall'. I saw the history of a god who managed the lesser stars and witnessed countless desperate competitions.

After a brief pause, Mitra continued.

[Once you ascend to the level of myth, you stop looking back at trivial stories. Unless it is a Giant Story, you rarely pay attention. You spend all day consumed by a stagnant laziness, reliving your own glory over and over again.]

To complete a world is to close the door to it and become a prisoner. To complete a myth is to imprison oneself within that legend.

In that sense, all the 'myth-grade constellations' at the pinnacle of this world were captives of their own stories.

[While staying in this hall, I was finally forced to look back at the stories of others.]

Amidst that stagnation, an unexpected opportunity had presented itself to him.

[I was imprisoned in Valhalla, but in a sense, I was also liberated from my own narrative. Because I was forced to witness the stories of those beneath me.]

There, Mitra had watched countless incarnations and stars perish in the arena.

[I remember one match in particular. It was a game where a Transcendent appeared.]

"Which Transcendent was it?"

[A famous one. However, it wasn't the Transcendent who caught my eye. It was another incarnation on that team.]

It was a team led by a Transcendent, yet his attention had been drawn not to the powerhouse, but to a different incarnation.

"He must have been exceptionally strong then."

[No, he wasn't as strong as the Transcendent. He wasn't weak, per se, but he lacked the exceptional talent that would normally attract the gaze of a god.]

It was a peculiar admission. An incarnation, neither as strong as a Transcendent nor possessing special genius, had captivated a Myth. Why?

[It was a consistently hopeless match. The enemy team was far too powerful, and the Transcendent's team was decimated in minutes. The Transcendent was surprisingly resilient and put up a desperate fight, but that was all. It was a battle whose outcome was already written.]

The picture was forming in my mind. If a Transcendent of that caliber had lost, their opponent must have been a 'Giant Nebula'.

And even that Transcendent had died in the end.

Even though it was just a retelling of a past match, I felt a pang of regret, wondering if the Transcendent was someone I had once known.

[Still, that incarnation refused to give up.]

"He didn't?"

[He ran desperately, knowing there was no chance of victory.]

"I assume he was searching for the prophecy."

With a prophecy in hand, there is always a chance to turn the tables, no matter how unfavorable the odds. But Mitra shook his head.

[That was beyond his reach. He just kept running, losing an arm, then a leg. One of his eyes was gouged out, and every nerve in his body was charred by lightning.]

Just the description was enough to convey the horrific reality that incarnation had faced. His determination to survive seemed as iron-clad as Yoo Joonghyuk’s.

"Was his tenacity what impressed you?"

[No. Anyone can run when their life is on the line. It is a primal instinct.]

That was true. Everyone values their own existence. Some are overwhelmed by despair and surrender, while others cling to a fraying hope.

But the incarnation in the story wasn't trying to protect his own life.

[He was shielding a child in his one remaining arm.]

I forgot to breathe for a moment, my focus entirely consumed by the narrative.

[As you know, it is not easy to reach Scenario #85 and still fight to protect someone else.]

No matter how noble your start, those who reach Scenario #85 usually have their psyche worn down to nothing. Their emotions are frayed, and they lose the ability to care for anything but themselves.

"I take it the child was his own?"

[No. There was no blood connection between them.]

It was a strange story—a truly bizarre tale, yet one that didn't sound entirely foreign to me.

Because in that moment...

"What happened to that incarnation?"

I already knew who that man was.

[He succeeded.]

My heart hammered against my ribs. "He succeeded." That was how Mitra had phrased it. It was a strange way to describe the outcome of a skirmish, which usually ended in 'victory' or 'defeat'. But Mitra said he 'succeeded'.

[He ran until he broke through the boundaries of the arena. He escaped the prison of the scenario that held him captive.]

A high-pitched ringing echoed in my ears. Finally, unable to contain it, I asked.

"By any chance... was that incarnation's name 'Lee Dansu'?"

Mitra paused, considering the name for a long moment.

[Is he familiar to you?]

I nodded with great difficulty. Suppressing the storm in my chest, I forced out the next question.

"Yes. What happened to him after his escape?"

[I do not know. He vanished beyond the reach of 'Valhalla Hall'.]

I tried my best to steady my breathing. Still, I couldn't mask the raw emotion welling up within me.

「Dansu ahjussi is alive.」

He had fought the constellations, fled, and eventually—with a child in his arms—found the 'Missing Bush' and escaped the skirmish.

[I still recall his response when the enemy constellations asked why he was so protective of that child.]

For a heartbeat, I could almost hear the vivid, gravelly voice of Dansu ahjussi.

「"To you who ask why I must protect this child—even if I told you my reason, you would never understand."」

I felt breathless. It was unmistakable. It was Dansu ahjussi. Even after eight years, he was still the same man I remembered.

[There is a sentence left by the recorder who watched over him until the very end.]

A line of text manifested in the air, pulsing with a faint light.

「Those who protect their hearts to the very end may know the truth of the world without ever seeing its ■■.」

I thought about Dansu ahjussi. A man who had been searching for his daughter, Jiyoon.

His daughter was trapped in Asmodeus's theater. So, if he was protecting a child now... who was it?

[And strangely enough, after reading that man's story, the original values within me changed.]

"Changed?"

[I know it sounds absurd. That a star who has reached the level of myth could suddenly change after reading the story of a single human.]

Mitra continued, speaking as if he knew I wouldn't believe him.

[For a constellation that has lived for eons to change the direction of its light simply by reading a story... even I find it difficult to fathom.]

He was right. This wasn't just true for constellations, but for humans as well. Very few beings have their lives altered by a single narrative.

「And yet, I know full well that such a story is not impossible.」

I already knew of several constellations that had read a story, loved it, and changed the course of their existence because of it.

And Mitra, too, was looking at the stars following him with a gaze similar to the ones I knew. They were the stars gathered in 'Valhalla Hall'.

[Actually, I hadn't made up my mind until then. But now, I have. The other myth-grade constellations may call me a loser or a coward. I don't care. I no longer seek the approval of the Round Table. I don't care if the universe laughs at my choices.]

The stars of the 'Hall of Golden Dice'—stars from countless different nebulae—had decided to abandon their affiliations to follow him.

Mitra looked at them and spoke softly.

[I still wonder about the ■■ of this world. But I have chosen not to be the one who confirms it.]

The dice in my hand vibrated with warmth.

Dansu ahjussi wasn't Kim Dokja. Yet, perhaps, he had accomplished something even more incredible. He had lived his life to the fullest and protected what was precious.

[I intend to escape this '■■' hell with those who follow me. Just as that man once did.]

Ahjussi had succeeded in changing the starlight of a Great Myth.

Mitra, with a faint, knowing smile, spoke as if he already knew my next move.

[Now, I will tell you where the 'Missing Bush' is located.]

980 Episode 59 What Kind of Ending (1)

---

「This is a story about the 'house'.」

---

Mitra immediately disclosed the coordinates of the 'Missing Bush'.

"How did you know I was looking for that specific thicket?"

Mitra offered only a cryptic, lingering smile. In truth, I didn't need a verbal answer to guess the reason. This 'battlefield' was essentially his personal sanctuary. If Mitra truly desired it, he could likely eavesdrop on every vibration of sound within the 'Valhalla Hall'. If his opponent hadn't been Asmodeus and the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon, a Myth-grade constellation like Mitra would never have been suppressed so easily.

「The map of the super-large battlefield provided by Mitra etched itself clearly into my mind.」

I offered another bow, grateful for his cooperation. Mitra watched me with a pensive look.

[That is all I can provide. I cannot guarantee that the one you seek remains there.]

"Didn't the incarnation you mentioned earlier escape through that very portal?"

[He did. But even if the exit remains the same, there is no promise that you will arrive at the same destination.]

That was true. An exit is merely a gateway. There was no way to determine which path a previous traveler had taken once they crossed the threshold.

[Above all else, the Missing Bush is a portal anchored by the Wennies. There is no guarantee the exit will be located in a safe zone.]

A portal of the Wennies. For a fleeting moment, I considered reaching out to the Wenny King for assistance, but I quickly discarded the thought. Engaging with a being of that magnitude at this stage would demand a price I wasn't prepared to pay.

"I forgot to ask earlier, but when you spoke of escaping the 'Hell of ■■', was that meant as a metaphor?"

Mitra hesitated, the question seemingly catching him off guard.

[You are aware that such a blunt inquiry is considered rude among our kind, aren't you?]

I was belatedly reminded of a specific trait common among Myth-grade entities.

「Constellations who have ascended to 'Myth' status possess a chronic tendency toward equivocation.」

While speaking in riddles is a standard idiom for constellations, the Myth-grade ones were the worst offenders.

「"Those bastards always speak in metaphors and allusions. That's how they keep themselves free from the binding force of their own [Declarations]."」

In a world constructed entirely of stories, the words of a Great Being carry immense narrative weight. Han Sooyoung had once explained that Myth-grade stars must be masters of rhetoric and ambiguity to avoid being trapped by their own promises.

「"It is their nature to misinterpret others as they see fit. That is why you must pin them down with clear, direct language."」

I ignored Mitra's discomfort and decided to stick to Han Sooyoung's strategy.

"I'm a 'T' type personality, so I'm a bit sensitive to vague phrasing."

[T? What is this 'T'?]

It was a throwaway comment; I'd never actually taken an MBTI test.

"It simply means we should avoid using language that is unnecessarily difficult to parse."

[...]

"What you said sounded like a formal declaration of your intent to abandon this scenario. Therefore, I assume you intend to use the Missing Bush. Am I interpreting you correctly?"

[I am... considering the possibility.]

Unlike the legendary Lee Dansu, who had declared his escape from the 'Hell of ■■' with a stirring mantra, Mitra's expression remained frustratingly ambiguous. I understood his caution and allowed a small smile.

"Good. Then I suppose I'll be accompanying you to that bush."

Mitra's eyes widened as he realized my intent, a flicker of genuine admiration crossing his face.

[I truly admire the weight of that tongue of yours.]

"I'll take that as a compliment."

If I was going to establish a cooperative bond with Mitra, it was better to keep him close until we actually reached the thicket. With a Myth-grade constellation as a traveling companion, Papyrus and the other lingering predators would think twice before approaching. Of course, my motives weren't entirely selfless.

「If the situation turns dire, I can let Mitra enter the 'Missing Bush' first.」

As he had pointed out, the safety of the portal was unverified. Sending a Myth-grade entity in as a scout would be an effective improvisation. He was the Master of the Resurrection Festival, after all; he wouldn't perish easily even if the other side of the portal was a trap. Mitra gave me a sharp, suspicious look, as if he could sense the gears turning in my head, but I maintained a mask of perfect innocence.

"By the way, how exactly am I supposed to use these dice?"

[You will know the moment the 'Round Table' convenes.]

"And when will that be?"

[That...]

The moment he tried to answer, a violent cluster of sparks wreathed his entire body.

[It appears the 'Round Table' does not wish for me to speak on the matter.]

I briefly wondered if he was faking the backlash to avoid the question, but it was a waste of energy to press a being who had no intention of answering.

"Then there's no issue with us traveling together, right?"

[None. However, there is a lingering matter I must address first.]

A matter to address? I followed Mitra's gaze and realized I had forgotten something—or someone. About twenty paces away, a lone constellation from a major nebula still loomed.

[Child of <Emperor>, do you still intend to challenge me?]

It was Hou Yi, the Sun Hunter. He remained standing, his massive red bow held steady, glaring in our direction with an unblinking gaze. Mitra frowned, clearly annoyed by his presence.

[If you continue this insolence...]

"Wait a moment."

I held Mitra back and approached the Sun Hunter. Even as I entered his immediate striking range, Hou Yi didn't react. I waved a hand experimentally in front of his face. His pupils didn't even twitch.

"He's out cold?"

It made sense. The White Arrows of the Emperor demanded a staggering amount of probability with every use. In particular, the 'Fourth Finger' he had fired was an arrow that placed an exponential burden on the user based on the 'rank' of the target. Since he had interfered with a 'Recording Contract' involving both a Mythical Constellation and a high-ranking Recorder, the backlash must have been catastrophic. The other <Emperor> constellations had either fled or been annihilated in the previous clash. Seeing the legendary Sun Hunter standing there unconscious in character pajamas was an absurd sight. Then, my eyes drifted to the White Arrow still clutched in his hand.

Wait a minute. Could I actually...?

"I truly wonder what goes on inside that head of yours."

Anna Croft sounded as though she had run out of the capacity for surprise.

"You haven't forgotten who he is, have you? He is the Chairman of Valhalla."

"I'm well aware."

Regardless of his current eloquence, Mitra was the one responsible for the hundreds of deaths Anna Croft had suffered in the previous rounds.

"Do you honestly believe you can trust a being like that?"

"Is there any constellation in this world truly worth trusting?"

I glanced back at Mitra, who was currently tending to his subordinates. He was pretending to be occupied, but I knew he was using his status to eavesdrop.

"He has his own agenda, and I have mine. It's a mutually beneficial arrangement. Don't overthink it."

Sensing my skepticism toward the god, Anna’s expression softened slightly.

"What are you doing now?"

"Oh, this?"

I was currently in the middle of rubbing the 'Ten Fingers of God'—which I'd pilfered from the catatonic Hou Yi—against the 'Thoughts of Almost Everything'.

[Item: 'Thoughts of Almost Everything' — Mimicry Proficiency is increasing!]

Normally, it was nearly impossible for 'Thought' to mimic a relic of this caliber. However, the item had evolved significantly. Now, even a Mythical-grade artifact was within its reach.

[Item: 'Thoughts of Almost Everything' — Mimicry is progressing rapidly!]

The specific condition for this 'Mimicry Form' was 'rubbing the item one thousand times'. It was a tedious but effective requirement.

[The sacred relic, 'Ten Fingers of God', emits a faint, pained hum!]

As expected of a relic belonging to the Five Emperors, the arrows vibrated in my hand with every pass. I ignored the tingling sensation and kept going. Finally...

['Mimicry Form' successfully acquired!]

A completion message flashed in my vision. At that exact moment, Hou Yi gasped, his consciousness returning with a jolt.

[Ugh!]

His eyes snapped to the relic in my hand, his expression turning sharp.

[What are you doing with that?]

"Just admiring the craftsmanship. It's a remarkable piece."

I was effectively stealing the data of his soul's weapon. I gave him a shameless smile and handed the 'Ten Fingers of God' back. Hou Yi took the arrow, inspecting it with a bewildered look.

[How were you even able to hold this? This relic is designed to reject anyone but a permitted wielder.]

Standard procedure for high-level artifacts. The 'Ten Fingers of God' possessed the 'Thousand-Year Interrogation', a passive curse that inflicted excruciating psychological agony on unauthorized users. For me, however, it was a non-factor.

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', is active!]

Hou Yi, unaware of my immunity, looked at me with newfound respect.

[Perhaps the Emperor holds you in higher regard than I thought. To think he would allow you to touch his 'fingers'...]

In reality, I had just committed a form of narrative larceny by rubbing my 'Thought' all over his arrows. Fortunately, the actual Emperor seemed too preoccupied with the higher scenarios to notice someone playing with his gear.

"Anyway, what happened to the rest of your group?"

[My group?]

"The ones who arrived with you."

Hou Yi scanned the ruined horizon.

[Most have fled. Others were likely repatriated to the higher scenarios. A general recall order was issued during the fighting.]

A return order?

[There is a crisis unfolding in the upper tiers. An emergency summons was broadcast to all high-ranking units.]

I didn't know the specifics, but it was clear that something monumental was happening on the main battlefield.

"Regardless, thank you for the intervention. I wouldn't have survived Asmodeus without you."

I was being sincere. Fighting Asmodeus and a berserk dragon simultaneously would have been a death sentence. Hou Yi accepted the thanks with practiced indifference.

[I had my own motives. It was merely a coincidence that our interests aligned.]

"Do you still intend to deliver me to <Emperor>?"

[I have no such intention.]

"Wasn't that your primary mission?"

Hou Yi blinked, then slowly shook his head.

[If a contract is not paid, there is no obligation to fulfill it. My term was the location of my Transcendent comrades. You have yet to provide that information.]

I had fully intended to keep my word, but his bluntness was refreshing.

"Right. I'll tell you what I know."

Since we had a few minutes before moving toward the Missing Bush, I briefed him on the Transcendents I had encountered. I started with the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, Namgung Minyeong—covering the events in the Realm of Fear, the New Murim District, and the 'World Tree Project' the constellations had attempted to force on her.

[I see. So she was there...]

Hou Yi listened with rapt attention, his expression fluctuating between sorrow and fury. His emotional transparency was surprising; Jung Heewon, who had been listening nearby, finally spoke up.

"Are you truly a friend of the Master?"

[I'd like to believe so. Though she might have a different opinion.]

His tone was uncharacteristically humble. Jung Heewon, meeting someone who actually remembered the Sword Saint with such clarity for the first time, took over the storytelling. She filled in the details I had missed. Hou Yi nodded solemnly, his empathy for the Transcendents palpable.

[So, her story now resides with you?]

"It does."

[That explains the resonance I felt when I first saw you...]

Hou Yi gazed at me with a look of profound longing before composing himself.

[And what of Kyrgios and Cheok Jungyeong?]

"I don't have all the details. But I know Master Kyrgios has already ascended to the 'Main Battlefield'."

[As I expected.]

He seemed to have anticipated as much.

"Do you plan to find him?"

[The end of the world is approaching. I should like to share one final glass with my friends before the starlight fades.]

It was startling to find a constellation within a nebula like <Emperor> who was driven by such romantic notions as friendship. I asked him sincerely:

"If you find them... could you let me know?"

Hou Yi nodded without hesitation.

[I will. It is destiny that I met my friend's successor. Kyrgios and Jungyeong would be proud of what you've become.]

"I doubt that."

With that, my discussions with both Mitra and Hou Yi concluded. All that remained was the journey to the Missing Bush. I was about to ask if the Sun Hunter would join us when he spoke in a low, sharp voice.

[What do you intend to do about that?]

That? I followed his line of sight.

[If you wish, I can sever its tether here and now.]

I quickly moved to stop him as he reached for his bow.

"No, that won't be necessary."

In the direction he was aiming, the gargantuan form of the Black Flame Dragon had yet to fully dissipate. I wasn't sure why the descent was lingering, but provoking it further was a bad idea.

[Why? That beast intended to erase you.]

"It wasn't his will. Not truly."

[Not his will? You believe a star's actions can be separated from its intent?]

"In this world, stories determine existence. Sometimes, the story is a lie."

Hou Yi’s eyes sparkled with curiosity.

[You believe the stories are 'wrong'? Do you think the evil or the good narratives he carries do not represent the core of his being?]

I knew that stories didn't account for everything. Actions were the intersection of will and narrative. But I felt a strange need to defend him.

"I don't know the whole truth. But if it's a false record, I might be able to fix it."

As his temporary recorder, I had the authority to interfere with his history. I could use my status to peer into his past and understand why he had become this corrupted entity.

[The stories of the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' are responding to your presence!]

As I approached, the dragon's incarnation body began to dissolve into motes of shadow, as if it had been waiting for me to arrive. I thought it was the end of the encounter, but as the smoke cleared, my heart skipped a beat.

「My breath caught in my throat.」

In the space where the dragon's massive form had stood, lying amidst the fading pitch-black smoke, was a person I knew very well.

981 Episode 59 What Kind of Ending (2)

---

Jung Heewon was the first to speak.

"Huh?"

Jung Heewon leaped through the swirling black dragon smoke, shielding me, and then asked with a suspicious expression.

"Isn't… that him?"

I nodded. He clearly didn't look like the guy I knew. But there, where the black dragon's massive body had disappeared, was undoubtedly 'Kim Namwoon'.

「To be more precise, it was something close to 'Kim Namwoon'.」

No matter how I looked at him, he appeared to be a young boy, barely ten years old. Yet, the child's face still held the nuance of the 'Kim Namwoon' that Jung Heewon and I remembered.

I quickly pushed through the smoke and carefully picked up Kim Namwoon, who was sprawled on the ground.

「I've seen characters who have become 'kkomas' like this before.」

The shattered Kim Dokja, and even the Secretive Plotter who had overused his probability, had been reduced to kkomas. Was Kim Namwoon in a similar situation?

Jung Heewon asked in a worried voice.

"What could have happened to him?"

"He likely suffered the aftermath of summoning the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon'."

The 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' was now a constellation of mythical status. It should have been impossible for an incarnation to even borrow his power, let alone summon his full descent.

But Kim Namwoon had performed a miracle, pulling the black dragon's massive form into his own body. It occurred to me then that Kim Namwoon, the Delusion Demon, was a comrade of Yoo Joonghyuk who had rightfully earned his place in the 『Top 100 Strongest』.

"Ah."

Kim Namwoon slowly opened his eyes in my arms. Drenched in cold sweat, he looked up from within my embrace and pursed his lips several times.

Ah. Ah. Ah.

I felt a wave of dizziness. What came out was not his own voice. The man's words, vomited from deep within his lungs, pierced right through me.

「"I only follow the captain's orders. And you... you aren't the captain."」

Kim Namwoon's voice, engulfed in a fierce black flame, was followed by a detached reply that felt chillingly familiar.

「"Of course. You aren't needed on 'that stage' anyway."」

The moment I heard that voice, my heart sank.

'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

It was unmistakable. This was a memory of Kim Namwoon confronting my brother.

But I couldn't understand it. Why had Kim Namwoon stood against him? And why had my brother deemed Kim Namwoon 'unnecessary'?

「What on earth is this 'stage' that Snowfield Kim Dokja is speaking of?」

What I knew for certain was that 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' was responsible for Kim Namwoon's current state. It was one more reason I had to meet my brother.

"Dokja-ssi!"

The volume of stories flowing from Kim Namwoon was increasing steadily. As the narratives overflowed violently, I could feel his body gradually shrinking. If this continued, Kim Namwoon would completely disintegrate and vanish from this world.

「【I'll leave the Black Flame Dragon to you 'for the time being'.】」

Is that why Asmodeus said that? That bastard was planning to leave me with the exhausting work.

[You are currently the recorder of the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon'.]

I took a deep breath and began to gather Kim Namwoon's scattered stories.

Stories possess an inherent resilience; if the shattered fragments can be kept from scattering completely, they can be restored.

The problem was how to anchor the fragments that had already lost their cohesion.

「It's okay.」

I began speaking to Kim Namwoon as if I were truly talking to him. I could feel his shoulders tremble as he continued to regress into a child. Just saying it's okay wouldn't fix him instantly—I knew that. All I could do was offer a different story to someone trapped in a nightmare.

「There is an ending to every universe.」

One effective way to maintain the unity of a narrative is to plant 'another story' to bridge the gaps. By reconnecting the fragments of a broken tale with a different one, you create a new central axis.

「A story that can never be reached, so in some worlds, it is no different from a dream.」

I told Kim Namwoon the story of the 1,863rd round.

「That is Han Sooyoung's story.」

I chose this because the 1,863rd round was the world line where the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' and the 'Water Character' Kim Namwoon survived to see the conclusion.

[The constellation, 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon', is focusing on your records.]

The reason Kim Namwoon's condition was so precarious was ultimately because the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' was unstable.

If I could just hold the black dragon's attention, Kim Namwoon's chances of recovery would rise.

Indeed, as the narrative progressed, his condition improved rapidly. Color returned to his pale cheeks, and the scattered fragments of the narrative began to click back into place.

[The narrative of the 'character' in question is stabilizing.]

As I expected. The 1,863rd round was centered on that 'Han Sooyoung'. Since Han Sooyoung's sponsor in the 1,864th round was the Black Flame Dragon, it was inevitable that he would be drawn to her story.

Just as I thought I could stop recording, Kim Namwoon's lips parted again. This time, it wasn't a moan or a scream. He spoke a name.

"Lee Jihye."

I nodded, showing him I was listening. Kim Namwoon opened his mouth again, his lips trembling.

"Save... Jihye."

For a moment, my mind went blank. I hadn't expected to hear those words from him, of all people.

「That proud Kim Namwoon—the narrow-minded, delusional demon who relied on no one—was asking me for a favor.」

As if he thought I hadn't heard him correctly, he spoke again.

"Save... Yoosung."

Had I ever seen Kim Namwoon ask for anyone's help? Even after writing and reading so many sentences, I still didn't fully understand this story. I felt a sense of bewilderment and a subtle elation at the same time.

「The addition of just one line can change the entire landscape of a story.」

What kind of picture was my brother painting as the world line neared its conclusion? And why was Kim Namwoon excluded from that landscape?

"I will."

I couldn't tell if the fainting Kim Namwoon had heard me.

"Definitely."

However, his closed eyes looked more serene than they had before.

Mitra, who had been observing the situation from a distance, raised his massive form.

[It seems we are ready.]

It was time to set out in search of the 'Missing Bush'.

To cut to the chase, the search for the 'Missing Bush' was not easy.

"I don't think it's here either."

Mitra had marked five potential locations for the 'Missing Bush'.

We had already failed to find it in three of them.

"Is that map actually defective?"

Mitra cleared his throat in response to my question.

[Bushes appear randomly. Even if there is a pattern, it doesn't mean they will always manifest in the exact same spot. We have confirmed three positions; it is certain to appear in one of the remaining two.]

As Mitra spoke, he led his subordinates forward, his massive body swaying. Frankly, I was dissatisfied with our pace, but I wasn't in a position to complain.

「For now, it's safer to move with Mitra.」

Even now, we were being pursued by those a few hundred meters away. They were likely remnants of Papyrus or another giant nebula.

Anna Croft, watching Mitra's sluggish gait, approached me.

"I think we're wasting time."

"He's badly injured. His wings were torn off."

"It's his wings, not his legs. Our progress is too slow. It feels as if he's waiting for something."

Anna Croft spoke with a suspicion that rivaled my own. Jung Heewon, who was carrying Kim Namwoon on her back, joined in.

"I agree. He was a sinister constellation from the start."

I knew Mitra was listening, so I didn't acknowledge it openly, but I wasn't oblivious to their doubts.

Even if Mitra was a mythical constellation, this was a 'super-large battlefield'. With the Round Table potentially intervening and the variable of the 'Black Flame Dragon' looming, maintaining this slow pace suggested a hidden agenda.

[The 'Sanctuary' will appear soon!]

Just then, a message regarding the Sanctuary appeared.

Mitra stopped walking. Several of the constellations escorting him began to whisper in low voices.

「The Sanctuary.」

The Sanctuary was one of the key events of this 'super-large battlefield'.

「When the Sanctuary appears, a five-minute timer begins. After the timer expires, all twenty participants standing within the Sanctuary's light will be transferred to the 'Main Battlefield'.」

Only five minutes. If they could survive five minutes in that zone, they could proceed directly to the 'Main Battlefield'. For the constellations of Valhalla Hall who had been forcibly dragged here, this was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.

[Many constellations are awaiting the appearance of the 'Sanctuary'!]

Even though Mitra was holding back, I could sense the number of constellations gathering in the surrounding area increasing rapidly.

[I intend to advance to the higher battlefield from here.]

The Sun Hunter seemed determined to seize the opportunity. While I felt a sense of regret, his goal was to find his transcendent friends; it was only right that we part ways.

"Thank you for everything."

[Be careful.]

It was unclear what exactly he was warning us about. However, for some reason, the Sun Hunter turned his gaze toward Mitra. I followed his look. Sensing our eyes on him, Mitra began to approach. The 'Sanctuary' must have appeared. I thought I was finally about to hear Mitra's plan—

[I found the Missing Bush.]

The unexpected news made me jump. We had finally found it.

But Mitra's expression was grim.

[However, I recommend not entering.]

"Why?"

[The presence of the 'Outer Deity' feels too powerful.]

Outer Deity. Even though I had acquired the power of the 'Fear Realm', an 'Outer Deity' was still a significant burden.

Furthermore, if Mitra, a mythical constellation, described it as 'strong', it wasn't just any deity. It was a natural disaster.

In the worst case, a being equivalent to the 'End-of-the-World' was lingering within those bushes.

「Perhaps a 'Great Old One' is waiting there.」

If a presence of that level existed, even the 'Fear Realm' wouldn't be enough to counter it easily.

But I couldn’t back down. The 'Missing Bush' was my only clue to finding Dansu ahjussi. I had to enter, no matter what.

"Where is it?"

As if waiting for the question, Mitra pointed. As I looked where his finger indicated, a vast compression occurred at the vanishing point. This was likely Mitra’s vision. At the end of that compressed field, the bush was there.

「The Missing Bush.」

The moment I confirmed it, I understood Mitra’s warning. The immense narrative energy emanating from the thicket was so intense it made me shudder.

「An outer god.」

The deity within that bush was clearly one I shouldn't dare confront.

And yet, a chuckle escaped me anyway.

"It doesn't matter. I'm going in."

Mitra narrowed his eyes, questioning my sanity.

As he had said, what lay within that bush was, by this worldline's standards, an unmistakable 'outer deity'.

The reason I didn't hesitate was simple.

The 'outer deities' within that bush were people I knew very well.

「<Kim Dokja Company> is inside.」

982 Episode 59 What Kind of Ending (3)

---

[Again, I must disagree.]

Mitra’s skepticism was palpable. He looked at me as though I were a naive child, then heaved a deep sigh.

[I know you are familiar with the concept of 'Fear'. But the Outer Gods residing within that thicket are fundamentally different from the Fears you have encountered.]

I couldn't exactly tell him I knew those gods personally, so I offered a bitter smile instead. Mitra, perhaps misinterpreting my silence as stubbornness, adopted a grave tone.

[Even if you have ascended to the realm of myth, do not underestimate the 'gods of the other world'. The entities inside that bush are monsters I cannot guarantee a victory against.]

Of course he would say that.

"I know."

[And yet you insist on going?]

"Yes."

Mitra wasn't wrong; the beings inside would be dangerous. Above all, I had no way of knowing which version of <Kim Dokja Company> existed within that chaotic space.

"I have to go."

However, I had encountered members of <Kim Dokja Company> across worldlines before. Shin Yoosung, Lee Gilyoung—I had even seen other members during my brief time possessing the kkoma Kim Dokja.

Whoever was inside, I was certain of one thing.

「They would never harm me.」

The name itself was <Kim Dokja Company>. Those who had banded together under that banner and endured the hell of the scenarios would never raise a hand against Kim Dokja or his fragments.

[You... truly cherish your comrades.]

Had he doubted my resolve until now? Mitra looked genuinely impressed.

[The 'Sanctuary' will appear soon!]

A system message flashed above my head. The sky tore open with the roar of a thousand constellations, and a pillar of blinding light struck the earth. It was a spectacle reminiscent of Thor’s descent. A shimmering curtain of light formed around the impact point.

[A 'Sanctuary' has been generated!]

A five-minute timer materialized above the translucent barrier.

[Timer initiated!]

[When the timer expires, all participants within the 'Sanctuary' will be transferred to the 'Main Battlefield'.]

A total of twenty constellations could survive within that circle of light. Anna Croft, observing the phenomenon, murmured softly.

"This scenario is rigged for the Giant Nebulae."

I agreed. In a battle for territory like this, only a massive organization could secure and defend a zone for twenty members. The nebula that claimed the 'curtain of light' first would likely win the 'Battle of the Sanctuary'.

Amidst the rising tension, sparks crackled in the air, and a familiar figure materialized. It was a High-grade Dokkaebi I knew well.

[Finally! The 'Sanctuary' has arrived!]

It was Biryu—the dokkaebi who had overseen the Chungmuro scenario in the 1,864th round. He had been dispatched to manage this super-large battlefield.

[But... isn't this a bit unfair if we leave it like this?]

Several constellations muttered in confusion at his ominous tone.

[What do you mean?]

[Don't try anything stupid—]

Biryu snapped his fingers with a mischievous grin. Instantly, the massive curtain of light began to fracture.

[D-don't threaten me! T-This way, the big bullies get all the advantages. If we spread it out a bit... hehehehehe!]

The Sanctuary, designed for group defense, shattered into smaller fragments. It was a scene I knew all too well.

「Green Zones.」

Just like the dozens of Green Zones that had appeared in Chungmuro Station, the effective area of the Sanctuary split into scattered pockets.

[The 'effective area' of the Sanctuary is fragmenting!]

Like the Green Zones, the sizes varied wildly. Some were barely large enough for a single person, while others could fit two or three.

[Some constellations are greatly flustered by the altered scenario!]

[A few constellations are satisfied with the altered scenario!]

In a sense, Biryu's twisted 'fairness' was effective. It made it nearly impossible for a single, massive nebula to monopolize the safe zones. With the territory divided, smaller alliances and individual stars now had a fighting chance. A fierce, chaotic battle for those seats of light was about to erupt.

[Until we meet again, disciple of Jungyeong.]

The first to move was Hou Yi, the Sun Hunter. He claimed a single-person zone, aiming his massive bow at anyone who dared approach.

[The Sun Hunter accepts the challenge of the stars.]

A quiet, deadly aura radiated from him. Seeing the White Arrow nocked on his bow, no constellation dared to rush him. Challenging him now was tantamount to declaring war on the Emperor himself. Several other constellations—likely remnants of the <Emperor> nebula—took up positions in nearby zones, forming a defensive perimeter.

Mitra spoke next.

[Everyone, prepare for the scenario.]

It seemed Mitra intended to use this event to send his subordinates to safety.

[Chairman—]

[I will proceed to the 'Missing Bush'.]

At his declaration, the constellations of the Golden Dice Hall, including Skuld, looked torn.

[Chairman, no! That is too dangerous!]

Anticipating their protest, Mitra offered a benevolent smile.

[We will meet again soon. Survive. Even without me, you are strong enough if you stand together. The protection of the Golden Dice Hall remains with you.]

With that, Mitra ripped off one of his own arms and slammed it into the ground. A brilliant light erupted from the limb, bathing the constellations of the Golden Dice Hall in a protective aura.

[Ohhh...!]

A Myth-grade constellation had sacrificed a part of his own body to create a totem. Under its influence, his subordinates could fight with a fraction of his authority. Mitra turned his massive body toward me.

[Then let us make haste.]

I hadn't expected him to actually keep his word.

"Is it truly alright for you to accompany me?"

Mitra nodded.

[Your courage shames me. As a senior of the Mythical rank, I wish to fulfill my duty.]

It was unexpected, but I had no reason to refuse.

"Then let's go immediately."

War was breaking out over the sanctuaries. It was best to leave before the chaos escalated. I signaled to Jung Heewon and Anna Croft. Just in case, I had Anna carry the unconscious Kim Namwoon, leaving Jung Heewon free to fight if necessary.

"Anna Croft-ssi, take this."

I handed her the tickets I had stashed in my waistband.

"This is..."

"Tickets to the 'Main Battlefield'. Take the one for your friend on your back, too."

These were the tickets I had received from the 'Seeker of the End' before entering Valhalla.

"These are Blacklist Tickets, aren't they?"

"We might need them if things go south."

I couldn't guarantee their safety anymore. If the situation deteriorated, sending Anna and Namwoon to the higher scenario was the safer bet.

Anna examined the tickets closely.

"If I use a Blacklist Ticket, I will enter as part of the Calamity forces."

That was correct. She would be deployed on the side opposing the constellations of Ragnarok.

I smiled.

"Isn't that what you want?"

"..."

"Your goal is revenge against Asgard, isn't it?"

Her shoulders trembled slightly. She bit her lip, hesitating, before looking me in the eye.

"And you?"

"Me?"

"Which side are you on?"

"Why? Planning to follow me?"

Anna didn't answer. Grateful for her silence, I added:

"You know you have to side with Calamity regardless. That must be the term of your contract with the being who granted you the 'Eye of the Great Demon'."

Her eyes flickered with surprise.

"You knew about that?"

I nodded. The entity who gave her that eye was a key player in this Ragnarok. With their help, Anna Croft would be reborn as a central figure for the Calamity side.

"I will repay this debt. Definitely."

"I look forward to it."

A roar erupted behind us, followed by the clash of steel and magic. The Battle for the Sanctuary had begun.

[I will increase our speed.]

Mitra accelerated with a mantra. He could have moved this fast all along but had deliberately kept the pace slow.

Minutes passed. Finally, a dark, dense thicket appeared on the horizon.

[There it is.]

I sensed several constellations trailing us, but none dared to approach, wary of Mitra's presence.

[You have located the 'Missing Bush'!]

The thicket was right in front of us.

「Inside, I will find Dansu ahjussi.」

I took a step toward the bush, catching my breath. But the moment I stood before the threshold, the atmosphere shifted. A heavy, suffocating silence descended.

"Mitra."

I turned around. Mitra was watching me. Behind him, Jung Heewon and Anna Croft were trapped in a translucent pillar of light. Mitra's authority, [Prison of Light], had been activated.

[You knew, didn't you?]

Perhaps he had been stalling for time just to prepare this trap.

[That I am a coward.]

I gazed up at him quietly, thinking about the nature of a Myth-grade constellation—a star that has read a single story for tens of thousands of years, endlessly executing its own scenario.

"Didn't you say you wanted to escape the 'Hell of ■■'?"

Becoming a myth in the <Star Stream> might mean becoming the <Star Stream> itself. A being so accustomed to the system that it could no longer exist outside of it.

[That is correct.]

Mitra looked at me with eyes full of sorrow.

[I envy you. I envy the courage to throw it all away and disappear, despite having accumulated such a magnificent story.]

As I suspected, Mitra never intended to help me escape. His motive was simple: use my companions as leverage at the last moment to force a deal.

"What do you want?"

[When you roll the 'dice' at the Round Table... call my name. Just once.]

Mitra spoke with a strange, desperate madness.

[Do that, and I will give you anything.]

What he wanted wasn't escape. He was a star who yearned for ■■ more desperately than anyone else. A being who would sacrifice everything just to witness the final scene.

[Promise me. Call my True Name there. If you do, I will grant you my 'Power of Resurrection'! If you seek the aid of <Vedas>, I will grant that too! So—]

"That desire..."

I looked him in the eye.

"Is it truly your will? Or is it the will of the stories that turned you into a 'myth'?"

---

The moment Mitra asked, sparks erupted in the air again. Then, the voice of Dokkaebi Biryu cut through the tension.

[Didn't I tell you before? If you don't enter the sanctuary— well, you'll meet a terrible fate!]

Startled, Mitra raised his head just as a deafening roar echoed across the battlefield.

[A 'Disaster' descends upon the 'Super-Large Battlefield'!]

With a sound like the earth tearing apart, the terrain began to twist and buckle.

[The 'World Serpent' has appeared on the 'Super-Large Battlefield'!]

A majestic, crushing pressure descended upon us. I observed the calamity with calm eyes.

「It was an expected development.」

With a mythical constellation like Mitra active, the balance of the scenario demanded a counterforce. Just as the 'Apocalypse Dragon' had appeared in the 'Battlefield of Myths', it was only natural that a similar disaster would strike here.

[Impossible.]

Mitra glared at me, eyes wide with betrayal. He was right to be angry. The reason I had brought him along—despite his obvious agenda—was because I needed a shield to temporarily block this very disaster.

Of course, there was no way the real World Serpent would appear here. The true 'Jormungandr' of Ragnarok was a Myth-grade catastrophe on a cosmic scale.

So, the 'World Serpent' summoned here...

[The Black Serpent of the East—]

As Mitra muttered the name, the summoned giant snake turned its nine heads toward me.

"I never thought I'd encounter that constellation here."

'Yamata no Orochi'. The constellation that had plagued Peaceland—the 'Eight-Headed Sovereign'. It had been twisted into a 'Disaster' and unleashed upon us.

[The constellation, 'Eight-Headed Sovereign', roars!]

Yamata no Orochi shook its massive heads and unleashed a breath of venomous energy. The constellations caught in the blast screamed as their incarnations disintegrated.

Ooooooh!

Orochi thrust five of its heads through the melting terrain. Mitra, undeterred, unleashed his power.

[How dare you!]

A spear of light materialized in the air, blasting two of Orochi's heads into oblivion. However, three other heads successfully clamped onto Mitra's limbs, tearing through his defense. At the same time, his [Prison of Light] shattered.

"Dokja-ssi!"

Mitra shouted, spotting Jung Heewon and Anna Croft, who had escaped the broken prison.

[No! Could it be...? The Round Table!]

This was our last chance. Without hesitation, I grabbed my companions and opened the 'Missing Bush'. A pitch-black swirl of darkness began to suck us in.

[Stop!]

Mitra was persistent. As if determined to destroy us if he couldn't have us, he risked being devoured by Orochi to hurl his spear of light at our retreating forms.

I went cold as I watched the terrifying spears slash through the air. I deflected a few with 'Unbreakable Faith', but blocking them all was impossible.

The moment I prepared to shield them with my own body—

[Step back, you wicked foreign power!]

Someone stepped in front of us, taking Mitra's spear. He swung a long bamboo stick, deflecting the incoming light with a desperate strength.

I recognized him immediately.

[The constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', protects you!]

The Great Master Samyeong, who had lost his incarnation in 'Valhalla Hall', had joined this large-scale battlefield to the end.

The holy relic of the Great Master, having absorbed the impact of a Myth-grade attack, lost its glow and began to crumble. With a crackling sound, his incarnation body, impaled by the spear, began to spill its story.

[Go.]

If we left now, Great Master Samyeong would die. I reached out, but he shook his head and pushed me away. His body was tattered, his existence fading. Yet, the star of the Korean Peninsula shone brightly in his final moments. He looked past me, fixing his gaze on Anna Croft.

[Thank you... my descendant.]

The swirling darkness engulfed us. Mitra's sorrowful roar echoed in the distance, quickly drowned out by a bitter, biting cold. If I hadn't been gripping Jung Heewon and Anna Croft's wrists, the cold would have severed my sense of their existence entirely.

In a world where time seemed frozen, a sound echoed—like gears clicking into place.

Click.

Something fell out of alignment. Something broke. And then, the sound of something being forcibly realigned.

A record appeared before my eyes.

「This 'world beyond' is a place where the laws we know do not apply.」

Jung Heewon and Anna Croft looked at me with startled eyes.

"Dokja-ssi."

"Something is wrong."

A faint light enveloped us. Then, Anna Croft and the unconscious Kim Namwoon were wrapped in a sudden, violent storm of probability.

「Why?」

Alarm bells rang in my head. Why was the storm hitting only those two?

I didn't understand the cause, but the subsequent record revealed the consequence.

「The 'world' we are moving into does not accept 'Anna Croft' or 'Kim Namwoon'.」

Terrified by the implication, I shouted at Anna.

"Tear the tickets! Quickly!"

Sparks exploded from her body the moment I screamed. Fortunately, she must have torn both tickets in time, as I saw her vanish along with Kim Namwoon.

Startled, Jung Heewon cried out.

"Dokja—"

"Hold on tight!"

The surrounding space-time shuddered violently, as if the foreign objects had been safely expelled.

「And the story begins.」

Jung Heewon and I felt our bodies melting. Without a moment to resist, we became part of the stream of space-time. My vision flickered, and the history of the universe unfolded before my eyes. Countless stars spread out where the first light had once been. Galaxies formed, illuminated by the stories that birthed them.

「The Star Stream.」

The world of stories I'd read, written, and lived through. As if I were a fluid, I flowed through all those galaxies, heading toward the end of a long history.

「There was a great wall there.」

As I looked at the wall, the wall looked back at me. I felt the great records within it respond—fiercely calling out, begging me to choose.

I chose one.

「A certain ending.」

I chose it because the emotions of the people I longed to meet were so strong within that record.

The moment I touched it, I felt my body regenerating. Dizziness washed over me as the surroundings brightened, the abstract record transforming into a tangible landscape.

「There, a blindingly white hospital room unfolded before me.」

My heart pounded.

「Inside that room stood the people he had longed for so much.」

I tried to call their names. But my voice remained silent. It was only natural. My voice was not permitted in this 'hospital room'.

「They are beings we can only meet outside of this narrative.」

I am a reader. A being who observes.

「There was <Kim Dokja Company>.」

Han Sooyoung, Yoo Joonghyuk, Yoo Sangah, Shin Yoosung, Lee Gilyoung, Jung Heewon, Lee Hyunsung, Lee Seolhwa, Lee Jihye, Jang Hayoung...

The <Kim Dokja Company> I knew.

They were in that hospital room.

「"I'm going to the first portal!"」

It was a scene I knew very well.

「"Isn't anyone thinking something strange? If you go to the first one, you'll be able to meet Dokja-ssi again. Right, Biyoo?"」

Jung Heewon's voice. Not the Jung Heewon I knew—but the Jung Heewon of the 1,864th round, the one who remembered Kim Dokja.

「Two portals stood before my eyes.」

The moment I saw them, I realized what I was witnessing.

「"What are you all hesitating for? Aren't you going in? We can meet Dokja-ssi again. The Dokja-ssi we remember is out there."」

I knew this scene. The 'two portals' left behind by the Oldest Dream.

「This scene is the unknown ending of 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint'.」

<Kim Dokja Company>, having reached its conclusion, faced two choices.

The first portal: 'The ending where Kim Dokja returns'.

The second portal: 'The ending where Kim Dokja does not return'.

Jung Heewon was arguing for the first. She believed that if they went there, they could be reunited.

「"I'm not going."」

But someone opposed her.

「"The first portal is clearly a trap. It's so obvious. Have you already forgotten what happened on the subway?"」

It was Han Sooyoung.

「"It was like this back then. You were tricked by Kim Dokja and brought out a fake."」

Amidst the group's hesitation, Han Sooyoung explained why they had to choose the 'second portal'.

「"What if we enter the first portal only to find a Kim Dokja who lacks the same quality as before?"」

They longed to meet the 'Kim Dokja' they remembered.

「"And I will track down each and every one of the 'Kim Dokja fragments' who imagined that ending and torment them until they come up with a proper 'ending'."」

She spoke of the people who wanted to love even the 'misfortune' imagined by the Kim Dokja who had become their 'Oldest Dream'.

「"I'll catch that guy and bring him back, no matter what. I'm tired of playing with numbers, whether it's 49% or 51%. He has to be 100% now."」

So they chose the second portal. They set out to find the scattered fragments of their reader.

「That was the beginning of this whole story.」

I watched the backs of <Kim Dokja Company> as they entered the portal. Han Sooyoung, Yoo Joonghyuk, and Biyoo disappeared. Lee Gilyoung and Lee Jihye followed.

Shin Yoosung looked back one last time just before vanishing. Without realizing it, I reached out to the child. I wanted to tell her not to go. But I couldn't. In this story, I wasn't the author.

As the group made their choices and disappeared, the hospital room door creaked open once again.

「They are the stars who have long loved this story.」

The constellations I knew were there. With <Kim Dokja Company> gone, they, too, had come to choose their own ending.

「Just as the lights on the stage go out, the stars choose their own finale.」

The characters departed. Soon, only the two portals remained in the empty hospital room. I sat down and stared blankly at the void they had left behind. Why did they have to make that choice? Even if it was all a lie, couldn't they have imagined a happy ending with their eyes closed?

「This story begins with such a question.」

Slowly, I raised my head. A sentence began to appear before my eyes.

「What would this story have been like if the group had chosen the 'first portal'?」

I rose from my seat and, as if entranced, walked toward the first portal, which was still glowing brightly.

「What kind of world lies beyond that portal that Han Sooyoung and her group refused to choose?」

As if waiting, the swirling portal sucked me in.

And so, the story began.

「This is the story of that 'house'.」

984 Episode 59 What Kind of Ending (5)

---

【Oh, it's finally starting.】

【Who's going to record this?】

【Haha, I was so exhausted earlier, it's embarrassing.】

...

【Who needs to step forward? He's the 'Recorder', after all.】

---

「All happy families are alike, but every unhappy family is unhappy in its own way.」

This is the opening line of Tolstoy's novel, [Anna Karenina]. The reason I'm suddenly recalling that line is because I suddenly wondered what a 'happy family' truly is.

Are all happy families really the same? If so, do the conditions for happiness apply equally to most people?

「I wish I lived in a really big house.」

For some, that means living in a really big house.

「I wish I could eat as much pizza and chicken as I want.」

Eating as much pizza and chicken as they want.

「I should be able to play computer games, too.」

「There should be a hospital nearby. I think Dokja-ssi gets sick often.」

「He'd be happy to have a library.」

Perhaps that scene was no different from that of any other 'happy family'. To someone who didn't know their story, that scene of happiness would surely seem ordinary.

「What do you think happiness is, Ahjussi?」

When someone asked, I thought for a moment and then answered. The most ordinary scene of happiness I could think of.

「Not being alone.」

And when I opened my eyes.

"Youngest, are you awake?"

I was no longer a reader.

rlaehrwk37: Wow?

His name was Kim Dokja.

He didn't know who gave him that name. It could have been the work of his parents, whose lives are unknown. Perhaps one of them was a great book lover.

He didn't care either way. People just called him Kim Dokja, and he accepted that name. He thought that was enough. Perhaps it was because of his unfamiliar name, but sometimes, when people heard him for the first time, they'd laugh and say,

"You seem to really like books!"

At those times, he'd just give a wry smile. It was because he didn't really enjoy reading. To be precise, it wasn't so much that he didn't like it, but rather that he was forced to.

"Books? Why would you read something like that?"

Perhaps it was largely due to the influence of his siblings, all of whom were physical.

"Aren't you going to wake up quickly? Did you fall asleep while looking at your phone again?"

The door opened with a loud crack. His signature platinum hair flowed in a dazzling stream. The eldest son, half-naked, showed off his toned chest. Wukong grabbed Kim Dokja by the collar and dragged him out of bed. Kim Dokja rubbed his sleepy eyes and grumbled.

"Hyung, can't I sleep a little longer?"

"It's time for your morning stretch. You promised."

As he dragged himself outside, as if dragged by Wukong, the second, already in the middle of a workout in the living room, greeted him.

"Are you awake?"

As expected, the muscles are as hot as the first one. With a friendly face that doesn't suit such muscles, the second— Hyunsung was doing a crunch.

"Okay, let's get started. Remember what I told you?"

Kim Dokja sat on a small yoga mat and assumed the poses Wukong had instructed. He crouched and stretched like a cat, and then lay down and repeated simple hamstring stretches. It was a tedious exercise, but after repeating it over and over again, sweat beaded on his forehead.

It's hard. He thought about quitting.

But watching Wukong and Hyunsung silently immerse themselves in their workouts, he couldn't say such things.

That's the level of stamina I needed to achieve such a muscular body.

"Good job. Bend down even further. That's right."

With all this support from Wukong, even his frail body seemed poised to become muscular in no time.

"Like this?"

"That's right!"

Of course, he knew that stretching a hundred times a day wouldn't make him muscular. He's old enough to understand that now.

After finishing his full-body stretches and standing up, the two brothers were staring at him.

"Aren't you going to eat?"

Normally, it would have been time to go eat breakfast after stretching, but today, their expressions were unusually serious.

"Isn't it about time you taught him 'that'?"

That.

Wukong beamed at Hyunsung's words and asked.

"You think so too?"

Kim Dokja's heart suddenly pounded. For some reason, this morning felt different than usual.

"Why, what's that?"

The two exchanged glances, ignoring Kim Dokja's question.

"But I think it's a bit much for the Youngest."

"He can't stay ignorant forever, right?"

"I see."

Their expressions seemed as if they were about to impart some great martial arts secret.

Kim Dokja tensed up once again.

Would he finally hear 'that'?

There were things that had always seemed strange.

Why was his name Kim Dokja? Why didn't he remember his parents? How did his siblings end up living together?

"Oh, what is it?"

Hiding his excitement, Kim Dokja asked cautiously. Then, after much deliberation, Wukong said,

"Okay. I'll tell you. Hyunsung-ah, demonstrate."

"Yes."

Hyunsung fell to the floor as if he had been waiting. Wukong then began counting.

"One. Two. Three. Four."

Hyunsung's body swayed up and down with the steadily increasing numbers. Kim Dokja asked with a dumbfounded expression,

"What is that?"

"Ah, this is called a push-up."

"I know that. Why are you showing me?"

"It might look easy on the outside, but it's not an easy exercise at all."

Embarrassed at having been thrilled by a mere push-up, Kim Dokja knelt down beside Hyunsung and began to do push-ups.

"I can do that without you teaching me."

"Huh?"

Kim Dokja's arms slowly lowered to the floor. His already weak muscles sounded like they were being ripped apart.

"That's right! Now, just come back up!"

He managed to lower his chest, trembling, but that was where the problem started. His upper body showed no sign of lifting.

Damn it. He can't even do one?

"Youngest, you can do it. Come up!"

Amidst the enthusiastic cheering, Kim Dokja pushed off the floor with all his might.

Hyunsung shouted,

"Think of pushing as if you were pushing a mountain!"

Little by little, the ground began to give way. And finally—

"One."

Wukong's voice came softly. A wave of weakness washed over Kim Dokja, and he collapsed.

"You've grown, Youngest."

Wukong smiled contently. Then Hyunsung added, tears welling up in his eyes.

"Really, you're amazing. As expected, Dokja-ssi—"

"What's the fuss about doing a single push-up?"

Kim Dokja pouted, and Wukong chuckled and rubbed his shoulder.

"Did you say our Youngest is on leave from work starting today?"

"I said retirement."

"Isn't that the same thing?"

Wukong, incidentally, was the most stubborn of his siblings.

"A leave of absence is a short break, and retirement is permanent."

"You're going to find another job after a short break anyway, right? Then it's the same as a leave of absence."

He'd never thought of it that way.

Kim Dokja shook his head and muttered.

"Anyway, I'm going to take a break for a while."

Actually, it wasn't the right time to take a break from work. This family couldn't live a normal life without him.

"Are you serious?"

The Eldest, a longtime unemployed man, asked.

"Are you sure?"

The Second, who had recently been fired for being hard-working but too inflexible, asked.

"Yes, I'm really going to take a break."

If the Youngest didn't bring in the money, this family wouldn't function properly. Nevertheless, upon hearing Kim Dokja's words, the Eldest, Wukong, and the Second, Hyunsung, looked genuinely touched.

"Good idea, Youngest."

"Good idea."

Why were these two so happy at the mere mention of taking a break?

"You know if I take a break, our household won't have any money, right?"

"So what if we don't earn enough? We can just be frugal. We can eat out less and not buy unnecessary things. Isn't that how we should live?"

"Even an unemployed person saying something like that isn't very convincing."

"Money is something that disappears even after it's been there."

"Have you ever had it?"

"You don't know, but I used to have a lot of money."

"When?"

Frowning in frustration, Wukong was about to say something when the third's voice came from afar.

"You guys, stop wasting calories and come eat breakfast."

The family's breakfast began.

---

The breakfast menu was kimchi fried rice and a fried egg made with cold rice.

Was it the Third's turn to cook today?

Kim Dokja sat across from her, quietly watching the Third scooping up rice with a spoon. Their eyes met, and the Third— Heewon, smiled and asked.

"It's delicious, isn't it?"

It might sound strange, but she was more skilled at using knives than cooking. Heewon's cooking was surprisingly neatly prepared, but also surprisingly poorly seasoned.

"Yeah, it's delicious."

"It's not?"

It was a lie. Some parts were overly salty, others were overly plain. Still, he was grateful that someone had prepared the food for him, that he could eat it.

Of course, that was just Kim Dokja's opinion, and the other brothers felt a little differently.

"It's so tasteless."

"Say it again."

"I find it delicious, Heewon-ssi."

After a lively meal, the siblings cleared away the dishes.

Hyunsung was in charge of the dishes today.

"Deep in the mountains—"

Hyunsung continued to wash the dishes, singing a military song in a slightly off-key tone. Kim Dokja watched Hyunsung's back, inhaling the lingering scent of dishwashing detergent wafting through the house. It was a familiar sight, but for some reason, his heart tingled.

It was then that the Eldest emerged from the closet, dressed in a neat suit. Their eyes met, and Wukong asked with a triumphant smile.

"How is it?"

"What?"

"From today, I'm off to work."

"Off to work?"

He asked, startled, and the other said he was going for an interview today. It was the security firm that Hyunsung had previously been laid off from.

"Really? My brother's interviewing?"

"Yes, you rascal."

It turns out there are days when Kim Wukong goes for an interview.

Kim Dokja was amazed, but upon closer inspection, Wukong's tie was a mess.

"How can you possibly get a job if you can't even tie a tie yourself?"

"Hmm? Isn't this how it's supposed to be done?"

Kim Dokja sighed and showed him how to tie a tie. He'd only adjusted one part of it, but he still looked quite neat.

"Oh, you're the Youngest, after all."

"Memorize it well. It's much more useful than push-ups."

"Okay. I'll be back."

"Go ahead. Don't cause trouble."

"On your phone."

"You shouldn't read novels. They pollute your mind."

"Let's take the child lock off and talk. What's wrong with novels?"

"They're all fake. You should live in real life. Instead of reading those things, do one more push-up. Like Hyunsung."

Hyunsung, who was beside him, nodded.

Seeing that Hyunsung was already dressed for the day, it seemed he was taking Wukong with him today.

"Have a safe trip. Good luck with your interview. Don't hit anyone."

The two waved and disappeared, leaving Kim Dokja and the Third child, Heewon, in the house. Heewon said, "Youngest."

"Yeah."

"You know it's Hyunsung-ssi's birthday soon, right?"

By the way, Heewon calls Hyunsung 'Hyunsung-ssi'. Even Kim Dokja doesn't know why.

"When was the Second's birthday?"

"June 20th."

"There's still a long way to go."

"Still, it's better to think about it in advance."

Hyunsung's birthday present. What kind of gift would he like? Would he like a new push-up bar? Or maybe a pair of adjustable dumbbells?

"But, sis."

"Yeah."

"When was my birthday?"

"It's February 15th."

"How old is the second oldest brother?"

"Twenty-eight."

Kim Dokja pondered for a moment and then asked.

"How old am I this year?"

"Twenty..."

Heewon, who had just finished speaking, suddenly widened her eyes and asked.

"Don't you even know your age?"

"No, I know. I'm just asking because it's strange."

"What's strange?"

"I'm twenty-eight this year, too."

"But?"

"The second oldest brother is twenty-eight, too?"

"So?"

"I was born on February 15th. My birthday is earlier, so why—"

He felt something hit him hard in the back of his head, and his vision blurred. What was it? When he opened his eyes again, Heewon was supporting him.

"Are you okay? You suddenly collapsed."

"Yeah, I'm fine."

Seeing Heewon's impudent expression, Kim Dokja narrowed his eyes and asked.

"But how old was sister?"

"Twenty-seven."

"But why are you—"

The back of his head tingled again, and his vision spun around. He blinked, and this time, Heewon was supporting him again.

"Are you okay?"

Was he okay?

Watching Heewon's palm slowly rise again, Kim Dokja made a request instead of a question.

"Teach me how to do push-ups."

"Why do you do push-ups?"

"I just want to get better."

"There's no use getting stronger. There's no need to get stronger."

"Still, I want to get better."

After a moment of hesitation, Heewon answered.

"Okay."

The two quietly began doing push-ups. To be precise, Heewon did them, and Kim Dokja watched.

"You're good at it."

"It's just push-ups, what's the big deal?"

"I'm not even good at that."

Heewon was silent for a moment, then said,

"You're good at other things."

"What am I good at?"

Heewon didn't answer. She simply looked at him with slightly sad eyes and silently gazed out the window.

Kim Dokja also looked out the window with Heewon. The small living room of the 3LDK. Through the large windows of the living room, the cityscape was reflected. People bustling along the busy road. Children talking from somewhere. The sound of a ball bouncing. The occasional car exhaust.

It was peaceful. Truly, a world where nothing happened.

Just then, as if a memory suddenly occurred to her, Heewon said,

"Oh, I'm going to work later."

"Work? Where?"

"I decided to go back to that cafe. I think I should go soon."

"What? Did you make up with the boss?"

"Just got a pay cut."

"You said you didn't want to work there."

"You can't make a living doing only what you love."

"Still—"

"You've always been the only one working. We can do it too."

It felt strange to suddenly hear that. Heewon seemed to be quite concerned that he was earning his own living.

"I'm fine. I'll take a short break and then look for another job. My brother told me there's no retirement, only a leave of absence."

"No, while you're at it, get some rest. I can't just be dependent on you here too."

"Here too?"

Heewon paused, then smiled subtly and waved.

"I'll be back soon, so take care of the house. Don't go anywhere. If you want anything to eat, text me. I'll make it for you later."

After seeing Heewon off, Kim Dokja gazed out the window alone. He saw Heewon walking somewhere in the distance.

Kim Dokja waved lightly to Heewon, who didn't turn around. Watching her back, he felt as if he had seen a similar scene before.

People were leaving one by one, leaving him alone in an empty space.

Displeased with this feeling, Kim Dokja thought about Wukong, who had gone to an interview, Hyunsung, who was about to celebrate his birthday, and Heewon, who was going to work at the cafe.

First, Wukong would probably fail in his job search. No company would accept his irascibility and laziness.

Second, Hyunsung would completely forget his birthday. Only on the day itself would he finally remember it. Then, realizing no one had congratulated him, he would be depressed, and then, realizing it was all a surprise, he would receive congratulations and tears would well up in his eyes. Third, Heewon would fight with the boss again. And at night, she would come home drunk and tell the story of the day. Kim Dokja loved those little incidents.

He loved the stories of the people he loved. He was happy that he was in those stories, that he had siblings. He loved this strange family.

So, whenever he was alone, he would wish this time could last forever. He wished this seemingly unbelievable peace, this daily routine of practicing push-ups, could last forever.

Ding-dong.

That's when the doorbell rang. He looked outside through the intercom, but the screen was broken.

"Anyway, this house can't function properly without me."

He hesitated for a moment, then stood before the front door and quietly muttered, "Who is it?" There was no answer. Slowly reaching for the handle, Wukong's advice suddenly came to mind.

—No matter what, never open the door when you're alone.

Wukong spoke as if teaching a child the fears of the world.

—You may not remember clearly, but you're suffering from amnesia. Something terrible happened when you were young.

In fact, Kim Dokja barely remembered anything from his childhood.

—There's a stalker following you. He only wears black clothes. He's dangerous, so you have to be careful.

When he first heard the story, Kim Dokja thought it was just a ghost story. A stalker wearing black clothes.

Ding-dong.

The doorbell rang again.

Kim Dokja hesitated for a moment, then reached for the handle again. Maybe, just like Wukong said, there really was a stalker at the door.

So what should he do? Should he call his brothers? Or should he report it to the police?

Even as he pondered these thoughts, Kim Dokja couldn't stop reaching out.

Perhaps it was an impulsive choice.

The thought that there could never be a stalker, and the thought that if there really was one, he'd just like to see their face.

With these conflicting feelings, Kim Dokja opened the door.

「What if, when I open the door, there's a world he doesn't know about out there?」

But when I carefully opened the door, there was no one at the front door. Not even the hem of the man's clothes could be seen, let alone the man in black.

Kim Dokja smiled bitterly.

Of course.

But the moment he was about to close the door, there was a sound of something being dragged outside. He opened it again and poked his head out, and there was a small box sitting there.

What is this? A package?

He absentmindedly picked up the box and entered the house. There was no tracking number on it.

—Oh, and never open a package alone.

His heart suddenly raced. A package with no tracking number.

「Finally, something has happened in his world.」

—Leave it to your older brother or sister. It's dangerous if you open it alone.

He wondered if there might be something truly dangerous inside, but then he realized that it couldn't be.

"Who do you think as a fool?"

So what if there was something dangerous inside? Although he could only do one push-up, he was a fully grown man of twenty-eight years. There was no way someone would have put something like a bomb in the box, and he didn't think anything bad could happen if he opened it alone.

Kim Dokja slowly opened the box.

「Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint.」

Instead of a bomb, there was a book.

985 Episode 59 What Kind of Ending (6)

---

Wukong silently gazed up at the sky, then abruptly spat out a curse.

"Fuck."

In the world he originally inhabited, such language would have been filtered out. It was all because of that damned Archangel. Due to her strict system of 'correct and beautiful speech', all constellations influenced by <Kim Dokja Company> were subject to forced censorship.

But now, that was all history. The Archangel had chosen a different 'portal' and departed for another world.

「"Great Sage Heaven's Equal. Are you truly going there?"」

The Archangel had asked Wukong, the only constellation who made a different choice.

「"Yes."」

When he answered, she pressed him: 'You know Kim Dokja well. The Kim Dokja we know will not exist in the worldline you have chosen. If he insisted on offering two choices, there must be a reason.'

「"Of course."」

Wukong knew that. He had been watching Kim Dokja's story longer than almost anyone.

「"And yet, you choose that world?"」

The Archangel was right. The world he chose might not hold the 'Youngest' he remembered. Nevertheless, Wukong chose this 'ending'. The reason was simple.

「"At least one star should remain to illuminate the little theme park he created."」

Upon hearing his answer, the Archangel gazed at him with sorrowful eyes before slowly nodding.

「"Let us meet again."」

Both stars knew they likely never would. They would never again giggle over the same story. They would never share their rage or their joy. They would never compete for sponsorship or send indirect messages bickering with one another.

「"Yes."」

They prayed for each other's stories, hoping they would reach the endings they desired in the worlds they chose.

「I wonder how she is doing.」

Today, Wukong found himself curious about the ending the Archangel had chosen. What was happening there right now? Once, out of sheer curiosity, he had tried to peek into that world. A problem arose immediately, so he stopped, but...

"Welcome."

As he pushed open the convenience store door, the clerk's mechanical greeting rang out.

Wukong nodded slightly and headed to the beverage section. He picked up a bottle of soju, considered it, then put it back. Alcohol from the human world couldn't even get him tipsy. Wukong hated <Emperor>, but he missed the celestial wine he used to steal from the heavens. Especially on days like today, when he desperately wanted to get drunk.

"Even so... if you have absolutely no experience..."

The interviewer at the security firm pushed his glasses up his nose, looking utterly perplexed.

"You need at least a minimum amount of relevant history to perform security duties."

Who dares lecture the Great Sage on 'security experience'? Wukong, feeling deeply offended, frowned and snapped.

"I have experience."

No bodyguard in the history of the universe had performed a more grueling escort mission.

"I protected a Buddhist monk all the way to India. Have you not heard of it?"

His 'Journey to the West' was one of the most famous stories in the Star Stream. Of course, the interviewer, who had no way of knowing this, looked at him as if he were insane and scribbled something on his notepad.

"What do you consider your greatest strength?"

Strength. What was his strength?

It was the first time he had been asked such a question in this context. Wukong pondered the stories of his life. After a long silence, he answered.

"I am confident in combat."

Fighting. If asked to name the strongest stars in the universe, he would easily make the top five. The only thing he might be wary of was that black bastard—the one wielding the power of the 'Oldest Liberator', an authority that transcended even myths.

"Fighting..."

The interviewer, unfamiliar with the concept of Myth-grade constellations, looked displeased.

"What do you think 'security' is?"

"It is protection."

"And how do you protect something?"

"Simple. You eliminate the threat."

The interviewer shook his head.

"No."

"What?"

"That is not protection."

"Then?"

"True security begins with acknowledging the impossible."

Wukong was momentarily taken aback by the philosophical weight of the answer.

"What do you mean? If you give up from the start, you cannot protect anything."

"It isn't giving up."

The interviewer continued, as if lecturing a student.

"There are accidents in this world that human power cannot prevent. If a building suddenly collapses, how will you protect your client?"

"I would simply destroy the collapsing debris."

"What if the vehicle you are in is rear-ended by a truck?"

"I would grab the client and jump out."

"What if a missile falls from the sky?"

"That..."

That was beyond the scope of a bodyguard. Just as he was thinking the interviewer was being unreasonable, the man smiled meaningfully.

"Interesting. How far are you willing to go to prevent the inevitable?"

"What?"

"You failed the interview. Go home and guard your house."

That was the end of it. He wondered what to tell Hyunsung, who had pulled strings to get him this interview. But since Hyunsung had already been fired from this same company, perhaps the problem wasn't them, but the company itself.

"Security."

He chuckled to himself. In truth, he was performing security every day. He was doing it right now.

"Youngest! Hyung is home!"

Wukong shouted as he entered the hallway and rang the doorbell.

But there was no answer. It was strange. The Youngest should have been home.

After pacing for a moment, Wukong grabbed the doorknob, then thought better of it and dialed a number.

"Heewon-ah."

—Why are you calling?

"What was the passcode for the door?"

A deep sigh came from the other end.

—What? You don't even remember the Youngest's birthday?

"Of course I know his birthday."

—Right. There's no way a freeloader like you would memorize something important.

He wanted to snap back, but her words were too accurate to refute.

—How did the interview go?

Beep. Beep. Wukong punched in the familiar date.

"I failed."

—I knew it.

"Listen to me. This time, it really could have worked out."

—You're ridiculous. I'm hanging up.

"No, really, listen. I think that interviewer was—"

The door clicked open. Wukong stopped speaking.

The air inside the house felt wrong. Subtly, terrifyingly wrong. He saw a delivery box sitting open in the entryway. There was no tracking number on it.

Ignoring Heewon's voice pecking at him through the phone, Wukong scanned the house.

No. It couldn't be. A single moment of carelessness couldn't lead to this.

"Heewon-ah."

He raised his senses, sniffing the air. There was no mistaking it. All his instincts pointed to a single, devastating truth.

"Come home. Right now."

The object of his guard had vanished.

An hour later, the three of them were gathered in the living room. In the suffocating silence, Heewon spoke first.

"Didn't he just go out for some fresh air?"

"If that were the case, would I have called you?"

"I mean, maybe he just went to the store. If we make a fuss and he walks in, I'm going to kill you, seriously."

"This doesn't feel right. Something has happened to the Youngest."

"I get it, you're protective. But he's twenty-eight. No, technically, he's even older than that..."

"Twenty-eight is practically a baby."

"That's just based on your perception of time—"

Hyunsung intervened, stepping between them.

"Both of you, calm down. First, look at this."

"What is it?"

"I installed it a while ago, just in case."

Hyunsung held up his smartphone. On the screen was a live feed of the living room. He had installed a hidden home cam above the television.

"What? When did you put that there?"

"When Dokja-ssi was absent the other day. I only put them in the living room and his bedroom."

If Kim Dokja had heard this, he would have launched a lecture about human rights and privacy. But none of the three cared about that right now. Their only interest was his safety.

"Rewind it. Quickly."

Hyunsung scrolled back the timeline.

Someone rang the doorbell. Kim Dokja hesitated, then opened the door. He stepped out, returned with a box, and took out a book.

『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』.

The three of them exchanged horrified glances as they confirmed the title on the screen.

"What on earth..."

Who had delivered that book? More importantly, how could that 'story' exist within this 'world'?

Wukong, staring intently at the screen, spoke grimly.

"Something similar happened before."

Once, the Youngest had downloaded an unknown app on his phone. Through that app, he had begun reading the novel. Fortunately, Hyunsung had discovered it and engaged the child lock, and Heewon had struck the back of his head to reset his memory.

"The Youngest must not read that story."

When Wukong spoke, the other two nodded in unison.

For reasons they didn't fully understand, the Kim Dokja of this world had sealed his memories deep within his subconscious. The three believed this was his will, and they had decided to respect—and enforce—it. It was tragic that he couldn't remember them, but if he had chosen this ending, there must have been a reason.

"Where is he now? You installed a tracker, didn't you?"

"The GPS is off."

Hyunsung's voice cracked. Heewon slumped onto the sofa, clutching her forehead as dizziness washed over her.

"Are you alright?"

"I'm fine. Just... a headache. It's been lingering since yesterday."

Her words carried a strange weight. Sensing the shifting atmosphere, Wukong narrowed his eyes.

"Someone has interfered with this world."

Heewon closed her eyes, leaning her head back.

"Should we report it to the police?"

Wukong shook his head.

"We won't find him that way."

This world was a small theme park created by Kim Dokja's subconscious. A world constructed from his desire to live in a big house with his companions.

"You know this better than anyone. This reality operates on the Youngest's imagination."

Kim Dokja didn't know it, but he was the one sustaining this world. If he truly wanted to hide, they would never find him.

Hyunsung's face darkened.

"Then what do we do? If something happens to Dokja-ssi..."

"It's not hopeless. We have a clue."

Heewon opened her eyes. Hyunsung looked up from the screen.

Wukong continued.

"If the Youngest really read 'that story'..."

There was only one book in the box.

"There is only one place he would go."

At Wukong's words, Heewon stood up abruptly.

"Let's go."

The destination was clear.

「The place where this whole story began.」

And...

「The place where he first saw the Youngest.」

Kim Dokja would be there.

---

「Oksu Station.」

Moments later, the trio stepped onto the platform at Oksu Station. Heewon blinked again, her eyes slowly scanning the familiar surroundings. A cool wind swept past them. The scenery of the Han River stretched out before them, carrying a faint, metallic scent of water. Pausing near Dongho Bridge, which led toward Apgujeong, the three allowed themselves a moment of reminiscence.

Heewon was the first to speak.

"Something feels... off."

Wukong pursed his lips and responded.

"It shouldn't be strange, considering this isn't 'that world'."

"But the location is exactly the same."

Heewon was well aware. This world was not the one they had lived in. Still, the moment she saw the open bridge, she remembered the day the scenarios began. She knew full well this wasn't her world, but she couldn't suppress the memories.

The three of them gazed at the bridge in silence for a long while. Here, no Dokkaebis appeared, the subway didn't stop, no monsters gave chase, and no dragons tore the bridge asunder. In the absence of such chaos, only their memories remained as proof that the story had existed.

Heewon bit her lip in silence. It had been a truly horrific time. Yet, she wondered why she looked back on this memory with such fondness.

A slight wave of dizziness made Heewon stumble once more, prompting Hyunsung to quickly grab her shoulder. Watching them, Wukong spoke up.

"Wait here for a bit while I take a look around."

"I'll come with you."

"It's easier if I go alone."

Wukong glanced at Heewon and Hyunsung before adding in a low voice.

"This probably won't be a very pleasant memory for you."

With those words, Wukong's figure quickly pulled away.

Watching him go, Heewon was reminded that he had once been a star in the sky. He was a constellation that had once enjoyed watching their tragedy. Wukong must have decided he didn't deserve to share the same memories as them.

"I wonder if he's being considerate or just aloof."

"That's right."

Wukong was clearly a constellation. A star that had witnessed their tragedy. But now, to them, Wukong was more than just a constellation.

Hyunsung hesitated for a moment, then spoke.

"I know this sounds strange, but... I'm often grateful that star watched our story to the end."

"…"

"I don't know if this is the right place to talk about this, but…"

"No, I know what you mean."

In that desperate scenario, if not for that single sliver of starlight before their eyes, they wouldn't have seen the end.

"It's infuriating that he enjoyed seeing me suffer, but that person sacrificed everything to protect us in the final chapter."

"…"

"It's not a matter of simply forgiving him; after all, we shared every moment."

They experienced that story together and survived to the end. So here they were now.

"Do you remember the initial scenario?"

Hyunsung smiled wryly at Heewon's question and looked at the bridge.

"How could I forget?"

"Everyone almost died here, right?"

"Heewon-ssi wasn't at Dongho Bridge then, so how do you know?"

"I've heard it countless times."

Heewon had begun the scenario elsewhere. But she, too, had read Han Sooyoung's story and knew well how Kim Dokja survived the initial scenario.

Trying to remember that time, Heewon extended her finger and asked.

"The bridge collapsed around there, right?"

"Yes."

"I heard there was an even-numbered bridge, a bridge only two people could cross."

Hyunsung nodded. His eyes were strangely focused, as if recalling the scene from that day.

"Gilyoung and I crossed the bridge together."

"I heard Myungoh Ahjussi carried Sangah-ssi and ran away."

"I really wanted to throw him into the river back then, but I held back."

The two chuckled at the mention of Han Myungoh's name, a name they hadn't heard in a long time.

Looking at the intact bridge, the two continued their conversation. About Yoo Sangah, about Lee Gilyoung, about Han Myungoh.

"And…"

Then, the scenes they remembered seemed to overlap over the intact bridge. The collapsed bridge. The menacing roar of an ichthyosaur. A man in a coat stood beside the precariously broken railing. Knowing it was a hallucination, the two held their breath and focused on the scene. Now, they desperately sketched out the story that only the three of them remembered in this world.

"The two were fighting over there, right?"

"They didn't fight, they just got hit."

"I wonder if Joonghyuk-ssi is doing well."

"I'm sure he's doing well. He's a strong man, isn't he?"

The two thought about a man. A regressor, stronger than anyone else in this world, and that's why he couldn't give up on this story until the very end.

"I wonder if he found him."

The wind blew again, and the scenery they'd remembered scattered. Countless cars honked their horns as they passed over the intact Dongho Bridge.

Hyunsung licked his lips.

"I hope he finds him."

"You really think so?"

Hyunsung hesitated, then nodded. Then Heewon spoke.

"Then what becomes of us who chose this ending?"

Perhaps it was a question she'd been holding back all along.

"Hyunsung-ssi, do you actually think we were wrong?"

Did the group who chose the ending where they didn't find Kim Dokja make it safely?

「Perhaps the ending they didn't choose wasn't the 'proper ending' of this story?」

Hyunsung was about to say something when a booming voice came from afar. It was Wukong's.

"Youngest—where are you—!"

Hyunsung and Heewon smiled bitterly, looked at each other, and ran toward Oksu Station.

Finding Wukong wasn't difficult. He stood at the station entrance, loudly searching for Kim Dokja. Heewon scolded him.

"A kid who left home on his own won't come running if you call him that way."

"What are you talking about? There's no way he wouldn't come if I called him."

Heewon shook her head.

"I don't think he's here. Did he go to another area?"

"No, he's here."

"How would you know?"

"I smell the Youngest."

Wukong calmly surveyed the area and said.

"He walked over there."

"Are you sure?"

"I'm sure."

"How can you be sure when you can't use skills or stigmata anymore?"

"…"

"We're just ordinary people now. You're no longer a myth-grade constellation."

"Just trust me."

Despite Heewon's rebuke, Wukong remained firmly convinced. With no other options, the group followed Wukong past Oksu Station and into the Geumho Station area. Wukong, who had been sniffing, said.

"This way."

"Exactly the direction of the scenario."

If Wukong's judgment was correct, Kim Dokja was currently moving precisely along the area where the scenario occurred.

It was then that Heewon, who had stopped dead in her tracks, spoke.

"Great Sage Heaven's Equal."

Wukong's ears twitched slightly as he walked ahead. Heewon, looking at the back of Wukong's head, asked.

"You said this world was created by Dokja-ssi's imagination?"

"Yes."

"Then what would happen if Dokja-ssi really yearned for that 'world' again?"

Wukong stopped.

"That couldn't be."

"How could you know?"

"It was a difficult ending; there's no way he would want to relive that story again."

"Is this world really the ending Dokja-ssi wanted to see? Do you truly believe that?"

Wukong slowly turned around. The moment she saw Wukong's distorted expression, Heewon was momentarily speechless.

Wukong asked.

"Why are you asking that now?"

His distorted face seemed both filled with rage and boundless sorrow.

Tsutsutsu.

And then, from somewhere, a familiar sound came. The three, their faces pale, turned to each other.

"No way, that was it."

Perhaps they misheard. But what if they heard correctly?

"We have to find Dokja-ssi, immediately."

Heewon, who had taken a hasty step ahead, stumbled violently.

"Heewon-ssi!"

Startled, Hyunsung supported Heewon. Feeling severely dizzy, Heewon frowned and leaned against him.

"It's okay."

Hyunsung, as if remembering something, looked around. This was Geumho Station. This was where Heewon had begun her full-scale scenario.

"We shouldn't have come here after all."

"No. That's not it…"

The tragedies of Geumho Station had long since faded from her mind. Sure, memories of this place had once tormented her, but now, long enough to let all those emotions flow with time, the dizziness she felt now wasn't due to those memories.

"Something feels off."

The moment she entered Geumho Station, a strange hallucination invaded Heewon's mind. The image of a blond man, faintly white, floated before her eyes.

Heewon knew who he was. But why was his face popping up now?

Wukong, watching Heewon, said.

"The Youngest is nearby."

"Wait—"

Wukong ignored Heewon's words and started running. As he entered the station platform, a crowd of people awaited him.

Cameras were waiting everywhere. Staff members were bustling about.

"Uh, uh, you can't come in!"

Someone approached and stopped Wukong.

"We're filming! Please step back!"

"Filming?"

"Yes. We're filming a movie."

Why now, here? A strange feeling came over him.

"The Youngest is in here."

As Wukong recklessly entered the scene, a staff member, lost in thought, shouted.

"Stop that guy!"

The staff rushed to stop Wukong. But Wukong swiftly dodged them all and sniffed again. The Youngest's scent lingered.

「He's inside the tunnel.」

Wukong frowned as he checked the empty underpass. It was a subway track. They were filming, but how could they possibly stop the subway for that reason?

Tsutsutsu.

Without hesitation, Wukong jumped down onto the tracks.

"What the heck, how did this guy get in?"

Even inside the tunnel, filming continued. People who looked like extras were strewn throughout the tunnel. They were covered in blood. Their makeup was so convincing that some of them looked like their limbs had been torn apart.

"Youngest!"

Walking through the eerie set, Wukong searched for the Youngest.

"Where are you! Youngest!"

He knew he wouldn't come out if he called him. That's just the kind of guy the Youngest is.

「A guy who demands another hair if you give him one.」

"Youngest!"

「A guy who hates the constellations and refuses to let any star stand behind him.」

"Kim Dokja!"

「A lonely guy.」

"Dokja! I'm here!"

Every time he saw his back, he wanted to be his guardian angel. He wanted to light his path with starlight. He wanted to let him know what lay ahead, what obstacles he had to avoid.

"Block him!"

A crowd of people burst out of nowhere, blocking his path. With nowhere left to run in the narrow tunnel, Wukong had no choice but to use his strength.

"Get out of the way."

A thud, a crushing sound echoed from his swinging fist. A terrified scream. The camera shutter sounded. Wukong continued to run through the tunnel, knocking down every man who charged at him. Wukong gradually lost track of who was a character in a movie and who was an outsider. It was as if he couldn't tell how much of this world was fiction and how much was fact.

Running along that dark road, Wukong imagined the Geumho Station tunnel where Kim Dokja would have run.

Kim Dokja, who had taken down gophers alongside his companions. Kim Dokja, who had risked his life to execute the scenario. Kim Dokja, who had fought to save his companions and received the support of the constellations. Kim Dokja, who had coughed up blood and spilled stories, yet never gave up.

"Youngest."

His breath caught in his throat. As he raced through the tunnel in his human form, Wukong began to understand Kim Dokja's feelings.

And the closer he got to that feeling, the more he realized.

Even though he had been watching Kim Dokja for so long, he still didn't quite know who Kim Dokja was.

「Isn't it possible that all stars are blinded by their own light, unable to see clearly what they're reflecting?」

The Youngest's scent was growing stronger. Across the pitch-black tunnel, he saw someone standing.

"That's incredible. I really didn't think you'd come this far."

A face he recognized appeared in the pale darkness.

Wukong gasped, glaring at the man before asking,

"What are you?"

"You already knew, didn't you?"

He was an interviewer for a security firm.

He'd thought something was off from the moment he first saw him. But since the Youngest was such a strange person, he'd been complacent, assuming such a person could exist in his imagination.

But now he saw it wasn't. All his senses were ringing with a strong alarm.

The man before him—

「It is clearly an existence from outside this 'world'.」

The interviewer shrugged.

"You can't go any further. This isn't your authorized record."

"Where's the Youngest?"

"He wants to go outside this 'world'."

"I can't allow that."

"You have no right to stop him."

"Yes. I'm his older brother."

For a moment, a faint pity flashed across the interviewer's eyes.

"That's why you couldn't be his 'sponsor'. You still have no idea what he's thinking."

"Shut up. If you don't hand over the Youngest immediately—"

"Oldest Liberator."

A crash, like a large building collapsing somewhere, was heard. People screamed from afar. A subway horn honked. An ominous feeling filled him.

"How long do you think you can keep him trapped in your 'prison'?"

Someone was trying to create a 'scenario' in this world.

---

Hyunsung draped his arm over Heewon's shoulder, his eyes scanning the area with mounting urgency. A sharp, metallic stench assaulted his nose. The sounds of a panicked evacuation filled the air. There were sudden, jagged screams. How long had it been since he last witnessed a scene of such primal chaos?

Hyunsung, his muscles coiling with an instinctive tension, called out to Heewon.

"Heewon-ssi."

To make matters worse, Heewon’s state was visibly deteriorating. Normally, a veteran like her wouldn't be incapacitated by simple dizziness.

Tsutsutsu.

Hyunsung felt the resonance of a story vibrating through Heewon’s form. A faint spark of probability crackled within that narrative. But that was a logical impossibility. No scenarios existed in this worldline. There was no probability here, no lingering aftershocks.

「A long time ago, Kim Dokja had explained this phenomenon to me.」

Hyunsung’s pupils dilated, shimmering with a violent ripple. It felt as if a circuit, long ago severed, was being forcibly reconnected. Startled, Hyunsung tightened his grip on Heewon’s shoulder once more.

"Heewon-ssi?"

Heewon lifted her head and brushed Hyunsung’s hand away with a sharp motion.

"Ah."

Hyunsung met her gaze and found himself frozen in his tracks.

The Heewon standing before him was undeniably the woman he knew. She was the longtime comrade who had bled beside him through countless scenarios. She was the warrior who swung her sword at his back, acting as the group’s ultimate shield. She was the person he vowed to protect above all others.

But why? The presence radiating from her now felt like that of a complete stranger.

Another explosion thundered from deep within Geumho Station, where Wukong had disappeared.

"Dokja-ssi."

Heewon whispered Kim Dokja’s name and sprinted toward the station entrance. Hyunsung, shaking off his stupor, scrambled to chase after her.

---

【Did he not claim he would refuse to record this?】

【Strictly speaking, this does not qualify as a 'record' in the traditional sense.】

---

Wukong inhaled slowly, surveying his surroundings.

「The 'scenario' has not yet commenced.」

That indicated the youngest had not yet truly manifested a desire for that 'world'.

"You have certainly done an admirable job of keeping him concealed."

The interviewer, maintaining his usual pace, continued to ramble before him.

"I invested a significant amount of effort into locating him. The existence of a world that escapes even the eyes of a 'Recorder' is truly a feat."

"…"

"But even your efforts cannot obstruct the arrival of a predestined [Fate]."

Fate. Hearing that word for the first time in an eternity, Wukong mused: So, there truly is such a thing as destiny.

"There is."

"Indeed. This entire world is currently being documented, yet—"

"It has already been recorded. You truly seem to relish these tedious monologues."

Wukong stuck his pinky into his ear, his expression one of pure boredom. The interviewer's brow furrowed as he spoke.

"This is hardly the time for such nonchalance. I am not the only entity that has discovered this reality."

"So?"

"It means your era of hiding him has reached its conclusion. Now, countless deities will descend upon this worldline to claim Kim Dokja."

"The Youngest? Why?"

"Because the entire universe hungers to complete 'One Perfect Dream'."

Wukong faltered. One Perfect Dream.

Eons ago, there was a time when Wukong, too, harbored such a dream. It was a story from an age when he craved ■■ more than anyone else in existence.

"You, too, should awaken from your fantasies. You no longer need to spend your life guarding an incomplete shard of a god."

"…"

"King of the Stone Monkeys, why do you remain shackled to the past? Does the sight of him merely serve as a reminder of your history? Are you simply projecting everything you failed to protect onto him?"

The interviewer took a step forward, spreading his arms wide.

"I invite you to join me. Cease being a prisoner of that golden headband. Set the imprisoned fragment of the deity free."

"…"

"I recognize that there is a purpose to living within this flawed delusion. But is this world not truly the one you once envisioned? Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal, you are no longer a 'prisoner of the long-lost world'. Why have you confined yourself to this reality with the stories you once loved? It is unnecessary. The dreams you sought can be preserved in an eternal record. If you assist me—"

"I recall seeing someone who spoke exactly like you at the Gourmet Association."

Cracking his neck, Wukong abruptly cut the interviewer off.

"You’re such a pathetic brat that it took me a moment to place the face."

The interviewer’s expression hardened subtly. Wukong continued, his tone thick with mockery.

"You’re still just as talkative as ever, Asmodeus."

A faint spark crackled through the interviewer's body as his true name was unveiled.

"I was unaware that you, a mere Narrative-grade constellation, would ascend to the rank of 'Recorder'. Was this the path you chose to complete your ■■?"

After a momentary pause, Asmodeus chuckled. Then, with a heavy sigh, he posed a question.

"How did you identify me? You are currently unable to wield the power of stories."

"There are very few people who possess a tongue as long as our Youngest's."

"That is a truly loathsome compliment."

"So, what is your specific objective? Are you planning to abduct our Youngest to finalize your desired record, or something of that nature?"

"Judging by your tone, I suspect you have no intention of cooperating peacefully."

"Would you?"

"Then there is no further point in debate."

At Asmodeus's signal, men in black suits materialized behind him.

"Foolish Monkey King, this world is not the <Star Stream>."

The men lunged forward, using their weight to overpower Wukong. Crushed beneath their collective mass, Wukong's head was slammed into the dirt.

A world where neither stories nor skills could be invoked. Even for Wukong, it was a physical impossibility to shake off four men twice his size.

Yet, while pinned to the ground, Wukong broke into a fit of laughter.

"What do you find so amusing?"

"Because it's actually funny."

"Understand the situation. This is who you are now. You've discarded your dignity only to struggle within a meager mortal shell. That is the current reality of the once-proud and powerful Heavenly King."

Asmodeus approached slowly, as if taunting the Monkey King trapped beneath the Five Elements Mountain. He bowed low before the pinned Wukong and whispered.

"I am offering you one final opportunity. Cooperate with me."

"You keep babbling about cooperation…"

Wukong, still pressed against the ground, slowly tilted his head up.

"It seems you've failed to convince our Youngest."

"…"

"Well, if you had succeeded, a snake like you wouldn't be here begging me for help."

"…"

"What did the Youngest tell you? He said he wouldn't go anywhere without me, didn't he?"

Asmodeus stared at Wukong with hollow eyes for a long moment before standing. He gazed into the shadows of the damp underground tunnel.

"This location is a fitting site for the tomb of a Fallen Monkey King."

A young man waiting in the rear unsheathed a short blade. Asmodeus nodded.

The young man, receiving the command, prepared to plunge the knife into Wukong's neck when...

"You have intruded into this world."

Wukong's laughter vanished.

"Do you truly believe you are the first?"

"What—"

Wukong inhaled sharply. He drew in more and more air. He continued to breathe as if attempting to drain the entire atmosphere, and the oxygen in the tunnel suddenly felt dangerously thin. Asmodeus, startled, recoiled and shouted.

"Kill him! Now!"

But the moment the young man lunged with the knife, Wukong's left arm slipped from its restraints. His fist shot out with surgical precision, swerving past the blade's arc to shatter the young man's jaw. The man's body crumpled and hit the floor with a dull thud.

"What…?"

Asmodeus scowled.

This shouldn't be possible. The men he had employed were elite recruits, specifically selected from high-end security agencies.

But Wukong, as if dismantling a simple toy, began to unbind the other men by precisely folding their joints.

"What— what is this—"

"Kwaaaaak! My arm!"

Asmodeus, remaining poised, signaled the rest.

"Everyone, attack."

Immediately, the remaining men charged as one. Asmodeus had brought reinforcements just for such an occasion.

Armed with stun guns and segmented staffs, they surrounded Wukong from every angle. For Wukong, trapped in a normal body, it was an insurmountable obstacle.

But Wukong, without a hint of stress, began to swing his fists with a dry efficiency.

Thud, crunch!

The sounds of impact and breaking bone echoed in rapid succession. It was a display of dull, brutal violence.

A minute later, only one man remained standing in the shadows of the tunnel.

"Is that the end of it?"

In the darkness, Wukong's eyes flared with a blazing golden light.

Asmodeus shook his head in pure disbelief.

"How... in a worldline devoid of a system—"

"Have you forgotten? I was always strong, system or not."

Only then did Asmodeus truly grasp the nature of the man before him.

「He is the Great Heavenly King. The legendary Monkey King who stood alone against the <Emperor>.」

Wukong's shadow stretched across Asmodeus as he strode forward.

"I told you, I'm confident in a fight."

Asmodeus finally realized he was in danger and turned to flee, but Wukong was instantly upon him. Asmodeus's knees and arms buckled as the force of the blow connected.

"Ugh."

Even Asmodeus couldn't suppress a groan of agony beneath the swift, savage strike.

Wukong leaned in.

"Where is the Youngest?"

Despite the blinding pain, Asmodeus let out a twisted smile.

"Even so, you cannot stop what is coming."

"Hmm, is that so? You think you haven't been hit enough?"

"Because he is currently summoning every version of Kim Dokja from the 'Snowfield'."

At the mention of the snowfield, Wukong's expression froze for a heartbeat.

Asmodeus continued.

"I asked you what security meant. I am truly curious. Just how far can you protect him with that frail body…"

With those final words, Asmodeus collapsed forward.

Wukong frowned, muttering to himself.

"What is wrong with you, you punk?"

A faint tremor vibrated through the soles of his feet. Then, a familiar scent reached his nostrils. Wukong's head snapped up.

"Youngest."

Wukong sprinted toward the source of the scent. He covered dozens of meters through the tunnel. There he was—the Youngest, unconscious and lashed to the empty railroad tracks.

"Youngest! Are you okay? I'm here! Your eldest brother is here!"

Kim Dokja did not respond.

"Hahaha, hahahahahaha—!"

Asmodeus's laughter echoed from the darkness. The vibrations in the ground were intensifying by the second.

Gripped by a dark premonition, Wukong frantically tore at the knots binding Kim Dokja.

But the rope was tied with such complexity that the knot refused to yield.

Asmodeus's laughter abruptly cut off. The sound of tearing metal and structural destruction rose. A blinding light flooded the tunnel.

「It was the subway.」

A train, a force capable of shredding anything in its path, was hurtling toward them.

The Youngest's body remained still, as if he were part of the tracks themselves. Wukong had no blade to cut the ropes.

The Great Sage, Heaven's Equal stood his ground.

「Can I do it?」

Watching the approaching subway, Wukong took another deep breath. His muscles twitched and expanded.

He possessed no power of stories, no stigma, and no skills. He only had a body slightly more robust than a commoner's. Could that possibly be enough to halt a mass of speeding steel? Before he could think, the subway was upon them. Resolved, Wukong planted his feet. He wouldn't know the limit until he pushed it. If he could just shield the Youngest—

「There is no way that will work.」

He thought he was hallucinating. Then, he felt a powerful shove. The world spun as he was thrown toward the edge of the tunnel wall. A blood-stained subway train roared past his eyes.

He blinked, disoriented, as a figure stood beside him, gasping for air.

"Youngest?"

The Youngest had regained consciousness. Somehow, Kim Dokja had broken free from the tracks and managed to push him to safety.

Wukong, his heart hammering in his chest, checked the Youngest for injuries.

But the moment he met the Youngest's eyes, he knew something was fundamentally wrong.

"You…"

He had observed Kim Dokja longer than anyone, since the very dawn of the scenarios. He was certain. The body before him belonged to the Youngest.

But,

"Who are you?"

The consciousness inhabiting the Youngest’s body was not the 'Youngest' he knew.

988 Episode 59 What Kind of Ending (9)

His head was spinning.

「It's already been eight years since I entered this world.」

Throughout those eight years, Wukong had repeated the same routines every single day. He ate what the youngest ate and wore what the youngest wore. Immersed in this human existence, Wukong wondered what kind of world the youngest had truly dreamed of.

「Is this the 'ordinary life' the youngest sought?」

Wukong couldn't be certain. He had never experienced this kind of 'ordinary life' to begin with.

To him, existence had always been a bloody battlefield—a struggle between constellations vying for legends, a coliseum of stars observing prized incarnations.

「"But wasn't I twenty-eight last year?"」

A mere eight years. To the stars, it was but a fleeting moment. To Wukong, who had been entombed beneath the Five Elements Mountain for centuries, it was a blink of an eye. Yet, in those eight years, Wukong had learned and mastered a great deal.

「"But wouldn't it be nice to stay twenty-eight?"」

Now, Wukong could think with a human heart. He understood human desires and had learned to live like one of them.

He learned these lessons from Hyunsung and Heewon: the necessity of earning a living, the respect for others' property, and the profound value of sharing time with someone.

As he savored every moment of his mortal life, Wukong finally felt he had moved a step closer to the youngest's life. But...

「"What are you talking about? I can't stay twenty-eight forever. The stories I love will just stay there."」

Perhaps the youngest truly wanted to escape this world he had protected for so long.

"I'm asking. Who are you?"

The being who had occupied the youngest's body did not respond.

He feared it might be Asmodeus or some other interloper, but he sensed no such malice within the youngest's body.

He detected a faint magical energy, but it bore no resemblance to the demon kings he knew. It was more like the lingering scent of an old book.

A fragrance that brushed against the deep recesses of his mind, like a long-forgotten memory box.

Wukong frowned instinctively and asked, "Are you possessed?"

Kim Dokja, his shoulders hunched weakly, offered no answer.

"Tell me. How did you break through the prison? How did you take over the youngest's body?"

「There can be no 'possessor' capable of possessing the youngest.」

The youngest was the very foundation of this world; its essence was rooted in his imagination.

To usurp the youngest's body, one would need an imagination surpassing even his own, or be a being whose soul was fundamentally identical.

"If you don't answer."

Wukong seized Kim Dokja by the collar, his voice burning with intensity.

"I'll kill you."

A faint, burgeoning murderous aura saturated the surroundings. But Kim Dokja remained silent, his eyes hollow. Watching the youngest, Wukong's anger slowly mounted.

「It was a world we had worked so hard to protect.」

He did not know who this man was. But if the youngest had been harmed in some unknown way, or if that was why this world was being threatened...

「It was the only worldline where the youngest's dream could come true.」

Wukong, his eyes narrowed, gripped Kim Dokja by the collar and raised his other hand.

"That's enough."

A cold blade brushed the back of Wukong's neck. Wukong knew the bite of that steel well.

"Put Dokja-ssi down."

Wukong scowled and turned his head.

"What the hell are you?"

It was the Heewon he knew—the family who had taught him how to live as a human for the past eight years.

That same family was currently pointing a knife at him.

"If you don't release him by the count of three, I'll cut you. One."

It was Heewon's voice and Heewon's face. But the moment he sensed the shimmering stories within those eyes, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, realized.

This wasn't Heewon.

"Look at this."

Wukong's muscles rippled with irritation.

"This is starting to piss me off. What the hell are you people?"

From the youngest to Heewon. As unprecedented events unfolded in rapid succession, Wukong's patience finally reached its limit.

From afar, Hyunsung shouted, "No! You must not fight!"

Wukong and Heewon's eyes locked, and in the next heartbeat, their hands moved. Sharp steel met clenched fists.

Whoosh.

A soft vibration echoed. It was a familiar resonance, but it stopped Wukong dead in his tracks.

Because it was a vibration that should have never occurred.

In an instant, Wukong put distance between himself and the youngest, reaching into his clothes to pull out his phone.

「The youngest's smartphone was ringing.」

It shouldn't have been possible. The phone was always kept on 'airplane mode'.

—Caller ID blocked.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal, answered. Soon, a voice came through the line.

A sensation of peace and comfort. When I opened my eyes, I was lying in a cozy bed. I couldn't remember how long it had been since my last awakening. Staring up at the impossibly white ceiling, I blinked in a daze.

I wondered if everything had been a dream. But I knew that couldn't be true.

「"I asked, who are you?"」

A voice suddenly surfaced in my mind, and memories of the past came crashing back like a storm.

「I jumped into the 'Missing Bush' with Jung Heewon to find Dansu ahjussi.」

And then I arrived in the worldline where the 'Third Kim Dokja' resided. My final memory was of regaining consciousness in this body and shoving the Great Sage away from the subway tracks.

"Are you awake?"

The door creaked open, and a tall, blond man appeared.

"Ah."

I unconsciously rubbed my eyes, overcome by a sense of unreality.

「Great Sage Heaven's Equal, Sun Wukong, was there.」

The constellation that had integrated all of his stories to become the 'Oldest Liberator'.

One of the four veterans of the early channel, who had once bestowed the epithet 'Prisoner of the Golden Headband' upon Kim Dokja.

「These aren't my feelings.」

I knew it. This was my first time seeing the Great Sage in person. Nevertheless, a part of my heart throbbed.

「He chose this worldline and has always protected Kim Dokja.」

As a fragment of Kim Dokja, I could understand: how much the third Kim Dokja relied on and adored him, and how long he had been a member of this family.

「Kim Dokja wasn't an only child in this world.」

Amidst a whirlwind of longing, envy, and an inexplicable sense of fulfillment, I looked at the Great Sage, unsure of what to say.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal, watched me and scratched his cheek with an embarrassed expression.

"You're the 'youngest' from another world!"

"Oh, yes. Let me introduce myself first. I—"

I was momentarily speechless. Who should I claim to be?

The Great Sage chuckled at my confusion.

"Kim Dokja, of course."

"Yes."

That's right. I am 'Kim Dokja' now. But I was not the Kim Dokja the Great Sage knew. Oddly enough, that fact stung a corner of my heart.

"I'm sorry. There was a misunderstanding. I heard the general story from this guy."

The Great Sage was gripping a smartphone. The Great Sage and a smartphone? It seemed like an odd combination, but looking closer, I saw a name on the screen.

「Demon King of Salvation.」

It seemed the 'Demon King of Salvation' had called while I was asleep.

"Dokja-ssi! Are you awake?"

A thud sounded from behind the door, and Jung Heewon's face peeked through. She shoved the Great Sage aside, entered the room, and seized my hand.

"Are you hurt? What the hell is this, really?"

I stared at Jung Heewon quietly. The scars on her face and her attire were strangely different from the Heewon I knew in the 41st round.

But the story I felt vibrating inside her was definitely the 'Mad Sword Emperor' I knew.

"Heewon-ssi, did you really enter that body?"

"Yes, when I woke up, this was the state I was in."

Jung Heewon clenched and unclenched her fists repeatedly, her expression one of disbelief.

"She really is a strong body. Unbelievably so."

I suppose so. Jung Heewon in the 1,864th round was the pinnacle of her potential.

"It's a shame I can't use stories or her skills. I'd like to try it out."

I smiled bitterly at her words.

The moment I possessed this worldline, I immediately realized what kind of place it was.

In this world, the power of the 'System' cannot be invoked.

Not stories, not stigma, not skills. The unique powers allowed by the <Star Stream> were strictly controlled here, just like the 'reality' we once knew.

"It's fortunate that we can't use them."

"Huh? Why?"

"Because if that were possible, we would be in real danger."

I vaguely recalled the fight between Asmodeus and the Great Sage just before I passed out.

Even in this world with its limited systems, Asmodeus could plot such a bold scheme. If the Great Sage's body hadn't been abnormally strong, I would have been dragged away without a fight.

"There are others besides us who know the coordinates of this worldline."

I recalled the information I'd heard from the Recorder of Fear, Hermit, in the 'Records Archives'.

「Emperor. Monkey. Sword and shield.」

He had provided those keywords regarding the worldline related to the Third Kim Dokja. His keywords likely referred to this world.

The Emperor and the monkey represented the Great Sage Heaven's Equal. The sword and shield referred to Heewon and Hyunsung.

Hermit had already implied that the coordinates of this place were known to a select few. That's right—

"I know that."

The Great Sage, who had been listening to my story, nodded.

"You're not the first to come here."

"Not the first time."

I wanted to ask if he knew anyone else who had visited, but my question remained unanswered. Another man appeared at the doorway, a puff of steam rising from his face.

"Are you awake?"

A polite yet profound voice.

I got goosebumps again.

「Lee Hyunsung, the Steel Sword Emperor.」

Lee Hyunsung, the man I'd always admired from <Kim Dokja Company>, was right there.

He glanced at Jung Heewon, who was holding my hand with a somewhat dark expression, and placed a steaming bowl before me.

"I made some porridge."

"Oh, thank you."

"Eat it while it's still warm."

I hesitantly picked up my spoon. Come to think of it, I was quite hungry.

"Well... excuse me."

I took a small sip.

The hot rice melted in my mouth. It was delicious and perfectly seasoned porridge. It wasn't as exquisite as Yoo Joonghyuk's cooking, but it was a delicate dish that spoke of the chef's dedication.

The three of them watched me silently for a while as I ate. The Great Sage looked impressed, and Jung Heewon seemed relieved. Lee Hyunsung's face was strangely somber, yet his eyes shone with joy.

After I finished the bowl, Lee Hyunsung finally spoke.

"I'd like to ask you a few questions."

"Yes."

"Are you from the worldline chosen by the other comrades?"

As expected, Hyunsung seemed to have already guessed my origin.

I nodded and answered.

"Yes."

"I see."

Lee Hyunsung asked again, his expression grave.

"Are they... well?"

For a moment, I didn't know how to respond. It seemed Hyunsung knew nothing of the group's fate in other worlds. Given the limited system here, this wasn't surprising.

"I don't know either. I've only seen them a few times."

"Is that so?"

Hyunsung's face darkened further. Seeing him like that was heartbreaking, and I wanted to say something—to write a single line of comfort, even if it was a lie.

I hesitated for a moment before speaking.

"But those people."

I didn't know what had happened to the members of <Kim Dokja Company> in the eight years I was gone. But even without knowing, there were things I could say.

"They haven't given up."

That's something I knew without needing to ask.

"They still haven't given up on anything."

Lee Hyunsung slowly raised his head, his eyes strangely bloodshot.

He licked his lips several times, as if wanting to ask something else. But even with his large frame, he seemed to find the question difficult to voice.

After biting his lip for a long time, Hyunsung finally opened his mouth, seemingly determined.

Tsutsutsu.

With a faint spark, Jung Heewon, who had been sitting beside him, collapsed onto the bed.

"Heewon-ssi!"

Lee Hyunsung and I checked her pulse simultaneously. Her eyelids were trembling unsteadily. The Great Sage approached and quickly examined her complexion.

"It's a side effect of the 'broken film theory'."

I quickly understood the situation. Right now, the Jung Heewon from the 41st and 1,864th rounds were coexisting in that body.

"This can't last long."

When two essentially identical souls coexist in a single body, their memory films become hopelessly entangled.

"Both souls have too strong an ego. If this continues, the body will not be able to withstand the collision and will collapse."

If one soul could naturally merge with the other, it might be different, but in this situation, that wasn't happening.

Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal sighed deeply, looked at Jung Heewon, then back at me, and said in a grave voice,

"You must leave this world immediately."

---

I understood the Great Sage’s intent. Jung Heewon and I shouldn't be in this world. Regardless of our intentions, we were uninvited guests, and our presence was the very catalyst for these anomalies.

"That can't be."

Even so, I couldn't leave. There was still someone I had to find here.

"If you stay, the Youngest will be in danger."

The Great Sage’s expression hardened, his voice dropping into a firm, low register.

"Every 'Kim Dokja' in the universe is currently in danger."

"..."

"You already know. Asmodeus has already infiltrated. The others could manifest at any moment."

"What exactly is their goal?"

"They are likely trying to recreate the 'Oldest Dream.' More accurately, an 'Oldest Dream' that suits their own tastes."

Whether they were 'Recorders' like Asmodeus or Myth-grade Constellations, their objective was clear: to collect the [Kim Dokja Fragments]. They intended to harness the power of the 'Oldest Dream' to reorganize the to their liking.

"We cannot allow them to complete even a single Kim Dokja."

「 "Because he is calling all the Kim Dokjas from the 'Snowfield'." 」

If Asmodeus's words were true, it was highly likely that my brother had already interfered with this worldline. Despite the warning, the Great Sage continued to stare me down with a blunt, piercing gaze.

"So, what is your purpose? To stop them?"

"Yes."

"How?"

"That—"

"Are you also trying to collect the [Kim Dokja Fragments]?"

The Great Sage's eyes shone with a cold, golden light. I nodded, offering no denial.

"I am."

"Then how are you any different from them?"

Jung Heewon frowned at the Great Sage's accusation, her hand twitching toward her hilt, while Lee Hyunsung's eyes widened in surprise.

"I have no intention of becoming 'the only Kim Dokja'."

"You intend to collect the fragments, yet you don't want to become the 'One'?"

"Yes. In a way, I am similar to you."

"Similar to me? What do you mean by that?"

"Just because you became the 'Oldest Liberator'..."

I recalled the Great Sage's Fables. I remembered the various 'names' he had earned throughout the Journey to the West.

"The King of Mihu."

Once, he was the Stone Monkey King of Huaguo Mountain.

"The Bimawen."

He was once the humble stablekeeper of the Heavenly Realm.

"The Victorious Fighting Buddha."

He was the monk who escorted Xuanzang to the Western Heavens.

"And just as those names never truly disappear from the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal..."

He was a Constellation who had witnessed the story of an Incarnation to its very end.

「All those names were him.」

Even now, those stories—each possessing its own ego—must be flowing within the Great Sage. Just as the small Kim Dokjas gathered behind the [Fourth Wall] to watch the story, his "brothers" were likely watching this moment from within him.

"The reason I collect the fragments is not to become a single, absolute Kim Dokja."

I didn't expect to persuade him with shallow words. He knew 'Kim Dokja', but he didn't know me. To him, I was merely an intruder who had hijacked the body of his 'Youngest'. Still, I had to speak. It was the only tool I had left.

"I see. I understand."

After a moment of silent reflection, the Great Sage finally replied.

"You didn't come here to harm the Youngest. Is that what you're saying?"

He didn't press further or erupt in anger. Sensing the tide turning in my favor, I nodded quickly.

"That’s right."

"To prove that, you’ll first have to vacate the Youngest's body."

"That’s... difficult."

"Why?"

"Because without this vessel, I have no way to manifest in this world."

Truthfully, I hadn't chosen to inhabit this body either. It would be more accurate to say this body had called me.

"And more importantly... I can't sense the soul of the 'Kim Dokja' that originally resided in this body."

The Great Sage's expression shifted again. He must have vaguely sensed it too.

「 I possessed the 'Third Kim Dokja' through the [Disconnected Film Theory]. 」

My situation was similar to Jung Heewon's. However, unlike her, I wasn't suffering from the aftermath of Probability. This was because the 'Third Kim Dokja' wasn't fighting me for control. I was currently inhabiting an empty shell.

The Great Sage muttered, biting his lip.

"Damn it. I suspected as much."

The situation was clear.

「 Just before I took over this body, someone stole the soul of the 'Third Kim Dokja'. 」

I didn't know how they had managed it. Perhaps Asmodeus, or whoever gave the 'Book' to the Third, had orchestrated the soul's disappearance.

Buzz. Buzz.

Suddenly, my smartphone vibrated. It wasn't just mine. Jung Heewon, Lee Hyunsung, and the Great Sage all felt their phones buzz simultaneously.

I checked the message.

[Terror Alert]

Lee Hyunsung's face went pale as he scrolled through his screen.

"You... you need to see this."

We crowded around Lee Hyunsung's phone.

—Name: Kim Wukong.

The Great Sage’s ID photo was displayed in large print. Beneath it were two lines:

—Status: Terrorist.

—Occupation: Unemployed, Age: Unknown.

The Great Sage’s brow furrowed.

"These bastards...?"

The alerts kept coming. A closer look revealed that it wasn't just him; Lee Hyunsung and Jung Heewon had also been added to the terrorist watchlist under the same pretext.

"They're looking for the Youngest."

A heavy thump echoed from outside the door. We didn't need to open it to know who was there.

"They've arrived."

Lee Hyunsung, having clearly simulated this scenario a thousand times, began stacking furniture against the door.

"Please, go through the veranda. Take the escape chute and go straight down. Wukong-ssi will protect you."

"What about you, Hyunsung-ssi?"

"I’ll buy as much time as I can here."

I tried to protest, to tell him I couldn't leave him behind, but the Great Sage was already dragging me toward the balcony.

"It’s fine. He’s sturdier than I am."

The Great Sage checked the descent device, then simply leaped over the railing without even bothering with a harness. He looked back at Jung Heewon and nodded.

"I’ll clear the path below. You bring the Youngest."

"Wait! Use the equipment!"

"I don't know how to use that junk."

The Great Sage began sliding down the exterior wall of the building. His grip strength was terrifying; he maintained a perfectly constant speed as he descended. He was definitely beyond human standards. Then again, he was a monkey.

Jung Heewon strapped into the harness and opened her arms toward me.

"Let’s go, Dokja-ssi."

"Wait a moment."

When I hesitated, she tilted her head. "Why? What is it?"

I looked down. We were well over ten stories high. I turned to her with a very serious expression.

"On second thought, I think there might be another way."

"Another way?"

"Is it really necessary to flee like this? Maybe the people outside aren't enemies. If I just try to talk to them—"

Jung Heewon stared at me blankly before asking, "You’re not... afraid of heights, are you?"

"It’s not that."

"Get over here, quickly."

"Wait! You haven't forgotten there's no System here, right? If the cable snaps—"

Jung Heewon forcibly grabbed me and hooked us both to the line.

"Are we really doing this? This isn't rated for two people—!"

"We’re out of time. And..."

The descent began.

"It’s my first time using this thing, too."

I screamed internally as we plummeted. Below the apartment complex, men in black suits were already pointing toward the sky.

"There they are!"

"Whoa—!"

Before they could react, they were sent flying, struck in the back of the head by the Great Sage. But they were just the beginning. Black sedans were swarming the area, and more men in suits were closing in from every direction.

No matter how strong the Great Sage was, he couldn't fight an entire army without his divinity.

He watched them silently, then pulled a pipe from his pocket.

"You said you were looking for something, right?" he asked, blowing a puff of smoke.

"I'll help you for now."

"Are you sure?"

"But I'm not giving up the Youngest. My contract says I have to get him back."

I thought for a second and nodded. "Understood."

"Good. Contract established."

With those words, the Great Sage threw his pipe to the ground. A faint explosion followed, and thick, acrid smoke swallowed the area.

"What is this?!"

"Don't panic! It's just a smokescreen!"

"Gwaaaaakh!"

As expected, it wasn't just tobacco. The sound of rapid-fire strikes echoed through the fog. A moment later, a pitch-black sedan tore through the smoke and screeched to a halt. The back door flew open.

"Get in! Move!"

Jung Heewon and I scrambled inside. I never thought the day would come where I'd be in a getaway car driven by the Great Sage, Heaven's Equal.

"Thank you for the help."

"We’re helping each other."

Helping each other. Those words felt strangely heavy.

"Can you really trust me?" I asked.

I knew him because of the Ways of Survival, but to him, I was a total stranger. Yet he was risking everything for me.

"I don't know exactly who you are, but..." The Great Sage scratched his cheek, looking a bit embarrassed. "I quite like your hair."

Startled, I caught my reflection in the window. At some point, my hair had turned a shimmering golden color. It was likely the influence of Cheon Inho’s Fable.

I suppose that guy is useful for something after all.

We sped away from the apartment, leaving the confused suits behind in the smoke. As the building receded into the distance, a sudden pang of sadness hit me. Kim Dokja and these three had likely lived in that home for a long time.

"If you bring the real Kim Dokja back... will you go back to living there?"

"Probably."

"It's dangerous now."

"Is there anywhere in this world that isn't?"

I was left speechless. Where in this universe could anyone truly be 'safe'?

"No matter what, I will protect this world to the end," the Constellation who had illuminated this world alone declared. "Because this world is the 'home' the Youngest wanted to live in."

This world was the 'Large House' Kim Dokja had built for his companions. Perhaps he had planned to spend the rest of his eternity here with them.

I stared at the desolate landscape whipping past the window. "It’s a bit too big to be called a 'home'."

We drove through empty, ruined streets. The black sedans would be on our tail soon. Whoever was pulling the strings—Asmodeus or a Myth-grade Constellation from the Round Table—they were manipulating the government of this world to hunt us down.

"This house is too big for you to protect by yourself."

No matter how strong he was, he had limits in a world without the System. He wouldn't want to admit it, but...

"Yes."

...Wait, what?

"I think we'll need some help this time."

To my surprise, the Great Sage admitted it readily. His voice turned grave.

"Hold on tight."

He slammed the accelerator, and the car roared forward. A thought suddenly occurred to me.

"Wait... do you even have a driver's license?"

"Isn't it basically the same as riding a cloud?"

After thirty minutes of high-speed weaving, we arrived at a massive, abandoned factory. Jung Heewon scanned the perimeter, her hand back on her sword.

"What is this place?"

"A prison."

The Great Sage parked the sedan haphazardly and strode toward the entrance. As he threw the doors open, a heavy tension filled the air, as if a giant beast were breathing in the shadows.

"I'm here!" the Great Sage shouted.

From the darkness came the rattling of heavy chains. The sound grew louder until an old man stepped into the faint light.

"What is it now?"

The old man had a thick iron collar around his neck, connected to a leash.

"Did you come to feed us, you damn monkey?"

He clearly knew the Great Sage. I studied him—he wore a weathered red Marine Corps cap and a tattered slogan T-shirt. He didn't look like a legendary ally.

The Great Sage chuckled. "What, you don't recognize them? You should know who they are."

"Huh?"

"I told you. This isn't their first time in this world."

I looked at the old man again. This time, I saw it—the faint, rhythmic shimmer of Fables emanating from him. Something deep inside me resonated with that power.

Wait. It can't be.

I looked at the Marine Corps cap again. Goosebumps broke out across my arms. It was impossible, and yet...

「 He is one of the three Great Gods of Olympus. 」

As if to confirm my suspicion, the Great Sage spoke.

"I need your help, Poseidon."

990 Episode 59 What Kind of Ending (11)

【Is this really the world the 'Oldest Dream' desired?】

The Spear that Draws the Boundary of the Seas—'Poseidon'.

I knew that name very well. In the main story, he was a myth-grade constellation who had fought against Hades. A star whose mere presence brought countless narrative-grade constellations to their knees.

He even appeared leading the <Olympus> warships during the Fear Realm.

The strange part was this.

"Why on earth is Poseidon here?"

The Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal replied in a casual tone, as if it were nothing unusual.

"I told you before. There are others here besides you."

I had heard that story. But I never expected it to refer to that 'Poseidon'.

"He must've been possessed like you. But he was a bit unlucky."

"The Three Gods of Olympus possessed the Korean Marines?"

"Yes."

"No, shouldn't they have been more careful when choosing their host?"

"Did you possess your host on your own?"

"That's not true, but—"

Even so, if it was Poseidon, shouldn't he have possessed someone like the Chief of Naval Operations at least?

As if he had read my thoughts, Poseidon cleared his throat.

"Even so, he's the incarnation of a general."

Hearing Poseidon speak with such solemn pride made me even less convinced, but I still forced myself to nod and ask.

"What's with that leash?"

"I put it on him. You can tell he's here to cause trouble."

I had a rough idea of what had happened. The Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal must've subdued Poseidon the moment he entered this world and locked him up inside this abandoned factory.

"Damn it! If you're going to lock me up, at least feed me properly!"

"I came here to feed you."

The Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal grumbled and opened the supply closet near the entrance. Frozen groceries spilled out in a heap.

"Oh, did Hyunsung stock this yesterday?"

The Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal whistled as he pulled out a large pile of frozen groceries and loaded them onto the cart beside him.

"Here, eat."

Poseidon stared suspiciously at the groceries. Then he picked up a large chunk of meat and asked,

"What's this?"

"Frozen pork belly. Aren't you lucky today?"

"Frozen... pork belly?"

Eyes widening, Poseidon picked up another package beside it and asked again,

"Then what's this?"

"Frozen chicken. The Marines have PXs, right?"

"Frozen... chicken?"

Does he like it? Is Poseidon seriously enjoying the Frozen series right now?

Jung Heewon whispered to me in disbelief.

"Is that really the 'Poseidon' I know?"

"I think so."

I couldn't believe it either, but the ripples of the story were definitely the same as the 'Poseidon' I remembered.

We held our breath and eavesdropped on the conversation between the great mythological constellations.

"Is the microwave still broken?"

"It breaks sometimes, but it's fine."

"Then take all of this and eat it today. It's a bit past the expiration date, but it'll be fine. You know the difference between the expiration date and the best-before date, right?"

"Of course! Hahaha!"

Everything the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal had brought was so-called 'waste' that was already a week past its expiration date. Apparently Lee Hyunsung had recently brought it.

But... this seemed like far too much for one person to eat.

"But what are you doing today? Is it some kind of special day?"

The Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal shrugged and gently loosened the chain around Poseidon's neck.

"It'll be hard to eat with that on, so I'll unchain you. You can't run away, understand? If you leave the factory with that leash on—"

The moment he said that, Poseidon shoved the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal aside and bolted out of the factory. In the next instant, a powerful electric current shot from Poseidon's leash.

"It'll electrocute you."

The Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal returned, dragging Poseidon back as he writhed on the floor.

I poked Poseidon's charred neck and asked,

"Is this the constellation that's going to help us?"

"Yes."

Jung Heewon, who was beside me poking Poseidon's thigh with the tip of her sword, said,

"No matter how I look at him, he doesn't seem like he'll be much help."

I agreed, but Poseidon was still a myth-grade constellation. Even though he had been overpowered by the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal, Poseidon might still possess some extraordinary ability. He's a Marine, so maybe he's a good shot... He is still a mythical being after all.

Then a sudden realization struck me that something was missing.

"Wait a moment, Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal."

The Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal, who was pushing the cart and dragging Poseidon along, answered without turning around.

"What?"

"You said 'others' earlier, didn't you?"

The Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal had definitely said this.

「There are already others here besides you.」

'Others' who had already arrived.

According to the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal's explanation, 'Poseidon' wasn't the only one who had arrived before us.

"Could it be that he's not the only one?"

At that moment, a piece of information flashed through my mind.

「Something's wrong with the constellations in the higher scenarios.」

Was it when I was talking with the Recorders, or when I was wandering through the 'New Murim District'? I was certain I had heard something like that before.

Even putting the 'Great Destruction Scenario', 'Ragnarok', aside, the constellations had been worried about something.

「What if the 'problem' troubling the constellations was related to this world?」

Instead of answering, the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal simply continued pushing the cart forward. As he reached the inner gate of the factory, a commotion could be heard from somewhere inside. The door creaked open, and the people sitting inside all turned to look at him at the same time.

「Everyone was wearing a leash.」

---

I took a quick tour of the abandoned factory with the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal. Small smart-farm facilities were installed throughout the factory, though they seemed to have stopped operating at some point. I was somewhat impressed by how well-maintained everything was, so I asked.

"Are you farming here?"

"I suppose you could call it that."

Vegetables like lettuce and butterhead lettuce were growing. Fruits like strawberries could also be seen here and there.

The Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal muttered while checking the condition of the vegetables and fruits.

"It's annoying considering the purpose, but I can't just let them starve to death. Honestly, I don't think the Youngest would want that either. And it might be useful someday."

This wasn't some kind of 'Farming Scenario'. It was a group of myth-grade constellations gathered together to run a smart farm. If I went back and told Kim Anna about this, she'd definitely think I was lying again.

"What's that?"

"Oh, that."

A basket filled with wooden sculptures created by skilled hands was piled high. Some looked like Thor, while others looked like the Great Sage, Heaven's Equal.

The Great Sage, Heaven's Equal examined one of the sculptures of himself and spoke.

"Some of them have absolutely no talent for farming. They have to earn money some other way."

"Are you selling these?"

"Do you think they wouldn't sell?"

"No, I think there would be demand…"

"Right? Originally I was planning to have Heewon post them on social media next month and promote them—"

"So you weren't unemployed?"

The Great Sage, Heaven's Equal pursed his lips as if wronged.

"I'm not that guy in black, so how could I be unemployed?"

The Great Sage, Heaven's Equal, once a stable keeper in the heavens, had now become a guard watching over the star prison in this world. Though... was 'guard' really the right word? Come to think of it, I wasn't sure what job title would fit.

"Businessman."

While we were touring the abandoned factory, Poseidon, who had fainted earlier, woke up and was chatting with the other prisoners.

"Look! The monkey gave me this today!"

"Oh—"

"It's frozen pork belly!"

Exclamations erupted from all around. Most of them were elderly men.

Surely they weren't all myth-grade constellations, were they? The Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal, who had been watching them from afar, muttered quietly.

"I don't know if you recognize him, but the guy in the corner is Odin."

Odin? Odin, the 'One-Eyed Father', the ruler of Asgard?

I turned my head toward where the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal was pointing. In front of an old stove in the corner sat an old man wearing small glasses. He was hunched over, completely absorbed in something. Looking closer, he was carving wood.

Were those carvings Odin's work?

"Hey, Odin. It's time to eat."

Poseidon approached him, and Odin raised his head with an annoyed expression.

"Don't call me by that name."

"If I don't call you Odin, what else should I call you?"

"M-My name is Oh Jintaek."

As if struggling to remember, Odin answered with a slurred voice. Poseidon immediately snapped back, "You damned idiot, are you already losing your mind? You're a myth-grade constellation! You're Odin, the king of Asgard!"

Despite Poseidon's shouting, Odin simply shook his head and returned to carving the wood.

Poseidon then pulled out something like a recorder from his pocket and pointed it toward us.

"Don't you see the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal over there? Have you really forgotten everything? He trapped us, myth-grade constellations, in this place!"

Odin turned his empty gaze toward me. He looked at the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal, then at me standing beside him, and slowly shook his head again.

"There's no such thing as the <Star Stream>."

It was truly a strange conversation, unlike anything that had ever happened in the <Star Stream>.

Perhaps noticing my gaze, the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal cleared his throat and added, "Even if they look like that, a myth is still a myth. It's because I'm using this body that I was able to easily subdue them and keep them in check."

I nodded.

Even if they would die soon, a myth was still a myth. If I could just get their help, confronting the threats of this world wouldn't be impossible.

"Let go! You damned bastard!"

"You old man!"

The problem was how to control that chaotic group.

"Old men, stop fighting and gather together!"

At that moment, a middle-aged man suddenly shouted.

"It's time for the story reading!"

At those words, the constellations that had been arguing immediately fell silent.

Poseidon, who had been clutching the frozen pork belly, and Odin, who had been carving beside the stove, both stood up and walked somewhere.

The Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal, Jung Heewon, and I followed them.

The constellations gathered inside a small dining hall on one side of the factory. A middle-aged man standing in the center of the room was speaking energetically.

I asked,

"Who is that?"

"Um, he's the most recently captured one."

Strangely, unlike the other constellations, the middle-aged man wasn't wearing a leash.

"He's not a constellation. He's only here temporarily. I gave him a management role. He doesn't look like he'd try to run away, and he doesn't seem dangerous."

He's not a constellation, yet he came here from another worldline?

"All the constellations here seem to enjoy the stories he tells."

Judging by his expression, the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal also seemed to like the middle-aged man.

After briefly surveying the constellations, the middle-aged man spoke in a gentle voice.

"Yes, constellations. What kind of story would you like to hear today?"

Strangely, the middle-aged man's voice sounded familiar. The constellations gathered in the dining hall raised their hands like children and shouted.

"<Olympus>! I want to hear the myths of <Olympus>!"

"No, tell us a story from <Vedas>!"

"What an old-fashioned choice! As expected, <Asgard> is the best!"

Just as the room grew noisy again, Poseidon suddenly pulled out his recorder and slammed the table, saying,

"I want to hear that story you told me before again!"

At Poseidon's words, the constellations exchanged glances.

"If it's that story…"

"Well, I wouldn't mind hearing it again."

"What? What's it about?"

After calming the noisy room, the middle-aged man spoke again.

"Alright. Then today, I'll tell that story from last time again."

"Since some of you are hearing it for the first time, let's start from the beginning."

"Yes, I understand."

The middle-aged man cleared his throat and looked at the constellations with gentle eyes. Everyone was waiting eagerly for his story.

"This story."

And in the next moment, I realized who the middle-aged man was. His beard was thicker than I remembered, and his face was smeared with soup because he hadn't washed in a while, but it was still unmistakable. Because the story he had just begun—

"It's the story of the day I first met 'Kim Dokja' at Geumho Station."

It was a story I knew very well.

---

"When I first met that guy, I definitely thought he was a villain. He had the look of a villain just by looking at him. You know, I mean. Those squinting eyes, that inscrutable expression, and even his slender build—"

It was the first time I had heard my story told in such detail by someone else.

"Those kinds of bad guys are everywhere!"

Several constellations shouted in indignation at the middle-aged man's tantalizing description. I, too, chuckled and nodded.

"And he was so good with words; whenever he opened his mouth, people would be completely blown away. He truly felt like a born swindler, a natural-born con artist, the ultimate swindler."

However, as I kept listening, I started to feel a little offended. Even a swindler gets annoyed when they keep hearing that they are a swindler.

As if he could read my mind, the middle-aged man continued speaking.

"But my daughter says that guys like that are actually quite popular."

["Right, strangely enough, those kinds of guys are popular! Damn it!"]

["Damn it, <Star Stream>!"]

I continued listening, feeling at a loss as to who to agree with.

"Anyway, he was an extraordinary friend from the start. While everyone else was out of their minds, he alone was fully alert and catching the bugs."

Perhaps it was due to the middle-aged man's masterful storytelling skills. The constellations reacted immediately.

["Bugs! That's a brilliant strategy!"]

["Did that method work in the first scenario?"]

["It must have worked for them to be alive, right?"]

Even the constellations, who had been skeptical at first, were soon engrossed in the story. I, the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal, and Jung Heewon also joined the crowd to listen.

"So I said it out loud. Could you teach me how to catch bugs as well?"

As tension escalated, the constellations reacted.

["So? Did that guy tell you?"]

["Of course not! Humans wouldn't tell you that! They're a race too busy trying to survive on their own!"]

["It's obvious he's trying to monopolize the bugs—"]

The middle-aged man continued his story. The time they joined forces to catch the bugs, taught the people the strategy, and tried to survive the 'First Scenario' together.

["Humans wouldn't do such a thing! Don't lie!"]

Despite the reactions filled with disbelief, the middle-aged man continued speaking with a faint smile.

"But then, that cult leader bastard appeared!"

"A cult leader?"

Listening to the middle-aged man's story, I, too, recalled the events at 'Geumho Station'.

The appearance of the Life Cult Leader Kim Cheolyang. The debate over whether bacteria are living organisms or not. The birth of a cult. Meeting Lee Cheoldu, the boss of the Cheoldu faction. Even the change in the scenario completion conditions just before the scenario ended. The middle-aged man vividly described the battle that had taken place at Geumho Station with only ten minutes remaining.

And finally.

"Surprisingly, that friend protected me until the very end. And then the scenario time limit expired!"

The atmosphere in the dining hall fell solemn.

This was because none of the constellations here failed to understand what it meant for the scenario's time limit to have expired.

"Thanks to that friend, I am alive here right now."

The constellations who had been pointing fingers at the middle-aged man, claiming his story was a lie, as well as those who had been constantly nodding their heads or engaging in heated debates, remained silent for that moment.

Then someone asked.

["So, did that guy, that friend, end up dead?"]

Friend. I remember the person who had called me that for a long time. The person who had called me friend from the very beginning.

He was speaking.

"No, my friend did not die."

At that, the reactions of the constellations exploded.

["How did he survive? Didn't he fail to kill a single living creature?"]

["A watching constellation must have used a Deus Ex Machina for him!"]

["What nonsense! If he had done that in the first scenario—"]

Despite the boisterous reactions of the constellations, the middle-aged man simply smiled silently. He seemed accustomed to this scene.

It was then that Odin, who had remained silent the entire time, raised his hand. As the middle-aged man pointed at him, Odin asked.

["S-so, what is that friend of yours doing right now?"]

At the question, the middle-aged man's expression darkened for the first time. He hesitated for a while, then answered with a faint smile.

"He is alive."

Alive. A voice filled with faint but clear conviction.

"Surely, he must be alive somewhere."

Muttering this as if in prayer, the middle-aged man soon clapped lightly and brought order to the room.

"That is all for today's story. See you again at the next story reading. Now, let's eat!"

The distribution then began. The constellations lined up in turn to receive their rations. Today's menu was spicy stir-fried pork made with frozen pork belly.

"Oh, this is—"

"So this is frozen pork belly!"

I sat among them and ate with them. The vegetables and fruits grown in the smart farm were so fresh that I found myself wanting another bowl without even realizing it.

"Of course it's delicious. After all, Demeter harvested it herself."

As the Great Sage Heaven's Equal muttered, an old woman who had been eating silently in the distance looked over at me with an embarrassed expression.

'Demeter,' the ruler of agriculture and the seasons.

It seemed she, one of the Twelve Olympians, was also here.

With a dazed heart, I swallowed a strawberry and said,

"It's delicious."

A world where myth-grade constellations farm and cook their own meals. Did Kim Dokja really dream of a world like this? If so, what did he want to see at the end of this world?

Just then, a middle-aged man who had just received his meal ration approached our table and sat down.

"Son-ssi, have you arrived?"

"Yes."

"Heewon-ssi, you've arrived too."

The man looked at Jung Heewon beside him, then glanced around again as if searching for someone else.

"Didn't Hyunsung-ssi come with you?"

"Yeah, he's a bit busy."

Busy. Is it really okay to describe it that simply? I thought of Lee Hyunsung, who must be struggling, surrounded by men in black suits right now. Suddenly, I wondered if it was okay for me to be eating something like this here.

"Excuse me."

It was then that Jung Heewon spoke. Ahjussi replied.

"Yes, please go ahead."

"Uh... no."

As if still not entirely certain, Jung Heewon glanced back at me. Then, ahjussi looked at me and asked.

"You seem to be eating well today, Dokja-ssi."

"Yes, because it's delicious."

"But I thought you usually couldn't eat tomatoes..."

Ahjussi looked down at my tray and spoke. I stared at him without answering. We looked other in silence for quite a while.

"Ah."

It was ahjussi who reacted first. His eyes slowly widened. The man, who had been looking at me with eyes full of distrust, opened his mouth in a trembling voice.

"Surely not..."

I had been thinking about reuniting with this person for a long time. What we would talk about when we met again, what expressions we would wear as we greeted each other. But when I actually met him, all the words I had thought of scattered, leaving only a single sentence lingering like a prayer.

"Just as much as you wished for me to be alive, I too wished for you to be alive."

Perhaps that is the story we truly wished for each other.

"Yes. I give."

He put down his chopsticks with trembling hands and looked at me.

He was the first person I met in this world, 'Kim Dokja: Jiyoon's father, and my old friend.'

"It's been a long time, Dansu ahjussi."

Amidst the bustling conversation of the rural constellations, I could see the tablecloth on his table getting wet.

I started eating again. Then, Dansu ahjussi picked up his chopsticks again and ate. We remained silent until we had finished our bowls.

It was a meal with Dansu ahjussi, whom I had met again after eight years.

"What? So, this ahjussi is the person you were looking for?"

After hearing Dansu ahjussi and my story, Great Sage Heaven's Equal stepped aside for a moment, and Jung Heewon also left to watch the constellations.

Dansu ahjussi and I sat in the reception room of the abandoned factory and shared a long conversation.

"Friend, how have you been?"

Holding Dansu ahjussi's hand tightly—which was still warm—I began to speak. Dansu ahjussi listened attentively to my words with the same calm eyes as before.

The time I parted ways with my companions and entered the Fear Realm. The time I left the Fear Realm and entered the 'New Murim District'. The journey from ascending 'Ragnarok' with Jung Heewon to finding the 'Missing Bush' on the stage of the preliminary battle.

"Ah..."

Listening to that journey, Dansu ahjussi sighed several times and shed tears several times. It seemed he had become more tearful since I last saw him.

"It seems you've been through a lot, too."

"Of course. I have been through a lot."

Dansu ahjussi hesitated for a moment before beginning his story. Some of it was a story I, too, knew from Kyung Sein.

The time my comrades scattered after I disappeared. Some left like Ji Eunyu, while others followed the 'New Kim Dokja'.

"If you mean the new Kim Dokja—"

"Yes. It is the 'Kim Dokja' who appeared after my friend disappeared."

Snowfield Kim Dokja. I was hearing the same story once again from Dansu ahjussi that I had also heard from Kyung Sein.

"Did you not stay with that Kim Dokja?"

"I was with him at first, too... but somehow, I ended up operating alone."

Dansu ahjussi continued his story, running his fingers across the table as if choosing his words.

"It wasn't because he was a bad person. He is genuinely worried about this world. He sincerely hoped that everyone could reach the end of the scenarios."

If Dansu ahjussi, of all people, felt that way, it couldn't be a lie.

"Then why did you come out separately?"

"It is a complicated matter to explain. Strangely, he didn't feel like 'Kim Dokja' to me."

Kim Dokja didn't feel like Kim Dokja. Hearing that from Dansu ahjussi, a fragment of Kim Dokja, made it sound like a very philosophical statement.

"It is difficult to explain, but that is the only way I can put it."

"In what way did you feel that way?"

"I felt that way when he left Sein-ssi behind in the 'New Murim District'."

Was that the reason after all?

Perhaps because that story came up, ahjussi, whose complexion had brightened for a moment, asked me.

"Come to think of it, my friend must have met Sein-ssi in the 'New Murim District'."

"Yes."

"Is Sein-ssi doing well?"

I deliberately avoided talking about Kyung Sein. However, seeing his condition, I felt I had to be honest.

I took the time to tell him about Kyung Sein's fate. How she fought to the very end, how she met the end of the story, and even where she is now.

"Ah..."

Ahjussi's eyes welled up with tears again.

"I really don't know why everything turned out this way."

I felt the same way. Nevertheless, the reason I couldn't give up on this story was that it was still going on. It was because that was still our life.

"There is one thing I want to ask you."

I recalled the pre-battle of 'Ragnarok' that ahjussi had participated in.

"I heard that there was a girl who went missing with you back then."

"Ah, that's right."

According to the records, Dansu ahjussi disappeared through the bushes of missing persons while trying to protect a girl to the very end. However, Dansu ahjussi was the only name I knew on the list of missing persons.

Dansu ahjussi slowly opened his mouth.

"That child is Shin Yoosung."

I was momentarily flustered by the unexpected name that came out of Dansu ahjussi's mouth.

"Yoosoung-i?"

That couldn't be right. If that were the case, Shin Yoosung would surely have been on the list of missing persons. But Shin Yoosung was neither on the list of missing persons nor on the list of survivors.

That meant—

"It wasn't the Yoosoung from this worldline."

"Ah."

It was only after hearing ahjussi's words that I realized how the situation had unfolded.

"If that child hadn't helped me, I probably would have died right there."

Shin Yoosung of <Kim Dokja Company>.

She had intervened in 'Ragnarok' in some way and led Dansu ahjussi to the bush of missing persons.

Perhaps because she wasn't a figure from this worldline, Shin Yoosung's information wasn't in the participant records for the 'Prelude'.

While I was happy that <Kim Dokja Company> had been safe until recently, I was also worried at the same time.

"Then, is Yoosoung-i here in this world by any chance?"

But if Shin Yoosung had come here, why hadn't the Great Sage Heaven's Equal and Lee Hyunsung mentioned it?

"Ahjussi."

Dansu ahjussi had clearly said he entered with the girl Shin Yoosung was possessing. But no matter how I looked at it, Dansu ahjussi was here alone right now.

A sudden ominous premonition struck.

"What happened to Yoosoung-i...?"

992 Episode 59 What Kind of Ending (13)

Dansu ahjussi remained silent for a moment. His gaze seemed to recall a distant memory, yearn for it, and feel sorrow.

"I don't know what happened to Miss Yoosoung either."

Dansu ahjussi's expression was filled with guilt as he said this.

"Actually, when I jumped into the bushes, I was barely unconscious."

That was understandable. Dansu ahjussi's team had suffered a near-total annihilation in the preliminary battle.

Even amidst that, Dansu ahjussi would not have given up until the very end to save a single child. He would have searched through the bushes to help even a single survivor escape.

Perhaps Shin Yoosung of <Kim Dokja Company> watched Dansu ahjussi like that, and eventually, unable to bear it any longer, used her power.

"The aftershock of probability swept in, and my body was crumbling."

I recalled how Kim Anna and Kim Namwoon had faced the aftermath of probability.

Perhaps ahjussi had also been in a similar crisis.

"If it weren't for Miss Yoosoung, I would have died there."

Shin Yoosung likely used 'The Beast Lord's Sensitivity' to align with ahjussi, taking on the burden of probability that Dansu ahjussi was supposed to bear.

"But the moment Miss Yoosoung protected me, my body began to be dragged somewhere."

He, too, seemed to understand what kind of phenomenon it was. This was because I, too, had experienced something similar.

"It is difficult to explain, but it felt like a very distant primordial energy was calling me. Unconsciously, I followed that energy and flowed, eventually arriving here."

"Then, Yoosoung-i—"

"We parted ways the moment we entered this place."

I sighed. Even if it was Shin Yoosung of <Kim Dokja Company>, and even though this scenario was in its later stages, I couldn't tell if it was acceptable to abuse such power.

"Have you not met Yoosoung since then?"

"Unfortunately..."

From what I heard, it had been about two years since Dansu ahjussi entered this place.

And during those two years, he had been constantly searching for news of Shin Yoosung.

"Perhaps because we fell into this world together. And above all, what Miss Yoosoung said to me right before entering the world weighed on my mind."

"What did she say?"

Dansu ahjussi pondered deeply once again, his expression as if searching for a memory, before finally uttering a single word.

"The big house."

"The big house?"

I know what that word means to Shin Yoosung of <Kim Dokja Company>. Dansu ahjussi continued.

"I don't know why, but the moment I heard those words, I somehow became convinced that Miss Yoosoung was also entering the same world as me."

I nodded and asked.

"Did you happen to tell this story to the Great Sage Heaven's Equal as well?"

"I did speak to him, but..."

Just as Asmodeus and other myth-grade constellations did, if Shin Yoosung had entered this worldline, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal would surely have noticed.

However, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal did not seem to give any particular indication.

There was a possibility that something had happened to Shin Yoosung upon entering this worldline. If she had entered this world, she would have come looking for the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, Lee Hyunsung, or Jung Heewon long ago. The fact that there was still no contact...

Buzz.

The smartphone vibrated. As I checked the call with a light spark, a familiar modifier appeared in the center of the screen.

—Demon King of Salvation.

It was my eldest brother.

---

I excused myself from Dansu ahjussi and stepped out of the reception room to answer the phone. I could feel several constellations glancing at me as they passed by, but right now, I had no energy to pay attention to such things individually.

"Just how long has it been since you last contacted me?"

I wondered just how long it had been since the last call. I struggled to suppress my joy and urged him on.

"Yes? If you have a mouth, say something?"

He probably doesn't know. How much I missed him.

As if puzzled by my reaction, a snorting voice came from the other end of the line.

—Are you really that happy to see me? I'm stuck in your library anyway. It's practically the same as always being together.

"What's the point of being together? We can't even have a conversation."

—Have you been doing well?

Just hearing his voice made me feel strange.

「The only being in this world who can accurately understand my emotions.」

I don't know if that's the right way to put it, but the feeling I get when I think of the first was similar to that.

"What if I haven't been doing well?"

—You have to be doing well. We all live our lives struggling to get along."

Hearing that from the first made me feel strange all over again.

Perhaps having entered a world where scenarios don't exist has simply increased my own sense of sentimentality.

—Did you meet the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal?

"I met him."

The eldest replied immediately, as if he roughly understood the situation.

—I've been in contact with Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal quite often."

"Is that so?"

—Yeah, it seems outsiders keep appearing in that area. Oh, by the way, did you meet the third one?"

I don't know if I should say we met, or if we didn't.

I simply conveyed the situation I was in.

That I am currently possessing the third one's body, that Asmodeus had appeared, that the third one's soul had vanished somewhere, and that men in black suits had appeared chasing us.

—Asmodeus...

Upon hearing my explanation, the eldest's voice was quite displeased.

It was a tone filled with conviction that this story couldn't possibly end merely at the 'Asmodeus' stage.

I then shared the information I had heard from Dansu ahjussi.

—You said Shin Yoosung seems to be in that timeline?

"Maybe."

Leaving aside why Shin Yoosung hadn't appeared before us yet, if she really was in this timeline, it was somewhat of a comfort to me.

If I could just meet Shin Yoosung, she would be a tremendous asset in our current situation.

However, the eldest seemed to have a different opinion.

—That’s bad news.

"Huh? Why?"

—Who from <Kim Dokja Company> is there right now?

"The Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal and—"

—Except for the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal. Strictly speaking, he isn't <Kim Dokja Company>.

"Lee Hyunsung-ssi and Jung Heewon-ssi. Jung Heewon-ssi is currently possessed by the 41st iteration, so it's a bit ambiguous—" —And you too. Then there are already four members of <Kim Dokja Company> in the same timeline.

Come to think of it, it had been a really long time since so many members of <Kim Dokja Company> had gathered together.

"So?"

—Don't you understand what I mean?

In an instant, something flashed through my mind.

—Do you think it is normal for you to be that happy to see me?

I flinched and reflected on my own emotions. The first was right. No matter how happy I was to see the first, it was rare for me to express my emotions to this extent.

It was clear what was influencing my current state.

"Is the story of <Kim Dokja Company> growing stronger?"

As the figures forming the core of the giant story gathered, the story began to influence the members of the world.

—Because that world was originally created for that purpose. The third is dreaming of that world.

This world is a kind of 'big house' that Kim Dokja created for <Kim Dokja Company>. Kim Dokja must have hoped that <Kim Dokja Company> would gather here and find some small comfort.

However, due to the choices made by <Kim Dokja Company>, the world's dream remained unrealized for a long time.

—If the story’s gravitational pull continues to grow stronger, the story will naturally summon the elements necessary to realize itself.

However, in the midst of this, Dansu ahjussi—a fragment of Kim Dokja—and I were dragged into this world, and even Shin Yoosung entered this timeline. The elements for the story’s realization were beginning to take shape one by one.

"I suppose other <Kim Dokja Company> members might come here as well."

Honestly, I thought it would be better for <Kim Dokja Company> to come to this world rather than just the others.

But once again, the first seemed to have a different perspective.

—If it is certain that the third was kidnapped, that world is currently in a very unstable state. If another <Kim Dokja Company> member were to appear in that state, the world itself could collapse due to the oversaturated story.

I hadn't even considered that possibility.

"Then what should we do?"

—We have to escape immediately. We met Dansu ahjussi, didn't we? If we stay there, even you would get caught up in it and perish.

"Then what about the third?"

—If he has fallen into their hands anyway, it will be hard to save him.

"Are you serious?"

I never expected the 'Demon King of Salvation', of all people, to say something like that.

I spoke in a somewhat disappointed tone.

"You never know until you try, do you? We could rescue him."

—Rescue him? How? You know what kind of world that is.

"…"

—You aren't actually trusting the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal, are you? That guy can't really use his power there. He's just a slightly stronger monkey.

"We have capable forces here besides the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal. There's Heewon-ssi, and there's Hyunsung-ssi."

—Even with those two, it won't work. They are just ordinary people there.

"Besides, there are myth-grade constellations."

—Myth-grade constellations?

"As for who is here—"

—Wait a minute. You mean Poseidon and Odin, you mean them?

"The way you put it, it sounds like you're calling out the names of neighborhood guys."

It seemed the first had already grasped the ecosystem of this place.

—Do you really think those guys will be of any help?

Just then, I saw Poseidon passing by in the distance, hitting Odin on the head with a recorder.

I tried to ignore the scene and spoke.

"They may look like that, but they are myth-grade constellations."

—But you are myth-grade too.

"No, I am different. Still, they are orthodox, and I—"

—Don't even think about borrowing their hands. Do you think they would help in the first place? You haven't forgotten what kind of bastards they are, have you? Just take the people and escape quickly. That is the only solution. As long as <Kim Dokja Company>, which is different from you, isn't in that world, the story won't manifest anyway.

It was a valid argument, but there was one major flaw in the plan.

"No. I promised the Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal. That he would save the third with me."

—What nonsense are you talking about… You just…!

With a spark, the call was cut off. It seems the connection is dead again. I was happy when I answered the phone, but once we actually talked, my mind became a mess.

"Dokja-ssi."

I don't know when she approached, but Jung Heewon was standing behind me. She looked at me with a somewhat worried expression, then gestured somewhere with her chin. Judging by her expression, it seemed something wrong had happened.

"I think you need to come over here for a moment."

---

Jung Heewon and I returned to the usual restaurant district. The constellations, including Great Sage Heaven's Equal and Dansu ahjussi, were already gathered there, watching the news on the old television set up in the center.

—In response, the government issued a statement regarding 'terrorists'...

It was a continuation of the news we had just seen. The eyes of the constellations widened one by one as they saw Great Sage Heaven's Equal's face filling the screen.

"What is that?"

"Why is that monkey bastard appearing?"

Just as I was wondering if it was okay to show him like that, Great Sage Heaven's Equal, who was watching the news beside me, muttered.

"Damn it, it looks so much worse than I am in real life."

"Is this really the time to be saying such idle things?"

"Believe it or not, I used to be an idol."

Come to think of it, this primate had debuted as an idol alongside the Black Flame Dragon and Uriel in the 1,864th round. I suddenly thought about asking about those days, but the news that followed left me speechless.

—It is reported that the government has already secured one of the terrorists…

On the screen, Lee Hyunsung was being broadcast, tied to a chair.

Perhaps finding it difficult to crack a joke this time, even Great Sage, Heaven’s Equal wore a rather serious expression.

"That bastard Hyunsung. Is he already caught?"

"It looks really dangerous."

Just as I was wondering what would happen if Lee Hyunsung died like that, Great Sage Heaven's Equal shook his head and said.

"He won't die. That guy is sturdier than me. Did you forget his nickname?"

"You don't actually think Hyunsung-ssi is made of steel, do you?"

"Yeah, well, I have to go rescue him. That's why I came. I have to find the youngest anyway."

Great Sage Heaven's Equal let out a light sigh, glanced at the constellations in the dining hall, and clapped his hands loudly.

"Alright, you gluttons! Pay attention!"

At his thunderous roar, the constellations gathered in the dining area turned toward him in unison. As if satisfied with their reaction, Great Sage Heaven's Equal began to speak.

"The time has come for you to repay my kindness! You need to help me out!"

It was an attitude of sheer shamelessness. However, perhaps accustomed to such behavior, the constellations asked readily instead of getting angry.

"What do you want me to help you with?"

"Yeah. You know Hyunsung, right? Our second. The good friend who always comes to feed you guys."

At the mention of food, several constellations turned to each other and muttered.

"You mean that bear-like guy?"

"He is a good guy."

Fortunately, it seemed that Lee Hyunsung had made a good impression on the constellations in the past. Seeing that the reaction from the crowd was not negative, Great Sage Heaven's Equal got straight to the point, as if he had nothing left to weigh.

"Right, it looks like that guy has been captured by some bad guys. Let's go rescue him together."

"Why are you asking us? Couldn't you go alone?"

"They have quite a few more people than I can rescue him by myself."

With everyone having eaten frozen pork belly, Great Sage Heaven's Equal spoke with a look of certainty that there would be volunteers.

"Alright, who wants to go rescue Hyunsung with me? Raise your hand!"

However, the constellations merely exchanged wary glances, and no one raised their hand. Just as Great Sage Heaven's Equal, frowning, was about to speak again, someone among the constellations burst into loud laughter.

"Hahahahahahaha!"

Following this, a wave of snickers spread among the constellations in the restaurant district. Poseidon, who had been observing the situation from a corner, spoke up.

"Serves you right, you monkey bastard! You are finally in danger!"

"…"

"What? Help us? You locked us up here, and now you're saying you need help and want to borrow the hands of old geezers?"

Judging by the way things were going, it seemed the situation was unfolding just as the first had predicted. Perhaps it was an inevitable outcome.

There was no way those 'constellations of the Great Nebulae' would help us.

"You deserve divine punishment! Who do you think you're asking for help from right now!"

"That's right! After turning us into powerless old geezers..."

"No, that's because you guys failed the possession—"

It seemed the more the Great Sage Heaven's Equal spoke, the worse the situation became, so I felt I should step in at this point.

"It doesn't seem like there is any particular reason for us to help you."

However, someone spoke before me.

When I turned to look at where the voice came from, an old man wearing a fluorescent safety vest and work gloves was standing there. He walked past me with a bored expression and exchanged brief greetings with the other constellations.

One of the Constellations asked him.

"What? Where have you been? Something interesting just happened."

"The power went out at the smart farm, so I went and fixed it. I heard the gist of it."

"Oh, did you finally fix it?"

It appeared the old man was working on the power facilities here.

Wait a minute, power facilities?

"Was that constellation here too?"

"Hmm, didn't I mention it?"

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal replied in a somewhat indifferent voice.

"Things got a bit messed up. I was planning to accept applicants before that guy arrived."

Judging by the situation, that old electrician seemed to be a constellation with quite a bit of recognition in this area.

As if he fully understood how things were going, the old electrician neatly removed his work gloves, placed them on the table, wiped his sweat, and sat down on a chair. Then, he muttered to himself.

"If a force threatening you has appeared in this timeline, it's obvious who it is."

The old electrician turned his head and looked out through the iron bars at the abandoned factory.

Just then, the sound of rain falling outside could be heard. Faint thunder echoed in the distance. Watching the old man’s piercing eyes stare at the lightning, I recalled his name anew.

"Finally, the children of <Olympus> have come to save me."

The leader of <Olympus>—the Throne of Lightning, Zeus.

993 Episode 60 Star Fragments (1)

---

「Only those with the courage to go missing in this world can glimpse the truth of the stories.」

—The Evil Sophist.

---

At Zeus's words, several constellations stirred here and there.

["That's right! <Olympus> could not possibly forget us!"]

Not everyone had lost hope just because they were trapped in this world. While some, like Odin, dismissed the <Star Stream> as a delusion, and others, like Poseidon, had adapted in their own ways, there were stars who still could not forget their former stature.

["Then <Veda> might come, too."]

["No, perhaps <Asgard> will come first!"]

I looked at the culprit who had orchestrated this entire situation.

Zeus, leaning against a table with a relaxed smile, was looking at me with a somewhat triumphant expression.

To think that even 'Zeus' himself would be trapped here.

Come to think of it, there was no way the gentleman obsessed with 'collecting Kim Dokja fragments' the other day would miss this feast.

["Release us quickly! You damned monkey!"]

Several excited constellations approached the Great Sage Heaven's Equal and caused a ruckus. I was worried an accident might occur, but unexpectedly, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal remained calm.

"What are you going to do if I let you go?"

["What?"]

"Do you really think your Nebula will come to rescue you? Why would they bother with losers like you?"

["What nonsense! We are myth-grade constellations!"]

The thunder echoing from outside grew even louder.

Even though [Incite] is my specialty, this was not a situation where I should get involved. Besides, there was already someone here better suited to rallying the stars than I was.

"Dansu ahjussi."

Dansu ahjussi, who had been sitting beside me with a pale face, nodded and approached.

I remembered the man named Lee Dansu well. He was an incarnation living in this world to save his daughter—a father who had steadfastly built his history to face his daughter with dignity.

「The only one among the fragments of Kim Dokja to inherit Kim Dokja's trait, the 'Immortal King'.」

The constellations must have recognized Dansu ahjussi's character as well. After all, the legend of a good person is bound to show through.

"I need help."

I thought Dansu ahjussi would understand immediately, but his reaction was unexpectedly lukewarm.

"What kind of help do you need, my friend?"

"I mean the constellations."

While the Great Sage Heaven's Equal held off the crowd, I briefly whispered the plan to Dansu ahjussi. Fortunately, he grasped it quickly.

"The stratagem of 'borrowing a sword to kill'… Are you suggesting we rally the constellations to stop the intruders?"

"Yes. I thought they would listen to you better than me. The constellations seem to follow you."

At this, Dansu ahjussi replied with a bitter smile.

"I was just telling them a story about the past with my friend."

I heard it too. Even after so much time had passed, he still cherished his memories of me. It is rare to find someone who keeps another's story so preciously. Dansu ahjussi was such a rare and good person.

"Then please make use of that story."

And I must make such a good person do something a little bad.

"Please persuade the constellations to help us. You can set a plausible bait. Like, if they help us, we will let them escape this worldline—"

"Are you really going to do that to the constellations, my friend?"

I was speechless for a moment. Ahjussi's gaze was serious, but this was not a matter I could compromise on.

"Even if you can't do it, you must say that you can right now."

I know ahjussi is a good person, but those standing there now were 'constellations'.

"Hyunsung-ssi is in danger. We cannot save him with our strength alone."

I know those constellations might not be much help. Since they were all captured by the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, most of them must have had their powers sealed. Still, we were in a desperate situation where every hand counted.

"They cannot fight. To be precise, they are not in a state to fight."

For a moment, I couldn't understand why this old man was protecting these constellations to such an extent.

"That doesn't matter."

Those words slipped out before I realized it. Was this feeling mine, or the Third's—or perhaps the nameless Kim Dokja's?

「I hate stars.」

Perhaps this is an old, deep-seated emotion of Kim Dokja's.

["You monkey bastard! If you don't let us go right now, I'll—"]

I glanced at the constellations once more. From the marine Poseidon to the master sculptor Odin, and even the electrician Zeus. That scene, resembling a nursing home for retired elders, was somehow delightful and comical.

But that was as far as it went.

「They are myth-grade constellations who have always watched us—those who reveled in the tragedies of this world.」

I remembered clearly what they had done in the scenarios and the Fear Realm. I remembered everything they had done to the people I loved.

Nevertheless, Dansu ahjussi shook his head.

"My friend, you still don't know."

Dansu ahjussi gazed at me with sorrowful eyes.

"Those stars..."

The moment I heard his voice, I felt a sense of unease.

「Why have these constellations gathered in a place like this?」

At first, I thought they were merely stars gathered to claim the 'third Kim Dokja', just as they had sought the 'Oldest Dream' to control the 41st worldline.

「But the constellations here were those 'myth-grade constellations'.」

The pinnacle of the <Star Stream>—the stars of the 'Round Table' that rule over everything.

Mitra's voice wavered in my mind.

[Didn't you know? That I am a coward.]

Did the stars of the Round Table, more cautious and cunning than any other, really risk their lives to enter this worldline solely because 'the third Kim Dokja' was here?

Thump.

A deafening roar echoed from the front of the abandoned factory.

Headlights flashed outside the window.

Poseidon muttered.

"They have arrived."

Several constellations pushed aside the Great Sage Heaven's Equal and ran toward the entrance.

As expected, Zeus was the first.

"My children have come."

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal, Dansu ahjussi, and Jung Heewon exchanged glances and followed. As I approached the entrance, a sense of foreboding grew. An unprecedented energy was gathering in this world where stories could not exert their power.

「Perhaps the constellations were right after all.」

The constellations combined their strength to force open the factory gates. Soon, amidst the bright beams of headlights, men in black suits appeared.

["Oh! Come in! Over here! Quickly!"]

The men in suits looked surprised to see the constellations welcoming them.

"What are these people?"

The men in suits stopped, wary of the situation. A muscular man in sunglasses at the front restrained his subordinates as if sensing something unsettling.

"Wait."

The moment I heard his voice, I instinctively sensed it.

「He is no ordinary person.」

Just like the constellations here, 'something' was possessing the man in the suit.

"Well done, you managed to make it this far."

As if recognizing him, Zeus approached with open arms.

As he stepped out of the gate, sparks flew from the leash Zeus shared with the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, but the God of Thunder endured the pain and kept walking.

As Zeus stopped in front of him, the man in the suit flinched.

"No way?"

Removing his sunglasses, the man widened his eyes.

I had never seen him before, but strangely, I felt I knew who he was. The shimmering stories of <Olympus> provided the record.

「He is the 'Monster Slayer'. The Greek hero who had never properly appeared in the main story.」

Zeus took him by the shoulder, welcoming him.

"My son! Perseus!"

Perseus. The legendary hero who defeated Medusa was standing before me.

Perseus’s expression changed as he recognized Zeus.

"Father? You were really here?"

"Yes, my son."

"To think the rumors were true... It is an honor to meet you."

As a smile spread across Perseus’s lips, Zeus’s complexion brightened. He turned toward the constellations and shouted.

"Come out, all constellations. My son has come to take us."

The constellations poked their heads out one by one. As if asking why they were so frightened, Zeus shouted.

"The time we have been waiting for has come. It is time for us all to escape this damn worldline together—"

The moment he spoke, a stream of blood shot into the air. The smell of copper spread through the drizzle. As the stars held their breath, Zeus turned with a look of foolish confusion. There stood Perseus, still smiling.

"Father."

Perseus struck Zeus's arm once again with a thick machete.

"It is truly an honor to be able to kill you."

With a whoosh, one of Zeus's arms flew into the air.

Zeus, eyes wide, screamed as he watched the blood gushing from his shoulder.

"Aaaargh—!"

It was an unbelievably weak scream for a myth-grade constellation.

Perseus, looking at Zeus with curiosity, turned toward the constellations with a cold gaze.

"It was true that the myth-grade constellations are all trapped here."

Perseus was not alone. The men in suits behind him glared with menacing intensity.

Perseus let out a booming voice.

"The opportunity to achieve the impossible has arrived."

A strange desire blazed in his voice.

"If we successfully complete the mission of this worldline, we will leap into the realm of myth that we have so long awaited!"

The men in suits began to approach. The myth-grade constellations, trembling helplessly, slumped to the ground. It was the Great Sage Heaven's Equal who lifted them up.

"What are you doing, you fools!"

Snatched by the nape of the neck, Zeus was pulled back into the factory by the Great Sage.

"Everyone, go inside! Close the gate! Do you all want to die?"

The constellations followed in a panic.

Several men in suits rushed to open the door, but they were sent flying by the Great Sage's kicks.

The factory door slammed shut, and the shouts of the men in suits echoed from outside.

"Hiding is useless! You cowardly constellations!"

"Hahahaha! Serves you right!"

The myth-grade constellations trembled at the mocking laughter.

It was a strange sight.

I knew many constellations aspired to 'myth' status, but to kill the 'myth-grade constellations' of their own nebula?

It should have been impossible. No matter how blinded by status, a star could not easily turn its back on its elders.

The history they lived had imposed a taboo.

「All constellations of the Great Nebula move in the direction of amplifying the Great Nebula's Giant Story.」

If they annihilated Zeus and the others, the power of the nebula would weaken despite their individual rise.

This meant they had a justification that went beyond the restraining force of that 'Giant Story'.

"I told you, friend."

Dansu ahjussi spoke as he approached. His calm eyes were fixed on the constellations.

"Now, my friend will be able to see them too."

I gazed at the constellations—stars abandoned by the nebulae. The old men were trembling, clutching their narrow shoulders.

"…Yes."

Grains of stories drifted unsteadily over Zeus's wound. Only then did it make sense.

The reason these 'myth-grade constellations' were so helpless. The reason they were old men, easily subdued and imprisoned.

「Did those 'myth-grade constellations' really stake everything on jumping into this worldline?」

I spoke, gazing at the shadowless elders.

"So, all the 'myth-grade constellations' here were their 'fragments'."

It was natural. The true 'myth-grade constellations' ruling the Round Table would never risk their own lives directly.

["Ahhhh! Have you finally betrayed us!"]

["I will not forgive you! Damn it, you children!"]

These old men were merely 'fragments' chosen by the constellations—clones deployed on the most dangerous missions. Beings sacrificed without consequence in a world where one wrong move meant death. In other words, they were—

「Fragments that the myth-grade constellations judged to be 'okay to disappear'.」

The abandoned fragments of the stars were howling in the light right before my eyes.

994 Episode 60 Star Fragments (2)

"We're going to die. We're all going to die!"

The terrified constellations were flopping about like fish. Star fragments from which it was impossible to tell just how damaged the original form of the story was, or whose fragments they were.

"You bastard! This is all your fault!"

"You damned Zeus!"

"I shouldn't have listened to him!"

The constellations, who had been excited by Zeus's instigation, were now busy cursing him.

Zeus, slumped over, remained silent, appearing to have suffered a great shock.

Blood was still dripping from his right arm, which the Great Sage Heaven's Equal had hastily bound. It was a wound where an average old man would have already died from excessive bleeding. Yet, the fact that he was still alive—was it because he was, after all, a fragment of Zeus?

"This way! Let's bolt this side!"

Dansu ahjussi and the constellations dragged in the broken machinery and firmly sealed off the entrance to the abandoned factory. The constellations gasped for breath and wiped their sweat.

"They won't be able to get in with this, right?"

Of course, such measures were unlikely to ensure safety. However, the myth-grade constellations, having been imprisoned for so long, seemed to have lost some of their basic judgment.

Whoosh.

A pungent smell wafted from somewhere, and soon smoke began to roll in from the front of the abandoned factory. The surrounding temperature was rising.

"No, they set it on fire!"

The terrified constellations cried out.

Looking hurriedly beyond the bars, the front of the factory grounds was already engulfed in flames.

"Burn it harder! Burn them all to death!"

At this rate, they were doomed to burn to death along with the abandoned factory. Flames were already spreading inside the factory, and loud explosions, both large and small, could be heard from all directions.

"Come this way!"

Dansu ahjussi and the Great Sage Heaven's Equal hurriedly evacuated the constellations to the back. Just as I, too, was about to pull away with Jung Heewon, the figures of Poseidon and Zeus appeared through the flames.

"Get up quickly, Zeus."

Poseidon reached out his hand toward Zeus, who was still slumped in his seat.

"It's not over yet. Have you forgotten who you are? The Great Throne of Lightning, the strongest god of <Olympus>—"

"You're wrong!"

But Zeus's eyes already showed a loss of will.

"This is the end for us all. We're going to die here."

With a crashing sound from somewhere, the ceiling began to collapse. The steel structure slammed onto the floor, trapping Zeus's leg under part of it.

Zeus looked up at Poseidon without a hint of pain, then closed his eyes in resignation.

"You fool."

In the end, even Poseidon gave up on Zeus. Immediately, shouts from the constellations echoed from all directions.

"The smart farm is on fire!"

"Recover the crops!"

"No, there are still guys who haven't managed to escape!"

A terrified Poseidon ran toward the smart farm, shouting.

"Demeter! Demeter! Where are you!"

Demeter, the guardian of agriculture and the seasons and the caretaker of the smart farm, was the wife of Poseidon.

I glanced at Jung Heewon.

"Heewon-ssi."

Jung Heewon hesitated for a moment, then nodded in response.

"Understood."

Jung Heewon ran straight toward the smart farm.

"Everyone, take cover this way!"

The stinging smoke was growing thicker and thicker. There were hardly any constellations left in the vicinity. If the flames grew just a little larger here, I, too, would be in danger. I had to make a choice.

I stared at the steel structure on the collapsed floor for a moment, then grabbed a cutting stick from nearby and inserted it between the structures like a lever. With a click, I applied force, and the structure began to move slightly.

The scorching heat scratched my cheeks, and the pain was excruciating as if my soles had been burned, but I did not give up.

How long had I been applying that force? With the sound of metal sliding, the structure twisted. Following that, the half-baked face of Zeus was revealed amidst the debris.

Zeus, spotting me, opened his mouth in surprise.

"What... are you doing?"

"Stay still."

I dug through the wreckage and dragged Zeus's body out. Zeus, now an old electrician, was light enough for me—with my terrible strength—to support him.

Carried on my back, Zeus struggled slightly and said,

"I don't need any help..."

"Shut up."

I started running, carrying Zeus, who was left with only one arm.

I couldn't understand myself either. Why had I saved Zeus?

「He was the star that destroyed my world.」

<Kim Dokja Company> and my comrades were struck by his fleet. The incarnations of the Fear Realm lost their lives. In this iteration, and in other iterations, he was always my greatest nemesis.

「The star that guarded the ark heading to the end of the world.」

I saw the doors of the restaurant district closing in the distance.

"Don't close them yet! Open the restaurant! Hurry!"

Fortunately, a constellation spotted us. It was Odin.

Odin, who was still carving sculptures, looked at me and Zeus with a blank expression; then, as if having made a decision, he put down his carving knife and grabbed the dining room door.

I entered the dining room with Zeus by a hair's breadth. With a thud, the door slammed shut, and I dropped Zeus onto the floor as if tossing him down.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal looked at me with wide eyes.

"What? When did you rescue this guy?"

Zeus glared at me, panting heavily. Dansu ahjussi, who had rushed over, briefly checked on Zeus's condition before approaching me and asking.

"Friend, are you alright?"

I looked up for a moment at Dansu ahjussi as he extended his hand, then took it and stood up. As if turning a blind eye to the subtle emotion in his eyes, I opened my mouth.

"I do not agree with your method, ahjussi."

I know why Dansu ahjussi sympathizes with the stars. We, fragments of Kim Dokja, are like the stars. I understand the feelings one cannot help but have toward these fragments of the constellations.

"It is simply to use these guys."

Dansu ahjussi is certainly right. The tragedy of this world originates from scenarios and is dominated by stories.

One cannot hate every star, nor can one love every star. In the end, even Kim Dokja could not do so. Nevertheless, we might be able to embrace all this tragedy. And thus, we might be able to contemplate the act of forgiving someone.

Of course, doing so would not make this world run its course properly, but at least through that, I would be able to understand why Dansu ahjussi is making that expression.

So, Dansu ahjussi is just—

"That is why I like my friend."

He must be trying to speak of a possible ending.

We looked at each other and smiled bitterly. Even though we had been apart for eight years, he and I were still each other's friends.

"When did I ever ask you to save me?"

Zeus, who had been glaring at us with piercing eyes, screamed in a fit of rage.

"Your help is of the essence—"

"You're really going to end it here... Is that it?"

"What?"

"You wouldn't give up over something as trivial as this."

Watching Zeus get agitated, I actually became calmer.

I imagined the 'constellation of Lightning' I knew.

"I remember clearly just how terrifying an enemy Zeus was. The constellation of Lightning in <Olympus> that I know isn't this quick to give up. It is a constellation that is endlessly persistent and cunning."

"What do you know about me—"

"You are a truly vicious and terrible star."

The constellation of Lightning, 'Zeus,' survived until the very end of the scenario in every worldline. He held Yoo Joonghyuk back time and time again and tormented <Kim Dokja Company>. I, too, nearly died at his hands several times.

"Are you going to die here at the hands of a mere guy like Perseus? Are you going to end your life with such a conclusion?"

I don't know how to persuade the stars. I didn't want to persuade them in the first place. I simply need their strength, so I just offer words to lift them up.

I turned to look at the constellations staring at me with agitated faces.

"You are the same. Do you really want to give up on ■■ right here?"

■■. The end of all stories.

I could feel a faint flame flickering in the eyes of the myth-grade constellations.

"But what can we do right now?"

It was Poseidon who spoke those words. Poseidon, his face smeared with soot from supporting Demeter, added in a dark voice.

"You should know, seeing this state."

Even while being humiliated by a mere Perseus, the eyes of the myth-grade constellations remained nothing but resentful.

"We haven't even fought properly yet."

At that, Zeus interrupted once again.

"There are things you can know without fighting."

"You managed to rise to myth-grade with that kind of will."

"You managed to reach myth-grade? You, who haven't even set foot on a shadow of a mythical being, dare to mention 'myth'?"

I pouted and retorted.

"I am myth-grade, too."

"You? Don't lie!"

Just then, Odin, who had been silently sculpting something in the corner, suddenly lifted his head and spoke.

"What he said is true!"

"What?"

"I know."

Odin bowed his head low again and began sculpting. What on earth is he sculpting so diligently in a situation like this? Is he trying to create the final masterpiece of his life?

In any case, at Odin's remark, Zeus glared at me once more and scrutinized me from head to toe.

"So what? Even if you are myth-grade like us, aren't you just as trapped in that body as we are? Being trapped in a small prison and unable to do anything—"

"Is there nothing you can do when you're locked up?"

"What?"

"To 'Zeus' outside who threw you into a place like this—"

I looked at the thumping dining room door.

"Don't you want to show who the 'real one' is?"

With a crunching sound, the door began to crumble little by little. The enemies had already started pushing their way inside.

"I'm abandoning this place and escaping."

Making a quick decision, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal tore off the iron bars near the dining room ceiling, threw himself out, and spoke.

"Hold on just a little longer. I'll be back soon."

The constellations swarmed through the bars from which the Great Sage Heaven's Equal had escaped, screaming to somehow pull themselves out.

"D-Don't push!"

"Aaaargh! I can't get out! I said I can't get out!"

However, for their aging bodies, even grabbing onto the broken bars and climbing up was a struggle.

"Everyone, stay calm! The Great Sage Heaven's Equal will be back to rescue you soon! We can all escape together!"

Despite Dansu ahjussi's encouragement, the constellations were not easily calmed.

"Don't make me laugh! That guy ran away alone!"

"We're all going to die! We're all going to die right here!"

This was their true nature. They had entered this place as myth-grade constellations, but all they possessed were trash stories thrown away by their true forms.

Unnecessary greed and arrogance, wariness, weakness and fear…

All kinds of stories of defeat, which myth-grade constellations regard as a disgrace, were seething together like a blazing inferno.

「Are all these stories truly useless?」

I thought and thought about the constellations of the Round Table who would have cast those stories aside without hesitation.

Crunch!

Finally, the door broke down, and men in black suits appeared. As the men boldly entered the dining area, swinging their batons and machetes, Jung Heewon stepped forward as if she had been waiting.

"I'll stop them."

Displaying unbelievable superhuman strength, Jung Heewon began to take on the men in suits at the entrance all by herself.

"Argh!"

"What is this woman—"

The men screamed and collapsed at the dazzling trajectory of her wooden sword.

Astonished by Jung Heewon's fierce performance, the constellations widened their eyes.

"How—"

I was just as surprised. Even if we excused it since the Great Sage Heaven's Equal was a monster to begin with, Jung Heewon's performance right now was truly on a level comparable to that of the Great Sage.

"Break through! Quick!"

"There's a gap!"

However, even Jung Heewon began to miss her enemies one by one. The men in suits, having finally entered the restaurant, rushed toward the constellations.

Unluckily, the first to be targeted was me, who had been loitering near the entrance. A man in a suit swung a machete menacingly, and as I stepped back, I ended up landing on my butt. The blade of the machete fell on my head.

"Friend!"

Dansu ahjussi rushed over in an instant, pushed me aside, and took the machete blade instead. Watching the blood splatter unrealistically into the air, I reflexively threw myself forward and pushed the man with the machete with all my might. The man tumbled to the ground with a scream. I plunged the fallen machete into his chest with both hands. Vivid blood gushed out, and soon the man breathed his last. Gasping for breath, I turned around. Dansu ahjussi lay there, his chest slashed.

「There is no system in this world.」

I hurriedly lifted the bleeding Dansu ahjussi to his feet.

「Neither the Spirit of the Elaine Forest nor the Great Elixir can be used.」

Fortunately, the wound wasn't deep. However, it was a dangerous injury that needed immediate treatment.

「If you die here, you really will die.」

Now, it was truly no longer a situation where I could worry about the constellations.

I supported Dansu ahjussi and looked around. I had to find a place to hide. Anywhere—

"Kill them!"

But the number of men in suits surging in was too great. A telescopic baton flew from somewhere and struck my thigh. As my knee buckled from the impact, the baton flew straight toward my head. An unavoidable blow. Biting my lip tightly, I raised my arm to protect my head. Sparks flew right before my eyes. Shards of plastic shattered. A broken recorder spout rolled across the floor.

With a dazed expression, I stared at the back of the head of the old man who had saved me. Clutching the broken recorder tightly, Poseidon was blocking the way.

"This is your reward for saving my brother."

An arrogant, intimidating, and merciless constellation toward the incarnations who worshipped him. Of all the Poseidons I knew, none had a back view like this.

"Take that guy and escape quickly."

For a moment, I wanted to ask. What on earth was he thinking?

"I just thought you were right. I can't die in a place like this."

As if answering my question, Poseidon shouted.

"I am Poseidon of <Olympus>. The spear that marks the boundaries of the seas, and one of the three great main gods!"

Poseidon let out a lion's roar and charged at the men. However, it was a fight no match for an old man. Being unilaterally beaten all over his body, Poseidon quickly lost his strength and slumped down.

「And a machete began to fall upon Poseidon's head.」

Along with the sensation that the flow of space-time was slowing down little by little, I felt as if my surroundings were turning colorless.

A sentence describing a predetermined ending.

I glared at that sentence. I hate Poseidon. I hate the constellations of <Olympus>. But they, too, were characters in this story. At least—

「As long as I am the 'writer'.」

A dazzling beam of light settled in my hand. I reached out my hand toward the sentence before me.

「The blade of the machete, having fallen mercilessly, shattered Poseidon's head.」

I gripped the end of the sentence and applied force as if inserting a lever.

「The machete blade fell mercilessly.」

A fierce spark shot up right before my eyes. The sound of a predetermined ending twisting. The sound of a completed destiny shattering. And then,

「The machete blade fell mercilessly and grazed Poseidon's earlobe.」

The machete blade missed Poseidon and struck the floor. The panicked man in the suit struggled with all his might to pull the machete out of the ground. And Poseidon, having witnessed all of this right before his eyes, turned to look at me. He must have seen it. The very moment his destiny was changing.

"How—"

It works. Although it consumes mental energy, my 'Revision' ability works here.

"How can you wield such power here—"

Poseidon muttered, looking at me with trembling eyes.

"To handle such probability… Surely not—"

Looking at Poseidon, I was reminded of Mithra. Mithra, who could not bring himself to jump into the 'Bush of Missing People'. Like him, the other myth-grade constellations likely felt the same way. That is why they were able to send only fragments of themselves into this world.

"That is right."

But I was different.

「This is a power that can only be possessed by those who have the courage to go completely 'missing' outside the world.」

The story residing within me was speaking. I have a duty to perform here.

"I have staked my entire being here."

I slowly rose from my seat, gazing at Poseidon and the constellations. Then, the abandoned star fragments looked up at me as well.

Story fragments that could have become stories, but were cast aside by the Main Body.

I do not particularly pity them. I simply felt it was a waste for a story to end in such a predictable way.

[A new story begins to germinate within you!]

And so, I imagine. A dream in which these fragments somehow survive. Those cast aside by the Main Body in this prison. A story of venturing into the outside world.

「I am the 'One Who Rewrites Eternity'.」

The world I slowly opened was filled with sentences.

"I."

Reaching out my hand toward one of those sentences, I said.

"Will rewrite your myths."

995 Episode 60 Star Fragments (3)

---

"You say 'write'?"

In an instant, the look in the eyes of the stars staring at me changed.

"Surely... you are a recorder?"

A recorder. One of the constellations, having realized my true identity, muttered.

"How did a recorder get into this place with a physical body?"

The Myth-grade constellations seemed unable to discern my true identity.

Come to think of it, it was strange. After all, I had already made quite a name for myself in the 'New Murim Earth'.

There, I had half-destroyed the 'Black Library Society', a record alliance that had contracted with [Veda], and even defeated Agni, one of the Lokapala, alongside Jung Heewon.

"You bastard, what exactly is your identity..."

The fact that they do not know me despite this might mean they were trapped here much earlier than I thought. Or perhaps recent information was cut off as the link with the main body was severed.

"Wait. Surely not."

It was not the Myth-grade constellations who noticed my true identity first, but the new intruders.

"Deal with that guy first!"

Perseus, recognizing the power I had manifested, shouted in shock.

"He is using the power of recorders!"

Were there other Hero-grade or Legendary-grade constellations possessing bodies here besides Perseus? The men, sensing the command, immediately swung their machetes at me. I narrowly dodged a blade grazing my head and snatched an unfinished sentence from the air.

「And Jung Heewon's」

Then, I filled in the blank space with a single stroke of the brush.

「And Jung Heewon's body moved like the wind. The swirling wooden sword snapped the ankles of the surrounding men like straw.」

In an instant, Jung Heewon moved abnormally, as if the scene had been fast-forwarded at double speed. The wooden sword swept the floor, creating a gale, and the screaming men in suits collapsed one after another. Amidst the hazy cloud of dust, Jung Heewon stared at me with piercing eyes.

「Jung Heewon is ready to accept my records.」

Jung Heewon has entered into a [Record Contract] with me. The cost of revising [Fate] based on my records was significantly lower.

Then, what about the constellations?

"Are you just going to keep watching like that?"

I glanced at the Myth-grade constellations standing awkwardly, watching the situation, and spoke.

"I will accept support. If even a single one of you has the courage to fight back—"

Tsutsu—sparks erupted from my entire body.

"I will rewrite the myth of that star."

Countless emotions crossed the pupils of the stars looking at me.

「Rewrite the myth.」

Some blushed as if considering it an insult, while others shook their heads in fear.

"Fine, go ahead and try."

In the midst of this, there was one star who staggered to his feet.

"If there is still a story left to be written on this damned body, you try writing it!"

Poseidon's voice, filled with rage, echoed loudly through the dining room.

A star that once ruled the oceans. The absolute ruler who subjugated all Narrative-grade constellations merely by descending into the scenario.

And now, he stood before me with a body that looked as though it could barely withstand a tailwind, let alone a storm.

"How is it? Do you see it? Do you think there is still a damn possibility left for me?!"

I gazed at Poseidon—or more precisely, at the fragment Poseidon had discarded.

The fragment that saved his wife, Demeter, from the flames and reached out to his brother, Zeus. Yet, it was a fragment discarded by its original form for being 'useless'.

I bit my lip tightly. If that story is deemed 'useless', then what on earth is a 'useful' story in this <Star Stream>?

「Here, he was not the 'Spear that Marks the Boundaries of the Seas'.」

Just because one is a recorder does not mean they can write every sentence. The probability of this world is based on the Third's imagination—or 'realism'. Therefore, even if I were to write here that Poseidon 'makes a full descent', that sentence could not be realized.

"Kill him! He is just an ordinary old man!"

He could no longer wield the Trident as in the myth, nor could he part the ocean.

But does that mean that old man is powerless?

「Poseidon smiled silently and pulled his Marine cap down low.」

I didn't think that a fragment of Poseidon had accidentally possessed that old man's body.

「A salty scent began to wash over from somewhere.」

A man in a suit, having caught the unfamiliar smell of the sea, flinched in surprise and muttered.

"Um, can I really hit him?"

Perseus seemed to sense the change in Poseidon's demeanor. Soon, as if having made a decision, Perseus shouted.

"Burn him!"

Following this, a large number of men in suits carrying Molotov cocktails appeared from outside. It seemed that the Molotov cocktails they had thrown were the very ones that had set the abandoned factory ablaze earlier.

With a crashing sound, fire spread across the dining area in an instant. Amidst the acrid smoke, several constellations knelt and collapsed to the ground. It was a situation where it was clear that everyone would either suffocate or burn to death if things continued like this. I began writing with a mixture of skepticism and doubt.

「He quietly blew his broken horn.」

In this world, neither magic nor skills exist.

「And so, when the Sea God's horn sounded again.」

However, it clearly permitted superhuman feats of strength, such as those of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal or Jung Heewon.

「The sea shall soon become a disaster.」

In other words, the probability of this world is based on a somewhat crude realism. My idea stemmed from that very point.

Skills or magic are out of the question. Then, what if it were something that looked like a 'skill' or 'magic'?

For instance—

「The sea poured out from Poseidon's mouth.」

Magic. Or perhaps 'magical realism'.

"What?"

Poseidon, having confirmed the record I had written, glared.

Of course, I did not allow that and added another layer to the sentence.

「The sea poured out of Poseidon's mouth.」

Just as Poseidon was about to let out a roar of rage, something else spewed from his mouth first.

"Aaaargh! What is this!"

Water with enough pressure to be called a water cannon erupted explosively from Poseidon's mouth toward the men. The stream of water extinguished all the fires in the area and knocked down even the men in suits who were rushing at him.

Pale white, as if he had drained every drop of moisture from his body, Poseidon collapsed to his knees in exhaustion.

I then summoned another constellation.

"Demeter!"

Demeter, whose eyes met mine, held an armful of seeds used in the smart farm in her bosom.

「Demeter threw the seeds at the men.」

Normally, it would have looked like the desperate struggle of a cute old lady. It wasn't as if she were exorcising demons, so what damage could she possibly inflict on sturdy men by throwing seeds?

However, the one who threw those seeds was Demeter, the 'Ruler of Agriculture and Seasons', and magic was unfolding right before our eyes.

「The seeds imbued with the history of the earth have finally finished preparing to germinate.」

Demeter's seeds, having absorbed Poseidon's seawater, bloomed in unison. Vine plants that grew alongside the dense greenery instantly bound the movements of the men in suits.

"This is unbelievable—"

Both the men and the constellations were left speechless by the miraculous scene unfolding before their eyes.

「Can this be called a myth?」

It is likely not the myth the stars expect. But at least, all the myths I knew began with small miracles. Water gushing forth where there is none, seeds that were not supposed to bloom coming to life. To savor and record that simple and gentle joy.

「In the ruins abandoned by the stars, a small seed of myth was germinating.」

A faint sense of weariness washed over me, but it was not over yet. To fend off Perseus, who was approaching by cutting through vines with a machete, I now needed the help of the last star.

I expected Poseidon and Demeter to cooperate. But even I could not be certain about him.

"Zeus!"

Nevertheless, I called out to Zeus. It was not because I trusted in his petty loyalty or kindness.

「He is the star who has guarded and cared for the myths of Olympus for a very long time.」

What I believed in was the 'protagonist' of the Olympian myths.

「Standing there was Zeus, the one-armed electrician.」

"I am not doing this because I acknowledge you."

I could not tell what Zeus was thinking or what was on his mind as he stood there. However, the moment I saw Zeus's back, I realized that he already understood his role.

"I."

The 'Seat of Lightning', who has monopolized that role because he knew better than anyone in this <Star Stream> where a myth would bloom.

"I simply want to punish my son myself."

Zeus pulled pliers from his bosom and hurled them with all his might toward the electrical panel. Amidst the men screaming, the sound of something snapping was heard.

「All the lights in the abandoned factory flickered in unison, as if the world itself were blinking.」

Patcheu—the current shot through the air.

I shouted reflexively.

"Everyone, get down!"

A furious current shot down from the ceiling of the abandoned factory and plunged onto the floor. It was like a bolt of lightning striking from the sky. Amidst the feast of agonizing screams, a terrible stench of burning skin filled the air.

The flickering current finally subsided, and the factory's emergency power was activated. Beneath the pale light, men whose entire bodies had turned pitch black lay sprawled like dead fish. Zeus gasped for breath without a word and glared at the fallen face of Perseus. In the silence where the stars seemed to hold their breath, only the silent sound of rain filled the air.

With a splashing sound, Poseidon slowly rose from the ground and spoke.

"Not bad. Thanks to you, I recalled a memory from a very long time ago..."

With a bang, one wall of the abandoned factory collapsed, and a large refrigerated truck emerged. The Great Sage Heaven's Equal, still driving as if he were piloting a magic cloud, poked his head out the window.

"No one is dead yet, right? Hurry up and get in."

I could see Perseus, pinned under the wheels, his hands trembling uncontrollably.

Jung Heewon ended up driving the truck.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal boarded the refrigerated compartment with me and listened to the events that had unfolded in such a short time.

"So, you used the power of a recorder."

"You don't seem very surprised."

"I knew you were a recorder from the moment you first entered."

We gazed at the constellations huddled individually on the floor of the truck. Their faces were still those of frail old men, yet their eyes held a strangely elevated look. Perhaps the mythical landscape they had witnessed previously had brought about some kind of change within them.

"Did you know what would happen if you brought me here?"

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal nodded with a bitter expression. It was a look that seemed to say that he had desired this outcome, yet at the same time, he had wished it would not turn out this way.

"Now Zeus, Poseidon, and Demeter will be able to use their full power."

One waters, another grows seeds, and the remaining one can use electricity. Although it was a miracle classified merely as magic, I thought it was still something to have this much power.

"Those three are probably all that can be used."

"Why?"

"Most of those guys can't even properly remember who they are."

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal spoke, observing Odin, who was staring blankly into the void, and the other constellations.

"It's like Alzheimer's in humans."

The fragments of the mythical constellations could not function as precisely as Han Sooyoung's [Avatar]. The Great Sage explained that most of them had either malfunctioned like Odin due to the prolonged disconnection from their main bodies, or had partially forgotten their memories of the <Star Stream>.

"Ugh—"

Turning around at a low groan, I saw Dansu ahjussi opening his eyes, having regained consciousness.

"Ahjussi, are you alright?"

I gently supported Dansu ahjussi and gave him a little water I had brought from the cafeteria. After lightly wetting his throat, Dansu ahjussi's condition was noticeably better than before. Feeling a strange sensation for a moment, I quickly examined his wound.

「The size of the wound has shrunk noticeably.」

It was impossible. Dansu ahjussi had clearly suffered a wound that was close to a serious injury. For such a wound to heal this quickly...

"I knew my friend would be able to pull it off."

As if he had heard my words even in his dazed state, Dansu ahjussi smiled while holding my hand.

I put my thoughts aside for a moment, nodded at him, and replied.

"It is a method I wouldn't have even thought of if it weren't for you."

Who would have known? That I would join hands with Zeus or Poseidon.

Dansu ahjussi quietly shook his head and spoke in a slightly languid voice.

"It wasn't something I came up with."

"Huh?"

"I met Kim Dokja just once, while he was living in my friend's body."

For a moment, I couldn't understand what he was saying. Then I realized.

Kim Dokja, who had been living in this body. Dansu ahjussi had actually spoken to the 'Third Kim Dokja'.

"It was before I was imprisoned. It was only once, but I had a brief conversation with him."

"What did you talk about?"

Dansu ahjussi glanced at the Great Sage Heaven's Equal at my question. Watching the Great Sage pretend to pick his ear, Dansu ahjussi spoke.

"He asked if there wasn't an ending where everyone gets along well."

I could feel the Great Sage's body trembling faintly at Dansu ahjussi's words. Perhaps the Great Sage was hearing this story for the first time, too.

"What did you tell him?"

"I answered that it would probably be difficult."

"What did Kim Dokja say?"

"He asked if it might be possible if we really pushed it."

I imagined the Third Kim Dokja who would have conveyed those words to Dansu ahjussi. With that very expression Dansu ahjussi is making right now, the Third would have said:

"When you look up at the sky, the universe is vast, and the stars are so beautiful."

In this world of the <Star Stream> where the sky is invisible, he must have imagined it relying on the light of a single star.

"Isn't there such a thing as an ending where everyone lives happily together in a very big house?"

An ending where everyone lives happily together in a huge house. It was certainly a beautiful story.

「But why do I have such an ominous premonition after hearing that story?」

Seeing my expression, Dansu ahjussi suddenly spoke.

"Friend."

"Yes?"

"I'm sorry."

Before I could even ask what that meant, sparks began to fly in the air with a 'tsutsu' sound. The startled constellations murmured, and the Great Sage, his expression hardening, sprang to his feet. We immediately stepped out of the truck.

The smartphone in my pocket buzzed. As soon as I answered, the Eldest's voice pierced my ears.

—You idiot! What on earth have you done!

"Yes?"

—What are you going around recording?!

I suddenly recalled the fact that this world was created by the Third's imagination.

「Perhaps the Third has read my records, too.」

I looked at a high-rise building in the city center in the distance. From the upper floors of the building, I saw an ominous swirling vortex. It was a dazzling vortex, as if all the starlight in the universe had been gathered into one.

—Get out of there! Right now!

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal spoke.

"It was bound to happen."

Hearing the Great Sage's sigh, I realized a fact I had forgotten.

「This damned <Star Stream> turns even someone's wish to 'see the ending' into a scenario.」

And if the 'Oldest Dream' dreams of it—

[Soon, a n■w sc■nar■o will b■gin.]

That 'dream' will surely come true.

「Atop a towering skyscraper in the city center, a man in a white coat stood.」

996 Episode 60 Star Fragments (4)

The place where he opened his eyes was a pure white room. A room so white it made his eyes ache, reminiscent of a sterile room. Inside that room, he lay there all alone, like a person who had suddenly come into existence.

「The third Kim Dokja thought. No. There is no such thing as a person who suddenly comes into existence.」

Watching the sentence floating in the air, he realized it was a description of himself.

「He remembers everything—the 'why' and 'how' of his arrival here.」

Three days had already passed since he first entered this place.

「During that time, he read only one story.」

The Third knew exactly which story he had read. On the floor where he had slept, the book lay upside down, its spine exposed.

『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』.

He spent his time in this white void devouring that story. He slept when exhaustion took him and read the moment his eyes opened. He felt no hunger here.

The books stored on the simple bookshelf were classified by language editions from various countries. Since Korean was the only language he could comprehend, he had chosen the Korean edition.

「Today was the turn to read the final chapter of that book.」

He had been overwhelmed by a torrent of thoughts while devouring the text.

「"Kim Dokja, you only get one chance."」

「"For me, it was always only once."」

Certain parts of the book made his heart tremble, while others filled him with a terrible, hollow sadness.

「"Kim Dokja said he read that novel when he was fifteen."」

At times the prose was tender; at others, it carried a heart-wrenching longing.

「"What if that guy can't read that novel?"」

He also felt an endless, aching desire to see someone.

「"So, you're saying we should show the novel written here to Dokja ahjussi from another worldline? Is my understanding correct?"」

When he finally reached the last chapter, he inadvertently stopped.

Why? He felt as though he shouldn't read this story to the very end. It felt as if he wouldn't be able to compose himself if he finished the final page. Swept away by the wave of stories surging from an unknown source, he feared he would never be able to rise back to the surface.

「Too much time has passed.」

It struck him once again that he had remained here for far too long.

「The third Kim Dokja thought. 'My eldest brother must be looking for me.'」

The image of Wukong wandering around, searching for him with a grim expression, flashed through his mind.

By now, the house must be turned upside down. Not just Wukong, but Hyunsung and Heewon must be looking for him as well.

「I have to go back.」

After deep contemplation, he put down the book and looked up.

"Huh? Aren't you going to read any further?"

He wondered when it had started. Someone was looking down at him. The man had pure white skin that matched the space and wore a neatly draped white coat.

"That is where the truly touching part begins."

The Third opened his eyes wide.

He was surprised for two reasons: the man looked remarkably similar to himself, and his attire perfectly mirrored the protagonist from the novel he had been reading.

"Who are you?"

He asked after a moment of hesitation.

Although he had arrived here, he did not know who the owner of this place was. The man who had initially brought him here was a completely different person.

「"Friend, the things you have been wondering about all along are written in that story. Go to the place the book told you about."」

The person who had revealed the secrets of 『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』 to him. He, too, had been a trustworthy person, and for that reason, the Third had followed his advice without suspicion. He had lost consciousness while searching for the location described in the book, and when he woke, he was here.

"This is my house."

"Your house?"

The Third looked around slowly before speaking.

"It is a very big house."

"That is exactly the sad part."

He looked intently at the man. He bore a striking resemblance to himself. As he gazed quietly into the man's eyes, he felt as though he were being sucked into the distant, cold reaches of the universe.

"You are..."

"I'm Kim Dokja."

Kim Dokja—that was his own name as well. Yet, for some reason, when this man said 'Kim Dokja', the Third felt as though his name had been stolen. The name seemed to suit the man before him much better than it did himself.

"It's the same name as mine."

"Not the same."

Kim Dokja grinned.

"Because I am 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'."

"Snowfield Kim Dokja?"

"The guy I like calls me that. You can call me Snowfield if you prefer."

As if pleased with the nickname, Snowfield nodded and asked.

"What should I call you?"

"I..."

「The third thought of his name.」

Reading the sentence floating in the air, he decided on his title.

"Please call me Third."

"Alright."

Snowfield and the Third looked at each other for a moment.

The Third was the first to speak. Looking down at the book he had stopped reading, he asked.

"You are the protagonist of this story, aren't you?"

"No, I am someone who wanted to be the protagonist."

The Third couldn't understand what that meant. Snowfield shook his head lightly, as if it were of no consequence, and asked.

"What about you?"

"Me?"

"Didn't you want to be the protagonist while reading?"

The Third pondered for a moment.

Certainly, while reading the story, the Third felt like he had briefly become the lead. He had cleared the scenarios and stood with his companions, feeling like he had become the Kim Dokja within the pages.

"I didn't want to be the protagonist."

"Really? Aren't you resentful?"

"Resentful?"

"Why should the protagonist be another 'Kim Dokja' instead of me? Don't you feel that way?"

The Third found it difficult to grasp those words. Instead, he gave a different answer.

"I actually prefer watching other people."

"Watch?"

"This story is like that, too."

The Third continued speaking while looking at the folded spine of the book.

"The protagonist is Kim Dokja, but actually, Kim Dokja reads and watches over the other characters."

The Third spoke briefly about the latter part of the story's ending. The protagonist splitting into countless fragments, and the characters struggling through the scenarios to reclaim him.

"The protagonist gave up his place to make others the protagonists."

As if finding that interpretation interesting, Snowfield nodded slightly.

"But did the protagonist really want to give up his place?"

"Huh?"

"He finally knew the warmth of that position. He barely understood what it meant to be loved. Do you think he really wanted to step down from it?"

The Third remained silent.

The two Kim Dokjas looked at each other once again. The Third's eyes slowly widened. He asked in a trembling voice,

"You are 'that Kim Dokja'."

Snowfield remained silent. His silence was his affirmation. The Third asked,

"Did the scattered Kim Dokjas return at the end?"

"The end of that book is an open ending."

"Wait a minute, that's a spoiler."

"You would have found out anyway."

Snowfield chuckled and began walking leisurely around the white space.

"I wandered the universe collecting various editions of this book. I was curious if I might see a different ending in another universe."

Only then did the Third understand why so many different editions of the book were shelved on the white bookshelf.

"So, was there an ending you were looking for?"

"No."

The Third felt a distant resonance in that answer. It was a resonance transmitted from a primordial source he was unaware of.

"That is why I felt I had to write it myself."

"You?"

Snowfield did not answer. In that silence, the Third felt an inexplicable threat. This white space, which he had initially perceived as merely peculiar, began to feel alien and dangerous.

"Why did you bring me here?"

"Because I need you to complete the story."

"Because I, too, am one of the countless fragmented Kim Dokjas?"

Snowfield nodded. Watching that nod, the Third recalled the actions of his brothers that he had been unable to understand until now.

His brothers had been trying to protect him from this story. They had been making efforts unknown to him to block this information and keep him safe in a sheltered world.

"In the end, you found me."

"Yes."

"Am I going to die now?"

"No, you are going to read the book."

Saying this, Snowfield picked up the volume the Third had set aside.

"You are going to finish this book."

"I don't want to read it."

The Third shook his head and pleaded.

"Please send me back. I want to meet my brothers."

"Your brothers are all here."

Saying this, Snowfield took off his coat. His chest was visible through his black shirt. Sentences etched like tattoos within his skin were rippling deeply.

"Your brothers—who had to endure a terrible scenario and become sacrifices to dreams while you were hiding here—are all here."

The metallic scent of blood wafted from somewhere. The Third recoiled in fear. But his feet kept sinking deeper and deeper, as if he were walking through a heavy snowfield.

Snowfield approached him.

"You must read the book for everyone. You must finish Kim Dokja's work."

The book he had stopped reading unfolded right before his eyes.

"And imagine the dream we have longed for so much."

The Third struggled desperately to escape. But his gaze was already fixed on the pages. Like someone born to read it, his eyes greedily devoured the sentences. His breathing became ragged, and his heart beat with a strange, frantic rhythm.

「I will write the final chapter for you forever and ever.」

The page turned of its own accord. As the unfolded sentence seeped into his vision, the Third froze. All he could do was read. Read and read again.

And so, he finally reached the final chapter of the story.

「The story she had not yet finished was there. A sentence she had wanted to write someday, if not now. Thinking of that sentence, Han Sooyoung smiled like a fool.」

The moment he read that sentence, the Third shed tears. Deeply accumulated longing and sorrow festered and flowed. Why does the story end here?

Why is an open ending not open to him?

「The universe was opening up before his eyes.」

Dazzling rays of light streamed from the Third's entire body. It was a light so brilliant and beautiful it was astonishing to think such a thing had been hidden within him.

「The Third realized what he had to imagine.」

He felt the world creaking and the universe twisting.

"Next."

The Third asked.

"What will happen?"

The Third understood everything now. The reason Snowfield had sought him out, the reason Kim Dokja fragments existed, and the tragedy unfolding across the entire universe as a result.

Snowfield asked.

"Are you curious about the ending?"

The Third hesitated. Depending on his answer, the fate of the universe would change.

"Can I see the ending too?"

"It is possible if you help me. Then what happens?"

"The scenario will begin."

Snowfield said with a smile.

"All the Kim Dokjas will gather, and finally, a single dream will be born again."

A single dream.

The Third slowly closed his eyes and imagined a certain scene. As if adding color to that landscape, Snowfield whispered.

"Everyone Kim Dokja loved will gather here."

A thud echoed from somewhere. The Third snapped his eyes open. It was not a sound coming from inside this room.

Thump.

The sound echoed once again.

Snowfield stared toward the source with a strangely hardened expression, then let out a deep, low sigh.

"The person we've been waiting for is coming."

As Snowfield lightly waved his hand, a small screen appeared in the air.

「"Block them! Block them no matter what!"」

At the entrance, which appeared to be the first floor of the building, people were fighting against men in suits. The first to catch his eye were Wukong and Heewon.

Wukong was recklessly fending off the men in suits while repeatedly calling out a name.

「"Youngest!"」

Following them, other figures came into view. An old man wearing a Marine Corps cap spitting water, an old man scattering seeds, and another zapping people with a stun gun.

And at the center of those old men stood a man who bore a striking resemblance to Kim Dokja.

"The protagonist."

The Third blurted the words out without realizing it. Snowfield nodded in response.

"Our brother will arrive soon."

The air shook violently. The space distorted uneasily, and something was trying to cross over into this place.

Snowfield said with a dazzling smile,

"Let's build a 'big house' for everyone."

---

"It's over there!"

We rode the refrigerated truck driven by Jung Heewon straight toward the high-rise building.

「We must not let the scenario begin.」

I was certain of one thing, if nothing else.

「We must not let the 'something' I am thinking of burst out from beyond that vortex.」

With the sound of tires grinding, the truck came to a stop. As the Great Sage Heaven's Equal kicked open the truck door and stepped out, we saw men in suits rushing toward us as if they had been waiting. the Great Sage Heaven's Equal swiftly knocked one of the men down, then swung the iron pipe he was holding like a staff and shouted.

"That is the building. Go inside!"

The men in suits surrounded the Great Sage Heaven's Equal and attacked him. Amidst the mercilessly ringing sounds of gunfire, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's lion's roar could be heard.

"Youngest! Can you hear me!"

Hearing that desperate cry, we entered the building through the opening that the Great Sage Heaven's Equal had made.

「'Kim Dokja' is on the rooftop of this building.」

It was a skyscraper that looked at least 50 stories tall at first glance. I immediately checked for the elevator. However, the area in front of the elevator was packed with people. On top of that, there were men in suits chasing us. If we got on the elevator and were trapped inside, this world would end right here.

"Let's take the stairs."

At Jung Heewon's words, we turned toward the emergency staircase. Since many of our group were elderly, we wanted to avoid the stairs at all costs, but we had no choice.

"Don't worry! My body is hardened by walking 10,000 steps every day!"

Poseidon, adjusting his Marine Corps cap, shouted boldly as he walked past me. Indeed, does the God of the Sea climb stairs well? I don't know where on earth he walked 10,000 steps while being trapped in an abandoned factory all this time, but—following the constellations letting out thunderous shouts, I climbed the stairs feeling like the youngest member of a hiking club. Honestly, climbing stairs was torture for me, too. And 50 floors to begin with. With a body that couldn't even use the system, it was a height no different from Mount Everest.

「Kim Dokja thought.」

He simply couldn't hold back his rising breath without writing it down.

「I am Yoo Joonghyuk.」

I wondered if I really needed to be Yoo Joonghyuk just for something as trivial as climbing stairs, but there was no other way right now.

"Hah, hah, damn it."

We had climbed just over ten floors when Poseidon and Zeus, who were a few steps ahead, gasped for breath and bent over. Demeter, feeling dizzy, was also supported by Dansu ahjussi. You really can't hide your age.

"What are you doing? Why aren't you coming quickly?"

Jung Heewon, who had been running at the front, shouted as she looked down at the landing. Her entire body was covered in someone's blood, suggesting the cleanup upstairs was already finished. She grabbed my wrist and pulled me along, glancing at the constellations behind her.

"Leave them behind. You said there was no time."

It seemed Jung Heewon hadn't placed much hope in the constellations to begin with. However, I couldn't simply cast aside even a small part of my strength.

"Heewon-ssi, over here!"

The emergency exit on the stairwell opened, and the men in suits who had been waiting rushed in. As Jung Heewon swung her wooden sword to push them back, screams began to be heard from the floor below. The constellations, caught by the tail, were being brutally beaten by the men in suits.

Finally, unable to stand it any longer, Poseidon stepped forward.

「Poseidon let out the breath he had been holding.」

Toward the men charging in with a human wave, Poseidon began spitting water from his mouth.

"Oooooh!"

The men in suits, suddenly struck by a water cannon mixed with Poseidon's saliva, recoiled in anger. The cannon soon turned into a weak stream of water.

"Cough, darling, just a glass of water—"

Demeter, holding a water bottle nearby, quickly gave Poseidon some water.

"Hit him now!"

While Poseidon hesitated, the men in suits had come right up to his face. Poseidon, whose water cannon hadn't finished recharging yet, stood awkwardly, clutching a broken recorder.

It was Zeus, who had been watching all this time, who pushed Poseidon aside and stepped forward.

Tsutsutsutsutsu!

The sound of an electric shocker striking the floor. The men, electrocuted in succession, recoiled in shock and fainted. However, only the men in the front row had collapsed. The lower floor was still packed with men in suits chasing us. Constellations and men were engaged in a chaotic battle all around.

"Leave us behind. It will be troublesome if we get delayed."

Demeter spoke to me, looking at me. It was the first time she had spoken in such a clear voice, so I listened to her with a slight surprise.

"I don't know what is going on, but you are likely the only one here who can stop 'him'."

Demeter spoke as if she knew who was waiting for me on this rooftop.

"I will chase after them soon. I have no intention of yielding this myth to you."

Zeus added, growling as well. Judging by the situation, it seemed I should leave this place to them and head up.

I exchanged glances with Dansu ahjussi and Jung Heewon, then immediately went upstairs.

Before I knew it, the floor count had passed the 20th and then the 30th. However, the situation was not going smoothly. Just as we reached the 35th floor, we came face-to-face with a massive wall in the middle of the landing.

Upon closer inspection, it wasn't a wall, but a human back.

"Hyunsung-ssi?"

Lee Hyunsung, his eyes strangely clouded, turned to look at me.

"Dokja-ssi... I'm sorry."

"Yes?"

Just as I thought something was off, Jung Heewon pushed me aside and ran forward. At the same time, Lee Hyunsung, who had rushed forward, collided with Jung Heewon in the middle. Lee Hyunsung's fist and Jung Heewon's wooden sword clashed, and the broken tip of the sword tumbled across the floor.

"Heewon-ssi! Hyunsung-ssi!"

I quickly used 「Revision」.

「Lee Hyunsung realized belatedly what he had done.」

But for some reason, Lee Hyunsung could not regain his senses.

Jung Heewon, rolling on the floor and struggling with Lee Hyunsung, shouted.

"This person is unconscious!"

"Dokja-ssi, I'm sorry..."

Lee Hyunsung, who was merely repeating the same words. He was currently in a state where normal 'record execution' was impossible.

「Someone must have put Lee Hyunsung in that state.」

"Go up! I'll hold him!"

「i have no choice but to leave Lee Hyunsung to Jung Heewon.」

Jung Heewon's gaze changed completely upon receiving my record. Throwing away the broken wooden sword, Jung Heewon clutched the telescopic baton thrown by the men in suits.

"And—"

Every time Lee Hyunsung's fist and Jung Heewon's baton clashed, a voice called out to me.

"Because I wanted to fight this person at least once."

[The O■dae sto■ry ■ is dream■ng./오■된 ■대 설■가 꿈■거■고 있습■다.]

The power of the story was growing stronger. The story of <Kim Dokja Company> was reacting. I could feel the gravitational pull of the story intensifying. If I delay any longer here, another <Kim Dokja Company> member might really come here as well.

"Please."

Before that, I had to reach the rooftop of the building and stop 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

44th floor, 45th floor… We continued running upwards. Dansu ahjussi gasped for breath but never once showed a hint of fatigue. Just as we reached the 46th floor, I glanced back at him and asked.

"Ahjussi."

"Yes."

"About what you said earlier..."

In the truck, Dansu ahjussi apologized to me.

"Did you happen to give the 'Book' to Kim Dokja in this world?"

Dansu ahjussi nodded without showing any signs of being flustered.

"That is correct."

"Are you going to stop me?"

If it is certain that Dansu ahjussi gave the Book to the Third, then he is ultimately helping 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

His profile suddenly felt unfamiliar. He was still my friend, but at the same time, he was the Lee Dansu who had lived for eight years I was unaware of.

"I have no intention of doing that, friend."

Dansu ahjussi shook his head coolly and gazed at the marker indicating the ascent to the 47th floor.

"Because I understand why my friend wants to see the end of this world."

I nodded, too.

There must be a reason why he is being honest with me. Perhaps he is in a state where it is difficult for him to take a definite side, either me or Snowfield Kim Dokja.

"However, there is still something I cannot give up."

I thought about what he cannot give up. It was probably about the person he has been searching for all along.

「Noh Kyunghwan's daughter, Jiyoon.」

His daughter—Jiyoon's soul is in the theater of 'Asmodeus'. If so, perhaps he has decided to get Jiyoon back in exchange for delivering the 'Book' to the third child.

"Friend."

However, the moment we reached the 48th floor, Dansu ahjussi's expression changed. I, too, stopped in my tracks. An ominous vibration was spreading throughout the entire building. We looked out the window. Just as the sunlight seemed to vanish in an instant, a massive shadow enveloped the building. Screams could be heard from somewhere. The sensation of the unreality becoming reality. The downy hairs on my body stood on end.

「Something escaped from that 'sky'.」

With a deafening roar, the building's exterior wall was torn off in its entirety. I crouched in the thick dust, gripping the handrail on the landing. Sparks of probability raging in the void. When I opened my eyes again, I saw the piercing eyes of a monstrous creature through a crack in the shattered exterior wall.

「The probability of the world was collapsing.」

It was a monster I knew well.

The Beast Lord's partner.

The Mad Dragon, who had understood her sorrow longer than anyone else, was there.

「Chimera Dragon.」

The moment I looked into its eyes, I realized. That 'Chimera Dragon' was not in its right mind, just like Lee Hyunsung downstairs.

With a chilling sensation, I turned to look beside me.

"Ahjussi! Hurry—"

Dansu ahjussi, who had definitely been by my side until the end of the battle, was nowhere to be seen.

"Ahjussi?"

Ahjussi's shoes were rolling on the floor. A piece of debris that looked like his leg lay scattered across the ground. It felt as if the world had stopped.

"Ahjussi—"

The moment I stood up blankly and reached out my hand toward the traces of ahjussi, the Chimera Dragon opened its massive mouth toward me.

「Breath.」

The moment a fierce breath spewed from the Chimera Dragon's mouth.

Bang!

Someone struck its snout. The Great Sage Heaven's Equal, with his dazzling golden hair fluttering in the wind, was struggling atop the Chimera Dragon's head.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal, meeting my gaze, shouted.

"Go! Hurry!"

I shook my head. Even for you, it is impossible. With your current body, you cannot face a monster like that.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal spoke.

"Have you forgotten who I am?"

Dazzling stories were shimmering across his entire body.

「And so, the King of the Stone Monkeys has finally regained his power.」

The golden robes that enveloped the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's entire body, Thunder flashed from the clouds enveloping his feet.

「Here, the darling of the Heavenly Realm shall once again display his might.」

Only then did I realize what had happened.

「The scales of probability have shifted.」

Now, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal has amplified his stature precisely on the scales of probability to the point of grandeur, while maintaining a precarious balance just enough to prevent this world from collapsing.

"Calm down, demon! If your master knew you were doing this, he would be sad!"

While the Great Sage Heaven's Equal bought time, I hurriedly searched for Dansu ahjussi.

"Ahjussi!"

Dansu ahjussi was nowhere to be seen. He might have been swallowed by the Chimera Dragon, or he might have crashed to the ground. The Great Sage Heaven's Equal's voice rang out once again.

"Go! I will find that fellow!"

Right now, I have no choice but to trust the Great Sage Heaven's Equal. I have no choice but to believe that he will save ahjussi somehow. I started climbing the stairs again.

The 49th floor.

As I finally reached the top floor of the building, it felt as though I could smell the scent of winter from somewhere.

「Why did Snowfield Kim Dokja plan all of this?」

I recalled the moment I first encountered 'Snowfield'. I thought of the guy who used to cheer me on. I thought of the guy who liked warm tea, the guy who felt sad or happy at the story, and the guy who hated the 'Demon King of Salvation'.

「What exactly was the landscape he ultimately wanted to see through all this tragedy?」

A sign reading 'No Entry for Unauthorized Personnel' was posted in front of the door leading to the rooftop. It seemed as though the sign was speaking. That from here on, only those involved in this story are allowed to enter.

As if asking, "How dare someone like you call yourself an 'authorized person'?"

Certainly, in the past, I might have hesitated here. But not now. The history I had walked and the people I had loved were speaking for me.

「Unless he is involved in this story.」

I placed my hand on the doorknob without hesitation.

「Who could possibly speak of this story?」

As I opened the door, the expansive view of the rooftop came into sight. Standing there, where pure white snowflakes fluttered as if snow had fallen, was a man who looked better in a white coat than anyone else.

"You're late."

Snowfield Kim Dokja was there.

And beside him stood the third, who had been stripped of all his stories and reduced to the form of a small baby.

The third was sleeping peacefully, using a volume of 『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』 as a pillow.

As if finding the third adorable, Snowfield Kim Dokja gently stroked his head and smiled, saying,

"Welcome to the big house."

The sky began to open.

998 Episode 60 Star Fragments (6)

---

Broken fragments were falling from the sky, which had cracked into pieces. It was the sight of the solid probability that had constituted this world collapsing.

I gazed up at the sky for a moment before opening my mouth.

"Kim Dokja."

As I called that name, Snowfield's eyes wavered slightly. I stared straight at him and said.

"You aren't this kind of person."

Snowfield laughed as if finding my words quite amusing and asked back.

"What kind of person am I?"

I thought about Snowfield.

I still don't know him well. I know he drinks tea, but I don't know why he started drinking it; I know he grew up in the Snowfield with Cheon Inho, but I don't know how long he endured the time there.

"Someone who hates Kim Dokja, but who actually wants to become Kim Dokja more than anyone else."

Nevertheless, I have watched him for a long time. From the beginning of the 41st round until now, I have felt his gaze watching over me.

"And."

Therefore, I could say this with certainty, at least.

"Someone who likes my story."

Snowfield nodded.

"I still like your story."

"Then stop here."

I said, watching Snowfield's fingertips. Every time his hand brushed against the small head of the third Kim Dokja, I could see the third Kim Dokja's story crumbling and being absorbed little by little.

Snowfield shook his head and said.

"I can't do that. Because this child wants it too."

"I don't think so."

I already knew, through the cases of the 'Demon King of Salvation' or the 'Great King of Fear', what happens when fragments of Kim Dokja are absorbed by another Kim Dokja.

The third, now a baby, was slowly losing his story, but he hadn't completely surrendered himself to Snowfield.

"If he really wanted it, he would have already been absorbed by you."

Instead of refuting my words, Snowfield let out a low sigh and said.

"He wants to see it, too. <Kim Dokja Company> gathering in one place."

"..."

"Now they will gather one by one. The 'Big House' that Kim Dokja so desperately longed for is finally being completed."

I recalled Lee Hyunsung, who had repeated my name like a round song, and the Chimera Dragon, roaring in a frenzy.

Thunder struck from somewhere. The Great Sage Heaven's Equal was exerting his power against the 'Chimera Dragon'.

"If you do that, this world will shatter. There is no way this fragile reality can handle the entirety of <Kim Dokja Company>."

The mere appearance of a single 'Chimera Dragon' had already jeopardized the probability of the world.

However, if the entirety of <Kim Dokja Company> were to gather here, the entire world would not be able to withstand the gravitational pull of the story and would explode.

"We'll have to try to know. It's something we've never attempted before."

Snowfield's expression was nonchalant. I couldn't tell what he was thinking.

Even if it were possible to gather the entire <Kim Dokja Company> as he claimed, what was the point of realizing that here?

In the end, I would have to return to the 41st round, and he…

For a moment, I felt my mind go cold.

「What was it that Snowfield Kim Dokja truly wanted?」

Perhaps he wasn't interested in the ending of the '41st round' in the first place; the fact that he laid down everything and descended upon the '41st round'—maybe— I bit my lip tightly and asked again.

"If the entire <Kim Dokja Company> is gathered? What are you going to do next?"

"I have to show them 'the one and only Kim Dokja'."

"Who is that 'one and only Kim Dokja'?"

The fact that those words had come out of my mouth felt strange. Yet, my mouth was moving on its own.

"So, you're saying you intend to become 'the one and only Kim Dokja'."

At that, Snowfield tilted his head.

"What's the problem with that?"

"I can't let it be like that."

"You can't let it be like that."

Snowfield quietly repeated my words, then wore a smile that was both knowing and enigmatic. Then, tilting his head at a subtle angle, he looked at me.

"Why are you saying that? Surely... you haven't come to want to become 'the one and only Kim Dokja' too?"

I couldn't answer.

Do I want to become 'the one and only Kim Dokja'?

"At the very least, I can't let you become one."

"Why? You know perfectly well who I am."

Those words pierced the corner of my heart painfully.

「He is the same '49% Kim Dokja' as me.」

I don't know 'how he has lived,' but I know 'how he was born'. Because he was born in the same way as me.

On the day the 'Oldest Dream', which had briefly become one, was torn to pieces, the day countless 'Kim Dokja fragments' became meteors and scattered across the entire universe, he and I were born into this story.

「Kim Dokja, who was not chosen by <Kim Dokja Company>.」

We originated from the same source of 'Kim Dokja'.

"I thought that at least you, my 'true brother', would understand me well."

"…"

"And I understand you, too. How you felt after knowing your true identity, and what thoughts you lived with—"

I shook my head.

"I told you to stop."

Because he was not just any other 'Kim Dokja', I had to prevent him from becoming 'the one and only Kim Dokja'.

「He is the 'Kim Dokja' who hates 'Kim Dokja' more than anyone else.」

I could not even dare to imagine what would happen to this entire universe if he became the one and only 'Oldest Dream'.

Gathering the power of 「Revision」 flickering at my fingertips, I slowly approached him. I was the only one who could stop him now. I could not rely on the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, nor on anyone else.

"What if you don't want to? What are you going to do?"

Snowfield smiled.

"Do you really think you can stop me?"

With that question, a formidable sense of pressure emanated from Snowfield's entire body. Sparks began to fly across the area due to the pressure, powerful enough to distort the probability of this world.

「An intimidation comparable to facing a myth-grade constellation.」

I realize it once again. The 'Snowfield' standing before me now is a being who has risen to a position equal to the 'Round Table' constellations I had encountered.

Nevertheless, I did not back down. Because I, too, now stand under the same sky as them.

As I continued to approach, a glint flickered in Snowfield's eyes. He gazed intently at me, then lightly snapped his fingers.

Tsutsutsutsutsu!

The next moment, the air split open, and two men appeared. As expected, they were men dressed in suits. Unusually, each man was wearing a mask on his face.

One wore a mask reminiscent of a white dragon, while the other had cheeks that resembled an unpleasant ghost. It was a mask.

"Is that him?"

As Snowfield nodded, the two men began to approach me.

"I'm sorry. I hold no particular grudge against you."

In that instant, I felt like I knew who they were.

「Stars that absorbed fragments of the snowfield and grew infinitely closer to a 'myth-grade constellation'.」

That 'White Dragon Mask' must be the 'White Flame Dragon of Lamentation', and the 'Ghost Mask' must be the 'Drinking Demon.' They, too, were introduced into this timeline along with Snowfield.

I prepared my logs with tension. But could I fight them with only the power of my 「Revision」 right now?

"Step back!"

Just as I smelled the sea from somewhere, the sound of a jet of water gushing out was heard. As I quickly bent down, I saw the White Flame Dragon and the Demon frown and retreat rapidly.

When I turned around, the constellations were there. The first ones to catch my eye were Poseidon and Zeus.

"Damn it, my knees almost gave out. Why is it so high?"

Constellations with piercing eyes were approaching this way. Demeter, Odin, and even the constellations whose names I do not yet know.

"I couldn't possibly miss a spectacle like this. Wouldn't you agree?"

To witness the end of this world, the stars had defeated all the men in suits and come this far.

Snowfield muttered as if surprised by the constellations.

"I didn't know they were still alive."

As if conscious of Snowfield's words, the 'White Flame Dragon of Lamentation' hurriedly opened its mouth.

"I apologize. We will handle this."

"So the vomit of myth-grade constellations has gathered here."

As the 'Drinking Demon' added in a voice of contempt, Poseidon scowled.

"Where do these guys—who haven't even heard of their modifier come from—"

And the 'Drinking Demon's' body moved. Before Poseidon could even finish speaking, the 'Drinking Demon', having advanced to within striking him, extended a lightning-fast fist toward the constellations.

"Cough."

The constellations were knocked out by a single blow.

Judging by their movements, both constellations appeared to be cases specialized in 'physical abilities', much like the Great Sage Heaven's Equal in this world.

The constellations did not back down and unleashed their strength. Poseidon fired a water cannon from his mouth, and Zeus unleashed an electric shock with a stun gun.

However, as if they had anticipated it, the two constellations dodged the attacks with swift footwork and subdued the constellations one by one.

"Aaaargh!"

The constellations with broken limbs screamed and slumped into the ground.

Poseidon looked at me.

"What are you doing! Run!"

I was already running, actually. Now was the perfect opportunity to approach Snowfield, as the constellations were buying me time.

"Where are you going in such a hurry?"

But the 'Drinking Demon' was much faster. Just as a large hand grabbed my shoulder, a chilling voice reached my ears.

"It wouldn't matter if I put a hole in your stomach."

The moment I hurriedly turned around, something pushed me hard. As I tumbled to my feet on the floor with a groan, I saw the startled face of the 'Drinking Demon'. The man who had taken his blow in my place was sprawled on the ground. Blood was gushing from the man's waist, his side flesh torn off in its entirety.

With a dazed look on my face, I called out to the man.

"Ahjussi?"

How could this have happened? Dansu ahjussi, who had disappeared after being attacked by the Chimera Dragon, was there. Even stranger was that Dansu ahjussi was naked.

"Now! Attack!"

The constellations, having regrouped, unleashed their supernatural powers upon the 'White Flame Dragon of Lamentation' and the 'Drinking Demon'.

"Ahjussi! Snap out of it! Ahjussi!"

I hurriedly shook Dansu ahjussi. His flank, torn off entirely, was in a state where his internal organs were completely ruptured and beyond repair. An irreversible, severe injury. No matter how resilient a person's life force, they could not survive with such a wound to the stomach.

"Don't worry, friend."

Nevertheless, Dansu ahjussi shook his head as if to say he was fine. And then, gasping for breath with a pale face, he added,

"I will not die."

The next moment, ahjussi's wounds began to heal little by little. Watching his wounds engulfed in dazzling rays of light, something suddenly struck me.

The other constellations had each awakened small special abilities, and just as I can use the power of 'Record', ahjussi must have also blossomed some ability.

And I felt I knew what that ability was.

"Is it the power of the 'King of Immortality'?"

Dansu ahjussi nodded.

"Go and do what my friend has to do."

A precious moment bought by the constellations and Dansu ahjussi, throwing themselves into the fray.

I nodded and ran straight toward Snowfield.

Just then, Snowfield saw me.

The moment his hand moved toward me, I swayed and dodged it. Judging by his movements, it seemed he, too, was a Chegeunmin 1, just like me.

Snowfield shouted.

"It's no use—"

But in the first place, what I was targeting wasn't Snowfield himself. Bending down, instead of attacking him, I immediately grabbed the small hand of the third Kim Dokja.

"Snap out of it! You mustn't get absorbed!"

Furious sparks began to fly in the air.

This world is ultimately sustained by the imagination of the 'third Kim Dokja'.

「To prevent the tragedy of this world, we must persuade the 'third Kim Dokja'.」

I thought about the third Kim Dokja. To understand him, I had to learn about his other brothers as well.

"The world you dream of is—"

The 'Demon King of Salvation' who had to save others for his own survival.

The 'Great King of Fear' who loved the stories abandoned in the <Star Stream>.

"It's not like that."

And before my eyes stood the last Kim Dokja, who had imprisoned himself to avoid getting involved in the strife between the brothers.

「He is the 'Prisoner of the Golden Cage'. 'Kim Dokja', who inherited the title of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal.」

Trapped in this small prison, he must have long dreamed of a big house.

「In that world, the stars do not threaten humans.」

I looked back at the constellations fighting hard to help us.

「All stories that threaten the reader were intact only within the novel.」

I looked down at the single book supporting his small head—「Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint」.

A reader who wanted not to be a reader more than anyone else.

In this peaceful world, the dream he had was clear.

「He is the youngest of the five 'Sun Wukongs'.」

He is the Kim Dokja who wanted to form a 'family' more than any other Kim Dokja.

"Your family..."

His dream had already come true.

"They are already here."

Feeling young Kim Dokja's small hand wiggling, I thought of the people who have protected this world. I thought of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal who cried out for the youngest, and of Lee Hyunsung and Jung Heewon, who chose this world for Kim Dokja's sake.

They did not choose this ending because they had given up on finding Kim Dokja. It was simply that the Kim Dokja they found was in this world.

「They wanted to become Kim Dokja's family more than anyone else.」

Snowfield said.

"That's a lie."

At Snowfield's words, a small spark shot up in the air.

A lie.

That's right. This world isn't real. But the moment I watched this world, I kept thinking that.

「If so, to what extent was the world I lived in 'truth'?」

Star fragments discarded by the main body were brightly illuminating the dark night on the rooftop. Stories discarded as useless were becoming stories protecting someone here. And so, I thought.

「In this universe where everything is made up of mere 'stories', what value is there in distinguishing between 'real' and 'fake'?」

"If the story someone dedicated their entire life to is a lie."

「Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint, which had been supporting the third's head, began to tear little by little amidst the spark.」

"There is no such thing as truth in this world."

---

Context determines the meaning of a sentence.

What narrative has been built up to reach that sentence? What stories have contributed to each other?

I believed that Kim Dokja would understand the meaning hidden behind the sentences I was speaking.

"So, Kim Dokja, please protect this world."

Snowfield blinked at my words. Then, belatedly, he looked down.

Snowfield had realized. That the 'Kim Dokja' I had just asked for was not himself.

The 『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』, which the third Kim Dokja had cut, swayed precariously.

「"If a story someone dedicated their entire life to is a lie, then there is no such thing as truth in this world."」

I imagined what was happening inside the third's small head.

「Ultimately, this world is a massive 'incite'.」

As my recording ability was exerted to its extreme, the third's imagination was stretching out.

「The crumbling sky began to be restored little by little.」

The third had made a decision.

「Only he can protect this world.」

The world protected by the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, Jung Heewon, and Lee Hyunsung. The third one decided to protect that world together, and to restore the 'reality' of this world by mobilizing his imagination.

「The real and the fake do not matter.」

More than half of the pages of 『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』 placed by the third one's bedside were now broken.

「He must have been curious. He must have wanted to know. He must have missed himself within the story, the companions who lived through it, and all those stories.」

Nevertheless, the third one decided not to be curious about that story anymore. He decided to live in this reality created by that story, in the world he had endured with his family. He decided to accept it as his own life.

「How could he do that?」

In fact, I, who had persuaded him, was also a little surprised. Perhaps it was because the third one's current decision was a choice that neither I nor Snowfield could have made.

Snowfield's eyes trembled violently. He, too, seemed greatly shaken by the fact that 'the Third Kim Dokja' had made this choice.

Tsutsutsutsu.

The vortex that had dominated the sky was gradually shrinking. From a distance, the sound of the 'Chimera Dragon' losing its power could be heard. The movements of the constellations, the 'White Flame Dragon of Lamentation', and the 'Drinking Demon', who had been fighting fierce battles nearby, also became noticeably sluggish.

"Ugh—"

And Snowfield and I, too, were slowly losing strength.

「The 'Third's' imagination has begun to threaten every element that interferes with 'Reality'.」

Snowfield said, glaring at me with a fierce look.

"Let go of my hand."

Snowfield was getting angry for the first time. I shook my head.

"No."

"Then."

A chill ran through Snowfield's eyes.

"This guy is going to die."

Snowfield's white hand gripped the Third Kim Dokja's head tightly. As the Third, who had been dreaming, frowned, the world that had been stabilizing began to shake once again. Snowfield was attempting to forcibly take the remaining fragment of the Third. The Third's soul, refusing to be absorbed, screamed.

I gripped the Third's hand tightly.

"Don't give up."

The legend I possessed flowed into the Third's hand. Subsequently, my story and Snowfield's legend clashed inside the Third.

「The One and Only Kim Dokja.」

A battle began over who would seize control of 'Kim Dokja'.

"You."

Snowfield's eyes widened as he confirmed my power. He seemed to have never imagined I would go this far. I grinned and said.

"If you want to absorb, try absorbing me too."

"Do you think I can't?"

As the stories of the absorbing side and the defending side clawed and tore apart each other's sentences, the Third's interior quickly became a battlefield. It seemed as though the Third's scream could be heard through the empty rift.

Ahhhhh.

But at this moment, there was no other way. Even the power of 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' was growing stronger in real time.

「Snowfield Kim Dokja must have gathered far more fragments than I have.」

During the eight years I was away, he collected countless 'Kim Dokja fragments' scattered across the world and climbed from the bottom of the scenario all the way to the very top. Facing such a guy with a sheer volume of pure 'Kim Dokja fragments' was overwhelming.

That wasn't all. Even if I could handle him, if he were to inject a stronger story into the Third here and force it upon him, the Third's soul would shatter into pieces.

「I had to buy time.」

I needed time for the Great Sage Heaven's Equal and Jung Heewon to defeat their opponents and come to my aid.

I took a deep breath and used the power of 「Revision」 that I had been saving within me. The accumulated probability was sucked out in an instant, and the landscape of the world began to turn upside down.

[Exclusive Skill, '□□', activated!]

The scenery turned into a monochrome landscape. Space-time began to slowly come to a halt.

「An ability I would normally have used merely to buy time to think.」

In this landscape, the space-time coordinates of every being are fixed. To be precise, that was the case for everyone except me.

Enduring the probability from behind, I moved slowly. I utilized the story, that possessed resistance to probability, to the extreme to defy the backlash, and slowly reached out to grab Snowfield's wrist. Then, I carefully removed his hand from the Third's head.

Probability had tightened its grip around my neck as punishment for violating the world's rules, but for now, this was the best option.

The very moment I removed his hand from the Third...

「Snowfield's eyes moved.」

I got goosebumps. Until now, in this colorless landscape—within the blanks of the sentences—only I could move. But Snowfield was looking at me.

"Yes, so this is that ability."

He was even speaking. I felt the balance of probability shift once again. Surprisingly, Snowfield was moving within this alternate dimension, exhibiting a resistance to probability as powerful as mine.

"Why are you so surprised? You weren't the only one capable of exerting power here."

The moment I heard him, something came to mind.

「He's right. There was one more person who could move within this 'landscape'.」

I shook my head.

"You aren't a 'writer'."

Nor did I sense the power of a 'recorder' from him.

"Right, it's not me."

Snowfield replied with a faint smile.

"Because I don't need to record myself."

That meant someone was recording Snowfield's actions on his behalf. A 'recorder' capable of moving him within this landscape while rejecting the influence of my skills.

I recalled the modifiers of several great recorders in my mind. But strangely enough, it didn't seem like they would be able to use such power.

Snowfield asked.

"■■-ah, you really don't know?"

An ominous thought ran through my mind.

Actually, I knew. A recorder who could move him within this landscape and stand against me.

There was only one such 'writer.' The most outstanding writer I knew, and my mentor.

"It doesn't matter."

I bit my lip tightly and threw a punch at him. In a movement as slow as a dream, my fist grazed his cheek.

Snowfield asked.

"So you want to fight?"

As if he had been waiting for this moment for a long time, Snowfield also extended his fist toward me. A fist as slow as mine. It was an attack that was impossible to miss—if I hadn't dodged it, I would have had no excuse even if I were scolded for three nights and four days by my transcendent masters.

Nevertheless, dodging that attack was not easy. Because my body was moving slowly, too.

"Ugh."

A fist that narrowly grazed my nose. I immediately grabbed his arm and attempted a throw. But for some reason, his body did not move.

Snowfield asked me, looking bewildered.

"Are you an idiot?"

Snowfield said, gripping my neck tightly from behind.

"There's no way a throw would work with our strength alone."

"I thought it would work because you're light."

Muttering curses under my breath, I barely managed to break free from his chokehold.

Since our bodies were sluggish, a crude battle of wits ensued. We tried desperately to trip each other, or waited for an opening to land a punch on each other's torsos.

"That kind of punch doesn't hurt."

"Who are you to say that?"

However, even if those cotton candy-like punches luckily landed on each other, they couldn't inflict a fatal wound.

Small cuts began piling up on our faces, and our stamina, rapidly depleted just as we had defied all logic, began to threaten us.

Gasping for breath, Snowfield and I threw punches at each other again and again. How long did we throw punches like that? After taking another blow each, we both knelt down almost simultaneously. It wasn't because it hurt. It was because we were exhausted.

Snowfield spoke.

"You've gotten quite strong."

I didn't think that was something to say while exchanging punches like cotton candy, but Snowfield was smiling at me. It was a smile that seemed to say he was proud of myself, or perhaps to record it.

"At first, you were a guy who couldn't even catch a single Ground Dog."

"Are you underestimating Ground Dogs? If you were in my shoes, you would have had a hard time too."

"Yeah. It is hard to catch them."

We looked at each other for a moment and chuckled. Come to think of it, we had both now become Kim Dokjas who had gone through the scenarios.

I asked.

"What were the scenarios like when you experienced it firsthand?"

"It wasn't easy."

"It looked easy when you were just watching, didn't it?"

"Honestly, it was."

It felt strange to be having this conversation with 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

He and I were both 49% Kim Dokjas.

We were Kim Dokjas born without going through the scenario, thanks to the sacrifice of 51%.

"There is no such thing as an easy story anywhere."

I entered the 41st round and experienced a scenario for the first time, and Snowfield, too, relinquished his position to enter the 41st round and carry out the scenario.

"Of course. There is no easy story."

We walked the path that 51% of Kim Dokja walked, each in our own way. And now we are here.

"Give up."

I said, looking at Snowfield.

"No matter how hard you try, we cannot harm each other here."

Instead of responding to my words, Snowfield looked around at the colorless landscape. A world where everything stood still. A landscape where the people who were fighting, and the stars that were watching us, had all come to a standstill. An unrecorded void.

In this colorless world, perhaps resembling his 'snowfield', Snowfield spoke with an infinitely serene face.

"I suppose so."

The moment I heard those words, I realized something belatedly.

「Snowfield knew my plan from the beginning.」

Nevertheless, Snowfield willingly went along with this story. Perhaps he knew all along.

「From now on, we must begin a truly terrifying story.」

The one and only Kim Dokja that remains.

The story that will determine the conclusion of the 41st round.

"■■-ah, you can't win."

"You won't know until you get to the end."

Snowfield shook his head and gazed somewhere. 『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』, now more than half gone, was fluttering there.

"There are things you can know without reading to the end."

That's right. Both he and I knew the ending of that story.

"No, there are stories we don't know even after reading to the end."

We were currently living a kind of side story. Living through a void not properly described in the main story, we were living a story where only the ending remained.

What was written was merely a trace of the ending of the 41st round. Neither the process leading to that ending nor its interpretation had been determined.

「Because no one has read this story properly yet.」

Snowfield's gaze turned sad as he looked at me.

"I've been watching you for a long time."

"Why?"

"Because I liked your story."

"And now?"

Snowfield didn't answer.

I paused for a moment before asking.

"Kim Dokja."

"Yes."

"Did you transmigrate me in this world?"

It was a question I had pondered for a very long time.

"Are you the one who threw me in the 41st round and made me carry out all these scenarios?"

At first, I thought it was Asmodeus's doing. However, as time passed, I came to realize that this miracle was not something Asmodeus could cause alone.

Furthermore, Asmodeus revealed that there were clearly beings participating in this plan besides himself. And as far as I knew, there were only a few multidimensional beings capable of wielding such a miracle.

Snowfield asked, wearing an enigmatic smile.

"If so?"

I looked up at the sky. The colorless landscape I had created was slowly crumbling. The power of the skill was running out.

Snowfield asked again.

"Do you resent me?"

If the me of the past had heard this question, I would have answered yes. I would have demanded to know why it had to be me, and why I was made to suffer such a tragedy.

I slowly lowered my head and gazed at Snowfield.

"Thank you."

Snowfield's eyes wavered faintly as he looked at me.

These were events I would never experience again. There was profound sorrow and terrible despair. Yet, having survived this world, there was a landscape I could see.

「Crossing all that time, I finally stand before the conclusion of this story.」

Tsutsutsu, the colorless landscape shattered. Taking advantage of Snowfield's momentary hesitation, I shoved his body hard. It was a strength of 1, but it was enough force to bring that limp body down. I climbed on top of him and assumed the pounding position. Even though the tide had completely turned in my favor, Snowfield remained calm.

"You can't beat me."

Snowfield said, and I nodded in response.

"Normally, that would be the case."

Surely, as of this moment, the amount of 'Kim Dokja fragments' he possesses must be greater than mine. Since he has wielded the power of 'Kim Dokja' for much longer than I have, his proficiency in handling that power is naturally higher than mine.

Nevertheless, I punched him straight into the chest. I felt the sentences written on the guy's chest sticking to my fist.

"If you are the 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' I remember, I would surely lose. But—"

I thought of the stars that had entered this world. I thought of Zeus, Poseidon, Demeter, and Odin.

「No myth-grade constellation has ever risked everything to 'go missing' here.」

Then what about 'Snowfield'?

"You didn't come here with 'all your stories', did you?"

At my words, Snowfield's eyes visibly wavered.

"You didn't go 'missing' completely like me, right?"

At first, I was unsure, but now I knew for sure. Perhaps it was a truth that only I, his brother, could sense.

「The 'Snowfield' standing before my eyes right now was not his true form.」

He relinquished his status from the heavens and descended to enter the world of scenarios. And from the very beginning, he cleared every scenario, rebuilding his own narrative anew.

Nevertheless, at this very moment of entering the world of the 'Third', he could not completely abandon his own narrative.

「Snowfield has found a precious story, too.」

I was bound to win this fight. The reason was simple.

"You left 'my story' out there, right?"

1000 Episode 60 Star Fragments (8)

---

Snowfield gave no answer. I knew it even without him answering.

「Snowfield left the 'memory of reading my story' behind in the outside world.」

Just as myth-grade constellations left their true bodies outside, Snowfield also left his important memories behind to enter this place. And among those 'important memories', there exists a memory of me.

Snowfield slowly opened his mouth.

"I think you're mistaken. The reason I left those memories outside is because they are needed there."

At that remark, so typical of Kim Dokja, I didn't know what to say in response.

"And it's not just your memories that I left behind."

"…"

"If you've performed a scenario, you would know. That there is a story you don't want to lose, no matter what happens."

I was a little surprised by his honest words. I realized once again that Snowfield, standing before me, had also performed a scenario just like me. Over the past eight years, he must have built up his own story. And during those eight years, he had acquired a story he never wanted to lose.

[The story, 'Heir to the Eternal Name', licks his lips.]

Suddenly, I became curious. I wanted to read that story. What kind of 'precious memory' could have formed in a boy raised by Cheon Inho's hands and grown up in the snowfield?

What is he envisioning through that story?

"In that sense, you are the truly strange one."

Snowfield muttered with a look of pity.

"You, who cherish people more than anyone, carelessly throw away the very self they love."

Snowfield is right. I, who chose to disappear into this world risking everything, might actually be the one much stranger than them.

"Still."

I pressed down on Snowfield's chest even harder and spoke. As if rebelling against my strength, Snowfield's story scratched my hand even more roughly.

"I won this time."

If he hadn't entered here in his main body, the absolute amount of 'Kim Dokja fragments' would inevitably be less than mine.

However, despite the crisis, Snowfield remained composed.

"There is one more thing you are mistaken about."

In an instant, a strange current flowed from Snowfield's entire body.

"Why do you think that just because I left my memories behind, I would have fewer fragments than you?"

In a split second, the flow of the air shifted. The massive amount of story flowing from him tightened its grip on me with an immense pressure.

「I had forgotten that he has already absorbed a significant amount of the Third Kim Dokja.」

I unleashed my story and confronted him head-on. It was different from when we faced each other with the Third's soul between us. His power, manifesting in its raw form, was pulling me in with tremendous force.

"Snowfield is trying to absorb me."

I, too, could not lose. I unleashed my story while pressing down on his chest.

[The story, 'Heir to the Eternal Name', begins its storytelling!]

A small mouth that had grown from my palm began to devour the stories of Snowfield indiscriminately. However, Snowfield muttered as if he had anticipated even that.

"You cannot defeat me with just those stories."

The waves of story flowing from its entire body grew even stronger.

An overwhelming amount of story, powerful enough to momentarily cast out even the 'Heir to the Eternal Name' with his ruthless gluttony, surged toward me like a waterfall. Sentences that pierced me like needles instantly discolored my skin.

「Who is the 'Kim Dokja' that people truly want?」

「If it is not me, if no 'Kim Dokja fragment' is qualified to become the real Kim Dokja, then what on earth is 'Kim Dokja'?」

Snowfield's riddle pierced my mind. It felt as if my head was being covered in pure white sentences. Suppressing the urge to gag, I activated the [Fourth Wall] and desperately protected myself.

「I must use the power of a recorder.」

However, I was not certain what would happen to the world if I used my power any further here.

Is it right to destroy this world to protect myself? If so, what is the reason I came to this world?

The eyes of Snowfield were asking. Asking if I could do it. Asking if I could choose to absorb him, destroy this world, and become 'the one and only Kim Dokja'.

「Take me away.」

It was then that a voice reached my mind.

I suddenly looked up and saw the figure of a baby floating in the distance. It was the Third.

「I will help you.」

Almost simultaneously, Snowfield heard the Third's voice and shouted.

"White Flame Dragon of Lamentation! Drinking Demon!"

At Snowfield's command, the two constellations looked toward the Third Kim Dokja at the same time. But I was faster. Shaking off Snowfield's crests and rising from my seat, I ran with all my might and wrapped my arms around the Third. The blows of the White Flame Dragon and the Demon exploded on my back at the same time. Suppressing the burning pain, I held the Third even tighter.

[The story, 'Heir to the Eternal Name', responds to the will of 'Third Kim Dokja'.]

I could feel the Third's soul resonating with me.

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', activates!]

Just as the 'Demon King of Salvation' and the 'Great King of Fear' had done, the soul of the 'Prisoner of the Golden Cage' was flowing into me.

「I wanted to keep living in this house.」

Hearing the Third's words whispering in my ears, I bit my lip hard.

「To keep living in this house with my brothers.」

That was the Third's true sentiment. A wish that might have come true had I and Snowfield never come to this world. Nevertheless, in exchange for that wish, the Third entrusted the dream he desired to me.

「I want to protect the 'house'.」

I thought about the landscape the Third wanted to protect. I imagined and imagined the house he had longed for so desperately.

「Someday, please—record that 'house'.」

My heart warmed gently, then subsided.

[A massive amount of 'loss' has been collected.]

[The 'loss' you collected will be recorded on the Final Wall.]

I felt an immense surge of vitality throughout my entire body.

「The probability given by the Third was swirling throughout my body.」

The power of 'Kim Dokja' who imagined this world. Snowfield and I, sharing that power, faced each other.

Snowfield slowly rose from his seat and spoke.

"Right, from now on, it's going to look like a fight."

We lunged at each other. Our fists, swung simultaneously, struck each other's faces. The punches that had felt like cotton candy now hurt. Even as we exchanged definite blows, we did not back down an inch. Amidst the punches, our lips split and our cheeks swelled.

Wiping away the flowing blood, Snowfield said.

"You are desperate."

"Of course."

"Why? You have no reason to do that."

Snowfield's punch landed in my stomach. I gasped and punched him in the jaw. Stumbling back, he spoke again.

"It wasn't a story you wanted to start in the first place. You are an outsider to this story. You are not Kim Dokja."

"My story, not even Kim Dokja's."

I grabbed the lunging guy by the collar and lifted him up. His body, which I couldn't lift before, now felt light.

Looking down at him as he slammed onto the floor, I asked.

"Why did you want to read it?"

Snowfield, pinned to the ground, pushed me away and stood up. As we exchanged punches again, both of us staggered at the same time. Snowfield answered.

"I don't know."

I could feel the sincerity in his answer. He truly did not have the answer to this question. I asked again.

"You used to hate the idea of me becoming Kim Dokja. Why, then, are you trying to become 'the one and only Kim Dokja' now?"

"Me too, I don't know."

Our fists, thrown simultaneously, struck each other's faces. We groaned in unison and recoiled.

「Some stories are completed in the form of absence.」

Every time Snowfield and my fists clashed, a story bloomed in the air.

Amidst the landscape of the blooming stories, Snowfield was watching a certain story. I couldn't see what story he was watching. However, his expression proved the existence of that story.

「Watching that story, Kim Dokja rejoiced or grieved. He got excited, sighed, and went wild.」

I paused for a moment.

「Watching that story, he wanted to become 'Kim Dokja'.」

In that record, I opened my mouth as if sighing.

"Could it be because of me?"

The reason why Snowfield, who had hated 'Kim Dokja' more than anyone, came to want to become 'the one and only Kim Dokja'.

"So, are you trying to gather <Kim Dokja Company>?"

As he watched my story, he dreamed once again. A dream of completing a scenario with the companions he desired. A dream of being chosen by the people he loved at the end of this world.

「Snowfield is dreaming once again that the <Kim Dokja Company> of those days will gather here and look at him.」

I shook my head and said.

"You know it, too. We are not the Kim Dokja that <Kim Dokja Company> wants."

In an instant, I felt spacetime creak. Snowfield was looking at me with a face I had never seen before.

"Then where is that 'Kim Dokja'?"

I couldn't answer.

What kind of Kim Dokja does <Kim Dokja Company> want? If all the Kim Dokjas really gather and become 'the one and only Kim Dokja' again, will the 'Kim Dokja' that <Kim Dokja Company> desires return?

"You don't know either."

The fist Snowfield threw at me along with those words hurt. I let out a sharp gasp and struck his face just as hard. A trickle of blood trickled from his nose.

"Right, I don't know either."

We both grew up reading and writing the story of 'Kim Dokja'. We have no memories of the time when we were the complete Kim Dokja. Most of our memories have disintegrated, and the stories of those days exist only as fragments of 『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』. As we read and wrote those stories, we believed that we were Kim Dokja. We still believe.

"I don't know, but at least we aren't."

"You aren't the one deciding that."

Snowfield pointed to the sky and said.

"They are the ones who will be here soon."

Since when? The vortex in the sky was growing larger once again. The imagination of the 'Third' that Snowfield had absorbed was being unleashed. I spoke as if giving a warning.

"Your plan will fail. There is no way <Kim Dokja Company> would consider the current you as 'Kim Dokja'."

"Well. At least one of them."

Snowfield continued speaking without taking his eyes off the sky.

"They already believe me to be 'Kim Dokja'."

In that instant, I read the record flickering behind him.

「Kim Dokja gazed at the sky with sad eyes, as if counting distant stars.」

Why? The moment I read the sentence, I felt dizzy. There was a familiar scent emanating from the words.

「Thinking of the one person recording this world from beyond that sky, Kim Dokja was convinced.」

It was the scent of lemon candy. Recalling that nostalgic scent, I stared endlessly at the continuing sentence.

「Even if the whole world turns its back on him, only she will record him.」

The 41st round. And the 1,863rd round.

Memories of being with her swirled chaotically through my mind.

「Has she become a 'Recorder of Fear' as expected?」

If so, why has she never once spoken to me? Like the other great recorders, she would have had plenty of opportunities to talk to me.

And above all—

「Why is she recording the sentences of 'Snowfield' right now?」

Snowfield smiled as if answering my question.

"■■-ah, don't you still understand?"

With a face that seemed to already know the ending of this story, Snowfield Kim Dokja spoke to me.

"Han Sooyoung chose me as the 'protagonist' of this world."

Author's Note

As of today, Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint has reached Chapter 1,000—including short side stories—or Chapter 999 without them.

Seeing this unfamiliar number fills me with a renewed sense of emotion, yet also gives me a strange feeling.

Perhaps it is because today happens to be Sooyoung's birthday.

I sincerely thank the readers who have stayed with me through these long chapters.

I will do my best to write during the remaining time.

1001 Episode 61 Prisoner of the Golden Headband (1)

---

「Is the person who understands the prison best the prisoner, or is it the person who created it?」

—Architect of the False Ending

---

People were gathered in a pure white space resembling a snowfield. They were people who had guarded a single world for a very long time.

Watching people take their seats one by one, Yoo Sangah counted in her head. One, two, three... At some point, the numbers stopped going up. How high was the number originally supposed to go? Or, how high was the number capable of going?

Yoo Sangah could not remember.

"Everyone is here, Sangah-ssi."

At Lee Seolhwa's words, Yoo Sangah looked up. As she slowly looked around, she saw the faces of the people who had been nothing more than numbers in her head. They were people she could recognize no matter where they were in this universe.

「But their presence was definitely weaker than before.」

Deep shadows cast over their eyes. An indescribable weariness was etched on every face. It was the price for recklessly traversing worldlines and twisting the probability of other universes.

[The story, 'Kim Dokja Company', continues its storytelling.]

Watching this story continue despite everything, Yoo Sangah wondered. Where would the end of this story be?

"Unnie."

As she turned her head, the bravest girl she could remember spoke.

"Please make a decision quickly. I am ready to leave right now."

The time to call her a girl had passed. Nevertheless, Yoo Sangah clearly remembered the face of the girl who had slayed Specters in Chungmuro.

"The time to worry about probability has already passed."

Lee Jihye is now called the 'Monarch of the Great Sea'. She has become such a formidable incarnation that even those fearsome outer deities make way for her ghost fleet. It was not just Lee Jihye.

"We've come this far, so there is nothing to be afraid of. We don't have much time left anyway. And above all—"

The voice of a boy who had gone through puberty. The boy, now with a fairly masculine jawline, was speaking.

"I have entered that world."

Every time the boy spoke, a hallucinatory sound of a swarm of insects crying could be heard from somewhere. It was likely the Demon God 'Abaddon's'.

The will of the ancient Demon God, who still protected the boy, was responding to his courage.

"I am confident I can enter it again and again."

Lee Gilyoung had already nearly died once in the 41st round. Falling into Asmodeus's scheme, he almost lost his life on a manipulated stage. Nevertheless, Lee Gilyoung said he would make the same choice once again.

Yoo Sangah, and everyone else present, knew why Lee Gilyoung was acting so strongly.

"We have to find Shin Yoosung."

"…"

"The signal keeps weakening. You know what will happen if we delay any longer, don't you, noona?"

The other members of <Kim Dokja Company> also seemed to agree. They had already lost precious comrades several times over. And if they delayed any longer here, they might lose another comrade.

"Right now—"

The moment Lee Gilyoung sprang to his feet, an intense ringing in the white space echoed. A ringing that seemed to come from a very distant place. It sounded like a baby crying, or perhaps someone muttering.

"Did you just hear that?"

As Lee Gilyoung spoke, the other members of <Kim Dokja Company> nodded as well.

"Something is calling us."

Lee Seolhwa activated the central control unit as she spoke. Then, the coordinates of the location from which the crying came appeared on the large screen.

Lee Jihye asked.

"Which way is it? 'The 41st round'?"

"It's not the '41st round'. It is true that you can enter via that round, but..."

The crying was heard once again. This time, it was clearer. Listening closely, it wasn't crying, but a story.

「...Surviving in a ruined world…」

Long, echoing sentences. At that moment, everyone at <Kim Dokja Company> realized.

「...There are three ways…」

Just what kind of being was calling them from beyond.

「As if entranced, everyone there gazed in the same direction.」

Lee Gilyoung asked in a trembling voice.

"Can we go there?"

Lee Seolhwa nodded. The next moment, a shimmering portal appeared next to the central control unit.

Tsutsutsutsu.

A passageway where the aftershocks of probability were raging. Passing through that passage would lead to where the story had come from.

Lee Seolhwa spoke again.

"But safety..."

"I told you. The time for nitpicking about such things has passed."

The moment Lee Gilyoung walked toward the portal without hesitation, a large hand grabbed the boy's shoulder.

"Stop."

Lee Gilyoung turned around, his expression contorted. It was Yoo Joonghyuk.

"You must not go."

A low but heavy voice. Just as Lee Gilyoung was about to speak again in defiance, Yoo Joonghyuk added.

"I'll go."

"How long are you going to act as you please—"

Lee Gilyoung stopped speaking there and fell silent. He realized he had no right to say such things to Yoo Joonghyuk.

Come to think of it, it was actually he who had acted selfishly. It was none other than Yoo Joonghyuk who had indulged his childishness when he jumped into the 41st round just to see Kim Dokja.

"Let's go together."

At Lee Gilyoung's words, Yoo Joonghyuk's eyes wavered slightly. Lee Gilyoung continued.

"I said let's go together. You haven't fully recovered yet, either."

A long, pitch-black scar remained on Yoo Joonghyuk's neck, the result of the fierce battle with Odin.

Lee Jihye stepped forward and spoke.

"Um, I don't know if I'm mistaken, but..."

It was a voice mixed with surprise, bewilderment, and a hint of anticipation.

"I can feel the power of Hyunsung ahjussi and Heewon unnie over there."

At Lee Jihye's words, the others in the group also heightened their senses to verify the story. Lee Seolhwa nodded and said,

"That's right. The two of them are being confirmed inside there, too. And the Great Sage Heaven's Equal—"

"Shin Yoosung is there too!"

If everything being confirmed now is true, then beyond that portal, the entire <Kim Dokja Company> they knew might be gathering.

And above all.

「The 'Kim Dokja' they knew might be there.」

Everyone here felt a gravitational pull stronger than ever before. Every story of Kim Dokja's life was vividly conveyed across the vast universe.

The Demon King of Salvation. The Watcher of Light and Darkness. The Prisoner of the Golden Cage. And the Oldest Dream.

All the names Kim Dokja had lived by were swirling beyond that portal, calling out to them.

Yoo Joonghyuk gazed at the portal for a moment before speaking.

"Make your decision."

Everyone looked at Yoo Sangah. Receiving the gazes of the group, Yoo Sangah quietly closed her eyes.

「Perhaps the time has come to confirm the final chapter of this journey.」

What if Han Sooyoung had been here? What would she have said? For the sake of the group, what final sentence would she have left behind?

Yoo Sangah could not know. Because she was not a writer. She was merely a friend to the readers. Someone who listens to the readers' impressions and listens to their words. Someone who converses with the readers.

But here, there were neither readers nor writers. What was here now was—

[The 'Recorder of Fear', who has signed a 'Record Contract' with you, is calling you.]

A summoning message flickered in the air. Yoo Sangah immediately checked the sender of the message. It was a Recorder she knew well.

"Sangah-ssi?"

As Yoo Sangah's silence grew longer, Lee Seolhwa called out to her with an anxious expression. However, Yoo Sangah remained silent for quite some time. She simply read the record before her eyes over and over again. How much time had passed like that? A determination flickered in Yoo Sangah's eyes.

"Let's go."

---

「Soon, 'the one and only Kim Dokja' will be completed.」

I was confused. Was Han Sooyoung really writing all these sentences?

Blocking Snowfield's punch, I thought about Han Sooyoung. I had no idea why she was participating in the 'Record' of this worldline, or why she didn't say a word to me.

However, if it was certain that she had indeed intervened in the story as a 'Recorder'—

「The probability of <Kim Dokja Company> gathering here increases.」

Snowfield smiled white.

"You look like you don't understand. Why I am benefiting from the 'Record'."

That's right. I didn't understand. But on the other hand, I understood better than anyone.

「The 'Snowfield' before my eyes was closer to the archetype of '49% Kim Dokja' than anyone else.」

The last Han Sooyoung I saw carried a heavy sense of guilt toward Kim Dokja.

「She is someone who has written stories solely to save one person.」

If that record is meant to save 'Kim Dokja,' she will write it over and over again.

I calmed my mind with a light deep breath and opened my mouth.

"Aren't you being too overconfident? Just because Han Sooyoung is recording you doesn't guarantee she's on your side."

"What?"

"Think about it. Has the protagonist of any of her novels ever been happy, even once?"

Snowfield frowned slightly.

"This time it will be different."

"Yeah, I hope so too."

"..."

"If the story ends with another sad conclusion, I think it would be really hard on my heart, too."

A light breeze brushed between us, and Snowfield lowered the fist he had raised. Then, he spoke in the calm and quiet voice I knew.

"Then let's stop here. You've done enough."

Snowfield's Kim Dokja, who had no choice but to leave 'my story' outside because he loved it. Even though I had left that story behind, his expression remained warm. For a moment, I felt a desire to entrust all my fragments to him and become a single Kim Dokja. I simply wanted to be at ease. It was a temptation I might have succumbed to in the past.

"Not yet."

Nevertheless, I could not stop here.

[All your stories respond to your will.]

The history I had lived through was sustaining me.

Snowfield looked into my story and asked.

"What is the reason you want to become 'the one and only Kim Dokja' to such an extent?"

The reason I want to become the one and only Kim Dokja.

"If you have read my story so far, you should know."

"I want to hear it directly from your own mouth."

"I want to set everything right."

Once I uttered those words myself, I felt my goal become somehow much clearer.

Wiping my blood-stained lips and catching my breath, I continued speaking.

"I want to create an ending where no one becomes unhappy."

Snowfield shook his head.

"That's impossible. You know that, too. That isn't a proper 'story'."

Snowfield looked up at the night sky. Since the constellations could not see this world, not all the starlight floating in the night sky belonged to the constellations.

"No star wants a story like that."

I know now what kind of beings the stars are. Beings who endlessly cheer for someone, yet in reality observe their tragedy. Beings who crave someone's survival while feeling intense ecstasy at their death. Beings who want the ending of this story more than anyone, yet in reality want the story to continue.

「There is no ending that can satisfy all those stars.」

"The ending you dream of won't convince anyone."

"..."

"So just admit it. You aren't Kim Dokja."

Saying that I am not Kim Dokja. Perhaps it was an easy thing to do. Nevertheless, I said this.

"We aren't the ones deciding that."

As if he hadn't expected to receive those words back, Snowfield opened his eyes wide.

"Yes, that's true."

We looked at each other for a moment. Our faces covered in blood. We resembled one another, as if facing a mirror.

「It won't be easy for anyone to figure out which of us is the real Kim Dokja.」

Snowfield opened his mouth with a faint smile.

"Then, let's call the person who can decide that."

"What?"

At the same time as my question, the air split open. What emerged from the rift was a small girl. She collapsed forward, appearing to be unconscious.

「'Beast Lord'— Shin Yoosung.」

From a distance, the mournful cry of a 'Chimera Dragon' could be heard.

Judging by the power of the story flowing out, she was undoubtedly Shin Yoosung of <Kim Dokja Company>. Just as Dansu ahjussi had said, she had been in this world with us.

"That child will surely figure out which of us is the 'real Kim Dokja'."

I saw Shin Yoosung slowly open her eyes with a small groan. The story inside me was humming and reacting to her. It was the same for Snowfield. The history of 'Kim Dokja' that we possessed was calling out to her.

「She is the incarnation of 'Kim Dokja'.」

I realized it instinctively. The events about to unfold were the 'final probability' that would shape the conclusion of this world.

「The being chosen by that girl will become the 'only Kim Dokja' of this world.」

1002 Episode 61 Prisoner of the Golden Headband (2)

Was she injured while wandering through worldlines? Shin Yoosung's hands were covered in scars.

「Like a travel souvenir that has been aging poignantly while left neglected in a warehouse for a long time.」

Some records make us see the world through the form of those records. Is that why? The moment I read Han Sooyoung's sentence, I choked up and my emotions poured out without me realizing it.

"Yoo..."

But in the end, I could not bring myself to call out Shin Yoosung's name. It was due to an inexplicable sense of unease.

「That Shin Yoosung was definitely the Shin Yoosung of <Kim Dokja Company>.」

No matter how differently time flows across worldlines, quite a lot of time has passed since Kim Dokja disappeared in the 1,864th round.

Yet why does she still look like a young girl?

「The girl raised her head and stared blankly at me.」

At that moment, I realized why she still looked like a young girl.

「That appearance is the 'Shin Yoosung' that Kim Dokja remembers.」

Perhaps she hoped that the Kim Dokja she met again would recognize her immediately. Was that why she traveled the world in the form of a child, minimizing the consumption of probability?

「Her name is Shin Yoosung. Kim Dokja's only incarnation.」

I opened my mouth with the feeling of opening an old warehouse door. This time, I felt I could call her name accurately. I felt I could call Shin Yoosung with the emotions I had longed for, and with the heart of Kim Dokja she had hoped for.

But someone called her name even faster than I did.

"Yoosoung-ah."

It was Snowfield.

"Do you recognize me?"

Shin Yoosung's eyes slowly widened as she saw Snowfield.

「The Kim Dokja she remembered was there.」

Shin Yoosung rose from her seat and began walking toward Snowfield, one step at a time. I felt I had to stop her. I hurriedly grabbed Snowfield by the collar.

"What did you do to Yoosoung?"

Snowfield looked at me, his body trembling listlessly.

"Where on earth and for how long did you leave her to end up in this state?"

Snowfield looked at me for a moment, then asked back in a low voice.

"What do you think I would have done?"

I was speechless for a moment. Snowfield spoke.

"She is no longer a child."

"It doesn't matter whether she is a child or not. You—"

I was about to say that he was unfit to be Kim Dokja. But the moment I saw Snowfield's expression, followed by Shin Yoosung looking at us, the words I was about to say lost their power and scattered like dust.

「What is the qualification of Kim Dokja?」

Is the Kim Dokja who treats Shin Yoosung well the proper Kim Dokja? Is the Kim Dokja who possesses the stories that Shin Yoosung remembers the true Kim Dokja?

Or is it—

"Ahjussi...?"

The sky was resonating with the stories Shin Yoosung was emitting.

Woooooh!

The sorrowful roar of the Chimera Dragon echoed.

[The story, 'Kim Dokja Company', continues its storytelling.]

Snowfield shook off my hand that had been grabbing his collar and opened his arms toward Shin Yoosung.

"Yoosoung-ah."

I stared blankly at his retreating figure.

Snowfield's Kim Dokja, opening his arms toward Shin Yoosung, looked just like the Kim Dokja from my memories. Even though I knew he wasn't that Kim Dokja, and even though I knew he originated from the same 49% of Kim Dokja as me—

「Even I, at least for that moment, wanted to believe that he was the 'real Kim Dokja'.」

This was the power of stories. The power to make existence more like existence, and ultimately to persuade even other beings.

Simply because he possessed the most 'Kim Dokja fragments' in this world, he was the Kim Dokja closest to the real Kim Dokja than anyone else here right now.

「Perhaps it is fitting that he becomes 'the one and only Kim Dokja'.」

Unlike me, who has lived forgetting the fact that I am 'Kim Dokja', he has lived his entire life to reclaim that position.

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', activates strongly!]

Therefore, isn't it only right for him to sit on Kim Dokja's throne now?

[The story, 'Heir to the Eternal Name', frowns at your weakness.]

Finally, Shin Yoosung entered Snowfield's embrace. She was trembling softly, like a small bird that had barely managed to land in its parents' arms.

"Ahjussi."

Holding the small girl tightly in his arms, Snowfield whispered.

"Yes, it is time for everyone to gather now."

A dazzling beam of light emanated from Snowfield's entire body, having been chosen by Shin Yoosung.

I gazed at the scene alone. Within the story, where I could not intervene, a world was being completed. It was then that my eyes met Shin Yoosung's.

"Ah."

Tears welled up in Shin Yoosung's eyes as she looked at me over the snowy slope. The child's small lips parted.

「Rumble struck ceaselessly from the sky. Beyond the swirling sky, the 'Big House' was approaching.」

But I was powerless in the face of the pouring records.

Han Sooyoung, is this the ending you truly wanted? Did you leave me behind in this world just to complete this story?

「That can't be right.」

My head throbbed for a moment. When I staggered and turned around, someone was holding my shoulder.

"Friend."

It was Dansu ahjussi.

"Are you really going to end it like this?"

Dansu ahjussi continued speaking to me, who was unable to utter a single word.

"The friend I know is not someone who would end the story here."

The story of our friendship that he remembered was being conveyed through his fingertips.

"At Geumho Station, my friend saved me while dying. And he cleared the scenario in a way no one had ever imagined."

「"Ahjussi, please make sure you live until the very end."」

[Story fragment, 'Instigator Killer', begins its storytelling.]

Along with a poignant sensation, Dansu ahjussi's emotions were conveyed intact. Dansu ahjussi remembered that story, which was so old, without forgetting a single word.

[Story fragment, 'King Maker', begins its storytelling.]

"If it hadn't been for my friend at Gwanghwamun, I would have died. I would have been consumed by madness, turned into a monster, harmed people, and died."

「"Ahjussi, don't worry. I will be with you."」

I, too, remembered the events of that day. I could still vividly recall the moment when, through [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint], I achieved the title of 'King of Immortality' together with ahjussi.

"It was the same at the Twelve Zodiac Ball. Even when we had all lost our masks and given up, exhausted by the scenario—"

「"There is a way."」

[Story fragment, 'Liberator of the Recycling Center', begins its storytelling.]

"My friend found a way. He somehow found the ending that others had given up on and showed it to us. He showed us that such an ending is possible."

The time we spent together at Geumho Station, at Gwanghwamun, and at the Recycling Center—the story we shared—was there.

"That isn't the ending my friend wants to see, is it?"

I slowly came to my senses, as if I had been doused with cold water.

[The story, 'Heir to the Eternal Name', submits to the will of incarnation 'Lee Dansu'.]

The story of Kim Dokja stirring within me—my ego was speaking.

「When the heavens open and <Kim Dokja Company> arrives, this world will shatter just as it is.」

The Third's 'Big House', unable to withstand the story's gravitational pull, will disappear. <Kim Dokja Company> will be swept away by the massive story created by Snowfield.

「Having absorbed it, 'Snowfield' will reclaim the status of the 'Oldest Dream'.」

As a result, <Kim Dokja Company> might all end up gathered in Snowfield's house.

With everything broken down, they might be able to live in the 'Big House' that 49% of Kim Dokja wanted to recreate.

「But is it really okay for this universe to be completed in that way?」

Is that truly the dream of the 'Demon King of Salvation', the 'Great King of Fear', the 'Prisoner of the Golden Cage', and me?

"Lee Dansu."

Emitting a dazzling light, Snowfield warned.

"Step back. If you do that, you won't get what you want."

Snowfield clearly understood what Dansu ahjussi was trying to do.

"You wanted to get your daughter back, didn't you?"

Getting your daughter back.

Incarnation Lee Dansu has lived his entire life solely for that one purpose.

"You will be able to meet Jiyoon again soon. We are almost there. You can return to the world you have dreamed of."

It was an irresistible temptation. I would have felt the same way if I were him. Returning to the world where he lived with his daughter. That was the very life he had desperately longed for. If that was the price Snowfield offered, then his helping him all this time was entirely understandable.

However, what I could not understand was this:

"In the world you dream of."

Why is incarnation 'Lee Dansu' standing by my side with the ending he desires right before his eyes?

"Do I have a 'friend'?"

For a moment, I did not understand what he was talking about. Snowfield also frowned. He glanced lightly at me and asked.

"Why is that important? There is no reason for that to be included in your daily life."

At that, Dansu ahjussi shook his head slowly and firmly.

"My daily life right now is here."

He looked at me with his characteristic kind gaze and turned to look at the constellations desperately struggling against each other.

"This world, where I have friends and constellations, is my daily life. This world, where Heewon-ssi, Hyunsung-ssi, and Wukong-ssi exist, is my daily life."

"You're insane."

Snowfield retorted in a cold voice.

"Snap out of it, Noh Kyunghwan."

Noh Kyunghwan. Snowfield, too, knew Dansu ahjussi's real name. That meant he must know how ahjussi ended up here.

"Have you already forgotten? That you lost everything because of 'Kim Dokja'."

On the day ahjussi became the 'King of Immortality', I, too, witnessed his history. I still remembered it.

「On that day, when countless 'Kim Dokja fragments' split into the universe, Noh Kyunghwan lost everything.」

If Kim Dokja hadn't scattered across the entire universe that day, his wife would not have been killed by the meteorite. He and his daughter would not have possessed this world. Nor would his daughter's soul have been subjugated to Asmodeus's Theater.

「Ahjussi would not have had to bear all this tragedy.」

Nevertheless, the man who had endured all that tragedy stood before my eyes now.

"Could all these events really be the fault of just one person?"

I dared not know how much time it must have taken for him to say those words. The man, who still looked at the world with kind eyes even after swallowing all those terrible stories, looked at me.

"Do not blame yourself, friend. You did not do anything wrong. Every story you pursued was not wrong."

To whom was he speaking?

I could not even dare to fathom what was on his mind as he told me that.

I saw Snowfield, frowning, whispering something to Shin Yoosung. The size of the portal swirling in the air was rapidly expanding.

「The 'Big House' begins.」

Shin Yoosung's story, interwoven with Snowfield's story, was calling for a different <Kim Dokja Company>.

「The 'Stage' will open.」

Even in the face of the world's collapse, Dansu ahjussi remained calm. Like Kim Dokja, who says there is still a way, he was looking at me with eyes that were more like Kim Dokja than any Kim Dokja I knew.

"I haven't been able to finish reading the novel my daughter likes. So, to be honest, I don't really know what kind of 'Kim Dokja' <Kim Dokja Company> wants."

Dansu ahjussi's hand resting on my shoulder was endlessly warm. Through that warmth, something was being conveyed to me.

"But the 'Kim Dokja' they want isn't the only 'Kim Dokja,' is it?"

Only then did I realize what Dansu ahjussi was planning to do.

There was only one reason why Shin Yoosung was moved by Snowfield. It was because the 'Snowfield' right before my eyes—possessed the 'most' 'Kim Dokja fragments' in this alternate dimension.

[The story, 'Heir to the Eternal Name', opens its mouth as if it had been waiting.]

And damn it, there was still a 'large Kim Dokja fragment' remaining in this world that I hadn't absorbed.

"The 'Kim Dokja' I know is also definitely 'Kim Dokja'."

Dansu ahjussi's story was being conveyed to me. Everything about the 'Kim Dokja' he had built up flowed into me.

"The person who saved me and the person who made me alive so far are all 'Kim Dokja' that I know."

The world reflected in ahjussi's eyes was quietly scattering away amidst the rays of light.

"I hope my 'Kim Dokja' survives until the very end of this world."

---

I had to do something. I couldn't let Dansu ahjussi be lost like this.

[The story, 'Heir to the Eternal Name', frowns at your hypocrisy.]

My story was looking at me.

[The story, 'Heir to the Eternal Name', asks if you shouldn't accept him anyway.]

The story was right. To defeat Snowfield, I, too, could not turn a blind eye to everything forever. I clearly need Dansu ahjussi's power. But.

「At the very least, the development shouldn't be like this.」

I grabbed Dansu ahjussi's hand.

[Exclusive skill, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint', activated!]

I felt as if space-time were distorting. All the stories, traits, and skills within me overlapped and swirled violently.

[Exclusive Trait, 'Record Repairer', activated!]

What I needed right now was just a fleeting moment of space.

[Exclusive skill, '□□', activated!]

When I opened my eyes again, I was standing in an unfamiliar place. No, perhaps it wasn't an unfamiliar place. Because I knew where this was.

A stage where old lights flickered. Amidst the flickering strange lights, I saw the back of Dansu ahjussi not far away.

"Ahjussi."

"Friend."

Ahjussi turned to me with a welcoming smile, then looked around and spoke.

"It's fascinating. Is this a space my friend created?"

"No, this isn't it."

"Ah."

Dansu ahjussi let out a low sigh, as if realizing something just then.

"I see."

I stood side by side with Dansu ahjussi and looked around.

"Does my friend remember that, too?"

"Yes."

We were standing in a flower garden. However, it was not a simply beautiful scene. 'Red Spider Lilies of Death' were scattering in the wind.

This was a flower garden that bloomed from the breath of a Grade 5 Disaster Species.

"You saved me when I was on the verge of death here."

I, too, remembered this place well.

「It was here that Dansu ahjussi became the 'Immortal King'.」

The only difference from then was that Dansu ahjussi's stories were scattering like dust under every petal of the red spider lilies blooming on the ground.

「This was 'Dansu ahjussi's' inner world.」

The blank space, barely stopped by the power of skill [□□], was where Dansu ahjussi's stories were scattering.

As I reached out my hand toward the empty space, a few petals wrapped around my fingertips and soon began to whisper their own story.

The first thing I saw was the figure of a woman. Dansu ahjussi looked into the woman's face beside me and said,

"She is my wife."

Ahjussi's wife, who was said to have passed away hit by a meteor, was a very beautiful person.

"She was someone who shouldn't have left like that."

I could feel his memories as if I had become ahjussi himself.

The day he first met his wife, the day he proposed to her, the day they promised a lifetime together and built a simple family.

His personal memories were scattering before me like lush flower petals.

"It's Jiyoon."

At the tip of the petal ahjussi pointed to, young Jiyoon was crying.

「"Abba."」

A child whose speech was as hesitant as Biyoo. A girl smiling shyly with her mouth smeared with tomato sauce.

"She's caused me so much trouble since she was little."

Listening to ahjussi's low laughter, I silently read and reread his entire history.

"That must be when you first saw that story."

The Dansu ahjussi in my memory was reading a book on his smartphone.

『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』.

The story Jiyoon loved.

In order to get close to his daughter, ahjussi searched the Internet for unfamiliar terms and read the book diligently.

| |
|---|
| Number of completed books: 1 |

Ahjussi told me he hadn't finished reading the novel. But I know. He had read the whole book. And he read that one time more diligently than anyone else. He read it truly hard to understand his only daughter.

"It was a story too difficult for me to understand. That is why I said I couldn't read it properly."

Saying that, ahjussi smiled bitterly.

"It wasn't just that story that was difficult, though."

The last flower petal held our story within it.

'Geumho Station' with ahjussi. The Star Gem Dungeon of 'Gwanghwamun'. The 'Recycling Center'. And all the way to this world beyond the 'Missing Bush'.

Watching the flowing story, ahjussi said:

"My friend must hate me."

"Why do you think that?"

"Because I couldn't trust my friend and wait for him."

Ahjussi wore a look of regret regarding his deal with Snowfield.

I spoke as if to comfort him:

"You had no choice. If I were you, I would have done the same."

Ahjussi smiled weakly. The speed at which the scattering petals shattered was gradually increasing. In the distance, I could see the space covered in spider lilies slowly shrinking. I urgently grabbed ahjussi's wrist.

「Then, ahjussi’s wrist shattered.」

Dansu ahjussi's soul was already on the verge of collapse.

「His eyes were blind, and parts of his body were necrotic. The muscles in his limbs had fallen off in chunks.」

The man, who had become the 'King of Immortality', had lived with such a soul for a very long time.

「Having lost his wife, his daughter, and even his comrades.」

I bit my lip tightly.

Hasn't he lived a life deserving of reward more than anyone else in this world?

Is the ending I am pursuing valuable enough to justify sacrificing his entire history?

"You don't have to help me."

There is no such thing as an ending where sacrificing anyone is worthwhile.

"You have done enough, ahjussi. You can go to Snowfield. You may accept what he promised you."

The moment I saw the look on his face, I realized it. A person who distorts everything into good intentions and embraces everything with broad tolerance. Such a person does not exist.

"Just because I saved you doesn't mean you need to sacrifice yourself. You—"

There is only someone who, even amidst tragedy, desperately strives and struggles to avoid turning a blind eye to the world's small acts of kindness and to preserve his humanity.

"Friend, don't get the wrong idea."

At that moment, for the first time, ahjussi's tone resembled Kim Dokja.

"I didn't choose you simply because I like you."

"Huh?"

Dansu ahjussi said, looking up somewhere with a hazy expression.

"Couldn't you dream the same dream that he can dream?"

A landscape I didn't even know myself flashed through ahjussi's now-blinded eyes.

"I only made a selfish choice for myself and my daughter. I only wish for a happier ending, hoping that you become Kim Dokja."

Watching ahjussi speak like that, I didn't know what to say. But I had to say something.

"I."

I thought of ahjussi's daughter. Noh Jiyoon. rlaehrwk37. I thought of my reader, who might still be watching this story from the Theater of Asmodeus.

"Can you really do it?"

"I will make sure you and Jiyoon meet."

I had to say that. But strangely, no voice came out until the very end.

Ahjussi just smiled quietly, as if to say it was okay if I didn't say anything.

"I like my friend's story."

"…"

"I wanted to hear more of my friend's story. I was always curious about what kind of person he was and what he liked."

If we had met somewhere other than this world, would we have been able to share more stories? As a writer and a reader. As a reader and a reader. Or as a friend. Just as one person to another.

"My name is Noh Kyunghwan."

"I know."

"What is my friend's name? I definitely heard it before, but strangely, I can't remember it."

I tried to tell him my name. But I, too, could not know my own name.

Perhaps it is because that name—that story—is not mine now.

Dansu ahjussi added in a heavy tone, as if he understood all these facts.

"Once you become 'the one and only Kim Dokja', what happens to my friend? Can my friend return to being my original friend?"

I could not answer.

Dansu ahjussi stared at me silently and added.

"I am sorry for entrusting so many stories to my friend."

Now, more than half of his soul was shattered. There was little space left for us. Through the scattering petals, I thought I heard Jiyoon's voice calling for her father for a moment.

"Even after reading that book, I still don't really know who Kim Dokja is. However, I do know a little bit about the kind of person the 'Kim Dokja' my daughter liked was."

Stories are passed from books to people, and from people to people. It is the story that plunges us into tragedy, but it is also the story that ultimately lifts us up from this tragedy.

Dansu ahjussi extended his one remaining hand to me. I slowly took that hand. Dansu ahjussi, who had entrusted me with all his stories and his 'Kim Dokja'—a man named Noh Kyunghwan was speaking to me.

"My friend will surely become a 'good Kim Dokja'."

With a face kinder than any Kim Dokja I knew.

"I will watch over my friend's story."

---

Snowfield gazed at his brother, enveloped in a beam of light. Lee Dansu had not kept his promise. He had ultimately chosen to be absorbed by his brother as a 'Kim Dokja Fragment'.

「Snowfield understood Lee Dansu's choice.」

Perhaps all stories were destined to unfold that way. Now, it didn't matter. After all, he had achieved his goal. Even if his brother were to wake up again, he could not stop what was already happening.

Gooooo!

A pitch-black figure was about to reveal itself from the sky, which was more than half open. The moment he had long awaited was arriving.

A long-held dream. The moment when all of <Kim Dokja Company> would gather.

Shin Yoosung, held in his arms, was trembling slightly. Holding the girl's small body, Snowfield gazed endlessly up at the sky.

「The stage that every Kim Dokja has dreamed of is about to begin.」

And the next moment.

"Stop."

A voice as cold as if the world were freezing was heard. Snowfield frowned and turned his head.

His brother was speaking with his hand on his shoulder.

"At least not here."

The powerful force of [Incite] rippled over his voice. The power of the villain who had once raised him, capable of overturning the laws of the world.

"Because those people deserve a happy ending."

Snowfield straightened his back and glared at his brother.

"By what right do you say such things?"

Then ■■■ looked at Snowfield.

The one who had lost his name was speaking his own name.

"Because I am Kim Dokja."

There stood Kim Dokja, who had finally fully accepted that fact. Kim Dokja, who had come to terms with the stories embedded in that name and all the karma. Kim Dokja, who had clearly accepted the life he was to live, and that world of distant eternity and finality.

Thus, Snowfield realized.

「Now, his brother has become a 'Kim Dokja' just like him.」

---

Snowfield felt a complex mix of emotions as he watched his brother.

「If he had retained his complete memories, would I have felt different emotions?」

His original body had not granted him some of his core memories. Consequently, Snowfield's feelings of love and hate toward the brother before him were somewhat faint. He had a sense that he liked his story, but he did not know exactly how much he liked it, or for what purpose his original body had been watching over him.

If he had been the complete 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

Would he have been happy that his brother had become a full-fledged 'Kim Dokja', or would he have been sad that he, too, had come to walk the same path as him?

He could not know. All Snowfield could know was his immediate emotions. An inexplicable hostility surging deep within his heart.

「Actually, perhaps he was glad that his brother wasn't a 'proper Kim Dokja'.」

That he was the one who would become the 'sole Kim Dokja' during the 'Kim Dokja Dismissal'—that only he was qualified to complete the story here. Perhaps he had unwittingly believed that all along.

"Yes, you have become Kim Dokja."

Now, clearly standing before his eyes was a 'different Kim Dokja'. Along with him, 'The Undoubted Kim Dokja', who was qualified to imagine the end of this world:

"But it's too late."

As Snowfield beckoned, the 'White Flame Dragon of Lamentation' and the 'Drinking Demon' rushed in upon receiving the signal.

Most of the constellations, including Zeus and Poseidon, were already incapacitated. There was no one to stop the White Flame Dragon and the Demon.

"Dodge!"

With Poseidon's shout, the long sword drawn by the White Flame Dragon flew toward his brother. The brother's cold eyes stared at the White Dragon. For a moment, the White Flame Dragon's pupils widened, but the sword pierced straight through the brother's chest.

Thud.

Kim Dokja was not a being specialized in 'physical ability' to begin with. No matter how much the total amount of fragments increased from absorbing Lee Dansu, there was no way he could withstand the White Flame Dragon's attack.

"Ah— No!"

Demeter collapsed with a scream, and the constellations knelt with faces of despair.

The 'White Flame Dragon of Lamentation' who actually stabbed him as expected wore a somewhat bewildered expression.

Snowfield did not take his eyes off the collapsing incarnation of his brother. They were clearly wounds that would lead to death. Yet, why did he sense no fear in his brother's face?

The reason became clear immediately.

[Exclusive Trait, 'Immortal King', effect activated!]

With a dazzling beam of light, the dead brother's body split open, and a new body was being born.

「The trait of incarnation Lee Dansu, 'Immortal King'.」

His brother, having inherited that trait intact, was rising from the dead again.

"Kill him again."

Snowfield commanded once more in an indifferent voice. This time, the 'Drinking Demon' lunged forward. However, the moment the brother's gaze fixed on the demon, its steps came to a halt. The demon wore an expression as if it had witnessed something it could not handle.

"White Flame Dragon."

The White Flame Dragon was just as disobedient. Witnessing the resurrection unfolding before his eyes in real time, his entire body trembled like an aspen tree.

His brother spoke.

"Get out of the way. This is not a place for you to interfere."

'Resurrection' in this world was a miracle on a completely different level from 'Resurrection' in the <Star Stream>.

「Nevertheless, his brother has gained enough probability to exercise that 'power'.」

Snowfield, clenching his fist stealthily, gave the command once again.

"Strike. What are you doing?"

Even at Snowfield's command, the 'Drinking Demon' and the 'Sighing White Flame Dragon' did not move. It was because his brother had also given them orders.

"Watch from there."

At the [Incite] embedded in the voice, the stars froze like statues. It was proof that the power possessed by his brother had now become just as strong.

Nevertheless, Snowfield did not panic. He had already been chosen by Shin Yoosung. The record is progressing, and the stage is opening. Therefore…

"…Ahjussi?"

Since when did his embrace feel so empty? And since when did the girl let go of his hand and start walking away?

「A few steps away, Shin Yoosung was approaching his brother.」

Eyes slowly widening, Shin Yoosung spoke again in a trembling voice.

"Ahjussi… Right?"

His brother looked down at Shin Yoosung with silent, sad eyes. Shin Yoosung's gaze was filled with confusion. She staggered, glancing alternately at the two Kim Dokjas.

"Why, ahjussi—"

Snowfield remained silent. According to his plan, Shin Yoosung should have been intoxicated by his story right now. However, Shin Yoosung had come to her senses and realized that 'two Kim Dokjas' existed in this world.

The implications of that fact were clear.

「Perhaps now his brother possesses 'more fragments of Kim Dokja' than Snowfield himself.」

As if seeing right through Snowfield's heart, his brother spoke with sad eyes.

"That's enough."

Snowfield shook his head.

Thunder struck beyond the brightened sky. Giant shadows rippled beyond the swirling portal.

"It's too late. The heavens have already opened."

Possessions of awe comparable to mythical beings were descending, exuding a presence that threatened to shatter this world at any moment.

「It was time for the protagonists of this story to appear.」

<Kim Dokja Company>, they were finally about to reveal themselves on the stage.

"Ahjussi."

It was then that Shin Yoosung spoke, her voice trembling.

"Something is wrong."

The striking lightning bolt landed directly on Snowfield's head. Snowfield hurriedly bowed his head, and 'Drinking Demon' moved to protect him. The thunder incinerated the demon while delivering a fatal blow to Snowfield's entire body.

With one arm and one leg burned black, Snowfield looked down at his incarnation body with eyes full of distrust before snapping his head up.

"I."

Rage filled Snowfield's face as he gazed up at the sky.

"I never summoned you."

As the gates of the heavens opened, dazzling stars illuminating the entire sky simultaneously appeared.

「What appeared in the sky was not <Kim Dokja Company>.」

The scales of probability swayed precariously. Beings capable of leading this world to destruction merely by their appearance.

[The constellation, 'Spear Drawing the Boundaries of the Seas', announces its status in this region!]

Two massive eyes stood out in the sky. The main body of a myth-grade constellation, larger than a mere planet, was looking down upon this world. Even the 'White Flame Dragon of Lamentation' and the 'Drinking Demon', who aspired to rival the myth-grade, were overwhelmed by its presence and knelt.

Only Snowfield and his brother were able to gaze directly at that myth.

「Poseidon was not the only one to reveal himself.」

Another eye was visible in outer space a short distance away. Although it had only one eye, it was a being possessing a story even more powerful than the two-eyed Poseidon.

[The constellation, 'Father of the One Eye', descends in this region!]

The myth-grade constellation of <Asgard>—Odin. As if conscious of his own power, he was watching over us from a distance somewhat further away than Poseidon.

Then, two burning eyes appeared on the opposite side of the sky where Poseidon had descended.

[The constellation, 'Fire of the South', is descending upon this region!]

He was one of the myth-grade constellations of the <Emperor>, who had never revealed himself before.

「A member of the Three Sovereigns, Shennong.」

As Shennong, reminiscent of a giant of fire, moved his massive hand, the entire planet began to seethe as if it had entered a furnace.

[The power of the 'Round Table' is moving.]

[The 'Round Table' is watching over this world.]

The Round Table. The myth-grade constellations, who play dice with this world on a table, had finally intervened in this world.

A dozen pairs of eyes belonging to the 'myth-grade constellations' rose simultaneously across the vast expanse of the sky.

Snowfield faced them and asked.

"How did you get here? This is not a place you would have dared to come to."

The cowardly constellations, who had been forced to infiltrate this place as 'fragments', appeared leading their true forms. This meant that there was someone who had personally opened the 'Record' for those cowards.

As Snowfield glanced away, the Recorder, who had been concealing their presence behind the night sky, revealed themselves.

[The Recorder of Fear, 'Demon King of the Cinema', continues the recording.]

Snowfield glared in that direction with narrowed eyes, then spoke to the constellations of the sky again.

"Didn't we agree not to interfere with my event?"

However, the myth-grade constellations looked around with their massive eyes as if they couldn't hear a word Snowfield said, launching into all sorts of critiques.

[It is an interesting world.]

[It looks like the trash we sent is performing quite well.]

As if in response to those words, the constellation fragments sprawled on the ground trembled. The fragment of Odin knelt in despondency, and the fragments of Poseidon and Demeter clasped each other's hands with grim expressions. The fragment of Zeus glared at the sky with a hateful gaze.

「There is no 'fragment' that dares to defy the main body.」

The mythical constellations spoke, seemingly greatly satisfied with the sight of the fragments.

[Return, all of you. Tell us what you have learned.]

With screams, the fragments scattered into fables and soon began to be collected toward the mythical constellations.

[Oooooh—]

The mythical constellations, having acquired new fables, let out screams of ecstasy.

Snowfield looked at them with a cold expression and said,

"Leave now. All you can have is the trash you scattered here."

Then, Poseidon, having finished devouring the fables, spoke.

[That is troublesome.]

"Troublesome? Are you planning to break your promise?"

Poseidon spoke with a somewhat complex expression, chewing as if he had chewed on a strange tale from the recovered fragment.

[We and the weak were 'the largest fragment of the Oldest Dream'.]

At Poseidon's words, Snowfield's gaze grew cold.

[Can you still say that you are 'the largest fragment of the Oldest Dream'?]

"I am still the 'largest fragment'."

[Well. At least in this world, I don't think so.]

Poseidon's sinister eyes turned toward Snowfield and his brother. Following this, deep greed flickered in the eyes of the myth-grade constellations.

[It seems we have arrived at just the right time.]

[Has the 'dream takeover' not begun yet?]

[The 'Oldest Dream' will be completed soon.]

With each incantation from the myth-grade constellations, the rift in the world deepened.

Snowfield muttered with a bitter smile.

"It was a mistake to expect anything from you in the first place. Have you given up on seeing a proper ■■?"

Shennong burst into loud laughter.

[A proper ■■! Do you really mean to dream such a dream for us?"]

"..."

[Until now, I have avoided conflict out of fear of your power, but here, where you cannot properly wield your power, it is a different story.]

As if shattering a world like this were nothing, Shennong's burning hand began to engulf the world.

[The stars will choose their own fate. You shall obediently become the stars' 'dream'.]

Snowfield's expression hardened. The purpose of the powerful myth-grade constellations here, defying even probability, was clear.

「They were all waiting only for the moment when the 'largest fragments' of the 'Oldest Dream' would gather.」

The reason the 'myth-grade constellations' of the Round Table had held their breath, neglecting even the 'Ragnarok' scenario of mass destruction.

「To directly seize the power of the 'Oldest Dream' into their own hands.」

The city was engulfed in flames, and the snow-capped stars, unable to withstand the heat, shattered. Even Snowfield could not stop this catastrophe this time. Nevertheless, Snowfield remained calm.

"Have you forgotten, you foolish stars?"

There was a reason why the Outer Gods, despite noticing the existence of this worldline, could not interfere.

"'What kind of star' exists here."

That was the reason this worldline was called a 'prison', and the reason why no one who entered this worldline could ever escape.

「Somewhere, the sound of the scales of probability shifting was heard.」

The moment the myth-grade constellations held their breath simultaneously at that ominous sound.

[Aaaargh!]

Shennong, who had been burning the world, screamed and clutched one of his eyes. His single eye, floating in the sky, turned red and poured out stories. Upon closer inspection, a massive staff was embedded in the center of the eye.

「The Ruyi Jingu Staff.」

Across the sky, which was filled with the starlight of the constellations, a massive pair of eyes appeared.

As Hwain Geumjeong—the golden eyes that had not burned even in the Eight Trigram Furnace of Taesang Nogun—glared at the stars, the entire universe was enveloped in a moment of silence.

[I surely warned you.]

He was a being who had long since gathered all his fragments to reach the 'Great Myth'.

A star who rejected the Round Table of his own accord and abandoned even the universe of the <Star Stream>.

[I said I would shatter every single star that enters this world without exception.]

Once a prisoner in the world's smallest prison, now a being possessing terrifying power capable of scorning even other myth-grade constellations.

[The constellation, 'Oldest Liberator', reveals its true power!]

Sensing the danger, the myth-grade constellations simultaneously unleashed their true powers.

[Danger—]

The next moment, the far side of the sky flashed, and the entire universe was engulfed in bright light. A clash of myths. Amidst the flooding stories, countless stars were swept away, and a miracle unfolded in which an entire galaxy was erased.

The shape of a gigantic 'Golden Shackle' rose into the sky.

The reason this world, which was swaying precariously, was barely holding on was entirely because the Golden Shackle of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal enveloped its outer boundaries.

Watching this scene, Snowfield slowly looked at his brother and spoke.

"You know it, don't you? The Great Sage Heaven's Equal alone cannot stop them."

No matter how great the Great Sage Heaven's Equal was, his opponents were the myth-grade constellations of the 'Round Table'. While it was unclear for now, it was only natural that he alone could not protect this world and face them all.

In fact, the top-tier myth-grade constellations, including Odin, had not even joined this battle yet.

"Now that myth-grade constellations have appeared, this world is bound to be destroyed by the aftermath anyway. If the Great Sage Heaven's Equal is left as he is, he will die."

From afar, the lion's roar of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal could be heard. He was protecting this world, staking every story on it.

Amidst the bright, exploding halo of golden stories, Snowfield spoke.

"If you want to save him, dream the same dream as I do."

As Snowfield looked at his brother, his brother looked back at him. The gazes of the two Kim Dokjas clashed in the air, and a single dream flickered.

「The only way to stop those myth-grade constellations in this universe.」

The 'dream' Snowfield spoke of was clear.

"We must summon <Kim Dokja Company> here."

1005 Episode 61 Prisoner of the Golden Headband (5)

---

「Summoning <Kim Dokja Company> here to save the Great Sage Heaven's Equal.」

It was an offer Kim Dokja could not refuse. While <Kim Dokja Company> was one thing, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal was Kim Dokja's brother.

He was the star who had staked all his stories to protect Kim Dokja's ending.

"Cooperate. Otherwise, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal will die."

Snowfield urged his silent brother once again.

"They must come to save the Great Sage Heaven's Equal. Only they possess the probability of properly descending here."

The stories of <Kim Dokja Company> are present here now. The two brothers, the greatest fragments of Kim Dokja, were here, as were Shin Yoosung, Lee Hyunsung, and Jung Heewon of <Kim Dokja Company>.

Is that all? Even the conditions for a 'tilted scale' where other powerful Outer Gods would intervene were met.

So there was no reason to refuse. Protecting this measly world?

Compared to summoning <Kim Dokja Company> and saving the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, what was so important about that?

「Nevertheless, his brother slowly shook his head.」

As if unable to believe the record appearing before his eyes, Snowfield asked.

"Are you serious?"

"Yes."

The brother simply looked at the Great Sage Heaven's Equal in the void with sorrowful eyes. He could tell from his expression. His brother clearly wanted to save the Great Sage Heaven's Equal.

「Nevertheless, his brother declared that he would not summon <Kim Dokja Company> here.」

Snowfield could not understand what kind of resolve that was. An inexplicable emotion surged within him.

"How... if you really are 'Kim Dokja'—"

Snowfield spoke in a somewhat agitated voice.

"If you really are Kim Dokja, you would never drive your loved ones into a death trap."

At that, his brother turned to him and spoke.

"Is bringing <Kim Dokja Company> here for the sake of 'the people I love'?"

Snowfield tried to answer yes. But strangely, no voice came out. His brother continued speaking.

"You left all of that outside, so you don't understand why you are trying to realize that 'story' right now."

Tsutsutsutsu.

Snowfield stared at the faint spark burning at his fingertips.

His story was reacting. It was giving orders. To bring <Kim Dokja Company> here immediately.

「Is this really 'my' thought?」

A faint dizziness arose. In the distance, he could see the remains of fragments absorbed by the constellations.

「What exactly is this 'me' now?」

Existing merely as a fragment of the 'main body', what difference is there between him and those star fragments?

Snowfield slowly inhaled and spoke again.

"No matter what purpose I have in summoning <Kim Dokja Company>, if they do not come, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal will die."

Snowfield put his thoughts aside. It did not matter who he was or why he was trying to realize this story.

What mattered was achieving the purpose for which the main body had deployed him here.

"Dream right now. Imagine the same thing as me."

Saying this, Snowfield gripped his brother's shoulder tightly. However, his brother lightly swatted his hand away and said,

"There is no need for that."

A formidable story began to flow from his brother's entire body.

"I will deal with them alone."

Snowfield's eyes slowly widened.

「The brother before me is a being who has reached myth by accumulating stories on his own.」

The stories his brother had built up until now revealed their power all at once.

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', begins its storytelling.]

[The story, 'Great King of Fear', begins its storytelling.]

[The story, 'Prisoner of the Golden Cage', begins its storytelling.]

The stories his brother had gathered were shining brightly. Watching the stories flowing from his entire body, Snowfield realized something. His brother was sincere right now. He was going to stake everything on stopping those constellations without the help of <Kim Dokja Company>.

"That won't do."

Something creaked and went awry inside Snowfield.

"Unless you dream the same dream as me."

Along with the pitch-black story flowing out, Snowfield spoke.

"I will kill you right now and take your stories."

---

Immediately after absorbing Dansu ahjussi, something strange happened to me. To get straight to the point, it wasn't 'me' moving my body right now. It felt as if 'me' had been split in two. Another 'me' was moving my body and speaking like me. No, to be more precise—

[Your 'Exclusive Trait' is evolving!]

'The other me' was just like the 'Kim Dokja' I had imagined for a long time.

"Watch over me from there."

Exuding an overwhelming presence, he subdued the constellations and moved my body in my place.

「Strong, cool-headed, and composed Kim Dokja.」

It felt as if a single concept named 'Kim Dokja' was moving my body.

[The story, 'Heir to the Eternal Name', smiles with satisfaction.]

Perhaps that is why. For a moment, a temptation arose. What if I were to entrust everything to this 'Kim Dokja'? What if I were to step back and record everything as he moved forward?

「If I were to live as his recorder just like this.」

The moment I thought that far, I was suddenly seized by a sensation as if the ground beneath my feet were giving way.

['■■■'s ■■' stares at you.]

Something was staring at me. The sensation of a muddy sea was dragging my soul along from my feet. A certain world, something within that world, was calling out to me strongly.

「I know where that place is.」

A faint question from a baby.

I felt as if my soul were melting away. If things continue like this for just a little longer, I will be completely sucked into the world where 'that thing' exists.

At that moment, something awakened me.

「Not yet」

The sentence from the [Fourth Wall] that I had heard before. From whom on earth was this sentence transmitted?

「No t yet the ti me」

Does saying it is not the time mean that someday the time will come to go there?

「Con ti nue the story」

With a sudden jolting sensation, my floating soul aligned with my incarnation body.

"Stop right now!"

I saw Snowfield shouting at me and swinging his fist. Amidst my accelerated perception, I took a deep breath and glared at that fist.

['■■■'s ■■' withdraws its gaze from you.]

[The evolution of the exclusive trait stops.]

I felt the story flowing through my veins. The grip of my entire body was returning. The concept of 'Kim Dokja' that had driven me scattered, and my body became mine again.

"Don't interfere."

I spoke in a cold voice as I parried Snowfield's punch.

"If you cherish that star even a little, don't interfere with me."

But Snowfield was not in a position to listen to me. I let out a short breath and struck Snowfield's jaw hard as he lunged at me. Snowfield staggered violently, yet he clung to my waist.

"The story I wanted is right in front of me."

Stories were flowing profusely from Snowfield's nose like blood as he held me. I got goosebumps the moment I met his eyes.

「The total amount of 'Kim Dokja Fragments' Snowfield possesses here is less than mine.」

However, just because the total amount of stories he possessed was small did not mean he could not interfere with me.

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', stops its storytelling.]

[The story, 'Great King of Fear', stops its storytelling.]

[The story, 'Prisoner of the Golden Cage', stops its storytelling.]

Snowfield also holds a certain share in the stories I possess. Right now, Snowfield was staking all of his stories to blockade my story.

I tried to shake Snowfield off somehow, but he clung to me even more tightly like a leech. I urgently looked up at the sky.

Rumble!

A rough thunderclap echoed. Stories were exploding like fireworks from all directions of the universe. The roar of enraged myth-grade constellations. Standing proudly at the center of the heavens, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal was fighting valiantly, absorbing the attacks of the stars.

[You damned monkey!]

[Blow the whole world away!]

From afar, I could see the furious power of the story swirling. A bombardment of pure story imbued with the authority of myth-grade constellations. The Great Sage Heaven's Equal continued the fight, wielding the Ruyi Golden Staff and sometimes deflecting bombardment with his Cloud Somersault.

However, his starlight was gradually fading. No matter how much he had awakened the power of the 'Oldest Liberator', he could not stand against all of them while protecting this world. It was just as Snowfield had said. At this rate, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal would die.

「He had to make a choice.」

Whether to summon <Kim Dokja Company> here, or to let the Great Sage Heaven's Equal die.

"Ahjussi, stop. Please—"

Shin Yoosung approached us with a pale face. Had she grasped the situation? She was looking at Snowfield.

"Please stop."

Despite Shin Yoosung's plea, Snowfield did not let go of my waist. His body was slowly crumbling under the sparks of probability. Shin Yoosung, who had been gazing at the snowy landscape, hurriedly looked up at the sky and squeezed her eyes shut as if she had made a decision.

"Chimera Dragon!"

The Chimera Dragon, which had been fighting against the Great Sage Heaven's Equal until the end of the war, roared and covered the rooftop in shadow. Shin Yoosung lightly stroked the Chimera Dragon's face, then turned to me with determined eyes and said.

"I will stop it. I won't let the Great Sage Heaven's Equal die."

Riding the Chimera Dragon, Shin Yoosung flew straight toward the stars.

"Yoosoung-ah, no!"

I reached out my hand toward Shin Yoosung as she sped away. Thunder rumbled from the sky once again. I grabbed Snowfield by the collar and said.

"Let go. Are you going to let Yoosoung die too?"

"…"

"The Yoosoung of today cannot fight against the stars."

Beast Lord Shin Yoosung is strong. However, if her story is in an unstable state like this, it is a different story. She was not in a position to face a myth-grade constellation like the Great Sage Heaven's Equal.

Snowfield simply laughed as she poured out her stories.

"Imagine, Kim Dokja."

That persistence sent a chill down my spine. I couldn't understand Snowfield's mind. Did he really believe that by summoning <Kim Dokja Company> like this, he could see the ending he desired?

"Dokja-ssi!"

Just then, Jung Heewon carried Lee Hyunsung up to the rooftop. Some of the myth-grade constellations floating in the sky stared in this direction.

[Kim Dok ja Com pa ny.]

That 'Jung Heewon' right now was the Jung Heewon of the 41st round. And Lee Hyunsung was unconscious. If even a single myth-grade constellation were to descend upon this rooftop in this situation—

「There was no other way now.」

I released my stories and began to imagine. Noticing my change, Snowfield beamed and said.

"Yes, that is it."

Shin Yoosung, Jung Heewon, and even Lee Hyunsung. The three of <Kim Dokja Company> had gathered here. The story of <Kim Dokja Company> had reached the extreme limit of strength.

「Two Kim Dokjas have gathered, and finally, they began to dream.」

The thunder in the sky grew louder. Receiving the imagination of the 'Oldest Dream', the gates of the world were opening.

[Something is approaching!]

A myth-grade constellation shouted as if to warn. However, a bolt of lightning flew in faster than that warning. It was neither Odin's nor Zeus's. That lightning was a power built solely by the strength of a pure human.

The Thunder of the Heaven-Shattering.

At the lightning strike that flew in tearing through the sky, the mythical constellations groaned and retreated. In the darkness where the stars had withdrawn, a man stood.

「With his pitch-black coat fluttering in the wind, the regressor with piercing eyes stared at the world.」

It was only the moment he read that record that Snowfield let go of my waist. He staggered to his feet. As if welcoming a very old friend, he stood there and called out the name of the man coming down toward him.

"Yoo Joonghyuk."

Snowfield approached him with a face radiant with joy.

"You have finally come."

However, Yoo Joonghyuk glanced at him briefly, then turned his head this way and that.

「And Snowfield could never forget the words that followed from Yoo Joonghyuk.」

"Where is Kim Dokja?"

1006 Episode 61 Prisoner of the Golden Headband (6)

---

Snowfield stood motionless, as if struck hard on the back of the head with a blunt object, and turned to look at Yoo Joonghyuk and at me. Just then, Yoo Joonghyuk's gaze also fixed on me. Upon confirming my presence, Yoo Joonghyuk frowned slightly, then immediately gazed at the sky I had been looking at.

"You always seek me out only at moments like this."

The constellations in the night sky, having confirmed Yoo Joonghyuk's existence, let out a furious roar.

[Puppet of the Oldest Dream—!]

The stars in the sky blinked violently. Countless starlight poured down upon Yoo Joonghyuk's head. A few steps away from that maddening stage—an unreal landscape where the entire universe flickered—Snowfield was simply looking at me with bewildered eyes. It was a face that showed absolutely no understanding of what on earth was happening.

Looking at him, I said.

"I cannot dream the same dream as you."

Only after hearing those words did Snowfield's eyes slowly return to their normal state. As if realizing something belatedly, he flinched, his shoulders trembling, and turned to look at Yoo Joonghyuk.

"No way."

A black coat fluttering in the breeze. The man standing there was undoubtedly Yoo Joonghyuk. However, just as we are not the Kim Dokja of <Kim Dokja Company>, neither was Yoo Joonghyuk.

The moment he checked the spear clutched in his hand, Snowfield staggered and spoke.

"How on earth—that Yoo Joonghyuk."

He was the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st round who had walked through the history of this world with me.

"Because the stories of <Kim Dokja Company> aren't the only ones here."

[Your 'Giant Story' continues its storytelling.]

Feeling the stories overflowing within me, I spoke.

"Just as the Kim Dokja known by <Kim Dokja Company> isn't the only Kim Dokja, the Yoo Joonghyuk you knew isn't the only Yoo Joonghyuk either."

「The power of the 'Oldest Dream' is to realize one's own 'dream'.」

There was clearly a story of <Kim Dokja Company> here. However, within me now, there existed a narrative that had formed layers perhaps just as powerful.

「I imagined the Yoo Joonghyuk I needed.」

What Snowfield is looking at right now is the story he has always loved.

「This is the story of the side story."」

Like someone whose heart has collapsed, Snowfield slowly knelt. I watched him for a moment, then turned my head away. There was no time to feel pity for him right now.

[Your 'Giant Story' is advancing toward the grain.]

[Your 'Giant Story' is nearing the 'Super Giant Story'.]

I moved my steps and stood beside Yoo Joonghyuk. Yoo Joonghyuk glanced at me and adjusted his grip on his spear. I asked.

"Can you kill at least one myth-grade constellation now?"

Instead of answering, Yoo Joonghyuk held up his spear. A heavy, finely crafted black spear.

「Dark Heaven Moon Spear.」

To complete that spear, Yoo Joonghyuk must have slain countless stars and demon lords in places I do not know. He must have gathered stories of light and darkness, and asked the greatest blacksmith to forge this spear using the metal of those stories.

[The Holy Relic, 'Dark Heaven Moon Spear', roars!]

As the spear, imbued with the vengeful spirits of countless stars and demon lords, howled, Yoo Joonghyuk's stories imbued themselves upon its surface. A mysterious energy bloomed from the spear, which possessed beautiful ridges that looked as if the moon had been pressed into the darkness. I recognized that martial art immediately.

「Divine Spear of Annihilation.」

It was a martial art perfected to shatter the ancient myths of the heavens.

「He is now fully capable of bearing the myths of the heavens.」

Yoo Joonghyuk was proving this with his own stories. Yoo Joonghyuk, who had been observing me, asked.

"What about you?"

"Check it out for yourself."

We looked up at the sky together.

「This is a story to change the ending of the 41st round.」

Jung Heewon, carrying Lee Hyunsung on her back, also approached us and stood beside us.

"Can I abandon this person now?"

The grumbling Jung Heewon and Yoo Joonghyuk's eyes met briefly. It seemed as though sparks flew between their gazes for a moment.

"You've become stronger."

As Yoo Joonghyuk spoke, Jung Heewon twitched her lips in frustration and replied.

"You too."

It seemed that Jung Heewon realized the gap still hanging between her and Yoo Joonghyuk just from that brief exchange of gazes.

「Thus, the two disciples of Breaking the Sky gathered in one place.」

Just then, we saw the nerve of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, who had been battling the stars in the void, descending toward us.

[Aaaargh! You damned monkey!]

Even in the midst of this, a fierce battle was raging in the open sky. The sight of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, split into countless fragments, fighting against the stars. It appeared that his signature technique, the [Clone Technique], had been unleashed.

Even while fighting against myth-grade constellations, he still possessed the capacity to send his true form toward us. I could not even fathom the extent of his capabilities at this moment.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal observed Yoo Joonghyuk and Jung Heewon, then turned to me and spoke.

[The youngest is…]

I bowed my head. The 'youngest' he was looking for was not me.

"I am sorry."

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal remained silent for a moment.

「I told him that I would protect 'the third Kim Dokja'.」

However, the third Kim Dokja eventually entered the [Fourth Wall] that I possess. By now, he has likely met the 'Demon King of Salvation' and the 'Great King of Fear'. Perhaps he is watching this very scene through the wall.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal, who had been silently staring at me, strode toward me. I could not tell from his expression whether he was angry or not. Yoo Joonghyuk and Jung Heewon stood blocking my path, their expressions hardening. I shook my head to signal to them that I was fine. As they stepped aside, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal stood before me, looking down at me.

I opened my mouth to him as if making an excuse.

"Kim Dokja is inside me. Probably inside the [Fourth Wall]—"

It was a pathetic excuse to claim that he hadn't been completely absorbed by me.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal shook his head silently and then spoke.

[I know.]

"Yes?"

[To be precise, I should say I knew.]

He looked up somewhere in the void. As if reading a record invisible to me, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal added like a sigh.

[The Recorder told me. That it would eventually turn out this way. That everything is already written, and is being written simultaneously.]

Which recorder could have told the Great Sage Heaven's Equal this story?

Strangely, I had a feeling that it might be Han Sooyoung.

"We will help."

I spoke while gazing at the battlefield in the sky. Here, I am, Yoo Joonghyuk is, and Jung Heewon is. Now that Snowfield cannot dream a proper dream, if we join forces, we might be able to fend off the relentless assault of those myth-grade constellations.

[No, it is not necessary.]

"Huh?"

[Leave this world.]

A deep pain rose from somewhere in my heart. Perhaps it was the third's feelings toward the Great Sage Heaven's Equal.

"But this house—"

[It’s hard to even call it a house anymore.]

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal scanned the city center with somewhat hollow eyes. There stood a world reduced to ruins by flooded snowstorms. The corpses of the dead. The collapsed major facilities of the city. In the distance, the house where the Great Sage Heaven's Equal and his brothers used to live together was visible. The house had been half-destroyed by a meteorite that had flown in from somewhere.

[Perhaps it was our fate from the very beginning. It was probably impossible with just the efforts of me and the other two.]

At the Great Sage Heaven's Equal’s muttered words, I shook my head and tried to say something. But the Great Sage Heaven's Equal was faster.

[As expected, that guy suits being by everyone’s side better.]

I was speechless for a moment. It seemed that the Great Sage Heaven's Equal had been thinking that all along while living here with Kim Dokja.

「If so, with what heart has the Great Sage Heaven's Equal protected Kim Dokja here?」

Why did the Great Sage Heaven's Equal protect this fleeting daily life, this simple story, so desperately?

[If the youngest entrusted the future to you, there must be a reason.]

Why has this star, which was once weary of all stories, illuminated this world with such a bright light?

[Please show the youngest a proper 'home'.]

Some blank spaces cannot be fully filled, even by the power of a recorder. At that moment, I wanted to shed light on the Great Sage Heaven's Equal’s unspoken heart. I wanted to draw out at least a single word from that vastness. However, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal interrupted me with a serious expression.

[And soon, 'it' will strike.]

'It'?

"The time has come."

Yoo Joonghyuk nodded, as if he immediately understood what the Great Sage Heaven's Equal was saying. Jung Heewon looked at me as if to say, "What is that sound?" Something belatedly occurred to me as well.

「Right now, in this universe, a massive event was unfolding that would shake the probability of the <Star Stream>.」

The clash of myth-grade constellations unfolding before my eyes was a type of event rarely seen even in the main story.

If the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's 'Golden Headband' had not withstood the aftershocks sweeping into this world, it would have been swept away by the constellations' furious assault and turned into cosmic dust long ago.

The surrounding universe was already in a state of complete devastation due to the overflowing power of the myth-grade constellations. With a backlash severe enough to cause serious problems on the scales of probability, the <Star Stream> will summon a being to resolve it.

[The 'Cleaner' is coming soon.]

For some time now, there has been a sinister aura emanating from across the sky. Something approaching from a great distance at high speed.

[Once it arrives here, even if I and you join forces, we cannot stop it.]

An absolute catastrophe was approaching, one that even the Great Sage Heaven's Equal could not stop. This <Star Stream> gives this catastrophe its name.

"Indescribable Distance."

Indescribable Distance—'The Nameless Mist'.

The mist at the apex of all outer spheres was approaching this world to devour the distorted probability.

[Until now, I had been hiding its coordinates with the 'Golden Sash', but that will be difficult any longer.]

With a light sigh, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal rose once again into the void.

[I will draw the attention of the stars. You guys escape in the meantime.]

"Wait a minute. And you—"

[Who are you worrying about right now?]

Laughing triumphantly, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal unleashed a barrage of lightning toward the sky once again. In response to the Great Sage's counterattack, the constellations unleashed even more powerful fire, adjusting their formations.

Yoo Joonghyuk surveyed the battlefield for a moment, then took his stance.

"There is no time, so I will break through in one go."

Yoo Joonghyuk's [Sage's Eye] began to shine brightly. Even in the midst of this, countless calculations were likely going back and forth in his head. The power and angle of the [Divine Soul Annihilation Spear], and even the star most suitable for the spear to pierce.

"Rescue Shin Yoosung and escape this place immediately. You guys cover me."

I nodded.

"What is the target?"

"Poseidon."

Poseidon, who had been withstanding the attacks of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal in the sky, roared while shedding stories. Although wounded, his body was spewing out such immense stories that even approaching him was terrifying. The mere act of approaching it as a narrative-grade constellation would cause its incarnation body to melt away.

"Do you really think you can break through?"

No matter how inferior Poseidon was compared to Zeus or Odin, he was by no means a star that could be finished off with a single spear strike.

"It is possible."

Nevertheless, Yoo Joonghyuk said it was possible. If the current Yoo Joonghyuk says so, it must be true.

"Prepare."

"Please wait a moment."

Yoo Joonghyuk glared at me for a moment, as if asking what I was thinking. However, even if I had to listen to Yoo Joonghyuk's harsh words, there was still something I absolutely had to do before escaping this place.

I turned my head and looked at the edge of the rooftop.

「There stood Snowfield.」

Still lost in thought, his eyes held a look of utter despair, as if he had lost every story of his own.

「His <Kim Dokja Company> never came here.」

I am not sure if the reason his dream failed to come true was simply a lack of 'Kim Dokja fragments', or if it was because of me. But whatever the reason, I could not simply leave him abandoned here.

I approached him and called his name.

"Kim Dokja."

At that, Snowfield looked at me. As if cursing me for calling him by that name, deep hatred was rising in his eyes. Reaching out my hand toward that hatred, I said.

"Let's go together."

1007 Episode 61 Prisoner of the Golden Headband (7)

Upon hearing my words, Snowfield’s eyes went blank for a moment. He asked back, as if doubting what he had heard.

"What did you say?"

"Didn't you hear? I said let's go together."

A shadow of anger flickered in Snowfield’s eyes.

"What do you mean by that?"

He looked ready to pounce on me at any moment, depending on my answer. I stared at him calmly and said.

"I was just being realistic. There is nothing more you can do even if you stay here."

What stood before me was a fragment of 'Snowfield'. He must have come here on some kind of order from his main body. It wasn't difficult to guess what that order might be.

「To summon <Kim Dokja Company> and recreate the 'Big House'.」

I don't know why Snowfield chose to recreate that story specifically here, or why he didn't come in person if he intended to recreate it. But regardless, his plan has failed.

"You know it, too. <Kim Dokja Company> isn't coming."

I can clearly feel <Kim Dokja Company> existing far beyond the universe. However, I didn't get the feeling they were approaching. It seemed that at the last moment, <Kim Dokja Company> had turned in a different direction. Perhaps they headed somewhere where a more urgent matter had arisen.

"Staying here will only lead to a meaningless death. So let's go back."

Snowfield frowned at the hand I held out and asked in a low voice.

"Where to?"

"Anywhere."

"Have you forgotten that you were punching me just moments ago?"

"I remember. And I know the fight isn't over yet."

We simply couldn't settle the score with Snowfield this time; eventually, he and I will have to settle it.

Snowfield asked, looking puzzled.

"Why are you making this proposal? You surely have other ways."

"Other ways?"

"Absorbing me right now."

Snowfield threw open his collar as he spoke those words. On his chest, stories were rippling like a tattoo.

「There stood the 'Kim Dokjas' collected by Snowfield.」

Stories pulsating closest to the heart. Stories of those born as Kim Dokja, whether they wanted it or not, who had to become Kim Dokja, and thus became Kim Dokja.

"If you take me here, you can become a true Kim Dokja."

I felt a burning emotion in Snowfield's eyes. A very old and deep hunger. Perhaps Snowfield had come this far intoxicated by that emotion, absorbing other 'Kim Dokjas' time and time again.

「Kim Dok ja」

The stories were shouting from within him. The voices of fragments yearning for a single 'Kim Dokja' pierced my ears like an echo. My heart pounded, and the blood flow through my body quickened.

[The story, 'Heir to the Eternal Name', licks his lips.]

I opened my mouth, strongly suppressing my boiling emotions.

"If we gather all the fragments."

From a distance, I could see stories coalescing into Yoo Joonghyuk's spear. Without taking my eyes off the scene, I asked.

"Do you really think he can become the 'Kim Dokja' we envision?"

Snowfield did not answer immediately. It was not a question I had asked expecting an answer in the first place. Neither he nor I would ever know the answer.

Biting his lip tightly, Snowfield spoke again.

"I don't know. Still, all I can do is—"

"Gathering fragments? Even if that is the case, let's not do it here."

As Snowfield said, subduing and absorbing him here might be helpful for the upcoming battles.

「But is that really the only way?」

I thought of the third Kim Dokja, who had not wanted his brothers to fight. Is it truly fitting for this story's ending to have every Kim Dokja engage in a bloody battle until the very end, with only a single Kim Dokja surviving?

"I have no intention of settling this matter with you here. If we were to engage in a clumsy brawl among ourselves here, only the innocent guys would benefit."

I thought of Asmodeus, who was watching over us from across the sky. He had suddenly barged into the battlefield i the 'Fear Realm' and stolen a fragment of the 'King of Fear' as well. He was probably hiding, waiting for an opportunity, just like he did back then.

Snowfield looked at me with a complex gaze. I took that as his own form of consent.

"You made the right decision."

As I took the first step, he followed me a beat late.

Yoo Joonghyuk, who had been engrossed in the story, glanced over at us and asked.

"Is the story over?"

"Yes. You may depart now."

For a brief moment, Yoo Joonghyuk's gaze rested on Snowfield.

"Looking at him again, he resembles you a little."

I replied with a bitter smile.

"Resemble? We look exactly alike. What nonsense."

In fact, aside from our hair color, Snowfield and I looked practically like twins.

Yoo Joonghyuk shook his head and said.

"You don't look exactly alike. Are your eyes small, so your eyesight is bad too?"

"They aren't small; I just squinted."

Snowfield watched from the side as I exchanged nonsense with Yoo Joonghyuk. Honestly, watching that didn't make me feel very comfortable. What was that guy thinking right now, having waited so long for <Kim Dokja Company> but never meeting it?

"Preparations are complete."

Yoo Joonghyuk's spear, having finished his preparations, aimed at the empty sky. Even the myth-grade constellations of the Azure Sky witnessed us.

[Block it.]

It was Poseidon who unleashed his technique first. A massive spear was summoned into the grasp of Poseidon, capable of engulfing an entire planet. I knew it instinctively. Just by swinging that spear, not only would everyone here be annihilated, but this world—this entire planet—would be shattered.

With a roar that tore through the entire atmosphere, Poseidon's spear flew toward us. Honestly, it felt less like a spear and more like a meteor.

Even though the spear had pierced the atmosphere, Yoo Joonghyuk did not use [Divine Spear of Annihilation]. As if waiting for something. And just when he felt he couldn't wait any longer...

Kagagagagang!

With a faint shattering sound, the trajectory of the spear unleashed by Poseidon twisted. The swollen Ruyi Golden Staff of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal was twisting the trajectory of the Trident. Leaving behind a tremendous backblast, the Trident passed right past this world.

[Go!]

At the signal of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, Yoo Joonghyuk's spear moved. I had once seen Yoo Joonghyuk's [Soul-Slaying Divine Spear]. However, the trajectory of the spear tracing before my eyes now was completely different from the [Soul-Slaying Divine Spear] I remembered.

Soul-Slaying Divine Spear.

First Form.

Annihilation Form.

The tip of the [Soul-Slaying Divine Spear] fired, leaving a dazzling tail behind. A spear thrust advancing with a speed that was not fast, but certainly steady.

Poseidon spoke with a mocking laugh.

[With the technique of a mere mortal—]

But Poseidon's laughter vanished in an instant. The Annihilation Form, which had clearly appeared as a single flash of light at first, changed its form the moment it pierced the atmosphere and soared. A spear thrust spinning as if sucking in every story in the area. What was initially a small mass of story had transformed into a massive mass of story by the time it broke through the stratosphere.

[What.]

Poseidon hurriedly unleashed his power, but the [Soul-Destruction Divine Spear], having gained momentum, became a single flash of light and pierced straight through Poseidon's palm.

[Aaaargh! How dare you!]

It was a devastating blow. A strike that pierced the true form of a 'myth-grade constellation', neither a demigod descending nor an incarnation body. Finally, the 41st Yoo Joonghyuk had become a transcendent of such supreme realm.

"Let's go. The opening will be brief."

Yoo Joonghyuk retrieved the spear and took the lead, followed by Jung Heewon and me. Snowfield was also steadily following behind us.

"There is a rift in the 'Void Veil' that the myth-grade constellations tore through. We will exit through there."

As Poseidon's energy clearly weakened, the 'Void Veil' rippling beyond it became much clearer.

The boundary of the world. If only we could enter that rift, we could escape this world.

"Something is coming."

It was then that the voice from Snowfield was heard. I wonder when it had started. A sinister, low-lying lightning strike was chasing us. From a distance, Odin's single eye was watching us.

"Odin."

Yoo Joonghyuk gripped his Dark Heavenly Moon Spear tighter, as if chewing on it. With a hardened expression, Yoo Joonghyuk unleashed his energy, but the range of the lightning wave was too vast for him to block alone. Just as Jung Heewon and I were about to step forward, a massive shadow enveloped us, taking Odin's lightning strike instead.

Kaaaaaaaak—!

The 'Chimera Dragon' let out a terrible scream after taking the lightning. I saw the shattered body of the 'Chimera Dragon' being transported somewhere. Amidst the scattering of the dragon's body, the unconscious Shin Yoosung was falling.

"Yoosoung-ah!"

In the meantime, Poseidon, having regained his strength, swung his massive palm toward us. The sheer pressure was such that it felt as though my incarnation body would be crushed just by the touch.

Yoo Joonghyuk spoke.

"Save Shin Yoosung. Jung Heewon will stop him with me."

Jung Heewon nodded and stood beside Yoo Joonghyuk, while I approached Shin Yoosung, utilizing [Way of the Wind] with full force.

Just then, several constellations spotted me. An arrow flying from somewhere grazed my shoulder. Even though it was merely a graze, pain surged through me as if my entire shoulder were about to be torn off. Enduring the pain, I reached out my left hand toward the falling Shin Yoosung.

"Yoosoung-ah! Catch it!"

However, the unconscious Shin Yoosung did not respond. I gritted my teeth and increased my acceleration.

"Shin Yoosung!"

But just before my hand touched the child's collar, an intense spark consumed my body.

「'Kim Dokja' will not be able to save 'Shin Yoosung'.」

A chill ran down my spine. It was [Fate]. In that brief moment, the recorders who had sided with the other party had bestowed this damn [Fate] upon me.

I could not tell if it was the work of Asmodeus or another recorder.

"Damn it—"

While I was caught in the spark, Shin Yoosung's hand began to slowly move away. Just as I belatedly emitted stories to accelerate toward Shin Yoosung again, something overtook me and grabbed her.

Pitch-black feathers scattered in the air.

I stared blankly at the back of the man who had saved Shin Yoosung.

「There were two 'Kim Dokjas' here.」

Snowfield embraced Shin Yoosung.

"You—"

I checked on Snowfield's condition. Judging by the fact that the aftershocks of probability were not affecting him, fortunately, it seemed [Fate] had only worked on me. Shin Yoosung, nestled in Snowfield's arms, curled up and muttered.

"Ahjussi..."

Snowfield was looking down at her with a deeply subdued gaze.

I let out a sigh of relief and said,

"Well done. Let's go back quickly."

But Snowfield did not move.

"There is something I want to ask you."

"Later. There's no time."

"What do you think 'Kim Dokja' is?"

A loud explosion erupted in the distance. I saw Yoo Joonghyuk and Jung Heewon receiving Poseidon's palm.

"How can you be so sure that you are Kim Dokja?"

The moment I saw Snowfield's expression, I was certain. If I didn't answer that question, Snowfield wouldn't move.

Checking on Shin Yoosung, who was in his arms, I said,

"No one can be certain of what they are."

This wasn't just Kim Dokja's story. It was the same even before he acquired the name Kim Dokja. I still don't really know who I am.

"There are people who believe I am 'Kim Dokja'."

I thought of the comrades who had called me Kim Dokja. I thought of my brothers inside the [Fourth Wall] who believed me to be 'Kim Dokja'.

A name is something that is given meaning only by the person who reads and calls it.

Even if I were to obtain the 100% fragment, if no one remained in this world to call that name, then can I still say that I am 'Kim Dokja'?

"I want to protect those people. I want to show them all a just ending. That's all."

Snowfield remained silent for a moment, lost in thought at my answer. Then, Yoo Joonghyuk's shout was heard from afar.

"Kim Dokja!"

We simultaneously activated [Way of the Wind].

[You bastards—]

An enraged Poseidon poured stories from his palms and clapped his hands. Along with a roar that sounded as if the universe were distorting, the sound of waves could be heard from somewhere.

A distant tsunami of stories was rushing in. Just a single clap. A miracle that creates a 'sea zone' with just that. I realized Poseidon's true power anew. Although he suffers terrible humiliation at the hands of Yoo Joonghyuk every time, that was nonetheless the true power of Poseidon, a member of the 'Round Table'.

This time, even the Great Sage Heaven's Equal was struggling to help us. Yoo Joonghyuk was the only one we could rely on.

"Yoo Joonghyuk!"

And Yoo Joonghyuk's Dark Heavenly Moon Spear moved.

Divine Spear of Annihilation.

Ultimate Technique.

Beside him, that Jung Heewon’s eyes widened at the sight. It seemed Jung Heewon had sensed the nature of the martial arts Yoo Joonghyuk was about to unleash.

I, too, felt I knew the original form of that martial art. Perhaps that ultimate technique—

「"My disciple."」

A martial art created by Yoo Joonghyuk while longing for his master.

「"Yes, that is how it is done."」

In an instant, the shadow of the Heaven-Shattering Sword Saint overlapped with Yoo Joonghyuk.

An extremely refined, truly beautiful sword stroke of the Heaven-Shattering Sword.

Yoo Joonghyuk’s spear moved, following the trajectory of that sword stroke.

The Soul-Shattering Meteor Strike.

The spiritual energy emanating from Yoo Joonghyuk’s spear stroke transformed into a meteor shower. The cluster of meteors soon scattered a mysterious aurora as it shot toward the universe.

「A martial art created to bring down all the stars from the sky.」

A martial art reminiscent of the Heaven-Shattering Sword Saint’s Heaven-Shattering Meteor Technique.

However, its power surpassed even the Heaven-Shattering Meteor Technique.

[How.]

Along with Poseidon's cry of astonishment, a baptism of meteors shattered the waves of the gods.

Poseidon struck by the meteor shower everywhere screamed. Poseidon's tattered true form was slowly crumbling.

Yoo Joonghyuk, sweating incessantly, spoke as if encouraging us.

"Break through."

As Poseidon collapsed, a great commotion spread among the stars in the area. We did not miss the opportunity and ran. The 'rift' was now right in front of us.

"Kim Dokja."

In an instant, I turned to look beside me. But the voice I heard was neither Yoo Joonghyuk's nor Jung Heewon's. When I turned around, Snowfield was looking at me.

「Snowfield called me 'Kim Dokja'.」

As our eyes met, Snowfield spoke again.

"There is something I want to tell you."

Perhaps because the rift was right in front of us, I could see Snowfield's body scattering little by little. Perhaps his true form was calling him, and it seemed to be there.

「The moment he connected with his main body, some of Snowfield's forgotten memories returned.」

I realized it instinctively. Snowfield was trying to convey some information to me.

"My main body—"

Strong sparks flickered across Snowfield's entire body as he opened his mouth. It seemed that Snowfield's 'main body' did not want to convey what he was about to say.

Nevertheless, he looked at me and continued speaking.

"He knew that <Kim Dokja Company> would not come here."

---

I repeated Snowfield's words to myself.

「"My main body knew that Kim Dokja Company would not come here."」

To put it simply, that meant the following:

「Snowfield knew that his fragment would fail here.」

I couldn't understand it. Why did Snowfield execute it even though he foresaw his own failure?

「The fact that he went out of his way to execute a plan destined for failure means that Snowfield needed this 'failure'.」

Not 'success', but 'failure' was needed... What on earth did that mean? The moment I thought that far, a chilling thought ran down my spine.

「Everything in this world eventually becomes a 'story'.」

His 'failure' would become a story. If so, did Snowfield need a 'failing story'?

Reaching out my hand as if to catch the scattering fragment of Snowfield, I asked.

"What does that mean—"

But before I could even finish my sentence, a corner of the sky collapsed, and something shot out toward me.

【Hahahahaha! I have been waiting for this moment!】

Asmodeus's white hand tore through space and flew toward Snowfield. The damned Demon King, who had stolen Kim Dokja's fragments time and time again, had seized the opportunity once more to intervene.

I activated [Jeoninhwa] and [Way of the Wind] simultaneously to stop him. However, Asmodeus's hand was slightly faster.

The moment Asmodeus's pale hand finally wrapped around Snowfield's shoulder with a wicked laugh...

【Ah.】

With the sensation that spacetime had stopped, Asmodeus's expression hardened.

【Damn it. Since when have you known?】

For the first time, tension flickered in the eyes of Asmodeus, who had always been so nonchalant.

Snowfield slowly turned his head to look at the Demon King.

"It would be strange not to know. Considering you've been leaking such unpleasant records."

Snowfield added in a contemptuous voice while gripping Asmodeus's wrist.

"Sometimes I wonder how a guy like you became a 'Recorder of Fear'."

At Snowfield's words, a strange smile spread across Asmodeus's face.

【So, you're finally curious about my story, too?】

"No, I'm not particularly curious."

【Huh?】

"Just stay quietly tucked away in a corner of the theater until I go to find my fragments."

Following this, Snowfield's right hand moved. It was a gesture as light as the flapping of a small insect's wings.

「The small flapping of a butterfly's wings.」

However, the result of that gesture was truly astonishing.

「It shall become a storm on the other side of the universe.」

The entire space in the vicinity swept up in a vortex. Before the startled Asmodeus could even scream, his body was torn apart along with the records and sucked into the vortex.

【Kim Dok ja】

Even as he vanished, Asmodeus did not forget to leave one last remark.

【The con clu sion you de si re will ne ver come】

Snowfield gazed indifferently at the spot where Asmodeus had disappeared, then turned back to look at me.

The power to instantly eliminate Asmodeus, who is considered one of the 'Great Recorders'. I realized it clearly. The being standing before my eyes right now was not merely a 'fragment'.

"Snowfield."

Instead of answering, Snowfield smiled quietly, then immediately handed me the Shin Yoosung he was holding. Then, with distant eyes, he gazed behind me. His gaze was so poignant that I couldn't help but turn around.

"It is time to say goodbye."

Goodbye? Before I could even ask back, Snowfield spoke again.

"Let's meet again soon, brother."

When I turned around, the fragment of Snowfield had already vanished. All of his stories had drifted away, leaving behind a shimmering trail of light. Perhaps they had flowed to where his true form was.

Time, which had been creaking and tangled, began to flow again. Yoo Joonghyuk, who had been running ahead, turned around and asked.

"How is Shin Yoosung?"

"She is fine."

"Hand her over to me. It would be safer for me to handle her than for you."

"Yes."

Yoo Joonghyuk wasn't exactly wrong, so I instinctively handed Shin Yoosung over to him. However, the moment Yoo Joonghyuk looked ahead again with Shin Yoosung slung over his shoulder, I was engulfed in a strange sense of unease.

"Wait a minute. Is that all you have to say?"

"What are you talking about?"

"One person is missing from the party."

"Party?"

A look of bewilderment crossed Yoo Joonghyuk's eyes.

"What kind of nonsense are you spouting?"

I got goosebumps. Yoo Joonghyuk seemed to have absolutely no memory of 'Snowfield', who had been with us until the end of the war.

「As if Snowfield had carved his existence out of this world.」

Yoo Joonghyuk tilted his head in disbelief and glared at me, then added,

"Stop talking nonsense and get your act together. It's right in front of us now."

It was certainly just as Yoo Joonghyuk had said. Regardless of what magic Snowfield had cast, the most important thing was to safely escape this timeline.

Before we knew it, the boundary of the world was right before our eyes. The boundary of the world spewing out a dazzling golden light—a faint rift was revealed between the protective barriers created by the 'Golden Claw'. We could hear the constellations howling in the distance, but they were not close enough to catch us. However, Jung Heewon, who was running beside us, muttered with a strange expression.

"Something is coming."

But even when we looked back, nothing was chasing us.

"It's ahead."

Yoo Joonghyuk said in a distorted voice. Pitch-black fog was rolling in from beyond the boundary. The Great Sage Heaven's Equal's warning had come true.

「An Indescribable Distance.」

The worst catastrophe of the <Star Stream>. 'The Nameless Mist' had already reached the very doorstep of this world.

"Escape with all your might."

We threw ourselves straight over the rift in the Golden Claw. As I emerged from the rift, I saw a portal swirling in the distance.

A portal leading to the 'Missing Bush'.

I knew it instinctively.

「If we go in there, we can return to the original scenario.」

However, instead of chasing after Yoo Joonghyuk, I stopped in my tracks.

"Go ahead."

"What?"

"I still have work to do."

This time, even Jung Heewon, who had been running alongside me, glared at me with wide eyes. I continued speaking.

"There is a party member that didn't come with us."

"What on earth are you talking about—"

"This time, it's not nonsense."

I turned around. Inside the rift we had just emerged from, the starlight of a constellation I knew well was twinkling.

"The Great Sage Heaven's Equal has not arrived yet."

Yoo Joonghyuk frowned.

"We must go immediately. If we delay any longer, we will be devoured by the Outer God."

I suppose so. Knowing that well, I could not leave any further.

"That star is absolutely necessary for our conclusion."

I thought that if I said this, Yoo Joonghyuk would back down. But Yoo Joonghyuk was not easily swayed.

"That star..."

Yoo Joonghyuk spoke to me in an infinitely calm voice, as if narrating a dry sentence.

"It has no intention of going with us."

"I know that, too. It is precisely because I know that I cannot go."

I had long known that the Great Sage Heaven's Equal intended to remain in this world.

He would surely try to buy time for us to leave by confronting the 'myth-grade constellations' and fending off 'The Nameless Mist'. Even if it meant losing all his stories in return.

Taking a deep breath, I conveyed my honest feelings to Yoo Joonghyuk.

"I do not want to lose any more comrades."

Yoo Joonghyuk would likely understand this feeling without needing any further explanation.

[The story, 'Prisoner of the Golden Cage', responds to your emotions.]

It was not simply because the third Kim Dokja was inside me, or because I felt his emotions along with him.

"Yoo Joonghyuk, take your comrades and go ahead. Wait for me in the final scenario."

"…"

"Don't worry. Who am I? The 'Evil Sophist' and the one called 'The One Who Deceived The Stars'—"

"You are neither the 'Evil Sophist' nor the 'One Who Deceived The Stars'."

The moment I saw Yoo Joonghyuk's piercing eyes, I was engulfed by a strange feeling. I couldn't express it in any other words.

「At that moment, Yoo Joonghyuk was looking at 'me'.」

Along with the records flashing before my eyes, Yoo Joonghyuk spoke.

"Do as you please."

"Thank you."

However, there was one thing I had overlooked. That Yoo Joonghyuk wasn't the only one hearing this story.

"He might be okay with it, but I'm not going."

[The story, 'Regret, Devastation, Obsession', begins its storytelling.]

Jung Heewon spoke in a flushed voice.

"I will never leave you behind again. If you need that star for your ending, I'll bring it."

"Heewon-ssi."

Jung Heewon approached me, fuming as if she were about to throw Lee Hyunsung away at any moment.

"I'm not joking."

I understand her heart well. Just as I try to save the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, I understand the feelings behind her words to me.

[The story, 'Regret, Devastation, Obsession', gazes into you.]

Because I know that heart all too well.

"Don't worry."

[The story, 'Regret, Devastation, Obsession', resonates with you.]

I must lie to her again this time.

"I won't die."

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.???', activates!]

"You know who I am. I'm not doing this without thinking. So, Heewon-ssi."

Watching Jung Heewon's eyes waver before my eyes, I continued to speak.

"Please grant my request. I am fine. Please take Hyunsung-ssi and Yoosoung to a safe place. I will follow right behind."

[Incite reached its extreme. It was a skill capable of persuading anyone other than Jung Heewon. But for some reason, blood was rushing to Jung Heewon's face.]

"I—"

[The story, 'Regret, Devastation, Obsession', continues its storytelling!]

[The story, 'Regret, Devastation, Obsession', continues its storytelling!]

[The story, 'Regret, Devastation, Obsession', continues its storytelling!]

Jung Heewon's eyes were stained with red madness. Just as the thought occurred that something was definitely going wrong, Jung Heewon's body collapsed forward with a dull thud. Yoo Joonghyuk, seizing the opening, had struck Jung Heewon in the back of the head, knocking her unconscious.

Yoo Joonghyuk immediately removed his coat and firmly tied the unconscious Shin Yoosung, Lee Hyunsung, and Jung Heewon to a spear shaft.

"This is the only time I will give in to your unreasonable demands."

Yoo Joonghyuk shouldered the spear shaft binding his comrades, turned straight toward the portal, and said.

"If you have made up your mind, make sure to bring him along."

A strange sensation tickled the corner of my heart. The Yoo Joonghyuk I knew was never the kind of person to help someone in this way. Nevertheless, Yoo Joonghyuk had personally stepped forward to grant my absurd demand.

In that case, it was my turn, too, to properly repay Yoo Joonghyuk's trust.

"Understood."

Yoo Joonghyuk, having moved further away, disappeared beyond the 'Bush of Missing People'. I pushed through the thick fog and approached the rift.

Oooooh—!

A fierce storm of starlight was raging inside the Golden Cage's rift. The myth-grade constellations attempting to escape the place were clashing with the might of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, who stood in their way.

I forcibly threw open the rift that was about to close and shouted.

"Great Sage Heaven's Equal! Come out quickly!"

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal did not respond.

It was the result I had expected.

「The Great Sage Heaven's Equal has decided to make this 'house' his final ■■.」

But I had my own thoughts, too.

"Uh-uh."

Even in this moment of no reaction, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal must be listening to my movements, my voice, and my very existence.

This was a method I could use because I trusted the Great Sage Heaven's Equal in that way.

I shouted toward the split rift in a deliberately exaggerated voice.

"Aaaargh! It is 'Indescribable Distance'!"

Just uttering that modifier sent tingling sparks through my entire body. And that wasn't the end of it.

「'The Nameless Mist' has spotted me.」

The mere mention of that guy's modifier changed the speed at which the fog was rushing in. So, my acting was real.

"Please save me! Big Brother! I'm dying!"

I shouted as I felt the fog enveloping my feet.

"Aaaargh! I'm being devoured! Kim Dokja is dying!"

I continued to shout toward the precariously open rift.

"If you don't come, I really will die! Aaaaaaaah—!"

Before I knew it, the fog had risen to my knees. I felt the distant presence of an Outer God right behind me.

O oh oh oh oh oh oh.

The hairs on my body stood on end. A chilling sensation, one that could not be felt even from a myth-grade constellation, gripped my spine.

「I am being swallowed.」

Just as that dizzying sensation was about to engulf me, sparks flew before my eyes, and something burst forth.

[Damn you youngest bastard! I'm like that—]

Finally, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal had broken through the rift in the 'Golden Sash'. His entire body was engulfed in flames like ashes. One eye was tightly closed, shedding tears. A broken leg and a severed arm. Yet, despite this, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal had broken through the onslaught of myth-grade constellations to come meet me.

I spoke to him.

"Let's go together. To the final scenario."

1009 Episode 61 Prisoner of the Golden Headband (9)

---

At that moment, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal wore an expression I had never seen before. I could see emotions swirling within his one remaining fiery golden eye. Just as he was about to open his mouth to say something, the intensity of the swirling mist around him shifted.

"Great Sage Heaven's Equal."

There is no time. I must escape from here quickly. I tried to say that. But the words would not come out.

「A void that steals away even a scream.」

Cold sweat ran down my spine. A massive shadow engulfed the area. I realized what had arrived behind me.

「An indescribable vastness.」

I had once faced 'The Nameless Mist' before. However, at that time, it was in the form of a fragment, and Master Jaehwan was with me. But Jaehwan was not here. I could not expect his absurd thrusts.

[The story, 'Heir to the Eternal Name', warns you!]

[The story, 'Demon King of Salvation', warns you!]

All my stories were fiercely warning me.

「Every being standing before it scatters into mere words.」

Nevertheless, I resisted the Void with all my might. Reaching out my hand toward the staggering Great Sage Heaven's Equal, I unleashed the stories of my entire body.

[The story, 'Great King of Fear', begins its storytelling.]

I am the Great King of Fear. The one who reads all abandoned stories from the highest throne of all fears. Even if it is a 'Fear of the Apocalypse', one cannot help but bow their head before this story.

Kugugugu.

But the fog crushing me did not thin out in the slightest. I realized it anew. This disaster is not a concept measured simply by a fear rating.

This disaster is a catastrophe that even subjugated the 'Final Dragon of the Apocalypse'.

It was arrogance to try to fight back with a mere level like mine.

[Exclusive skill, 'Fourth Wall', activates!]

But what if it is arrogance?

[The story, 'King of Fear', continues its storytelling.]

I felt a slight sense of relief. I pulled the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's wrist with all my might.

"Let's go."

I forced out a voice, overcoming my fear. Holding onto the Great Sage's wrist, I pushed forward through the fog that was gnawing at my entire body. I felt suffocated, as if my lungs were about to shrivel, and my ears were filled with the groans of dying stars.

Tsutsutsutsutsu.

The bones and muscles of the whole body seemed to be twisted. But it moved. I'm determined not to make the Great Sage Heaven's Equal die here. That determination dominated my body.

[Why are you doing this.]

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal, who was being dragged to me, said.

[You are not 'Kim Dokja', are you?]

That is true. I am not the 'Kim Dokja' that the Great Sage Heaven's Equal remembered. Nor was I the 'youngest' who had lived with him for eight years.

I am merely a reader who has read their story.

"It is something I can do even if I am not Kim Dokja."

And as that reader, I was acting as I pleased.

The desire not to lose a character I love. The desire to defy a predetermined fate.

"I do not want you to die."

In that instant, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's steps stopped. I tried to turn around. That there was no time to stop. That I had to go even one more step. I wanted to say that this fog was still gnawing away at us in real time.

But the Great Sage Heaven's Equal was not looking at me. He raised his head and stared into the Void.

[Oh, great disaster of the <Star Stream>.]

As the star shone upon the Void, the Void, too, stared back at the Great Sage Heaven's Equal.

[The constellation, 'Oldest Liberator', gazes upon the 'Indescribable Vastness'.]

Receiving that gaze, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal let out a mighty lion's roar.

[The Nameless Mist.]

The moment he spoke that name directly in front of me, stories streamed down from the corners of the Great Sage's mouth. I could feel the void surging. The oppressive force of the 'Indescribable Vastness' pressing around me was intensifying. A faint dizziness arose. I could not tell what the Great Sage was trying to do.

The stories that fell from the corners of his mouth sparkled and transformed into sentences.

「He is the Monkey King of Mount Huaguo.」

「The star who faced the Heavenly Army of the Solo Emperor.」

「The one who stands at the pinnacle of all demons.」

I urgently shouted toward the Great Sage.

"Stop!"

At this rate, the Great Sage will become the target of the 'Indescribable Vastness'. That disaster will try to swallow the Great Sage Heaven's Equal first before absorbing me.

[The Nameless Mist.]

Nevertheless, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal spoke once more.

[The Nameless Mist.]

And he spoke that name once more.

The next moment, the fog in the area writhed violently.

Kugugugugu.

A reaction that seemed to respond to the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's lion's roar. The Outer God, which was clearly nothing more than a disaster devoid of will, was answering the call of the starlight.

[Yes, have you finally answered?]

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal took something out of his bosom. It was a small gourd.

Toward the disaster staring at him, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal declared, imbuing it with his dignity.

[Suck it in, Zijin Honghuo.]

As the stopper of the gourd floated gently in the air, it opened, and along with sparks, a fog of 'indescribable vastness' swirled.

Tsutsutsutsutsu.

The fog of the surrounding area began to be sucked into the gourd.

Only then did I realize what kind of holy relic the gourd was.

If my memory serves me correctly, that relic was once used by the Golden Horn and Silver Horn King, the arch-nemesis of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal.

「The jar that sucks in those who respond, the Golden Red Gourd.」

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal had called out the name of that dangerous Outer God three times to perform that ritual.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal smiled bitterly and said.

[It is like trying to fill a wine bottle with the ocean, but...]

A cracking sound came in real-time from the 'Golden Red Gourd' as it sucked in 'The Nameless Mist'. Cracks were forming in the relic, unable to withstand the disaster.

[We might be able to buy a little time.]

Indeed, my breathing felt slightly better than before. The feeling that the fog was blocking my movement had lessened, and above all, the swirling portal in the distance began to appear again.

I gathered my breath and activated my skill. However, the skills were simply not obeying. Neither [Way of the Wind] nor [Jeon Inhwa] activated.

[Your incarnation body is severely damaged!]

My incarnation body was corroded in many places. My joints wouldn't move well, and even though the [Fourth Wall] was activated, my skin felt hot as if I had been burned.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal was probably in the same situation. No, perhaps he was in an even more serious condition than I was.

[Let's go, youngest.]

Nevertheless, we supported each other and moved forward little by little. Stepping on the bottomless void and pushing through the thick fog, we walked slowly toward the exit.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal muttered softly.

[It's been a while since I've walked like this.]

I glanced to the side and saw that he had his eyes closed. Perhaps even opening his eyes was becoming difficult for him now.

"If you wish, I will walk with you anytime."

[Really?]

"So please don't die."

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal laughed at my words. Fragments of the story of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal scattered through that laughter.

「The Great Sage Heaven's Equal remembered the day he first saw the youngest's story.」

What were the odds that a great star would observe an incarnation from a foreign land with which it had no connection whatsoever? And what were the odds that it would patiently watch that story unfold?

[Yes, to see your story, I suppose I must live longer.]

Perhaps those words were not directed at me. They were directed at the one and only 'Kim Dokja'.

With his eyes closed, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal was likely imagining Kim Dokja. He was conveying his words to the most complete form of Kim Dokja he could remember.

"Do you still want to see that story? It would be a boring story for you."

[I like stories where one deliberately walks a distance that could be covered by flying.]

In that instant, I recalled what kind of story he was the protagonist of.

He was the protagonist of 『Journey to the West』. A figure who walked a very long way to reach a world that was so far away that it could be arrived in an instant.

[There are landscapes you can only see when you are walking.]

"Just like now."

The swirling portal in the distance seemed as far away as Tianzhu. But just like Sun Wukong who eventually arrived in Tianzhu, we too will surely arrive at that portal.

"What would you like to do if you went back?"

After thinking for a moment, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal answered.

[Eating pizza and chicken with everyone would be nice.]

"Like kids?"

[Yeah, like kids.]

"Is there anything else?"

[I want to live in a big house.]

"A big house?"

[I didn't have a room of my own in that world. I wish I had a room of my own.]

I suddenly burst into laughter at the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's extremely realistic answer.

"What would you do in the room?"

[I'd read my favorite stories.]

"That sounds like something Uriel would say. Is there anything else?"

[I want to build a study in that house.]

"A study? Why?"

[There's a guy who likes books.]

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal continued speaking.

[In that world, I want to let him read the books he likes to his heart's content.]

"Is there anything else?"

After thinking for a moment, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal shook his head.

[Well. Perhaps I’ve already done enough of what I wanted to do.]

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal looked back with his eyes closed.

[I didn’t have my own room, and he couldn’t read books to his heart's content, but it was still a good home.]

Home. Suddenly, I realized what that world meant to the Great Sage Heaven's Equal.

[It was a world I liked because there was a place I could walk back to.]

"We just need to walk a little further."

Supporting the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, whose strength was draining away, I struggled to take a step.

"We will be able to return home."

The swirling exit was now quite close. We can go. Just a little further, and we can escape this hell together.

It was then that a spark struck from the void.

[The 'Round Table' is urgently summoned!]

Watching the message appear before my eyes, I thought about the stars.

Stars that do not hesitate to burn themselves out to ultimately see through the story they desire.

[The constellations of the 'Round Table' roll the 'dice'.]

I heard the sound of massive probability moving.

The decision of myth-grade constellations.

The power of the Round Table was descending from the sky.

Gooooo.

Someone's palm falling from the heavens. I immediately recognized what it was.

「The Tathāgata's first finger.」

The hand of the Tathāgata, which had once crushed and sealed Sun Wukong, the 'Monkey King', was falling toward the exit we would be escaping through. The palm soon transformed into a massive mountain. Its mass and size were too great to fathom.

A colossal mountain of immeasurable size. Pushing away even the fog, the mountain plummeted toward the exit.

「Sealing Mount Five Elements.」

The intention of the 'Round Table' was clear. Even if they offered the stories of the mythical constellations, they intended to imprison us here.

[The constellation, 'Spear of the Sea', sacrifices its story!]

[The constellation, 'Flame of the South', sacrifices its story!]

[The constellation, 'Father of the One Eye', sacrifices its story!]

They had determined that the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, who had become the 'Oldest Liberator', was a hindrance to their game of dice.

The landscape rippled as 'Stage Transformation' was activated. The very thing that had once imprisoned the Great Sage Heaven's Equal was falling right over our heads. The Great Sage tried to slow the mountain's descent by growing his Ruyi Jingu Bang, but the mountain crushed even the staff and fell toward us.

「This history cannot be defied.」

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal's spell was activated. Transformed into a giant, he supported the base of the falling colossal mountain. Bearing the weight with muscles swollen to the point of bursting, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal spoke.

[Go, my youngest.]

I shook my head. The exit was now right before my eyes. Having come this far, I could not leave him here.

[Don't worry. I will not die. You know that, don't you?]

I know. This seal cannot completely imprison the Great Sage Heaven's Equal. Now that the 'Wu Daihua' has occurred, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal will eventually escape from 'Mount Wuxing'. Just as his history has.

"But isn't that a story for 500 years from now?"

Exactly 500 years from now.

[To the stars, it is a fleeting moment.]

With a cracking sound, the 'Zizhen Hong Gu Lu' shattered. The mist escaping from the gourd began to thickly fill the surroundings.

"It is too long for me. In 500 years, no one you remember will be alive!"

[I must protect the house.]

I couldn't understand what he was saying.

"The house is already destroyed. That world cannot be protected."

The stories of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal scattered into the air. I felt uneasy. Perhaps the Great Sage Heaven's Equal had lost so many stories that he had gone insane.

[Youngest, may I call your name?]

He had opened his eyes before I knew it and was looking at me with his fiery golden eyes. Before I could even answer, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal spoke.

[Kim Dokja.]

I hesitated, then nodded and replied.

"Yes."

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal spoke once more.

[Kim Dokja.]

"Yes."

Like someone trying to confirm something just by calling a name, or like someone who was missing something—the Great Sage Heaven's Equal looked at me silently.

And once again, his lips moved.

[Kim Dokja.]

A sudden feeling of fear washed over me. Why? I felt like I shouldn't answer his words. Yet, meeting the eyes of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, in that instant, I had no choice but to answer.

"Yes."

Because his eyes looked so incredibly sad.

"Why are you calling me?"

At my answer, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal smiled quietly.

[I wanted to call you one last time.]

Just as I was about to ask what such a trivial reason was, a gourd sprang from the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's bosom. A gourd that looked similar to the Golden Red Gourd I had seen earlier. The moment I saw the gourd floating up, I realized what it was.

[The Holy Relic, 'Yangjiokjeongbyeong', confirms your response.]

It was the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's Holy Relic, possessing the same abilities as the 'Golden Red Gourd'.

[Suck it in, Yangjiokjeongbyeong.]

Those were the last words I had heard from the Great Sage Heaven's Equal.

1010 Episode 61 Prisoner of the Golden Headband (10)

---

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal watched the Yangjiokjeongbyeong receding into the distance. The gourd, carried away in an instant by the torrents of the worldline. It seemed as though he could faintly hear the voice of the youngest calling out to him from within.

「'Yangjiokjeongbyeong' is a holy relic connected to the story of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal.」

That gourd will flow along the torrents of the worldline toward the location where the 'Great Sage Heaven's Equal' of the 41st round resides. Since the tip of the gourd has been sealed with a fragment of the Golden Headband, the 'Indescribable Distance' will be unable to find the gourd until the youngest reaches a safe place.

Kugugugugu.

As if enraged by this fact, the surrounding fog began to attack his story hostilely.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal gathered his stories to withstand the erosion of the fog. With a cracking sound, the joints of his elbows broke.

「Mount Five Elements was crushing him.」

His story was shattered, and his incarnation body refused to obey.

「Nevertheless, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal did not give up.」

Watching the records flowing before his eyes, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal spoke.

[You are truly diligent.]

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal knew who the recorder recording him was. As if responding to that gaze, a light spark shot up from the air.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal shook his head and said.

[Don't feel sorry. I must record everything. I know I have to.]

Watching the records flow, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal felt rather grateful. Because these records exist, he is not lonely.

Ultimately, what every star sees at the end is their own story.

With a calm heart, he looked back at the world he had lived in.

[Ahhhhh!]

The desperate struggle of the sacred flames trying to escape the world. Due to the erosion of the 'indescribable vastness', the world he wanted to protect had become a scene of pandemonium.

[Shove it! Move aside! I'm going first!]

Amidst the ruins, the story of him, the youngest, and the brothers together brushed past the tip of his nose like a lingering scent.

[The story, 'Memories of the Big House', begins its storytelling.]

Someday, someone will read this story. That is why he lives the story, and why the recorder records it. To continue the story for just a single reader, to carry on the story for his joys and sorrows, to be remembered.

「Why do stories exist in this world?」

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal now knows the answer.

「Why is possessing five stories the qualification of a star?」

The stories formed in his constellation emitted a bright light. As if proving their own qualification, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal moved the stories with perfect control.

As if knowing that this might be his final stage, the stories poured out every sentence they possessed without reservation.

[The constellation, 'Oldest Liberator', reveals its full stature.]

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal rose up straight from his seat, defying the weight of Mount Five Elements. For that moment, even the mist of 'indescribable vastness' seemed to emanate from him. As if paying homage to his power, or as if waiting with satisfaction for the praise to come—the Great Sage Heaven's Equal gazed at the disaster and spoke.

[Very well, I will give you my stories. But not right now.]

His fiery golden eyes stared at the world. Soon, the true forms of myth-grade constellations, having squeezed through the rift, descended before his eyes. Terrifying constellations capable of crushing a planet with a single wave of their hand.

[Get out of the way! You damned monkey—]

The most enraged of them all was Poseidon, who had large holes in his chest and the back of his hand. Blocking the holes from which the stories were leaking, he wailed and swung his trident at the Great Sage Heaven's Equal.

[No.]

A Ruyi Jingu Bang, flying in from somewhere, deflected Poseidon's trident. The Great Sage Heaven's Equal gazed at the mythical constellations standing before him and spoke.

[You cannot go anywhere.]

A total of twelve mythical constellations stood in formation before him, including Poseidon, the 'One Who Draws the Boundaries of the Seas'; Emperor Ku, the 'Fire of the South'; and Odin, the 'One-Eyed Father'.

Stars who had pioneered the giant stories of the constellations and stood at the forefront of creation myths, having ascended to the highest peaks of the heavens.

Even such stars did not readily approach the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, who had burned down all his own stories to block their path.

Holding Mount Wuxing in one hand, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal stretched his other hand into the air. At that, his Ruyi Jingu Bang emitted a dazzling aura and curled into his palm.

It was Shennong, the 'Fire of the South', who spoke first to the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, who had completed his readiness for battle.

[O Great Sage Heaven's Equal.]

A god, one of the Three Sovereigns of the <Emperor>, he was a star that had watched over all of the Great Sage's myths from the moment his story was born until now.

[We were once adversaries, yet it was through our adversary that the giant story could finally be born. You know this, don't you?]

The Great Sage slowly nodded.

[It was once so.]

At the sharp thorn in those words, Shennong raised his head in pity.

[I know that you have reached the throne of 'myth' in another timeline. I know that you have attained a record greater than anyone here, and thus have approached the closest place to the 'Oldest Dream'.]

[…]

[But was there a place for you to stay there?]

The Great Sage remained silent. Shennong continued speaking.

[Did the story you wandered in search of—even to the point of half-destroying the <Emperor> and throwing the Heavens into chaos—truly become your sanctuary?]

[That is—]

[In the end, you could not find a place to stay. That is why, even after reaching such a great story, you left the worldline and began to wander.]

A faint wrinkle formed between the eyebrows of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal. As if enjoying the turmoil, Shennong spoke again.

[Stars are most dazzling when they shine within the context of a nebula.]

A mysterious story flowed from the entire body of the prodigy, who carried the story of the <Emperor> on his back. It was a story that even the Great Sage Heaven's Equal could not help but be captivated by. This was because it was a story the Great Sage Heaven's Equal knew well, too.

[The giant story, 'Journey to the West', begins its storytelling.]

Through that story, he became the Monkey King, the Magic-Wielding Demon, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, and the Fighting Victorious Buddha. He came to be known as Sun Wukong.

Shen Nong spoke as if counting all that time.

[Do you not know well where your home is? The world where you were born and where your stories blossomed. That world is your home. I will say it once more. Return to 「Journey to the West」, you mischievous boy of the Heavenly Realm.]

Shennong's expression was warm as he spoke these words. His voice was deep, as if welcoming a returning child or a long-lost friend. Hearing that voice, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal smiled wryly. If he had not had 1,864 rounds of history, and thus had he not seen the youngest son and his stories, he, too, might have wavered a little upon hearing the prodigy's words.

[You dare to spout such nonsense with this damned mountain placed on my head, Shennong.]

It was because he had been lonely for too long.

[Mr. Son.]

[The place where I was born was the summit of Mount Huaguo.]

The scene of a colossal waterfall was reflected in his slowly blinking golden eyes.

[One day, while wandering Mount Huaguo, I discovered a massive waterfall.]

[… ]

[Watching the waterfall pour down like thunder, I made a bet with my companions. The one who could see inside that waterfall would become the King of Mount Huaguo.]

That was the story of the day he discovered the Water Curtain Cave on Mount Huaguo and became the Monkey King. It was a story that Shennong knew well, too.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal continued speaking, as if reciting a long memory.

[Beyond the waterfall was a cave. It was a strange yet beautiful cave. Listening to the sound of the waterfall falling endlessly, any sorrow of the world felt futile.]

The familiar scenery of the Water Curtain Cave rose in the Great Sage's eyes. There were shadows wandering through the cave. The faces of fellow monkeys whose names he had now forgotten.

[Stupid but kind monkeys lived there together. We couldn't communicate well, but I had quite a good time living there. That is, until you <Emperors> destroyed it.]

Sensing the subtle rage in the voice of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, the constellations urged Shennong on, as if on alert.

[Fire of the South, there is no time. The true nature of the disaster will soon engulf this place.]

Despite the constellations' urging, Shennong remained calm. He uttered a gentle yet powerful incantation, as if soothing the Great Sage Heaven's Equal.

[Great Sage Heaven's Equal, that very desire for revenge is proof that you are still a member of our story.]

[… ]

[Come with us. And let us make that story great once again. There are many faces you will miss. The Golden Arhat and the Pure Lion are waiting for you.]

'Golden Arhat' Sha Wujing and 'Pure Lion' Zhu Bajie.

The god smiled as he watched the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's expression change in real time.

[And Shakyamuni, too—]

[Shakyamuni.]

The moment that name was heard, the expression on the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's face hardened. He looked up at the Five Elements Mountains that were pressing down on him.

The Five Elements Mountains. This mountain was the hand of the 'myth-grade constellation' he knew well.

[The fact that you have obtained this 'hand' means that Shakyamuni must have already been defeated.]

Only Shakyamuni, the master of the 'Island of the Reincarnated', could have inflicted the trials of the Five Elements Mountains upon him. However, the will contained within this mountain now did not belong to Shakyamuni.

[The nebula, <Emperor>, is moving the 'Five Elements Mountains'.]

As if to prevent him from thinking, the mountain began to press down on the Great Sage Heaven's Equal with even greater gravity. If he had still held onto the stories of 「Journey to the West」, he would not have been able to withstand this weight long ago.

[The constellation, 'Oldest Liberator', resists the stage!]

However, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal now was not merely Sun Wukong from 「Journey to the West」.

[The story, 'Kim Dokja's Brother', begins its storytelling.]

Shinnong glared in astonishment.

[That cannot be. There is no way you could resist this trial—]

Shinnong could not finish his sentence. The Ruyi Staff wielded by the Great Sage Heaven's Equal had blown off his jaw.

Sensing an ominous aura, the myth-grade constellations moved in unison, unleashing their powers.

Shinnong, having quickly restored his jaw, shouted.

[No matter how strong he is, he is alone! He cannot face all of us!]

[Although I cannot kill all of you.]

A massive amount of power began to gather in the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's Ruyi Golden Staff.

[It is possible to break every single one of your limbs.]

The myth-grade constellations turned pale upon confirming the power contained in the Ruyi Jingu Bang. They realized it instinctively.

「If you get hit by that first, you will suffer a blow close to annihilation.」

A blow that might have been easily blocked if the myth-grade constellations had joined forces.

[Dodge! Everyone, escape by any means necessary!]

[He is the one who will eventually be crushed by Mount Five Elements! There is no need to fight him!]

However, the hands of the myth-grade constellations, who deeply distrusted one another, could not possibly be in sync.

In the single moment the forces of the myth-grade constellations—who had been busy stealing the stories of their true forms and sending them out for the 41st round—dispersed, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's Ruyi Golden Staff emitted a radiant light.

Instantly expanding in volume, the Ruyi Golden Staff struck the stars with a distant trajectory that sliced through the galaxy.

Kwaaaaaaah!

A massive explosion erupted, powerful enough to cause even the falling Mount Five Elements to hesitate and rise.

[Kaaaaaah! How dare you—]

The true forms of the constellations struck by the Ruyi Staff were torn apart, suffering immense damage. Of course, that alone was not enough to kill the myth-grade constellations. But it was enough to buy time. The Great Sage Heaven's Equal drove the injured myth-grade constellations back into the rift, then sealed the entrance with the 'Golden Shackle'.

[What on earth are you doing...!]

Shennong shouted in rage. Instead of answering, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal stared at the Five Elements Mountain falling over his head.

「This is my last gift, youngest.」

He probably would not be able to witness the ending that the youngest would confirm.

But at least he could clear away a few pebbles rolling along the path to that ending.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal gazed at his crumbling world. For some reason, the scenery reminded him of Seoul, where the scenarios had begun.

[The story, 'Kim Dokja's Star', continues its storytelling.]

Recalling the day he first saw the youngest, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal spoke.

[This world is my home.]

He would be sealed in this prison.

[None of you can go outside.]

But he shall not be the only mythical constellation sealed here.

1011 Episode 62 Snowfield Kim Dokja (1)

---

A faint sound was heard from afar. It sounded like a heavy object being dropped, like a sturdy door closing, or like a thick book being slammed shut.

And I knew what that sound was.

「It was the sound of a universe closing.」

With an explosion of light, all the stories I knew were sucked into somewhere and turned into a single point. Beyond that point, reminiscent of a period, the screams of unwritten stars could be heard.

[The constellation, 'Spear Marking the Boundaries of the Seas', in astonishment...]

[The constellation, 'One-Eyed Father', abandoning his own story...]

[The constellation, 'Fire of the South', asking the <Emperor> for help...]

...

[The constellation, 'Oldest Liberator', gazes at you.]

The point emitting a faint light soon scattered beyond a distant vanishing point.

I reached out my hand toward that vanishing point. My hand was blocked by the smooth inner wall of the gourd and could not advance any further. A hollow and profound silence caught between my fingers.

「This was not my own emotion.」

My head was spinning. It was difficult to keep breathing. Perhaps this emotion belonged to the third Kim Dokja. Nevertheless, right now, I truly shared in the pain the third was experiencing.

[The story, 'Prisoner of the Golden Cage', grieves.]

Just by reading a story by chance, a person can feel terrible sorrow. They can sense the despair of losing a loved one, the pain of losing something precious, as if it were their own.

「Every living being capable of reading stories has been cursed.」

I opened my mouth as if speaking to the third.

"I'm sorry."

[The story, 'Prisoner of the Golden Cage', listens to your story.]

I failed to keep it again. I failed to properly keep any promise. And all that remained for me was the record.

「"Youngest."」

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal knew that I was not his youngest. Nevertheless, he entrusted that role to me.

「Do I really have the qualifications to represent 'Kim Dokja'?」

As the hazy sentence became clear, the doubts I had been putting off until now surged all at once.

[Exclusive Skill, 'Fourth Wall', shakes!]

[Exclusive Skill, 'Incite'’s, influence weakens!]

[The story, 'Heir to the Eternal Name', looks at you!]

I came this far by constantly brainwashing myself. I believed I could do it. There was a reason why I had to. There were 'Dokjas' who believed in me. There were people who entrusted everything to me and watched this whole story from beyond the [Fourth Wall].

"I am."

For them, I opened my mouth once again.

"Kim Dokja."

[Exclusive Skill, 'Incite Lv.???', activated!]

I repeated [Incite], which had now become the hardest thing for me to believe in myself.

「What I learned while repeating [Incite] was that the more I repeated it, the less I was 'Kim Dokja'.」

I must act as Kim Dokja so that no one other than myself knows that fact. And thus, I must ultimately deceive even this <Star Stream>.

[Exclusive Skill, 'Fourth Wall', protects you.]

[The story, 'Heir to the Eternal Name', is satisfied with your condition.]

The fragments of stories that had been seething in my head subsided. When I opened my closed eyes again, a message was floating in the air.

—What? Are you having a self-awakening event or something?

It was my eldest brother.

"Demon King of Salvation."

I answered in a voice mixed with joy and surprise.

Is it possible to contact someone like this? I thought we could only communicate via smartphone.

—I can contact you now without the Holy Relic. We've gathered enough fragments, and the library has grown quite a bit.

Until now, contact with the 'Demon King of Salvation' was only possible through his Holy Relic, the 'smartphone'. However, it seems something changed when the third Kim Dokja was brought inside the walls.

—So you're saying you can handle this level of probability now?

I gave a wry smile as I listened to his strangely triumphant voice.

"It doesn't sound like exactly good news. That this level of probability is allowed—"

—Right, it also means the end of the scenarios is near.

Finally, the end of the long journey was before my eyes. Although I hadn't gathered all the Kim Dokja fragments, I now had three Kim Dokjas with me.

The Demon King of Salvation.

The Great King of Fear.

And the Prisoner of the Golden Cage.

Excluding 'Snowfield Kim Dokja', I had gathered all the 'largest Kim Dokja fragments' I could collect right now.

Was it because I thought the end was near, or was my heart softened by hearing the voice of the Demon King of Salvation for the first time in a while?

My mouth opened before I knew it.

"Do you think I can do this well?"

I regretted it a little after I spat it out. Given the Demon King of Salvation's personality, it was obvious he would scold me, saying, "The ending is right around the corner, and you're still spouting such pathetic nonsense?" But...

—So what if you're not good at it?

I was slightly flustered by the answer that followed and asked back.

"Huh?"

—Kim Dokja isn't exactly the type of guy who's good at anything.

The Demon King of Salvation paused, as if deep in thought, before continuing. Through that gap in silence, the stories of Kim Dokja's life surged up.

—He's a human whose only redeeming quality, if you can call it that, is his love of reading.

With his characteristic nonchalant sarcasm, the Demon King of Salvation described Kim Dokja.

—Is that all? He's a born slacker, and his mental strength isn't particularly strong either. On the contrary, he is a guy who despairs more deeply than anyone and gets hurt more easily. He gets sad at the slightest provocation, and then rejoices like a fool.

Thinking that perhaps this wasn't entirely a story about 'Kim Dokja', I asked.

"Was it like that for you, too?"

The landscape of the universe was reflected beyond the transparent gourd. The world where the Great Sage Heaven's Equal lived was no longer visible.

Nevertheless, somewhere in that universe, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal surely exists. Sealed beneath the massive Mount Five Elements, he must be asleep, bearing the weight of all the tragedy.

—That was true.

The Demon King of Salvation answered, looking at the same universe as I did. We were looking at the same universe, yet imagining different landscapes. I was imagining the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, and as for the Demon King of Salvation.

「[You have only seen this story up to this point.]」

He must be thinking of 'Uriel'.

"How did you overcome it?"

I wanted to know. How did the Demon King of Salvation—Kim Dokja—endure the sorrow of losing Uriel in the final scenario?

—I couldn't overcome it.

"…"

—I always lost to stories.

We watched the flowing universe, the <Star Stream>, together. The final scenario was drawing near.

—Youngest.

"Yes."

—I believe you are already a sufficient 'one Kim Dokja'.

Caught off guard by those words, I bit my lip for a moment and asked back.

"Why do you think so?"

—Because only Kim Dokja can doubt the fact that he is 'Kim Dokja'.

"…"

—Because only 'Kim Dokja' will think about what 'Kim Dokja' is. In that sense, you are already an excellent Kim Dokja.

Speaking as if continuing a calm narrative, the Demon King of Salvation continued to speak.

—There might be more painful things ahead. Perhaps terrible stories are waiting for you. But there will be joyful things too. You will laugh or cry like a fool again, and get hurt.

I saw stars twinkling in the distant universe.

—And all of that becomes a story.

Without understanding why those words were comforting, I listened to him.

—No matter what anyone says, you have a story left. It’s not a Zen riddle. Look, there is a story left even now.

Only then did I look around. The contents of the gourd came into much clearer view belatedly. The Demon King of Salvation was right.

I was the only one here, but strictly speaking, I was not alone.

[The story fragment, 'Time to Brush Teeth', begins its storytelling.]

At first, I thought it was dust. But when I looked closely...

[The story fragment, 'Memory of a Failed Omurice', begins its storytelling.]

It was someone's hair.

[The story fragment, 'Special Push-up Training', begins its storytelling.]

With my mouth agape in a daze, I gazed at the scene where golden hairs were scattering like snow.

Then, at a certain moment, a strand of hair touching my fingertips stirred up a small cloud of dust with a 'pop'. Soon after, I felt something stick firmly to my shoulder.

There stood a baby monkey.

A tiny baby monkey, reminiscent of little Kim Dokja.

"Great Sage Heaven's Equal."

As I called his name, the baby monkeys gathered around me as if in response. As story fragments gathered in one place, a warm, cozy atmosphere enveloped the area.

「And all of that becomes a story.」

The memories the Great Sage Heaven's Equal cherished were here.

The next moment, one of the baby monkeys lingering nearby lightly grasped my hand.

「[Is there the youngest in that world, too?]」

The moment I heard that familiar voice, I felt dizzy. It felt as if I had met the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's eyes. An old memory surfaced in my mind.

「[The constellation, 'Oldest Liberator', gazes upon you.]」

I was certain I had seen that message sometime before. It was on the day I had analyzed a large volume of hair on the 'Scales of Settlement'.

I hurriedly checked the name of the story fragment that had grabbed me.

[Story fragment, 'Encounter with the Wenny King', begins its storytelling.]

Only then did everything feel like it made sense.

This was the memory of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal.

On the day I felt the Great Sage's gaze through the 'Scales of Settlement', the Great Sage had indeed gone to meet the Wenny King.

「【How is it. The 'Kim Dokja' of that world.】」

The Great Sage retorted in a sharp voice toward the strangely cocky Wenny King.

「[What ultimately happens to the end of that world? What is contained within this '■■ of all stories'?]」

Unlike me, who had carefully chosen my questions, the Great Sage spat them out without hesitation.

「[You arrogant fool, surely you can see something. Or not?]」

The Wenny King smiled wryly, finding the Great Sage Heaven's Equal amusing, and opened his mouth.

「【Shining star, you cannot see the '■■ of all stories'. It is a landscape not permitted to you. Don't you already know this?】」

At the Wenny King's question, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal nodded after a brief silence.

「【Then it is time to ask the real reason you sought me out.】」

The Wenny King spread his arms wide like an actor performing an exaggerated act. His arms creaked and moved like a scale. As if trying to measure the value of the star right before his eyes.

「【I ask, Great Star. What are you curious about that you have come here, staking your entire story?】」

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal glanced at the Wenny King, then stared once again at me beyond the scales.

「['The One and Only Kim Dokja.']」

He asked in a clear and distinct voice.

「[Is that 'a story that truly exists'?]」

[CLICK TO READ CHAPTER COMMENTS]

1012 Episode 62 Snowfield Kim Dokja (2)

The Wenny King had no answer even after hearing the question from the Great Sage Heaven's Equal. Like a human counting the stars, he examined the story fragment floating around him for a long time before asking back.

「【Do you not already know the answer?】」

The Wenny King spoke as if amused by the fact that none other than the Great Sage Heaven's Equal had asked that question.

「【Because you, too, are a being capable of using 'clones'.】」

Even without Han Sooyoung's exclusive skill [Avatar], there were several ways to split a body in the <Star Stream>.

For example, stars that had lived for a long time could split their stories to form temporary avatar bodies, and there were also those like the Great Sage Heaven's Equal who created 'clones' by breathing stories into fragments of their avatar bodies.

「【Just because you injected a part of the story into your 'clone', can you say that you are no longer the 'Great Sage Heaven's Equal'?】」

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal shook his head. Then the Wenny King spoke.

「【Yes. Usually, people don't bother to question that. Just because they lost some story, they don't say things like 'they are no longer 100 percent'. Do you know why that is?】」

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal thought for a moment and replied.

「[Because we are always losing stories.]」

The Wenny King nodded, smiling as if satisfied with the answer.

「【You are right. Every being lives while gradually losing the stories they possess. If we assume that a state where all stories are intact is '100 percent', then we are essentially always moving toward a state that is not '100 percent'.】」

「[…]」

「【Therefore, your question must start again from here. What exactly is the 'One and Only Kim Dokja'? If that is what '100% Kim Dokja' means, then what exactly is the definition of '100%'?】」

Which Kim Dokja can be called '100% Kim Dokja'?

「【Existences lose stories over time, but they also gain more. In particular, beings who actively live out the scenario gain more stories as time passes. In other words—】」

「[The total amount of 100% might continue to grow over time.]」

「【What point in time do you think can serve as the standard for '100%'? The point in time when he possessed the most memories? Or, the point in time when he was most loved by the stars?】」

When the Great Sage Heaven's Equal could not answer easily, the Wenny King spoke again.

「【It is the same even if you define '100%' based on a specific point in time. For instance, let us assume that Kim Dokja 'just before being split into fragments' is '100 percent'—that is, the 'complete form'.】」

The Wenny King floated a small balance scale in the air and placed a weight on one of the plates. The scale's arms slowly tilted. The Wenny King placed another weight on the opposite, tilted plate.

「【Then what about the 'Kim Dokja' from before that?】」

The scale tilted again.

「【Is the other Kim Dokja who did not reach that time 'incomplete'? Is the 'Kim Dokja' who started the scenarios not '100 percent' at that point?】」

Watching the scale swing back and forth, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal pondered deeply.

Which 'Kim Dokja' could be called '100 percent'? Even he, who had lived for a long time, could not know the answer to the question. And according to his wisdom, in such cases, the problem usually did not lie in the 'answer'.

「[Was that the wrong question?]」

The Wenny King smiled faintly. Only then did the Great Sage Heaven's Equal understand what the Wenny King was trying to convey. In the end, the Wenny King was spending a long time explaining just a single sentence to him.

「【Only those who love the 'Oldest Dream' obsess over that concept of '100 percent'. It is likely a desire to fully reclaim the starlight they once loved.】」

「[So, it means it is impossible in the end.]」

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal knew it, too. That the concept of '100 percent Kim Dokja' was nothing more than a delusion created by those who loved him too much.

Nevertheless, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal could not blame those who wandered in search of such a Kim Dokja. It was because he, too, understood their feelings.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal recalled the faces he had missed for the first time in a while. <Kim Dokja Company>, which had chosen a different ending from him.

The beings who had seen the end of the world alongside the 'Oldest Dream'.

「【It’s impossible… I never said that.】」

Perhaps it was because he had been thinking too deeply about them. For a moment, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal did not understand the words of the Wenny King.

「[What did you just say?]」

The Wenny King smirked as he watched the Great Sage Heaven's Equal’s fiery golden eyes waver.

「【Even after living for so long, your imagination is still lacking. Do you think that 'impossible stories' exist in this <Star Stream>?】」

「[Didn't you explain it that way until now?]」

「【That is what I mean if you explain it logically. But as you and I both know, this <Star Stream> is not constructed so coherently.】」

The Wenny King tapped the fragments of stories floating in the air. The true story he had just touched was a story that the Great Sage Heaven's Equal was also aware of.

「"Let's go with the third method."」

Faced with impossible scenarios, Kim Dokja had always pursued the 'third method' that no one else chose.

The stars felt jealousy, cheered, and went wild as they watched Kim Dokja survive the brink of death time and time again. Kim Dokja had always lived such an impossible story.

If this world had been that coherent, those stories could not even exist.

「【If the 'Oldest Dream' wishes to dream, that dream will surely find a way to be realized. Even if it is a 'square circle'.】」

「[What is that 'way'? How is a single 'Kim Dokja' created?]」

「【That story is already being realized. Because those who love him desire that story, the 'Oldest Dream' has also begun to dream it. All you and I can do is simply watch it.】」

Just watching.

With that expression, the Wenny King had effectively issued a sort of expulsion order. It meant that even he, who occupies the highest place in the skies of this world, and the Great Sage Heaven's Equal could only watch, so unnecessary questions should stop.

However, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal did not back down. He brought up an important question that he had kept hidden until now.

「[Does the 'Very Giant Baby' want that story too?]」

The moment I heard that question, I was startled.

A Very Giant Baby.

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal also knew of the being that Han Sooyoung had told me about once, and the one I had asked the Wenny King about.

「[I know that such a being exists behind the name of the 'Oldest Dream'.]」

Unlike me, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal did not hesitate for the slightest to ask about that being.

「[I want to know about that being. Tell me everything you know.]」

Sometime ago, during a conversation with me, the Wenny King had proposed a deal. He asked that if I ever reached the place where the 'Very Giant Baby' was, I should tell him about the scenery as well.

「【That answer cannot be found even if you count all your stories.】」

His attitude was strangely different from when he spoke with me. For a moment, I felt a sense of doubt. Perhaps the 'Wenny King' knows more about the 'very giant baby' than he told me.

「【Because what you are curious about is the cause and the 'result' of all these stories.】」

The cause and the result of all these stories.

Until now, the only being that fit such an explanation was the 'Oldest Dream'.

The Wenny King, who had been gazing into the blazing golden eyes of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, let out a light sigh and added.

「【All I can show you is the 'process'. If that is acceptable, I will show it to you.】」

「[What is the price?]」

「【Give me the story you wish to give.】」

The Great Sage Heaven's Equal pondered for a moment, then took out a fragment of a story from his bosom. It was a fragment so broken that even its name was hazy. Nevertheless, the fragment of the story in the hands of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal was chattering about something.

「"■■, we can ■■ the world."」

The Wenny King looked closely at the story and smiled.

「【It is an interesting story. Let's make a deal.】」

I recalled seeing that story at the 'Wenny King's' hideout. Was that why the Wenny King possessed it?

「【Here, this is—】」

The Wenny King took the story from the Great Sage Heaven's Equal and gave him the story he wanted.

「【It is the process of heading toward the '■■■'s Deep Sea.】」

Strangely enough, at that moment, the Wenny King's words reached my ears clearly, without any filtering.

A moment later, the story emitting a white light on the Wenny King's palm began to tell its story.

It was...

「Thus, the 'Deceiver of the Stars' finally reached the reward of the scenarios.」

A story about Kim Dokja, whom I, too, know well.

「"Your name is Kim Dokja."」

---

Few people remember the moment they were born.

This is because the 'first memory' is always the 'memory that is erased first'.

A memory from a time when one cannot even perceive what 'memory' is. A scene that melts away first, like the first snowflakes to fall.

「He remembered the moment he was born.」

The first thing he saw after being born was a clear white sky.

A snowfield where cold snowflakes were scattering.

With that snowfield as a backdrop, someone was looking at him.

"Your name is Kim Dokja."

It was a blonde man with narrowed eyes.

「In the pure white snowfield, he met his father.」

The memory of that time was both vivid and hazy. Perhaps it was because of the endlessly pouring snow.

A snowstorm falling endlessly. As he recalled that blizzard, Kim Dokja thought of the massive manuscript paper.

"What is that?"

"It is a story."

The act of writing down unknown words one by one on a huge, desolate piece of manuscript paper.

His childhood was a process of realizing that every story scattered across the world had its own unique shape.

"What is a story?"

"Shall I call it a story?"

In that world, there were many stories to teach him. Kim Dokja could read those stories simply by opening his eyes wide.

「"Save me! Aaaargh!"」

Kim Dokja ran through the falling story fragments with his arms outstretched and his mouth agape.

「"Kill them all. Do not spare a single one. I will swear by my modifier and annihilate their nebula."」

Some stories were eerie.

「"No matter what happens, I will not let my incarnation die."」

Some stories were solemn.

「"Why, why on earth must we go through such things? Oh God."」

And most stories were unkind to the young boy. Whenever he encountered something he didn't know, Kim Dokja asked his father. Fortunately, his father was patient and always answered his questions kindly.

"That character needs a reason not to blame his own weakness. He wants to believe that the reason for his failure lies not with him. That is why he seeks God."

"So, in the end, it all happened because that person was weak?"

"Some stories are created that way."

After listening to a long explanation, Kim Dokja felt hungry.

Yawning lightly, Kim Dokja stared blankly at the pile of stories lying on the floor and asked.

"Can I eat this?"

At that, his father nodded and said as if he found it quite amusing.

"If you want, go ahead and try it."

"You eat some, too."

"It’s not really my taste, though..."

The father and son sat side by side, scooping up snow. The taste of story fragments crumbling in their teeth. Some stories were sweet, others were sad. Without understanding why they were sweet or sad, Kim Dokja said,

"Is it delicious?"

"I don't know."

His father smiled faintly, as if he enjoyed watching Kim Dokja scoop up snow.

Kim Dokja looked at his father for a moment and then asked,

"What is your name, Father?"

"It is Cheon Inho."

"Cheon-ssi?"

"Yes."

"I'm a Kim-ssi, you know."

"That's right."

Watching his father answer without much thought, Kim Dokja tilted his head.

"That's strange."

At Kim Dokja's question, his father paused for a moment and asked,

"Did you realize that it is strange?"

Kim Dokja looked up at his father with a slightly sulky gaze and asked,

"Why did you name me Kim Dokja?"

Kim Dokja knew that his father was a clever man. Although he always viewed the world through squinting eyes, through that narrow gap, he understood the world more accurately than anyone else.

That is why Father never hesitated when answering questions.

"Hmm."

For the first time, Father, who had always been like that, was engrossed in his answer. His expression was as if he were contemplating whether or not he should tell him that answer.

Just as Kim Dokja had eaten another handful of story fragment, Father opened his mouth in a low voice.

"That is the protagonist's name."

"What is a protagonist?"

Father swept the story fragment scattered on the floor with his large hand. As the fragments, which had been continuing their stories here and there, crumbled under his touch, a clean blank space soon stood out.

Father took his hand and began to write a name on the blank space.

「Kim」

Watching the name being written one character at a time, Kim Dokja felt a little scared. Father held his small hand and continued to write the name.

「Dok」

With each character written, the sound of the swept-away fragments wailing could be heard. Kim Dokja instinctively tried to pull his hand away. But Father pulled his hand with even greater force and completed the name.

「ja」

The name was finally complete.

He looked at the name with his father. Strangely, the cries of the stories, which had been so loud until the end of the war, could no longer be heard.

"He is the only being worthy of being recorded in this world."

1013 Episode 62 Snowfield Kim Dokja (3)

---

On the terrifyingly silent snowfield, Kim Dokja read the name over and over again.

Kim Dokja. As he muttered the name unconsciously, his father nodded.

"That is your name."

My name. Kim Dokja repeated the lingering resonance contained within that name time and time again. Then, the name, which had felt unfamiliar at first, gradually began to feel like his own.

Kim Dokja. That is his name.

"But isn't it possible to be recorded even if you aren't the protagonist?"

Kim Dokja said, looking up at the snow scattering in the air. A blizzard of fragments of snow stories raging in real time.

Some records were short, and some were long. Yet, they were all recorded there. Someone's misfortune, someone's sorrow, their joys and sorrows—they were all written evenly, without any bias.

Some stories were interesting, and others were boring, but nevertheless, the stories were fair to everyone.

That was the case until he heard his father's story.

"It is different."

Snow piled up again upon Kim Dokja's name. Watching the snow thickly cover the place, obscuring even the fact that a name existed there, his father rose from his seat.

"All these stories ultimately contribute to a single story."

"All these stories?"

"Yes."

It was unbelievable.

"Someone's sorrow, joy, passion, and hardship. Even life and death. They all exist to complete a single, perfect story."

"Is that the 'protagonist's' story?"

"Yes."

All this snow is falling for just one person.

"That is."

As he slowly closed his eyes, the falling snowflakes touched Kim Dokja's cheek.

"It is sweet."

The snowflakes were speaking. The protagonist's name is in all those stories. Every story exists to complete the protagonist's story.

To Kim Dokja, those words sounded as follows.

「The protagonist is not lonely.」

In the midst of that comforting realization, Kim Dokja suddenly opened his eyes. His father was looking somewhere with his back turned.

What could he be looking at? His father's back looked even smaller than usual. As he reached out and touched his back, a story that had flowed down from it landed on his fingertips. Kim Dokja read the story.

「There was a man there.」

The figure in the story was not his father. Black hair. A man with a jet-black coat fluttering in the wind was there. A man who surveyed the world with his characteristically piercing gaze.

Kim Dokja stared blankly at his story and spoke.

"This person is..."

Father, noticing what story Kim Dokja was looking at, suddenly turned around. Then, snatching the story from Kim Dokja's hand, he said.

"It is the protagonist."

"There is another protagonist?"

Father paused for a moment, then nodded.

"Because that is a different 'story'."

The protagonist of another story.

Kim Dokja slowly blinked his eyes and recalled that man.

"He looked lonely."

His father gave no answer to Kim Dokja's words.

---

Eating the snow falling from the sky, Kim Dokja eventually came to be able to distinguish its taste. Which was sweet and which was bitter.

He also learned what was polite and which was rude (it was around this time that Kim Dokja began to use honorifics).

He also learned about good and evil and morality. These were all things taught by stories.

He grew up reading countless stories over and over again. In the process, he even developed a favorite.

「"Dokja-ssi."」

Among them, the story Kim Dokja liked the most was—as expected, the story about him.

「"Dokja-ssi! No! Dokja-ssi!"」

Watching the figure in the story call out to Kim Dokja, he felt an inexplicable emotion.

The story was damaged in many places, so the names of those calling him could not be read clearly. Nevertheless, they were clearly calling him and saying the exact same words.

「"No! Kim Dokja!"」

"Why do these people always say it can't be done?"

"Because you have committed many acts you shouldn't have."

It felt somewhat infuriating. It was like being belatedly asked for a bill for a mistake long forgotten.

「"Dokja-ssi!"」

Kim Dokja read the passage where people called his name over and over again. Then he asked.

"But wasn't it all done for those people?"

"Do you think so?"

"In the end, it seems like I saved their lives."

In the story, Kim Dokja risked his own life time and time again to save the lives of others, not his own.

Nodding his head in agreement, his father said,

"From that perspective, you are right."

"Isn't that so?"

"Therefore, they must keep their heads down and thank you until they die."

"But why do these people seem to resent me?"

"Is it written that way?"

"No."

There was no description in any record that the group resented Kim Dokja. Nevertheless Kim Dokja felt that way. In the story, they were clearly resentful of him.

"That is a feeling that is very difficult for me to explain."

"Explain it to me. Father, you know everything."

"It’s not that I know everything. Especially when it comes to them."

<Kim Dokja Company>, that is what the story called them.

After thinking for a moment, Kim Dokja spoke again.

"These people, their group name is <Kim Dokja Company>, so why do they treat Kim Dokja so roughly?"

"…"

"It feels unfair. They only think about mistreating and restricting the person who went to such lengths to save them whenever they get the chance."

Father asked, admiring the idea as if it were incredibly fresh.

"Do you think that is unfair?"

"Yes. Because I am Kim Dokja, too. Kim Dokja should be the one to get angry about Kim Dokja's affairs!"

"In my opinion, that isn't 'that' unfair."

"Why? I even risked my life?"

"You were someone who liked risking your life."

After thinking for a moment, Kim Dokja shook his head as if to say that couldn't possibly be true.

"Where would you find someone like that?"

"That is exactly the problem."

"What?"

"Life is precious to everyone. Yet you risked it recklessly."

"It's my life, so what? I risked my own life to save them, so why—"

"They."

His father's squinting eyes parted slightly. Feeling his father's emotions seeping through the gaps, Kim Dokja listened to his father's words.

"Because they loved you."

Love. Kim Dokja stared blankly down at the story he had just read. He saw the Kim Dokja within the story and <Kim Dokja Company>.

Why? After hearing that word, every story he had read felt different.

Swallowing a slight tremor, Kim Dokja asked.

"What is love?"

His father fell into thought once again. Watching his father immerse himself in thought for quite a long time, Kim Dokja thought that perhaps his father didn't know what 'love' was.

"It means I like all your stories."

I like all your stories. Even with his father's explanation, Kim Dokja could hardly grasp the meaning of those words.

"Father, do you love me too?"

"No, I am just someone who uses you."

"Use? How?"

"I hope you grow up strong enough to fulfill my dream."

"What is your dream, Father?"

"To become the protagonist."

Kim Dokja stared blankly, his mouth agape.

"Is that true?"

"Yes, it is."

"Is Father perhaps a bad person?"

"I like your honest sentiment. Please continue to be that honest."

Kim Dokja continued reading the story. The story of Kim Dokja and <Kim Dokja Company>. 『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』.

"Does father appear in this story?"

"Yes, he does."

"Where?"

His father flipped through the story fragments he had been reading and pointed to a passage.

"Here."

Kim Dokja began to read the passage he had pointed to. It was a passage he had read before. However, it was a section he hadn't examined closely because he had read through it so quickly. His father was alive within the story of that passage.

"Was this father?"

When Kim Dokja asked back in disbelief, his father replied with a sour expression.

"Yes, it is."

"Wow, he appears really pathetic."

"Saying things like that in front of the person involved is bound to hurt them."

The father in the story was a villain. Not a great villain, but just a petty one. He was the ruler of a small station, and after inciting the people there, he was killed by Kim Dokja and his group.

"He died a very cruel death."

Watching Kim Dokja read the account of the death with such interest, his father asked.

"Do you feel sorry for your father?"

"I do."

Kim Dokja pondered the meaning of those words carefully before answering.

"A little bit."

"Then please avenge me."

"How do I do that?"

"Beat the people who killed me."

"You mean Kim Dokja and Kim Dokja Company?"

His father nodded.

"Don't you hate them? It is they who brutally killed me, and it is they who made you exist here in loneliness. In the end, it is all them."

Now, Kim Dokja knew what that meant. He had heard it all from his father.

That he was a part of 'Kim Dokja'. And that, as a result of <Kim Dokja Company> trying to reclaim him, he had been shattered into pieces and fallen into this snowfield.

"They even brutally killed your only father."

"Strictly speaking, that is the father from a different timeline."

"Don't you feel sorry for the version of me from that other timeline?"

"That is because the father from that other timeline did something wrong. And—"

Kim Dokja spoke, quietly tracing the scene of himself shattering into fragments with his hand.

"If it weren't for them, I wouldn't have even been born."

"… "

"Besides, I probably wouldn't even get to meet father."

At those words, his father smiled faintly and said,

"You're definitely not cut out to be a villain."

"Were you trying to make me a villain?"

"I intended to make you the protagonist."

"How can I become the protagonist?"

At that question, his father fell into deep thought once again. This time, it was truly deep thought. Watching his father's expression, Kim Dokja realized.

「He does not know the answer.」

Perhaps it was because he was excited by the fact that he had asked a question his father didn't know for the first time. Kim Dokja let out a grunt and lay down on the floor. Feeling the cold snow gently envelop his entire body, Kim Dokja opened his mouth like a fool. A soft snowflake fell onto the tip of his tongue.

His father, who had been quietly looking down at Kim Dokja, also sat down beside him.

"Can't we just keep living like this?"

Savoring the endlessly falling snowflakes and the stories contained within them, Kim Dokja slowly blinked his eyes.

"Here, if you just open your mouth wide like this, food falls from the sky."

"That isn't meant to be eaten."

"But."

"This isn't a proper life either."

"If it isn't a proper life, does that mean we shouldn't live?"

"Such words are meaningful only when spoken by someone who knows what a proper life is."

At his father's words, Kim Dokja puffed out his cheeks and moved his limbs. As he did so, marks were left in the snow exactly in the shape of his small limbs.

"I'm really fine living here with just you and me, Father."

A long breath escaped his father's lips once again. The breath turned into small fragments of stories and scattered quietly.

"Are you glad you met me?"

"I like it."

"Even though your father is just a petty villain?"

"Not here."

"Aren't you unhappy?"

"Why would I be unhappy?"

"Because you are the son of a villain."

"It’s fine."

"You are unhappy."

"Why?"

"Because you don't realize that you are unhappy."

Kim Dokja tilted his head.

"I am not unhappy."

His father said nothing more. Perhaps because the silence felt awkward, Kim Dokja spoke.

"Tell me a little about yourself."

"What do you mean?"

"Just the story of your life."

It struck him anew that he had never once heard a proper story about his father.

"It’s a story of nothing special."

"That’s fine, though."

His father thought for a moment, then slowly began to speak.

"I lived my life with the goal of surpassing one man."

"Who is that?"

Perhaps because of the meaningful opening, Kim Dokja's heart pounded strangely. His father's lips slowly parted.

"The name of that man is."

Looking back long after, his father might have known it at that very moment. The moment he reveals that name, Kim Dokja will remember it forever.

"Yoo Joonghyuk."

And Kim Dokja, having learned that name, will one day inevitably—

"It is the Supreme King, Yoo Joonghyuk."

That he will want to go outside this 'snowfield'.

1014 Episode 62 Snowfield Kim Dokja (4)

"Yoo Joonghyuk. It's the person you showed me before, right?"

Father smiled faintly at Kim Dokja's quick-witted question.

"Did you know?"

"I had a feeling it might be him."

The man with the piercing eyes and a pitch-black coat who had appeared in Father's story sometime ago. Kim Dokja vividly remembered the man's appearance.

"Well, he is a man hard to forget once you see him."

"That was the first time you took away a story to prevent me from reading it, Father."

"Because back then you weren't used to stories yet."

Kim Dokja tilted his head for a moment and asked.

"What does that have to do with anything?"

"Because if you start reading that man's story, you'll end up reading only that one."

"Why?"

"That is just how a protagonist's story is."

The protagonist. Father had certainly called him the protagonist last time as well.

"I've seen that person in other stories, too."

"Of course. He is the protagonist."

"Then do the stories of this universe exist for the sake of that person?"

Father had clearly said so. That, ultimately, all the stories of this world exist to complete the protagonist's story.

"That is correct."

"But he looked lonely."

"He is someone who wants to be lonely."

Someone who wants to be lonely.

Kim Dokja tilted his head once again.

"Where is there such a person?"

"There are people like that."

Father's words sounded as strange as the explanation that 'there are people who like to risk their lives', but Kim Dokja made an effort not to argue back.

There are still many stories in this world that he does not understand, and perhaps Yoo Joonghyuk's story is of that kind as well.

So, instead of asking questions, Kim Dokja read Yoo Joonghyuk's story. True to his nature as a protagonist, the man appeared in every corner of the stories scattered throughout the universe. His name was even in the story he liked the most.

「"Yoo Joonghyuk!"」

In that story, his name was called as often as Kim Dokja's. A cry filled with worry and anxiety, or perhaps an unknown hope. His name was always shrouded in emotions of that color.

"Were you acquainted?"

"In a certain world, yes."

"Were you friends?"

"We were comrades who lived and died separately."

"Separately? Not together?"

A playful smile appeared on his father's face.

"That is correct."

Does that mean they weren't very close? Then again, looking at the story, he thought that might be the case. After all, in the stories he had read, Kim Dokja usually looked at Yoo Joonghyuk with a look of exasperation or called him by adding retorts like, "You bastard!"

"What was his relationship with father?"

"He had nothing to do with me."

"That may be true in the <Kim Dokja Company> story, but it's different in your story, Father."

Father's eyes widened as if he had learned something like that.

"It seems you are reading stories quite diligently."

"Because that is the only thing I have to do here."

"Yoo Joonghyuk was my rival."

Kim Dokja's eyes widened at the unexpected word that came from his father's mouth.

"A rival?"

"Yes."

"It's not just in your imagination, is it?"

"I fought life-or-death battles with him several times. We nearly killed each other, and nearly died again."

"Do you miss him?"

"…"

"It feels just like you are talking about an old friend."

Father was silent for a moment, then smiled bitterly. Kim Dokja was slightly surprised, as it was the first time he had seen his father smile like that.

Father continued.

"I killed him with my own hands."

"…"

"I saw with my own eyes the moment he breathed his last and left this world."

His father looked somewhat hollow as he told this story.

Kim Dokja hesitated for a moment before asking.

"You said your life's goal was to surpass that man, didn't you?"

"That is correct."

"Then you achieved the goal you wanted, Father."

His father did not answer with a simple 'Yes' as usual. Kim Dokja asked again.

"Weren't you happy?"

"He left me behind and moved on to the 'next story'."

A voice like an indifferent period. Kim Dokja realized, a little late, what his father meant.

It was an explanation regarding Yoo Joonghyuk's ability, [Regression].

「For Yoo Joonghyuk, death is merely the end of a short chapter.」

"In his long journey to prevent the destruction of the world, I was merely a minor villain decorating a single episode. The residue left behind in a world abandoned by the protagonist. That is me."

Kim Dokja was flustered. The stories he had read had never taught him what to say in a situation like this.

So, Kim Dokja had to think for himself. He had to do his best with his small head to ponder how to comfort the villain alienated from the protagonist's story.

"No one likes stories like that."

Born as a character in a story, destined to live a story receiving no one's love. Kim Dokja thought about that fate for a long time.

The man who survived alone to the very end in a world abandoned by the protagonist, finally arriving at this snowfield. He thought and thought about the father who found him —about the man named 'Cheon Inho'. And he reached a conclusion.

"I like it."

At Kim Dokja's words, Cheon Inho's shoulders trembled slightly.

"Wouldn't it be okay for at least one story in the world to exist where a villain who worked incredibly hard defeats the protagonist?"

"…"

"Father did his best. I know that. How much effort you put into that story, and how hard you tried to make it shine alongside the protagonist."

Cheon Inho stared blankly at his son. No constellation had ever spoken to him in that way.

"Even if it isn't the protagonist, every character is worth recording."

As young Kim Dokja spoke those words, his eyes shone like stars. Starlight illuminating the forgotten in the blank spaces of a story that no one remembers.

「Perhaps he came all the way to this snowfield to confirm the existence of this light.」

Watching his son chatter away to comfort him, Cheon Inho slowly opened his mouth.

"Let's read a particularly interesting story today."

"A particularly interesting story?"

Stories were falling from the sky. Stories so vast that it seemed impossible to finish reading them even in a lifetime. Fortunately, Cheon Inho knew a few of those stories that were quite intriguing.

"It is a story about a man who eats dirt."

---

Time in the snowfield continued to flow. A week, a month, a year, ten years. Like snow. Welcoming the falling stories and reading them, Kim Dokja lived on with Cheon Inho.

"Here, here is a true story that fell today."

"Thank you."

"Have you finished organizing them?"

"Roughly enough."

"But why did you set this one aside?"

"It's a story about a kid who eats dirt."

As time passed, Kim Dokja found more stories he wanted to read.

「"Dokja-ssi."」

Most of them were true stories about <Kim Dokja Company>. Stories about people wandering in search of him, who had disappeared from this universe.

"But I don't understand this part."

"This part."

However, most of the stories falling on the snowfields were not intact, so the two often had to put their heads together to study them.

"How about interpreting it like this?"

A faint light flowed from Cheon Inho's fingertips and mended the broken stories.

「While spending time with Kim Dokja in the snowfield, Cheon Inho acquired a new ability.」

Power to handle stories and fill in the blank spaces.

The ability to revise [Fate].

「Cheon Inho became a 'Recorder of Fear'.」

With that power, Cheon Inho joined forces with Kim Dokja to excavate the stories scattered within the ruins and began to piece them together.

"Or, this interpretation is also possible."

Watching Kim Dokja rejoice at the continuing stories, and feeling unfamiliar with himself for unconsciously smiling at him, Cheon Inho continued to gather stories again and again.

「Thus, in a place unknown to anyone, a new 『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』 was being completed.」

A single being is the totality of the records he read. Cheon Inho felt, in real time, Kim Dokja becoming Kim Dokja.

As they read the lost stories together and reread them, the number of questions Kim Dokja asked gradually decreased. Instead, the time he spent gazing somewhere with longing eyes increased. Cheon Inho felt he knew what Kim Dokja was missing, but he didn't specifically ask about it.

"So this is how it turned out."

Reading the latter part of the undone narrative, Kim Dokja sighed or his sorrows grew. In particular, there was a story he watched repeatedly. It was the scene where '49% of Kim Dokja' was being lifted.

「"If this is the story you wanted..."」

Kim Dokja, who wanted to be with <Kim Dokja Company> but ultimately could not possess that story.

"My comrades."

Now, that Kim Dokja was reminiscing about them within the restored records.

"Do they know I am here?"

"…"

"If Han Sooyoung had written this story, and if the imaginations of the fragments of Kim Dokja scattered throughout the universe had gathered to bring about the miracle of the 'Kim Dokja' they remembered returning—"

Watching the endlessly falling snow, Kim Dokja continued to ask.

"Why am I still here?"

Why could the Kim Dokja of this place not return to <Kim Dokja Company>?

Cheon Inho could not answer. It was a question he could not understand.

「Everything is already recorded, and simultaneously, it is being recorded.」

Recalling that sentence, Cheon Inho slowly opened his mouth.

"Do you want to meet <Kim Dokja Company> again?"

Kim Dokja's ethereal eyes blinked.

"If I want to meet them?"

"You just need to leave this world."

"How?"

"That is..."

Cheon Inho said, gazing at the landscape of the snowfield he had seen for so long.

"I don't know either."

A vast snowfield with no discernible entrance or exit. They had been trapped here for over a decade.

After a moment of silence, Kim Dokja asked.

"What about you, Father? Do you want to go outside?"

Cheon Inho thought. Clearly, he had something he wanted to say.

"I wanted to go outside."

He wanted to be the protagonist. He wanted to be recorded alongside Yoo Joonghyuk, in his own ending.

"Until recently, that is."

Nevertheless, while staying in this snowfield with Kim Dokja, that desire gradually faded. Perhaps it was because he had become accustomed to this life.

"Lately, I often think that I don't necessarily have to go outside."

Cheon Inho felt unfamiliar with himself for saying those words. It was because it was a statement that denied the entire history he had lived until now. Cheon Inho forced a wry smile without realizing it.

"I just mean that I am like that. You..."

Thinking he had said something unnecessary, he turned his head, but Kim Dokja's condition seemed somewhat normal. Kim Dokja wasn't listening to him. To be precise, he was in a state where he couldn't hear.

"How."

With Kim Dokja and his voice a mixture of intense emotion, Cheon Inho gazed at the story that had settled on Kim Dokja's fingertips.

"How is a story like this—how is that possible?"

Kim Dokja was reading the story. It was a story he, too, had never seen before.

"How does a 'Kim Dokja' like this exist?"

Reading the story together, Cheon Inho sighed.

「Until that story appeared, there were only two Kim Dokjas in this world.」

The Kim Dokja chosen by the group, and the Kim Dokja left behind in the snowfield.

「If I could be reborn, I hope at least I won't be Kim Dokja.」

And on that day, Snowfield Kim Dokja.

「"Lee Hakhyun, your name is Lee Hakhyun."」

He came to realize the existence of a brother who was not yet known.

---

[CLICK TO READ CHAPTER COMMENTS]

---

1015 Episode 62 Snowfield Kim Dokja (5)

Since that day, Kim Dokja read the brother's stories every day.

"What are they eating?"

Cheon Inho came looking for the brother's story fragments every day and read them with Kim Dokja.

"They are cherry tomatoes."

"But Kim Dokja hates tomatoes."

"That friend isn't Kim Dokja, is he?"

Kim Dokja seemed pleased with Cheon Inho's answer; he kept nodding and continued reading the stories.

「...And so, Lee Hakhyun thought…」

The story fragments Cheon Inho brought were mostly trivial. An everyday life without scenarios, constellations, or monsters. Within that, his brother—who was once Kim Dokja—now with a different name, lived his life steadily.

He grew up in an ordinary family, crying and laughing, supported by his affectionate parents. He celebrated his birthday with congratulations from a few friends, entered elementary school, and then entered middle school.

"He entered a writing contest."

In the world of the brothers, there was no 'Ways of Survival'. It was a world where 'Ways of Survival' was unnecessary from the start. This was because the tragedy that befell Kim Dokja had not befell him. For him, there was no reason to suddenly throw himself out the window, nor was there any reason to search for 'how to survive'.

"He failed."

"That is a pity."

His tragedy was, at best, being rejected in a writing contest.

"It's Kim Dokja. Isn't it because someone who is supposed to be read is trying to write something?"

"But he was trying."

"Wouldn't it be hard even if he tried? His name is Kim Dokja, after all."

"That's not the case anymore, is it?"

Cheon Inho spoke as he read the records unfolding before his eyes.

「...And so, Lee Hakhyun wrote ceaselessly. He believed that only the sentences he wrote would not betray him. Writing, and writing again. Writing new sentences in the place where he had erased everything he had worked so hard to write, and despairing time and time again before the completed sentences…」

"That friend is not Kim Dokja."

「…He calmly built up a single world. Even if he couldn't write a perfect piece, he wrote to write something he wouldn't be ashamed of. He poured all my strength into crafting one sentence, then the next. How many times did he write again like that?」

"You know it, don't you?"

Kim Dokja read his brother's writing blankly. Honestly, his brother didn't have a great talent for writing. But he didn't give up. Just as Kim Dokja didn't give up on Ways of Survival, he, too, never let go of the keyboard. He read books ceaselessly, conceived stories, and typed again.

「"Wow, is it true? You won?"」

Some effort overcomes even fate.

The brother who became a writer through his own efforts.

Watching his brother break free from the shackles of 'Kim Dokja' and begin living his life, Kim Dokja fell into deep contemplation.

"He really keeps writing."

Just like following the serialization of 'Ways of Survival', Kim Dokja followed his brother's story.

"He doesn't give up."

He didn't seem to find the story of the brother amusing, either.

"They say he won another award. Has he really gotten better at writing? Or was he just lucky?"

At times, he seemed jealous.

"Fortunately, my brother has good parents."

"Are you envious?"

Kim Dokja stared blankly at the record describing the brother's parents.

"Rather than that... looking at these people reminds me of something."

"What comes to mind?"

"A very deep and warm spring night..."

Cheon Inho reread the passage Kim Dokja had pointed to. However, no matter how carefully he read it, he could not see a sentence that reminded him of Kim Dokja's description.

"This person named Ji Eunyu here—no matter how I look at it, doesn't it seem like she's interested in my brother? Look, she keeps making jokes."

"Hmm, isn't that mockery, not a joke?"

"Father, you've never been in a relationship, have you?"

Cheon Inho looked at Kim Dokja for a moment and then asked.

"Kim Dokja, why are you so obsessed with his story?"

Kim Dokja did not answer. Like someone who believes the answer lies on pages yet to be read, he simply followed his brother's story in silence.

And so, for a day, two days, three days, a week, Kim Dokja read the story over and over again.

"This friend is Kim Dokja."

Then one day, Kim Dokja said just that.

"He is a Kim Dokja just like me. A Kim Dokja who loves books, admires the protagonist, and is separated from the story he lived in, eventually forgotten by his comrades."

"…"

"But why?"

Kim Dokja paused for a moment and looked down at the record. The record was the story of the moment his brother was selected for the contest for the first time.

「Lee Hakhyun was happy. He was purely happy that someone had read his writing and acknowledged it.」

The fact that a complete stranger was reading his story. The fact that they were counting the time layered within those sentences.

That alone made him feel as though he had received confirmation that it was okay for him to continue writing.」

Cheon Inho also read the record along with him. Just by reading the story, the brightly smiling faces of his brother seemed to come vividly to mind.

"Why don't they look unhappy?"

The moment he heard those words, Cheon Inho felt a heavy weight sink somewhere in his heart. He hesitated for a moment before speaking.

"What do you mean?"

Cheon Inho, having stopped speaking there, suddenly realized a certain fact.

「Kim Dokja once said. That he was not unhappy. That he was fine living in this snowfield forever.」

Cheon Inho looked into Kim Dokja's face. Kim Dokja, who had grown much taller than before as much time had passed as the story had accumulated. Kim Dokja, whose appearance as the boy he knew had vanished, now possessing the same face as the Kim Dokja in the story.

Looking into the emotion in Kim Dokja's eyes, Cheon Inho spoke.

"Kim Dokja, have you perhaps become unhappy?"

Cheon Inho spoke again toward Kim Dokja, who remained silent.

"Just because you saw his story doesn't mean there is any reason for you to be unhappy. He and you are different."

"He is my only brother. Kim Dokja, who, like me, fell away from that story."

Cheon Inho thought for a moment, then asked.

"Did he become unhappy because he didn't share your misfortune?"

"..."

"Some misfortunes are meaningful precisely because they can be enjoyed alone. Isn't that proof that you are special?"

"No, that guy is Kim Dokja, too. I can tell."

His brother, who should have been sharing the only misfortune with him, was smiling, unaware that he was Kim Dokja. As if his past life was unnecessary for his happiness.

"Father once said something like that. That all the stories of this world function for the sake of the protagonist."

"Does he look like the protagonist?"

"..."

"Because he looks happy?"

Kim Dokja slowly lowered his head. As he bowed his head, Kim Dokja's shoulders trembled slightly. Without realizing it, Cheon Inho reached out and placed his hand on his shoulder.

"You are the protagonist. I will make that happen."

Although he was unaccustomed to such comfort, Cheon Inho mustered the courage to say it. However, the moment he finished speaking, Cheon Inho felt a strange sensation. A sensation possessed only by those who had lived as villains. There was a peculiar chill rising from beneath his feet.

And then Cheon Inho realized. Kim Dokja was not crying.

"I had a thought."

Kim Dokja, with his head bowed, was holding back a laugh.

"Could the happiness my brother is enjoying right now be 'fake'?"

Cheon Inho could not understand the words that burst from his mouth.

"I like his story. I think it is cool. My brother, who was born as a different being, not 'Kim Dokja', just as he wished, and came to live his own life. I admire my brother. But __"

Cheon Inho unconsciously removed his hand from Kim Dokja's shoulder.

"He doesn't even know what he was."

Kim Dokja turned to look at Cheon Inho. Watching the hand hover awkwardly in the air, Kim Dokja continued speaking with a smile.

"My brother had no choice. Just as he had no choice when father was designated as the villain. He was suddenly born as a being who was not Kim Dokja, and he is merely living a life unrelated to his true nature. Therefore—"

A tsutsu sound of sparks flew from somewhere. It was a sound he thought he might never hear again.

"He must have a choice, too."

Cheon Inho realized he was trembling. It was not because he was afraid or shocked by something. It was simply his senses warning him.

「A story is about to begin.」

It was a story that might not have begun if he hadn't held the pen.

「Perhaps it was a story that should never have been written.」

Some stories allow one to predict the ending from the very first sentence.

Nevertheless, the instinct of a recorder was speaking to him.

「Write the story he wants.」

It was giving him a command.

"Father."

When Cheon Inho came to his senses, he found himself kneeling before he knew it. When he lifted his head, the being who had once been his son was looking down at him.

"Gather my fragments."

The moment he felt the weight of those words, Cheon Inho realized where the trembling —this sense of awe—originated.

「A very old dream.」

He was now facing a part of the greatest being in this universe.

"No..."

With his eyes reddened, Cheon Inho shook his head very slowly and desperately.

Shaking off the sense of probability that was binding his entire body, he spoke.

"No..."

Was it a sense of defiance as a villain? Or was it a desperate struggle not to lose the time he had searched for so long?

Cheon Inho looked up at his son like someone begging to withdraw an order.

Kim Dokja. The first child he had found. The boy who had grown up reading his stories, and then reading the stories he had gathered.

Cheon Inho desperately reached out his hand toward the young man who had devoured all those stories and had now become a god.

Kim Dokja grasped his hand with a benevolent smile and said,

"Go, Father. Gather the fragments."

Cheon Inho realized. This was a record he could not change. All he could do was transcribe the dream desired by the Great Being.

As the fragment of the Oldest Dream beckoned, the empty snowfield began to split open.

"So that I may become stronger. So that I may seize control of more. So that I may intervene in the conclusion of this entire universe. So that I can make the story I desire come true."

A portal appeared in the center of the swirling snowfield. The door leading outside, which had never opened despite walking and wandering for so many years, finally opened. The reason was clear.

「The <Star Stream> wants this story.」

The <Star Stream> was calling for the protagonist of the story once again. As if responding to that call, Kim Dokja spoke.

"And let's give my brother a choice. Let him choose for himself. Give him a chance to see if he can still make the same choice even after realizing the truth."

Cheon Inho wanted to ask. What was the meaning of all this? Why did they have to orchestrate such things?

"Only then can the ■ ■■■ ■■■ that this entire universe desires be born."

Perhaps due to the aftershock, Kim Dokja's words were barely audible. Yet, even while unable to hear, Cheon Inho thought.

It was impossible to realize.

Kim Dokja's brother was born in a world without scenarios. He lives in a world outside the sphere where the power of the <Star Stream> does not reach.

Even if it were the 'Oldest Dream', one could not suddenly drag such a being into the gravity of scenarios and thrust it in—Cheon Inho thought.

"Father."

However, his son had already thought of the method.

「A way to insert a being from outside the scenarios into this scenario.」

Kim Dokja's cold hand touched Cheon Inho's cheek.

"For my sake, please become the protagonist of this terrible story once again."

The moment the sweet whisper of the universe spread, Cheon Inho knew what he had to become.

「This is a story about the 'Kim Dokja' we have forgotten.」

The story began to be written amidst the pure white snowflakes.

1016 Episode 62 Snowfield Kim Dokja (6)

---

I read Snowfield’s story meticulously from beginning to end. I read some parts slowly, while others I read quickly, immersed in them without even realizing it. It was a strange feeling.

I am now re-reading the scene where he reads my story as a story myself.

Through this process of reading each other and being read again, we became Kim Dokja.

With a 'pop' sound, the clone of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, who had handed me the story fragment, turned into hair. Perhaps it had fulfilled its duty by delivering the fragment of Snowfield to me.

The 'Demon King of Salvation' muttered in my head.

—So this is how it turned out.

I checked once again to see if I had missed any scenes.

There were brief memories even after the scene where Snowfield asked Cheon Inho to collect the fragments of Kim Dokja.

「【I heard the story from the Evil Sophist. So you are that 'Kim Dokja'.】」

The scene where Snowfield Kim Dokja encounters Asmodeus and the 'Recorders of Fear'.

「【O oldest fragment of a dream. Have you come to find the 'unwritten blank space' yet?】」

Up to the scene where he first faces the 'Wenny King'.

Although I could not know exactly what they discussed, there was one certain fact.

「All those stories began to give me a 'choice'.」

The opportunity for me, who had been living a life that was not Kim Dokja, to become Kim Dokja.

Snowfield gave me that opportunity.

By drawing me into his stage and making me live in the body of Cheon Inho.

—But that wouldn't be the whole purpose.

I shared the same thoughts as the Demon King of Salvation. What I read was merely a tiny fraction of the records left by 'Snowfield'.

—If he had truly been curious whether you would choose a life that was not 'Kim Dokja' even after going through all of this, he could have used many other methods.

That's right. The events Snowfield orchestrated were too grand in scale to have occurred merely to watch my choices.

Above all, Snowfield was gathering fragments to become the 'Oldest Dream' himself.

「He has a dream he wishes to dream at the end of this entire universe.」

After reading Snowfield's story, I felt as though I vaguely understood what it was. However, that sensation melted away as quickly as a snowflake settling on my shoulder. Instead, what remained in my hand were the seven blank spaces left by Snowfield.

「Only then can the ■ ■■■ ■■■ that this entire universe desires be born.」

"What is this?"

When I asked, the Demon King of Salvation replied.

—Obvious.

The Demon King of Salvation, a master of filtering analysis, deciphered the blank spaces very simply.

—The one and only Kim Dokja. There is nothing else.

It was an answer anyone would have to agree with. It was certain both circumstantially and in context.

However, that accuracy felt strangely like a trap to me.

"The spacing is different, but there is one more that is seven letters long."

—What?

I stared intently at the filtered blank space, then moved my hand to adjust the number of spaces.

■■ ■■■ ■■.

Just like 'The One and Only Kim Dokja', seven letters.

I know a word that fits this blank space. The moment I was about to say it, the voice of the Demon King of Salvation was heard.

—Youngest.

I suddenly looked up to find other clones of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal gathered in the corner of the gourd.

U-ah.

A troop of monkeys beckoned toward me as if telling me to come over. As I approached them, I saw glittering fragments at the edge of the gourd.

The clones picked up the fragments and handed them to me, as if sharing delicious food.

"This is..."

Could it be another fragment of Snowfield Kim Dokja’s story? The fragments smelled of the sea. Some fragments were hot, as if pulled from a fire.

Rather than properly capturing a story, it was merely a fragment containing the sensation of a certain phenomenon.

I knew the owners of these story fragments.

「Fragments of myth-grade constellations.」

The unrecovered story fragments of myth-grade constellations were there.

"What became of them?"

I recalled the gods who had been imprisoned in the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's prison.

Poseidon, who reminded me of a Marine Corps grandfather; his wife Demeter; Zeus, the electrician; and even Odin, who loved carving.

Even when I surveyed the universe, Mount Five Elements, where the Great Sage Heaven's Equal was imprisoned, was no longer visible. Since the owners of the stories had been cast apart along with the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, had the story fragments I had seen also been unable to escape?

—It was probably sweet.

"You mean they escaped?"

The 'Demon King of Salvation' replied to my question in a calm voice.

—They are the representatives of the massive nebulae. No matter how great the Great Sage Heaven's Equal is, he cannot stop those who sacrifice a part of their true form to escape. They must have suffered a massive blow, but more than half must have safely escaped that world.

Even though they were stories of my enemies, I felt a strange sense of relief at the fact that those stories had not vanished but had flowed away somewhere.

Buzz.

As if sensing my emotions, the fragment of Poseidon clutched in my hand also began to weep softly.

—The scenario area is drawing near.

I could feel it, too. The energy of chaos I had been sensing from afar for some time. The familiar sensation of catastrophe.

「The Great Annihilation Scenario, Ragnarok.」

A destruction far more vast than any scenario I had ever experienced awaited me.

The fragments of the mythical constellations were trembling. As if reluctant to return to where their true forms were.

The starlight of the scenario twinkling across the vast expanse of the universe. Here, the final radiance of the dying constellations shone endlessly beautifully.

—Youngest.

Kim Dokja was calling my name. The Demon King of Salvation, the Great King of Fear, the Prisoner of the Golden Headband, and my brother were calling me.

I nodded. It was time to go.

「Ragnarok.」

To the battlefield where all stars fall.

---

The first to wake up screaming was Poseidon. Amidst the furiously swirling aftershock of probability, Poseidon repeatedly vomited.

[Waaah!]

It was only after sacrificing nearly half of his true body's story that Poseidon was able to escape from the prison of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal.

Even then, had they not used the power of the 'Round Table' to roll the dice together, they would have all been crushed together by the summoned Mount Five Elements.

「Due to this incident, a number of myth-grade constellations have lost the right to use the 'dice'.」

Thanks to this, the Round Table will not be able to wield its absolute power as before for the time being. It was all caused by a single myth-grade monkey.

Looking around, he saw gods who, just like him, were repeatedly gagging while leaning on the Round Table.

[Aaaargh!]

[Waaah!]

They were all the constellations who had crossed the 'Missing Thicket' with him.

Poseidon frowned as he watched these dignified myth-grade constellations repeatedly vomiting in a wretched state.

[Has everyone returned? I don't see Zeus.]

[Zeus did not descend with us from the beginning.]

The one who spoke those words was Odin, the 'One-Eyed Father', the only one among the powerful gods who maintained his dignity. Although his complexion had turned somewhat pale, he still glared at the Round Table while maintaining his composure.

Upon closer inspection, Odin's hands looked strangely uneasy. His hands, which had been fumbling emptily in the air as if needing something to touch, finally settled only after grasping a small object on the table.

[Strange story fragments have mixed in with us.]

At Odin's words, Poseidon also examined his own story.

Come to think of it, there was something like foreign matter mixed within the story that constituted him.

[Did impurities get mixed in during the escape?]

Poseidon ran his tongue over his cheeks and the roof of his mouth, like someone searching for foreign objects in their mouth. Was it just his imagination? Strangely enough, he suddenly felt the urge to play a recorder.

Thump.

It was then that the Round Table shook slightly. The vibration, initially faint, gradually grew stronger until it began to shake the entire table. Although it was merely the table shaking, the expressions on the faces of the mythical constellations were ominous.

This was because this 'Round Table' was the <Star Stream> itself.

The shaking of the Round Table meant that an event massive enough to threaten the destruction of the entire <Star Stream> had occurred.

And at this point, there was only one such event.

['Ragnarok' has begun.]

Following this, artifacts symbolizing constellations or incarnations appeared on the Round Table.

The first to catch the eye was an artifact bearing a sky-blue flag.

['Throne of Lightning', Zeus.]

Having already descended upon the battlefield, he was moving somewhere.

That was not all. Flags appearing one after another on the Round Table were converging in one spot.

[The final war is about to begin.]

The mythical constellations, their expressions hardening, turned in unison toward one spot.

There stood the head of the noble King, his white flag fluttering.

「The one who will decide the course of this 'battlefield'.」

Odin opened his mouth.

[Finally, the time has come for the 'Oldest Dream' to awaken.]

---

In the pitch-black darkness, Killer King looked up at the night sky shining through the gaps in his tent. Shooting stars were falling from the sky.

Killer King thought about the dying constellations. Stars that coveted human stories, unable to bear their inflated desires, and eventually fell from the sky.

Perhaps it is only natural for humans to gaze upon the tragedy in the heavens and find it beautiful.

"Kim Dokja."

Killer King called out the name of one of those stars. But the owner of the name gave no answer. This was because he had fallen from the sky long ago and was on the ground.

「Kim Dokja lay asleep on the barracks bed.」

Killer King rose from his seat and checked Kim Dokja's breathing.

"I don't know what kind of dream you are having, but you must return now."

His breathing was normal, but Kim Dokja still showed no signs of waking up. Killer King looked down at him and muttered.

"Or perhaps this world right now is the dream you are having."

Looking at the face of the deeply sleeping Kim Dokja, Killer King recalled the moment he first met him.

「"I am Kim Dokja."」

A man with the same appearance as Kim Dokja. An incarnation who uses the same skills as Kim Dokja and tackles the scenarios in the same extraordinary way.

A perfect Kim Dokja, undeniably 'Kim Dokja' to anyone.

「"From now on, I will lead the scenarios."」

Nevertheless, every time he called him 'Kim Dokja', Killer King felt an inexplicable sense of guilt. This was because, inside him, 'Kim Dokja' took on the form of someone else.

「In his mind, Kim Dokja had the appearance of Cheon Inho.」

A person who was a bit clumsy compared to the Kim Dokja he knew, easily flustered, and sometimes committed foolish acts.

Nevertheless, the person for whom the name 'Kim Dokja' suited him better than anyone else.

"Kim Dokja."

Without fully knowing who he was calling, Killer King called out that name once again. Then, a memory flashed through his mind like a hallucination.

「"If it makes you uncomfortable, you don't have to call me Kim Dokja."」

The Kim Dokja standing before him had once said that to Killer King, who found it difficult to call him Kim Dokja.

「"Are you still okay with that?"」

When Killer King hesitated and asked back, Kim Dokja replied.

「"I am fine."」

「"You don't look fine."」

「"If I say I am not fine."」

After a moment of silence, Kim Dokja added with a peculiar expression.

「"Is there anything you can do for me?"」

Killer King could not fathom what state of mind Kim Dokja was in as he said those words.

The Kim Dokja he knew always had other colleagues by his side. Han Sooyoung, Yoo Sangah, Jung Heewon, Lee Hyunsung, Lee Jihye, Kim Namwoon, Shin Yoosung, Lee Gilyoung, and <Kim Dokja Company> were there. And Yoo Joonghyuk was there.

But who remains by Kim Dokja's side now?

「"I."」

"Oppa."

Killer King snapped out of his thoughts at his younger sibling's call. Cha Yerin was resting her hand on his shoulder.

After checking on the sleeping Kim Dokja, Cha Yerin let out a light sigh and immediately stated her purpose.

"There's a problem."

He didn't need to ask what the problem his sibling was talking about to be. Killer King had sensed it, too. He knew that an ominous energy had been gathering outside the barracks for some time.

Some energy was familiar, others unfamiliar. However, the momentum emanating from them was all similar.

"They've come."

"Yes."

Killer King gazed briefly at Kim Dokja, who remained asleep. Then, his question came to mind once again.

「"If I say I am not okay, is there anything you can do for me?"」

Perhaps it was time to answer that question now.

1017 Episode 62 Snowfield Kim Dokja (7)

---

The X-Class Ferrari, speeding down the unpaved road, rattled slightly. Ji Eunyu, sitting in the passenger seat, was looking out the window. Outside, black rain was falling steadily.

"It's raining heavily."

Fragments of stories were clinging to the black rain. As she placed her hand against the windowpane, the story fragments, screaming as if they had been waiting for this moment, flowed right down.

As Ji Eunyu took a deep breath and removed her hand from the window, Anna Croft, who was holding the steering wheel, asked.

"Are you alright?"

Ji Eunyu nodded and replied.

"I'm alright."

How could she be alright? The world was ending. Lava erupted from the cracked ground and swallowed the living, and stars in the sky fell from the sky at thunder that struck from somewhere.

「This black rain was the scream of the stars that had been alive just moments before.」

It was a situation where no one could say they were okay. Yet, the reason she could say she was fine was perhaps due to the power of the skill she possessed.

[Exclusive Skill, 'Abnormal Adaptability Lv.???', is activated!]

An exclusive skill that Kim Namwoon, one of the characters, also possessed.

Thanks to this skill, Ji Eunyu passed the first scenario and was able to calmly utilize the knowledge of this world she knew.

「"I guess I can't point out the lack of probability to author-nim anymore."」

On the first day that the implausible event of a novel becoming reality occurred, she thought of the person who wrote this story.

Whether it was a misfortune or a blessing, she had once asked her assigned author the following question.

「"If you were transmigrated in a novel, what would you do first?"」

Perhaps because it was a question that the extremely realistic Ji Eunyu would never ask, her author pondered for a long time before answering as follows.

「"You have to choose a sponsor, right?"」

「"Kim Dokja didn't choose."」

「"Are you Kim Dokja?"」

「"Well, then... who are you going to choose?"」

Perhaps it was because she pointed out the lack of probability every single day. As expected, her editor pondered the answer for quite a while before saying the following:

「"I will choose a constellation that does not appear in the original work."」

「"What? That carries a high risk, doesn't it?"」

「"It's just as dangerous no matter who you choose. And who knows? An option that no one else chose could win the lottery."」

Normally, she would have shouted, "Not that ridiculous nonsense again!" but this time, she faithfully followed his advice. It was a matter of survival.

[The constellation, 'Lotus Blooming Under the Moonlight', looks upon you with concern.]

And so, her patron star became 'Moonlight Empress Yoo Sangah', a member of <Kim Dokja Company>. Had the editor been by his side, he likely would have shouted this with his characteristic cheesy gestures:

「"See! Congratulations on winning the lottery."」

Even after that, she recalled his advice every time she made a choice. Whether clearing a scenario, obtaining a reward, or going through a growth event.

「"No matter how steadily you grow, unless you are the protagonist, there is a growth limit. How are you going to solve that?"」

「"I have to leech off the protagonist."」

「"What if that isn't possible?"」

「"Then... There must be only one way."」

Ji Eunyu often wondered. If they met again, would he give the same answer? Even in this world where the novel had truly become reality, would he give the same advice as he did back then?

「"The Covenant of the Other World."」

In the story, Kim Dokja warns about the 'Covenant of the Other World' several times. However, both Kim Dokja and Han Sooyoung made that covenant. And they survived.

Although both of them pay a terrible price because of it, Ji Eunyu nevertheless considered it an adventure worth attempting.

「【You who do not yet know what your ■■ is, fine. I will exchange the knowledge you possess for the power of 'Records'.】」

She made the 'Covenant of the Other World' with the Wenny clan.

【Truly strange. You already possess the 'Talent of Recording'. A recorder specialized in 'Editing'…】

She obtained the power of a 'Recorder of Fear'. Having become able to revise [Fate], she also acquired the qualification to trade with the Nebulae. There were crises several times along the way, but whenever a crisis arose, she endured by thinking of the person who wrote this story. What would he have done? What development would he have written next? What choice would he have made?

「For Ji Eunyu, living in this world was also about understanding a person.」

Some memories grow while being ruminated, and some bonds deepen when apart.

While living in the world he recorded and struggling to survive, she dreamt a lot about her assigned writer.

「"If there is just one thing I regret..."」

Immediately after finishing the main story, her writer said that.

「"As expected, the ending..."」

「"If you were to write it again, would you want a different ending?"」

「"If that were possible..."」

After pondering for a long time again, her writer finally gave a wry smile and said.

「"No. This ending is the best, after all."」

What other ending had her author dreamed of? Ji Eunyu had come this far thinking about it.

"Cloud Mountain."

Was she lost in thought too deeply? Ji Eunyu realized a little late that Anna Croft was calling her.

"Yes."

When she answered, Anna said.

"I have heard a lot about you."

"From whom?"

"The stars."

Anna Croft's eyes emitted a brilliant red light.

"I heard that only those who have seen the end of a world, or at least those who have achieved equivalent feats, qualify as 'Recorders of Fear'. But I hear you have already earned the title of 'Recorder'."

"…"

"I heard that you were the one who gathered the incarnations for this 'Ragnarok'."

Instead of answering, Ji Eunyu surveyed the vehicles behind her in the side mirror. Hundreds of vehicles were following them from behind. They were forces of incarnations from various nations.

The Korean forces that followed Cheon Inho. And even the overseas incarnations who had received help from him at least once.

"I never thought a single incarnation could accomplish this. You are truly amazing."

"No, not at all. You're the amazing one."

Ji Eunyu knew how Anna Croft had made it this far.

"You're the only one who survived after fighting so many preliminary battles for 'Ragnarok'."

"If he hadn't helped me, I would already be dead."

Ji Eunyu also knew who 'he' Anna Croft was referring to.

After a moment of hesitation, Anna Croft spoke again.

"Kim Dokja has spoken about you."

"What did he say?"

"He told me to find you first, no matter what, once the scenario begins."

Ji Eunyu nodded, saying 'Ah', then urgently asked back.

"Is that all?"

Perhaps noticing the strangely disappointed look on Ji Eunyu's face, Anna Croft quickly added.

"He also said you are the person he trusts the most."

"...You haven't heard from him yet?"

"Yes."

The two were silent for a moment. Although no words were exchanged, they knew that at that moment, they shared the same thought.

"It will be alright. Because he is a strong person."

"You trust him."

"If I didn't trust him, I wouldn't have been able to come this far. It is the same for you."

Anna Croft nodded. She took two torn tickets from her bosom. They were scalped tickets Kim Dokja had given her. Because of these tickets, she was able to come as part of the 'Army of Calamity' and meet Ji Eunyu, who had chosen the same faction.

"How is [Future Sight]? Do you see anything?"

"I see nothing."

The amount of black rain falling through the car window had increased compared to before. It must mean that many stars are falling from the sky.

Anna Croft asked again.

"Are you really going to push ahead like this? Wouldn't it be better to wait for Kim Dokja or Yoo Joonghyuk to arrive?"

Even if it was unavoidable that Kim Dokja was out of contact, it was worth waiting for Yoo Joonghyuk, who had stepped away for a moment. However, Ji Eunyu shook her head.

"It is right for us to move immediately, even if it is just us. The mythical constellations of the Round Table have vanished. An opportunity like this probably won't come again."

For reasons unknown, the 'Round Table' of the constellations had lost its power. This caused a massive power vacuum in 'Ragnarok', bringing the battlefield into a temporary lull.

Now was the only time to change the fate of this world.

"You have arrived."

With a light pause, Ferrargini came to a halt. Ji Eunyu and Anna Croft instructed the party behind them to wait briefly before walking forward. Anna Croft muttered softly,

"Up close, their power is immense."

Even within the same 'Army of Calamity,' there are differences in strength between factions.

The place they had just arrived at was one of the largest groups within the Calamity faction of this 'Ragnarok'. The Calamity side refers to this faction as follows:

「Snow White.」

The presence of terrifying Outer Gods was felt from within the Nest of Calamity, which seemed to be settled in a pure white ash.

However, they were all deeply asleep. As if waiting for their master, or as if they knew it was not yet time to wake up.

Ji Eunyu and Anna Croft waited for a while at the back door of the camp. Anna Croft asked.

"Will he really help?"

"He will help."

"But I heard he has been with this faction for a long time."

"Since he has been with us for so long, he has no choice but to help. Because he was the one who wanted to become 'Kim Dokja' more than any of us."

Not long after, the back door of the camp opened. The man who appeared was someone Ji Eunyu also knew well.

"Ye Hyunwoo-ssi."

The man was Ye Hyunwoo. Now a young man after eight years, Ye Hyunwoo greeted the two with a somewhat tired expression.

"So you finally came."

Ji Eunyu nodded.

"Because the promised time has come."

Ji Eunyu, having pulled the cape she had prepared in advance over her head, asked.

"Has Snow White woken up?"

The Snow White. A being known among the Recorders of Fear as 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

Ye Hyunwoo bit his lip softly at that nickname and replied.

"He is still asleep. But he will wake up soon."

"Please guide us."

"Are you two going alone?"

"If he hasn't woken up yet, there is no point in causing a commotion."

Ye Hyunwoo let out a light sigh and began walking ahead. As if orders had been given in advance, he headed toward the core of the camp.

Meanwhile, no one stopped them.

Ye Hyunwoo glanced at Ji Eunyu's equipment and asked.

"Do you have a plan in mind? Even if he is asleep, using your power incorrectly on him could backfire."

"If he really is asleep, there is a way."

Ji Eunyu took an apple out of her bosom. Ye Hyunwoo's eyes wavered greatly upon seeing the apple. It was because he recognized what kind of object it was.

「The Witch's Apple.」

"If he really is 'Snow White', it won't be easy to escape the 'Stage-ization' effect of this apple."

Ye Hyunwoo stared at the apple for a moment then asked.

"Do you really have to do this?"

"Yes."

"He is also a part of the 'Kim Dokja' we know. Isn't there a way to try persuading him one last time?"

Instead of answering, Ji Eunyu stared at Ye Hyunwoo for a moment. Then, she replied in a calm and clear tone.

"You should know better than I do what kind of 'Kim Dokja' he is."

"…"

"He is the one who tore apart other Kim Dokjas with his own hands. Because of him, all this tragedy unfolded. If he had been someone who could be persuaded, the other Kim Dokjas wouldn't have ended up like that."

Ye Hyunwoo listened to her story silently. It was a story both of them knew by now. How this world was created, and why this tragedy began.

"You know what will become of this world if we let such a Kim Dokja become 'the one and only Kim Dokja'."

Ye Hyunwoo did not deny Ji Eunyu's words. Instead, he gazed at the tent visible in the distance. A tent where a pale flag waved. It was the place where their goal lay dormant.

Ye Hyunwoo, who had been walking ahead, stopped abruptly and spoke.

"I clearly agreed with your will, so I will not stop you. However."

He glanced at Ji Eunyu, who stood beside him, and added.

"Keep this in mind. Not every reader shares your thoughts."

The next moment, the curtain opened, and a man and a woman appeared as if they had been waiting. Ji Eunyu gazed at the man standing further forward and spoke.

"Second Apostle."

Then the Second Apostle—Killer King—nodded and replied.

"Lord of the Apostles."

It was the moment when the two people who had read this story more than anyone else in this world faced each other.

The two looked at each other for a moment, as if gauging the world they had read and lived in—or the end of the story they had read.

It was Killer King who spoke first.

"Have you come to kill Kim Dokja?"

1018 Episode 62 Snowfield Kim Dokja (8)

"Please step aside."

Killer King did not back down despite Ji Eunyu's cold voice. Instead, he stared at Ye Hyunwoo, who was standing behind Ji Eunyu observing the situation.

"Hyunwoo, so you chose that path in the end."

Ye Hyunwoo turned his head away when their eyes met, as if he could not bear to meet his gaze. Averting his eyes from Ye Hyunwoo, Killer King looked back at Ji Eunyu and spoke.

"You cannot meet Kim Dokja."

"Kim Dokja."

With Ji Eunyu's words, stories rippled from her entire body. Ye Hyunwoo and Anna Croft opened their eyes wide. It was because they sensed the caliber of the stories emanating from her.

「At least narrative-grade, and a caliber comparable to the Twelve Divine Seats of <Olympus>.」

Killer King was the only one who remained unfazed. Facing Killer King, Ji Eunyu asked.

"Do you really believe that man is 'Kim Dokja'?"

Black rain was drizzling across the night sky of Ragnarok. The stories of the fallen stars. Staring at the remnants of those stories scattered everywhere, Killer King spoke.

"Yes. That guy is Kim Dokja."

"Are you serious?"

Ji Eunyu glared at Killer King, unable to hide her disappointment.

"You know very well who the real Kim Dokja is."

"He left us a long time ago."

"What if he has returned?"

Killer King's eyes wavered.

"How can I believe that?"

"Because I saw him with my own eyes. At the 'Archives' in Bicheonhori."

The Archives in Bicheonhori. Killer King knew about that place, too.

"You must have heard the rumors, too. That there is an incarnation who devastated the 'New Murim District' and ascended to 'Ragnarok'."

Killer King was silent for a moment. He gazed at the distant sky, appearing to be deep in thought, or perhaps searching for a star lost long ago.

"Even if he has returned, it is too late now."

"Is it because of Yerin-ssi? I heard that he saved her."

While breaking through the mid-scenarios, Cha Yerin suffered injuries severe enough to damage her spiritual body.

At the time, Killer King barely managed to obtain the 'Holy Oil Fruit' with the help of Snowfield Kim Dokja, and was able to save his younger sibling.

"That has nothing to do with it."

"Then why are you stopping me?"

Killer King continued to stare at the sky. A single star twinkled in the distance. Killer King slowly opened his mouth.

"There was a story. And there was a boy who read that story."

"…"

"Born without knowing his parents or his origins, he lived relying solely on that story."

Ji Eunyu listened to the story in silence.

"The boy tried to resemble the protagonist of the story. He memorized the lines the protagonist muttered. He imitated the expressions the protagonist frequently made. He even mimicked his mannerisms."

"…"

"'I am Yoo Joonghyuk', 'I am Yoo Joonghyuk'…"

"That story…"

"His misfortune felt exactly like mine."

Killer King stared at Ji Eunyu with piercing eyes, as if piercing right through her.

"It seemed as though he were saying so. That this misfortune was special. That it was a privilege granted only to the protagonist."

At first glance, it sounded very similar to 'Kim Dokja's' story. But it was not Kim Dokja's story.

It was Killer King's story.

"Is that pity? Do you think he is similar to you?"

To Ji Eunyu's question, the boy who had grown up reading that story and imitating the protagonist answered.

"No one becomes an orphan by their own choice. I am merely speaking as a reader."

"What are you trying to say?"

"I know that 'Kim Dokja' isn't the 'protagonist' of the story we read. However—"

Killer King paused briefly before continuing.

"It suddenly occurred to me. Does the protagonist of the story we read also consider the man inside that tent a 'fake'?"

"…"

"Does Kim Dokja really think that 'Kim Dokja' is someone who must disappear?"

As Ji Eunyu hesitated to answer, Killer King asked again.

"What is your Kim Dokja saying?"

Ji Eunyu realized that this fight was unavoidable.

This is a battle to prove each other's reading.

A duel to prove each other's 'Kim Dokja' through the stories they have lived through.

"Because as the editor of this story, I am merely trying to erase him."

Killer King nodded.

"You are prepared, aren't you? This is a 'story'."

"Outer Gods won't interfere."

The clash between the two sparked in the air. However, the Outer Gods in the area did not react.

"Because they have no reason to step forward."

Neither the sleeping Outer Gods nor those who had just woken up intervened in the clash occurring at the center of the Disaster Faction. The reason was clear.

「Now, two 'Fragments of Kim Dokja' will collide here.」

Regardless of which side won, the Outer Gods who revered the 'Oldest Dream' had no reason to intervene. If one of them were destroyed, the fragments would be theirs.

Killer King, having grasped the Outer Gods' intentions, gave a wry smile.

"At this rate, it was practically an empty house from the start."

The Outer Gods watched, and the constellations left their posts.

The only thing existing within this Disaster Faction right now was the fighting spirit of the two.

"Yerin-ah."

As Killer King opened his mouth, Cha Yerin stepped forward. Cha Yerin, meeting Ji Eunyu's gaze, bowed her head low and spoke.

"I'm sorry."

Ji Eunyu shook her head.

If Killer King had chosen to side with the other party, naturally his younger sibling would also take the same side. It was only natural.

"It's a shame. I wanted to talk more with you, Yerin-ssi."

Biting her lip, Cha Yerin quietly raised her fists. A swirling snowstorm wrapped around her two fists.

Killer King spoke.

"Step back, even now."

A faint link formed between the two siblings, and a controller appeared before Killer King's eyes.

[Incarnation, 'Lee Seyeon' activates skill 'Battle Action Mode'!]

[Battle Action Mode, the Killer King siblings' specialty.]

Seeing no sign of Ji Eunyu backing down, Killer King immediately activated the command.

"Dark Spinning Breaker."

[Advanced Command activated successfully!]

Command input without a shred of hesitation. Killer King could now activate this technique, which was previously considered a finishing move, with great ease.

[The exclusive trait of incarnation,' Lee Seyeon', is activated!]

[The attack power of the corresponding command increases!]

The ground in the vicinity shook as Cha Yerin's claws, enveloped in [White Blue Energy], struck.

Kugugugu!

It was a truly formidable level of destructive power. It was a strike that would be difficult to block even for the constellations, let alone Ji Eunyu.

However, Ji Eunyu, who emerged from the dust, was completely unharmed. Cha Yerin's claws stopped right in front of her nose as she tightly wrapped the surrounding air with [Arachne's Threads].

Looking at the dazzling [White Blue Energy] contained within her claws, Ji Eunyu spoke.

"I'm sorry, but I didn't come here alone either."

Before Cha Yerin could even answer, a sharp dagger flew toward her side. As she hurriedly swung her claws to deflect the dagger, a glowing red eye met hers.

"Prophet."

Cha Yerin's expression hardened, and her movements quickened. As a series of [Fighting Action] combos—which could be used without commands—unleashed one after another, Anna Croft groaned and stepped back.

Despite facing none other than 'Anna Croft', Cha Yerin did not back down in the slightest. No, rather, it felt as though she was overwhelming her with pure physical strength.

"I did hear that you ate the Holy Oil Fruit, but honestly, this is surprising."

Cha Yerin's story was creating a fervent flow through her Story Vein.

Stories shining brightly, like type printed on clean paper.

The power of that story was contained within the fists and kicks flying in without a moment's respite.

Before long, Anna Croft's entire body was covered in wounds, large and small. No matter how exceptional an incarnation Anna Croft was, her forte was information warfare based on [Future Sight]. She was incompatible with Cha Yerin, a born martial artist. Nevertheless, Anna Croft did not appear flustered.

"You are more than I heard from Kim Dokja."

A shaken Cha Yerin was about to say something but hurriedly bent over. A stealthy killing intent. A flash of lightning swept through the air and grazed her head.

Admiring her reflexes, the opponent muttered,

"I didn't expect you to dodge it."

Cha Yerin recognized the owner of the lightning that had cut off her hair.

"Asuka Ren."

Asuka Ren, Japan's greatest incarnation, was there. Standing side by side with Anna Croft, she asked,

"You said you couldn't dodge it if I mentioned that name? Are you sure you can see the future?"

"The future associated with him often goes awry."

"Let's strike together."

Anna Croft activated [Foresight], and Asuka Ren protected her. As the two top-tier incarnations began their pincer attack, even Cha Yerin began to find herself gradually losing the upper hand.

Under the protection of [Foresight], which reads all battle information, Asuka Ren's sword strikes squeezed into her weak point faster than she anticipated.

A burst of story erupted with a "Pishuu!"

Cha Yerin bit her lip tightly. It was a situation where she truly had to fight with the resolve to kill her opponent. However, her command input was delayed.

Kugugugu!

A dust storm rose in front of the tent where Killer King was standing.

Ji Eunyu, having dodged Killer King's fist that flew through the air, spoke.

"[Hundred Steps Divine Fist]. You have mastered Yoo Joonghyuk's technique."

"I learned it after saving a dying Shaolin monk. Is yours [Cloud Steps]?"

Instead of answering, Ji Eunyu drew her sword from her bosom. Killer King also drew his crossbow.

"[Gangmashi]."

Arrows raining down from close range flew straight toward Ji Eunyu.

The moment Ji Eunyu dodged the arrows with [Ways of the Wind], Killer King spoke as if he had been waiting for this moment.

"[Blood Explosion]."

The flying Gangmashi exploded in unison. At the same time, his Stigmata residing in the arrowheads activated.

「Commander of the Red Cosmos, Yophiel's [Unit 503].」

Small soldiers gripping sharp spears poured out from the red mist. Yophiel's Holy Soul, [Unit 503], which tears everything apart, had unleashed its power. At this close range, it was a blow that would inflict fatal wounds even on constellations of the narrative-grade.

Nevertheless, Ji Eunyu shuffled out, pushing through the red mist. Killer King, having confirmed the story protecting her body, muttered.

"[Protective Energy], [Repulsion Energy], and even [Immortal Body] on top of that… Just how many defensive techniques has you learned?"

The ability to withstand a narrative-grade Archangel's [Stigmata] solely through skill stacking.

But the real potential of Apostle Order Leader Ji Eunyu was not only this.

"I've never learned it."

"What?"

"I merely read it. Just—"

Ji Eunyu's sword moved.

"I just read it with all my might."

Watching the swordplay ripple as if alive, Killer King realized what kind of martial art it was.

[Emperor Sword Form.]

It was the martial art of the annihilated Namgung clan. However, in a sense, it was not the [Emperor Sword Form] he knew.

"How—"

Firing dozens of demon-strengthening arrows at the charging Ji Eunyu, Killer King was reading someone's shadow within her.

"…Yoo Joonghyuk."

Her sword was different from Yoo Joonghyuk's. However, the desperation embedded in its explosive power reminded him of the man he had always admired.

How could such a thing be possible?

"Surely not."

No incarnation he knew could wield a sword like that. No matter how great her talent or how much grueling effort she had put in, it was an impossible task.

And Killer King, who remembered this story better than anyone, knew of a single characteristic that could make the impossible possible.

"[A Life of Full Power]."

A characteristic that allows one to unleash all their talents instead of living a predetermined lifespan.

Ji Eunyu approached, deflecting arrows, her steps deep. Watching her footsteps, Killer King realized something.

He, too, believed he had lived the past eight years doing his best. He thought he had worked hard and struggled.

「The weight of the history lived is different.」

Even if one spends the same amount of time or reads the same stories, the sentences that accumulate within each person's inner self are different.

As if substituting all answers with her sword strikes, Ji Eunyu continued to swing her sword. Despite the barrage of arrows flying in real-time and the ensuing [Blood Explosion], the distance between the two was gradually narrowing.

When the distance finally closed to within a stone's throw, Ji Eunyu deflected the last arrow and spoke.

"There are incarnations waiting outside. They are all incarnations you know, too."

Killer King knew, too. He had felt a gaze peering in from outside the camp for quite some time.

The incarnations were watching their fight.

Among them were familiar figures. Bang Cheolsoo of the Inho faction. And even the beggars of the Beggars' Sect who had come from Seoul Station.

The incarnations who had endured the scenarios together were watching this battle.

"Your Kim Dokja has been sufficiently proven."

Watching Ji Eunyu aim her sword at him, Killer King realized. From the very beginning, she had no intention of continuing this fight to the end.

"No one will blame you."

She was trying to give him a chance.

"You know it, too. You know how this story will end if you leave Snow White alone."

"I don't know."

"No, you do know. Because you saw how Kyung Sein-ssi and Lee Dansu-ssi were abandoned."

Memories flowing like hallucinations.

Killer King shook his head once again.

"They weren't abandoned. They weeded out of their own accord."

"Do you really think so? Is the Kim Dokja you've been reading really saying that?"

The sharply honed sentence pierced Killer King's soul like the tip of a blade.

"I—"

Ji Eunyu took a breath and delivered the final blow.

"You have read this story too many times."

Killer King's crossbow shattered. Along with the crossbow that fell to the floor, Ji Eunyu spoke as if to bring the fight to an end.

"He is not Kim Dokja."

What defines Kim Dokja as Kim Dokja?

Killer King spoke with trembling lips.

"I think he is Kim Dokja."

"Who are you?"

Killer King could not answer.

Who is he? What exactly is he within this story?

Or what did he want to become?

「He was merely a reader.」

All the understanding he had built was based solely on that flimsy text.

「Despite so many 'rereads', he ultimately could not become anything to Kim Dokja.」

This relationship was nothing more than a one-sided bond forged by persistent and repeated reading.

Killer King answered, even while fully aware of this fact.

"I am his comrade."

"Does he think so too?"

"That doesn't matter..."

"He is a monster who intends to see the end of this world, even if it means destroying all his comrades. Do you really think someone like that could have comrades?"

Killer King's pupils trembled violently.

Ji Eunyu approached slowly and placed her hand on his shoulder.

"Even if it were Yoo Joonghyuk, he wouldn't stand by such a monster. You did your best. You can stop now."

Ji Eunyu walked past Killer King. Killer King could not stop her.

「It has already been decided who understands this story better.」

Now, it was just over ten steps to the tent. Ji Eunyu slowly took an apple out of her bosom. It was time to execute the plan. Snow White. It was time to send the prince inside that tent into an eternal dream.

However, her steps stopped when she was three steps away from the tent.

"Second Apostle."

As she slowly turned her back, there stood Killer King, looking blank. An ominous energy surged from Killer King's entire body as he closed his eyes.

"You..."

Ji Eunyu, her expression hardening, gripped her sword tighter. The 'Recorder's' premonition was warning her.

A strange-shaped halo rose above Killer King's head, and a dazzling archangel's aura surged from his entire body. Along with a chilling sensation, a trembling energy seized the area.

Tsutsutsutsutsu!

An event powerful enough to cause a massive aftershock on the battlefield of 'Ragnarok'. Killer King was not merely borrowing the power of 'Yophiel'. For instance, this was—a probability akin to a moving nebula.

"I have not yet given my all."

Ji Eunyu gazed at Killer King with trembling eyes.

「This is a reader who has read this world more than anyone else, and stakes everything.」

One by one, archangels began to appear behind him.

[The constellation, 'Friend of Justice and Harmony', descends into the scenario!]

Archangel Raguel.

[The constellation, 'One Who Faces God', descends into the scenario!]

Great Warrior Kamael.

[The constellation, 'Lily of Aquarius', descends into the scenario!]

Archangel Gabriel.

[The constellation, 'Commander of the Red Cosmos', descends into the scenario!]

And even Archangel Yophiel.

It was the moment the Archangels of <Eden>, feared by the Demon Kings, manifested their true forms in the scenario.

At the center of that breathtaking scene, the shadow of the Archangel with the largest wings fell.

[The constellation, 'Scribe of Heaven', descends into the scenario!]

The Scribe of Heaven—Archangel Metatron. As the pure white hand of the Archangel touched Killer King's shoulder, his shoulder blade tore open and wings sprouted.

"You're right. Right now, he has no one.

Not even that Yoo Joonghyuk."

Amidst the scattering of pitch-black feathers, Killer King slowly opened his eyes and spoke.

"Therefore, now, someone must become his Yoo Joonghyuk."

[The story, 'Gray Guardian', begins its storytelling.]

1019 Episode 62 Snowfield Kim Dokja (9)

The Guardian of Gray.

Ji Eunyu, who had become a 'Recorder of Fear', understood the entire situation the moment she saw that story name.

"Metatron! This is not a matter for you <Eden> to interfere in!"

Killer King's soul flickered as if about to fade away. Meanwhile, the records of [Fate] governing his incarnation were becoming more vivid.

「Killer King made a contract with <Eden>, staking all his stories.」

A direct contract with a giant nebula.

It was obvious what kind of fate a mere incarnation would face if they committed such an act.

[Recorder of the Otherworld.]

Metatron spoke, looking down at Ji Eunyu with a haughty gaze.

[We have merely chosen our 'Acting President'.]

Acting President. Ji Eunyu knew exactly what weight was contained in that declaration.

"Are you out of your mind? How could those so-called Archangels—"

[What use are good and evil in the face of the destruction of the worldline?]

Metatron had made his choice. He believed that now was the moment for the Nebula <Eden> to be recorded in the grand narrative of destruction. That it was time to borrow the pen known as Killer King and record their stories.

[Exclusive trait activated!]

Ji Eunyu manifested the power of a 'Recorder' She had to change [Fate] somehow. She could not let Killer King die here. No matter how much he stood on the side of 'Snowfield Kim Dokja', he was not someone who should have died in a place like this.

However, even with her power, there was no way to change [Fate].

「Once this fight ends, Killer King will surely die.」

Ji Eunyu shook her head time and time again, trying to find a different development. She was an editor. The only being who could interfere with the direction of a story when a writer wanted to write it. The person who could advise on a better development, a better plot. However, the author of this story was not here, and all she could do was helplessly read the sentences being mercilessly written down.

"Ji Eunyu."

Killer King called her name for the first time. At the same time, Ji Eunyu also recalled Killer King's name.

"Cha Seongwoo-ssi."

"Perhaps this is my last page."

Cha Seongwoo had a calm gaze, like someone who had already accepted his fate.

But meeting those eyes, Ji Eunyu felt her heart tighten.

It was only at that moment that Ji Eunyu realized what kind of being she had perceived Killer King to be.

「Both of them have read this story more diligently than anyone else.」

One as a reader, and the other as an editor.

Although they had reached this point playing different roles within this story, their faith in it was the same for both of them.

"I wanted to read this story forever."

Even after enduring such horrific events, neither of them could hate the story.

Even as they nearly died time and time again and again, and lost loved ones, they lived this story. They executed the next scenario, and the one after that.

「It was because they were curious about the end of this story they had lived through.」

It is the destiny of those who have fallen in love with a story.

Standing before the conclusion of that story, the reader who had read this world alongside her was speaking.

"'Reading together' ends here."

Now, only one of the two can read the next page.

"Come at me with all your might."

The moment the grandeur of the Great Election surged from Cha Seongwoo's entire body, Ji Eunyu turned around and summoned the incarnations.

"Bang Cheolsoo! Mujeong and her daughter!"

"I obey your command!"

As if he had been waiting, Bang Cheolsoo of Geumho Station appeared at the center of the Disaster camp with his squad members.

"Charge!"

He, who was once a gangster boss, was now fighting against the constellations with the scenarios coming to an end.

[The constellation, 'Lord of the Ruffians', cackles as it cheers on its incarnation.]

The excited 'Lord of the Ruffians', the sponsor behind Bang Cheolsoo, also sent an indirect message. It seemed to enjoy the thought of its incarnation getting beaten up once again.

However, this fight was not going to end with just getting beaten up a bit.

['Evil'.]

Yophiel, having read Bang Cheolsoo's sins with the [Eyes of Sin], reached out his hand. Immediately, an explosive red mist poured out from the Archangel's palm.

[Unit 503 ravaging the battlefield.]

The red mist swept through the camp like a swarm of bees, engulfing Bang Cheolsoo and his party.

"Aaaaaaaah!"

The horrific screams of the humans filled the battlefield. The Holy Soul of a High-Ranking Archangel. It was a power that a mere human incarnation could not withstand.

However, Yophiel's expression remained hardened. Through the red mist, the shimmering shadows of the incarnations spoke.

"...Did you think I was going to say that?"

A moment later, Bang Cheolsoo and the Inho squad members emerged from the fog. Armed from head to toe in pitch-black full plate armor, they appeared to have survived the [503 Unit] raid without sustaining any major injuries.

That couldn't be right.

They blocked the stigmata with just a single piece of full plate armor?

"Is this all? You damned constellations."

Yophiel's eyebrows furrowed. Upon closer inspection, the full plate armor of the incarnations was imbued with stories.

[The blessing of the constellation, 'Master of Steel', is with you.]

Story metal forged from the metal of the planet 'Oz'.

All members of the Inho squad were armed with the hardest metal in this world.

"Charge—!"

Watching Bang Cheolsoo, Kamael, who had been observing from the sidelines, gestured.

[Kill them all.]

With the Archangel's gesture, the Nine Wind Angels, the main force of <Eden>, poured out of the portal.

A massive wave of angels reminiscent of the Holy War.

As if to counter that wave, the girl perched on Bang Cheolsoo's shoulder shouted.

"Mom!"

At the girl's signal, her mother, who was running beside Bang Cheolsoo, also shouted.

"Dayoung!"

"Yes!"

The mother and daughter leaped simultaneously. As if they had been waiting, the Nine Order Angels thrust their spears toward the mother and daughter.

At the same time, an ominous aura emanated from the entire bodies of Mujeong and her daughter.

[They are those who have contracted with the Outer Gods!]

Recognizing their power, the Nine Order Angels shouted.

「In the battlefield of 'Ragnarok', some incarnations who have chosen the 'Army of Calamity' can form one-on-one contracts with Outer Gods.」

The otherworldly deity contracted by Mujeong and her daughter is 'Shadow of the Seabed'. By the standards of the Fear Realm, it was a 'Disaster-level fear', but in combat against humans, it was an Outer God possessing combat power comparable to a 'Natural Cataclysm-level fear'.

「The hunters of the seabed will hold their breath in the shadows of the deep sea.」

The figures of the mother and daughter slipped right into the shadows of the Ninth Order of Angels.

The moment the startled Ninth Order of Angels burst into astonishment.

[Aaaargh!]

The daggers of the heartless mother and daughter, sprang from the Archangel's shadow, severed the angels' ankles. The severed ankles were sucked straight into the shadows on the ground. Along with a crunching sound, the sound of something inside the shadows devouring the angels' ankles could be heard.

[Aaaargh! There is something in here!]

Frowning, Kamael shouted as if to encourage the lower-ranking angels.

[Do not panic. Everyone, turn your backs to one another and gather. Gathering shadows allows one to control movement.]

However, before the Nine Rank Angels could even regroup, another group of incarnations appeared.

"Slay them all!"

They were the incarnations on the Japanese side, led by Asuka Ren.

Appearing riding small demons belonging to the White Demons, the incarnations wielded their long swords in unison and clashed with the Nine Wind Angels.

The heads of the Nine Rank Angels were severed by the incarnations' sword strikes, and their bellies were pierced by sharp spears.

Anna Croft also swung her sword amidst that pandemonium. Previously, she only had to worry about Cha Yerin, but as the situation turned into a chaotic melee, blind spears and swords rained down from all directions.

Attacks that could not all be read by her unreliable [Future Sight]; the moment she stumbled backward, one of the Nine Rank Angels lying on the ground aimed his spear at her. It was a man in a long fur coat who deflected that unavoidable blow instead.

"What a pathetic sight, Prophet."

A long fur coat and a T-shirt with a skull on it. An incarnation Anna Croft knew well was there.

"Magician."

Jacob Martinez.

The King of Northern Las Vegas and the incarnation who had helped Kim Dokja during the 'Star Ladder' scenario.

He fired a few shots from his pistol at the head of the Ninth Order Angel lying on the floor, then put a cigarette to his lips.

"Bite them, you dogs of the North."

At Martinez's signal, the Northern mercenaries let out shouts and charged at the angels.

Anna Croft nodded in thanks and spoke in a somewhat grim voice.

"I thought you wouldn't get involved."

"I owe her a lot."

Glancing briefly toward Ji Eunyu, Martinez swung his palm at the charging lower-ranking angels. The upper body of the lower-ranking angel, caught in his [Severing Magic], tumbled across the floor.

Before long, the alliance of incarnations from various nations was gradually pushing back the forces of the angels. Outer Deities, sensing the raging stories sweeping across the battlefield, roared from all directions.

[A 'Giant Story' sprouts in the scenario!]

A roar announcing the arrival of a new giant story.

Bang Cheolsoo shouted.

"That's it! Push this far! We're clearing the way!"

Before long, the battle lines were pushed back right in front of the archangels. At this rate, the victory of the incarnations was certain.

It was then that Cha Seongwoo, who had remained silent, made a move.

"Activate the main controller."

With Cha Seongwoo's low voice, a radiance surged from his entire body.

[The story, 'Commander of the Battlefield', begins its storytelling!]

A large controller appeared before Cha Seongwoo's eyes. Even amidst the flashing spears and swords, Ji Eunyu, standing at the forefront of the battlefield, saw the scene clearly.

"Multi-control switch."

A faint bundle of links surged from Cha Seongwoo's entire body. Soon, the links connected with the Archangels.

Kugugugu.

At the same time, the Archangels, who had been observing the battle from the rear of the front line, moved.

The first to receive the order was the Archangel floating in the sky.

[The constellation, 'Guardian of the Youth and Travel', obeys the command of the Great Election.]

With Cha Seongwoo's signal, cumulus clouds covered the sky. The moment the incarnations raised their heads at the shimmering story beyond the sky, a pure white thunderbolt poured down through the cumulus clouds. A lightning strike of light that could neither be predicted nor avoided.

Kwakwakwakwak!

The center of the battlefield was reduced to ashes by the bombardment of light that indiscriminately struck both allies and enemies. Raphael yawned as if bored while looking at the pile of ashes.

[The constellation, 'Friend of Justice and Harmony', carries out the orders of the Grand Election.]

Following this, the Archangel Raguel also moved.

[I'm sorry, everyone.]

Bright orbs of light flashed from her hands. The incarnations, having already witnessed the Archangel's power, shouted as if in warning.

"Kill that angel first!"

But before the incarnations' swords could even move, Raguel's orbs flashed. [Punishment of Luminous Radiance]. The moment the Holy Energy Wave of the Great Warrior Raguel enveloped the battlefield, the incarnations facing the light screamed and covered their eyes.

"Aaaargh!"

The Archangel's power to blind those who face it. Incarnations shedding tears of blood before the apocalypse were wailing. Only a select few—those who turned away from the light or activated their own spells in an instant to dodge it—were witnessing that scene of hell.

Watching the blinded incarnations die, pierced by the spear of the Ninth Order of Angels, Cha Seongwoo moved an Archangel once again.

[The constellation, 'Lily of Aquarius', reveals its rank.]

Gabriel, standing beside Cha Seongwoo, grasped his holy relic.

A pure white serpent climbing up a sack. The moment Ji Eunyu confirmed the cross-shaped spear impaled in the serpent's mouth, she shouted.

"Everyone, get out of the way!"

「Brielle's Divine Spear, the Scales of Favor.」

With a vision that seemed to tilt the world in an instant, two scales appeared. On one scale stood the Archangels, and on the other—

「He will commit heinous destruction, yet he will destroy the mighty and the holy people.」

The incarnations stood there.

"No—"

Light swept across everything on one of the scales. An overwhelming storm of flashes purifying all the evil in the world.

Where the remnants of the light vanished, a massive path opened up. Neither the incarnations equipped with story metal nor those riding White Yao were to be seen. Bang Cheolsoo, having barely escaped the flash of wind, sat slumped there dazed, having lost an arm.

「We cannot win.」

Deep despair settled upon the shoulders of the surviving incarnations. Even though their opponents were Archangels, they thought they had a chance this time. They believed the incarnations had grown strong enough, and that the gap between the stars and humans had narrowed. But the stars were still high, and humans could only look up at them. Even in this final scenario.

Archangel Kamael, having spotted Ji Eunyu from afar, was approaching. Watching the Archangel, who was coming to pronounce her death while gripping a pure white sword, Ji Eunyu suddenly recalled the words of her writer.

「"Even if I were to die, at least one person should be able to explain this story."」

Her writer, who loved ominous jokes, spoke in her mind.

「"So please don't die, Editor-nim."」

From a distance, Cha Seongwoo, wielding the power of the Presidential Election, was staring at her.

「Prove your reading.」

Ji Eunyu slowly clenched her fist. With the very hand that had tapped the keyboard countless times, turned the pages of books, and held the pen.

"You cannot win."

Cha Seongwoo's voice sounded as if he were convinced that the ending was already written. But Ji Eunyu slowly shook her head.

「All Calamity factions can summon a higher-level 'Calamity' by sacrificing stories.」

Ji Eunyu began to read.

Cha Seongwoo's gaze wavered slightly as he confirmed the story surging in her hands.

"Are you trying to summon an Outer God?"

If the Leader of the Apostles, Ji Eunyu, were to stake herself on summoning an Outer God, she could certainly summon one that surpassed the level of a natural disaster.

However, even if such an Outer God were to arrive, it could not change the course of the battlefield this time.

[No matter what calamity comes here, it cannot stop the Nebula.]

Because <Eden> was here right now.

Ji Eunyu did not stop despite Kamael's dry warning.

Kamael frowned and swung his sword.

[A futile attempt—]

At the same time, stories flowed from Ji Eunyu's entire body. And the moment they heard the first sentence of the story, Cha Seongwoo and all the readers there realized what kind of 'catastrophe' she was about to summon.

「That catastrophe is those capable of facing a single nebula.」

With the end of a world approaching, possessing the only probability of succeeding to that end—and thus, the name that this <Star Stream> can only call 'catastrophe'.

「That story began in the 'subway'.」

Kim Dokja Company.

1020 Episode 62 Snowfield Kim Dokja (10)

---

The moment he read Ji Eunyu's record, even Cha Seongwoo, who had remained composed throughout, had his eyes shaken significantly.

<Kim Dokja Company>—no reader in this world could remain unfazed at the mention of that name.

However, Archangel Kamael, who was not a reader, was neither flustered nor surprised.

[I know that name, too. The adversaries of the <Star Stream> who have seen the end of another worldline.]

Has that name somehow reached this worldline as well?

Kamael continued speaking with a subtle sneer.

[No matter how much it is 'Ragnarok', one cannot suddenly summon the 'Great Emperor Green'.]

In reality, despite the dedication of the snow-covered story, Ji Eunyu's record could not continue to the next sentence.

「That story began in the 'subway'.」

Even though she had recorded just a single line, Ji Eunyu felt a terrible dizziness. Her heart pounded as if it would burst, and stories dripped from her nose. As if this world would not allow that sentence to be recorded, an immense sense of probability weighed heavily upon her.

[Foolish recorder, that record cannot be completed. For it is a story that does not fit the probability of this world.]

It was just as the Archangels had said. If she proceeded with the summoning of <Kim Dokja Company> as she was, even if she succeeded in summoning the disaster like a miracle, her soul would be shattered into pieces.

「Nevertheless, there was a reason she went out of her way to undertake such an adventure.」

Perhaps she had hoped for it.

「Wouldn't a single phrase be enough to bring back all those memories?」

Even if <Kim Dokja Company> did not come here, any reader who read this phrase would inevitably recall the same moment, and would certainly be reminded of the moment they first read this story.

Not just any reader, but the 'Second Apostle' right before my eyes—

"I am sorry."

As soon as Cha Seongwoo turned away, Kamael's command was issued.

[Exterminate them.]

Just as the horde of the Nine Orders of Angels, as if they had been waiting for this moment, was about to trample the incarnations,

Kugugugu.

A violent spark struck the sky. Startled, Kamael looked up at the heavens. It was not Raphael's thunder.

[That cannot be.]

A roar echoed through the dark clouds, and something fell from the sky.

The pitch-black Archangel Raphael was falling, groaning.

[No way—]

Kamael groaned as he swiftly soared up and caught Raphael.

There are few beings capable of shooting down the Great Archangel Raphael, even if one scoured the entire <Star Stream>.

The moment Kamael saw the stories clinging to Raphael's torn wings, his expression hardened.

[Magi?]

Ji Eunyu was also looking up at the sky.

「The stories of <Kim Dokja Company> are dangerous.」

The landscape of the sky had been turned upside down by a mere phrase. Something was descending beyond the rushing probability.

「Just by reciting this one phrase, drooling beings will swarm in like a pack of wild dogs.」

【Ahahahaha!】

Someone poked their face out through the sky where Raphael had fallen, accompanied by a sharp laugh.

【Did you really intend to summon them here? Even though this world could vanish without a trace in return?】

Asmodeus emerged from beyond the swirling portal.

【We cannot let that happen. There are still so many blank pages left in this story.】

Simultaneously with Asmodeus's remark, puppets appeared from the dark clouds in the sky.

【This banquet has only just begun.】

Corrupted stars, each emitting a terrifying demonic energy—consumed by a pitch-black aura.

[The Demon King, 'Ruthless Hunter of the Heavens of Defiance', has descended upon this scenario!]

Demon King Rank 8, Barbatos.

[The Demon King, 'Lion of the Black Mane', has descended upon this scenario!]

Demon King Rank 5, Marbas.

[The Demon King, 'God of Necromancy', has descended upon this scenario!]

Demon King Rank 4, Gamigin.

[The Demon King, 'Noble of Prophecy', has descended upon this scenario!]

Vasago, Rank 3 Demon King.

Even just this much was an event enough to cause upheaval in the <Star Stream>.

Above all, Vasago, the 'Noble of Prophecy' and Rank 3 Demon King, was a Demon King famous for not moving.

Gabriel, the 'Lily of Aquarius' who had maintained silence all along, frowned and muttered.

['The Noble of Prophecy' has come?]

However, it was too early to be surprised. It was because the most powerful Demon King at the moment had revealed himself within the shimmering portal.

[The Demon King, 'Ruler of Eastern Hell', has descended upon this scenario!]

Agares, Rank 2 Demon King.

With this, the top-tier Demon Kings had all gathered on the battlefield of 'Ragnarok'.

「The scales of probability moved by <Eden> began to balance again.」

Even more surprising was the 'faction' they had chosen.

[You damned Demon Kings. Did you really choose the 'Constellation Faction'?]

As if to counter Kamael's crude curses, the cackling pronouncements of the Demon Kings could be heard through the pitch-black storm clouds.

[Didn't you bastards know your place and cling to the 'Calamity Faction' first?]

As the Demon God of Necromancy 'Gami' roared, the dead on earth rose from their places.

The incarnations and Nine Orders of Angels who had died fighting on the battlefield. They were awakening as demons.

Oooooh—!

The demons resurrected by the power of the Demon Kings wailed. While their comrades who had fought right beside them were being resurrected as beauties, the terrified incarnations screamed. Their terror and fear only made the Demon Kings' power stronger.

[Oh, my God.]

The Demon King Agares addressed the archangels on earth, speaking.

[Do you think you can be recorded in the apocalypse without us?]

With Agares's signal, the demons of the sky began to fall to the earth.

[A new giant story is stirring!]

At the center of 'Ragnarok', the battle between good and evil was beginning.

[Aaaargh!]

Demons struck by the angels' blades vanished with screams.

[Aaaargh!]

Angels pierced by the Demon King's sword collapsed, spewing blood-red stories.

At the very center of that pandemonium stood Cha Seongwoo and Ji Eunyu.

"Was this your plan from the start?"

At Cha Seongwoo's cold question, Ji Eunyu checked the message floating in the air instead of answering.

[Chaos level rising!]

A festival of good and evil intertwined. Cha Seongwoo took in the entire scene at a glance and asked again.

"Are you planning to end 'Ragnarok' like this?"

This scenario was clearly 'Ragnarok'. However, the other major constellations were absent. If a different story were overwritten before the full-scale aspiration for 'Ragnarok' was recorded, it was possible to twist the direction of the apocalypse.

"Are you planning to wage a 'Holy-Demon War' here?"

In this timeline, the 'Holy-Demon War' did not take place. This was because 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' had prevented it.

"If necessary."

The forces of good and evil were clashing in the sky and on the ground. As if unleashing pent-up desires they had never been able to fight before, they were colliding with everything they had.

"You are part of the 'Calamity Faction'. If the Demon Kings win, you will die too."

"So you must change your mind before that happens."

As Ji Eunyu raised her fist, Cha Seongwoo raised his as well.

The two clashed fists in the air almost simultaneously. Ji Eunyu's fist held a slight advantage.

Cha Seongwoo asked.

"Do you intend to try and persuade me until the very end?"

"Correcting erroneous sentences is my job."

Cha Seongwoo felt the sparks of probability surrounding him diminish compared to before. The probability he, as the acting president, had been bearing alone was being offset by the appearance of the Demon Kings.

Perhaps Ji Eunyu had foreseen this entire situation and summoned that 'Asmodeus' and the Demon King's gang.

"You must live. You need to read the next part of the story. Without readers, neither the author nor the editor has any meaning."

"…"

"Even the author wouldn't want you to die here."

The fists of the two men clashed once again in the air. This time, Cha Seongwoo held the slight advantage.

"If I give up here, Kim Dokja will die."

"That Kim Dokja is just a character."

"Because that Kim Dokja existed."

Gathering their breath once more, the fists of the two men collided.

"I am here now, too."

It was truly a duel of evenly matched strength. The two men's powers were in equilibrium, without yielding an inch.

In the narratives wrapped around their fists, the sentences they had read until now were contained intact.

A clash of interpretations where neither could be called wrong.

Shaking fists on a battlefield where even the slightest slip meant losing one's life, the two were reading the pages of the apocalypse together.

Fists crossed beyond breathtaking descriptions and thrilling explanations.

「I interpreted this sentence this way. What about you?」

Dokja asked.

「I think this way, though.」

The editor answered.

「No, that is my interpretation.」

「Since I am your editor, wouldn't I know better?」

「That is an excessively narrow-minded interpretation.」

After loving and hating stories, and having lived them through, the two finally arrived at a single question.

「Does a story belong to the 'author'?」

The usual Ji Eunyu would have nodded in agreement. She would have said that only the author is qualified to take responsibility for a story.

But at that moment, she thought of her own author.

「Does that author know the end of this world?」

How would he answer that question, indeed?

「You haven't forgotten, have you? The protagonist of this story is the 'reader'.」

Ji Eunyu nodded. If her author had been here, he would likely have read the introduction to a story instead of giving an answer.

The two opened their mouths simultaneously.

「Only I know the ending of this world.」

The two blazing stories intertwined, and a deafening roar erupted. A battlefield where breathless angels and demons had fallen.

Ji Eunyu and Agares, having glanced at Cha Seongwoo's duel, lit a cigarette and spoke.

[At this rate, there won't be a winner.]

As Agares waved his hand toward the empty air, the momentum of the battlefield stirred once again.

[It would be good to get into the main game now.]

Looking at the sky, which was rippling as if it would tear apart at any moment, Kamael shouted.

[You crazy Demon Kings—what are your schemes!]

The demonic energy in the azure sky swirled ominously.

Kugugugu!

Soon, the sky split open as if twisted, and something began to be summoned beyond the gap.

[My God. That damn bastard.]

With Kamael's sigh, the Nine Orders of Angels on Earth looked up at the sky as if entranced. Kamael shouted.

[No! Don't look, everyone!]

The eyes of the Nine Orders of Angels split open, and a red moon rose above them.

[Aaaaaaaah!]

The Nine Orders of Angels who witnessed the moon died of a fit of rage, spewing fire from their heads.

The mere acknowledgment of its existence was enough to cause the angels' incarnations to explode, unable to withstand the force.

[Bow, all of you! Avoid the gaze! It is an ancient demon!]

Along with Kamael's warning, red moonlight illuminated the earth.

「He is the Demon of Armageddon, forgotten and obscured by the Apocalypse.」

One of the demons representing 'Armageddon', alongside Abaddon, the King of Locusts and 'Ruler of the Abyss'.

The Cataclysm of Collapse—「The Falling Moon.」

Although not of the 'End-of-World' class like the Dragon of Apocalypse, he was an Outer God positioned at the very top tier among 'Natural Disaster-Class' gods.

"Mount Cloud! It is a catastrophe equivalent to a myth-grade disaster!"

Anna Croft's sharp cry.

The moment Ji Eunyu, sensing danger, retreated from the battlefield, moonlight illuminated the spot where she had stood until the end of the battle. The moment the beautiful, pale moonlight touched the ground, everything on it withered away as if drying up, scattering into dust. As if returning to the primordial particles, every being touched by the moonlight was literally collapsing.

Only death remained on the path the moonlight had traveled. Neither incarnations, nor angels of the ninth order, nor constellations. No being touched by the moonlight could escape this natural order.

"Cha Seongwoo-ssi!"

And standing at the edge of the moonlight was Cha Seongwoo.

1021 Episode 62 Snowfield Kim Dokja (11)

---

The moment the moonlight finally touched Cha Seongwoo's feet, archangels stepped forward as if to protect him. The moonlight enveloped the archangels.

Just as the pale death sentence fell, Cha Yerin screamed.

"No!"

No matter how great they were as archangels, they were ultimately 'narrative-grade constellations'. There was no way a narrative-grade could handle the power of a Demon God comparable to a myth-grade constellation.

It was Ye Hyunwoo who grabbed Cha Yerin as she tried to run toward her brother.

"Let go of me!"

"Yerin-ah, calm down."

Holding her, Ye Hyunwoo calmly pointed forward and spoke.

"Seongwoo is not dead."

Ye Hyunwoo's words were true.

Even in the catastrophic moonlight that shatters the stories of all beings, the Archangels remained intact. Although the outer surfaces of their wings were scorched and their fluttering feathers had disintegrated into particles, the Archangel formation did not collapse. A gentle curtain of light enveloped Cha Seongwoo and the Archangels.

「The Archangels, who are narrative-grade constellations, have absorbed the power of the Demon God.」

It was impossible by common sense. No 'narrative-grade' can stand against a 'myth-grade'. But now, the Archangels had made that impossibility a reality.

"Ji Eunyu."

Cha Seongwoo revealed himself once again between the Archangels' wings. He was speaking while gazing at the moon in the sky.

"Have you never thought about that?"

Was it a delusion? At that moment, Cha Seongwoo's voice as he opened his mouth did not sound like a human's.

"How did <Eden>, which lacks the number of 'myth-grade constellations' compared to other nebulae, become the 'Great Nebula' that everyone fears?"

Although <Eden> did possess the myth-grade Metatron and the comparable Michael, the number of 'myth-grade constellations' was still small compared to other nebulae.

"<Eden> does not need a 'Great Star'."

Since when had it begun? The archangels were clasping their hands together. Centered around Metatron at the rear, all the archangels were praying.

[The 'Giant Story' of the Great Nebula, <Eden>, begins its storytelling!]

The archangels' prayers gathered, and the story soon condensed into a single point.

There stood the Acting President of <Eden>.

Radiance surged from Cha Seongwoo's entire body, as if he had become a single star.

The moment the pale moonlight shone upon the archangels once again, Cha Seongwoo's right hand pointed toward the sky.

「The greatest light of <Eden> is the very fact that they are 'right'.」

Pointing at the moon with a movement that was neither too fast nor too slow, Cha Seongwoo recited the first line of a very ancient story.

"Let there be light."

And the vision of all beings was instantly plunged into darkness. It was a fleeting moment, yet a darkness reminiscent of eternity. And at the end of that darkness, a blinding light burst forth.

Angels, incarnations, and even demon kings were overwhelmed by that light. Some shed tears, while others felt an intense longing.

Ji Eunyu was no exception. Feeling a terrible emptiness, Ji Eunyu could not take her eyes off that light.

All they could do was stare blankly at the spot where the light had vanished like magic.

A huge hole had opened in the sky where the sublime light had swept through.

No one could accurately understand the cause and effect of that scene, but everyone clearly understood the result.

[The Outer God 'Falling Moon' exited the scenario after suffering a near-zero blow.]

A miracle that annihilated a myth-grade Demon God with a single strike. Before that immense power, all Demon Kings fell silent.

Except for Agares alone.

[Oh, <Eden>. Did you dare use that power...]

He knew the name of that light.

「The Radiance of Creation—'Prima Lux'.」

It was the light that opened the very beginning of <Eden>. That light was <Eden>'s confidence, and the reason they had no need for other 'myth-grade constellations'.

Because with this single story, they were able to defeat all 'myth-grade constellations'.

[The story, 'Commander of the Battlefield', continues its storytelling.]

[Exclusive Trait, 'Game Expert', activates!]

As Cha Seongwoo's story and trait manifested simultaneously, the morale-boosted angels began to move again.

[Kill the demons!]

The archangels linked to him also resumed the war.

[Annihilate evil.]

Ruthless good began to slaughter evil.

At the center of that stage, Cha Seongwoo looked like the Messiah of this world.
Everyone in the <Star Stream> was watching him as if entranced.

However, only Ji Eunyu gazed at him with sorrowful eyes.

"Why."

The sleeve of Cha Seongwoo's right arm fluttered as he activated the 'Radiance of Creation'.

The 'Giant Story' of Creation, which a single human could not bear.

His ■■ was confirmed due to the transfer of the previous war. Now that this fight is over, Cha Seongwoo's soul will be destroyed in the aftermath.

"Do you think he will acknowledge you if you protect him to this extent?"

"I don't need such a thing as acknowledgment."

Cha Seongwoo's chilling warning followed.

"And there is one more arm left."

The Radiance of Creation was gathering at the tip of his left hand.

"Step back. If you come any closer, I will open fire."

Even Ji Eunyu had no way to counter a power capable of returning even a myth-grade demon to the void.

Nevertheless, instead of backing down, Ji Eunyu took a step closer to Cha Seongwoo and spoke.

"The author once said something like that while crying."

"Do not come near..."

"Editor-nim, what about a certain manuscript? No matter how much I revise it, it just won't write the way I want."

Ji Eunyu recalled the expression on the face of the writer in charge as he said those words. The man who had squeezed out tears and snot while staring at the blinking cursor.

「Some stories turn even the writer who wrote them into a reader.」

Looking at that face, Ji Eunyu thought.

If even the writer cannot control this story, where on earth does it come from? Who is forcing him to write this story? By completing this story, what do the writer who wrote it, the reader who reads it, the protagonist living it, and we ultimately become?

"So, what did that guy do?"

The reader asked, and the editor answered.

"He wrote the next chapter while crying."

"…"

"Because that was all he could do."

Ji Eunyu smiled broadly.

The record resumed at her fingertips.

「That story began in the 'subway'.」

Reading Ji Eunyu's sentence, Cha Seongwoo frowned and said.

"That record cannot continue. You must know, right?"

Instead of answering, Ji Eunyu looked up at the sky.

[The Chaos level of the battlefield is rising!]

The sky was blinking violently, as if flashing.

[The Chaos level of the battlefield is rising!]

The Chaos level was rising endlessly. Due to the clash between good and evil reaching its peak, stories of chaos were overflowing.

Looking up at that chaotic sky, Ji Eunyu recalled the moment she first obtained a sponsor.

「"What is the reason I should make you my sponsor?"」

On the day she received the offer to choose 'Lotus Blooming Under the Moonlight' as a sponsor, Ji Eunyu asked that.

「"If I choose you, what can you do for me?"」

[The constellation, 'Lotus Blooming Under the Moonlight', says it can offer advice regarding the scenario.]

「"But I already know a lot about the scenario myself?"」

Strictly speaking, her sponsor, who came from another timeline, was incompetent.

Constrained by the limitations of probability, her sponsor could not provide her with great support, and it was difficult to provide information that she did not know at all.

Nevertheless, she chose that patron star.

[The constellation, 'Lotus Blooming Under the Moonlight', has become your sponsor.]

It was all for today.

「There, a soldier who wanted to be righteous stood by.」

Sentences that were thought to never continue began to be written.

Just as Cha Seongwoo, with his eyes wide open, was about to open his mouth to say something, Metatron spoke.

[Shoot her.]

At the Archangel's chilling command, Cha Seongwoo shook his head violently.

"I cannot do that."

[If you do not, I will.]

Metatron's massive hand grabbed Cha Seongwoo's arm. With the sensation that his entire joint was being twisted, his left arm was forcibly moved.

"Let go of me! I am the acting president of <Eden>!"

[If you do not shoot her now.]

Cha Seongwoo's left arm trembled, overwhelmed by Metatron's power. He manifested his power to resist time and time again, but Metatron suppressed even that and spoke.

[This world will perish.]

"No!"

Despite Cha Seongwoo's desperate resistance, his arm eventually aimed at Ji Eunyu.

"Dodge!"

The prayers of the Archangel were gathering. Looking at Cha Seongwoo's left arm aimed at her, Ji Eunyu recalled the story she loved.

It was the third 'Giant Story' of <Kim Dokja Company>.

['Stage' is activated!]

[The Giant Story, 'Season of Light and Darkness', resonates with your stage.]

Her sponsor was watching over her story.

[The constellation, 'Lotus Blooming Under the Moonlight', gazes upon you.]

Watching the overflowing story, Cha Seongwoo, in a desperate voice, shouted.

"I know what you're thinking! You intend to raise the 'Chaos Level' to summon <Kim Dokja Company>, don't you!"

Currently, this place was temporarily set up as the stage for the 'Holy-Demon War'.

And the 'Holy-Demon War' was one of <Kim Dokja Company's> main battlefields.

"But even for the 'Holy-Demon War', we cannot summon all of them!"

Cha Seongwoo grasped reality more coldly than anyone else.

"If we could summon the entire <Kim Dokja Company> with this level of probability, they would have descended into this world long ago!"

Ji Eunyu knew it too.

There was probably only one member of <Kim Dokja Company> capable of descending into this battlefield.

And the being with the highest probability of descending was her sponsor.

"Your sponsor alone is impossible! The Moonlight Empress alone cannot stop this!"

Nevertheless, Ji Eunyu did not stop recording.

[It is time to let you go.]

With Metatron's command, Cha Seongwoo's left arm radiated light.

[Let there be light.]

With the incantation of a mythical archangel, a merciless barrage of light swept through everything before their eyes.

「No matter who comes from <Kim Dokja Company>, they cannot withstand that barrage.」

Cha Seongwoo despaired. His whole body trembled. He hadn't come all the way here just to witness a story like this.

"Metatron!"

Angrily, Cha Seongwoo shouted at Metatron. However, Metatron was not looking at him.

[The constellation, 'Scribe of Heaven', sighs and falls silent.]

Metatron had remained calm even when the Demon Kings, including Agares, descended, and even when the Demon God appeared.

Yet, for the first time, Metatron's expression had hardened.

As the halo of light disappeared, Cha Seongwoo looked back at the battlefield.

「...There was a man.」

Ji Eunyu's record had been cut off, unable to continue to the end. However, the moment he read that sentence again, Cha Seongwoo realized something.

It was not that the record had been left unfinished.

「There was the strongest and loneliest man in the world,」

The record was intended to be written only up to that point from the very beginning.

"No way."

The moment he saw the tail of a pitch-black coat fluttering through the halo of light, Cha Seongwoo got goosebumps.

「He was the figure he wanted to emulate more than anyone else in this world.」

The dark blade, having deflected the radiance of creation, aimed at them with a haughty aura.

It was merely a sword pointing in this direction, yet the oppressive weight felt as if an entire world were turning against them.

At the mere sight of that presence, a certain archangel recoiled, and a certain demon king turned his back and began to flee.

The moment Cha Seongwoo looked into the man's eyes, he understood why the 'Radiance of Creation' had not worked on him.

「He is the protagonist born with the 'beginning' of this world.」

As all the stars on the battlefield trembled in silence, Cha Seongwoo whispered his name softly.

[Incarnation, 'Yoo Joonghyuk', descends as the calamity of 'Ragnarok'!]

The Supreme King of the 1,864th round has finally revealed himself in the 41st round of the <Star Stream>.

1022 Episode 62 Snowfield Kim Dokja (12)

"Only one person can go this time."

At Yoo Sangah's words, Lee Gilyoung and Lee Jihye were the first to raise their hands.

"I'll go."

"What nonsense! This time, I really have to go!"

Lee Gilyoung and Lee Jihye, having raised their hands simultaneously, glared at each other. Normally, this would have been the moment for Yoo Sangah to step in and mediate between the two. However, today, something was different about Yoo Sangah as well.

Looking at the portal swirling in the air, Yoo Sangah spoke.

"I'm sorry, but this time, I'll go."

It was a passage opened by none other than her own incarnation, using her own story as a sacrifice. Therefore, if Yoo Sangah said that, there was no one who could stop her.

Except for the doctor at <Kim Dokja Company>, who was more worried about her than anyone else.

"But Sangah, you're not in good condition either."

Lee Seolhwa, who had remained silent the entire time, gently wrapped her arm around Yoo Sangah's shoulder and spoke.

"Because you have been staying connected to communicate with that world."

The story's pulse could be felt through her shoulder. Yoo Sangah was not showing it, but Lee Seolhwa could clearly feel it. Yoo Sangah's state of stories was extremely unstable at the moment.

As she had been connected to the 41st round and peering into the story without a single moment of rest, the fatigue accumulated within Yoo Sangah was immense.

Lee Seolhwa added again.

"Let's send someone else this time."

"But—"

"If it is your [Lotus Platform], Sangah, it can offset the probability to some extent."

With [Lotus Seal], one of the powers of the Lotus Platform, she—or rather, another incarnation—could be disguised as her and deployed into the worldline.

The problem was who to send.

With a light sigh, Yoo Sangah opened her mouth.

"There will be powerful enemies we have never faced before. As soon as we are deployed, even the myth-grade constellations will notice."

"…"

"If Sooyoung-ssi had been here, I would have sent her..."

Yoo Sangah slowly lifted her gaze from the portal and turned around. Then, one by one, the other members of the group also looked in that direction.

In truth, everyone there knew.

「If only one person can go, the person who will go there is already decided.」

Yoo Sangah asked.

"Can you do it?"

To Yoo Joonghyuk, such a question was meaningless. But even knowing it was meaningless, she had to ask. Because they were now comrades.

"You are asking the obvious."

"Your injuries haven't healed either."

"It is no problem."

Yoo Joonghyuk removed the bandage wrapped around his torso. The wounds sustained in the fierce battle with Odin still lingered from his back to his neck.

"You know what you have to do, right?"

"To rescue Kim Dokja."

"What are you going to do?"

"I will drag him here by force."

"You can't bring him here by killing him. You know that, right?"

Yoo Joonghyuk, who had been hesitating, nodded.

"You can't beat him up too much, either."

"…"

"Answer."

Instead of answering, Yoo Joonghyuk donned the 'Coat of Infinite Dimensions'. Next, he carefully wrapped bandages made by a Heavenly Master around both hands and strapped on the 'Black Heaven Demon Blade' sharply forged at his waist.

As Yoo Joonghyuk raised his head, having fully assumed his stance, Yoo Sangah spoke.

"Go, Joonghyuk-ssi. Please—"

Without even listening to Yoo Sangah finish, Yoo Joonghyuk threw himself into the portal. With a dazzling beam of light, [Lotus Platform] activated, and a lotus bud protected Yoo Joonghyuk's body.

Watching Yoo Joonghyuk vanish in an instant, Yoo Sangah muttered in a distant voice.

"Save all of Kim Dokja."

---

Oh, ohhhh...

A sound of crying was heard from somewhere. At first, it sounded like a low, faint sob, but as time passed, it gradually grew thick and resounding.

Oooooh—!

The Outer Gods who had seen Yoo Joonghyuk were wailing. Some cries were awe, while others were terrifying fear.

There were Outer Gods who writhed in the void, unable to control their emotions, and there were 'Nameless Ones' who melted away on the spot, unable to control their agitation.

The constellations were no different.

Bloody stories poured from the eyes of Yophiel, who had activated [Eyes of Sin], and the other Archangels wore dazed expressions.

[Could it be... that one is...]

Everyone was weighed down by silence. Stars who knew who Yoo Joonghyuk was, and those who did not, trembled just by meeting his gaze. Just by looking, one could recognize his presence at a glance.

「He is the one who reached the ■■ of a story that even the stars could not see.」

The stories flowing unadulterated from Yoo Joonghyuk's entire being dominated the battlefield.

[How.]

Reading those stories, Metatron sighed faintly.

[Can existence become this great merely by having seen the end of a story?]

Yoo Joonghyuk took a slow step. Even though the direction he was heading was clear, no one could stop him.

「And only one person stood in his way.」

"Yoo Joonghyuk."

It was Cha Seongwoo. From a distance, he could hear Ji Eunyu, Cha Yerin, and Ye Hyunwoo shouting something. But nothing reached his ears.

"Yoo Joonghyuk."

He called out that name like a madman.

"Yoo Joonghyuk!"

He called out once more. Yoo Joonghyuk paid no heed to such calls and glanced at the Archangels of <Eden>.

Was Uriel absent?

As if he had completed all necessary verifications with that, Yoo Joonghyuk muttered as he walked toward the barracks.

"Kim Dokja is..."

Before Yoo Joonghyuk could even finish his sentence, the spear of light held in Cha Seongwoo's hand flew. With a sharp slapping sound, the spear bounced away. The lightly swung 'Black Heaven Demon Saber' had blocked the spear.

"The Kim Dokja you are looking for is not here."

Cha Seongwoo, positioned behind Yoo Joonghyuk, spoke in a chilling voice. The relics of the Archangels rose behind Cha Seongwoo.

'Punishment of Madness'.

'Staff of the Pilgrim'.

The relics of Raguel and Raphael activated simultaneously. A light that blinds the eyes of the living. Subsequently, a thunderous light bursting from the staff pierced Yoo Joonghyuk's face.

Swoosh.

Yoo Joonghyuk did not close his eyes even against the power of 'Punishment of Madness'. He had shattered the Archangel's power solely through the sheer physical strength of stories. The light sword strike he then swung tore apart even Raphael's thunderous light.

Of course, Cha Seongwoo had anticipated that far.

「You have seen a ram with two horns, and the great horn between its eyes is its first king.」

Gabriel's Story, 「The Revelation of the Apocalypse」.

A story that borrows the power of the apocalypse to absurdly amplify the user's story grade. The stature of divinity, which only an archangel could handle, surged through Cha Seongwoo's entire body.

「His power is bound to grow stronger by his own strength, but it is not by his own power.」

Cha Seongwoo let out a monstrous roar, accompanied by the pitch-black horns sprouting from his head. Gabriel's Divine Spear, clutched in his hand, aimed forward. The moment the spear, imbued with the light of demon slaying, flashed toward Yoo Joonghyuk, Yoo Joonghyuk muttered.

"Is it the 'Scales of Favoritism'?"

Cha Seongwoo's eyes were filled with astonishment.

A speed so fast that he could not even feel the distance closing.

Yoo Joonghyuk, having come right up to his nose, held it as if it were a child's toy. He grabbed the spear with his bare hands. The light concentrated within the spear faded with a thud.

As Cha Seongwoo screamed while gripping the divine spear with both hands, Yoo Joonghyuk spoke.

"That is not how you use this."

With immense grip strength, Yoo Joonghyuk lightly swung his arm, sending Cha Seongwoo's body spinning around and crashing into the ground.

Having snatched the spear, Yoo Joonghyuk swung it toward the sky as if testing its performance.

Kugugugugu!

A bundle of energy radiating from the spear flew straight toward the battlefield of the angels and demons. As the nine rank angels and demons struck by the energy bundle died without even being able to scream, the high-ranking demons and high-ranking angels joined the fray. They were the Archangels commanding the battlefield, and the Demon Nobles.

[Block them! No matter how great a being they are, it is merely human technique—]

The Archangel commander at the front was cut in two before he could even finish his sentence. Terrified, the angels and demons belatedly scattered to avoid the bundle of powerful energy, but the energy split apart as if possessing a will of its own, slaughtering every single one of the fleeing angels and demons.

[The power of the Giant Story, 'Holy War of Good and Evil', is beginning to weaken.]

Eventually, the archangels and demon lords who had been watching the battlefield stepped forward.

[At this rate, the 'Holy War of Good and Evil' itself will collapse!]

If the Giant Story shatters, the very reason for their descent into this 'Ragnarok' will vanish. They could not let that happen.

[It has no choice. We will join forces for a moment.]

Marbas, the highest-ranking demon lord, roared and transformed into a giant lion, while Barbatos also summoned his main fleet.

At the same time, the Archangel Kamael, clad in pure white armor, activated the Holy Relic.

[The constellation, 'One Who Faces God', activates the holy relic, 'Judgment Seat of Strict Judgment'!]

As Kamael's holy relic activated, the Trial Seat began to list Yoo Joonghyuk's 'Deadly Sins'.

「Killed every subway passenger in the first scenario.」

「Killed 64 incarnations in the second scenario.」

「In the third scenario…」

Yoo Joonghyuk's sins were listed endlessly.

Kamael's holy relic, the 'Trial Seat of Strict Judgment', imposes ceaseless 'penalties' on the target's overall stats in proportion to their sins. Due to the nature of the holy relic, which imposes stronger penalties the more evil the target, Yoo Joonghyuk's 'penalties' could stack almost infinitely.

「Destroyed 5,362 stars in the 99th scenario.」

Kamael and the Demon King met as they confirmed his incomprehensible deadly sins. It was the moment the Archangel and the Demon King, who had been gnashing their teeth at each other until the end of the war with disaster before their eyes, joined hands.

[I never thought the day would come when that Great Warrior bastard's Trial Seat would be of help.]

Barbatos loaded his battleship with magic.

[I will end this with this one blow.]

Marbas, transformed into a colossal lion, mounted Kamael, who was clad in pure white armor.

As Kamael raised his dazzling sword with all his might, the Archangels and High Demons following behind them rushed toward Yoo Joonghyuk.

[The power of the holy relic, 'Strict Judgment Seat', is manifested!]

Yoo Joonghyuk's incarnation, having suffered immensely compounded penalties, was now as fragile as a sheet of paper. To finish off Yoo Joonghyuk, Barbatos's battleship spewed fire, and Kamael's sword strikes moved.

Yoo Joonghyuk gazed intently at the entire scene and swung his spear once again. A blinding light flashed, and the sound of something shattering was heard.

And.

[The constellation, 'One Who Faces God', has suffered a blow close to annihilation and exits the scenario!]

[The Demon King, 'Ruthless Hunter of the Heavens of Defiance', is exiting the scenario after suffering damage close to annihilation!]

[The Demon King, 'Black-Maned Lion', is exiting the scenario after suffering damage close to annihilation!]

It was just a single strike. Not even a strike delivered with full force, but just a spear swing swung indifferently.

[The Holy Relic, 'Scale of Favor', exhausts its power.]

Unable to withstand Yoo Joonghyuk's narrative, the bent 'Scale of Favor' rolled across the ground, discolored pitch black.

No one on the battlefield dared to open their mouths. A monster capable of slaughtering three narrative-grade constellations with a single blow. Everyone there was clearly perceiving it.

「That being that has just descended before our eyes is undoubtedly 'myth-grade' or higher.」

The next moment, Cha Seongwoo, who had been slammed into the ground, reappeared covered in dust.

"What is everyone doing?"

Cha Seongwoo shouted as if to awaken the silent battlefield.

"Eden! Get your act together! Have you forgotten whom you descended upon this battlefield to protect!"

It was then that Metatron, the scribe of heaven who had been hesitating all along, opened his book.

[The story, 'Apocalypse', begins its storytelling!]

Only Ji Eunyu recognized the greatness of that story in that very spot.

「The Archangel, standing before the apocalypse, begins his final compilation.」

Metatron's story, which had never been described even in the main story. A story that abnormally amplified the abilities of the archangels by grinding in the entirety of the massive story of <Eden>, which had only manifested in a select few 'Holy War of Good and Evil' events.

All the archangels were enveloped in a dazzling radiance, as if they had all become a single star.

At the center of that light stood Cha Seongwoo.

[Exclusive Trait, 'Game Expert', activates!]

Controlling all the archangels with his controller, he spoke to Yoo Joonghyuk.

"You may not know me, but I know you well."

Unable to withstand the story of <Eden>, Cha Seongwoo's entire body began to burst into flames.

"Because I have lived to become you."

Using all of Cha Seongwoo's stories as fuel, the story of <Eden> began its storytelling. The archangels connected to the main controller scattered in perfect order, pouring out attacks like a single army.

Raphael soared into the sky once again and scattered thunderbolts, while Yophiel's [503 Unit] surged toward Yoo Joonghyuk. Raguel's 'Punishment of Madness' emitted light. Gabriel also aimed his broken 'Scale of Favor'.

[The constellation, 'Savior of the Fall', reveals its true power!]

Even Michael, who had remained hidden in the darkness until the very end, moved.

The single sword of Michael, the strongest battle angel boasted by <Eden>, plunged directly into Yoo Joonghyuk.

The moment the stories of the archangels destined to annihilate all life on Earth converged at a single point—

[Exclusive Trait, 'Ruler of Play', activates!]

The world's time stopped.

「No one there could understand the events that unfolded at that moment.」

The regressor, having seen the end of the scenario, gazed at the sky.

「Only the recorders realized what had happened in the blank spaces and held their breath.」

Finally reaching the 'final phase of the scenario', Yoo Joonghyuk, freed from the penalty of probability, revealed his true power.

「That record could not be written accurately. Because no recorder had ever found a sentence to accurately capture the landscape they had witnessed.」

As if engraving a single sword strike into a vast blank space, Yoo Joonghyuk's sword was drawn.

「Only the recorder who wrote this story for the first time has written a single word into that eternal void.」

Time, which had stopped, began to flow again.

「Meteor Slash.」

Cha Seongwoo looked up at the sky with vacant eyes. At that moment, Cha Seongwoo recalled the 'Radiance of Creation'.

A power utterly incomprehensible in terms of causality. A power that gauges what has happened solely by the result.

[The constellation, 'Commander of the Red Cosmos', has suffered a massive blow and is exiting the scenario!]

Now, Yoo Joonghyuk, too, was using such a power.

[The constellation, 'Lily of Aquarius', has suffered massive damage and exits the scenario!]

[The constellation, 'Friend of Justice and Harmony', has suffered massive damage and exits the scenario!]

Stars were falling from the sky.

[The constellation, 'Guardian of Youth and Travel', has suffered massive damage and exits the scenario!]

Only two stars survived.

[The constellation, 'Savior of Fallen', has suffered fatal damage!]

Michael, with his eyes wide open and his wings torn.

[The constellation, 'Scribe of Heaven', swallows a groan.]

Metatron, clutching his half-torn book.

[How dare—!]

Just as the enraged Michael was about to lunge at Yoo Joonghyuk once again, Metatron moved.

[The constellation, 'Savior of the Fall', has exited the scenario by order of <Eden>.]

As if declaring that he would no longer be involved in this matter, Metatron stepped back, lightly raising both hands.

[The Great Nebula, <Eden>, ceases the activation of all stories.]

The Nebula's 'Great story' was dismantled by a single incarnation.

Amidst the overwhelming grief of all beings witnessing this unbelievable miracle, Cha Seongwoo smiled and muttered.

"As expected."

Having exhausted all his sacred flames, Cha Seongwoo's incarnation body began to slowly crumble.

"That is the very Yoo Joonghyuk I wanted to see."

Cha Seongwoo realized. With this, his role, which would never be acknowledged by anyone, had finally come to an end. As he raised his head, gray snow began to scatter in the air. Looking closely, it was not snow.

It was his story.

Slowly, his vision darkened, and pitch-black darkness descended. In the darkness, Cha Seongwoo muttered a final line from a story he loved.

「I am Yoo Joonghyuk.」

In the darkness, he heard the sound of Yoo Joonghyuk's footsteps approaching.

「He knows, too. He can never become Yoo Joonghyuk.」

Having understood Yoo Joonghyuk better than anyone, he knew exactly what was about to happen to him.

「Because he is merely a 'reader who admired Yoo Joonghyuk'.」

Yoo Joonghyuk would likely either slaughter him mercilessly or pass by indifferently, paying no attention whatsoever.

Indeed, Yoo Joonghyuk's footsteps passed him by indifferently. The moment he wore a bitter smile, the sound vanished from his ears. He wondered if he had lost his hearing as well, but strangely, his own rough breathing was still clearly audible.

And how much time had passed?

With a shiver running down his spine, Cha Seongwoo realized.

「Yoo Joonghyuk is standing stopped beside him right now.」

From the darkness, the voice of the man he had long admired was heard.

"I know you, too."

1023 Episode 62 Snowfield Kim Dokja (13)

---

For over eight years, Cha Seongwoo fought alongside a man for his sake.

Snow White.

A man known to the myth-grade constellations as the 'Master of the Erased Blank Space', and to the recorders as 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

While clearing scenarios and growing alongside him, Cha Seongwoo learned many facts about Kim Dokja that he had never known before.

The Kim Dokja he followed liked tea. He often wore a melancholic smile, and would sit blankly before intently staring at his smartphone.

It didn't seem like he was reading 'Ways of Survival', so there were times when Cha Seongwoo wanted to ask him what on earth he was looking at.

When he wasn't performing a scenario, drinking tea, or looking at his smartphone—Kim Dokja was always looking up at the sky.

With eyes that made it impossible to tell what he was searching for, he gazed endlessly at the sky again and again.

Even on a day shortly after 'Ragnarok' began, he was gazing up at the night sky alone.

Perhaps it was because the back of Kim Dokja's head looked lonely. Cha Seongwoo said something he wouldn't normally say.

「"It seems you like the night sky."」

At that, Kim Dokja glanced back, smiled, and replied.

「"In my world, the stars weren't very visible. I find myself looking up at them every time because they are fascinating."」

「"You can't see the stars? Were you trapped somewhere?"」

「"We are all trapped. It is just that the size of the prisons we are each confined in is different."」

He would occasionally mutter such pedantic words. Whenever Cha Seongwoo heard such things, he felt the urge to smack that gloomy man hard on the back of the head.

However, it was not him who struck the back of the head first that day, but Kim Dokja.

「"Why don't you leave?"」

A question that flew in out of nowhere.

Cha Seongwoo swallowed his feigned bewilderment and said.

「"Why should I leave?"」

「"You know it by now, don't you? I am not the Kim Dokja you were hoping for."」

The Kim Dokja he had hoped for.

Cha Seongwoo ruminated on those words a few times before asking back.

「"Why do you decide that?"」

「"The Kim Dokja you are looking for is my brother. He is a being chosen as the protagonist of a world from the very beginning."」

Cha Seongwoo also knew very well who the 'Kim Dokja' he was speaking of was.

Blonde hair resembling Cheon Inho. Kim Dokja, who appeared in this world with squinting eyes.

Cha Seongwoo liked that Kim Dokja, too. He wanted to see the ending with him. He wanted to turn the final page of the story he would write together.

But eight years had passed, and now he was here. Beside another Kim Dokja, who might become his enemy.

「"The way I see it, you seem like a protagonist yourself."」

Kim Dokja gave a wry smile at Cha Seongwoo's words.

「"I thought that if we started the scenarios over from the beginning, I might be able to become like my brother."」

Cha Seongwoo thought about the scenarios he had shared with Snowfield Kim Dokja.

Snowfield Kim Dokja was incredible. He had built a story that could only be described that way.

Based on the strategy information he knew, he calmly completed the scenario with his companions and saved many incarnations. Perhaps even more characters had been saved by him than the Kim Dokja of the main story had saved.

However, not all characters were like that. The choice to save the majority was sometimes heartless toward the minority.

「"Do you regret abandoning Kyung Sein and Lee Dansu?"」

「"No. As you know, I am a heartless human being."」

「"I saw you assign a mission to Kyung Sein. I also saw you take some of the 'Kim Dokja Fragments' she possessed."」

「"..."」

「"Didn't you judge that she would be in danger if she possessed a complete fragment?"」

At Cha Seongwoo's words, Kim Dokja smiled silently.

「"I am not that kind of person."」

Is this Kim Dokja good, or is he on the side of evil?

Even with Yophiel's [Eye of Sin], Cha Seongwoo could not fathom what kind of being he was. All he could see through the [Eye of Sin] was a quiet, desolate, gray ruin.

For the past eight years, Cha Seongwoo walked and walked through that ruin endlessly. He felt that if he walked to the very end of the ruin, he would be able to understand the Kim Dokja standing before him. However, no matter how much he walked and walked for eight years, the back of Kim Dokja, who walked ahead of him, did not get any closer.

Although Kim Dokja was carrying out the scenario with him, he always seemed to be living in a different story.

As if trying to deny that sensation, Cha Seongwoo spoke.

「"Every Dokja has his own life. You have done more than enough."」

The constellations in the night sky were emitting an ominous light. The forces of the stars were gathering ahead of the final scenario.

Looking at the cluster of stars shining exceptionally brightly that day, Cha Seongwoo spoke.

「"The conclusion is right around the corner."」

Kim Dokja, too, slowly nodded his head. Soon, Kim Dokja would begin his final battle. And the Kim Dokja who won that battle would become the 'Oldest Dream' of this world.

「"If I become the 'Oldest Dream', the entire universe might become unhappy."」

「"I know the dream you desire."」

「"What is it that I desire?"」

「"Happiness."」

At Cha Seongwoo's assertion, Kim Dokja's eyes wavered faintly. Cha Seongwoo deliberately averted his gaze and continued speaking.

「"I hope your dream comes true."」

Since he was not looking at Kim Dokja, Cha Seongwoo could not see his expression. A quiet night breeze brushed against the back of his hand. Just as he was thinking that the answer wouldn't come back, Kim Dokja answered in a low voice.

「"I, too, wish for your happiness."」

Was it because the shimmering starlight in the night sky was sad? Or was it because the final scenario was nearing its end? The moment Cha Seongwoo heard those words from Kim Dokja, he choked up without realizing it.

「"Kim Dokja, am I your comrade?"」

「"Then what I wished for has already been achieved."」

Kim Dokja remained silent for a long time after Cha Seongwoo's answer. Only after several stars had fallen from the sky did Kim Dokja open his mouth in a subtly sorrowful voice.

「"Is that really what you want?"」

At that moment, Cha Seongwoo did not understand why Kim Dokja had asked such a question. However, there are moments when one realizes that they have wanted to read a story all along only after finally reading it, and that there is a story that anyone can read, yet resonates only with me. A sentence born in a world I do not know, yet seems to explain me more accurately than anything else.

"I know you, too."

When Cha Seongwoo heard those words from Yoo Joonghyuk, he realized what he had truly desired.

「This was the reason his reading had to continue until now.」

The depths of his soul vibrated faintly. The sensation of the door leading to the story he had long wanted to know—a door that had been closed for so long—opening wide.

"Get up."

At that voice, Cha Seongwoo raised his head and felt his vision slowly return.

"At least do not die in a place like this."

In the dim light, Cha Seongwoo saw golden stories scattering before his eyes. The stories touching his cheeks were caressing him. A faint vitality was returning to his body.

Yoo Joonghyuk was scattering something he held in his hand over his head.

「It was a fragment of Yoo Joonghyuk's story.」

The story of the being he so desperately wanted to become, the one he wanted to resemble more than anyone else.

「He wanted to be acknowledged by Yoo Joonghyuk.」

The moment he acknowledged that fact, Cha Seongwoo felt a dizzying shiver pierce his mind.

He felt as though he knew what his ■■ was.

Perhaps sensing the change in Cha Seongwoo's entire body, Metatron, who had been observing the situation from a distance, widened his eyes.

「At that moment, the Acting President of Eden gained insight into all his reading.」

The act of reading a single story over a hundred times. A reader who wanted to understand a story better than anyone else, the history built with effort and obsession had caused a miracle.

「■■.」

From the very beginning of every story to the present. Cha Seongwoo felt that all the stories he had read were converging into a single conclusion.

「And so, the moment arrived when the reader's imagination surpassed the author.」

An ending already written, and simultaneously being written. A sentence beyond the gray, which even countless recorders had not reached. At that moment, Cha Seongwoo alone reached that sentence. Upon reading it, he sighed and despaired.

"...is it?"

The reason why all these stories had to flow this way. The reader, having realized all those secrets, had only one thing to say to Yoo Joonghyuk now.

"Run... away."

That was the last word Cha Seongwoo conveyed.

Tsutsutsutsu!

With a fierce spark, Cha Seongwoo's consciousness, which had barely returned, vanished completely.

Yoo Joonghyuk looked down at Cha Seongwoo with eyes that could not understand. He was still alive and breathing.

「He was just about to convey words that should not have been conveyed.」

Run away? It was an incomprehensible statement. Because there was no reason anywhere in this <Star Stream> for Yoo Joonghyuk to run away right now.

Rumble, rumble, rumble.

It was then that the weather in the sky changed drastically. At first, he thought the Demon Kings had summoned another insignificant Demon God. However, the sky was strangely bright for a Demon God to have appeared.

[A frag ment of the Ol dest Dream—]

It was countless stars that had dyed the sky the white night.

The constellations that had waited only for the final moment of this world, crying out for the 'Oldest Dream'.

Yoo Joonghyuk's 'Black Heaven Demon Blade' began to weep faintly. His sword was reacting to the intensity of the stars.

<Olympus>.

<The Emperor>.

<Asgard>, <Vedas>.

<Papyrus>.

Just like the final scenario of the 1,864th round, the stars filling the sky were watching him.

Yoo Sangah’s prediction was correct.

The constellations of the giant nebulae, having sensed his presence, had finally revealed themselves in 'Ragnarok'.

"I will drop you all."

The moment Yoo Joonghyuk gripped the hilt of the 'Black Heaven Demon Sword' accompanied by a chilling voice.

[A new 'Calamity' has descended upon 'Ragnarok'!]

A portal opened behind him with an ominous message.

The presence of the calamity possessed an ominous aura.

Yoo Joonghyuk instinctively drew the hilt and turned around.

"What? It works! You said only one person could go!"

At the calamity's voice that followed, Yoo Joonghyuk froze in place, clutching his half-drawn sword.

"Why are you here?"

Lee Gilyoung stood before his eyes.

[A new 'Calamity' had descended upon 'Ragnarok'!]

Then, another portal opened, and Lee Jihye, with her long hair swaying, appeared.

"Aaaah! Master! I'm here too!"

It was impossible.

Yoo Sangah had clearly said that only one person could come. But how could Lee Gilyoung and Lee Jihye descend in the scenario of the 41st round? In any case, for now, it was a win-win situation.

If there were multiple members of <Kim Dokja Company>, there was nothing to fear even if the entire 'Great Nebulae' of the 41st round turned into an enemy.

But that was not the end.

[A new 'Calamity' has descended upon 'Ragnarok'!]

[A new 'Calamity' has descended upon 'Ragnarok'!]

The air split open, and Yoo Sangah and Lee Seolhwa appeared as well. With this, all members of <Kim Dokja Company> who could currently gather were assembled in one place.

However, Yoo Sangah's expression did not look particularly happy.

"Joonghyuk-ssi, is something wrong?"

Yoo Joonghyuk, too, sensed that something ominous was happening.

The fact that they had all been summoned here as 'catastrophes' meant that the 'probability' for them to all gather here had been satisfied.

At first, he thought it was the influence of the Giant Nebulae that appeared in the scenarios. However, looking up at the sky again, he saw few mythic-grade constellations yet.

「The scales of probability are off.」

Despite the misaligned probability, no aftershocks blew around the descended <Kim Dokja Company>. There was no sign of the hounds chasing the abyss appearing either.

「That meant something existed on the opposite side of this 'scale'.」

Just as a chilling premonition brushed against his heart, Yoo Sangah spoke.

"Dokja-ssi—"

Along with Yoo Sangah's voice, Yoo Joonghyuk also suddenly realized something.

Since when had it started?

「A bright light was emanating from the tent.」

Yoo Joonghyuk and Yoo Sangah, their eyes meeting, launched themselves in unison. The sound of Ji Eunyu shouting could be heard as she followed them a moment too late. However, Ji Eunyu's voice was swallowed by the ensuing blue light.

A dazzling flash enveloped the entire ruined world. A radiance as brilliant as when Yoo Joonghyuk was summoned, or as brilliant as when the 'Radiance of Creation' of <Eden> exploded. As the blinding radiance vanished from the sky, gray snow began to fall.

"Entering."

Piercing through the swirling snow, Yoo Joonghyuk finally reached the front of the tent and reached out his hand toward the barracks. But at that very moment, someone opened the barracks.

「A man stood there with a face they remembered from a very long time ago.」

Yoo Joonghyuk, Yoo Sangah, Lee Jihye, Lee Seolhwa, and Lee Gilyoung.

「His pure white hand touched the gray snow fluttering from the sky.」

Everyone watched the scene, unable to utter a single word.

All they could do was gaze at the man, as if reading a sentence that had already been written.

The man, who had been silently looking up at the sky, slowly lowered his gaze to look at them. The faces of each person were reflected in his eyes.

[A new 'Catastrophe' has descended upon 'Ragnarok'!]

Snow White—'Snowfield Kim Dokja' has finally awakened from his slumber.

1024 Episode 62 Snowfield Kim Dokja (14)

Perhaps Yoo Sangah had been imagining this moment for a very long time.

「What should I say when I meet Kim Dokja again?」

She thought of the Kim Dokja she knew.

Since he is a somewhat timid person, he might feel awkward around the group if they meet again after a long time. Therefore, she would probably have to be the one to initiate the first greeting.

「"You idiot! You're finally here?"」

The first person to approach would likely be Han Sooyoung.

Han Sooyoung, swaggering over, would have put a headlock on Kim Dokja, who was standing there blankly, and shouted.

「"How long are you going to stand there like that? Can't you see people are waiting?"」

The next person to run would likely be Shin Yoosung.

「"Ahjussi—!"」

Kim Dokja would have collapsed helplessly before the two people rushing at him without a moment's hesitation. If it were those two, they would have instantly transformed the Kim Dokja before them into 'the Kim Dokja they knew', no matter the situation.

「But Han Sooyoung and Shin Yoosung were not here right now.」

Looking at 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' appearing before her, Yoo Sangah felt an inexplicable sense of strangeness.

It felt like a button that had been fastened incorrectly from the start had been fastened all the way.

「No reunion I had ever imagined was like this.」

Yoo Sangah opened and closed her trembling lips several times.

She had so much she wanted to say when she met him. How he had been doing, whether he had been lonely, what he had eaten, whom he had met, whether his health was okay, what he had read alone.

Just as much as they, and she—had missed him—whether he, too, had thought of them.

However, Yoo Sangah could not easily bring herself to ask any of those questions.

「It felt as though there was a massive blank space before her eyes.」

A blank space covered in an overwhelming gray. Looking at that blank space, Yoo Sangah thought of Han Sooyoung.

If you had been here, what would you have said to that Kim Dokja?

The Kim Dokja she met again still had the face she remembered, yet he wore a strangely unfamiliar expression. The moment she saw him gazing up at the distant sky, Yoo Sangah was reminded of a single tree growing in a gray snowfield.

「There was always a scent of clean wood coming from Kim Dokja.」

She couldn't tell if it was his natural body odor or the perfume he wore. However, Yoo Sangah liked that scent. She liked it even more after realizing it was Kim Dokja's fragrance.

She could immediately recognize where he had been, no matter where he was. In the office, in the break room. Wherever that scent drifted to her nose, she knew Kim Dokja had been there.

「That scent didn't emanate from the Kim Dokja right in front of me.」

Perhaps Kim Dokja had lost that scent while wandering for so long. But it is only natural for people to change. Because she, and the rest of the group, had changed.

Yoo Sangah took a light deep breath and took a step closer.

Neither Han Sooyoung nor Shin Yoosung were here. Therefore, she was the only one who could reach out to him first right now.

The moment she mustered the courage to take another step, someone grabbed her shoulder. It was Ji Eunyu.

"He is not the Kim Dokja you know."

Yoo Sangah nodded in reply.

"It is Dokja-ssi."

As she said this and looked ahead again, someone was standing in front of Kim Dokja, ahead of her.

It was Yoo Joonghyuk.

"Kim Dokja."

However, despite Yoo Joonghyuk's call, Kim Dokja did not look at him. As if he hadn't heard his voice.

"Kim—"

When Yoo Joonghyuk opened his mouth once more, Kim Dokja moved first. Kim Dokja leisurely brushed past him as if he hadn't seen him. And surprisingly, Yoo Joonghyuk could not stop Kim Dokja as he passed right beside him. As if some powerful story were binding him.

Yoo Joonghyuk simply brushed past Kim Dokja and stood frozen in place. Kim Dokja stopped only after walking ten, then twenty more steps past Yoo Joonghyuk.

There lay Cha Seongwoo, collapsed.

"So it ended up like this?"

Muttering in a quiet voice, Kim Dokja lifted the fallen Cha Seongwoo into his arms. At that, Cha Seongwoo blinked, spitting out a weak story.

"I told you to run away. I clearly told you that you would die if you stayed here."

Kim Dokja's strangely subdued tone sounded both sad and lamenting.

As he examined Cha Seongwoo's condition, Kim Dokja seemed to realize exactly what had happened.

"Did you borrow the power of <Eden>?"

From a distance in the sky, he could see Metatron, whose eyes met his, gasp in surprise. Kim Dokja turned his head away as if Metatron wasn't even worth gazing at, and spoke to Cha Seongwoo again.

"It seems even the Holy Oil won't be enough to heal you this time."

Cha Seongwoo's incarnation body, which had seemed to be recovering briefly thanks to Yoo Joonghyuk's story, was collapsing once more.

Cha Seongwoo's lips twitched as if to answer Kim Dokja. His incarnation body was so severely damaged that his mouth could not utter proper words.

Nevertheless, Kim Dokja listened to his story. He listened until he could hear the words that were unheard.

Cha Seongwoo's face was reflected in Kim Dokja's eyes.

「Cha Seongwoo is a reader, who can only exist in this world in the form of 'possession'.」

He does not know Cha Seongwoo's true face. Nevertheless, just as one reads the hidden implications in a sentence, Kim Dokja read the real Cha Seongwoo beyond the person named 'Kang Ilhoon'.

Finally, when Cha Seongwoo's lips closed, Kim Dokja answered.

"I see. You know everything now."

Cha Seongwoo nodded.

「Finally, there is only one person who knows his end.」

As if merely telling him that was enough, Cha Seongwoo said nothing more. His limp wrist was slowly breaking.

Kim Dokja looked at Cha Seongwoo and said.

"Do you have any last words?"

The moment he said that, someone rushed toward them. A claw imbued with sharp energy. Kim Dokja, holding Cha Seongwoo, lightly dodged the attack and spoke.

"Yerin-ssi."

Instead of answering, Cha Yerin swung her claw. A fierce killing intent surged from her entire body, as if she wanted to tear him to shreds and kill him on the spot. Within that killing intent lay deep resentment toward Kim Dokja.

「It's because of you.」

Kim Dokja silently accepted her gaze and nodded.

"That is correct. It is because of me."

Ahhhh— With a roar, Cha Yerin burst into tears.

「Bring Oppa back to life.」

"It is a shame, but it is impossible for me right now. So—"

Watching Cha Yerin run toward him, Kim Dokja added.

"Take revenge on me."

As if she had been waiting for this moment, Cha Yerin slammed her claws down. From a distance, Ye Hyunwoo shouted.

"Yerin-ssi! No!"

With a deafening roar, the figures of the two were engulfed in dust. Amidst the swirling, pitch-black dust, Kim Dokja's voice could be heard.

"Dan."

Cha Yerin's claws were held in Kim Dokja's sharp hand.

"Not now."

Kim Dokja tossed Cha Yerin into the air. The moment the powerless Cha Yerin regained her balance in mid-air, Kim Dokja's right hand moved, as if clearing unnecessary material from the story out of sight.

"Please disappear for a moment."

At the same time, space-time split open, and Cha Yerin's body was sucked into somewhere.

A power capable of banishing an incarnation, capable of fending off even a narrative-grade constellation, with a mere wave of the hand.

While everyone was astonished by that power, only Kim Dokja spoke to Cha Seongwoo in a calm voice.

"Don't worry. She has gone to a safe place 'outside' this context."

As if he already knew, Cha Seongwoo's head moved slightly.

Kim Dokja asked again.

"Where are you going?"

Cha Seongwoo's lips parted once more. Hearing his answer, Kim Dokja smiled with sorrowful eyes.

"No, this is not where you belong. Because you—"

His soul was sucked out of Cha Seongwoo's completely shattered incarnation body.

"It wasn't me, it was my 'comrade'."

Kim Dokja teleported his soul somewhere, as if guiding it. Cha Seongwoo's soul twinkled and hovered above his head for a moment, then vanished across the scenario, following a shooting star in the night sky.

Kim Dokja watched the spot where his soul had vanished for a moment before slowly opening his mouth.

"Well then, shall we introduce ourselves again?"

Despite Kim Dokja's bright voice, the members of <Kim Dokja Company> remained frozen, unable to say a word.

"I suppose it would be best if I greeted you first. It's been a long time, everyone. Surely you haven't forgotten me already, have you?"

The first to respond to that nonchalant tone was Lee Jihye.

"Really... is this really Dokja ahjussi?"

It was clearly the exact same face as the Kim Dokja she knew. However, Lee Jihye seemed unable to shake off a strange sense of unease.

Kim Dokja grinned at Lee Jihye and said.

"Well. What do you think? Jihye-ah."

Lee Jihye's shoulders trembled at the familiar sound of her name ringing out. The next to step forward was Lee Gilyoung.

"Hyung."

Eyes that wanted to run to him right then and there. But the boy, now a young man, instead of running, quietly observed his face from a distance.

"Right, Gilyoung-ah."

Getting courage from his answer, Lee Gilyoung spoke.

"You are my hyung, but not really my hyung."

Kim Dokja smiled.

"That's right."

Then, Kim Dokja turned his head toward Lee Seolhwa. He did not exchange a single word with her. Instead, the two looked at each other for a moment, then quietly exchanged a nod.

Lee Seolhwa looked at him with a sorrowful gaze, then took a step back with a deep sigh. And someone stepped forward the same distance she had taken back.

It was Yoo Joonghyuk.

Yoo Joonghyuk gazed at the spot where Cha Seongwoo's soul had vanished and asked.

"Where did he go?"

"He went to where his 'real Kim Dokja' is."

The real Kim Dokja. Even with the same word, the impact it carries changes depending on who says it.

At those words that burst from Kim Dokja's lips, <Kim Dokja Company> fell silent, as if speechless people. It was Yoo Joonghyuk who broke the silence once again.

"You are Kim Dokja."

A voice filled with unwavering conviction. It was a voice so powerful that even someone who wasn't Kim Dokja would have no choice but to believe they were Kim Dokja upon hearing those words.

Kim Dokja smiled bitterly and said.

"Yes. I knew you would say that."

Yoo Joonghyuk nodded.

"It is time to go back."

"Where to?"

"Home."

"Home?"

Kim Dokja repeated the word with somewhat dazed eyes.

"When you hear that word, what kind of scenery comes to mind?"

This time, even Yoo Joonghyuk couldn't find the words to answer. To begin with, answering this kind of question wasn't something he was particularly good at. That is why Yoo Joonghyuk turned to look at Yoo Sangah. The moment their eyes met, Yoo Sangah nodded and stepped forward, Kim Dokja spoke again.

"Only a vast, gray snowfield comes to mind."

It was a voice that seemed to lower the temperature of the world.

"If you have come this far, you all know, don't you? What kind of Kim Dokja I am. What stories have I gone through to get here?"

Yoo Sangah stepped forward and nodded. She was about to speak. She intended to say that she knew who he was, and that she had come this far because she knew. But the moment she was about to speak, a fundamental question settled in her mind.

「Do they really know who 'Kim Dokja' is?」

Amidst the spreading chill, Kim Dokja smiled as if he had expected it.

"I ask you, <Kim Dokja Company>."

The sound of flowing stories was heard from somewhere.

Sensing the presence of the stories, Yoo Sangah looked at Yoo Joonghyuk. Yoo Joonghyuk, too, realized something and was about to shout.

「Once a question is asked, it can never return to the time before it was asked.」

However, amidst the swirling stories that resembled a predetermined [fate], Kim Dokja finally asked that question.

"Do I even have a 'home' to return to?"

1025 Episode 62 Snowfield Kim Dokja (15)

Yoo Sangah groaned, instinctively wrapping her arms around herself against the biting cold. She felt the cold? It was impossible.

「Kim Dokja's stories were engulfing the surroundings.」

The stories of the entire area surged violently. Yoo Sangah instinctively realized that something dangerous was happening.

A raging, pure white snowstorm.

In that desolate landscape, only a single word came to mind for every being.

「Home.」

The stars in the empty sky blinked anxiously.

Lee Jihye, her eyes clouded by time, staggered and muttered.

"Dokja ahjussi, all alone like this—"

Lee Jihye and Lee Gilyoung, their lips pale, limped toward Kim Dokja. Yoo Sangah stopped the two of them.

"Jihye-ah. Gilyoung-ah."

At the same time, Yoo Joonghyuk's magnificent story began to unfold, waking the party members. Lee Gilyoung and Lee Jihye, who had come to their senses belatedly, stood beside the two in panic.

Yoo Joonghyuk protected the group while gazing at Kim Dokja calmly. Something ominous was unfolding in the sky surrounding Kim Dokja.

[All the stars of the scenario begin to dream an ancient dream!]

The stars in the night sky, intoxicated by the story, groaned from all directions. Some stars uttered unintelligible dialects, while others writhed in agony as if having a nightmare. At that moment, they looked more like Outer Gods than constellations.

Amidst the gray void that had settled, all the stars were looking at the same ■■.

「The stars all wanted to return home.」

Home. That place was where the first star was born—and where the beginning and end of this entire tragedy were decided.

[Everyone, snap out of it!]

What awakened those stars was the shout of a myth-grade constellation. Along with the strong scent of salt wafting from somewhere, the sound of crashing waves could be heard.

[The constellation, 'Spear That Draws the Boundaries of the Seas', has descended upon the scenario!]

One of the main constellations of the constellation faction. The myth-grade constellation of the <Olympus> side—Poseidon—made his appearance. Behind him, the great 12 Divine Thrones boasted by <Olympus> stood in formation as if guarding him.

Athena, the spokesperson of justice and wisdom.

Hephaestus, the blacksmith of the volcano.

Hebe, the goddess of youth.

Artemis, the hunter of pure moonlight.

Hestia, the mistress of the hearth and benevolence.

Hermes, the master of the celestial stride.

Also present was Apollo, the 'Almighty Sun', who had been born anew.

Next to <Olympus>, the constellations of <Asgard> stood in a line likewise.

Thor, the thunder of Thursday.

Freya, the goddess of love and cats.

Bragi, the god of the harp and horn.

Tyr, the one who lost an arm to the wolf of destruction.

With the mythical constellations standing as his guards, the God-King of <Asgard> finally revealed himself.

Odin, the one-eyed father.

Behind <Asgard> stood the Three Sovereigns and Five Emperors of the <Emperor> and the Lokapalas of <Vedas>.

However, the <Emperor> and <Vedas> seemed reluctant to intervene fully, appearing to observe the situation from a few steps back compared to the other nebulae.

Stepping forward in their place was <Papyrus>, which had remained silent while conserving its strength.

[Scribe of the heavens, did you attempt to complete the 'Record' behind our backs?]

Appearing to rebuke Metatron, who had been standing to one side, was the mythical constellation of <Papyrus>—'Lord of Abydos'—Osiris. Osiris possessed a colossal mummy incarnation woven from fourteen fragments.

As Osiris gestured, a river overflowed from deep underground, and schools of fish surged forth. Above the swirling schools of fish, the representative deities of <Papyrus> revealed themselves one by one.

Anubis, the Black Wolf Grim Reaper.

Geb, the Ruler of Earthquakes and Volcanoes.

Sekhmet, the Goddess of Slaughter.

Nephthys, the Goddess of Night and Funerals.

At the same time, a dazzling star radiated its brilliance behind them.

[O Arrogant Dream, the time has come to fulfill your promise.]

The mythical constellation, 'Noon Sun'— Ra.

[The starlight of the Great Nebula floods across the <Star Stream>!]

As the mythical constellations representing the 'Round Table' gathered in one place, even the Outer Gods of the Calamity faction began to writhe in agony. The aura of the distant constellations had begun to threaten even the true bodies of the Outer Gods on the other side of the dimension.

「This was the true power of the Great Nebula.」

Not all myth-grade constellations of the 'Round Table' had gathered.

<Tamra>, <Hongik>, and some other myth-grade constellations belonging to the Great Nebula did not participate.

Nevertheless, the 'myth-grade constellations' gathered here constituted an overwhelming majority, sufficient to represent the will of the Round Table.

[Master of the Erased Blank Space, it is time to hand over the 'Final Record' to us.]

Even <Kim Dokja Company>, which had already faced the stars in the final scenario, could not hide its tension this time.

At the overwhelming aura revealed by the myth-grade constellations, all the Outer Gods of the Calamity Faction squirmed like dried-up worms in a drought.

It was Kim Dokja who stepped forward as if to protect those Outer Gods.

"Yes, I certainly made such a promise."

Surprisingly, Kim Dokja was not intimidated in the slightest by the stature of the myth-grade constellations. On the contrary, as he continued to speak, the calamities that had been stuck to the ground began to regain their vitality one by one.

"But not now. The final stage hasn't opened yet."

[Your final stage is here.]

The stars in the night sky glowed as if they were about to tear Kim Dokja apart at any moment.

At this very moment, their purpose was clear.

「They came here to possess the 'Oldest Dream'.」

Yoo Joonghyuk, who had been observing the situation, spoke to Kim Dokja.

"No matter who you are, you cannot handle all of them."

Yoo Joonghyuk's words were not wrong from a common-sense perspective. On the other side were the leaders of the 'Great Nebulae', who had led their entire full power. If they were to truly manifest their 'Giant Stories', it would be difficult for even Kim Dokja to remain safe.

"Do you really think so?"

The moment Yoo Joonghyuk saw Kim Dokja's faint smile, he felt a deep sense of disorientation in his soul.

「Have I ever, even once, witnessed the power of Kim Dokja, who has become the 'Oldest Dream'?」

Come to think of it, Yoo Joonghyuk had never yet seen the true power of Kim Dokja, who had become the 'Oldest Dream'. This was because Kim Dokja had never once exercised his authority against his companions.

"Foolish stars, you cannot stop me."

With Kim Dokja's declaration, the air in the area felt thinning.

The narrative-grade constellations, their stature diminished by a mere single remark, groaned and stepped back. Despite being under the protection of the 'Great Nebulae', they felt burdened by meeting Kim Dokja's gaze.

However, the constellations had not come seeking him without preparation.

Poseidon raised his trident and unleashed a spell.

[O <Asgard>, prepare for destruction!]

At the same time, Odin of <Asgard> stepped forward.

Yoo Joonghyuk narrowed his eyes upon seeing Odin.

Perhaps due to the fierce battle with Yoo Joonghyuk, a long, lightning-patterned scar remained on Odin's exposed upper body.

As if recognizing Yoo Joonghyuk, Odin stared at him with an unreadable gaze before speaking.

[I will now begin the prophecy of the Great Destruction.]

Yoo Joonghyuk's expression hardened.

「Originally, 'Ragnarok' does not unfold in this manner.」

Yoo Joonghyuk, more than anyone else, knew the sequence in which the 'Ragnarok' scenario unfolded.

「A great wolf shall descend, and the Serpent of the World shall rise from the sea.」

「The King of Hell, freed from bondage, shall return, and the Giant of Fire shall burn everything.」

That was the order of destruction that had to unfold in 'Ragnarok'.

However, the Nebulae were now ignoring all those procedures and attempting to appropriate only a part of that prophecy.

「The King of Hell, freed from bondage, shall return.」

The One-Eyed Father, Odin, looked down at Kim Dokja.

[If you had truly become the 'Oldest Dream', this method would not have worked.]

His calm pronouncement continued, as if reciting a predetermined fate.

[No matter how great your power, you too are now merely a character in this 'scenario'.]

The moment Odin's Gungnir aimed at Kim Dokja, the record of a giant story fell upon his head.

[The Master of <Asgard> targeted the target as 'Hell' and designates him as 'King'.]

With a roar, an ominous aura began to surge through Kim Dokja's entire body. It was a shock so intense that merely standing beside him felt like it would turn one's stomach.

Lee Gilyoung, his face turning pale, muttered.

"Sangah noona, this feeling, surely—"

Yoo Sangah nodded. They had already witnessed once the overwhelming aura emanating from Kim Dokja's entire body.

「Snowfield Kim Dokja was now exuding an aura similar to that of the Kim Dokja who had become the 'Enemy of the Story' in the final scenario.」

Yoo Sangah shouted as she fully unfurled her [Lotus Platform].

"No!"

However, as if they had already anticipated the joining of <Kim Dokja Company>, the myth-grade constellations gave an order.

[Block them.]

A group of narrative-grade constellations surrounded Yoo Sangah, Lee Gilyoung, and Lee Jihye as if encircling them.

And once again, the probability of <Asgard> moved.

[Ultimately, it will be our stars that are recorded last.]

Once designated as a 'Great Cataclysm', an existence can never shake off that mark.

Furthermore, those who bear this mark cannot escape the stage of the 'Giant Story.'

「The 'Hell' of the Cataclysm Faction, the 'King' shall perish together with the 'Star of Prophecy' of the Constellation Faction.」

Along with the ensuing [Fate], a shining constellation appeared from the <Asgard> faction.

Heimdal, the Guardian of the Great Horned Legs.

He was the protagonist of <Asgard> who would execute this [Fate].

「In the original 'Ragnarok', Heimdal, the 'Star of Prophecy', will fight Loki, the 'King of Hell', and perish together.」

Gazing into Heimdal's clear eyes, Kim Dokja smiled faintly.

"You have prepared an interesting stage."

The constellations' plan was clear. They intended to realize the [Fate] of the 'Giant Story' and cause Heimdal and 'Snowfield Kim Dokja', who had become the new King of Hell, to perish together right here.

"Do you think he is on the same level as me?"

As Kim Dokja slowly rose to his feet, the stars in the area stirred greatly.

「In order to achieve a 'stage of scale', the two contenders must be of equal standing.」

However, the myth-grade constellations showed no signs of panic whatsoever, as if they had prepared for even that.

[Bring me the fragments.]

At Odin's command, the stars moved. As the portals opened, the myth-grade constellations of each nebula appeared, carrying massive 'cages'.

The moment he saw the cages, even Snowfield Kim Dokja, who had remained serene throughout, changed his expression.

"You... surely not."

A look of unmistakable rage.

Inside the cages were the 'Kim Dokja fragments' that the constellations had gathered until now.

Aaaaaaaah.

As soon as the scenario began, the little Kim Dokjas trapped in the cages burst into agonizing cries.

[Inject.]

With Odin's command, the stars' brutal hands pulled the little Kim Dokjas out. In the split second before <Kim Dokja Company> or Snowfield Kim Dokja could react, tragedy unfolded in an instant.

The moment Odin's Gungnir flashed, the little Kim Dokjas turned into mythical creatures, unable to even scream. The intermingled stories of Kim Dokja flowed into Heimdal's body under Odin's guidance.

[The constellation, 'Guardian of the Great Horned Leg', reaches a new rank!]

Amidst a tremendous storm of stories, Heimdal's incarnation body shattered. Heimdal's status, having transcended the rank granted by the power of the 'Kim Dokja Fragment', was undergoing a cataclysmic transformation.

Soon, his rank overturned even the distant landscape of the heavens.

[A new 'myth-grade constellation' has appeared in the <Star Stream>!]

Along with enchanting rays of light, Heimdal's entire body surged with the overflowing energy of the 'Oldest Dream'.

Odin opened his mouth.

[Heimdal, defeat the 'King of Hell'.]

As if responding to Odin's command, Heimdal stepped forward.

At that, the Outer Gods of the Calamity Faction, who had remained silent until now, also began to move. It was an instinctive movement to protect Kim Dokja, who had become the 'King of Hell'.

[The 'Stage' begins!]

The constellations in the sky emitted a bright light. Ahead of the confrontation between the two factions, Odin, standing at the forefront of the constellations, declared.

[Gods, let us begin the final war.]

Finally, the Twilight of the Gods—'Ragnarok'—opened its curtain.

1026 Episode 62 Snowfield Kim Dokja (16)

---

[Go—!]

The stars, aligned in formation, began to descend from the sky. As all the stars in the area fell toward the ground, a spectacular scene unfolded, appearing as if the entire night sky were pouring down.

[Giant Nebula, <Papyrus> uses the probability of 'Giant Stories'!]

[Giant Nebula, <Olympus> uses the probability of 'Giant Stories'!]

[Giant Nebula, <Asgard> uses the probability of 'Giant Stories'!]

The density of the Giant Stories flooding the scenario far exceeded what ordinary incarnations could handle.

Even though the status of all the incarnations here had risen enough to enter the 'Final Scenario', some incarnations began to gag or faint just from existing within the scenario.

"Gather everyone!"

With Ji Eunyu's command, the surviving incarnations of the Disaster Faction gathered in one place. It was the best course of action for the weak to protect themselves from the flooding of stories.

As the incarnations formed a defensive formation to gather the stories, they gained enough strength to barely catch their breath even amidst the overwhelming density of the stories.

But that was as far as it went. No one dared to fight amidst that chaotic landscape.

Asuka Ren of Japan, Jacob of North America—all the heroes of humanity—were left speechless before the raging waves of stars.

"Is this the end?"

As Kim Nakmun, the Insightor who had led the incarnations alongside Ye Hyeonwoo at Gwanghwamun, cried out in despair, the beggars and soldiers of the Beggar's Sect, who had joined forces with the Inho Group hoping for a final reversal, also knelt. Mujeong and her daughter, and Bang Cheolsu as well. Everyone simply looked up at the sky where stars were pouring down.

「Those stars were the <Star Stream>.」

The gaze that moves this world, and the very probability of the universe. No matter what calamity descends, it will be unable to stop the armies of those stars.

[The probability of the Great Nebula joins the constellation 'Guardian of the Great Horned Leg'!]

At the center of those constellations stood the protagonist of this battlefield.

Heimdal, having ascended to the rank of a myth-grade constellation, blew the trumpet of doom.

「Lar Horn.」

The sacred horn, said to resound across all nine worlds of <Asgard>, signaled the outbreak of war.

At the same time, a sword enveloped in rainbow-colored radiance emerged from within the horn.

「Guardian's Sword—Hophud.」

As Heimdal's sword, which hunts calamities, emitted light, the 'Nameless Ones' leaping from the ground vanished without even being able to scream.

It was the 'King of Hell' who parried the incoming sword strike. Taking a light breath, Kim Dokja—Snow White—radiated power and spat out a mantra.

[Block!]

With a roar, the surface of the earth shook, followed by the Outer Gods that had been crouching underground roaring and rising to their feet.

[The otherworldly deity, 'One Who Swims Beyond the End', reveals its rank!]

An Outer God reminiscent of a giant jellyfish.

[The otherworldly deity, 'One Born from the Rift of Records', reveals its rank!]

An Outer God reminiscent of a crocodile.

[The otherworldly deity, 'One Who Observes the Context of the Stars', reveals its rank!]

Finally, even a cylindrical Outer God with large eyes.

The constellations, realizing their true nature, cried out in astonishment.

[How could those calamities—]

The One Who Swims Beyond the Adversity.

The One Born from the Rift of Records.

The One Who Observes the Context of the Stars.

They were all 'Outer Gods' classified as 'Interstellar Predators'. Outer Gods, each and every one of them akin to a 'catastrophic fear'. Parasitic in the gaps between scenarios, they are like the antlions of the <Star Stream>, devouring stars that have fallen out of the 'constellations' context'.

As the constellations, witnessing them for the first time in their lives, trembled in terror and retreated, the myth-grade constellations took the lead and encouraged the stars.

[Kill them. Even so, here they are merely 'catastrophes'.]

In the past, 'catastrophic fears' were monsters that even myth-grade constellations were reluctant to face.

But today was different. Backed by the stories of the 'Great Nebulae', the stars feared no Outer Gods in the universe.

「Fear of Outer Deities is merely a story of a world without 'scenarios'.」

The constellations' hunt began.

「Under the night sky where every record is crystal clear, there is no darkness that the light of the constellations cannot illuminate.」

Under the baptism of pouring starlight, the catastrophic aliens began to let out terrifying screams.

Gaaaaaah—!

Heimdal, wearing a faint smile as if quite satisfied with the screams, quietly descended before Kim Dokja.

[Master of the Erased Blank Space, your story ends here.]

The Hophus held in his right hand emitted an intense light.

[Die with the twilight within our myth.]

A storm of starlight arose from the sword strike of Hophus. A sword strike that narrowly grazed him sliced through Kim Dokja's bodice with a slashing sound.

However, Kim Dokja showed no sign of panic whatsoever. Instead of staring at Heimdal, he glared at Odin in the void and spoke.

[Odin.]

Odin, receiving Kim Dokja's gaze from the empty air, flinched. Kim Dokja continued speaking.

[You made a mistake. If you truly wanted to kill me, you should have become the 'Star of Prophecy' yourself, not Heimdal.]

An ominous current began to surge through Kim Dokja's entire body.

[If you truly wanted to kill me—you should have challenged me with only the 'stories you yourselves built'.]

Heimdal narrowed his eyes as he watched Kim Dokja's stature expand before his eyes.

[You are too arrogant, Lord of Hell.]

Heimdal was confident. No matter how much his opponent was the 'Fragment of the Oldest Dream', they were now on this 'stage'. At least as long as this 'stage' remained, he would not be defeated by the 'King of Hell', even if they were to perish together.

「Even if he were to die here, his great achievements would remain in the final records.」

However, the 'King of Hell'—Kim Dokja—did not seem to think so.

[Ragnarok is a momentous event for you stars.]

The overseer was looking at Heimdal before him. However, what he was truly looking at was not 'Heimdal'.

[But in the long history of the <Star Stream>, it is merely 'destruction'.]

What he was staring at was the very 'Giant Story' of <Asgard> surrounding Heimdal.

[The Giant Story, 'Ragnarok' is greatly stirred!]

The Giant Story of <Asgard> was agitated in response to his gaze.

Startled, Heimdal reflexively swung his sword.

[A meager trick!]

A rainbow-colored blue surged once again from his swordplay. The sky split open, and the portal of <Asgard>—Bifrost—opened.

As the gate connecting dimensions opened, the stories of the Nine Worlds poured down from the sky like a waterfall. Heimdal’s sword strike, having fully embraced the story, fell slowly forward. As if falling forward unable to overcome the gravity of the story, Hopes split the earth just as it was. Slow but certain, a strike no one could avoid.

「It is a strike that holds the beginning and the end of <Asgard>.」

A rainbow-colored flash, reminiscent of the 'Glory of Creation' from <Eden>, obliterated everything in front of Kim Dokja.

「End of Ragnarok.」

Outer Gods, constellations, and earthly incarnations alike watched the scene, unable to take their eyes off it.

Everyone in the scenario was moved by the story of <Asgard> unfolding like a panorama.

Oh, ohhhh—!

Who could possibly receive this great story? What star could dare assert that it truly understands this story?

Even after the light faded, the constellations remained intoxicated with rapture.

「This is the end of this world.」

Even Heimdal, who had delivered that blow, could not contain his rage.

「He will be recorded as a great star in the final battle of this world.」

To be precise, that was the case until that message was heard.

[The supreme constellations of the nebula, <Emperor>, are preparing to deviate from the scenario!]

At first, he thought it was a message heard incorrectly.

[The supreme constellations of the nebula, <Veda> are preparing to deviate from the scenario!]

The moment he confirmed the following message, Heimdal suddenly looked up. Several stars in the night sky were deviating from the scenario. The stars of <Asgard>, including Odin, were still holding their ground, but for some reason, their complexions looked pale.

Why on earth?

The moment he confirmed the true nature of the catastrophe that had strode out through the radiance, Heimdal was utterly shocked.

[The calamity, 'King of Hell', gazes upon you.]

Kim Dokja, having been struck directly by the 'End of Ragnarok', appeared completely unharmed. As if the flash itself had never happened, Kim Dokja stood before him with a composed demeanor.

[How, on earth—]

It was an attack that even the beings before him, if they were myth-grade constellations of the 'Giant Nebulae', could never withstand.

[There is one absolute law for all 'Kim Dokjas' who borrow the power of the 'Oldest Dream'.]

Kim Dokja looked at Heimdal with indifferent eyes, then raised his left hand, imbued with a sublime light, and spoke.

[A 'Kim Dokja' with 'fewer fragments' cannot resist a 'Kim Dokja' with 'more fragments'.]

Kim Dokja's right hand was also covered in the same light. Subsequently, Heimdal felt his body rising into the void. Something invisible was oppressing his entire being, as if binding it. As the strength drained from his right hand, Hopus fell limply to the floor. He was completely immobilized, like a prisoner hanging from a gallows.

Following this, an unbelievable message appeared before Heimdal's eyes.

[All your stories yield before the overwhelming difference in rank.]

[What is this?]

It couldn't be. No matter how great a divine being was, they could not restrain him, who wielded the power of the 'Giant Nebulae'. Yet, such an incomprehensible event had occurred. Even stranger things happened a moment later.

Tsutsutsutsu.

The 'Kim Dokja fragments' that had been absorbed by him were raging wildly, trembling violently. Soon, shattered fragments leaked out into the air, starting from his fingertips.

[Your 'rank' is wavering precariously!]

The spilled fragments immediately began to fly toward Kim Dokja, as if pulled by a massive gravitational pull. Only after seeing the fragments being sucked into Kim Dokja's hands did Heimdal belatedly realize what had happened.

「The fragments are being stolen.」

Sensing the danger, Heimdal uttered a command with all his might.

[Strike! Kill him immediately!]

With Heimdal's signal, the portal of Bifrost opened once again. And the strategic weapons of the Nebula, scattered across the nine worlds of <Asgard>, began to gather.

「Giant Story Weapon.」

An invention of the gods capable of annihilating a world. The warships designed to hunt for super-large outer deities revealed their majesty beyond the portal.

"Kim Dokja!"

This time, Yoo Joonghyuk drew his Black Heaven Demon Blade without hesitation.

The moment the battleship's cannons, having finished charging, opened fire toward the ground.

[The story, 'Dream of the Snowfield', begins its storytelling.]

The story began.

「Ash snow began to fall from the sky amidst a landscape where time seemed to have stopped.」

In the slow flow of time, only the myth-grade constellations and <Kim Dokja Company> realized a certain truth.

「Before long, the entire landscape had turned into a snowfield.」

A chill so intense that even breathing was painful. On that cold snowfield, Yoo Joonghyuk felt an inexplicable longing.

A world that felt familiar, despite being a landscape he was clearly seeing for the first time.

Yoo Joonghyuk was certain he knew this world.

「Standing there was Kim Dokja, the one closest to the 'Oldest Dream'.」

Standing in the center of the gray snowfield, Kim Dokja looked up at the stars. The moment they received that infinitely lonely and solitary gaze, every star in the scenario trembled.

「Thus, the stars realized the reason for their existence.」

Hearing an ominous premonition, the myth-grade constellations attempted to escape. However, some irresistible force held them back. An absurdity that no one could stop was being written into a story.

「The reason they were born as 'stars' and had to illuminate this lonely universe.」

As if pouring out all the light they possessed, every star in the night sky twinkled in unison. It felt as if eons of day and night were passing in an instant.

The only being capable of explaining all the causality of the world opened their mouth.

[I.]

There stood a universe born solely to be read.

[I want to stop reading you.]

And from somewhere, the sound of a page being torn was heard.

1027 Episode 63 Ragnarok (1)

---

Every story exists to explain something. Some stories explain humans, while others explain emotions. Just as there are stories that explain concepts, there are also 'giant stories' that seek to explain the universe encompassing all worlds.

And here, right now, there is a story that explains all stories.

The story of stories, the giant story of giant stories.

Regarding that story written to speak the unspeakable, the great recorders first proposed the concept of the 'super-giant story'.

— 『On ■■』, unknown

---

To Heimdal, the constellation, 'Guardian of the Great Water Bridge'—the universe of Asgard was a world perfect in terms of storytelling.

From childhood, he was fascinated by the movement of the stars. Stars occupying their own spots in the pitch-black void, repeating their orderly rotation and revolution.

Counting the magnificent stories interwoven among those stars, Heimdal dreamed that one day he, too, would become one of those great stars.

And Heimdal had the opportunity to become such a star.

「Ragnarok, the giant story of <Asgard> and the story of its great destruction.」

The nebula, which borrowed the probability of giant stories, had to reenact 'Ragnarok' at regular intervals to stabilize them.

[You shall be the sacrifice in this generation.]

A star that inherited the name of a great constellation for generations had an obligation to fulfill the role of that story.

Heimdal of this generation, too, lived solely for that duty.

To reenact the false yearning of 'Ragnarok' and to perform the ritual of sacrifice.

Through the sacrifice of him and a few companions, the World Tree of <Asgard> would bloom once again, and the 'giant story' would maintain its lineage.

Once, resentful of his plight, he even vented his frustrations to Odin, his 'one-eyed father'.

[Why did it have to be a dwarf?]

Odin asked back.

[Heimdall, do you feel wronged by being born with that name?]

[I do not want to die.]

[You are not the only one born with that fate. Thor and Tyr, whom you envy, are the same. Even in <Olympus> and <Vedas>, there are constellations that have received the same 'fate' as you.]

[What consolation is it that there is another victim besides me?]

[For a great story to continue, a star is needed to contain it. You have become the vessel of the story. Be proud.]

[What is there to be so proud of about being born as a vessel that will eventually break?]

[Heimdall, every being in the universe eventually dies.]

Odin spoke while gazing simultaneously at the night sky of the nine realms.

[Only our stars can leave their existence in the records.]

Heimdal could not understand the desires of the mythical constellations. Why did they want to be 'recorded' so desperately?

[So, what is the point? If we die anyway—]

Instead of answering Heimdal, Odin quietly spread his left hand. Then, a giant story began to tell its story within his hand.

Some stories silence all speech merely by existing there. Heimdal stopped even his incantations and became immersed in the story.

「It was the first 'Ragnarok'.」

The story that made the current <Asgard> possible. The story of uprooting the decaying universe and rebuilding a new world. The screams of constellations dying as they clash with the armies of hell. The spark of hope finally rising at the end of the pandemonium. Destruction and rebirth—as he savored that pure story, which could only be realized through story, Heimdal felt an inexplicable ecstasy. It was a feeling evoked only by constellations capable of understanding the story.

「This is how a star reaches eternity.」

For the first time, Heimdal felt a fierce greed.

「I want it.」

But since the story had already been written, he could not truly possess it. If he were to possess that story, there was only one way.

「I want to become a part of that story.」

A star that loves a story so deeply eventually becomes a part of it.

Just as is the fate of all stars, Heimdal accepted that destiny.

「I, the Guardian of the Great Bridge, have lived for this day.」

The story of the Nine Worlds took root in his hophus, intoxicated by ecstasy.

「End of Ragnarok.」

With the story heralding the end of the apocalypse, his mission came to an end. The myth concludes, and the world, having met its end, would finally be reborn.

Surely, it had to be.

[What, what on earth is this?]

Heimdal could not believe the scene unfolding before his eyes.

[I.]

The man who had endured the final story of <Asgard> stood before him.

Such a thing could not have happened. The 'King of Hell' who had faced this story should have surely perished along with him. But the 'King of Hell' did not die.

That meant only one fact.

「A story surpassing the great story 'Ragnarok' was dominating this scenario.」

But such a story could not possibly exist. There was no way a 'story' greater than the painful creation story of Asgard could exist—

[I want to stop reading you.]

The moment the man uttered that incantation, an anomaly occurred in the <Star Stream>. Whether it was an anomaly or some form that was impossible to even identify, the man's incantation quietly penetrated every star in the sky.

Following this, the sound of something tearing apart was heard from the high heavens. It was not merely the sound of 'space-time' collapsing.

「It was a sound that seemed to prove just how fragile the world they had lived in was.」

Just hearing it gave him a headache. His stomach churned. All his senses were fiercely warning him.

「You must not be here right now.」

As if receiving the same premonition, the other constellations were in a strange state as well. Some were scratching their bodies vigorously, while others looked around anxiously.

Constellations that met each other's eyes trembled violently.

「The sight of a terrified constellation was there.」

As one star let out a spine-chilling scream, the star next to it screamed as well.

「The stars shrieked like mere incarnations trapped in a subway car.」

The screams spread like a story. Some stars soared into the sky, while others sank into the earth.

But no matter where they moved, there was nowhere for them to escape. Because they were inside this 'story'—

「Now that 'story' was about to collapse.」

Heimdal saw the sky split open before his eyes. Some unknown, unprecedented force was tearing out the entire 'page' in which they existed.

He could not understand how such a thing was possible. Unable to overcome their terror, the stars finally spat out their stories.

「It cannot be written.」

The heads of the great-star constellations, unable to comprehend the scene before them, exploded. The stars, clinging to one another with nowhere to go, wailed.

「It cannot be read.」

No, it was not they who were wailing.

「HowcanIllivelikethisHowcanIllivelikethisHowcanIllivelikethisHowcanIllivelikethisHowcanIllivelikethisHowcanIllivelikethis」

Their stories were wailing.

「Idon'twanttobeerasedIdon'twanttobeerasedIdon'twanttobeerasedIdon'twanttobeerasedIdon'twanttobeerasedIdon'twanttobeerased」

The 'stage' was collapsing. The giant story of the great <Asgard> was being shattered.

Before he could even comprehend how such a thing was possible, Heimdal felt the world, including his incarnation body, being torn apart in its entirety.

[No—]

And those were the last words Heimdal left behind. The torn world was compressed whole and sucked into a small rift, and from within that rift, a sound like an inanimate object chewing and swallowing food could be heard. And then.

[The Star Stream restores the probability of this scenario!]

The world was sealed shut in an instant. The torn space and the rift vanished in a flash. As if nothing had happened, completely nonchalantly. Only the sparks of the reach raging violently in the void proved that an unbelievable miracle had just occurred in this world.

The recorders who had witnessed the scene from beginning to end amidst that spark were the first to regain their senses. Some, unable to overcome their terror, fell into a state of [recording interruption], while others, having attained a profound realization, leaped over the landscape.

Although no recorder grasped the true meaning of the scene, one courageous recorder nevertheless managed to record the outcome.

「And exactly half of the stars in the night sky vanished.」

As soon as that record was written, the stars' time, which had momentarily stopped, began to flow again.

[Ugh, ugh, aaaaaaah—!]

Unable to withstand the shock, the constellations let out vivid screams.

「The stars' 'stories' were torn apart in their entirety.」

Gasping for breath, the constellations shed tears of emotion as they sensed their remaining stories.

The joy of not yet being excluded from this world. The ecstasy of still remaining within this story. And the fear creeping in from the edge of that sense of relief.

「A death that leaves no record.」

The stars could not even remember the names of their vanished comrades. Only the deep, sinister void—the very presence of something—proved their absence.

Some mythical constellations, contextually recognizing the spot of that distant absence, hurriedly departed, but most of the constellations remaining here could not even muster the courage to flee.

Staring into the void, the stars went mad or fell into despair. They screamed in terror, and the stars' fear became a story. The bees willingly chose to be dominated by that story.

[Oldest One.]

Now, only easy submission remained for them.

[Oldest Dream!]

[I greet the Oldest Dream!]

Submission soon followed in a string like a testimony.

[A lowly star greets the 'Oldest Dream'!]

[Oooooo—!]

The sky of the <Star Stream> was lowering itself. It was paying homage to the star hanging in a position lower than any other.

[All the stars in this scenario gaze at a single Kim Dokja.]

Kim Dokja looked at those stars with indifferent eyes, then soon lowered his gaze.

There stood the incarnations who had luckily survived this scenario.

Kim Dokja smiled as he watched the incarnations bow their heads as if prostrating themselves.

「No incarnation dared to meet his eyes.」

Perhaps he had not used this power until now because he did not want to witness such a scene.

It was because he knew better than anyone that using this power would ruin the entire story.

A terrible loneliness ran down his spine. It was a feeling that only one person in this world could understand.

「No, maybe there was one more person.」

Where Kim Dokja slowly turned his gaze, there stood an incarnation that did not avoid his eyes. He was an incarnation that avoided no gaze whatsoever.

「There stood Kim Dokja's incarnation.」

He was a being born into this world by receiving the Holy Order of the 'Oldest Dream'.

"Kim Dokja."

As Yoo Joonghyuk called out the star's name, the star nodded in response.

The two faced each other for a moment. The night sky, with half the stars gone, twinkled ominously.

"That is as far as it goes."

Yoo Joonghyuk stood in front of Kim Dokja once again. Kim Dokja shook his head as Yoo Joonghyuk showed him the 'Black Heaven Demon Blade' held in his hand.

"You cannot stop me. You should know that clearly by now."

The power of the Oldest Dream.

Simply using it excludes every 'character' in this world from the story.

"I can stop you."

Kim Dokja smiled bitterly as he watched Yoo Joonghyuk, who still refused to yield.

"If I stop 'reading', then no matter who you are—"

"Try it."

"Yes?"

"Stop reading."

Yoo Joonghyuk continued to lash out as if he were ready at any moment.

"I know. Even if all the stars in the world stop 'reading'—"

The blade of the Black Heaven Demonic Blade was imbued with the chilling power of the Heaven-Shattering Qi.

"You, at least, cannot completely stop reading."

Kim Dokja's eyes wavered. Indeed, Yoo Joonghyuk's words pierced the very essence of the 'Oldest Dream'.

If this 'Universe' exists to be read, then the 'Oldest Dream' also exists to read.

And the protagonist, who had been read by the 'Oldest Dream' longer than anyone else, was right here.

"Very well. If you are so confident, go ahead and test it."

Kim Dokja spoke as he watched the protagonist finally reach the pinnacle of the <Star Stream>.

"Whether it will be sooner for me to 'stop reading' you, or for your sword to 'cut me'."

As if no further answer was needed, Yoo Joonghyuk's sword moved. The voices of Yoo Sangah and Lee Gilyoung, and the shout of Lee Jihye, could be heard.

The next moment, everything in the area was plunged into pitch-black darkness, just like a story that could no longer be read.

1028 Episode 63 Ragnarok (2)

I blinked my eyes again. Then, the record flashed before my eyes once more.

「And finally, another Kim Dokja opened his eyes in the darkness.」

It felt like I had had a short, terrible dream. The sensation of rising from a pile of pure white ashes. Fortunately, the condition of my incarnation was not bad.

Looking around, my situation came into view at a glance.

「I was still trapped inside the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's relic, the 'Yangjiokjeongbyeong'.」

I retraced my memories.

The fight to reclaim the third Kim Dokja. The Nameless Mist and the myth-grade constellations. The Great Sage Heaven's Equal, who chose to seal me to protect me, and me, trapped in his relic and being swept away.

And…

[The clone of the constellation, 'Oldest Liberator', is running out of strength.]

I saw a single strand of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal's hair, which I had been holding in my hand, scatter in a messy mess. It seemed as though my hair had lost its vitality from conveying memories.

「I glimpsed the memories of 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' through the story of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal.」

Why Snowfield Kim Dokja started the scenario, and why I came to this world. I couldn't understand everything clearly, but I could at least confirm a vague outline.

Above all, the greatest gain was learning the past history between him and Cheon Inho.

「Snowfield Kim Dokja and Cheon Inho were much closer father and son than I had imagined. At least for a time.」

Looking at that scene, I thought. What if Snowfield Kim Dokja hadn't known the story of the outside world?

「What if he hadn't known about the 49% and 51% events?」

If that were the case, could he have lived peacefully with Cheon Inho forever within the snowfield?

[The story, 'Companion of the Snowfield' has been discovered.]

Companion of the Snowfield—this must be Cheon Inho's story. As I was examining that story for a moment, a message echoed in my head.

—No, what do you mean by waking up now? Do you know how long I spent waking you up?

It was the voice of the Demon King of Salvation.

I smiled awkwardly and asked back.

"How long did I sleep?"

—About a week.

My heart sank. It felt like I had only fallen asleep for a moment, but a whole week had already passed? The faces of the people I needed to look after belatedly flashed through my mind. What had become of Yoo Joonghyuk or Jung Heewon, who had escaped with me?

I hurriedly looked around inside the 'Yangjiokjeongbyeong' and saw the little clones of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal sprawled on the floor, having reverted back to hair. It certainly seemed that a lot of time had passed.

—There were a lot of guys looking for you.

I quickly checked the backlog of messages. The first one I checked was Yoo Joonghyuk's.

—Kim Dokja. ■ ■ ■ ■ ■ ■ well ■ ■ ■ ■ ■ ■ ■ ■ ■ joined ■■■■■■.

It was a message sent via 'Midday Tryst'. Perhaps because I was wandering the outskirts of the scenario within the 'Yangjiokjeongbyeong', the message was not received properly.

Still, roughly interpreting it, it seems to mean that he is fine and will join soon.

Since Jung Heewon will be with Yoo Joonghyuk, there shouldn't be much need to worry.

In addition, I saw invitation messages sent by various constellations, including Dionysus.

[Some 'Constellation Factions' invite you!]

[Constellation Faction, 'Olympus', invites you.]

[Constellation Faction, 'Veda', invites you.]

Some nebulae had noticed that I was returning to the 'Ragnarok' scenario and had sent invitation messages to recruit me into their factions.

It wasn't strange. After all, the constellations had swarmed in to rush my recruitment even when I had just finished the preliminary battle.

「[That is, if you don't want to become like the other 'Kim Dokja'.]」

Suddenly, I remembered what Bakarine had said back then. Will the other Dokjas be okay? Even as I thought they would surely be fine, I couldn't shake off the strange anxiety that was welling up inside me.

What happened to Kim Anna?

I had given Kim Anna a separate ticket for the 'Disaster Side'. If my predictions were correct, Kim Anna would have become a key figure in the Disaster faction by now.

As I recalled my colleagues' faces one by one and checked the invitation messages, one message in particular caught my eye. It wasn't an 'invitation message' from a specific faction.

[Someone is calling you from the 'Archives'.]

Archives.

Hearing that name for the first time in a while brought many memories to my head.

Come to think of it, I hadn't used the 'Archives' much since becoming a 'Recorder of Fear'.

"When did this message arrive?"

—Three days ago.

Three days ago is already quite a bit of time. The person who sent the call from these 'Archives' must have already left. However, the 'Demon King of Salvation' seemed to have a slightly different idea.

—Still, wouldn't it be better to check? It might be a pretty good time to gather information at this point.

Come to think of it, I don't really know how the main stage of 'Ragnarok' is heading right now.

Judging by what the first one said, while I was staying in this 'Yangjiokjeongbyeong', the Kim Dokjas inside the [Fourth Wall] hadn't really heard or seen any other stories either.

[1 hour and 54 minutes remaining until re-entering the scenario area.]

Judging by the scenario message in the void, there is still some time left before re-entering 'Ragnarok'.

"Then I'll be right back."

Whether the caller from the archives was still there or not, it was well worth the visit. Even if I couldn't meet the caller, I could still get information from other recorders.

—Right. Call us if anything happens.

Although he said that, the Demon King of Salvation didn't seem particularly worried. After all, at this point, beings that could pose a threat to me are extremely rare.

A faint noise could be heard from inside the [Fourth Wall], as if the Kim Dokjas were holding a strategy meeting among themselves. Since they were about to enter the final scenario, it seemed there was much to discuss.

"I accept the invitation from the Archives."

[You agree to the call from the 'Archives'.]

As soon as I answered, the surrounding scenery changed, and I felt my soul connecting to somewhere.

It had been a long time since I had entered Bicheonhori's Archives.

Who could have summoned me?

It could be Bicheonhori himself, or it could be Asmodeus.

Or it could be the 'Unchanging One' whom I had taken in as a subordinate recorder. Or perhaps it was 'Moraleok' whom I had encountered at the Archives sometime ago.

It could have been a trap, or a message requesting cooperation.

In truth, I felt that it didn't matter which it was. I don't know why, but that was the case. Perhaps it was the confidence gained from gathering three Kim Dokjas.

「After gathering three Kim Dokjas, something inside me changed.」

That was the only explanation I could offer at the moment.

From the moment the Demon King of Salvation, the Great King of Fear, and the Prisoner of the Golden Cage entered my [Fourth Wall], I became something different.

[You have entered the 'Archives'!]

The 'Archives', which I had entered for the first time in a long while, was quite different from the scenery I remembered.

The 'rooms' where recorders used to gather to revise [Fate] were nowhere to be seen.

Instead, what unfolded before my eyes was a massive library.

「A library that gives me a strange sense of déjà vu, as if I have seen it somewhere before.」

I slowly approached the bookshelf and pulled out a book. As soon as I opened it, someone's dialogue burst out.

「(If the 'scenarios' hadn't started, what would have happened to us?)」

I paused and silently followed along with the dialogue.

「(Would we still be working at the same company?)」

I knew exactly whose dialogue it was and in which passage it appeared. Examining the book's cover, I saw the title I had expected.

『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint Chapter 371_3rd Proofreading』

Main Story Chapter 371.

This passage depicted the scene where Yoo Sangah, on the verge of reincarnation, shared her final conversation with Kim Dokja inside the [Fourth Wall].

Perhaps it was because it had been a long time since I had read a manuscript.

I kept turning the pages as if under a spell.

「(I must have always wondered about you, Dokja-ssi. Are you doing well? Are you sick anywhere?)」

Yoo Sangah asked, and Kim Dokja answered. The two talked in a space strictly for the two of them.

「(See? I told you they would definitely have become close.)」

「'…Did they?'」

They talked about impossible dreams, and about a future that might have been possible in another universe.

「(Of course. Studying Spanish together, joining the cycling club and riding bikes together.)」

My heart ached the entire time I was reading that conversation.

「'We might have lived near each other.'」

For every reader, 're-reading' meant facing one's past self.

Although I was clearly reading the story of Kim Dokja and Yoo Sangah right now—

「(Of course. Maybe we lived right next door.)」

At the same time, I was thinking of the me who wrote that story long ago—the person who used to read the story I had worked so hard to write.

「I, too, had someone like Yoo Sangah.」

At that moment, a single white finger appeared over the proofs.

"Ah, a parenthesis is missing here. Argh, I checked it so carefully!"

The moment I heard her voice, I turned to look beside me in delight. Standing there was the person I had longed for for so long.

"Editor-nim!"

It was Ji Eunyu.

"I should be called 'Cloud Mountain' here."

The moment I saw Ji Eunyu reply so nonchalantly, I could not suppress my joy. Only then did I realize who had summoned me to these 'Archives'.

"Surely not Editor-nim—"

"That's right. I called you. You were arriving so late that I was thinking of leaving, but here we are. I'm glad I waited."

To my surprise, Ji Eunyu did not look like Min Jiwon. She looked exactly like the 'Ji Eunyu' I remembered from long ago.

Short bob hair. The white cotton T-shirt and long jeans she usually wore.

With her hands clasped behind her back, Ji Eunyu turned toward the bookshelf and spoke.

"This is my 'archive'."

Ji Eunyu's archive?

"I learned how to make one from Bicheonhori."

Was it possible to apply that in this way? I followed her, marveling anew.

"Then all the manuscripts here are..."

"They are manuscripts you know well, too, Author-nim."

The manuscripts occupying this bookshelf were all countless proofs of 「Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint」.

From the first draft to the fourth. Live serialization version and the second version, paperback version and hardcover version…

In one corner, a bookshelf containing only discarded manuscripts was also visible.

「This library was the 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint' that Ji Eunyu remembers.」

Hiding the emotions welling up inside me, I approached Ji Eunyu.

Ji Eunyu had taken a book from the bookshelf and was reading it.

"It was really tough back then. Do you remember?"

I nodded as I read the passage Ji Eunyu pointed to. It happened to be the part where Kim Dokja dies.

"Ah, that's right. I suddenly got sick and was hospitalized while writing this part..."

"You remember! You know how hard it was for me to take care of you back then."

"You mean the time you came all the way to the hospital to pressure me for the deadline?"

Ji Eunyu continued to chatter away, with the face I knew so well.

"Do you remember this part? You cried after writing this, didn't you? Saying you felt like you wrote it completely wrong."

Once again, it was the part where Kim Dokja dies. Thinking to myself, "Have I killed this guy off too often?" I replied.

"I never cried."

"Wow, you're denying it now."

We giggled as we shared stories not written in the manuscript. It didn't feel real. That all that time had passed. That the stories we had written and revised had become dozens of books.

「The history of our lives was there.」

After finishing one volume, we walked to another bookshelf. Was rereading a story with a written ending always this enjoyable? I wanted to read other scenes together right away. I wanted to chat. Before all these stories vanished. I wanted to talk a little more while this blank space allowed us.

But.

"Author-nim."

The moment I saw Ji Eunyu stop abruptly, I realized that this joy had come to an end.

"So much has happened, hasn't it?"

Before I could even fully nod, Ji Eunyu stood on tiptoe, pulled a book from the shelf, and handed it to me. I thought it might be the part where Kim Dokja dies again, but the title of the book seemed a bit strange.

『Killer King— Cha Seongwoo』

I stared down at the book for a long time, unable to say a word. For some reason, the hand holding the book was trembling.

「This was not the story of Kim Dokja that I had written.」

It felt as though if I opened this book and read it, everything would become irreversible.

When I looked up, Ji Eunyu was looking at me.

"I'm sorry, Author-nim."

I couldn't ask what she was sorry for. Perhaps I didn't want to know. I didn't want to open this book. Even so.

「I must confirm the death of Kim Dokja that I did not write.」

I opened the book.

1029 Episode 63 Ragnarok (3)

---

I began reading the story of Killer King—Cha Seongwoo. I read it sentence by sentence, like someone trying to swallow every single sentence contained in the book without missing a single one.

「Cha Seongwoo read that story over and over again for a very long time.」

The Cha Seongwoo inside the book was reading a story I knew well.

「"Okay, this is the 30th one."」

What kind of expression did Kim Dokja make when reading a sad story? Since he was the kind of guy who liked sad stories the most, did he read even that with a smile?

「"Now the 50th one."」

As I read his story, I didn't know what expression to make. Even though I knew that if I finished reading this story, I would become the most miserable person in the world, I simply couldn't stop reading.

Just as I read him, the Cha Seongwoo inside the book also read the novel.

Returning to previous pages again and again like a time traveler in front of scenes he liked. Or adding footnotes as he pleased.

「"Hmm, so this is what it meant."」

A person's reading contains their worldview. Just by knowing what kind of stories they like, we can learn a great deal about them.

In that sense, Cha Seongwoo was a very meticulous person. He did not simply gloss over stories just because he already knew them. The more familiar a scene was, and the more times he had read it, the more diligently and slowly he read it.

Just like Kim Dokja who read 'Ways of Survival'.

「"I am Yoo Joonghyuk."」

Watching Cha Seongwoo unconsciously repeat his favorite lines over and over, and seeing his page-turning speed slow down the more he read, I, too, was afraid to turn the page.

「"Is this finally the 99th one?"」

I was afraid to see the end of the story. But just as Cha Seongwoo did in the story, I, too, read his story. I had to read it.

「"I finished reading."」

Solely reading. Reading with all one's might and recreating the story in one's mind. Because that is the job of a reader.

"Ah."

Finally, with the 99th reading, Cha Seongwoo's reading came to an end. And that was the entirety of the story of Cha Seongwoo that now rested in my hands.

This single book was a record of Cha Seongwoo reading the story he loved from beginning to end.

Tsutsu.

The moment I closed the book, stories settled into my fingertips with a faint spark. An infinitely warm, persistent, and cozy sensation.

"This."

The moment my hand touched stories, a scene unfolded in my mind.

Cha Seongwoo collapsing, and 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' gazing at his soul.

I got goosebumps.

「Snowfield will absorb Cha Seongwoo.」

'Snowfield Kim Dokja' is a being who lives to become 'the one and only Kim Dokja.'

For the sake of his own purpose, he would never simply abandon the soul of Cha Seongwoo, who was dying before his very eyes.

「"No, this is not where you belong. Because you..."」

However, Snowfield within the landscape let Cha Seongwoo go with those words.

「"It wasn't me, but my 'comrade', wasn't it?"」

While restarting the scenario and retracing all the history that Kim Dokja had lived through, Cha Seongwoo was always by Snowfield's side.

「To Snowfield, Cha Seongwoo was truly a 'comrade'.」

Cha Seongwoo cleared the scenarios together with him and fought against the constellations.

Perhaps that is why Snowfield could never fully absorb Cha Seongwoo as 'Kim Dokja'. Because the Cha Seongwoo he remembered—perhaps not the image of the 'Kim Dokja' he wanted to unite into one.

I was somewhat surprised by Snowfield's human side, yet at the same time, I felt pity.

「Before my eyes stood the soul of Cha Seongwoo, in the form of a young Kim Dokja.」

Only after confirming the entire landscape did I understand how Cha Seongwoo's soul had come to this place.

Perhaps Ji Eunyu led Cha Seongwoo’s soul to her 'archive' and delivered it to me here.

As I placed my hand upon Cha Seongwoo’s soul, which took the form of a small baby, it felt as though I could hear his voice.

「"Kim Dokja."」

Even though it is the same name, the temperature of the voice can be so different depending on who calls it.

I thought of the man who loved this story more than anyone, the man who had read the single story a hundred times. Then, I felt the man's soul slowly seeping into me.

[Exclusive Skill, 'Fourth Wall', activated!]

Cha Seongwoo's soul flowed into the wall in an instant.

[A massive amount of 'Loss' has been collected.]

[The 'Loss' you collected will be recorded on the Final Wall.]

With that, I felt as though something very important within me had been completed.

As if knowing it would eventually turn out this way, the story within me began to stir.

[The story, 'Heir to the Eternal Name', gazes at you.]

Kyung Sein, Dansu ahjussi, Cha Seongwoo—in the end, I made it this far while losing all my comrades.

Will I truly be able to say that I am a 'Kim Dokja' better than any other 'Kim Dokja' at the end of this world?

"Editor-nim."

I called out to Ji Eunyu. There were many things I wanted to ask. But above all, there was something I had to ask first. It was because of the scenery I had seen earlier.

The final encounter between Cha Seongwoo and 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

It was a fleeting scene, but I clearly saw the people standing in the background of that landscape.

「Yoo Joonghyuk and <Kim Dokja Company> were definitely there.」

My heart pounded.

"Did you happen to meet <Kim Dokja Company>?"

Ji Eunyu slowly nodded.

"Yes, I met them."

The moment I saw her expression, a flood of mixed emotions washed over me.

「Finally, <Kim Dokja Company> has descended upon the 41st round.」

But at the same time, a question arose. Why did they, who had remained silent all this time, have to choose to come here of all places?

"Because I summoned them."

A belated sigh escaped my lips.

Ji Eunyu continued speaking.

"Summoning them was the last resort I had in mind. Snowfield Kim Dokja had become too strong, and I felt that borrowing the power of any other group wouldn't be able to stop him."

I nodded. Snowfield Kim Dokja must have obtained just as many 'Kim Dokja Fragments' as I do now. Moreover, having lived as 'Kim Dokja' for much longer than I have, his 'dream control' must be at an unimaginable level.

"I thought they would be able to stop him."

Ji Eunyu's judgment was not wrong.

In fact, the <Kim Dokja Company> of the 1,864th round was the strongest force across the <Star Stream> of all worldlines. Even for 'Snowfield Kim Dokja', it wouldn't have been easy to face that <Kim Dokja Company>.

"It was a gamble that could only be attempted right before the conclusion."

I nodded in agreement.

Unlike in the 'Missing Thicket', the probability of <Kim Dokja Company>'s arrival would have been resolved to some extent in 'Ragnarok'.

However, there was one thing that bothered me.

Snowfield Kim Dokja had attempted to summon <Kim Dokja Company> using his fragment in the world where the 'Third Kim Dokja' existed, and had tried to recreate the 'Big House' in that world.

That plan failed because of me and Yoo Joonghyuk, but the words left by the fragment of Snowfield at the very last moment still lingered in my mind.

「"My main body knew that <Kim Dokja Company> would not come here."」

"So, what happened?"

I had a strangely ominous premonition.

What if all of this was part of 'Snowfield Kim Dokja's' plan? What if his real plan from the very beginning was to bring <Kim Dokja Company> down to 'Ragnarok'?

Trying to suppress the anxiety swirling in my head, I recalled the <Kim Dokja Company> I knew. I thought of Yoo Joonghyuk, stronger than anyone in this world, and the wise Yoo Sangah. I thought of Lee Jihye, unrivaled at sea; Lee Gilyoung, the contractor of the Demon God; and Lee Seolhwa, who always revives every comrade.

Surely, they would have safely subdued 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'. If even they couldn't do it, it was a task no one else could have accomplished.

Ji Eunyu still did not answer.

"Editor-nim?"

I wonder when it started. Ji Eunyu's presence had faded slightly. In that instant, I realized something.

「I'm sorry, Author-nim. <Kim Dokja Company> is…」

I grabbed Ji Eunyu's wrist.

"Editor-nim."

My mind was spinning.

「Why did Ji Eunyu have to wait for me here for three days?」

"You don't have to say anything. Don't say any more."

I could see the wrist I was holding gradually fading. Her soul, story, was disappearing.

「No matter who Ji Eunyu is, there is no way she could have summoned <Kim Dokja Company> without any price.」

I wanted to erase the record being written in my mind. I didn't want to admit that fact.

I held onto Ji Eunyu, injecting stories with all my might. Ji Eunyu looked at me quietly, then smiled faintly.

"I'm fine, Author-nim. This story has reincarnation and resurrection, you know."

"…"

"Every time Kim Dokja kept dying, I wondered if it was okay, but now I'm glad this is that kind of story."

"Editor-nim."

I knew what Ji Eunyu was trying to say. Perhaps that is how many stories we had shared. Or perhaps I thought we had shared them.

However, despite having shared so much, I felt that I still knew absolutely nothing about the person named Ji Eunyu.

"You said it, didn't you? That you didn't write this story. That you merely transcribed what Han Sooyoung wrote."

The sensation in the wrist I was holding gradually faded. Ji Eunyu continued speaking.

"I don't think so. Even if that were true, you are the one who wrote this story to me. So, Author-nim."

I wanted to say anything to her as she disappeared. But once again, I couldn't find the right words. That is why the one who filled the last blank space given to me was always the person who read this story for the first time.

"I hope Kim Dokja survives this time, too."

Ji Eunyu's figure scattered like magic. Following her, the books she had collected began to vanish. The 'Archives' were disappearing. The records she had gathered, all of time, were vanishing and scattering away.

I couldn't believe it. It was none other than Ji Eunyu. The person who understood this story just as well as I did.

"Editor-nim."

I called out to her in vain.

"Ji Eunyu-ssi!"

I called again. No answer came back. Only then did the reality of what had happened begin to sink in.

「I must now complete the story without her.」

With the sensation of the connection being severed, I found myself back in the 'Yangjiokjeongbyeong' before I knew it.

「Unlike Cha Seongwoo, Ji Eunyu's soul did not dwell within me.」

I did not know whether to rejoice or grieve at that fact. Where had Ji Eunyu's soul gone? Was she really dead?

<Kim Dokja Company> truly, to 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'...

[Entering the scenario area soon.]

[The 'Scenario Grade' of this scenario area has been upgraded.]

[The <Star Stream> evaluates your 'Rank'.]

With my mind in turmoil, a scenario message appeared before my eyes.

[You possess sufficient 'Rank' to enter this scenario.]

[Entering Main Scenario #98 — 'Ragnarok'.]

In the end, to uncover the whole truth, I must return to the scenario once again.

1030 Episode 63. Ragnarok (4)

---

[You have re-entered the Main Scenario!]

With a slight dizziness, I arrived in the scenario area, and a desolate land unfolded before my eyes.

「Is this really the main battlefield of 'Ragnarok'?」

I wondered if something had gone wrong and looked around several times. But no matter how much I looked, the only thing that caught my eye was the 'Yangji Jade Vase' I had ridden here.

[The star relic 'Yangji Jade Vase' has completed its task.]

The 'Yangji Jade Vase' shrank again after spitting me out. I picked up the star relic of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal and strapped it to my waist. I wondered if I would have a chance to return it someday. I hoped so.

Tsssss.

It was then that a light spark ran through my body.

[The 'Loss' that your incarnation body can acquire is close to its limit!]

It was a message I had never seen before in my life. The limit of acquired 'Loss'. Did it mean I could no longer absorb 'Kim Dokja fragments'?

Frowning slightly, I stared into the air, wondering what it was, when a welcome message arrived.

[The story 'Successor of the Eternal Name' makes a displeased expression.]

Thinking that maybe this guy would know the answer, I readily spoke to it.

"Hey, do you know what that means?"

[The story 'Successor of the Eternal Name' pouts.]

I guess it didn't want to answer. I asked another question.

"Is there anything else you feel? Do you know where this is?"

Actually, it was strange. If this place was really the 'main battlefield' of 'Ragnarok', and if 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' was here, the Successor would have definitely reacted strongly. But it didn't show any particular reaction. Fluttering for a moment as if thinking, it sent a message.

[The story 'Successor of the Eternal Name' tells you to keep walking forward for now.]

Since it didn't seem like it would give me advice that would harm me in the current situation, I followed its advice and started walking.

Walking through the quiet ruins covered in sparse gray fog, I thought of the people I liked and the people who might be waiting for me. And I thought of my readers who would be reading this story beyond [The Fourth Wall].

Now the end of the story was approaching.

[The exclusive skill 'The Fourth Wall' shakes faintly.]

Would I be able to write the conclusion of this world safely on my own? And could that conclusion really be the ■■ that all Kim Dokjas wanted? As if in response to my question, the 'Yangji Jade Vase' at my waist trembled.

I stopped in my tracks after walking for a while because of a sign visible in the distance. A strange sense of déjà vu crossed my mind.

「There was a ticket booth there.」

Memories came back one after another. I had already been here once with Jung Heewon. This ticket booth... there was no doubt about it.

「The ticket booth for the 'Preliminary Battle'.」

As I approached the ticket booth, I saw corpses scattered in the fog. From lower-grade warriors to upper-grade warriors. The bodies of warriors who died, regardless of whether they were incarnations or constellations, were there. Even the ticket booth clerk was dead. It was the very clerk who had used [Cool-headed Observation] on me and rated me as a 'lower-intermediate warrior'.

「"A war. You guys don't really know what 'Ragnarok' is."」

The words he left me were still clear in my ears.

「"If you really start something like that, everyone dies. Well, even if it doesn't start, unlucky guys will die anyway."」

The moment I checked his lifeless eyes, I knew. Perhaps in this scenario, 'the thing where everyone dies if it starts' had happened.

Behind the ticket booth, the ruins of the broken colosseum—'Valhalla Hall'—were visible.

[Your story reacts to the stage!]

The events that had occurred in Valhalla Hall flashed quickly through my head. Meeting Anna Croft with Jung Heewon. Winning the Preliminary Battle, and meeting Mitra and the gang from the 'Golden Dice Hall' also came to mind.

「[Thank you, successor.]」

The face of Samyeongdaesa, who sacrificed himself on behalf of my companions and me at the last moment, also came to mind.

Come to think of it, what happened to the 'super-large battlefield' after I left? My companions and I had escaped the battlefield through the 'Bush of the Missing', but the other participants...

[A new sub scenario has arrived!]

It was then that a message arrived.

[You are a 'Returnee'.]

[Currently, a suitable sub scenario has been allocated to you.]

Returnee Scenario. It seemed that the scenario system of the <Star Stream>, which had been suspended for a while, had regained its function.

Let's see. Originally, a 'Returnee Scenario' should be 'Returning Home in Glory'...

[Main Scenario #45 - Return (還鄕)]

Category: Main

Difficulty: ???

Clear Conditions: You are a 'Returnee' who has returned to the scenario ahead of the worst destruction. Enter the 'Hall'. Then join one of the King's forces to prepare for the upcoming destruction of the <Star Stream>. The end of this world is already determined. Do not try to learn the truth. Do not hold any hope.

Time Limit: 24 hours

Reward: -

Failure: Death

* There is an associated 'Hidden Scenario' for this scenario.

The contents of the scenario were simple. Join one of the King's forces. What was ominous was the message written after it.

「The end of this world is already determined. Do not try to learn the truth. Do not hold any hope.」

No scenario had ever used such expressions in its 'clear conditions'. After all, there was no need to write phrases that crushed the incarnations' hopes before they even started. All scenarios were harsh anyway, and the Administration Bureau had an obligation to encourage the incarnations as much as possible to create 'interesting stories'.

Therefore, the dokkaebis, who knew very well that the constellations were more crazy about stories created by incarnations eager for hope, would not write such a buzzkill phrase from the beginning...

The moment my thoughts reached there, a terrible imagination crossed my mind.

What if there weren't many 'constellations' left in the <Star Stream> to enjoy the stories of those incarnations? What if even the storytellers had given up on the conclusion of this story?

I struggled to maintain my composure and continued to check the additional information of the scenario.

* Currently, there are a total of four Kings in the 'Hall'.

* The King of the East.

* The King of the West.

* The King of the South.

* The King of the North.

That was the end of the information.

Perhaps there was one 'King' for each region of 'East, West, South, and North'. It was confusing. Why on earth did something like a 'King' appear in Valhalla Hall?

Right after the last 'super-large battlefield' I participated in opened, all the constellations of 'Valhalla Hall' were dragged to the 'Preliminary Battle' or went straight to the 'Main Battlefield'. But the existence of a 'King' meant that there was also a group following him. Could it be that there were still constellations who hadn't entered the 'Main Battlefield'?

[Do you want to enter the 'Hall'?]

I hesitated for a moment, then stepped toward the entrance of the Hall. There was no way to verify the situation without seeing it with my own eyes first.

[You have entered the 'Hall'!]

As soon as I entered, a familiar landscape appeared. A vast prairie. Except for a strange burnt smell brushing the tip of my nose, this was the 'battlefield' I knew.

「Super-large battlefield.」

There was no doubt about it. The exact same scenery as the 'super-large battlefield' I had participated in. What could it be? Had the inside of 'Valhalla Hall' completely vanished, leaving only the stage of this 'super-large battlefield'?

[Currently, the 'Hall' is fused with the 'Super-large Battlefield'.]

[You can plot the end together with the surviving stars here.]

I smiled bitterly. There were no signs of life nearby to call them surviving stars.

[The story 'Slayer Beyond Records' begins its narration.]

Was it because I had entered a familiar stage? The story I obtained by clearing the 'Preliminary Battle' squirmed inside me. At the same time, the silent Successor also reacted.

[The story 'Successor of the Eternal Name' guides you.]

It seemed the Successor had found the way to the main battlefield of 'Ragnarok'.

I continued to move in the direction guided by the Successor. Incarnation bodies of dead constellations were visible here and there. Some were constellations I knew well.

[Story fragments of the constellation 'God of Peace and Relief' are drifting nearby.]

[Story fragments of the constellation 'Nurturer of Light and Compassion' are drifting nearby.]

The 'God of Peace and Relief' was a constellation struggling with gambling debts, and the 'Nurturer of Light and Compassion' was a constellation that took over incarnations from such debtors and trafficked them. Even those guys ended up caught in the 'super-large battlefield' and lost their lives.

In certain areas, giant scorch marks remained. It looked like the place where a 'sanctuary' capable of mass transporting to the 'main battlefield' had occurred.

Did <Emperor>'s sun hunter 'Yi' safely enter the 'main battlefield'? What happened to Mitra and the remnants of the 'Golden Dice Hall'?

Thinking of Mitra, who had asked me to call his name at the round table, I kept walking. How long did I walk? I finally arrived at the target location.

「In the center of the lonely prairie, there was a giant 'gate'.」

A gate of truly enormous size, looking as if even the true body of a myth-grade constellation like 'Mitra' could pass through it. The gate was wrapped tightly in giant chains as if sealed by someone. Surprisingly, each chain was made of 'story metal'.

That wasn't all. At the entrance of the gate, talismans written in an unknown otherworldly language were attached, and even the giant 'bar' inserted to seal the entrance of the gate was the star relic of a constellation I knew well.

The Ruyi Jingu Bang.

I got goosebumps. Who on earth sealed the entrance to this gate? The desperate traces of sealing the gate seemed to prove how desperate the sealers were.

「As if there was something beyond here that must absolutely never cross over.」

Approaching near the gate, I felt the stories inside me react.

[The story 'Successor of the Eternal Name' growls.]

Even with such a thick gate in between, there was a vivid despair felt from beyond.

「My brother is beyond this gate.」

[This entrance connects to the 'Main Battlefield'.]

[Warning! You cannot open the entrance!]

[If you want to open the entrance, defeat the 'Kings' of the battlefield and acquire the 'Key' to open the entrance!]

I let out a light sigh.

"I'm sorry, but..."

I didn't have the luxury of humoring the scenario's tantrums right now.

"I'm not in the mood for games."

I had to go to the 'main battlefield' right now. What happened to Ji Eunyu, how many surviving readers were there, what happened to <Kim Dokja's Company>. What my last brother had become. I had to find out everything.

mathbf{Force it open.}

「Force it open.」

I opened my stories. And I put my hand on the giant chain surrounding the gate.

Kudududuk.

Harsh sparks began to strike the area, and a strong warning rang in my ears. But I ignored all of them and kept injecting my stories.

Eventually, the chain, which seemed like it would never break, began to crack, and the sound of it snapping resounded. I succeeded in breaking the first chain solely with the power of my story.

[Part of the 'Gate's' seal has been released!]

A wild wind of massive sparks blew from the sky. And a true voice was heard from somewhere.

[That guy! What is that guy!]

[He's trying to open the gate!]

[Report to the King! We must report to the King!]

Were there still beings alive in this 'super-large battlefield'? A group of constellations came riding weirdly-shaped bikes in the distance, staring this way. The guys who sped across the desolate prairie were all wearing something like monkey masks on their heads.

[The constellation 'A Certain Monkey of the Water Curtain Cave' looks at you!]

[The constellation '500-Year-Old [Filtered]' looks at you!]

It seemed they were all broken somewhere, as their modifiers were abnormal. Thinking it was actually a good thing, I stopped injecting stories and called them.

"Hey."

When I spoke to them, the monkey masks shrank back in surprise.

[D-Don't go near! Don't go near him!]

Perhaps it was natural. From the moment I unleashed the power of my stories, ordinary constellations had no choice but to be crushed by the pressure.

[The story 'Slayer Beyond Records' continues its narration!]

Perhaps because I was using a semi-myth-grade story that fit this stage, the monkey masks screamed as if they were almost suffocating.

[Hyaaaaaaaah!]

Just by witnessing me, the afterimages of the stars I had killed were visible in their eyes.

[T-The one who killed the bird!]

[Monkey! Monkey slayer!]

During the Preliminary Battle, I had defeated many of <Vedas>' constellations, including 'The Bird Who Eats Thunder' and 'General of Banara'. Perhaps they were glimpsing that history now.

It was then that a sound like beating drums was heard from the distant sky.

[The King's... story!]

At the same time, the constellations wearing monkey masks all looked up at the sky. And I saw an unbelievable sight.

Giant wings covering the sky. A bird scattering pitch-black feathers was descending toward this place.

「The bird I killed, the 'Bird Who Eats Thunder'—one of the Eight Legions, 'Garuda' was there.」

No, looking closely, it wasn't 'Garuda' flying toward us, but 'Garuda's shadow'. Someone was flying while riding Garuda's shadow.

Kwakwakwakwa!

Lightning struck from the air. A lightning strike so immense that I momentarily wondered if Zeus or Odin had descended poured down on me.

I immediately activated my story.

[The story 'Demon King of Salvation' begins its narration.]

The 'Demon King of Salvation' mode, which I could now use easily at any time. I activated [Character Transformation] and easily dodged or brushed away the pouring lightning.

Shortly after, Garuda's shadow landed amidst the thick dust. The moment the dust cleared as the wind blew, I was able to confirm the true identity of the star who had thrown lightning at me.

When I first saw him, I thought Hanuman, the 'General of Banara' whom I had killed, had been resurrected. But looking closer, he was merely wearing Hanuman's hide.

After observing me for a long time, he asked.

[You... what on earth are you?]

For an instant, a corner of my chest seemed to creak.

[The story 'Prisoner of the Golden Headband' is sorrowful.]

The story embedded in one side of my heart throbbed. I could know instinctively. The being in front of me now was one of the 'Kings' of this ruin.

「A constellation whom I thought I would never be able to see again in this life was standing there.」

Only now did everything seem to make sense. Why my brother—'The Oldest Liberator' had sent me here riding the 'Yangji Jade Vase'. Why I had to arrive at this ruin first instead of the 'main battlefield'.

With burning eyes, he asked.

[How do you have my star relic?]

Now in front of my eyes stood the 'Great Sage Heaven's Equal' of the 41st round.

1031 Episode 63. Ragnarok (5)

---

The Handsome Monkey King was not in a good mood today. There were many reasons for his bad mood, and to be more precise, it wasn't just today that he was in a bad mood.

[NOTE 1]

For a constellation of the Handsome Monkey King's level, it was possible to read the heavenly secret of the <Star Stream>. Though it was called a heavenly secret, to put it simply, it felt like this:

「Predicting what will happen in the future through the positions of the constellations.」

Reading the heavenly secret was similar to analyzing the stock market for humans.

「Watching the movements of each faction, institution, and foreigner, observing their positions, and finding out what will happen to the market in the future.」

For reference, the market trend of the <Star Stream> today that he had read was as follows:

[Did everyone really die?]

Of course, the stars in the sky weren't actually all delisted. Nevertheless, the stars were clearly declining. The light of the once-powerful 'giant nebulas' was going out, and the stars that had looked down on the world from the top of the sky suddenly vanished or fell.

[Are you really going to give up like this! Where did all those myth-grade constellations who used to show off so much go!]

There is nothing more helpless than waiting for the end in a world that might perish at any moment. The Handsome Monkey King stood up abruptly, swallowing his anger.

[If we're going to die anyway, we should at least struggle!]

Currently, he was one of the four 'Kings' ruling this 'Hall'. Specifically, he was called the 'Monkey King' of the North.

[U-Uaaah!]

[My King!]

Whenever he passed by, the foolish constellations wearing monkey masks shouted.

[The constellation 'A Certain Monkey of the Water Curtain Cave' prays to you!]

Because they had witnessed the great catastrophe of 'Ragnarok' with their own eyes, their minds had collapsed and their stories had shattered, leaving them unable to live without relying on the stories of other stars.

The Handsome Monkey King patted the shoulders of those stars lightly, then glared at the sky and said:

[If worst comes to worst, I want to invade even if I'm alone, but...]

The Handsome Monkey King also didn't fail to understand the feelings of the stars that fled from the end. Beyond the 'gate' that this Hall sealed, there were indeed such monsters teeming. The Handsome Monkey King had also clearly seen what monsters were on the main battlefield of 'Ragnarok'. Even his brothers were all killed by those monsters.

Great Sage Heaven's Equal.

Bimawen.

Victorious Fighting Buddha.

He and his brothers had all participated in 'Ragnarok'. His brothers' plan was simple. They planned to take advantage of the chaos in the heavenly realm to steal core stories from <Emperor>'s Three Sovereigns and Five Emperors, thereby leaping to become 'myth-grade constellations'.

The plan proceeded sequentially, and a myth-grade constellation was just around the corner. That was, until the 'great catastrophe' of 'Ragnarok' suddenly opened its eyes.

「At a single word from the great catastrophe, half of the stars in the night sky fell.」

Among the shattered half were his brothers. Fortunately, his brothers had transferred all of their stories to him right before their dissipation, but in return, their souls disappeared from the <Star Stream>.

[Your incomplete story finishes its narration.]

Fortunately, the Handsome Monkey King was in an area far from the catastrophe, so he was able to avoid the dissipation of his incarnation body. But his other brothers were not so lucky. Clenching the stories of his brothers lodged inside him, the Handsome Monkey King bit his lips tightly.

His brothers were all detestable fellows. But no matter how detestable they were, brothers were brothers. He had not ruled out the thought of revenge either.

「"Handsome Monkey King. You must survive."」

The one who stopped him was the incarnation he cherished. The incarnation of the Korean Peninsula, Min Jiwon. Using the 'Pluck of Request' that the Handsome Monkey King had given her once, she banished his incarnation body from the 'main battlefield'.

「"Please, survive somehow—"」

To survive and plot for the future. That was her last message.

[The contract of the 'Pluck of Request' is activated!]

[You have been banished from the 'Main Battlefield'!]

[You cannot participate in the 'Main Battlefield' for the next two months!]

Since then, he had tried contacting her several times, but no news returned.

「Tomorrow, the restriction on participating in the 'main battlefield' forced upon him by the 'Pluck of Request' would end.」

By tomorrow, it would be two months since the Handsome Monkey King came to this 'Hall'. During those two months, he recovered his strength and prepared to return to the 'main battlefield'.

The problem was that in order to return to the 'main battlefield', he needed the cooperation of the other Kings.

「Two months ago, the Handsome Monkey King, along with the other Kings, had sealed the gate leading to the 'main battlefield'.」

Because of this issue, the Handsome Monkey King had gone to see the other Kings several times. Saying that his strength was fully recovered, so let's go up to the battlefield once more and fight against the catastrophe. But none of the other three Kings had any intention of opening that 'gate' again.

[Cowards.]

Only then did the Handsome Monkey King think that perhaps his ■■ ended here. His long-cherished wish to rise to the myth-grade and take revenge on the heavenly realm had gone awry, and the giant nebulas he hated had fallen.

[Is it really up to here.]

Had he ever seen such a dark sky in the <Star Stream> before? Looking at the sky of the <Star Stream> which had now lost even its day, the Handsome Monkey King remembered his brothers.

「It was then that a new star rose in the sky.」

Startled, the Handsome Monkey King glared at the sky with wide eyes. A star he had never seen before, yet its bright light gave him a sense of déjà vu. At the same time, the Handsome Monkey King sensed an unusual current pervading the battlefield.

The shaking ground. The sound of chains breaking.

「Someone is trying to open the 'gate'.」

The moment I saw the constellation in front of me, sharp memories rushed in. The image of my big brother, who threw away everything to save me, was vivid in my eyes.

"You are..."

After taking a breath, the memories receded like the tide, and the being in front of me was clearly visible.

"You are not the Great Sage Heaven's Equal."

It was a subtle difference, but I could tell. The 'Monkey King' in front of me was not the Great Sage Heaven's Equal. He was his brother, who possessed the Great Sage's story.

"Are you... the Handsome Monkey King?"

At my call, the Handsome Monkey King's lips twitched.

[I asked. How did you get my star relic—]

"This vase is not from this world."

Instead of a detailed explanation, I threw the star relic 'Yangji Jade Vase' to him. Receiving the star relic in a daze, he opened his eyes wide and began to examine the 'Yangji Jade Vase'.

I looked at the Handsome Monkey King and asked:

"Are your other brothers here by any chance?"

The Handsome Monkey King's presence here meant that his other brothers must have also participated in 'Ragnarok'. But his answer completely betrayed my expectations.

[Some are dead, and some are inside me.]

Watching the Handsome Monkey King continue his chilling tale without any change in expression, I realized anew that the end of the <Star Stream> was truly right in front of us.

「In this worldline, the Great Sage Heaven's Equal did not become 'The Oldest Liberator'.」

I had expected it to some extent, but seeing him unified in an incomplete state made my mind complicated.

「In this turn, the 'myth-grade constellation' Sun Wukong does not exist.」

After looking at the Yangji Jade Vase for a long time, the Handsome Monkey King snapped his head up.

[Wait a minute. Are you... that guy from back then?]

Recognizing me late, the Handsome Monkey King's eyes widened. In fact, I was acquainted with the Handsome Monkey King. I had met him once when doing a scenario related to the 'Twelve Zodiacs' at the 'Recycling Center'.

"Yes. Let me introduce myself again. My name is..."

[Kim Dokja.]

The Handsome Monkey King glared at me as if he detested that name.

[I know. Because I know the 'catastrophe' with the exact same name as yours.]

As if he already knew of 'Snowfield Kim Dokja', the Handsome Monkey King spoke without hiding his anger in the slightest.

「Ahead of the destruction of the <Star Stream>, two beings who had lost their brothers faced each other.」

I hid my bitter smile at this ironic play of fate and said:

"Yes. I came to stop that guy."

[Stop... the catastrophe?]

"Yes."

The being in front of me was that 'Handsome Monkey King'. I believed that he, of all people, would understand my heart.

[You are talking nonsense.]

But the Handsome Monkey King's response was cold.

[What on earth are you going to stop! How is someone like you going to stop the 'catastrophe of Ragnarok'? The great catastrophe that even myth-grade constellations couldn't stop—]

"I can do it."

The Handsome Monkey King glared at my calm answer. Then, as if hiding a trembling voice, he said:

[Even if that were possible, it's too late. The battle of 'Ragnarok' already ended two months ago.]

Looking at the 'gate' shrouded in an ominous aura, he added with a sigh:

[Now this world has nothing left but destruction.]

---

For a while after that, I sat near the 'gate' and listened to the story of what had happened to the scenario from the Handsome Monkey King.

「During the week I slept in the 'Yangji Jade Vase', two months had already passed outside.」

I thought that might be the case. It was something I had expected ever since I met Ji Eunyu in the 'record archives'. Once again, I had ended up late. But being late was a regular occurrence for me. The important thing was how to make up for that lateness from now on.

[Do you really intend to go to the 'main battlefield'? Even though the battle is over?]

"Yes."

[There will be no constellation to help you.]

"Aren't you here?"

The Handsome Monkey King's face contorted at my cheeky answer.

[It's obvious that entering there will lead to dissipation, so why should I help you?]

"You still want to fight, don't you? Isn't that why you waited here?"

The Handsome Monkey King only pouted his lips without agreeing or denying.

[What do you know...]

Even though he spoke like that, I knew what kind of constellation the Handsome Monkey King was. After mumbling to himself for a while, the Handsome Monkey King suddenly turned his head toward me and asked:

[Were you planning to break the 'gate' and enter?]

"That's right."

[If you force that gate open, there will be a penalty.]

"I don't care."

To be honest, if I hadn't met the Handsome Monkey King, I would have broken the gate and gone up anyway.

[Foolish! If you really intend to go up and fight, why on earth would you do that? How are you going to challenge an opponent you have no chance against even without penalties, while carrying a penalty on your back!]

"So, will you help me?"

The Handsome Monkey King glared at me with his burning Golden Pupils, then answered like a sigh:

[Fine, I'll help.]

I didn't expect him to agree so quickly. Avoiding my gaze, the Handsome Monkey King turned his eyes back to the 'gate' and said:

[The incarnation I cherished often spoke of you.]

I immediately understood whose story that was.

[Even at the moment she sent me here... for some reason, she seemed to be waiting for you.]

"....."

[I thought that if I helped you one last time, she would like it. It's not like I believe you can defeat the catastrophe.]

"What happened to her?"

[Her incarnation body vanished. But I don't know if even her soul has perished. Because she had the power of a 'recorder'.]

That's right. Ji Eunyu was a being who became the 'Recorder of Fear' through her contract with the lump-headed dokkaebi. If so, there was still hope.

"Is it true that the catastrophe used the power of 'the Oldest Dream'?"

The Handsome Monkey King said. Snowfield Kim Dokja exerted the authority of 'the Oldest Dream', and at that moment, half of the stars in 'Ragnarok' disappeared.

[That's right.]

I could vaguely guess what kind of power he had used.

「Interruption of Reading.」

Perhaps 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' had manifested the authority to 'no longer read' some of the constellations existing in this world. But there was something I couldn't understand. If he really was able to use the power of 'the Oldest Dream', there was no need to go through the troublesome effort of reducing the stars by half. Yet the fact that he did such a thing meant...

[That entity is not the only threat. The 'catastrophes of another world' are protecting him. They are terrifying guys who suddenly appeared two months ago.]

Otherworld catastrophes? I wondered who on earth that was referring to for a moment and asked:

"By any chance, have you heard any news about <Kim Dokja's Company>?"

[Kim Dokja's Company?]

The Handsome Monkey King looked at me as if I were talking nonsense. Apparently, the Handsome Monkey King didn't know who <Kim Dokja's Company> referred to.

I thought for a moment and gave an example of one of them.

"Well, with a handsome face—"

[Handsome? How much?]

"You'll know as soon as you see him. And he always wears a black coat..."

[Ah! Was that guy from <Kim Dokja's Company>? If it's him—]

Indeed, no matter what, there was no way he wouldn't recognize Yoo Joonghyuk.

[That guy should still be on the 'main battlefield'.]

The moment I heard his answer, a message rose above the 'gate'.

[Currently, 97% of the 'Main Battlefield' has been occupied by the 'Catastrophe Camp'.]

[If all beings belonging to the 'Constellation Camp' perish, the final phase of 'Ragnarok' will begin.]

Three percent. That dizzying number was proof that Yoo Joonghyuk was still fighting in that world.

"Didn't you say the battle was over?"

[It's three percent. Don't you know what that means? It's practically over...]

"I will go meet the other Kings immediately."

According to the Handsome Monkey King, in order to open the 'gate', the consent of the other three Kings, including himself, was required. I thought it was actually better. Beyond that 'gate', the forces of the 'Catastrophe Camp', including Snowfield Kim Dokja, would be waiting. If I could borrow even one more star's hand, it would be a huge help.

But the Handsome Monkey King didn't seem to agree with my thoughts.

[It won't be easy. The other 'Kings' except for me are all...]

It was then that a sound like a jet plane was heard from the sky.

[Damn, one guy has already arrived.]

Along with a massive sonic boom, something was seen descending toward this place. It was a flying vessel of splendid design.

[He's the King of the South. He's called the 'Wealth Emperor' (재황).]

The Wealth Emperor of the South.

[No matter who you are, you'll never be able to convince that guy. He's not someone who listens to anyone in the first place.]

The Handsome Monkey King glared at the flying vessel and frowned.

[He's a miser who knows nothing but coins. Unless you have the spare capacity to give him enough coins to satisfy him, no matter how hard you wag your tongue...]

The moment I saw the familiar emblem engraved on the flying vessel, I wondered, 'No way—'. Soon, the one who got off the flying vessel was an old man in a Hawaiian shirt. The moment he confirmed my face, he recognized me too.

[I wondered who touched the 'gate', and as expected, it was you.]

I was deeply moved to hear his voice after a long time and replied:

"You were here."

[It's been a while.]

Naturally, I thought he would have survived until now. Because he was the star with the most coins in this world.

「Above the throne of coins he had built, he was an existence who lived only to watch the conclusion of this world.」

Perhaps one of the most necessary allies for me right now.

"It's been a long time, Mass Production Maker."

1032 Episode 63. Ragnarok (6)

---

Even though I didn't say anything, the Mass Production Maker already knew what I wanted to say.

[You want to open that 'gate', don't you?]

Seeing the meaningful expression of the Mass Production Maker, the Handsome Monkey King beside me spoke with a triumphant face.

[Look, from now on, that old man is going to demand something enormous from you.]

His tone was slightly mocking, as if looking forward to what would happen next.

[In order to get the gate's 'key' from that old man, you must—]

But the moment he heard the Mass Production Maker's next words, the Handsome Monkey King blinked foolishly.

[If you want, I will give you the key.]

"Give it to me now."

[I don't have it right now. My hideout is nearby, so stay there for a bit while I look for the key.]

"There is no time."

[I understand how you feel, but there is no need to hurry like that.]

He guided the Handsome Monkey King and me to his flying vessel and said:

[Anyway, the 'main battlefield' is in a lull right now. The final battle won't happen for another four days.]

"Do you know what is happening on the main battlefield?"

The Mass Production Maker smiled without answering. It seemed to mean he would tell me if I followed him.

*

After a flight of about ten minutes, we arrived at the Mass Production Maker's hideout. It was a hideout shaped like a giant floating castle, reminiscent of the 'Recycling Center'.

[I will bring the key. The butler will guide you.]

As we entered the hideout, a long corridor appeared. On the corridor walls, the stories of the 'scenario areas' he had collected so far were hung like paintings.

[This bastard. The world is going to ruin, but he's living in such a luxurious place all by himself?]

Listening to the grumbling of the Handsome Monkey King walking beside me, I examined the stories hanging on the corridor walls one by one. Among them were stories I knew well.

「Philia Hunter Academy.」

It was a school my companions and I had attended together once. The school attended by Ma Hyeonsung, the protagonist of "The Infinite Jailer".

「"Dokja-ssi."」

For a moment, dizziness struck along with an unknown pain. A side of my heart throbbed and my legs shook so much that it was hard to walk. But I did not turn on [The Fourth Wall]. I merely took a deep breath, pretending to be calm, and continued to walk down the corridor. Reading the time my companions and I had lived without avoiding anything.

[This way, please.]

Guided by the butler managing the center, we entered the drawing room, where luxurious dishes were prepared on the table.

[What?]

The Handsome Monkey King's eyes widened, and he ran straight to the table and began to stuff his face with the food. Dishes that at a glance recalled fine dining. Above all, what was extraordinary was the ingredients of those dishes.

[Wait a minute. Isn't this the Great Pill of Reincarnation?]

Not truffle, but a sandwich literally ground with the Great Pill of Reincarnation.

[They are peaches of the Peach Orchard! How on earth did he get these? The Queen Mother of the West would never have allowed it.]

Besides those, there was cold buckwheat noodles accompanied by Stalactite Liquid, and sous-vide Dragon Heart dishes. Having swept the table like that, the Handsome Monkey King finally swallowed the elixir of Taishang Lajuon topped on the ice cream served as dessert before speaking to me.

[Hey.]

"Yes?"

[What on earth is your identity? Why is that old man treating you so well?]

I answered while putting the elixir of Taishang Lajuon left on the table into my mouth. The elixir I thought would taste bitter unexpectedly tasted like sweet chocolate.

"Probably because I am Kim Dokja."

It wasn't an answer I expected the Handsome Monkey King to understand. Nevertheless, whatever the Handsome Monkey King was thinking, he stared at me intently and said something unexpected.

[Well, of course. I know that much too.]

After the meal, the Handsome Monkey King hesitated as if he had something to say, then pouted his lips and left the drawing room, saying, "I'll go look around for a bit."

Watching his back vanish with the Out-of-Body Clone technique, I felt like I vaguely knew what he wanted to say to me.

「Perhaps he read the stories of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal of other worldlines in the 'Yangji Jade Vase'.」

Perhaps the reason he vanished was because he wanted to examine the stories of that worldline once more. The eldest brother must have foreseen all of this and sent the Yangji Jade Vase to the Handsome Monkey King of the 41st turn. While grateful for that consideration, my heart felt heavier on the other hand.

「Kim Dokja was now afraid of getting close to anyone.」

I looked around the drawing room, waiting for someone to enter. But neither the butler nor the Mass Production Maker returned.

Sitting in the quiet drawing room on the night before destruction, eating the Great Pill of Reincarnation and the peaches of the Peach Orchard left by the Handsome Monkey King felt extremely strange, but from now on, there was not a single second to waste.

Since things had turned out this way, it was best to handle the deferred tasks first. There were things to check ahead of the final showdown. Messages from constellations or nebulas that had arrived without my knowledge, records left by the recorders. Deferred scenario rewards. And...

[A new chapter of 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint' has been updated on the platform.]

After a long time, I accessed the platform through my smartphone.

「The platform where the 'Side Stories' of Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint were serialized.」

Fortunately, the connection was smooth this time. I immediately checked the backlog of comments using the 'Daily Free Pass'.

[You have used all of today's allocated 'Daily Free Passes'!]

In the past, I would have stopped reading once the 'Free Passes' were exhausted, but today was different. I read as many comments as possible, even spending additional coins. I remembered or took notes of comments that seemed like they would be of any help. Perhaps because I read a large number of comments, pop-up events appeared in between, giving me free passes.

I also checked the comments of old chapters once more. Then, the faces of the people I had lived that time with rose one by one.

Catching insects in the first scenario with Dansoo ahjussi.

Hunting the first mole cricket with Kyung Sein.

Escaping from the Ichthyosaur with Jung Heewon.

Encountering Cha Sungwoo at the Dark Keeper's hideout.

Talking about my work with Cha Yerin.

Meeting the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st turn and becoming his companion.

The readers also remembered the stories I remembered. Some memories were vivid, while others were faint—but thinking that someone had read all those stories after all made me feel strange.

As it came to the recent chapters, the atmosphere of the comments became darker.

— Is it true? Is it ending like this?

Expressions of sadness or lamentation.

— He's really dying?

Words that didn't feel like there was any hope. Nevertheless, looking at those comments, strangely, my heart became calm.

— I'm rooting for you.

Perhaps it was because of the reader's comment I checked at the very end.

[You still like reading something.]

Suddenly looking up, the 'Mass Production Maker' was in front of my eyes. Somehow, it was a landscape that gave me a sense of déjà vu. The memory of sitting in his passenger seat and reading something while traversing the <Star Stream> came to mind. It was a memory of Kim Dokja that I knew well.

[At that time, you were reading a blank screen.]

"Was I?"

[How is it? Is the sentence you wanted written in that blank space now?]

I stared down at the smartphone screen for a moment, then replied:

"I think I'll only know that when this story is completely finished."

Only now did I seem to understand why the Mass Production Maker brought me here. He was giving me, standing before a dead end, time to look back on all these paths one last time.

"The meal was really delicious."

[I wanted to feed you something. Right now, your incarnation body looks extremely unstable.]

"Thank you for your concern."

Bowing my head, I looked closely at the Mass Production Maker's face. Suddenly, the memory of meeting him for the last time at 'Philia Academy' came to mind. Perhaps the Mass Production Maker also recalled that time, as he spoke to me with an enigmatic smile:

[You have a face that looks much more like the person I knew back then.]

"Are you the 'Mass Production Maker' I know?"

[Who is the 'Mass Production Maker' you know?]

"A star who can spend all the coins he has collected just to see the conclusion he wants."

The Mass Production Maker laughed, whatever he thought of my answer. I looked straight at him and said:

"I need your help."

[But you are not the 'Kim Dokja' I know.]

"But you came all the way here because you were curious about his story, didn't you?"

[Do you really intend to become that 'Kim Dokja'?]

The moment I received his question, the stories inside me squirmed.

[The story 'Demon King of Salvation' begins its narration!]

[The story 'King of Terror' begins its narration!]

[The story 'Prisoner of the Golden Headband' begins its narration!]

In response to his intense desire, the stories inside me reacted first. But the Mass Production Maker looked at me with warm eyes, as if calming the stories down.

[I want to hear your story, not the stories.]

"I am still here as Kim Dokja."

[Is that your will? Or the will of the story?]

I hesitated for a moment before answering.

"Now I cannot distinguish it well either."

[You are indeed honest.]

"Whether we control the stories or are controlled by the stories, what's more important in the end is what we get to see through this story."

As if slightly surprised by my answer, the Mass Production Maker's eyes wavered.

"Mass Production Maker. The fact that you are here even after confirming the ■■ must mean you were not satisfied with that conclusion."

The Mass Production Maker shook his head and replied:

[No, I was satisfied. Perhaps the problem was that it was too satisfying.]

The Mass Production Maker continued with a bitter smile:

[Even though I knew that some afterstories are beautifully completed only when left as blank spaces, I still wanted to check all the blank spaces. Probably because I loved that story too much.]

"....."

[It wouldn't be just me. All the constellations who possessed or descended into this worldline with me would have felt the same way.]

I thought of Uriel whom I met at the 'Recycling Center', and the Great Sage Heaven's Equal whom I met in the 'Bush of the Missing'.

[Actually, I regret it a little. There are times when I think that you ended up like this because we wanted to see the blank spaces of that story.]

Before I could answer that it wasn't so, the Mass Production Maker shook his head.

[Anyway, you have finally come this far. I offer my sincere respect to you.]

"Thank you."

[But main battlefield in your brother is too strong. And by that brother's side, terrifying owners of stories are holding their ground.]

"Who is it?"

The Mass Production Maker did not answer. Instead, looking straight at me with unreadable eyes, he said:

[You will die.]

"Kim Dokja dying is a regular occurrence anyway, isn't it?"

[I want to see a different conclusion.]

It was fresh to realize he was a star capable of making such a worried expression. I grinned and replied:

"Don't worry. A conclusion beyond what you imagined will be waiting."

[The opponent is a 'reader' who has read all the stories of this world.]

"I know."

[Do you really believe you can write a story that will convince him?]

"I can't make such a guarantee. But..."

I recalled the last words Ji Eunyu had left me.

「"I want Kim Dokja to survive this time too."」

Simply chewing over those words again and again, I answered:

"Kim Dokja will definitely survive and see the conclusion he wants. And you will too."

The Mass Production Maker looked at me for a moment, then pulled a splendid key from his chest and handed it to me.

[You have acquired the 'Key of the Wealth Emperor'!]

It was the first key to open the gate of the 'main battlefield'.

[The Handsome Monkey King and I will help you. But I can't guarantee what the other two Kings will do.]

I wasn't surprised since the Handsome Monkey King had already said something similar.

[I know what you're thinking. But the other Kings will really be different from me.]

"I don't care. If they can't be convinced, I'll take the keys by force and go up."

The Mass Production Maker smiled bitterly at my response.

[Unfortunately, you won't be able to do that. Because—]

The sound of thunder was heard from the distant sky. Dark rain was falling over the sky of the <Star Stream> where the starlight had gone out.

[The remaining two 'Kings' are existences you know extremely well.]

The other 'two Kings' are existences I know extremely well?

A few figures flashed through my mind. I wondered if it could really be, yet at the same time, I felt like it made sense. Of course, either way, I couldn't be sure until I met them.

[Are you finished talking?]

When I came out of the drawing room, the Handsome Monkey King, who was leaning against a pillar in the corridor, spoke to me.

[What was there to talk about so much with that boring old man.]

"We share special memories, you see."

Instead of answering my words, the Handsome Monkey King stared at the story hanging on the opposite hallway. As I stood beside him, the story inside the picture frame moved.

「The Last War.」

It was a story I also knew well. The 1,864th turn, the last war of the stars. The stars filling the night sky shone brightly, and the 'Mass Production Maker' standing below spent his coins. The Black Flame Dragon roared in the distant sky, and as the wave of the end covered the <Star Stream>, Archangel Uriel's wings emitted a brilliant light. Subsequently, with a roaring sound, Sun Wukong's Ruyi Bang cleaved the night sky.

「That was the story of the stars that Kim Dokja saw for the last time.」

The Handsome Monkey King watched the story in the frame with me, then opened his mouth.

[I read the history of the life you have lived.]

Only then did I realize that the Handsome Monkey King was holding the hair of the Great Sage Heaven's Equal that had been inside the 'Yangji Jade Vase'. Apparently, he had read all the story information contained in that hair while walking down the corridor.

[Don't make the mistake of thinking I will easily trust you just because my brothers from other worldlines trusted you.]

"Aren't you already trusting me?"

[Are you going to look for the other Kings now?]

"Yes. Because we don't have much time."

Twitching his lips as if he had expected it, the Handsome Monkey King quickly pressed close to my side and said:

[Hmph, this time it really won't go the way you want.]

"Why are you following me again while talking like that?"

[Because I must see you fail.]

Although he had a twisted personality, it was reassuring that the Handsome Monkey King was moving with me. The eldest brother probably knew the Handsome Monkey King's personality beforehand and sent his own stories together inside the 'Yangji Jade Vase'.

However, as we stepped out of the corridor's exit, the 'Mass Production Maker', wearing splendid goggles, was waiting, having finished his preparations who knows when.

[I will go with you this time.]

"You're coming with us?"

[You guys don't have a means of transportation to ride anyway, do you?]

I thought there was no reason to decline his kindness, but the Handsome Monkey King, who was eavesdropping beside us, snapped in a sharp voice:

[Hmph, I have the Somersault Cloud.]

[Wasn't that scrap of cloud destroyed on the main battlefield not long ago?]

[Since it's a cloud, a new one will be made soon.]

[Anyway, you don't have it right now, do you?]

The 'Mass Production Maker' smiled and snapped his fingers lightly, and the lower hangar of the 'Recycling Center' opened, revealing a giant flying vessel.

[It's a 'story weapon' I newly made a few years ago. I wondered if I would ever use it, but this is perfect.]

A flying vessel that looked dozens or hundreds of times larger than the one we rode here —it was a weapon of war that was more fittingly called a 'battleship'.

"If we ride something like this, won't they think we're here to fight?"

[Didn't you say you'd subdue them by force if they couldn't be convinced?]

"That was just a figure of speech. How can a person throw punches first? We're not monkeys."

I felt the Handsome Monkey King glaring at me beside us. The Mass Production Maker chuckled and replied:

[If we change the story wavelength to stealth mode, they won't notice even if we ride it. Now, which way will we go? West? Or East?]

Since we met the Monkey King of the North and the Wealth Emperor of the South, this time...

"Let's go to the West first."

[West, huh.]

Seeing the Mass Production Maker's complex and subtle expression, the King of the West also seemed to be an extraordinary existence like them.

[This time, I'll get to watch a fun show indeed. Have you heard who the King of the West is?]

When I shook my head, the Handsome Monkey King shouted with a brightened face:

[I knew it! Don't be surprised, because it's a monster you can't even imagine!]

"I think I'm acquainted with that monster."

[Acquainted?]

Frowning, the Handsome Monkey King turned his gaze toward the Mass Production Maker. It was a look asking what on earth they had discussed. As the Mass Production Maker shrugged without a word, the Handsome Monkey King added with a growl:

[Whether you're acquainted or not, you'll never be able to convince that guy. At least this old man could be reasoned with, but that guy cannot be reasoned with at all!]

"He cannot be reasoned with? Is he a beast?"

[Hehe, if you're that curious, this body can give you a little hint—]

"Well, no. Even beasts seem to communicate..."

[You're not talking about me right now, are you?]

We immediately boarded the 'Mass Production Maker's' battleship. Contrary to its fearsome exterior, the interior of the battleship looked like a party room. Since it was my first time boarding such a large-scale story weapon, curiosity suddenly rose.

"Are battleships of other nebulas like this too?"

[Similar. Though they are older generations than this.]

As far as I knew, many of the 'story weapons' of the giant nebulas were made by the hand of the 'Mass Production Maker'. That was the reason why no giant nebula dared to ignore him despite having only the status of a story-grade constellation. The war munitions contractor with the most coins in this world. That was this old man in a Hawaiian shirt—the 'Mass Production Maker'.

With the sound of the engine starting, the scenery was pushed away in an instant. The battleship began to jump using the power of the hyperdrive. The moment I felt a slight dizziness, the battleship was stopped again.

[We've arrived.]

"Already?"

[It's only within the 'Hall' anyway. A jump of this distance is nothing. However...]

The Mass Production Maker stared beyond the cockpit covered in pitch-black fog. I could tell without listening. Perhaps the 'King of the West' was beyond that pitch-black fog.

[We can't get too close to the habitat of the King of the West. It would be better to disembark and approach from here. He doesn't like anything flying in his airspace.]

"Let's go right away."

I disembarked immediately with the Handsome Monkey King and the Mass Production Maker. Who on earth would be the King waiting for me this time?

Did he feel tension from my expression? The Handsome Monkey King stepped forward casually and said:

[Hmph, no need to be too scared. If worst comes to worst, this body will protect you.]

"Protect me? Weren't you wishing for me to fail?"

[Hmph.]

Looking at the Handsome Monkey King, whom I could not predict at all as he went back and forth, I felt like I could understand a little why Ji Eunyu had been close to him.

[Over there.]

Stopping as soon as we broke through the black fog zone, the Handsome Monkey King pointed to a distant location.

"That is..."

I squinted and looked at the place the Handsome Monkey King pointed. There was a giant nest there.

「Dragon Lair.」

As if proving the Handsome Monkey King's words, spine-chilling howls echoed one after another from beyond the sky. Sensing the intruders, the dragon race let out wild roars toward us.

[It's been a while since I've seen so many of the dragon race gathered.]

From hatchling-class young individuals to large individuals corresponding to ancient dragons. A pack of dragons, looking to be dozens at a glance, was active in the sky. At a glance, it was a force that could lay waste to a single scenario area in an instant.

"I think I know who the King of the West is."

[Then you would also know that convincing him is difficult. Because the current him is not the star you used to know.]

Instead of answering, I took a step forward. Perhaps my pace was too reckless, as the Handsome Monkey King warned:

[Wait. We must move slowly from here on. Or else—]

I ignored his words and increased my walking speed further. Then, as if waiting, the dragons in the sky looked down at me all at once.

[All the dragons in the area roar at you!]

An enormous status poured down on me from the sky. If it had been the past, just receiving that status would have made me cough up blood from my seven orifices and faint. But not now.

[Get out of the way.]

I met the wave of the dragons head-on and burst out a true voice:

[I came to meet your King.]

Surprised by the true voice that vibrated the entire sky, the dragons began to scatter around me. At the same time, a rough story burst out from the distant Dragon Lair.

Oooooo—!

The supreme lifeforms. The dragon race that stood at the absolute apex of all living things. Among them, the dragon that occupied the throne of the King was waking up from a long sleep.

The Dragon King of the West, looking down at me with pitch-black eyes reminiscent of the abyss of distant antiquity. I met his gaze and opened my mouth.

"It's been a long time, Black Flame Dragon."

But the Black Flame Dragon only stared at me with an inorganic gaze as if looking at an inanimate object, without answering. The Handsome Monkey King grimaced and shouted:

[Foolish guy! Do you really think you can talk with that guy? You've provoked him, so the area will soon be covered in flames!]

"But he is also a constellation."

[Do you think all constellations are the same! You don't know what kind of constellation that guy is! That guy is the head of the dragon nebula, Black Cloud. He's an evil dragon who tramples, ravages, and despises all existences he deems inferior to himself!]

The Handsome Monkey King seemed to have accumulated a lot against the Black Flame Dragon, as he swore at the Black Flame Dragon for a long time. And the Black Flame Dragon quietly stared at the Handsome Monkey King swearing right in front of his nose.

[...So... do you understand?]

Thinking this would be enough to convince me, the Handsome Monkey King stopped talking. I gave a bitter smile toward the Handsome Monkey King, then looked up at the Black Flame Dragon again.

The Black Flame Dragon was yawning. It was a very long yawn.

[Are you done chattering, monkey?]

The Handsome Monkey King turned to the Black Flame Dragon with a blank expression. Then he asked back incredulously:

[What? You—knew how to speak?]

[Are there constellations who cannot speak?]

[When I visited last time...]

[I merely didn't want to exchange words with a trivial beast.]

The Handsome Monkey King released his status as if he could no longer stand it. The Black Flame Dragon also slowly raised his fighting spirit. Thus, at the very moment their untimely war of nerves was about to break out, I cut into the context of the stories.

"Black Flame Dragon. Do you remember me?"

The 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' looked at me. Slowly lowering his fighting spirit, he spoke to me in a deep true voice:

[I remember your story.]

I smiled at the Black Flame Dragon. From the moment I first heard there were four 'Kings' here, I thought that one of those 'Kings' might be the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon. This place was a stage built on the foundation of the 'super-large battlefield' of the Preliminary Battle, and the Black Flame Dragon had descended on the 'super-large battlefield' to face Mitra before.

[Your story resonates with the constellation 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon'!]

At that time, I had saved the Black Flame Dragon who was controlled by Asmodeus.

[But I am not the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' you knew.]

"It seems so."

The Abyssal Black Flame Dragon I knew was a mischievous kid who simulated being '15 years old' by himself. But the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' in front of my eyes now was by no means a 15-year-old kid. The reason was clear.

「The 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' in front of me is an existence born from the side effect of the 'Disconnected Film Theory'.」

The new 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' born from the mixing of the stories of the 1,864th turn and the 41st turn. That was the monster coiled in front of my eyes now.

[I know about the Black Flame Dragon you miss. His stories and emotions still remain inside me.]

Lifting his neck loftily, he stared at the sky of the <Star Stream> where no stars were visible, then added in a somewhat cold tone:

[However, do not expect his warmth from me.]

As if listening to the story was the maximum extent of his favor, no warmth could be felt from the Black Flame Dragon's voice. But instead of being discouraged, I grinned.

"I didn't come expecting that."

The Black Flame Dragon tilted his head as if measuring my intent and asked:

[Why did you come here?]

"Black Flame Dragon. Do you want to end your ■■ here?"

A cold light momentarily lodged in the Black Flame Dragon's eyes looking down at me. Even among the same constellations, their reactions to ■■ are all different. Some constellations like talking about it, while others get angry just by it being mentioned. And perhaps, to the current 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon'—

"I know why you are here."

His ■■ would be his reverse scale.

「In the worldline of the 41st turn, the 'Great War of Saints and Demons' did not occur.」

The 'Great War of Saints and Demons' was prevented by Snowfield Kim Dokja, and thus, the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' did not even get the chance to become the 'Last Dragon of the Apocalypse'. The dragon born only to reign as a catastrophe had fallen before he could even spread his wings.

"I mean I understand why you signed a recording contract with a recorder like the 'Demon King of the Theater'."

The reason the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' signed a recording contract with Asmodeus was probably not just because of the instability of his true body. He now had no expectations for the future. The universe of the <Star Stream>, where the starlight he would extinguish had vanished, could no longer excite him.

[No, you do not understand me.]

I nodded.

"I suppose so. Because right now, a blank space as vast as the distance between stars lies between us."

[The story 'Opponent of the Dragon' continues its narration.]

Nevertheless, we were clearly connected. Through stories and stories. That was why I didn't give up. Not understanding each other didn't mean we couldn't converse. Having different species or possessing different stories didn't mean we couldn't talk.

「If you write nothing in the blank space out of fear of failure, the blank space will only remain a blank space forever.」

Perhaps Kim Dokja would have thought the same if he saw the current Black Flame Dragon.

"Abyssal Black Flame Dragon."

Staring at his massive body, I felt some strong fate. Coming all the way here, meeting them at this particular time—I felt that perhaps all of it was part of a giant foreshadowing.

「Everything is already written, and at the same time, is being written.」

And so, if all of this is truly already written, and at the same time, is being written.

[Currently, you are the recorder of the constellation 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon'.]

Then I, too, with all the capacity given to me—

"Do you want to become the 'Final Dragon of the Apocalypse' once again?"

I will try to become the 'Kim Dokja' of this story.

1034 Episode 63. Ragnarok (8)

---

[Are you speaking sincerely?]

The Abyssal Black Flame Dragon's expression turned fierce. As expected, he was looking forward to becoming the strongest catastrophe of the <Star Stream> once again.

[But you must also know. This is 'Ragnarok'.]

"What about it? Is the Final Dragon of the Apocalypse not allowed to descend in 'Ragnarok'?"

The Black Flame Dragon stared at me quietly, then said:

[You came to get the 'key' from me. Is that right?]

As I nodded, the Black Flame Dragon's eyes narrowed.

[Do you know what is inside that 'gate'?]

"I know."

[No one in the <Star Stream> can defy 'the Oldest Dream'.]

"That dream is not yet complete."

I looked up at the sky and said:

"And if you really gave up on everything, there would be no reason for you to wait for the final scenario of all places here."

[I have no intention of fighting a foolish battle against an opponent I cannot defeat.]

"The Black Flame Dragon I know doesn't talk like that."

[I am—]

"I know. But you are also the Black Flame Dragon I know."

I could tell. Inside him, the 'story' of the Black Flame Dragon I knew was definitely present.

"The Black Flame Dragon I know was a star who loved unwinnable battles the most."

I remembered him challenging the previous Apocalypse Dragon in the 'Great War of Saints and Demons'. The Black Flame Dragon who fought to the death using all his stories even though he knew he would lose.

Frowning slightly, the Black Flame Dragon countered:

[That is not me.]

"Do you really think so?"

The Black Flame Dragon could not answer. Ultimately, a single being is the sum total of the stories that compose it. Like it or not, the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' of the 1,864th turn was now a part of him. And he had to live with that story.

"What I want is not merely the 'key'. It is to see the end of all scenarios. I want you to be there in that conclusion."

The Abyssal Black Flame Dragon still didn't answer. I continued speaking:

"Just because the night sky is dark doesn't mean all the stars have set. There is light that can only be seen in the darkest sky."

[I saw your story. It was miserable and terrible.]

I felt like I vaguely knew what story he had seen. It was probably Kim Dokja's story witnessed by the Black Flame Dragon of the 1,864th turn.

[Why do you want to see the end once more despite having gone through all of that?]

"Because I went through all of that."

Neither the recorder who records the stories, the constellations who live by reading the stories, nor the Outer Gods who struggle because they cannot be recorded anywhere—actually, no one knows the conclusion of the universe.

"I am curious. What kind of landscape is the conclusion of the universe that we must reach after going through all those stories—the final story I must write."

Even while saying that everything is already written and, at the same time, is being written—why do they always yearn for the ■■ so much?

"Aren't you the same?"

Instead of answering, the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon looked up at the sky I was looking at. Perhaps he also needed time to think.

"I'll wait for an hour. If you change your mind, come out of the nest."

*

For about an hour after that, the Handsome Monkey King and I paced in front of the Black Flame Dragon's nest. Occasionally, young hatchlings watching us from a distance waddled closer and then moved away repeatedly.

Yawning repeatedly while watching the dragons, the Handsome Monkey King asked:

[Do you think he'll come out?]

"I don't know either."

[Your expression looks like you're sure he will.]

"How much have you even seen to be reading my expressions already?"

In the distance, the Mass Production Maker, who had gone to fetch supplies from the battleship, could be seen waving as he returned.

[Hmm, is it not time yet? It feels like it's almost been an hour.]

"58 minutes have passed."

[I'll bet 100 coins that he comes out in 2 minutes.]

When the Mass Production Maker laughed and made a bet, the Handsome Monkey King immediately chipped in.

[Then I'll bet 100 coins that he doesn't come out!]

It felt strange to watch two constellations representing the <Star Stream> betting a mere 100 coins each. Nevertheless, the two waited for the time with serious eyes.

1 minute, and 2 minutes. Finally, an hour passed, but the Black Flame Dragon did not show himself.

[See, as expected, he didn't...!]

With a rumbling sound, a vibration echoed from inside the nest. Shortly after, the Black Flame Dragon walked out of the nest with his wings folded. As the Handsome Monkey King gaped blankly, the Mass Production Maker poked his shoulder and held out his palm. Grimacing, the Handsome Monkey King pulled out 100 coins.

Had he not come out of the nest in a long time? The Black Flame Dragon twisted his body lightly as if stretching, then looked down at me with his erect massive body and said:

[I merely became a little interested in your blank space.]

I nodded lightly to the Black Flame Dragon and said:

"That's enough."

Now, only the last King remained.

*

The last King of the Hall was the 'King of the East'. This time too, the one who provided the information was the Mass Production Maker.

[In the territory of the King of the East, a poison fog is spread.]

"A poison fog?"

[It's a highly toxic fog strong enough to corrode even story metals.]

If it was strong enough to corrode not other metals but story metals, it was certainly no ordinary fog. I didn't know, but it was probably a fog in which the story of a very powerful constellation was lodged.

[I heard it is the deadly poison emitted by the corpse of the 'World Snake' that died on the 'super-large battlefield' before.]

The World Snake. The moment I heard those words, a scene immediately rose. Right before I entered the 'Bush of the Missing', I had seen the 'World Snake' fighting against Mitra. In fact, the constellation who descended as the catastrophe of the Preliminary Battle, the 'World Snake', was an existence I knew well.

"Yamata no Orochi."

The Eight-Headed Lord, Yamata no Orochi. It seemed he had finally died on this 'super-large battlefield'.

"Who killed him?"

[The King of the East. I heard he cut off all the heads of the 'World Snake' in a single strike.]

If he could cut off all the heads of Orochi, who was strong even among story-grade existences, in a single slash, it meant the last King was also a super-strong being who was not inferior to the other Kings.

[The poison fog in that area clears up in the morning. Let's wait a bit and depart when dawn arrives.]

I thought for a moment and nodded. In fact, whether it was a poison fog or not, I could probably push my way through using [The Fourth Wall] or the stories I possessed. But strangely, I didn't feel like doing that now. To be precise, it felt like I shouldn't.

What was so amusing? The Mass Production Maker was rummaging through the supply box he brought earlier and pulling something out.

In the spare time, I checked the contents of 'Ways of Survival', the main story, and the comments on the newly uploaded chapter one by one.

— Hang in there, ■■.

There wasn't much added to the comments of the latest chapter. But just by confirming the warmth contained in that small encouragement, something inside me was clearly changing.

Sizzle.

Smelling something delicious from somewhere, I turned around and saw the Mass Production Maker, who had set up a grill, roasting something like skewers.

"What are you doing?"

[This is the mass-produced skewer meal kit I recently launched.]

No, I wondered if he even launched something like that as a meal kit.

[I launched it under a contract with the Supreme King.]

"The Supreme King? Do you mean Yoo Joonghyuk?"

[Is there another Supreme King?]

I doubted my eyes for a moment. Looking closely at the meal kit packaging, Yoo Joonghyuk holding a skewer like a spear was drawn.

— Mass-Produced Yoo Joonghyuk Skewers.

— Feel the memories of old scenarios with mole cricket breast meat made with the Supreme King's special sauce.

Were there people who bought such things in this worldline? As if answering my curiosity, the 'Mass Production Maker' smiled.

[It's popular among the angels of <Eden>.]

"When on earth did you sign a contract for this?"

[It's been quite a while. He came to see me a while ago saying he needed a lot of coins, so I thought it was a good opportunity and signed a contract.]

He needed a lot of coins? What on earth was he doing that required so many coins?

Anyway, the smell was good.

"Can I taste it?"

[Wait just a moment.]

Meanwhile, smelling it, the Handsome Monkey King also crept close and asked:

[Oh, is it meat?]

Even the dragons hanging around nearby polymorphed one by one into human forms and peeked this way. Among them was the waddling hatchling from earlier. The Mass Production Maker handed a long skewer to the curious hatchling and said:

[Here, do you want to try it too?]

Instead of roasting the skewer, the hatchling wreathed in a bright smile and munched down the skewer the Mass Production Maker handed over.

[Oops, little guy. It's not fully cooked yet!]

But the other dragons, except for the hatchling, didn't approach easily, as if they were wary of us. Except for a tall man who wended his way through them.

[What kind of dish is that?]

Pitch-black hair falling below his shoulders. The black suit the man wore made his white face stand out even more. At first, I didn't recognize who he was. But the moment I scrutinized his eyes, I realized who the man was and was startled.

"Abyssal Black Flame Dragon?"

At my question, the Black Flame Dragon tilted his head and asked:

[Why are you looking like that?]

"Is that your polymorphed form?"

If the 15-year-old Black Flame Dragon grew up, did he look like this? He looked to be about 30 years old... Surely it wasn't because two 15-year-olds merged, making him 30.

[It's the appearance of my father.]

"Your father is extremely handsome."

Hearing that, I thought anew that there were still many things I didn't know about him. I knew he was the master of the Black Cloud and a regular of the Kim Dokja channel, but I didn't know what history he had lived. Let alone his true name.

"Come to think of it, what is your true name?"

[My name is Abrax...]

[Here, receive one each.]

The Black Flame Dragon's next words were cut off by the skewer the Mass Production Maker held out. We exchanged glances for a moment and immediately tore into the skewers. The meaty aroma of the roasted skewers was quite good. The taste of the Yanaspleta stems inserted in between was also a delicacy, and above all, the seasoning felt really similar to what Yoo Joonghyuk made.

— What are you doing right now?

A small alarm rose in the air. It was a message from the Demon King of Salvation.

"I'm eating Yoo Joonghyuk skewers."

— Yoo Joonghyuk? Is that bastard there?

I smiled bitterly and briefly explained what the situation was. As expected, the Demon King of Salvation responded with disbelief.

— Is this a time to be leisurely eating skewers? I'm busy to death right now.

"Is something wrong?"

— I adjusted the library system a bit through the function of [The Fourth Wall]. You have the ability to read comments through that platform app or whatever, right?

"Yes."

— Now you can use it without turning on the app.

"How?"

— Because you can see the comments here too.

"Oh..."

— From now on, I'll pay to check the comments and project them to you.

If that were possible, a kind of 'pseudo-future sight' might be possible by reading comments in real-time even during combat. As far as I knew, the 'latest chapter' of the serialized version wrote slightly ahead into the future.

I was quite impressed, then realized something and asked back.

"Wait, but isn't that my account?"

— It is, right?

"And the payment is made with my money too."

— Of course.

Was it an illusion? It sounded like the Kim Dokja inside [The Fourth Wall] was just bored and had hijacked my account to read comments.

— Anyway, is it delicious? Still, it's not as good as the one Yoo Joonghyuk made, right?

"Well."

I spoke while tearing into the skewer again.

"It's decent in its own way."

A few steps away, the dragons that gathered one by one could be seen carefully reaching out toward the skewers. I reached for a new skewer and said:

"I know too. That this isn't a time to be leisurely eating skewers."

It wasn't as if my mind was at ease. Entering the main battlefield was just ahead, and once I entered the 'gate', I would now face the worst enemy in <Star Stream>'s history.

"But I felt like I would never see this kind of scenery again."

Reaching for the same skewer, the Handsome Monkey King and the Black Flame Dragon glared at each other. Then, the Mass Production Maker burst into a hearty laugh watching the two constellations.

[The exclusive skill 'The Fourth Wall' shakes minutely.]

A gaze felt beyond the wall. Perhaps the Kim Dokjas inside the wall were also watching this scene right now.

The Demon King of Salvation said:

— Maknae.

"Yes."

He called me and said nothing more. But I already knew what he wanted to say.

In the lonely night sky, there were three shining stars. Together with these stars, we had cleared scenarios, eaten delicious things, quarreled, talked, and lived while talking again. Perhaps during all that time, we were always dreaming the same dream.

「The old journey has now become a cherished memory.」

Together with the Kim Dokjas inside me, I imagined the moment when all this adventure first started, the world we had wanted to possess so much.

[For the few remaining stars of this universe!]

When the Mass Production Maker raised his cup with a toast, the other two constellations also raised their cups as if it were a hassle. I also drank a cup lightly. The alcohol was sweet, but there was no feeling of getting drunk. Before I knew it, the deep night passed and dawn was breaking.

Now it was time to meet the last King.

*

As soon as day broke, we took the battleship and warped to the East. As soon as we disembarked in the eastern zone of the Hall, the ground that had turned light green caught our eye first.

[Over there is his stronghold.]

Was it because the poison fog had just cleared? The eastern zone had a somewhat dreary atmosphere. Looking closely, inside the fog area, something like mud huts were lined up here and there.

"Are there incarnations living here?"

[There are incarnations, and there are constellations.]

"I thought you said there was poison fog?"

[Those who submit to the King of the East are not affected by the poison fog.]

As we approached, incarnations who spotted us here and there could be seen hiding inside the mud huts. I quietly observed the stories they emitted, then walked inward.

In the distance, a giant structure that looked like the residence of the King of the East was visible. Looking closely, as expected, it was the corpse of a constellation. The incarnation body left behind by the Eight-Headed Lord, Yamata no Orochi. From inside the giant snake that scattered ominous stories, the presence of the King of the East was felt.

The Handsome Monkey King spoke in a warning tone.

[The Mad Emperor of the East. He is called that.]

"Are you warning me in advance that he won't be reasoned with again?"

[Yes. Because the Mad Emperor is a crazy guy.]

"Metaphorically?"

[No, the guy is literally crazy.]

The closer we got to Orochi's corpse, the more I felt like I understood those words. The thick and deep stories billowing out from inside the corpse.

「It was madness.」

Just by getting close, one felt as if they would be infected by the madness, deeply despairing of everything in this world—a very deep and gloomy madness.

"How did he end up crazy?"

[He...]

The one who answered this time was not the Handsome Monkey King, but the Mass Production Maker. Staring at the severed neck of Orochi visible in the distance, the Mass Production Maker added in a voice mixed with strange awe and lamentation:

[Of our four 'Kings', he is the only existence who has challenged 'Snow White'.]

1035 Episode 63. Ragnarok (9)

---

The only existence among the four 'Kings' who has challenged 'Snow White'. If so, is this story flowing out in front of my eyes now the side effect of the Mad Emperor facing 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'?

[Hey, wait—]

Despite the Mass Production Maker's restraint, I didn't stop and approached the corpse of the World Snake. Looking closely, the snake had a long cut wound not only on its head but also on its torso. A cut wound deep enough to slip inside. The moment I gently put my palm on the snake's hide, I was startled.

It was hot.

A strong heat was flowing from inside the World Snake's hide. If it weren't for the snake's skin, it was an excessive heat that would have cooked everything in this vicinity.

Lifting my status as much as possible, I lifted the split snake hide. Taking a step forward while enduring the hot wind that felt like it would cook my body, I saw a cavity of ashes spread out where the snake's organs should have been. The inside of the cavity was filled with the poison gas emitted by Orochi's corpse, and in the center of the poison gas, a flame that burned everything was blazing.

In the middle of the flames sat the Mad Emperor cross-legged with disheveled hair.

I called the Mad Emperor's name.

"Heewon-ssi."

The Mad Sword Emperor of the 41st turn. The one who had jumped into the 'Bush of the Missing' with me, then escaped the bush with Yoo Joonghyuk—she was standing there, having become the 'Mad Emperor'.

「During the week I slept in the 'Yangji Jade Vase', two months of time had passed outside.」

What on earth had happened during those two months for Jung Heewon to be called the Mad Emperor?

「While I was away, she went up to the 'main battlefield' and fought against 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.」

I calmly called her name once more.

"Heewon—"

At that very moment, Jung Heewon snapped her eyes open. In the brief instant I exchanged glances with her, I instinctively realized that something was wrong.

「She is not the 'Jung Heewon' I know.」

[The 'Madness' of the character has reached its limit!]

[The exclusive attribute 'Butcher of Madness' is running wild!]

I lowered my head reflexively. Then, along with the sound of hair being cut, something sharp brushed above my head.

Formless Sword Qi.

A terrifying sword qi that even sliced through Orochi's hide cut my hair, tore the hide, and flew outward.

「She really intended to kill me.」

I didn't want to admit that fact, so I shouted at Jung Heewon again:

"Heewon-ssi! It's me! Don't you recognize me?"

[The exclusive skill 'Incite Lv. ???' is activated!]

"I am Kim Dokja!"

No matter what state Jung Heewon was in, my [Incite] which had reached its limit should have been effective. Yet why? Jung Heewon's expression darkened even further under my [Incite]. Along with terrifying murder intent, Formless Sword Qi burst out from her entire body once more. What was amazing was that she didn't even draw her sword, nor did she stand up from her seat. Cold sweat formed on my spine.

If my guess was correct, she had definitely reached a new realm of transcendence.

「Mind Sword.」

A realm where one could turn their own will into a blade. If she could pour out such attacks without breathing, it was natural that not just Orochi, but even Orochi's grandfather would be no match for her.

I pulled out 'Unbroken Faith' and hurriedly deflected the Formless Sword Qi. But I couldn't block all the sword qi.

[Damn it! I knew this would happen!]

Entering through the heat a beat late, the Handsome Monkey King shouted as he deflected the Formless Sword Qi:

[Didn't I say she was crazy!]

The Handsome Monkey King seemed to know well that Jung Heewon was in this state.

[She's someone who cannot be reasoned with! She's a fellow who throws bizarre slashes out of nowhere! Furthermore—]

The Handsome Monkey King's eyes glared at Jung Heewon. Looking at the flames rising on those pupils, I was also thinking the same thing.

「Why is Jung Heewon's entire body burning in flames?」

Those flames were not the unique ability of the 41st turn's Jung Heewon. Yet, the fact that her entire body was enveloped in those flames meant...

[The story 'Regret, Ruin, Obsession' is running wild!]

I stared at her stories and made up my mind. As expected, there was only one way to find out.

"Handsome Monkey King. Please buy me some time."

[Are you going to fight? To kill?]

"No, just take a few hits of Formless Sword Qi instead of me. It seems possible with your [Out-of-Body Clone]."

[This bastard thinks my clones are some kind of meat shield...]

"You just need to pluck a few hairs."

[A guy who doesn't even know how precious hair is...!]

Even while speaking like that, the Handsome Monkey King immediately plucked his hair and summoned clones. Instantly dividing, twelve clones charged toward Jung Heewon at the same time.

Kwakwakwakwa!

The Handsome Monkey King's clones fought hard but could not endure the barrage of pouring Formless Sword Qi. But it didn't matter.

「Activate 'Demon King of Salvation' mode.」

Instantly activated star symbols rose over my incarnation body. Activating [Miniaturization] and [Character Transformation] at the same time, I flew toward Jung Heewon like a meteor.

Sgagaak!

The moment the Handsome Monkey King's last clone collapsed after taking the Formless Sword Qi on my behalf, I deactivated [Miniaturization] and [Character Transformation] simultaneously and arrived right in front of Jung Heewon.

"Heewon-ssi."

When my hand touched her forehead, a pain arose as if my hand would burn as it was. Enduring that pain with [The Fourth Wall], I spoke:

[The exclusive skill 'Incite Lv. ???' is activated!]

"Please endure it for a bit."

Together with those words, I used [Bookmark]. Perhaps this madness could not be calmed by [Incite] alone. For reasons unknown, this madness was resisting my [Incite] particularly fiercely. In the end, it meant calming it from the outside was difficult. If so, I had to find the culprit causing this madness inside her inner self.

"I am..."

And as it happened, I knew a character who could delve deeper into an opponent's 'inner self' than anyone else.

"The Salvation Cult Leader, 'Nirvana Moebius'."

Along with my declaration, Nirvana's exclusive skill activated from my palm touching her forehead.

[The exclusive skill 'One Hundred and Eight Agonies Lv. ???' is activated!]

When I opened my eyes again, I was standing in pitch-black darkness.

「This is Jung Heewon's inner self.」

The turbid underground air. The smell of burning mixed acridly. A faint metallic scent. The feel of the solid floor. As my eyes adjusted to the dim surroundings, I quickly got a sense of where this was.

「Subway.」

There was no doubt about it. This was a subway. Among them, it was the platform of a station I knew very well.

「Geumho Station Platform.」

I first met Jung Heewon here. Perhaps because the memory of that time rose anew, a side of my chest throbbed.

「Jung Heewon. She was the first 'character' who became my companion.」

Whether I was 'Cheon Inho' or 'Kim Dokja'. The person who stood by my side regardless of what name I was called.

"Heewon-ssi!"

I couldn't even care for her heart to let my companion end up in this state.

"Heewon-ssi! Can you hear me?"

No matter where I looked on the platform, she was nowhere to be seen. Instead, in the center of the platform sat a strange, unfamiliar container I had never seen before.

Is it there?

It was a worn container that at a glance looked like a convenience store building. The door was closed, but a faint light was leaking through the gap in the door.

As I carefully approached the container, the sound of light music was heard from inside. The sound of someone humming was also heard.

I knocked on the door of the container carefully. But perhaps because the music was too loud, there was no response from inside.

After hesitating for a moment, I carefully pulled the doorknob. And the next moment.

[Aaaah, who is it!]

Along with a rough voice, a clattering sound was heard from inside. Startled, I took a step back, and the door swung open, revealing the owner of the container.

[F-Fuck, who dares to enter someone else's room without—]

The moment I heard the voice, a deep sigh escaped. Perhaps ever since I saw those flames, I had been thinking of her all along.

[Ah.]

Confirming my face, she opened her mouth. Ruffled blonde hair on a pink pajama. A constellation staring blankly at me while scattering white feathers was there.

I smiled at my Archangel whom I had missed for a long time.

"It's been a long time, Teacher Yang."

Demon-like Judge of Fire. Archangel Uriel.

*

When I first heard the story of the King of the East, I thought Archangel Uriel would be here. Because the 'Kings' here were mostly the 'oldbie constellations' of the Kim Dokja Channel.

「As if an unnamed recorder was trying to fit the puzzle of the final 'scenario'.」

Handsome Monkey King, Abyssal Black Flame Dragon, and even the Mass Production Maker. With all the prominent constellations gathered, I thought there was no way Uriel wouldn't be here.

Above all, the 'East' was Uriel's direction even in the main story.

「The Outer God of the 999th turn, the 'Living Flame' rising from the East.」

Since Uriel, who became an Outer God, was also called by such a name, it was natural that the last 'King of the East' would be Uriel. Even if Uriel wasn't the King of the East, I believed she was connected to Uriel in some way.

[I-I mean, you see...]

Staring for a moment at Uriel whose legs were shaking, I looked around the inside of Uriel's container filled with all kinds of little Kim Dokja dolls.

[This! Don't look at this! More than that, the reason I was here is—]

Uriel began to lay out a lengthy explanation. Watching her stutter and even chew on her fingers, I let out a light sigh.

"Uriel."

I didn't know why she was here, but I knew better than anyone that there was no way she would be here with bad intentions.

「She is the Uriel of the 1,864th turn.」

I quietly looked at Uriel. The last time I saw her was at the Recycling Center. There, she had acted as 'Teacher Yang'. At that time, Uriel had descended with half-god status in the scenario to save us in danger, and while enduring the Probability, she fought against constellations including Poseidon.

Since then, contact had been lost and I had been worried all along...

"I'm really glad you are alive."

At my words, Uriel's eyes trembled greatly. She twitched her lips as if wanting to say something, then dropped her head deeply. Though her face was not visible, her shoulders were trembling faintly.

I slowly reached out and wrapped my hand around her shoulder. There was a warmth felt from her shoulder. It was the story of the archangel who had crossed distant worldlines to come all the way here just to save a single person.

"Thank you."

Just as the Great Sage Heaven's Equal did, the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon did, and the Mass Production Maker did. Her reason for coming here was also clear. Because I understood that heart better than anyone, I said to comfort her:

"Don't worry. I will definitely make the conclusion you wanted to see."

I didn't know what Uriel had sacrificed to come to this worldline. Even if I didn't know, I knew her sacrifice was by no means small. That was what crossing worldlines was. She deserved to check the conclusion corresponding to her sacrifice more than anyone in this world.

[No, I got to see you. That's enough for me.]

I didn't know how to answer those words, so I only gave a faint smile. Or rather, the Kim Dokja she wanted was not me. Nevertheless, I was the only Kim Dokja who could speak to her now.

"Is it okay for you to be here? There should be an issue with probability."

[It's fine. When I explained the situation to the 41st turn's me, she readily lent me her incarnation body.]

Fortunately, Uriel seemed to communicate well with her other-worldline self. I asked, somewhat relieved:

"You've been protecting Heewon-ssi here, haven't you?"

Uriel nodded faintly.

[Well, how that happened was...]

According to Uriel's story, it was roughly a month and a half ago when she met Jung Heewon who fell into madness. Having barely recovered from the blow received at the 'Recycling Center' and re-entered the 41st turn, she received a call from someone upon entry.

"Was that Heewon-ssi?"

[No, the one who called me wasn't Heewon.]

"Then who..."

A face flashed through my mind. An incarnation of this world who had a connection with the Archangel Uriel of the 1,864th turn and could cheekily ask for her help.

「"Archangel."」

As far as I knew, there was only one such guy.

「"I need your help."」

The Supreme King of the 41st turn, Yoo Joonghyuk.

1036 Episode 63. Ragnarok (10)

Yoo Joonghyuk summoned Uriel of the 1,864th turn. It wasn't an impossible task. He had previously escaped the 'Recycling Center' and confirmed the physical descent of the Uriel before his eyes, establishing a link with her. The problem was that that prideful guy had actually asked a constellation for help.

"So, what happened? Where was that bastard?"

[The main battlefield of 'Ragnarok'.]

It seemed Yoo Joonghyuk and Jung Heewon had headed straight there as soon as they escaped the 'Bush of the Missing'. At that time, Yoo Joonghyuk had tied three people to his spear and escaped.

「Lee Hyunsung. Shin Yoosung. And Jung Heewon.」

Thinking back, I hadn't heard what happened to the other two besides Jung Heewon.

"Who was Yoo Joonghyuk with? Was it only Heewon-ssi?"

[Yeah, it was like that when I went.]

I felt a bit disappointed. After all, Lee Hyunsung and Shin Yoosung were members of <Kim Dokja's Company> from the 1,864th turn. If they had remained by Yoo Joonghyuk's side, it would have certainly been a great help.

...Well, whatever. Right now, finding out Jung Heewon's exact condition was more important.

"Was Heewon-ssi injured? I heard she fought against Snowfield Kim Dokja."

Uriel shook her head as if she didn't know that far.

[When I arrived, Heewon was already unconscious. She was emitting a cold chill from her entire body... for me, applying urgent treatment was the most I could do.]

I quickly realized what that treatment was.

"So the heat coming from Heewon-ssi's body was indeed..."

[That's right. It's my story.]

As expected, that story originated from Uriel's [Hellfire].

"Was there no other conversation with Yoo Joonghyuk? Didn't he tell you how Heewon-ssi ended up like this?"

[I didn't hear the details. It wasn't a situation where I could stay there for long.]

After leaving Jung Heewon to Uriel, Yoo Joonghyuk immediately ordered them to leave.

「"Archangel. Take that woman and escape the 'main battlefield'. Right now."」

That was the last message Yoo Joonghyuk left. Uriel pursed her lips with a gloomy expression, perhaps remembering that time.

[Actually, there were many things I wanted to ask... but there was no other way. It was clear that Heewon would die if she stayed there. The army of catastrophes was approaching.]

It seemed Yoo Joonghyuk had hurriedly evacuated Jung Heewon right before the war with the catastrophes broke out. Since Jung Heewon's body was freezing in real-time, Uriel said she brought her to the 'Hall' and treated her all this time.

[I bought and fed her the Great Return Pill and elixirs imbued with Solar energy, but they had no effect.]

That was strange. Originally, incarnation bodies exposed to cold or Yin energy, including the Nine Yin Severed Meridians, can show improved symptoms if they consume elixirs containing hot Yang energy. But if the elixirs had no effect, there was only one answer.

"So there's a problem with Heewon-ssi's soul."

Perhaps while facing 'Snowfield Kim Dokja', a crack had formed in Jung Heewon's soul itself. In other words, the cold that was killing her was leaking from her very soul.

[Right now, the most I can do is warm her with my story so she doesn't die. Ah, there was one time when Heewon regained consciousness, though...]

"Was it when we killed the World Snake?"

[That's right.]

She said Jung Heewon, who had been unconscious all along, woke up with a nostalgic look in her eyes the moment she saw Yamata-no-Orochi's head.

"A nostalgic look?"

[Yeah. I can't describe it any other way.]

Jung Heewon slew Yamata-no-Orochi with those 'nostalgic eyes' and lost consciousness again. More precisely, she didn't lose consciousness, but closed the door to her soul while maintaining a subconscious state, as if she were dreaming.

Then was it Jung Heewon's subconscious that fired the Formless Sword Qi at me? It was hard to believe she could show such ridiculous power even in an unconscious state. In the two months I hadn't seen her, Jung Heewon had taken another leap into the realm of transcendence.

"Where is Heewon-ssi now?"

If this was the inside of Jung Heewon's mind, her soul would surely be somewhere here. Uriel let out a weak sigh and gestured to me.

[Follow me.]

I quietly followed behind Uriel. In the dark tunnel, her two wings fluttered outside her training suit. Perhaps because she had suffered so much in the meantime, her wings were heavily damaged.

I stared into the pitch-black tunnel and said,

"It feels strange."

[Huh? What is?]

"It's because this is the first time I've walked side-by-side with you like this."

Uriel looked back, startled, and laughed.

[Ah, ah. Right? Ahaha.]

The star that became infinitely serious when it came to things involving Jung Heewon, but fell apart completely in front of her favorite incarnation. The only star that did not wish for Kim Dokja's death until the very, very end.

I bowed my head and greeted her once again.

"Thank you so much for back then at the Recycling Center."

[No, I went because I wanted to.]

Thinking back, this was practically the first time I was speaking with her properly. When she was 'Teacher Yang', both of us had to speak in line with our concepts anyway. Perhaps Uriel was conscious of that too, as she kept walking slightly ahead with tentative steps instead of walking side-by-side.

I slowly followed behind her.

「At a distance of exactly three steps away, Uriel was walking with light, fluttering steps.」

In writing terms, a gap as wide as a single space. A close distance, but an interval that ultimately prevented us from becoming the same word. Yet a distance where we could still become a single sentence together. We kept walking, leaving exactly that much blank space between us.

As we walked, I thought that perhaps this was the right distance for us. Star and human. Constellation and incarnation. From this distance, she had watched Kim Dokja's story all this time.

"Thank you for protecting Heewon-ssi."

[She's my incarnation, after all. No, of course, she isn't my incarnation yet in this worldline—]

Watching her hair sway in the darkness, I knew Uriel was grinning.

[Because the Heewon of this world is still Heewon.]

"Just like how Uriel in any world is still Uriel."

She probably didn't know what kind of comfort her broad smile brought me.

Perhaps she had relaxed a bit; as we walked along the tracks of the platform, Uriel began talking on her own.

[Did you know? Back at Geumho Station, when you and the kids fought the mole cricket —]

Uriel began talking disjointedly. It was the first time I was hearing about those days directly from Uriel's own mouth. A story from the time when all these scenarios first began.

Instead of just listening to her story, I memorized her expression and tone as she talked excitedly. Thinking that if the real Kim Dokja returned someday, I would definitely tell him about this bright star reflecting in my eyes, and the way she looked when talking so happily.

[So... it reminded me of a long time ago. You know, it was like that in the 1,864th turn too. Right?]

"Yes?"

Listening absentmindedly, I snapped back to my senses. Up until now, I thought Uriel was talking about the original 'Kim Dokja'.

"Were the words you just said your impressions of watching my story all this time?"

[Of course. What else?]

Uriel had been watching my story since that early on?

[I missed it.]

Whether she knew my thoughts or not, Uriel continued speaking as she looked at me with nostalgic eyes.

[It felt as if I were living through those days once again. For the stars that still cannot leave this story, it felt like you were carrying out the scenarios until only a single reader remains... Was that too sentimental? I'm sorry, when they were all life-or-death scenarios for you...]

I couldn't say anything in response.

After a brief silence, a white light could be seen streaming in from afar. The tunnel was finally coming to an end.

"Uriel."

We looked at each other at the same time. In the faintly brightening light, her face was clearly visible. The emotions that couldn't be seen in the darkness seemed to be exposed in broad daylight. A longing faded by the passage of time. And even a resignation that foretold a certain end.

"It's not over yet."

Perhaps to her, who was once the Archangel of <Eden> and had fought the final battle of that terrible scenario, the conclusion of this worldline was faintly visible.

[Kim Dokja. Do you... really have to take Heewon?]

I thought for a moment, then nodded again and replied,

"Yes. She is my companion."

[What if... Heewon can no longer fight?]

Just as I was about to ask what she meant, the sound of water echoed from somewhere. The scenery shifted at the end of the tunnel, and a vast river unfolded before our eyes.

I could see broken bridge piers below the river. A broken subway train lay scattered on top of the piers. In the center of the river, a giant monster species was floating belly-up.

I recognized what that monster was at a glance.

「Sea Commander.」

Why was this scenery—that monster—in Jung Heewon's inner world? In an instant, a series of thoughts connected like a circuit in my mind.

「Why did Jung Heewon react so strongly to the 'World Snake'?」

Along with a feeling of suffocation in my chest, I was overcome with the sensation of understanding everything.

[I couldn't do it. No matter what I did, I couldn't cross over to that scenery. Heewon wouldn't allow it.]

Listening to Uriel's voice, I stared at the dead Sea Commander. The area near the Sea Commander's belly was glowing white.

[Dokja-ya.]

With just that, I could tell where Jung Heewon's soul was right now.

[Save Heewon.]

I nodded and immediately dove into the Han River.

*

Jung Heewon was dreaming.

「I don't want to wake up.」

Even though she knew she had to wake up from the dream, something was weighing her down. As if dragging her down to a deeper depth, the sentences written upon her were binding her.

「You must not wake up.」

Jung Heewon stared at that sentence.

「You must absolutely not wake up.」

Looking at those sentences, Jung Heewon remembered why she had ended up trapped here. There was no order to her memories, but there were still things that came to mind clearly.

The first thing that came to mind was Yoo Joonghyuk's face, clad in a pitch-black coat.

「"Stop! Get back!"」

And the man in a pure white coat who appeared before her eyes.

「"You arrived sooner than I expected. Is my brother not here yet?"」

The moment she first saw that man, Jung Heewon was deeply shocked. One reason was that the man's appearance resembled the person she had protected all this time, and the other was because she felt goosebumps all over her body the instant she looked at him.

「"You are that person, aren't you?"」

Whether it was appropriate to call that being a 'person' was uncertain, but Jung Heewon could tell instinctively. That the man standing before her eyes was the source of all tragedy.

「"I will stop you."」

Jung Heewon was confident. It didn't matter who the enemy was, even if it was a being that transcended humanity. Just to protect a single person, to reach the end of the story with him, she had honed and polished her sword. That was why she swung her sword without hesitation even at that moment.

A trajectory meant purely for killing, showing no mercy in her moves. The sword strike at the end of that trajectory gracefully grazed the man's cheek. With a rustle, stories dripped down like drops of blood.

「"For some reason, I'm envious. Did you want to protect my brother that much?"」

The man seemed to be surprised by her skill, and also seemed to be saddened.

「"But you cannot stop anything. Nothing at all."」

Jung Heewon swung her sword once more at the smiling man who approached. And in the next moment, as if time had stopped, the man reached out his hand.

「"Aren't you curious?"」

For a moment, Jung Heewon couldn't move. Even though she knew it was the man's authority, she couldn't refuse it. The man's cold fingertips touched Jung Heewon's forehead.

「"What will happen to you at the end of this story. What kind of scenery you will see."」

Like turning the page of a book, his cold finger swept her bangs.

「"See it for yourself. The result of your hard work."」

And the destined future unfolded before Jung Heewon's eyes. Scenery where people died, stars fell, and the <Star Stream> finally met its end.

Jung Heewon laughed. She already knew. She knew that such a cruel tragedy would occur at the conclusion of all these worlds, and that it wouldn't simply be a happy ending. So she tried to say that she wasn't afraid of something like this.

At least, until she saw the scene that unfolded in the next moment.

「Jung Heewon blankly stared down at the blood on her hands.」

The moment she read that sentence, Jung Heewon's heart beat strangely. Perhaps it was an ordinary sentence. Looking down at her blood-stained hands was something she had already done hundreds, thousands of times.

「Her sword was piercing through someone's chest. Following the tilt of the blade, stories flowed and scattered beautifully.」

Yet the moment she read the next sentence, she felt strangely afraid of reading what came next. Even so, she couldn't help but read. Because someone's stories flowing along the surface of the sword were so warm and gentle. Because those stories were so familiar—

[You have learned your '■■'!]

Jung Heewon had no choice but to confirm who she had pierced.

「Incarnation Jung Heewon will kill the being she wanted to protect the most.」

Kim Dokja, pierced by her sword, was slowly collapsing onto the ground.

1037 Episode 63. Ragnarok (11)

"No."

The words she muttered without realizing it held her true feelings.

"No! No!"

Watching Kim Dokja vomit blood, Jung Heewon began to struggle frantically. Before her eyes, Kim Dokja was dying in real-time.

"It is useless to resist."

Snowfield Kim Dokja said with a smile.

"Because this record cannot be changed."

Jung Heewon shook her head violently.

There was no way.

She would kill Kim Dokja?

Of all people, she—would kill him? Why?

It made no sense. It was impossible.

Nevertheless, all of her senses were telling her that the words of that existence were not wrong. That [Fate] would surely be executed.

Rage against herself and a sense of helplessness washed over her at the same time.

[Your soul is violently shaking!]

If this was the future she faced as a result of her efforts to protect him, why had she been swinging her sword all this time?

[Your story reacts to your madness!]

Amidst her fading consciousness, Yoo Joonghyuk's shout echoed like a memory.

"Jung Heewon!"

She had to answer. She had to escape from here. But her thoughts could not translate into actions.

With that, Jung Heewon realized. She would now never escape the [Fate] she had seen.

"Of course, there is a way to avoid executing fate."

As Snowfield Kim Dokja smiled, Jung Heewon suddenly lifted her head.

"It is to realize fate first before it occurs."

A dazzling white light flowed from Snowfield Kim Dokja's hand.

"It is to imprison that [Fate] inside you forever."

Feeling the pure white light encroaching on her mind, Jung Heewon lost consciousness.

*

Jung Heewon dreamed an endless dream. It was a harsh and terrible dream.

"Heewon-ssi."

In that dream, she killed Kim Dokja. She killed him again and again.

"Heewon-ssi."

The sensation of the sword blade piercing through flesh with a squelch. Every single time, Jung Heewon's hands trembled and she wailed. She did so even though she knew this was a dream. Because she didn't want to kill Kim Dokja, she struggled desperately to avoid killing him.

But no matter what she did, she eventually killed Kim Dokja in the dream. In the dream, that [Fate] was being constantly executed.

At least while having this dream, [Fate] would not become reality. This was the curse that 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' had placed upon her.

Proxy Realization of Fate.

As long as this dream continued, she could avoid killing the 'real Kim Dokja'. By repeatedly executing [Fate] while trapped in the dream forever, she could postpone his actual murder.

Turning away from the dream-world Kim Dokja who spoke to her, Jung Heewon swung her sword time and time again.

"Heewon-ssi."

She didn't want to see his expression.

"Heewon-ssi."

She didn't want to watch him die.

"Heewon-ssi."

The conclusion was always set.

Ten times, twenty times, thirty times.

Jung Heewon killed the dream-world Kim Dokja over and over.

Once Kim Dokja died, the dream rewound to the beginning just like always.

The desolate battlefield of Ragnarok. At the top of a steep hill, there was Kim Dokja standing with his back turned. Jung Heewon walked toward him. To kill the person she wanted to protect more than anyone else.

"Hmm."

It was then that she felt an unexpected, strange presence. It was clearly the exact same scene as before, but something was different.

An intense gaze felt from right beside her.

Almost convulsively, Jung Heewon turned her head. A person was standing there.

"If I had known my 41st turn self would be this pathetic, I wouldn't have lent you my body in the first place."

The moment she heard that voice, Jung Heewon realized who the other person was.

"You are—"

A memory suddenly flashed in her mind.

When she entered the Bush of the Missing, Jung Heewon had possessed the incarnation body of another 'Jung Heewon' who was not herself.

A body that was extremely trained and abnormally strong.

There was no mistake. The 'Jung Heewon' standing before her eyes now was the very same 'Jung Heewon' she had possessed back then.

The 1,864th turn. <Kim Dokja's Company's> Jung Heewon.

With trembling eyes, Jung Heewon looked at the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon. In an instant, hope bloomed in her heart. Jung Heewon knew vaguely what kind of world the 1,864th turn was.

The worldline that had witnessed the 'conclusion' of this hellish scenario.

If it was this 'Jung Heewon', if she helped her, maybe she could escape from this situation. Maybe she could change the destined fate.

"What are you doing? Go kill him."

However, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon had an indifferent expression.

"You're going to do it anyway. Hurry up and go kill him."

Jung Heewon couldn't understand her words. How could she, of all people, speak like that?

"No."

How could she tell her to kill Kim Dokja?

"Proxy Realization of Fate."

The 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon clicked her tongue as if she already knew the whole situation.

"If you don't kill his illusion here, [Fate] will manifest in reality."

"....."

"Are you going to let that happen? In the end, are you going to just let him die?"

Jung Heewon bit her lip hard.

She actually knew. Jung Heewon knew very well what she had chosen in order to prevent that.

"It was your choice. You chose a life of going mad alone, trapped here and endlessly killing that illusion. A hundred times, a thousand times, ten thousand times. You chose to kill him in your mind."

Jung Heewon shook her head violently. She thought she knew what her choice was. But listening to those words made her doubt.

Do I really know what I chose?

The 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon continued in a cold voice.

"So go kill him. Kill him again and again. Until that person disappears from your heart, until he is no longer precious to you."

"I don't want to—"

[Fate] was forcibly realized, and her sword moved. Another Kim Dokja died. Feeling a pain as if her heart were being ripped apart, Jung Heewon screamed.

"No! I don't want to!"

The illusion shattered. Time rewound as if a regression had occurred. And once again, the back of Kim Dokja standing on the hill was visible.

Staring at his back together, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon said,

"Then you shouldn't have made such a choice in the first place."

Jung Heewon wanted to say that there was no other way. She wanted to say that this was the only way to prevent the realization of [Fate].

"How do you know whether that [Fate] will manifest or not?"

She couldn't help but know.

If anyone else, not just Jung Heewon, had been in that position, they would have had no choice but to know that 'Snowfield Kim Dokja's' words were the truth.

"And even if such a [Fate] were to manifest, do you think Dokja-ssi would just let it happen?"

Jung Heewon was left speechless. Those words were correct. If Kim Dokja had learned of her [Fate], he would certainly not have left it alone.

But before she could reply, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon spoke again.

"No. That man might actually have left it alone. Because if it's a situation where he can die alone and save you, he is definitely the type of person who would sacrifice his own life."

The Kim Dokja that Jung Heewon knew was indeed like that. A person who would sacrifice himself rather than let anyone else get hurt. That was Kim Dokja. That was why she couldn't speak of the [Fate] she faced.

However, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon's words were not finished yet.

"But the Dokja-ssi I know is at least not someone who would turn everything into a tragedy."

"....."

"No matter how many times he dies and sacrifices himself, he is someone who ultimately struggles to find the correct answer. He's someone who would never imprison his companion in a [Fate] like this."

Jung Heewon had no response. The only thing she could do was accept the scolding from another version of herself from another worldline.

"So you should have trusted him."

Jung Heewon wanted to ask. How did you know Kim Dokja so well?

But instead, she asked something else.

"What..... should I do?"

"What do you mean, what should you do? You already made your choice."

"You said Dokja-ssi might know a way to change fate. Then I, too.....!"

"That's only possible for that crazy human."

"If I go crazy, can I change it?"

Stories began to leak from Jung Heewon's entire body.

[The story, 'Regret, Devastation, Obsession' continues the storytelling.]

Watching that story, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon muttered in admiration,

"It really is a crazy story."

Watching another Kim Dokja die, Jung Heewon asked again,

"How crazy do I have to be? As crazy as the stars in the sky? Or—"

Suddenly, a man came to mind. A man wearing a pitch-black coat. A human who was stronger than anyone she knew, like a distant wall.

"As crazy as that person named Yoo Joonghyuk?"

"He's pretty crazy in his own right."

The 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon fell silent as if thinking for a moment. In the meantime, another Kim Dokja died. Time rewound, and Kim Dokja's back appeared in the distance again.

The 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon said,

"Well..... okay. It's difficult, but not impossible. You don't want to kill that person, right?"

"I want to stop [Fate]."

A ring of chaos momentarily flickered in the eyes of the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon. As if trying to read all the stories woven into this [Fate], her eyes sharply stared at Kim Dokja.

After finishing her thoughts, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon spoke.

"Then first, let's practice killing him painlessly."

"What?"

"You are still too weak to overcome [Fate]."

According to the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon, to overcome [Fate], there was no choice but to become stronger than the existence that bestowed that [Fate].

"It happens to be a good place to grow stronger. Now, swing your sword."

"You want me to kill him again?"

"To avoid killing him, you must kill him."

She couldn't understand what that meant.

After hesitating for a moment, Jung Heewon had no choice but to swing her sword.

"Too slow."

Every time she swung her sword, Kim Dokja died.

"Faster."

Kim Dokja kept dying.

"Look closer. You must watch him die precisely. Don't look away. Look clearly at where you swung your sword and what you cut."

Even though she couldn't understand why she had to do that, Jung Heewon did as she was told. She cut Kim Dokja, and did not take her eyes off the dying Kim Dokja. Even though she felt a heartbreaking sadness every time, she did not look away from what she had done. Like that, she swung her sword and killed Kim Dokja again.

With every swing, Jung Heewon felt herself becoming better and better at killing Kim Dokja. And as she became better at killing him, she felt as if she was also learning how to avoid killing him.

Where Kim Dokja's weak points were. What kind of reaction he showed when surprised. How his breathing and muscle movements worked.

Just to kill him with the minimum amount of pain, Jung Heewon swung her sword even more precisely.

Jung Heewon's sword qi became sharper and, at the same time, thinner. Gradually, her sword qi was approaching formlessness.

After killing Kim Dokja how many more times, Jung Heewon became able to cut him before he could even notice her.

Then, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon gave another instruction.

"From now on, do not swing your sword."

"Are we not killing him?"

"No, you have to kill him. You have no choice."

That was true. Her body was being forcibly dragged by [Fate]. If she could avoid killing him just because she didn't want to, she would have done so long ago.

The only thing she could choose was the method of killing Kim Dokja.

"Without swinging your sword, you must be able to cut him solely with the thought that you have swung it."

For a moment, Jung Heewon wondered what on earth that meant.

"Your will becomes the blade."

Suddenly, a story she had once heard from the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint came to Jung Heewon's mind.

"It is a realm that Transcendents call the 'Mind Sword'."

The Mind Sword.

A sword strike that materializes one's own will.

The 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon said,

"If you can cut your opponent with only your will, you can give them the sensation of being 'cut' without actually harming them. A Mind Sword that has reached a certain level can kill the opponent without actually killing them."

She vaguely understood what that meant.

The 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon quietly stared at the 41st turn's Jung Heewon who was listening intently, and then slowly drew her sword.

"And a Transcendent who has trained that Mind Sword to the absolute limit—"

Her beautiful sword strike moved as if cutting an invisible thread in the empty air.

"Can cut their own [Fate] with their sword."

---

A technique that could cut her own [Fate].

For the first time since being trapped in this illusion, Jung Heewon's heart beat.

"Can you use the Mind Sword too?"

"I can't."

"What?"

"There are many ways to grow stronger. The Mind Sword wasn't the path I chose."

The 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon scratched her cheek and added,

"But you are different from me. Since you chose the path of a Transcendent, reaching the Mind Sword will be an effective way to resist [Fate]."

She understood what she meant. Honestly, from Jung Heewon's perspective, it didn't really matter how she grew stronger. What mattered was the result of that method.

"If I learn the Mind Sword."

Jung Heewon looked down at her sword, which was moving to kill Kim Dokja, and asked,

"Can I become stronger than Yoo Joonghyuk?"

Was it an unexpected question?

The 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon widened her eyes slightly, then let out a smirk.

"I know what you're thinking, but even if you work yourself to death, the current you cannot catch up to Joonghyuk-ssi."

"I guess that means you couldn't catch up to him either."

"What are you talking about? You and I are different."

To the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon, who replied with a twitch of her lips, Jung Heewon urged,

"How did you become strong? How can I become as strong as you?"

"You just have to wager everything you have."

"I'm already doing that."

"You don't know what you have."

A pattern of chaos floated in the eyes of the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon.

"You still don't know what it means to fight wagering all of your stories."

Even the same words carry different weight depending on who says them.

Hearing the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon say that, Jung Heewon felt like she was truly someone who knew nothing.

"In that sense, this place is a stroke of luck for you. Because here, there's a slight chance you might catch up to Joonghyuk-ssi."

"A stroke of luck? In a place like this?"

"Everything in this world is ultimately made of stories. When do you think a story grows stronger?"

She had never thought about such a thing.

The 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon spoke as if she expected that.

"It's when you lose something precious."

It was incomprehensible. If you lose something precious, a story grows stronger?

"More precisely, it's when you do not collapse despite having lost something precious."

Only then did Jung Heewon understand a bit why the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon had said 'you cannot catch up to Yoo Joonghyuk.'

Through countless regressions, Yoo Joonghyuk had endured a distant sorrow.

In those regressions, Yoo Joonghyuk must have collapsed and stood back up time and time again. That was why his stories were boundlessly solid.

"Is that why you called it a stroke of luck?"

And right now, in a sense, Jung Heewon was experiencing a regression of 'repeatedly losing' her most precious person. Even though it was an illusion, every time she killed Kim Dokja, her heart endured a deep and vivid sorrow.

"Yes. As long as you don't grow numb or collapse."

Jung Heewon nodded.

"You look quite confident."

To not grow numb, and to not collapse.

"Because there's no way I could ever get used to losing him."

Jung Heewon said so and unleashed the Formless Sword Qi. She cut Kim Dokja again and again. Sorrow washed over her every time. Each time a Kim Dokja died, a series of moments she had spent with him came to mind.

Strangely, tears began to fall. Even though she was someone who rarely cried, tears kept welling up.

Watching her, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon asked,

"Aren't you grieving too much?"

"You told me not to grow numb."

"No, it's just... it seems different from the grief of losing a companion."

Jung Heewon did not answer.

How she interpreted that silence was unclear, but the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon quietly shook her head.

"There's no way."

"What about you?"

"Me? What do you mean?"

"I've read your story before."

The first time Jung Heewon read the story of the 1,864th turn was on the rooftop of the Theater Dungeon.

There, she had met the 1,864th turn's Han Sooyoung, and learned a bit about what kind of life her 1,864th turn self had lived.

"You."

Just like her self in this worldline, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon also had her own Kim Dokja.

"Did you protect him well until the end?"

The answer did not return for a long time. In the meantime, one Kim Dokja, then two Kim Dokjas died. Finally, around the time the third Kim Dokja lost his life, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon spoke.

"I tried."

She tried.

"I tried, and tried again. To the point where I wanted to die, to the point where I felt it would be fine if my breath stopped while training like this."

From the breath mixed between her answers, a heavy regret and despair could be felt.

"But I couldn't protect him."

Jung Heewon turned her head to look at the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon. Perhaps her 1,864th turn self had also felt the same emotions as her.

"Why did you try to protect him to that extent?"

"That's....."

"Did you love him?"

At Jung Heewon's question, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon paused. Then she smirked.

"If anyone else had asked that question, I would have been angry. You don't use those words between family."

"Family?"

"But since it was you who asked, I'll answer honestly."

The gazes of the two Jung Heewons met. In that moment when she could perhaps only be honest to herself, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon finally spoke her true feelings.

"I loved him."

Hearing the answer, Jung Heewon paused. It was because she understood that the word 'love' coming from her mouth was not just love in a common and ordinary sense.

"I still love him."

Some emotions can only be explained that way. Because there is no stronger expression, one has no choice but to use the word love. Yet it was by no means an emotion toward a lover. Perhaps an emotion deeper and encompassing far more.

"That's why I came all the way here too. To protect the person I want to protect in this cursed world."

It was the heart that truly cherished an existence.

Jung Heewon understood that heart. That was why she too could speak with all her heart.

"I want to protect him too."

"Then become strong."

The 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon said. She continued in a voice smoldering with deep anger,

"Become so strong that no star, no scenario, and no [Fate] can block your sword."

Could an existence become that strong? Jung Heewon still did not know. Because she did not know, she had to train.

"To do that, do not draw your sword from now on. Kill that person without drawing your sword."

Jung Heewon followed that advice. But even if she didn't draw her sword, [Fate] moved her.

「Incarnation Jung Heewon will kill the being she wanted to protect the most.」

Because that was the only sentence ruling this world right now.

Tsu-chuchuchuchut.

In the end, her drawn sword cut Kim Dokja. But Jung Heewon did not lose her patience.

"Cut him with only your will. You can do it without drawing your sword."

Of course, it didn't go well. Regardless of her will, the sword was drawn every time and Kim Dokja died.

Yet clearly, Jung Heewon was advancing little by little.

As proof, the execution forced by [Fate] was being delayed bit by bit. Perhaps fate had also read her murderous intent to kill Kim Dokja.

"I can do it. A little more."

Her sword, which was drawn in 10 seconds at first, was drawn in 20 seconds at some point, and then in 30 seconds.

"Hold on a bit more."

It passed 1 minute. Then 2 minutes, 3 minutes, 5 minutes.

"Stronger, forge your will into murderous intent, and mold that intent into a blade."

Countless Kim Dokjas died. Facing the rushing sorrow head-on, Jung Heewon continued to postpone the time.

10 minutes, 20 minutes, 30 minutes.

1 hour. And—one day.

For an entire day, Jung Heewon succeeded in not cutting Kim Dokja.

Soon, one day became two, then three, then four.

Cold sweat pouring from her entire body, Jung Heewon continued to refine her murderous intent.

「A murderous intent that even deceives [Fate].」

From then on, time began to accelerate strangely. It was impossible to tell how much time had passed. Perhaps more than a month had gone by.

After cutting, cutting, and cutting countless Kim Dokjas, Jung Heewon realized that she had reached a certain realm.

In the far distance, there was Kim Dokja. And there was herself watching him. Holding the hilt, she did not draw her sword.

She only thought,

「I cut Kim Dokja.」

The moment she thought so, a scar appeared on Kim Dokja's back in the distance. Watching Kim Dokja slowly collapse, Jung Heewon exhaled.

Watching that from beginning to end, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon said,

"You did it."

The Mind Sword. She had finally ascended to the supreme realm spoken of by Transcendents.

Tsu-chuchuchut.

And an abnormal phenomenon occurred.

An 'event' that had never occurred before was about to be recorded in this world.

"Heewon-ssi."

Kim Dokja, who should have definitely been showing his back, was slowly turning around to face her.

With a stiffened expression, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon said,

"[Fate] has noticed your power."

Kim Dokja approached. He was getting closer step by step.

"It has realized that you threaten it."

「Incarnation Jung Heewon will kill the being she wanted to protect the most.」

Jung Heewon stared directly at that record. Mobilizing all the will she possessed, she directed her murderous intent toward that sentence.

Kim Dokja kept approaching. And finally, when he reached a distance of three steps.

「I cut fate.」

The moment she activated the Mind Sword, Jung Heewon realized.

「Right now, [Fate] was wearing the appearance of 'Kim Dokja'.」

And the Kim Dokja in that illusion was entirely a Kim Dokja she had created. The Kim Dokja she knew. The Kim Dokja she cherished. The Kim Dokja she wanted to protect more than anyone.

「What will happen if I cut that Kim Dokja?」

Jung Heewon knew the answer. The moment she cut him, the concept of 'Kim Dokja' would disappear from within her. She would forget Kim Dokja. She would lose the subject she wanted to protect more than anyone forever.

With that, [Fate] would exhaust its effect.

「[Fate] will eventually be destroyed by realizing itself.」

Jung Heewon trembled.

Her struggle to cut [Fate] was, above all, a process to execute [Fate] precisely.

At the very, very end, Jung Heewon ultimately despaired.

「She cannot kill Kim Dokja.」

Because it could not be overcome, it was truly [Fate]. Jung Heewon asked, shedding tears of blood,

"You..... knew from the start that it wouldn't work, didn't you?"

Watching her from the side, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon slowly nodded and replied,

"Yeah."

"Then why did you make me do this?"

"Because you had to become strong."

"Because I hoped that at least the you here would become strong enough to protect him."

"I became strong! But if I still can't cut fate despite becoming strong, what was the point of all this!"

The 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon smiled faintly and looked up at the sky.

"Did you know? No matter how much humans try, they cannot save each other."

As if there were an invisible star beyond that sky, she slowly reached out her hand.

"The only ones who can be saved are those who have the courage to reach out their hand. Even if what touches their fingertips is a blade, those who can ask to be saved toward that blade's tip. Those who have the courage to grab the opponent's blade's tip and rise again while bleeding."

Jung Heewon couldn't understand those words.

As if it were only natural that she couldn't understand them yet, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon smiled and said,

"Look closely at the person in front of you. He keeps calling you."

Blinking very slowly, Jung Heewon looked at the Kim Dokja in front of her. Then, Kim Dokja called her.

"Heewon-ssi."

It was a voice she had certainly heard countless times. Yet for some reason, at that moment, it sounded different.

"Ah."

Only then did Jung Heewon realize.

「The 'sentence of fate' that had forced her was already gone.」

The one in front of her now was not the Kim Dokja she had created.

This Kim Dokja was—

"Heewon-ssi."

Just since when had it been? How long had he been calling her?

"I'm here."

Listening to Kim Dokja's voice, Jung Heewon felt like she was about to collapse.

In that moment, a pale, long hand approached before her eyes. Jung Heewon blankly stared at the hand, then grabbed it tightly. Strangely, the moment she held it, Jung Heewon felt a sensation as if the deepest part of her heart was being cut.

"Let's return together."

With beams of light, the scenery began to scatter. Watching the space of [Fate] disappear, Jung Heewon hurriedly turned around.

She wanted to ask. If she could really do it. If she could protect the person she wanted to protect this time.

But when she looked back, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon was no longer there.

「Now the real [Fate] will come to find her.」

Within the scattering light, the 1,864th turn's Jung Heewon's voice echoed.

—Don't worry. If you can't do it, no one in any worldline can.

Jung Heewon decided to believe her words.

「And so, at last, all the Kings of the 'Hall' had gathered.」

She took another step forward along with her [Fate].

It was finally time to open the last 'door'.

1039 Episode 63. Ragnarok (13)

---

Jung Heewon did not wake up immediately. Having escaped her inner world first, I laid the collapsed Jung Heewon down for a moment and then checked the stories of my entire body. Fortunately, there did not seem to be any major issues with my stories.

Just in time, the Handsome Monkey King, who found me waking up, asked with a brightened expression,

[Oh, you're already awake?]

The Handsome Monkey King looked back and forth between the collapsed Jung Heewon and me, then asked with an expression that seemed to struggle to hide his shock,

[Did you really defeat the 'Mad Emperor'?]

"She just fainted. I didn't really do anything."

In reality, there was nothing I did inside Jung Heewon. She shattered the illusion with her own strength, and all I did was reach out my hand to her. Even without me, she would have fully overcome her trial.

[The constellation, 'Demon-like Judge of Fire', admires your activity!]

Uriel also seemed to be greatly delighted by Jung Heewon's safe return. I nodded toward the empty air as a greeting of gratitude. Watching that, the Handsome Monkey King narrowed his eyes and asked,

[Are you also acquainted with that crazy archangel?]

"Uriel isn't crazy."

[Until now, it was hard to even approach because that crazy angel kept wrapping around and protecting the Mad Emperor. I thought it was just a good match of crazy ones.]

"Heewon-ssi isn't crazy either."

[Can you still say that after seeing that story?]

As if responding to his words, Jung Heewon's story wound around my fingertips.

[The story, 'Regret, Devastation, Obsession' is delighted by your reunion!]

I smiled and untangled the story wrapped around my finger.

"Doesn't everyone have one or two crazy stories anyway?"

It was only after about ten minutes had passed that Jung Heewon regained consciousness.

"Heewon-ssi, are you awake?"

After waking up, Jung Heewon just shed tears while looking at me for a while. She grabbed both of my cheeks tightly as if to check something, and let out choking breaths.

"Dokja-ssi, are you okay? Since when, since when were you there?"

"I'm okay."

"Didn't it hurt? I'm so sorry. Really..."

I shrugged and replied,

"It was all an illusion anyway."

I recalled when I first entered the 'ichthyosaur' where Jung Heewon was sleeping. Honestly, I was flustered at first. Because as soon as I entered, Jung Heewon threw her sword at me without hesitation.

"It's okay since I didn't die."

To tell the truth, it did hurt. There was no way it wouldn't. But I had the [Fourth Wall], and I was relatively used to pain compared to others. I knew Jung Heewon was growing stronger by cutting me, so I didn't want to interfere with her growth.

"Still, don't ever do that again. Never."

"I understand."

Only after getting repeated promises from me did Jung Heewon let out a deep sigh and relax.

I was able to hear various stories from Jung Heewon about what had happened in the meantime. How she left the 'Bush of the Missing' after separating from me and participated in the 'main battlefield' with Yoo Joonghyuk. How she was chased by the army of catastrophes as soon as she entered the battlefield. And how she encountered 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' while fighting at the front line.

Up to that point, it was a story I had roughly anticipated.

Since Jung Heewon's life had been confirmed, I decided to ask everything I was curious about this time.

"What happened to Ji Eunyu-ssi? And the other companions?"

Jung Heewon slowly shook her head. Unfortunately, because she encountered 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' as soon as she joined the 'main battlefield', she didn't seem to have heard their news properly.

"Did you see <Kim Dokja's Company>?"

"<Kim Dokja's Company>?"

"The ones who came from the 1,864th turn..."

According to Ji Eunyu's information, Snowfield Kim Dokja had definitely clashed with <Kim Dokja's Company>.

"Ah."

Fortunately, Jung Heewon seemed to know about them.

"They are..."

As she spoke, Jung Heewon suddenly frowned and stumbled. The moment I hurriedly supported her, I felt a strong noise embedded in her story. The cause was clear.

「Her memories have been sealed.」

Snowfield Kim Dokja had locked her memories. Why? Was there a reason I shouldn't read her memories?

"Heewon-ssi, are you okay?"

Jung Heewon's shoulders trembled faintly. Just by trying to recall the unclear memory, she seemed to feel a deep dread. Although she had only briefly seen 'Snowfield Kim Dokja', a deep fear of him was deeply engraved in her mind. It was perhaps natural. Because of him, she had been trapped in an illusion for a vast amount of time, killing me again and again.

"Actually, I'm not okay."

"Yes. I know."

"No. Dokja-ssi doesn't know."

She was someone who had mastered the Formless Sword Qi and could now even handle the Mind Sword. Even though she had reached a realm that would earn the respect of many Transcendents, her voice was filled with complete discouragement.

"Honestly, I don't feel like we can win against that existence at all."

"We can win."

At my confident words, Jung Heewon suddenly lifted her head. I gently wrapped my hands around her shoulders and continued speaking.

"If that bastard was truly strong, he wouldn't have done this to Heewon-ssi in the first place."

I had already heard about 'Snowfield Kim Dokja's' strength. For example, the story of how he exercised the authority of the 'Oldest Dream' to shoot down half of the constellations that descended on the 'main battlefield'. It was indeed a shocking power, but in fact, I didn't fully believe that story.

「He hasn't become the 'Oldest Dream' yet.」

There was no way the current him could perform such miracles. The probability of the <Star Stream> wouldn't allow it either. If such a thing really happened, it must have been because he used some special method.

"He judged that Heewon-ssi would be an obstacle to his conclusion. In other words, Heewon-ssi is an important force that is threatening even to him."

Perhaps Snowfield Kim Dokja had some constraint that prevented him from killing the 41st turn's Jung Heewon. Still, he must have known very well that simply leaving her alive would interfere with his conclusion.

"But Heewon-ssi has eventually woken up, and now we can win. Look, we already have a stellar lineup gathered."

Before we knew it, the other 'Kings' were standing behind us: the Handsome Monkey King, the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon, and the Mass Production Maker.

Jung Heewon muttered as if in sigh,

"You've persuaded them all."

"Yes. Lastly, I need Heewon-ssi's help."

"Help."

Jung Heewon repeated my words blankly. I nodded at her and said,

"Yes. Please go with me to the main battlefield. Of course, if you don't want to, you may refuse."

Every time I made an shameless request, I felt like a heavy weight was hanging in my heart. Someone might ask what the point of asking was when I knew she wouldn't refuse. Nevertheless, I had to ask every time. To let her know, or to let myself know, that such requests could be refused at any time—I had to keep asking.

A relationship of trust is like that. Not binding the other person with one's own will. Even if you trust them and know their heart, checking and confirming that heart once again.

"You know my answer."

"Still, I want to ask."

I thought that this time, her answer might be different. Because I didn't know the pain she had gone through, or the fear she felt toward my brother.

"Let's go together."

Nevertheless, I knew she would answer that way.

"Thank you."

Because Jung Heewon was that kind of person. Because she was someone who would not bend her beliefs no matter what. I firmly believed that only such a person could witness the final conclusion.

[Will we depart immediately? The preparations are complete.]

As if the waiting had been long enough, the Mass Production Maker urged. We immediately stepped out of Orochi. We planned to go straight to where the 'door' was by ship.

But what was this? Near the ship parked in the distance, there was a crowd gathered.

「Someone was surrounding the Mass Production Maker's warship.」

Even at a glance, there were hundreds of constellations. There were familiar faces, and some who were not.

The Mass Production Maker clicked his tongue and muttered,

[Oh, they are the residents.]

Residents? Finding them, Jung Heewon responded,

"They are the people who lived inside my territory."

I belatedly recalled the existences that had hidden in the mud huts. The Mass Production Maker added in a pitying tone,

[They are the ones who luckily escaped the 'main battlefield' or survived the 'giant battlefield'.]

Having heard the explanation, I now understood why their faces looked familiar.

Just in time, perhaps finding us, one of the crowd surrounding the warship stepped forward and shouted,

[You guys! You're planning to open the 'door', right?]

I wondered if they wanted to go with us, but looking at their expressions, they were completely terrified. I felt like I knew what purpose they had gathered for.

[We cannot let you do that!]

[You cannot go! You must not open that door!]

[How dare you touch that door...]

[Kings! Are you in your right minds? Don't you all know what will happen if we open the 'door' now!]

Along with the voices pouring out at once, the dark sky of the 'Hall' began to shine brightly. Those stars had gathered to stop us from opening the door to the 'main battlefield'. Seeing the sky filled with constellations that had been hiding until now made me feel strange. The night sky of the <Star Stream>, which had been so dark when I needed help, was shining so brightly just to block me.

The Mass Production Maker spoke gently,

[We aren't asking you to come with us, so please step aside.]

[We cannot do that!]

The Abyssal Black Flame Dragon yawned lazily, and the Handsome Monkey King picked his ear as if bored. Jung Heewon and the Mass Production Maker glanced at me without adding any more words. They were probably leaving the choice to me.

I slowly spoke,

"No matter what you say, the 'door' will eventually open. Don't waste your time and step aside."

If necessary, I could have opened the way with [Incite] or swept them all away with a story, but I deliberately did not do so. Perhaps it was the last bit of pity remaining in me.

However, there was one star that trampled on that pity.

[I knew you would react that way.]

I recognized the face of the constellation who stepped forward as he said that.

[It has been a long time, Demon King of Salvation. Do you remember me?]

I stared at his face, which was covered with a double eye patch, and was newly amazed. My god, that constellation was still alive?

「King Oedipus.」

'The one who stabbed his own eyes' - King Oedipus. The star who had hindered me at the 'Recycling Center' and a historical-grade constellation of <Olympus> was here.

[Please give up on the 'door'. If you open that door, all the constellations here will die.]

"I'm sorry, but the door must be opened."

[If you persist, we have no choice but to use strong measures.]

I let out a smirk.

"Strong measures?"

Sensing the status boiling from my entire body, King Oedipus stumbled back. It was inevitable. I now possessed power comparable to a Myth-grade constellation, while he was merely a historical-grade constellation.

He quickly bowed his head with a servile expression and shouted,

[G-Great existence! I know your strength very well! But we have no choice this time. If you open that 'door', everything is finished. Everyone here will die!]

As if he couldn't back down even with such a gap in status, King Oedipus continued his true voice while trembling.

[I heard... you cherish your companions very much.]

As King Oedipus gestured lightly, someone was seen being dragged from behind him. An ominous premonition struck me in an instant.

[So please show mercy and do not open the door.]

King Oedipus pointed his sword at the existence kneeling behind him and said,

[Please, value your companion this time as well.]

In an instant, my blood felt like it was running cold. Because the person Oedipus was pointing at was someone I also knew very well.

1040 Episode 63. Ragnarok (14)

Jung Heewon's face turned pale as she immediately recognized who was taken hostage.

"It's Master Samyeong."

I did not hesitate to pull out 'Unbroken Faith'.

「Master Samyeong was still alive.」

I still remembered his last moments. He took Mitra's blow on our behalf and sent my companions and me to the 'Bush of the Missing'. How could I forget his sacrifice?

[Stop. The moment you draw that sword, this constellation dies.]

King Oedipus had an expression that showed he had nothing to lose anyway. It was the bravado of someone who thought dying by my hand here or dying because the 'door' opened was all the same.

In any case, I didn't need to use a sword. I had a tongue faster than any blade. But just as I was about to raise my status and use [Incite] without him noticing, someone stepped forward before me. It was Jung Heewon.

"Putting you in my 'territory' was out of consideration for the 'Eight-Headed Lord'."

A cold chill emanated from her entire body, and her tone had changed.

"Yamata-no-Orochi, who died by my hand, wanted you to live. That is why I left you alone even when you invaded my territory as you pleased."

At Jung Heewon's words, I felt as if the residual thoughts of Orochi were growling somewhere. The king's status flowing from her entire body. Only then did I personally realize the fact that Jung Heewon was one of the four kings of this 'Hall'.

"But fulfilling his request ends today."

[The constellation, 'Demon-like Judge of Fire', vomits anger!]

Witnessing even the archangel's halo rising behind Jung Heewon, King Oedipus hurriedly shouted,

[W-Wait. Stop, Mad Emperor! This is not something you should interfere in—!]

Oedipus's head flew off. A strike that left no time to even scream. Seeing King Oedipus's severed head roll helplessly on the floor, the surrounding constellations shrieked in horror.

[What—]

Almost simultaneously, the heads of the dozen or so constellations surrounding Master Samyeong also disappeared. As if seeking to completely block even resurrection using attributes or stigmata, the incarnation bodies of the constellations whose heads were blown off were cut by dozens of sword qi and torn to pieces.

「Mind Sword.」

Jung Heewon's murderous intent, which had reached the supreme realm, had become a blade and brutally slaughtered the incarnation bodies of the constellations.

[Argh, aah, aaaah!]

As the constellations, including King Oedipus, lost their lives in a single strike, the remaining constellations belatedly regained their senses, screamed, and retreated.

Jung Heewon and I did not miss that gap and ran toward the collapsed Master Samyeong. Checking Master Samyeong's condition up close, it was far more serious than I had thought.

"Master Samyeong."

His entire body's stories were almost completely shattered. The star of the Korean Peninsula was barely breathing his last breath, looking like it was a miracle he was even alive.

[The constellation, 'Bald General of Justice', is looking at you.]

The starlight that had observed me for a long time was there. An incarnation body damaged beyond repair, where asking if he was okay was already meaningless. Sadly, this was the only thing I could say to the star facing death.

"Master, it's okay now."

I quietly held his crumbling hand. I wanted to sweep away all the stars before my eyes right this instant. Without leaving a single one, I wanted to empty the sky of this 'Hall'.

Then, Master Samyeong spoke.

[Successor.]

The last true voice of the star that had gathered all its stories.

[Please forgive them.]

For a moment, I couldn't understand his words.

[They are merely terrified.]

It was those very stars that had put him in this state.

[Please give them a chance for the last 'story'.]

With those words as his last, all of Master Samyeong's stories scattered. I looked down at the empty ground where he had disappeared. A raw emotion that could hardly be refined was surging inside me.

[Aaaah—]

[Run away! Run!]

Sensing the ominous momentum from me, the constellations hovering nearby turned around and began to flee in a hurry.

I released a true voice.

[Stop.]

Before the true voice imbued with a powerful [Incite], all the constellations in the area froze in place.

[You cannot go anywhere.]

Faced with a Myth-grade status and rendered powerless, the constellations were like children. Some burst into tears, while others closed their eyes as if foreseeing their end.

Of course, not everyone was like that. While some stars tried to appear calm because they hadn't run away from the start, others shouted back at me, placing the blame on me instead.

[D-Didn't he ask you to forgive them!]

[Are you going to ignore the wishes of the Bald General of Justice!]

I spoke to those stars.

[I know who you are. Stars of 'Valhalla Hall'.]

I continued speaking, engraving the faces of each of the bastards who spewed shameless true voices into my eyes.

[You haven't forgotten the 'debt' you owe me, right?]

Looking at each other with faces wondering what that meant, the expressions of the stars rapidly stiffened. Most of them were constellations who had bet D-Coins on 'my defeat' in the final wager of 'Valhalla Hall'. Among them, there were those who had invested in the wager by taking out unreasonable loans. In the end, they lost the bet, and as a result, incurred massive debt.

[We do not owe you a debt! The one we owe is—]

[Yes, the Golden Dice Hall.]

I pulled a shining die from my chest.

「Mitra's Fate Die.」

The star relic entrusted to me by Mitra, the former chairman of 'Valhalla Hall' and the owner of the 'Golden Dice Hall'. Recognizing the die, the stars let out groans of grief.

[Ah, aah...!]

At that time, by winning the wager, I had lent 10 million D-Coins to the 'Golden Dice Hall'. And the debt that the 'Golden Dice Hall' owed me was also the debt that those constellations who lost the bet had to pay.

[The star relic, 'Fate Die', proves its qualification!]

[From now on, you act as the agent of the 'Golden Dice Hall'.]

[You can collect from the stars on behalf of the 'Golden Dice Hall'.]

The values of the stars' stories and their star relics were rising before my eyes in real-time.

[I will collect that debt now.]

Realizing what that meant, the stars trembled.

「Story Collection.」

An authority that the 'Golden Dice Hall' could exercise against stars that failed to pay their debts on time.

[Please! Please—!]

The stories of all the stars who owed a debt to the 'Golden Dice Hall' were scattering bit by bit, turning into D-Coins.

[Save me! Please save us! I don't want to die like this!]

Watching the stars cry miserably, I didn't feel much sympathy. They must have heard the same words from countless incarnations. But how many of them had actually saved the incarnations who begged for their lives?

Nevertheless, looking around at those stars, I suppressed the rising hatred and continued speaking.

[If you go with me to the 'main battlefield', you do not have to pay the debt you owe me.]

At my words, the constellations raised their heads one by one and stared at me blankly.

[If you still have courage left, if you have the will to check the record of the <Star Stream> one last time.]

Actually, I didn't expect much as I spoke. These were stars that had hidden here because they feared the end. I thought cowardice that believed dying on the 'main battlefield' or dying here was all the same wouldn't change with just a word or two of mine.

「This was out of courtesy for Master Samyeong, who had helped me.」

Indeed, after I finished speaking, the stars fell into silence. As expected, no star stepped forward to volunteer. Just as I was thinking that resuming the 'collection' was the only way, someone's true voice was heard.

[Are you serious? Are you really going to give those stars a chance?]

He was not someone who owed a debt to the 'Golden Dice Hall'. But I knew who he was. Because he was a constellation I had once met and fought to the death in the 'New Murim Earth'.

[The constellation, 'Purifying Flame', is looking at you.]

The Purifying Flame 'Agni'. One of the Lokapala of the great <Vedas>, he was also hiding here. However, perhaps because he had suffered a fatal wound on the 'main battlefield', his incarnation body was almost half-destroyed, and his revealed status was not what it used to be.

I looked at him and said,

[Yes. I will give you a chance.]

At my answer, Agni seemed genuinely shaken. He fell silent for a moment as if measuring my sincerity, then spoke in a voice laced with a bit of wonder.

[Do you believe you can change the conclusion of the world by gathering stars that can no longer illuminate anything? You are truly foolish...]

Agni bit his lips several times, then continued as if chewing his words,

[Every nebula has given up. <Olympus>, <Vedas>, <Papyrus>. Yet you, who are just alone, still believe that the 'conclusion' of the world can change even in the face of this end.]

Agni was a star who had once received a fragment of the 'Snowfield'. Since he would know his strength better than anyone, I could understand the despair he suffered. But in the next moment, he uttered unbelievable words.

[If it's alright... I would also like to accompany you on that path.]

Honestly, it was unexpected. I never imagined that he, who had been an enemy until now, would step forward to help me.

[Surya is fighting on the 'main battlefield'.]

I recalled how Surya had rescued Agni in the 'New Murim Earth'. Perhaps Agni wanted to repay the favor from back then.

As Agni declared his join, another constellation stepped forward.

[I will go too.]

He was also a star I knew.

[The constellation, 'Brash Swamp Predator', is looking at you.]

He was a story-grade constellation of the 'Gourmet Association'. Although he had no particular connection with me, he was a star that had a slight relationship with the original Kim Dokja. He glanced at Agni and me with somewhat indifferent eyes, then spat out a rough true voice.

[All contact with other constellations has been cut. Even the Myth-grade constellations of the Absolute Evil system have completely hidden their presence. The meaning of that fact must be clear. I want to confirm their end with my own eyes.]

And so, regardless of good and evil, the stars began to join. Watching the stars declare their participation one by one, only then did I understand why Master Samyeong had asked me to forgive them. Perhaps he thought my forgiveness could become the last spark of this world.

[Is it true... that we don't have to pay the debt if we go with you?]

And for the first time, one of the constellations who owed me a 'debt' asked. It was not a constellation I knew. I quietly looked at his tattered incarnation body and slowly nodded.

[Yes.]

They were stars that already had nothing left but a handful of starlight. But even a handful of starlight can illuminate the darkness. Perhaps what I needed right now was such a small probability.

[I-I will go too. I will go.]

[Is it really... alright to do so?]

The stars, which were few at first, began to multiply. Stars that had sat down in the face of the predestined destruction. The final embers were rising in their eyes.

[I will go too. If you permit it. If we are really allowed to see that conclusion!]

Of course, not every star was like that. As if throwing cold water on the burning atmosphere, an old star shouted,

[Foolish bastards! You don't know what is inside that door!]

The constellation, who was dripping stories from his mouth, kept muttering like gibberish,

[Hehe, hehehe! You will die horribly! You will see a conclusion far more wretched than being collected here! You...]

As I lightly waved my hand, his stories turned into D-Coins and were collected by me.

[If anyone else wants to be collected, keep talking.]

I had no tolerance to bestow upon a star that had collapsed in fear of the next scenario. Nevertheless, perhaps because of the curse of the dead star, a brief silence descended on the area. One of the contemplating constellations slowly spoke.

[Actually, we know that what he just said is right. Even if we go up to the next scenario holding onto hope like this, what awaits us is only a horrible end.]

The constellation who had bowed his head in grief suddenly raised his head and asked,

[Even so, do you want to show us, of all people, the 'next story'?]

[You must find the story you want to see yourselves.]

I had no intention of passing my hope even to the constellations. The scenarios ahead cannot be navigated unless they shine their own light. I had no intention of becoming a babysitter for lost stars.

[I just made a final proposal. Now, if you dislike it, I will resume the collection. If that is the ■■ you want.]

[W-Wait! We will join too!]

Soon, as all the remaining stars declared they would follow me, the Mass Production Maker, who had been watching from the side, stepped forward.

[Those who are ready, board the warship. And if anyone needs treatment or story repair, let me know. I can perform simple emergency treatment.]

As if to prove his words, butlers descended from the warship and guided the constellations. Watching the constellations board the warship submissively, the Mass Production Maker said with a complex expression,

[As you know, most of those stars won't be of much help to you.]

"Constellations are originally of no help. They've been a hindrance ever since they started going on about sponsor sponsors."

[Then why did you accept them?]

"Nevertheless, without those stars."

I thought of the stars in the sky that had watched my story for a long time, and then of Master Samyeong, and said,

"All stories would not have flowed to this point."

Sensing whatever I thought, the Mass Production Maker also put on a troubled smile.

[It is truly strange. Listening to you, it feels as if all the long years were connected to this very moment.]

After all the constellations boarded the warship, we also boarded. Now, only one procedure remained.

When I took out the key I received from the Mass Production Maker, the Black Flame Dragon, seeing that, also took out his key. Jung Heewon also handed over the key she possessed.

"I didn't know we would actually use this."

Lastly, I looked at the Handsome Monkey King. Because he was the only one who hadn't handed over his key yet.

[I still do not completely trust you.]

He stared at me with displeased eyes for a moment, then added with a pout,

[But you have sufficiently proven your qualifications.]

As the Handsome Monkey King pulled the last key from his chest, all four keys were finally gathered.

The Ape King's Key.

Wealth King's Key.

Dragon King's Key.

Mad Emperor's Key.

The warship, jumping with warp drive, reached the front of the sealed door in an instant. Perhaps because we gathered the four keys, a translucent lock floated before me the moment we reached the door.

The lock had five holes. I inserted the keys one by one matching the holes. However, even after inserting all the keys, one hole remained.

The Mass Production Maker said with a smile,

[The last key is the finger of the one who gathered the 'four keys'.]

I hesitated for a moment. This wouldn't get cut off if I put it in, right? Sensing my thoughts, the Mass Production Maker smiled mischievously.

[Since no one has tried it, I can't guarantee what will happen.]

I put on a bitter smile and slipped my index finger into the lock. Fortunately, my finger was not cut. Soon, with a clatter, the seal of the door began to unlock. The talismans fell off, and the chains made of story metal were unraveled. The Handsome Monkey King's Ruyi Jingu Bang was also retrieved.

「Only those who have stacked five stories can reach the qualification of a star.」

The stories engraved on the door were flowing out.

「Only the star that has proven its qualification shall inherit the records of the great <Star Stream>.」

And the door opened.

[Aaaaah...]

Was it because of the thought of stepping onto the final battlefield once again? Some stars groaned in fear. But the Kings by my side had calm expressions.

I looked back at them with a renewed state of mind.

Jung Heewon, a Transcendent who had attained the realm of the Mind Sword and was an incarnation supported by the archangel of the 1,864th turn—Uriel, who was once a great commander of <Eden>.

The Handsome Monkey King, who did not become the 'Oldest Liberator', but gathered all the stories of his brothers to finally be reborn as a single existence.

The Abyssal Black Flame Dragon, who could exert status comparable to a 'Myth-grade constellation' if he received the protection of the Recorder.

Lastly, the Mass Production Maker, who could exert probability exceeding story-grade through the power of coins.

The fact itself that I was with them before the final scenario was a miracle to me.

[The seal of the 'door' has been released!]

The door emitting an ominous aura slowly opened, and the Mass Production Maker spoke.

[We will enter.]

The warship accelerated and passed straight through the door. I felt a brief sensation of nausea, and in the next moment, the scenery shifted.

"Is this... the 'main battlefield'?"

We were clearly supposed to have arrived at the 'main battlefield', but something was strange. We were still in the dark space. A sensation of my heart fluttering.

I heard the stars murmuring.

[What, what is that—!]

Someone screamed.

Something was looking this way from the other side of space.

---

With a sensation of hair standing on end, I and the other Kings also turned that way. The first to speak was the Handsome Monkey King.

[Huangdi?]

There were the Myth-grade constellations of <Huangdi>.

Three Sovereigns and Five Emperors. The Myth-grade constellations representing <Huangdi>—five of them were there.

Fuxi.

Shennong.

Nüwa.

Huangdi.

Zhuanxu.

But something was strange. The five constellations, who possessed a distant status, had not descended in their normal incarnation bodies.

[What on earth is that—]

A bizarre spherical shape in which the heads of the five constellations were stuck together like organic matter was slowly rotating, spanning across space like a surrealist sculpture.

In that moment when everyone was lost in thought, the face of the frowning Shennong opened its mouth.

【Eternity】

Next, Fuxi, who was shedding tears of blood, said,

【End】

Nüwa, whose lips were twisted, and Huangdi, whose eyes were rolled back, also spoke.

【Protagonist】

【Record】

The last to speak was Zhuanxu, whose tongue was cut off.

【Baby】

The chorus of the Three Sovereigns and Five Emperors began.

The warship's defense system was activated. It was a story barrier that blocked all story waves in the area.

[Everyone be careful!]

The moment the Mass Production Maker shouted a warning, a heavy roar echoed throughout the warship. A huge storm of status swept through the area.

Even though the warship's barrier was fully operational, the historical-grade constellations who witnessed the Three Sovereigns and Five Emperors rolled their eyes and fainted on the spot. Most of the constellations who remained awake were also trembling convulsively, venting stories from their entire bodies.

[Ugh... Aaaaah!]

Their souls could not endure just hearing the sorrowful screams of the maddened Three Sovereigns and Five Emperors.

[Three Sovereigns! What happened!]

[Why are the great Myth-grade constellations turned into such monsters!]

I bit my lip hard. It was clear why the Three Sovereigns and Five Emperors had ended up in such a state.

"Dokja-ssi."

Jung Heewon spoke in a fearful voice for the first time. It was not a voice of fear toward the monsters that the Three Sovereigns and Five Emperors had become. I was also looking at the same place as her. Standing beside that horrible Myth-grade monster was an existence we knew well.

「Snowfield Kim Dokja.」

As if he already knew I was coming, he was looking at me. The mouth of the bastard, on which an ominous smile was hung, slowly opened.

【I.】

My heart beat strangely. It wasn't even this kind of feeling when I saw the deformed Three Sovereigns and Five Emperors. A sensation as if an indescribable gaze of eternity was scanning us. It felt like time had stopped. A chilling sensation spread down my spine. The moment I felt I had to shut his mouth—

【Will no longer read you.】

The sound of a book closing was heard from somewhere. A feeling of something breaking and sliding down. A sensation of all the scenery before my eyes being erased at once. My body creaked and wouldn't move well. I turned around with all my might. Just in time, Jung Heewon was also looking at me.

"Dokja—"

Her figure was gradually fading. It wasn't just Jung Heewon. The Abyssal Black Flame Dragon, the Mass Production Maker, the Handsome Monkey King, and all the stars aboard this warship as well.

「Existences that did not receive his gaze were disappearing from the story.」

[Aaaaah□—]

The constellations began to disappear with screams. The scenery slid down, and everything in my field of vision began to turn into blank spaces. As if they had never existed from the start, as if no story remained there anymore—

I looked down at my hands. I could see my hands gradually disappearing. More precisely, the components that made up me, the stories that read me, were scattering.

"Hee□-ssi—"

All the characters are erased, and the scenery where they stood disappears. The darkness, our light, is lost. Soon the stars surrounding us disappear, and the status and individual perish.

「This was the authority of the 'Oldest Dream'.」

Our stories were no longer being read. The number of blank spaces gradually increased, and soon everything became a blank space.

「The universe that he does not read is excluded from the story.」

Yet, even after witnessing such an overwhelming authority, my mind was strangely peaceful.

In the distance, I could see my brother, who was staring at me, slowly turning his head. He did not take his eyes off me and him. I looked into his side, his back. Looking at him, looking at his stories, sensing his authority, looking at that story, I was reading the whole world.

And I recalled.

I I I

Boom!

In an instant, the surrounding scenery flipped.

Tsu-chuchut!

The scattered stories began to return.

Tsu-chuchuchuchut!

「My brother can never erase me.」

As the recording restarted, the stars that had been excluded from the story regained their original light.

「Because the current me was the only 'Kim Dokja' with a status equal to his in this universe.」

The scenery of space returned, and the outer wall of the warship was restored. The constellations collapsed on the floor spat out their held breath.

[Hah, haaaah...!]

Jung Heewon stumbled as if dizzy, and the Mass Production Maker also caught his breath while leaning on his cane.

[Just now, that was...]

The Abyssal Black Flame Dragon frowned in anger, and the Handsome Monkey King let out a hollow voice as if reminiscing about the previous wonder.

[Is that... the existence closest to the 'Oldest Dream'.]

As if staring at a mountain of a distant height that he couldn't reach, the Handsome Monkey King asked in a trembling voice,

[Do you really believe you can fight and win against such a thing.]

I stared at my brother in the distance and answered in a calm voice once again.

[We can win.]

As if responding to my answer, messages floated before my eyes.

[The constellation, 'Purifying Flame', sincerely admires your skill.]

[The constellation, 'Brash Swamp Predator', shows strong trust in you.]

[The constellation, 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon', snorts, saying that you must at least be at that level to be together.]

[The constellation, 'Mass Production Maker', nods meaningfully.]

...

[All constellations on the warship feel an indescribable wonder from you.]

In the distance, 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' was seen turning his back and disappearing. The deformed body of the Three Sovereigns and Five Emperors also disappeared somewhere following him.

By that, I realized.

「From the beginning, he knew that I would block his authority.」

If so, that must have been his first greeting before the final scenario.

[The recorder of fear, 'Fox Who Rules the Sky', pays respect to your 'reading'.]

[The recorder of fear, 'Demon King of the Cinema', frowns at your 'observation'.]

[The recorder of fear, 'Prince of the Wolves', looks forward to your conclusion.]

...

Sensing the gazes of the recorders waiting for the final record of this world, I stared blankly at the back of my retreating brother.

There were many things I wanted to ask. What happened to <Kim Dokja's Company> who had gone to find him, and what happened to the other readers. What do you hope to achieve by becoming 'the only Kim Dokja' to this extent.

But I did not ask. Because there was not much whitespace left in this world anyway.

「Everything will be known in the conclusion.」

Along with the gravity of the scenario pulling us, the warship began to accelerate again. And finally, the scenery of the 'main battlefield' unfolded before our eyes.

[You have entered the 'main battlefield' of 'Ragnarok'!]

*

In the darkness, Kim Dokja slowly opened his eyes. The place where he opened his eyes was a pure white, ash-colored room. He always fell asleep in this room, and woke up in this room again.

「The room that resembled the landscape of his birth.」

Only in this room could he dream. The dream of reading a universe full of bright stars. The dream of new stars rising and setting. The dream of a wonderful protagonist, and the dream of a man who was not a protagonist becoming a protagonist. And the dream of a single reader who reads all those stories.

Leisurely rising from his seat, Kim Dokja drew the curtains of the window, and the dark sky of the <Star Stream> looked down at him.

Pachuchut.

A small spark. Something dripped from his mouth. A line of story was formed at the corner of his mouth reflected in the window. The excessive use of probability had put a burden on his incarnation body. But Kim Dokja wiped the corner of his mouth as if he didn't care at all and asked,

"You saw it too, right?"

In a tone that made it unclear who he was speaking to, he continued,

"That guy finally came all the way here. He gathered all the fragments and rose to the final scenario."

A somewhat excited monologue echoed in the solitary room. Kim Dokja shook his head as if he didn't hate such silence, then muttered to the air with a bitter smile,

"The stage that you recorded and I created. Han Sooyoung."

As if responding to his words, a small spark momentarily lit up in the air.

「Kim Dokja felt it was funny to see himself talking like a villain. But he had no choice. Because this was the role he had chosen. Just as his father had.」

Kim Dokja smiled quietly.

"Do I look like that?"

「Deceiving himself was the easiest thing for him. Because while reading something, he could always become someone other than himself. Because only by doing so could he endure this world.」

Kim Dokja silently read and read the sentences written for him. While reading those sentences, Kim Dokja could also forget many things. The conclusion of this world, and the cold sorrow that suddenly welled up.

Taking a light breath, Kim Dokja spoke again,

"Soon the final chapter of all stories will begin. Are you ready to write?"

Then, a spark flared in the air once again. Kim Dokja stared at the spark, then spoke again,

"Yes, I haven't forgotten the promise. As long as you write me until the end, I will definitely keep the promise."

Saying that, Kim Dokja slowly closed the curtains. Then, as he lightly flicked his finger, a passage opened on one wall of the white room.

Kim Dokja walked toward the passage. Beyond the elongated oval door, there was a long hallway. It was also a hallway painted in a white close to ash.

Peculiarly, on the sides of the hallway, objects reminiscent of coffins were displayed. On top of the translucent coffins, the names of the individuals inside were written.

Kim Dokja looked at the individuals in the coffins with nostalgic eyes.

「Yoo Sangah.」

「Shin Yoosung.」

「Lee Gilyoung.」

「Lee Seolhwa.」

「Lee Jihye.」

Those names were once called by a single name.

"Kim Dokja Company."

Tsu-chuchut, and a spark flared in the air once again. It was a far more fierce spark than before.

"Don't be so angry. It's just a joke."

Tsu-chuchut.

"Since I was always the only one in a coffin, I just wanted these people to feel the same way at least once."

Inside the translucent coffins, besides the individuals themselves, ash-colored stories were filled and sloshing. Perhaps they were dreaming a deep dream inside those coffins. A sweet dream where no one needed to be buried, and thus there was no reason to grieve over unforeseen losses. Perhaps in that dream, they were living in the big house they wanted so much.

"Please endure it a little."

Kim Dokja looked at those individuals, muttered something softly, and passed the coffins one by one.

Eventually, Kim Dokja's gaze stopped at the last coffin. The moment he looked at the coffin, the individual inside also opened his eyes and glared at him.

「Yoo Joonghyuk.」

Kim Dokja silently received that burning gaze. Enduring the gaze that seemed ready to break the coffin, step out, and cut him down—a gaze containing distant anger and sorrow—Kim Dokja stood there for a long time. And he muttered with a very faint smile,

"Yes, you have the qualification."

Eventually, as Yoo Joonghyuk closed his eyes again, Kim Dokja said in passing,

"...Thank you."

Lastly, he looked back at the white hallway he had walked. On that hallway reminiscent of a snowfield, not a single footprint remained.

「Perhaps there was another conclusion.」

"Do you really think so?"

「Nevertheless, he chose this path.」

Kim Dokja nodded. Now the end of that path was before his eyes. As he walked to the end of the hallway, a hall welcoming him appeared.

【Oh Oh Oh Oh Oh Oh Oh Oh Oh】

With his appearance, the Outer Gods who were wandering around the hall roared.

【O l d e s t D r e a m】

【T h e t i m e t o r e m e m b e r u s h a s c o m e】

The Outer Gods of the forgotten galaxies, those who were once the terror and tyrants of a world. Existences that were once great stars but had fallen into Outer Gods were also seen. Their stories were erased over long years, and they were howling after even their names were taken away.

Kim Dokja walked on the soft carpet with a smile as if to soothe them. At the end of the carpet was a throne reminiscent of an absolute throne.

The Outer Gods bowed their heads along the path he walked. As he ascended to the closest place to the throne, the deformed body of the Three Sovereigns and Five Emperors nearby let out a resentful cry.

Kim Dokja, who lightly stroked the forehead of the deformed body, slowly turned and looked down at the world.

「It took a very long time to get here.」

The stage and characters were all gathered. Now, only one remained. In a voice containing a cold chill, the Snowfield Kim Dokja sitting on the throne said,

"Let's begin the final story."

1042 Episode 64. Eternal Night (1)

---

「"Even so, do you still believe a world where 'stories' exist is right?"」

- Dokkaebi King

*

Cha Yerin looked at the boiling black dust cloud in the distance and recalled the day she first came here.

「"Please disappear for a moment."」

It was just a single wave of a hand. With that one gesture, all the history she had lived through was denied. Excluded from the battlefield in an instant, the place she fell was the center of the 'constellation camp'.

「"What? This guy. He's from the 'Disaster' side, isn't he?"」

She became a prisoner of the 'constellation camp'. That was already two months ago. During those two months, so many things had happened. Countless stars had fallen, and as the sky of the <Star Stream> darkened, the 'constellation camp' tasted countless defeats.

And she, who was once a prisoner of the 'constellation camp', had now become an 'Einherjar' representing the camp to fight against the disasters.

Thump. Thump. Thump. Thump.

In the far distance, beyond the dust cloud, the sound of regular vibrations echoed. Cha Yerin knew where that vibration originated.

「Disasters.」

The deformed life forms that this world collectively called so were beyond that cloud. The 'Nameless Things' running while turning the earth over. Following them were the mid-to-large-sized 'Outer World Gods'—the so-called 'Story Eaters'. Cha Yerin stared with calm eyes at the monsters whose very appearance made her shiver.

Since she had been active in the 'Disaster Camp' longer than anyone, she could accurately read their intentions just by observing the movement of the horde.

「The disasters acted as if they would attack the world at any moment, but if looked closely, they were merely existing there.」

The disasters are sad. Because they have no scenarios. Since no one is curious about their stories, they wander around the outer edges of the scenarios all day long, coveting the stories of the gods. Like a child asking to be included in a playground.

「Outer Gods. The existences located 'outside' of this story.」

It was the Administration Bureau that utilized them. Utilizing the Outer World Gods who would do anything just to participate in a story, the Administration Bureau created the role of 'Disaster'.

「The villains who destroy the world of stars.」

But it wasn't as if they always wanted to take on such a role. However, this <Star Stream> did not give them any other role. In that way, years accumulated, and the disasters who had been used to the same role for a long time came to exude threatening stories just by existing.

Incarnations and constellations within the scenarios felt fear and disgust just by looking at them, and burned with hostility.

Yet Cha Yerin knew. Among them, there were certainly warm Outer Gods, and there were also godheads who did not want destruction. While there were those who followed well like puppies, there were definitely peaceful Outer Gods who came to sleep beside her like cats when night fell.

But Cha Yerin also knew the moments when those cute Outer Gods suddenly changed.

「When this <Star Stream> ordered the disasters to execute 'destruction'.」

Sensing their movement, Cha Yerin jumped down to the inside of the castle wall and shouted,

"The disasters are coming!"

Hearing Cha Yerin's warning, incarnations rang alarm bells everywhere. With a clang, warning lights turned on inside the castle.

「This is the final bastion of 'Ragnarok'.」

Cha Yerin recalled the final flag that would be hanging in the center of the main castle.

「The last fortress of the Einherjar—'Final Sky'.」

If the stars of the constellation camp defending this fortress and even the incarnations were defeated, the <Star Stream> was finished.

[Soon the 'main scenario' will resume!]

[Please defend the final flag.]

[The current number of flags remaining for the 'constellation camp' is '1'!]

[If that flag is taken, your camp will lose the scenario.]

There was no time. Cha Yerin entered straight inside the tent where the officers were gathered.

[The 'chaos level' of this battlefield is extremely high.]

An unpleasantly murky story was floating in the air. It was natural. Because here and now, only the 'surviving existences' from the disasters, regardless of incarnations, constellations, or camps, were gathered.

"Everyone..."

Cha Yerin, who opened the tent and entered, spoke as if to drive away the dark atmosphere,

"It's time to fight."

But no one responded to her words. She turned her head toward a man sitting closest.

"Bang Cheolsoo."

There sat Bang Cheolsoo, the leader of the 'Inho faction'. Hugging his favorite weapon, a bat, with his only remaining arm, he stared at the floor without any response.

「It was last month that Bang Cheolsoo and his colleagues joined the 'constellation camp'.」

Incarnations who had once dreamed of rebellion within the Disaster Camp. However, they were defeated by 'Snow White' in the battle two months ago, and in the process of fleeing from him, they took refuge in the 'constellation camp'.

"Heartless Mother and Daughter."

The Heartless Mother and Daughter were also in the same situation. The mother and daughter sat in a corner of the tent hugging each other tightly, blocking their ears. As if they didn't want to hear any more words. Before them, the ration bread distributed in the afternoon was still untouched.

"Everyone is dead. We're all going to die anyway. We're all going to die."

The daughter of the Heartless Mother and Daughter—Dayoung muttered to herself. Looking down at Dayoung for a moment, Cha Yerin turned her head and said,

"Gong Pildu ahjussi."

Gong Pildu was in a relatively better situation. Because he was an incarnation who joined after the 'Void War' two months ago. His stigma, suited for defensive siege warfare, was more effective in the current battle than any other incarnation. However, it was the same that his face was extremely exhausted. Gong Pildu, who quietly raised his head, asked,

"Is there any news of Hyunwoo?"

Ye Hyunwoo had gone missing after the battle two months ago. Since Gong Pildu was an incarnation who had matched well with Ye Hyunwoo since the Chungmuro days, he consistently cared about his survival.

"No."

Looking at Cha Yerin shaking her head, Gong Pildu let out a deep sigh. Beside him, the mole cricket Max, whimpering, stuck out its tongue. A mole cricket that grew up with the incarnations and had grown as large as a big dog.

Gong Pildu quietly stroked Max and stood up.

"Let's go. We have to do what we have to do."

Gong Pildu, who stood up stumbling with a body covered in wounds, set out to restore [Armed Fortress]. But Gong Pildu alone was not enough.

"We need more support."

Most of the incarnations here were those who, like her, belonged to the 'Disaster Camp' and then turned to the 'constellation camp'. Usually it would have been an impossible defection, but this time, the situation was special.

「"From now on, all survivors on the Disaster side will be turned into 'Outer Gods'."」

Because the King of the Disasters, 'Snow White', had permitted the defection.

「"Those who do not want to become Outer Gods may leave the Disaster Camp. I promise, there will be no severe punishment for betrayal."」

The incarnations of the Disaster Camp were flustered. Suddenly becoming an Outer God, or choosing defection. As if to help their choice, Snow White said,

「"Ah, and let me tell you one thing. If I win in the last scenario, the <Star Stream> will be destroyed."」

Losing their ego as a human and becoming an Outer God, or becoming the final breakwater to block the destruction. Most of the incarnations who ascended to this place before the final battle chose the latter. It was inevitable. Because the incarnations who survived here by any means were all individuals with that much conviction.

Toward the incarnations leaving the camp as if he expected that, Snow White added with a smile,

「"Try to block me by any means."」

The moment he completed his 'Oldest Dream', everything in this world would go extinct. Therefore, this was a fight to avoid extinction—a war to somehow leave a record.

However, after dozens of bitter struggles, the incarnations came to realize.

「They had started a fight they couldn't win.」

After dozens of bitter struggles, only a few incarnations who could fight remained.

Cha Yerin took a light breath and looked at the opposite side of the tent where the incarnations were gathered. There were the surviving constellations facing the end. She really didn't want to speak to them. Because they were the heinous stars who had enjoyed the pain of the incarnations throughout the scenarios.

...Nevertheless, Cha Yerin bent her pride and spoke,

"Please help."

But no constellation responded. Cha Yerin called the closest constellation.

"One-Eyed Father."

Cha Yerin called the constellation of <Asgard>—'One-Eyed Father' Odin. Odin, regardless of her words, was squatting in a dark corner carving a small sculpture. In his entire body clad in a tattered cape, the halo of a 'Myth-grade constellation' from before could not be seen.

"He Who Begot the King of Kings."

He Who Begot the King of Kings. Jegok, a member of the 'Three Sovereigns and Five Emperors', was also there. He was in the form of a symbolic body, which, to be precise, was the appearance of the dog he raised—Panhu, who had five-colored fur. Jegok came in the form of a dog, licked the back of Cha Yerin's hand, and whimpered. His behavior, as if a regression had occurred, left Cha Yerin speechless.

Biting her lip hard, Cha Yerin looked around again. Most of the constellations who should have been here had left, leaving their places empty. Naturally, she didn't think they had gone to the battlefield. Because they had never stepped to the front of the battlefield even once after the battle two months ago.

Then, there was only one constellation she could ask.

"Spear that Draws the Boundary of the Seas."

She really didn't want to request his help. But right now, even that was desperate. If that constellation would just step forward once and draw his spear, they could sweep away the small-to-mid-sized Outer Gods at once. That alone could save many incarnations. That was exactly as far as she expected.

[I refuse.]

And the expected answer returned. Poseidon, who gulped down the beer placed on the round table, looked down at the floor with eyes devoid of any emotion. There, his broken star relic—the Trident—was rolling around.

「Cha Yerin now knew what kind of expression a star with a broken heart makes.」

When pride and conviction turn to ashes, and the greatness of the story one was proud of is denied, does a star make such an expression?

[Young incarnation, why do you fight so desperately?]

Wiping the beer foam from his mouth, Poseidon asked in a hostile tone.

[We will lose anyway. No matter who comes, this end cannot be blocked.]

Poseidon, who spoke so, had more than half of his incarnation body made of prosthetic parts. In the last battle, Poseidon had lost most of his true body and incarnation body, and his status was also greatly weakened. The battle that put him in that state was also something Cha Yerin knew well from hearing about it.

Two months ago, the sky of the <Star Stream> shone brighter than ever. <Olympus>, <Asgard>, <Vedas>, <Papyrus>, <Huangdi>... the prominent Myth-grade constellations of each nebula gathered to kill a single existence.

「Snow White. Or the existence called the 'Master of the Erased Void'.」

They were the stars at the very top of this sky, and if they set their minds to it, there was no miracle they could not perform.

「The battle known as the 'Void War'.」

The spears and blades of the Myth-grade constellations flew at a single existence. Shaking earth and sky, probability raged, and relentless thunderbolts struck.

「And that day, the stars lost.」

That was all the fact Cha Yerin knew. The Myth-grade constellations lost, and the sky of the <Star Stream> darkened. And the surviving stars all became ruined stars like that Poseidon.

[Pitiable human incarnation. You should have stayed by his side. Even if you become an Outer God, if you win in the final record, you at least...]

"Shut up."

Even though she dared to interrupt the true voice of a Myth-grade constellation, Poseidon did not get angry. Instead, he merely smirked with a self-deprecating expression.

[The myth of the stars has completely set.]

Raising his head, he was looking up at the sky through the torn tent. A sky pitch black even during the day. Counting the few remaining stars in that sky, Poseidon muttered,

[Today, 'Eternal Night' will come to <Star Stream>.]

And a roar resounded from somewhere. It was the sound announcing the final battle of this world.

1043 Episode 64. Eternal Night (2)

---

Cha Yerin ran straight toward the battlefield. The battlefield was already a complete mess due to the disasters.

The urgent voice of an incarnation in charge of the first line of outer wall barricades reached her ears.

"The barricades are collapsing!"

It was called a barricade, but it was a first line of defense that could barely block even the 'Nameless Things'. At one point, even that barricade was imbued with the story of a 'Myth-grade Constellation'. But now that the stars had lost their light, it was nothing more than a pile of scrap metal.

"Uaaah!"

Incarnations who had not yet evacuated near the defensive line bent over with screams. Instead of attacking those incarnations, the 'Nameless Things' pushed past the barricades and descended toward the second line of defense.

"Stay down! Just a little more—"

If you do not resist, they will not attack. That was the singular characteristic of the disasters that descended in this 'Ragnarok'. In particular, the lowest-grade disasters, the 'Nameless Things', did not bother touching incarnations who showed no intent to resist. As if killing the incarnations was not their purpose.

However, they were not completely safe just because they didn't resist.

"We have to move now! Run!"

At Cha Yerin's warning, the incarnations who had crouched stood up and began to run. However, there was an Outer God approaching even faster than them.

Kugugugugu.

Giant disasters resembling black spheres were rolling from behind the 'Nameless Things' with a roaring sound.

"Save me! Kuaaa!"

With a sharp scream, an incarnation was crushed under a sphere. If they were an incarnation who had reached this scenario, being crushed slightly under a heavy object wouldn't make their body explode and kill them instantly. But this time was different.

「Story Eaters.」

These godheads of the other world, belonging to the 'mid-sized disasters', were characterized by moving their giant sphere-like bodies to crush everything in their sight. The places they touched lost all vitality and became desolate deserts, which was due to their 'story collection' characteristic.

「Disasters that roll around while constantly collecting stories of the area.」

Because of that, incarnations who approached near them without knowing were struck by tentacles and had all their stories stolen.

"Run! It's a Story Eater!"

The incarnations each used skills like [Nimble Movements] or [Instant Acceleration] to quickly retreat from the first line of defense. But at the next moment, the movement of the Story Eaters changed strangely. Discovering the fleeing incarnations, the Story Eater suddenly stood in place and let out a bizarre cry toward the sky.

[Kkigigigig—!]

Cha Yerin, who knew their pattern beforehand, shouted.

"Cover your ears!"

Sure enough, some incarnations with experience quickly covered their ears or blocked their hearing. The problem was the incarnations who did not hear the warning.

"Ah—"

The bodies of the incarnations who heard the cry froze in an instant. They froze for exactly about three seconds. And those three seconds were enough time for the Story Eater to devour the incarnations.

"Kuaaa!"

A bundle of tentacles rising from the Story Eater's sphere emitted gas and pierced the incarnations like syringes.

"Keo-heok! Save me—!"

But no one could save the dying incarnations. There was no way to save them in the first place. If they ran in blindly, they would all become prey for the Eaters due to the tentacles that popped out one after another.

"Everyone run!"

"Uaaah!"

With that, the first line of defense collapsed completely. Thinking that she could no longer delay, Cha Yerin equipped her claws, and as if waiting for this, Gong Pildu's voice rang out.

"Leave this place to me!"

Gong Pildu, who summoned the Armed Fortress, began supporting with artillery fire.

Dududududu!

Hot bullets traversed the battlefield and pierced the heads of the 'Nameless Things'. It was a scene reminiscent of Chungmuro's 'Emergency Defense Battle', but its scale was incomparable to the 'Emergency Defense Battle'.

Kyaaaa!

The heads of the 'Nameless Things' running in the lead exploded due to Gong Pildu's reinforced magic bullets, which had grown stronger over the scenarios. Confirming hostility, the 'Nameless Things' began running toward the Armed Fortress all at once.

"Protect the Armed Fortress!"

As Gong Pildu's Armed Fortress stood at the lead of the second line of defense, nearby incarnations also gathered around the Armed Fortress.

[The constellation, 'Defense Master', bestows a blessing upon his incarnation!]

The 'Defense Master', who had grown steadily alongside Gong Pildu, also revealed his power. The second line of defense, which was being pushed back amidst the pouring gunfire, was restored once again through the active efforts of the Armed Fortress. Probably, the 'Nameless Things' would be handled to some extent with this.

The problem was the 'Story Eaters' rolling fiercely behind them.

"Kuaaa!"

An incarnation caught by the Story Eater's tentacles reached out toward Cha Yerin. But it was already too late. The moment the tentacles pierced, the incarnation, whose stories were completely drained, turned into a mummy in an instant and crumbled.

「Although the 'Story Eaters' were threatening on their own, because of their potential, they belonged to the targets that had to be handled with priority over other 'mid-sized Outer Gods'.」

If Story Eaters consume a large amount of stories, they evolve into 'Named'—that is, Outer Gods of the 'Old One' class. Because of this, she had to handle the 'Story Eaters' before they entered the evolution stage to secure superiority on the battlefield.

The problem was that to defeat a 'Story Eater', three skilled Historical-grade Constellations, or a Fable-grade Constellation was needed.

「The number of 'Story Eaters' currently visible was ten.」

Cha Yerin caught her breath and raised the stories of her whole body.

[The story, 'Way of the Wind', begins its storytelling!]

[Way of the Wind] which she had obtained at the 'Recycling Center'. Storm-like wind blades began to flow from her entire body.

Gyiaaaa!

The 'Nameless Things' that had been hastily approaching screamed as they were torn to pieces. She accelerated just like that and ran toward the nearest 'Story Eater'. Sensing the threat, the 'Story Eater' stretched out tentacles to check her. Piercing through the first tentacle, a dazzling aura bloomed from Cha Yerin's entire body.

[Fighting Action Mode].

Originally, [Fighting Action Mode] was a skill that could only be properly used when her brother, Cha Seongwoo, was present. However, after painstaking efforts, she became able to draw out the performance of [Fighting Action Mode] to some extent on her own.

Seogeok!

Aiming for an opening, Cha Yerin's claws cut out the Story Eater's outer skin. Almost simultaneously, the formidable energy harbored in the claws explosively swirled, digging into the interior of the Story Eater.

「"Dark Spinning Breaker."」

If her brother had been by her side, he would have said that. Cha Yerin bit her lip tightly and infused more powerful magic into the claws. Unable to withstand the expansion of the energy lodged inside its body, the first 'Story Eater' exploded miserably.

"Yerin-ah! Watch out!"

Gong Pildu's shout echoed from afar. Already, other 'Story Eaters' were approaching.

「Each Story Eater has a different grade.」

The two specimens running toward her now were more powerful than the one she had handled previously.

[P r e y P r e y P r e y P r e y]

Cha Yerin felt a familiar story from the approaching 'Story Eaters'. The 'Story Eaters' before her eyes were beings she once knew.

「Stars that clung to Snow White.」

Although many incarnations left 'Snow White's' subordinate position and chose the 'Constellation Camp', conversely, there were also stars who crawled under 'Snow

White's' command on their own feet. Stars that chose to submit to the 'Oldest Dream' and be recorded at the world's end, even if it meant throwing away their honor as constellations. Now, having lost their sense of self and become disasters, they were running to devour Cha Yerin's stories.

[O o o o o]

Looking at the Eaters approaching right in front of her, Cha Yerin made a quick judgment. The buff of [Fighting Action Mode] alone wasn't enough to handle both.

[The Incarnation, 'Cha Yerin', reveals her status!]

She pulled up all her stories as if squeezing them. The energy harbored in her claws gradually deepened, eventually becoming close to a golden color. At the same time, a formidable status began to flow from her entire body.

「A realm that could be reached only because she was a 'Reader' who survived to the end.」

A natural intelligence that allowed her to learn [Way of the Wind] in 30 minutes. An outstanding comprehension as a reader. Furthermore, having undergone a metamorphosis after eating the 'Holy Oil Fruit' that Cha Seongwoo had obtained for her, she had reached as far as the 4th stage of transcendence in the final scenario.

「Transcendence Stage 4.」

In an instant, a status surpassing the power of a Fable-grade Constellation raged from her entire body. As her madly beating heart pumped stories, an unbelievable superhuman strength welled up from her whole body. With a whooshing sound, her claws emitted light.

One. The first 'Story Eater' was hacked to pieces by her claws.

Two. A large hole was pierced in the center of the second 'Story Eater' by her claws that thrust as she spun and turned.

'It's not over yet.'

Two 'Story Eaters', who had approached stealthily underground by hiding in the shadows of the other Eaters, shot up from beneath her feet.

[Kkigigigig—]

She blocked her hearing using the power of her stories and leapt into the air. In an instant, the rushing tentacles narrowly pierced through the empty air. The moment the 'Story Eaters', startled by her sudden wit, hesitated, Cha Yerin activated [Fighting Action Mode].

「"Shadow Breaker."」

The ultimate technique of [Fighting Action Mode]. A golden energy storm erupted from the shadows of the 'Story Eaters'. Torn apart by the energy that poured down in their moment of carelessness, the two 'Story Eaters' collapsed with rough screams.

[Fighting Action Mode is deactivated.]

[Combat Summary: Combo Score 88 points! Your lonely struggle fighting alone is remarkable.]

Falling straight to the ground, Cha Yerin stumbled.

「This was the limit.」

Due to the long battle, her incarnation body had already reached its limit, and the flow of her stories was not in a normal state.

[Warning! Your incarnation body has reached its limit!]

[Your stories are beginning to flow backward!]

Defeating five mid-sized disasters single-handedly.

[You have achieved an amazing feat!]

[<Star Stream> is filled with admiration at your active performance!]

A feat that normally would have brought a shower of admiration and sponsorship from the stars. But there was not a single starlight shining down on her. This was because all the stars that used to watch over her had already fallen long ago.

In the distance, she saw the 'Story Eaters' approaching her. Exactly five specimens. Just as many as she had defeated still remained. Moreover, this was only the beginning. Amidst the surging army of disasters, there would easily be hundreds more of those 'Story Eaters'.

‘Brother.’

Even if she was lucky enough to handle all those Eaters, at the rear of the army were large Outer Gods of the 'Interstellar Predator' class—the 'Old Ones'—who were more powerful than them. Even if, by some miracle, she defeated all those Outer Gods, behind them stood the monstrous 'Snow White', who could extinguish all starlight in the sky just by blinking.

‘What was the sight you saw at the end, brother?’

Cha Yerin infused the last of her magic into her claws and thought about her brother, Cha Seongwoo.

「"Yerin-ah. That is not the correct interpretation."」

The person who loved this world more than anyone. If he had been by her side, what advice would he have given her? If it were her brother, who had read the same story a hundred times, would he have been able to find a way to resolve this situation?

Cheucheucheut.

The moment her magic cut out, her knees buckled. Not missing the opening, the lead 'Story Eater' stretched out its tentacles. Held powerlessly, her claws made a snapping sound. The broken blade rolled on the ground, and Cha Yerin looked up at the dark sky. A faint chuckle escaped her. That pitch-black scenery, where nothing could be seen, was a sight more familiar to her than anyone else. Perhaps it was just returning to how everything was before it all began. Thinking that made her feel a little more at peace.

Certain of her death, the last thing she recalled was the existence she had resented all this time.

I want to see a star.

Just once, I want to see a dazzling star that brightens the darkness of that sky.

Thinking that wish was ridiculous, the moment she closed her eyes, she felt as if a part of the distant night sky was growing bright.

"Ah."

At first, she thought it was her imagination. But the moment she saw the approaching Eaters falter and stop, Cha Yerin realized something.

「At least one star that watched over her remained on this battlefield.」

1044 Episode 64. Eternal Night (3)

Cha Yerin suddenly snapped back to her senses. Her blurry surroundings returned, and a gentle story wrapped around her shoulders.

「There was a star that descended before her eyes.」

A star that loftily illuminated the dark sky. That star was guarding the space before her. A distinct elegance was felt in the light flowing from his entire body. The spirit to guard the sky alone even if all stars were to be extinguished. The moment she confirmed that momentum, Cha Yerin suddenly realized who the star in front of her was.

[The constellation, 'Supreme God of Light', is looking at you.]

He was one of the few stars remaining in the 'Constellation Camp'. A constellation who had kept the last bastion by burning all of his stories.

"Surya Ahjussi!"

At that, the brightly shining sun nodded toward her.

[Step back, incarnation of the Korean Peninsula.]

An astonishing status flowed from Surya's entire body as he burst out with True Voice.

[The constellation, 'Supreme God of Light', reveals his status!]

Although he could not share stories with <Kim Dokja Company> in this 41st round, he was still one of the great 'Lokapalas' of <Vedas>, and now, the sole star of the giant nebula <Vedas>.

[I am your opponent, abominations of the other world.]

Having participated in 'Ragnarok' since the early days, he was in a state of undergoing treatment after sustaining major injuries in the accumulated battles. More than half of his incarnation body was wrapped in bandages. However, as if he did not care about the injuries at all, he stepped forward while melting the bandages with the intense heat radiating from his entire body.

「He was the last remaining sun of <Vedas>. The final Lokapala.」

Even in a situation where Indra, one of the Lokapalas, and the Myth-grade constellations had vanished, the last star of <Vedas> did not yield before the disasters.

At his appearance, all the godheads of the other world in the area let out roars.

[O o o o o o o]

The 'Nameless Things' instinctively felt aversion and backed away, but the higher-grade specimens were different. In particular, the moment the Story Eaters sensed Surya's stories, they began rolling toward this side like crazy.

"It's dangerous!"

The moment Cha Yerin warned him, Surya's True Voice blanketed the battlefield.

[Stop.]

The eye engraved on his forehead was shining brightly. Surya's stigma, [Third Eye], had activated.

「Surya's stigma that dominates time and space, [Third Eye].」

[Third Eye] was a stigma that dominated the cognitive system of all beings that met its gaze. Anyone who met that eye had no choice but to become a 'slave of time and space' dominated by Surya.

「However, there was no change in the movement of the 'Story Eaters'.」

It was perhaps natural. The 'Story Eaters' before their eyes were those who were once constellations but had betrayed their camp to become Outer Gods. Because they had forgotten the greatness of Surya's stories, they could not understand them properly, and since even their cognitive system of time and space was different, the power of [Third Eye] did not work on them.

[Foolish things.]

Even so, Surya was not flustered.

[The story, 'King of the Twelve Suns', has begun its storytelling!]

If they do not know, he just has to make them know. An even more powerful status of the story flowed from his entire body. Sensing the story, the 'Story Eaters' accelerated even further and rushed in. Their greed was reacting to Surya's story. The scent and rays of light flowing from the story. The lingering imagery of the story that could be felt without even eating began to dominate their senses. And at a certain moment.

[Kkigigigig...?]

Their movements froze. Their rolling speed gradually slowed down, and they soon stopped ten paces away from Surya.

[Kkiiiiiii—!]

At last, the capability of [Third Eye] had manifested. Looking at the slightly trembling spheres, Surya spoke.

[Do you now realize who the being in front of you is?]

Startled, the 'Story Eaters' belatedly changed directions and began fleeing backward. But it was already too late. Before long, twelve suns were rising in neat alignment behind Surya's back.

[Burn.]

Along with Surya's command, high-pressure solar rays swept the battlefield. It was truly an overwhelming destructive power. The heat of the brightly shining sun swept away all the 'Story Eaters' and the 'Nameless Things' in the area.

This was Surya's real strength. A great authority that only a constellation who had relentlessly trained and refined their story could harbor. Although Surya had not risen to the 'Myth-grade', he possessed a higher 'Narrative-grade' status that was more complete than anyone else.

Surya caught his breath for a moment, then turned back and asked.

[Are you alright?]

Cha Yerin approached with an emotional expression. Surya's incarnation body was not in a normal state. From his body, which had a slight frown on its brow, stories were leaking out without cease.

"Surya Ahjussi, the damage to your incarnation body is too severe."

However, the battlefield did not grant them any leisure.

"Yerin-ah! It's not over yet!"

Along with Gong Pildu's voice echoing from afar, the sound of something surging from the ground was heard. Just as screams seemed to echo from the center of the second line of defense, a 'Story Eater' soon revealed its shape.

「There were more Story Eaters.」

Two 'Story Eaters' that had stealthily moved underground had bypassed Cha Yerin and Surya to approach near the Armed Fortress.

"Kuaaa!"

In an instant, the captured incarnations began to have their stories absorbed by the Story Eater. Cha Yerin activated [Way of the Wind] and ran over, but the damage was already severe.

"You bastards!"

Gong Pildu showered bullets toward the Story Eaters that were ruthlessly driving in their tentacles.

"Die! Just die!"

However, the tough shell of the Story Eater was completely unfazed by Gong Pildu's magic bullets.

Soon, just as the Story Eater's tentacles were about to target Gong Pildu atop the fortress, Surya, who arrived simultaneously with Cha Yerin, moved.

Kwadudeuk!

Surya swung his hand blade wrapped in a majestic story and crushed one Story Eater just like that. A constellation's hand-to-hand combat, which was rarely shown. The situation was just that urgent.

"There's one more left!"

Surya nodded as if he knew. In the direction of his gaze, there was a 'Story Eater' of an unusual size. The one that had ended up devouring all the incarnations near the second line of defense. Faint cracks were appearing all over its body.

[It is dangerous.]

Along with Surya's words, Cha Yerin also infused energy into her claws. The cracks on the Story Eater's body were gradually increasing. An ominous energy felt inside the sphere. There was no mistake. That specimen was evolving now. If that Story Eater grew to the class of an 'Old One', even Surya would find it difficult to deal with.

[We destroy it now.]

Surya's sun emitted rays, and the energy storming from Cha Yerin's claws hacked the Story Eater's body to pieces. No matter how much of a Named Outer God it was, it couldn't possibly be safe after taking such a bombardment in its pre-evolution stage.

However, amidst the thick dust created by the bombardment, a strange cry was heard.

[Kkigigigigigigi]

An ominous aura of chaos spewed out in streaks through the dust. Surya immediately realized what had happened.

[It sacrificed itself to call a 'higher-grade disaster'.]

Sensing its end, the Story Eater had instinctively offered the stories it absorbed to call for help from a 'higher-grade disaster'.

[Step behind me!]

The moment Surya opened up his status with those words, a massive wave of chaos encroached the area. A powerful status, enough to push back even Gong Pildu's Armed Fortress, was overflowing in the vicinity.

Soon, the pitch-black sphere split open, and an anomalous existence stood up inside. The moment she confirmed that existence, Cha Yerin muttered while shivering.

"Interstellar Predator."

An 'Old One'. A monster positioned at the very topmost class among them descended upon the battlefield. A body height exceeding tens of meters. A 'humanoid Outer God' that looked like a pitch-black shadow stared down with empty pupils.

[A new disaster has descended upon the battlefield!]

[The God of the Other World, 'One Who Brings Forth the Ancient Night', has descended upon the battlefield!]

Although it wasn't large for a large-sized Outer God, its status was nevertheless truly beyond imagination.

「'Interstellar Predators' were beings under the direct command of Snow White.」

Surya couldn't block that either. It was a situation where only Myth-grade constellations coming would make it worth trying to pick a fight, yet Surya did not back down.

[Incarnation. Take the survivors and hide inside the inner castle.]

"Ahjussi! You can't!"

Despite Cha Yerin's cry, Surya shook his head.

[If it's just that fellow alone, I might be able to manage somehow.]

Every star instinctively realizes the moment when it will shine for the last time. Surya was the same.

「Now was the moment for his starlight to flare up for the last time.」

Although he had never fought the 'Master of the Erased Whitespace', that Outer God, whom even Myth-grade constellations found hard to oppose, was sufficient as his final opponent.

The head of the massive disaster tilted very slowly.

[S m a l l s t a r]

[S t i l l]

[R e m a i n i n g]

The moment they heard the segmented True Voice of the Interstellar Predator echoing, the incarnations in the area sat down, experiencing breathing difficulties.

[Indeed, I am still here.]

Surya spoke in True Voice as if to wake those incarnations. Snapping out of it belatedly, the incarnations hurriedly fled toward the castle.

However, Cha Yerin did not flee. Even if she fled, it would only be temporary. If Surya could not defeat that 'Interstellar Predator' here, there was no way for humanity to survive.

[I am the Supreme God of Light.]

Rising into the air, stories flowed from Surya's entire body.

[It is the name of the star that will burn you.]

His twelve suns emitted rays simultaneously, and [Third Eye] manifested its authority. A chain of light that collapsed cognitive systems and burned down all living things. Staring head-on at that radiance, which felt like it would blind one just by looking, the Interstellar Predator let out a bizarre sound that was either a sigh or a sneer.

[Ha]

In an instant, the world felt like it was distorting with a throb. The moment Cha Yerin, struck by an ominous premonition, reached out her hand toward Surya—

[Hahahahahahahahahahahahahahahaha—!]

Along with a chilling laugh, everything in the area was swept away. The barricades of the defensive line, the incarnations fleeing in haste, and even Gong Pildu's Armed Fortress broke down.

Cha Yerin saw Surya's suns, which were guarding the space in front of her, slowly cracking. She heard sounds as if stars were exploding one after another before her eyes. An explosion sound that made her ears ring. After recovering her senses in the shock and barely raising her head, Cha Yerin realized that the sky had grown slightly darker.

"Surya Ahjussi!"

Clearing through the rising dust, Cha Yerin ran toward Surya. Broken remnants of Surya's suns were rolling on the ground. And—

「In the place where the light was extinguished, the last star of this battlefield was hanging dangling.」

With one arm and leg torn off, Surya's charred incarnation body was hanging limply. Holding that Surya with its giant fingers, the Interstellar Predator smirked and spoke.

1045 Episode 64. Eternal Night (4)

Before that overwhelming violence, Cha Yerin could not even move. Only a nauseating despair dominated the battlefield. Unable to either flee or fight back, she simply watched Surya's end.

[I s t h e r e n o t h i n g m o r e e n t e r t a i n i n g ?]

At that moment, along with a faint ray of light, Surya's incarnation body escaped the Outer God's grasp. Cha Yerin let out a sigh of relief.

"Ah—"

Fortunately, Surya was still alive. However, judging from his felt status, he seemed to find it burdensome just to maintain his incarnation body. Yet, Surya's eyes were still blazing.

[There is still one left.]

As if this fight was not over yet.

[A 'story' that you will like.]

The moment the Interstellar Predator's head tilted, Cha Yerin heard a sound echoing from incredibly far away.

The sound of a giant wheel moving. The sound of an engine expanding and contracting its iron-like lungs. The sound of iron wheels scraping the darkness, chewing up and swallowing the rails entirely. Cha Yerin knew what that sound was.

「It was the sound of a train running.」

And the only star in this world capable of moving that train right now was here. Along with a horn, the front of the train began to appear beyond the distant sky. It was Surya's star relic.

「Surya's 'Sun Train'.」

His super-large train, capable of interstellar travel, was running while shaking the atmosphere. Cha Yerin clenched both fists. There was a possibility. With the story harbored in that train, and that massive collision energy, they might be able to defeat this damn Outer God.

[T w i n k l e t w i n k l e]

And at the next moment, the Outer God raised a hand.

[E n t e r t a i n i n g]

It was impossible to know what had occurred. All Cha Yerin saw was simply the Outer God's palm. The chills rising on her spine, and only the records of a recorder proved the causality of that event.

「A massive status of chaos was fired from the Outer God's palm, sweeping straight through the sky.」

The train's horn was no longer heard. Cha Yerin sat down like someone who had lost even their last hope. Beyond the distant sky, she saw the shattered fragments of Surya's train falling like meteors. The Outer God laughed.

[E n t e r t a i n i n g e n t e r t a i n i n g e n t e r t a i n i n g e n t e r t a i n i n g e n t e r t a i n i n g e n t e r t a i n i n g e n t e r t a i n i n g e n t e r t a i n i n g e n t e r t a i n i n g e n t e r t a i n i n g]

Surya let out a bizarre scream.

[Kuaaaaaaa!]

Even though the train was destroyed, Surya did not give up. The train was still responding to his story. He raised his story and summoned the train fragments that responded to him. The broken train fragments flew at a fierce speed like meteors and pierced the Outer God's main body.

Peogeogeogeok!

Hit by the train fragments imbued with a powerful story, the Outer God stumbled.

Peogeok! Peogeogeogeok!

Each and every one was a fragment containing massive story energy. A strike containing everything of Surya's, which no monster could possibly withstand. Nevertheless, the Outer God did not fall.

Soon, when all the flying fragments had disappeared, the Interstellar Predator spoke.

[S o m e t h i n g m o r e e n t e r t a i n i n g]

It pulled out the train fragments lodged in its body and munched on them. As if it wouldn't even hurt no matter how many times it was hit by this kind of attack.

Surya let out a hollow laugh. Now, the story flowing from his entire body was growing weaker and weaker. If it still didn't work after doing all this, there was nothing more he could do.

「Surya accepted the conclusion of this world.」

If he died here—and if this fortress collapsed because of that—the era of stars and humans was now over.

「Vedas.」

Ragnarok would end in the victory of 'disaster', and destruction would eventually blanket the entirety of <Star Stream>.

「Star Stream.」

Even so, there was nothing more he could do now.

「This was my final story.」

Despite that solemn testament, the sky was still dark. No one cheered for his story, nor did anyone grieve for his ■■. Looking at the terrifyingly quiet sky of <Star Stream>, Surya smiled bitterly. Who would believe it now? That there was once an era when that sky was dazzlingly bright.

Before long, having lost interest, the Outer God's giant finger moved slowly toward Surya.

[U n e n t e r t a i n i n g]

Looking at the dark shadow of the Outer God blanketing him, Surya, strangely enough, recalled a story told to him by an unfamiliar incarnation.

「"Do you know? The you that I knew drove a truly amazing train. Shall I show you a little?"」

The squinty-eyed incarnation, who carried around many unique stories, had told him his story.

「Surya's entire body, sitting in the engine room of the train, was dazzling like the incandescent sun.」

What on earth was that story back then?

「Without showing any signs, he ran the [Sun Train] using his own body as fuel. As if that was his mission having lived as the 'Supreme God of Light' until now.」

Surya, who drove the Sun Train by offering all of his stories. The 'Final Engineer' who was running for something, for some mission.

Between the stories flowing by like a dream, the Outer God's giant finger moved. The massive finger of the disaster gathering its thumb and middle finger as if catching a bug. Soon, a gale blew, and the giant middle finger flew toward him.

Tung.

At first, he thought it was the sound of his body breaking like a bug. However, even as time passed, Surya could not feel any pain. Blinking his eyes with a lightly flickering spark, he saw a dazzling story wrapping around his entire body.

[The Giant Story, 'Vedas', protects your story.]

Surya was shocked. There was no way. Because, except for him, there were no proper stars left in <Vedas>. The powerful Myth-grade constellations had all disappeared, and that arrogant Indra and the great Lokapalas had all died. Then who on earth had moved this story?

[I am glad I am not too late, friend.]

Turning his head, a constellation surrounded by flames just as hot was standing while supporting him.

[Agni!]

He was a member of the great <Lokapala>, the 'Flame of Purification' Agni. The one who had been temporarily sent out of the 'main battlefield' due to his injuries had rejoined the battlefield.

[Why did you come here! I'm sure I told you not to come!]

Agni's incarnation body was still in a vulnerable state. A state that felt like it would easily collapse even under a slight impact.

[Have you not seen who the opponent is? With you alone—]

It was not a fight where the outcome would change just because a single Agni came. Honestly, let alone Agni, even if Mithra of his prime, the 'Master of December 25th'—a Myth-grade constellation of <Vedas>—returned, it was uncertain whether that monster could be defeated.

However, Agni shook his head.

[Do not worry. I am not alone.]

Surya could not understand Agni's words. Perhaps his companion had been away from the battlefield for too long and his head had gone a bit strange. No matter who came, there was no way to block that monster. Even if a Myth-grade constellation came—

[Someone more greater than a Myth-grade constellation will come.]

A constellation more greater than a Myth-grade constellation. Surya could not fathom who on earth that referred to. Only his senses were telling him.

「Something is approaching from very far away.」

Since when was it? The train's horn, which had definitely disappeared, was heard once again. Surya slowly raised his head. Then, he saw something flying toward this side from beyond that sky.

「It was his train.」

Surya looked up at that scenery as if in a dream. The Outer God also let out a strange cry, perhaps having felt something.

[O o o o o o o ?]

It was an incomprehensible, impossible miracle.

[E n t e r t a i n i n g]

Clearly, his train was destroyed. Yet, his destroyed train was running while neatly restored. Moreover, the front of the train had changed to a much more modern appearance than before.

[The constellation, 'Mass Production Maker', smiles broadly.]

The southern direction of the sky brightened faintly. Startled, Surya raised his head and muttered.

[That fellow is—]

The Mass Production Maker. He knew his reputation well from hearing it. If it were that constellation, it was not strange that he had restored the train with his power in this instant. However, why did he, famous for rarely stepping forward, suddenly appear on this battlefield?

Subsequently, the north of the sky flashed, and a thunder-like True Voice was heard.

[What is this? I thought you were someone with rare grit. Don't tell me you're already trying to give up!]

Surya knew who the owner of the voice was. He was definitely the naked ape of the heavenly realm, the 'Monkey King'. Subsequently, the west of the sky also brightened.

[The constellation, 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon', snorts and stares at you.]

The Abyssal Black Flame Dragon. With even the proud ancient evil dragon appearing, Surya felt as if he had no idea what was what. That evil dragon was definitely supposed to be staying in the 'hole' in despair over the frustration of the 'Great War of Saints and Demons'...

Finally, the eastern direction of the sky brightened.

[The constellation, 'Demon-like Judge of Fire', cheers for you.]

The strongest archangel that <Eden> was proud of. Receiving her gentle starlight, Surya opened his mouth with a blank face.

[Agni, don't tell me they...]

It was true that every single one of them was an amazing constellation. However, they were by no means stars that had reached the 'Myth-grade'. Though they might serve as a straw to grasp in this situation, even if they came, they could not repel the 'Interstellar Predator'.

[No. He will arrive soon.]

Simultaneously with Agni's response, the Outer God raised one hand. His right hand targeted the train running from the distant sky.

[Hahahahahahahahahahahahahahahaha—!]

Along with a horrific laugh, a storm-like status of chaos poured toward the train once again. Surya bit his lip tightly. Earlier, his train was shattered into pieces by that attack. No matter how outstanding a constellation the 'Mass Production Maker' was, there was no way to withstand that attack...

[Hahahaha... Ha?]

What was going on? Despite the Outer God's attack, the train was running perfectly fine. Without a single delay, like a train running right on schedule. At the train's nonchalant horn, the Outer God raised both hands this time.

[Hahahahaha! Hahahahahah! Hahahahahahahahahah!]

A vast status of chaos surged from both of the Outer God's hands. A story of chaos that was more than enough to turn the sky into a pitch-black sea. Despite that overwhelming story majesty that completely changed the weather of the area, the train was running even more vigorously, opposing the story.

At that unbelievable sight, Surya muttered while stumbling.

[What on earth is that...]

Looking closely, there was a story wrapped around the train. A story he was seeing for the first time—no, perhaps it was a story he had seen once.

[Giant Story, 'Torch That Swallowed the Myth', roars!]

At that moment, Surya thought of the scenery of the story he had peeked at long ago. The train led by the last engineer, running toward the end of the world.

[Hahahahahahahahahahahahahahahahahahah!]

The Outer God urgently howled and drew out all of its strength. However, the train had already reached right in front of it. Belatedly realizing something, the Outer God screamed and backed away.

[U n e n t e r t a i n i n g]

As if belatedly realizing who the existence riding that train was.

[U n e n t e r t a i n i n g u n e n t e r t a i n i n g u n e n t e r t a i n i n g u n e n t e r t a i n i n g u n e n t e r t a i n i n g u n e n t e r t a i n i n g u n e n t e r t a i n i n g u n e n t e r t a i n i n g u n e n t e r t a i n i n g u n e n t e r t a i n i n g]

With a roaring sound, the train collided with the Outer God's massive body. A vast aftershock arose, and story fragments bounced in all directions. Surya and Agni deployed defensive walls with all their might to block the aftershock. When the aftershock subsided to some extent, Surya urgently approached the collision point. In the place where the aftershock had cleared lay the fallen massive body of the Outer God. And his train—having precisely penetrated the center of the Outer God and torn it to pieces, had arrived on the ground.

"No, how can you drive that way!"

[Urgh, my apologies. It is my first time driving a train as well—]

A voice heard from somewhere. The first to react was Cha Yerin. Standing up amidst the dust, Cha Yerin stumbled and ran toward the train.

At that moment, Cha Yerin thought of her brother. She had not properly seen her brother's end. Instead, she had heard the story. That her brother had found out about the 'conclusion' of this entire world at the last moment. And that 'Snow White' seemed to be surprised after hearing the conclusion he had found out.

Cha Yerin did not know what conclusion her brother had found out. However, at least now, she felt she knew what the first scene of the conclusion her brother had seen at the end was.

「Someone was standing on top of the train.」

Her brother, who had read the same story almost a hundred times or more. The first scenery imagined by him, who had lived in this world to see the end of his favorite story.

「He was the only Kim Dokja who could write this 'next story'.」

The protagonist of the story her brother had waited for was standing there, his white coat fluttering.

[The Recorder of Fear, 'One Who Rewrites Eternity', begins his recording.]

As many as eight years had passed. It was a face she had not seen for a long time. Nevertheless, the moment she saw his face, Cha Yerin had no choice but to recognize who he was.

"I am sorry for being late, Yerin-ssi."

Because Cha Yerin could recognize his face even when her eyes were blind. The face she had imagined countless times in the pitch-black darkness. The protagonist, who finally revealed his face on top of the train where starlight that cleared the darkness was pouring down, spoke.

"It won't be late anymore."

「 And finally, all the Kim Dokjas gathered in 'Ragnarok'.」

1046 Episode 64. Eternal Night (5)

The reunion was short. Whether she lost tension after seeing me, Cha Yerin collapsed straight away as if fainting. Lightly supporting her, I requested treatment from the Mass Production Maker.

[Do not worry.]

A group of stewards appeared from the Mass Production Maker's warship and began to take care of her.

"The incarnation body is heavily damaged."

"Bring more story packs!"

Cha Yerin had defended that castle at the very front lines until her incarnation body became like this. I couldn't understand. What on earth were the other existences of the 'Constellation Camp' doing elsewhere until she was pushed this far? Yoo Joonghyuk, and the other stars—

[You are...]

Turning my head, Surya, supported by Agni, was looking at me.

"It has been a while, Supreme God of Light."

I had seen Surya twice until now. Once was while being chased by constellations in the 'Recycling Center', and another time was in the 'New Murim District'. Of course, I had also met the 1,864th round Surya in the Fear Realm. Surya who traveled the worlds after his ending. However, since he wasn't the Surya in front of my eyes, I did not mention it.

[You have really changed a lot.]

Perhaps having felt my story, Surya's tone carried a hint of admiration.

"Thank you for protecting Yerin-ssi."

I expressed my sincere gratitude to him. The only star that came out to the battlefield and fought against the disasters. Had he not been here, this fortress would have been destroyed before I arrived.

[It was not done to receive thanks. I merely did my best since it was the given scenario.]

"Still, thank you. Had it not been for you, the damage would have been greater."

[That incarnation often spoke about you.]

Surya muttered, looking back with blurry eyes at Cha Yerin, who was receiving treatment.

[That perhaps you might come to this battlefield. That you might be the sole existence to oppose that 'Master of the Erased Blank Space'... I had thought it was merely the sleep-talking of an incarnation drenched in despair.]

That blunt Cha Yerin said such things? Perhaps Cha Yerin had built quite a friendship with the Surya in front of her during that time.

[I am grateful for your help.]

It had been a while since I received such an honest greeting from a star, so I smiled broadly and replied.

"No. I am the one who is grateful."

[If it is alright with you...]

Surya looked at me with a somewhat hesitant expression, then added briefly.

[Could we share a talk briefly, even if it is later?]

"Certainly. Anytime."

Hearing the expression 'share a talk' at a time when destruction was right before our noses felt strange once again, but I also thought that it was quite like the stars and humans. Even if destruction comes tomorrow, we talk. Even destruction becomes the material of a story.

[You have succeeded in the 342nd defensive battle!]

As all the main Outer Gods were destroyed, the 'Nameless Things' that were surging from far away were also seen scattering and fleeing.

[You have intruded during the progress of a 'Sub Scenario'.]

[You have played a core role in the corresponding scenario!]

[You obtain 1,000,000 coins as a defense reward!]

A scenario where 1 million coins came in as a simple reward. Indeed, since it was a scenario at the very final stages, the scale was different. Of course, the 'real reward' here wouldn't be coins.

"Found it!"

Some of the surviving incarnations were already digging through the heaps of dead Outer Gods' corpses to pick up stories that might be useful to them. Gathering stories when their companions had been dying just moments ago—anyone looking might call it a psychopathic judgment, but rather, it was possible because they were incarnations who had survived this far. If they didn't become stronger by picking up even one more story, they couldn't survive the next battlefield. The incarnations here knew that fact better than anyone.

[I will go inspect the corpses for a moment as well.]

The Mass Production Maker beside me also moved stealthily with an itching expression. It was clear what 'corpses' he was going to inspect. I looked at the corpse of the giant Outer God lying dead ten paces away.

「Interstellar Predator.」

It was a massive Outer God that I wouldn't have dared to fight previously. If it was of that grade, it would at least be comparable to the 'Devourer of Dreams'. A corpse of such a high-grade Outer God would definitely have many uses.

[You have achieved an unbelievable feat!]

[A multitude of Outer Gods cannot hide their shock at your status!]

[You have obtained a new story!]

Perhaps because I had slain 'Calamity-grade Disaster', I felt a new story stirring. However, before I could even verify the newly obtained story, something wriggled inside me.

[Your new story is absorbed into your 'Super Giant Story'.]

[Your 'Super Giant Story' is facing the opportunity for its final blooming.]

As expected. Letting out a light sigh, I quietly stared at the stories within me. The Super Giant Story. The moment to use this fellow in earnest was finally approaching.

[You have successfully completed the the 'Returnee Scenario'!]

[You have satisfied all completion conditions of the 'Hidden Scenario'.]

[Beyond subjugating the Kings of the 'Hall', you have united all Kings of the 'Hall'!]

A Hidden Scenario. Apparently, obtaining the cooperation of all the Kings was the hidden completion condition of the previous scenario.

[You are awarded the special reward for the corresponding scenario.]

[There is no predetermined item in this special reward.]

[You can request the item you want as a reward through the dokkaebi in charge from the 'Bureau'.]

[Upon requesting the item reward, whether to grant the reward will be judged according to the Bureau's discretion within the probability allowed by the 'Bureau'.]

It was an interesting story. Requesting a desired reward from the 'Bureau'? There had never been this kind of reward until now.

[The final approver of the corresponding reward is the 'Dokkaebi King'.]

So it meant I could receive any 'item' as long as the 'Dokkaebi King' did not oppose the reward I requested.

[Some Great Dokkaebis oppose the 'special reward' given to you!]

Perhaps considering it as excessively generous, there seemed to be differing opinions within the Bureau. From my perspective, it wasn't a bad thing, but strictly speaking, receiving such a reward at this point was not a situation that could be viewed entirely positively.

「The Bureau has judged that the 'probability scale' of this scenario is completely tilted.」

In other words, they judged there was almost no possibility of our camp winning, even if they gave me such a reward. At this point, I was curious on one hand. I already knew the situation was bad. But just how bad was it that they were encouraging the scenario by giving me even this kind of reward?

[The 'Main Scenario' is updated!]

[You possess an incarnation body suitable for the corresponding scenario.]

An "Suitable incarnation body'. It was the first time I received such a message. Somehow, the scenario system always felt displeased with me. Did it mean I had grown that much?

[You can choose either the 'Constellation Camp' or the 'Disaster Camp' to perform the corresponding scenario.]

[Currently, you have entered the 'Main Battlefield' through the 'Hall'.]

[The 'Constellation Camp' is forcibly assigned to you.]

Along with the messages popping up one after another, the full-fledged 'Main Scenario' window appeared.

<Main Scenario # 98 - Ragnarok>

Seeing the number '98' written made me realistically feel that I had finally come this far.

Category: Main

Difficulty: ???

Clear Conditions: You have become an 'Einherjar' of the 'Constellation Camp'. Defeat the disasters of the 'Disaster Camp' along with the stars that follow you.

Time Limit: -

Reward: -

Failure: Destruction of the world and extermination of all living things.

The result being 'destruction of the world and extermination of all living things'. Just hearing it was a sentence that made my hair stand on end.

I thought that the scenario description was somewhat vague, but looking closely, the rules of the 'Main Battlefield' were listed additionally below.

1. The corresponding scenario ends when all 'flags' of the opposing camp are occupied.

2. A total of 12 fortresses exist in each camp, and one flag is preserved in each fortress.

3. Killing the commander of the fortress is also recognized as seizing the fortress's flag.

4. The commander of the fortress is automatically appointed as the 'existence with the highest status' in that fortress.

5. The commander of the fortress must appear in the 'battlefield' within three days when the siege battle begins.

...

Well, to summarize, it felt like this. Attack the enemy's fortress, and occupy the flags. If that doesn't work, kill the commander of the fortress. It really felt like a scenario I had seen somewhere.

I continued checking the contents.

Flags held by the Disaster Camp: 23

Flags held by the Constellation Camp: 1

A situation that naturally brought a sigh. I knew we were being pushed back, but to think it was to this extent.

Did she check the scenario contents like me? I saw Jung Heewon, who was standing far away, approaching this way.

"Dokja-ssi. This really feels like that scenario."

"Yes. It's similar to the fourth scenario."

Looking at the contents alone, it felt like an expanded version of the 'King's Road' after all. Although it was interesting that 'Ragnarok', the scenario of great destruction, resembled the early scenario, predictably, there was no way this was all there was to the final scenario.

[A linked 'Hidden Scenario' exists for this scenario.]

This was merely the scenario unfolding on the surface. The real 'main' probably hadn't even begun yet. Perhaps when the conditions of the Hidden Scenario were unlocked, Ragnarok's 'final scenario' would also be updated.

[Heh, is this really the 'Main Battlefield'.]

In the distance, I saw the constellations who were aboard the warships landing outside one by one.

[How on earth could this...]

[I didn't know the situation would be this devastating.]

And on the other hand, there were incarnations glancing at the newly appeared constellations. They were all incarnations who had survived this battle.

"Did reinforcements really come?"

"Ah..."

Although the situation wouldn't change greatly just because a few more constellations were reinforced, their expressions were nevertheless looking much brighter. That was the important thing. That hope to continue the story had arisen.

"Author-nim."

Suddenly turning back, Cha Yerin, who had regained consciousness, was standing there.

"Yerin-ssi. Your body..."

"It's fine."

Cha Yerin stood quietly looking at me with a somewhat flushed complexion. Come to think of it, her atmosphere and way of speaking seemed to have changed slightly. The Cha Yerin I knew rarely got excited, angry, or sad and was characterized by speaking in a flat tone as if reading a book. Did those eight years perhaps change even her story?

After looking at me for a long time, Cha Yerin barely managed to utter a word.

"Thank you."

Even upon hearing those words of thanks, I felt miserable instead. Because I couldn't fathom the depth of the countless emotions she must have swallowed to utter that single word. Too many things must have happened to her while I was gone. She lost her companions, and even her brother. Simply as the price of entering the story she loved, she paid too great a price.

"I am sorry."

"What are you so sorry about?"

"I was too—"

"You're not late."

Cha Yerin spoke, shaking her head.

"You are here now. So you're not late."

I forced a smile. If she said so, then so it was. Therefore, for now, believing her words and thinking about the future was the priority.

Cha Yerin examined me and the other constellations standing behind me with calm eyes. Before long, the four 'Kings' were gathered near me.

"Those people are—"

"They will help us."

Cha Yerin stared at each of the 'Kings' for a moment. Like a long-time reader, she seemed to recognize who they were just by looking. A brief longing rose in her pupils and scattered, and quickly regaining her usual expression, Cha Yerin spoke.

"I will guide you to the castle."

---

Cha Yerin, the other four Kings, and I entered the inner castle and examined the interior. Incarnations and Historical-grade constellations repairing the broken fortress were seen here and there. Most were not combat personnel but seemed to be talents specialized in castle defense.

Gong Pildu, who was repairing the Armed Fortress from afar, waved towards us. Looking closely, the appearances of several incarnations tending to the 'Armed Fortress' were familiar.

"Zarathustra."

Cha Yerin nodded and replied.

"That's right. They are the artisans who followed the prophet."

Whether they also recognized me, a few of them bowed lightly. I also greeted them briefly. By the way, even counting at a glance, the incarnations remaining inside this fortress seemed to be less than a thousand.

"Is this all?"

"For now."

"There must be other forces as well. Surely we aren't just repeating defensive battles here."

"There is a unit that moves independently."

A unit that moves independently.

"Is it Yoo Joonghyuk?"

Cha Yerin nodded slightly. Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st round. As expected, he had already arrived here and was fighting the disasters.

"The prophet and Japan's representative incarnation are also moving together as well. They are performing a mission even now."

Fortunately, the prophet Anna Croft and Asuka Ren seemed to be alive as well. Having roughly looked around the fortress, I thought it was time to gradually ask the important questions.

"You are curious about what happened during that time, right?"

As if reading my mind, Cha Yerin calmly began the story. The emergence of the existence now called 'Snow White' or 'Master of the Erased Blank Space'—'Snowfield Kim Dokja'. Clearing scenarios together with him. The companions dispersing according to their respective beliefs, and 'Ragnarok' beginning.

"I know that much roughly."

This was a story I knew to some extent through Snowfield Kim Dokja's story fragments or through other ways.

The important part was from here on.

"When Ragnarok began, there were incarnations who came to kill 'Snow White'."

"Ji Eunyu and the other incarnations, right?"

Cha Yerin nodded. Actually, I was reluctant to ask about that part in detail. Because her brother, Cha Seongwoo, had died in that battle. However, Cha Yerin calmly explained the events of that day. The companions turning against each other, and other constellations including <Eden> appearing on the battlefield. And—

"And <Kim Dokja's Company> descended upon this worldline."

I nodded. The part I wanted to hear had finally come.

"Where are they now? Did they really lose to 'Snow White'?"

Although I had received vague hints while talking with Ji Eunyu, I had no certain knowledge. However, I had to know now. Hesitating for a moment, Cha Yerin opened her mouth.

"I couldn't witness that scene myself."

Cha Yerin continued speaking with her head slightly bowed.

"However, I can tell you what happened. If you want—"

[I think I can tell you that story in detail.]

Turning around at the suddenly interrupting voice, the Supreme God of Light, Surya, was there. Perhaps having already finished rough treatment, his entire body was wrapped tightly in bandages.

[Are you curious about the survival of those 'Outer Gods'?]

Outer Gods. Certainly, to the stars of this world, they might appear that way.

"Yes."

[They are alive.]

I let out a sigh of relief internally. However, the questions were only beginning.

"I know that they clashed with 'Snow White'... the 'Master of the Erased Blank Space'."

[They did.]

"Did they lose?"

[A loss...]

Surya pondered for a moment, then spoke like this.

[I am not sure if it can be expressed that way.]

My heart raced for an instant. They didn't lose? That meant...

[The story of that day was truly amazing. Especially the sight shown by that 'Outer God wearing the black coat' is something I won't forget until my final moments.]

The Outer God wearing the black coat. Without needing to ask, it referred to Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,864th round. Surya had a somewhat hazy look in his eyes as if recalling that moment, and slowly added to his words.

[That day, the Outer God in the black coat drove the 'Master of the Erased Blank Space' to the brink of death.]

1047 Episode 64. Eternal Night (6)

---

At the brink of death. It wasn't any constellation but Surya who said it, then it must have been the truth.

It was the first time I heard about that day in detail, and not only the Kings who were with me but also Cha Yerin seemed to be listening attentively to Surya's story. After pausing for a moment to choose his words, Surya opened his mouth again.

[That overwhelming aura had never been witnessed before. I don't want to admit it, but he was higher than any 'Myth-grade' I had ever seen.]

[It wasn’t an opponent you could push back just because you have a higher status.]

It was Meihouwang, who had been listening to the story quietly, interrupting.

['The Master of the Erased Blank Space' wields absolute power. Even if the Outer God you mentioned was as powerful as you say, it would still have been extremely difficult to overcome it, wouldn’t it?]

The other Kings also nodded in agreement at Meihouwang’s words. It was a reasonable argument. Moreover, the Kings here had just experienced the power of that 'authority' firsthand. However, Surya shook his head and added.

[That Outer God was unaffected by the power used by 'The Master of the Erased Blank Space'.]

[Unaffected?]

The power of the Master of the Erased Blank Space.

「The power that expels one outside the context of this world by ceasing to 'read' a specific target.」

It seems like the power that only 'Oldest Dream' can use was used by Kim Dokja, even against Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,864th regression.

Surya, instead of giving an explanation, clenched his fist tightly and then opened it. Then, a small butterfly appeared in his palm. As the butterfly fluttered and began to fly, dust-like story powder fell from its wings. It was the story of that day Surya had preserved.

「"I will no longer read you."」

The familiar voice rang out from the story. With the true command of 'Snowfield Kim Dokja', a sound like a book closing again in the story was heard. A merciless violence that denies the very page on which the existence is recorded and refuses to 'read', which no star could resist.

But there was a being who did not kneel before that power.

「"It's useless against me."」

A voice that sends shivers just by listening to it. Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,864th regression, who didn't hide his status, was there.

「He is the peak that the character Yoo Joonghyuk can reach.」

It was only upon seeing it that I realized the truth. A spirit ready to break through the story. An overwhelming presence that a person who has never given up for a moment and has overcome all of history can possess.

「"As long as you are 'Kim Dokja', that ability won’t work against me."」

In reality, Yoo Joonghyuk was approaching Kim Dokja one step at a time without taking any damage.

[How is that even—]

Meihouwang's eyes widened in disbelief. Even Abyssal Black Flame Dragon looked confused, as he couldn’t understand what happened. That was understandable. For them, this was the first time they had seen an 'Outer God' resist the power of the 'Oldest Dream'.

But that situation wasn't unfamiliar to me. If you think about it, it was natural. 'The Oldest Dream' is a being that lives while dreaming of something. And Kim Dokja became 'The Oldest Dream' by imagining the story of 'Yoo Joonghyuk', the protagonist of 'Ways of Survival'. In other words—not reading 'Yoo Joonghyuk' is no different from denying his identity as the 'Oldest Dream'.

「In the confrontation between the 'Secretive Plotter' and 'The Oldest Dream', something similar happened.」

The existence that could become the sole counter to the 'Oldest Dream' in this entire universe. That was none other than the protagonist, Yoo Joonghyuk.

「"I see."」

But Snowfield Kim Dokja wasn't confused. Instead, he smiled as if it were amusing and faced Yoo Joonghyuk.

「"Very well. Let’s fight properly."」

And thus, the battle began. Amidst the swirling of black and white stories before their eyes, an exchange of blows too fast to be tracked continued. The sound of blood spraying and flesh tearing proved that the two were engaged in a life-or-death duel.

[Giant Story, 'Demon Realm’s Spring', has begun its storytelling!]

[Giant Story, 'Torch That Swallowed the Myth', has begun its storytelling!]

As I watched the familiar stories clawing and baring their fangs at each other, pages of the original novel swirled in my mind.

Yoo Joonghyuk and Kim Dokja had clashed many times. At the end of 'King's Road' facing 'The Absolute Throne'. In front of the 'Demon King’s Throne' where the Demon King of Salvation was born. In scenarios where they had to seize each other's 'Right to Life and Death' to ascend to the 'Context of the Constellations'. Besides those, the two had fought countlessly, countlessly many times.

「"Yoo Joonghyuk, have you forgotten? You cannot defeat me."」

With those words, a fierce spark erupted through the landscape.

['Stage Transformation' is activated!]

I understood what Snowfield Kim Dokja was plotting.

[Story, 'King of a Kingless World', has begun its storytelling!]

That was the birth story of Kim Dokja which existed in me as well. The eyes of Yoo Joonghyuk in the story shook as the stage was being reproduced before my eyes.

「There stood Gwanghwamun, where the two had once fought a bloody battle.」

The final chapter of 'King's Road'. In a scenario where only his own body can prove 'The King's Qualification', Kim Dokja temporarily surpassed Yoo Joonghyuk's stats by pouring coins.

「All stages strengthen the history that has already occurred.」

'Snowfield Kim Dokja' was the same. He used his coins to enhance all his physical attributes to their limits. Kim Dokja's fist, moving as fast as a shooting star, extended towards Yoo Joonghyuk.

「No matter how strong Yoo Joonghyuk is, he can't handle that punch right now.」

In the 'King’s Road' where neither skills nor stigmas can be used, Kim Dokja's fist struck Yoo Joonghyuk's abdomen.

Twokang!

Like an explosion, a blinding cloud of dust rose. According to the original story, Yoo Joonghyuk should have been sent flying from that punch. But Yoo Joonghyuk stood his ground. In fact, Kim Dokja's punch had been blocked by Yoo Joonghyuk's palm.

「"Did you really believe that you could defeat me with just this much?"」

For the first time, a hint of surprise was visible on Snowfield Kim Dokja's face. When had it started? Kim Dokja's stage, which had been dominating everything, had begun to crumble. Along with the surging sparks, a landscape of another 'stage' flickered.

The surrounding constellations were confused about what was happening, but I alone understood the situation.

「He is offsetting 'Stage Transformation' with 'Stage Transformation'.」

Kim Dokja's fights with Yoo Joonghyuk may have been won more often by Kim Dokja, but there were also many cases where the outcome wasn't properly decided, and sometimes—

['Stage Transformation' is activated!]

There were also cases where Yoo Joonghyuk won. Yoo Joonghyuk and Kim Dokja stood facing each other in the rushing landscape. And I, too, was momentarily present in that landscape with them.

「"'I'll kill you, Yoo Joonghyuk.' Do you remember this line?"」

[Demon King Transformation] activated, a pale deadly aura radiated from Snowfield Kim Dokja's entire body. The corpses of stars scattered around them. I knew where that was.

「"I remember."」

The Isle of Reincarnators. Here, Yoo Joonghyuk and Kim Dokja had fought.

「"Back then, you killed Han Sooyoung."」

A pure white blade was shining in the hand of Snowfield Kim Dokja. 'Unbreakable Faith'. Kim Dokja's main weapon.

「"I knew she wouldn't die."」

「"Did you fight me knowing that? Why?"」

Yoo Joonghyuk did not answer. Kim Dokja smiled faintly.

「"You never know how to speak properly. That is why Han Sooyoung ultimately died."」

「"Han Sooyoung is not dead."」

「"No, she's dead. Because of you. Because you were stubborn—"」

Snowfield Kim Dokja's figure vanished. Accelerated through [Electrification], he swung his sword towards Yoo Joonghyuk's head.

「"Because you never gave up on the meaningless goal of finding 'every Kim Dokja'!"」

Yoo Joonghyuk swung the [Black Heavenly Demon Sword] to block Kim Dokja's strikes.

「"That was also Han Sooyoung's goal."」

「"Then why didn't you step forward in her place first?"」

「"That's—"」

Snowfield Kim Dokja kept swinging his sword relentlessly, without leaving any room for Yoo Joonghyuk to answer.

「"She is the person who writes the lines for the characters. You already knew that, didn't you? That Han Sooyoung would act in your place and fulfill what you wanted. That one-sided belief of yours—"」

The black and white blades roared as they clashed. No star dared to interfere in their duel. Even the stars that shattered planets and dominated galaxies looked at their battle with awe.

「"—is what drove Han Sooyoung to her death."」

Yoo Joonghyuk's sword hesitated for a fraction of a second, and Snowfield Kim Dokja did not miss the opportunity. Shaking Yoo Joonghyuk with his tongue, Snowfield Kim Dokja unleashed truly astonishing sword strikes. The skills and stories he gained while living through the scenarios were embedded in every trajectory. Although it was slightly different from Kim Dokja’s fighting style that I remembered, he was undoubtedly a Kim Dokja who had been perfected throughout the scenario.

「The stage they shared crossed over in an instant.」

They were on the 'King’s Road', in the Demon Realm, in the Context of the Constellations, and in the Great War of Saints and Demons. In the moment a star was born, all of that history flowed by, and their swords clashed.

Stories sprayed from Yoo Joonghyuk's thigh. In the moment his center collapsed, Kim Dokja's sword came down.

「If it were the old Yoo Joonghyuk, he might have lost to Kim Dokja here.」

However, Yoo Joonghyuk blocked even that sword. With his usual calm expression, he parried the lethal strike without any agitation.

['Stage Transformation' becomes even stronger!]

At the same time, the bright light of [Lotus Pedestal] filled the area. Snowfield Kim Dokja stiffened upon realizing Yoo Sangah's intervention.

「On the Isle of Reincarnators, Yoo Joonghyuk succeeds in cutting down Kim Dokja's [The Fourth Wall].」

In an instant, the Stage Transformation was further strengthened as Yoo Joonghyuk's muscles swelled. Yoo Joonghyuk's [Black Heavenly Demon Sword] blazed.

Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship.

That was not the Dark Ocean Slash which cut the sea, nor the Meteor Strike which cut down stars. It was simply the swordsmanship containing the history accumulated by Yoo Joonghyuk. Along with the sensation as if the trajectory of the universe itself twisted, the sound of Snowfield Kim Dokja's wrist and knee bones dislocating rang out.

'Unbreakable Faith' rolled on the ground, and Kim Dokja, having lost his balance, fell to one knee. Snowfield Kim Dokja lifted his head with a dazed expression. Yoo Joonghyuk spoke.

「"It's over."」

The tip of the Black Heavenly Demon Sword aimed at his throat. Finally, the battle was decided.

[All stars of <Star Stream> are intoxicated with fierce excitement!]

[All stars of <Star Stream> will never forget this moment for a long time!]

The one who uses the power of the 'Oldest Dream', and thus the Kim Dokja closest to the 'Oldest Dream' in this world. A being who subdued such a Kim Dokja had been born.

However, Yoo Joonghyuk did not seem pleased at all. He opened his mouth with his eyes narrowed.

「"Why didn't you use the power of the 'Oldest Dream' further?"」

Then, Snowfield Kim Dokja smiled.

「"It doesn't work against you anyway."」

「"There were other targets you could have used it on."」

As Yoo Joonghyuk said. Even if the ability of the 'Oldest Dream' didn't work against Yoo Joonghyuk, it didn't mean the same for others. Snowfield Kim Dokja could have captured his companions and used them as hostages, or even wiped out this entire stage. But Snowfield Kim Dokja didn't do that. He fought only with the full power he had as 'Kim Dokja'.

Yoo Joonghyuk slowly lowered his sword as he looked down on Snowfield Kim Dokja.

「"That’s enough playing around. Let’s go back now."」

But Snowfield Kim Dokja shook his head.

「"The person you are supposed to take is not me."」

「"You are Kim Dokja."」

Snowfield Kim Dokja quietly looked up at Yoo Joonghyuk. For a moment, it seemed as if countless emotions passed over Snowfield's eyes. He seemed to feel gratitude, sadness, and also a deep sense of betrayal and humiliation.

「"If I had truly been Kim Dokja, you wouldn’t have been able to defeat me."」

At least at that moment, he didn't seem like Kim Dokja. He was the 'Snow White' admired by disasters, and the 'Master of the Erased Blank Space' feared by stars.

「"If you don't come with me, I'll cut you down."」

「"You won't be able to do it."」

Yoo Joonghyuk, whose eyebrows twitched, raised his sword to prove his words. From afar, he heard Yoo Sangah shouting something. But Yoo Joonghyuk's sword didn't hesitate.

「"Didn't I say so?"」

And just as Yoo Joonghyuk's sword was about to reach Kim Dokja's shoulder.

Tzzzzzt!

A powerful spark erupted in the air.

「"You can't do it."」

Yoo Joonghyuk's blade was stopped exactly on top of Kim Dokja's shoulder. Fiercely surging stories were protecting Kim Dokja from his sword. Yoo Joonghyuk, startled, looked at the story that had repelled his blade.

「"This is..."」

Yoo Joonghyuk's eyes filled with deep distrust as he confirmed the trace of someone flowing in Kim Dokja's story.

1048 Episode 64. Eternal Night (7)

It was the first time seeing such an expression on Yoo Joonghyuk. When Kim Dokja, whom he thought was dead, revived for the first time—perhaps Yoo Joonghyuk had an expression like the one now.

The story protecting Kim Dokja's shoulder repelled Yoo Joonghyuk's sword.

「"If that is an 'avatar', there is a very easy way to verify it."」

Spewing out a very old story, the story cried out sorrowfully.

「The dagger accurately grazed the nape of Kim Dokja's shoulder.」

That was a story that had once cut Kim Dokja's shoulder. I too knew what that story was. That was the core story proving the 49% Kim Dokja.

「"The guy who will read my novel isn't you."」

The voice of someone missed flowed past the ears.

「"You'll know if you cut off the head. Because an avatar moves even if you cut off its head."」

It was the voice of the person who wanted Kim Dokja more than anyone else. The voice of the person who had longed for a single reader for longer than anyone else, and thus had written down his words in place of Yoo Joonghyuk.

Yoo Joonghyuk looked down at Snowfield Kim Dokja with wavering eyes.

「"How did you get this story..."」

A day everyone had dreamed of—it was a story created on a certain day after the hellish scenarios ended. The Han River that Yoosung-i had wanted to go to so much. A picnic with loved ones carrying chicken and pizza.

December 25th. That day a certain star was born—

「On that day, a certain Kim Dokja was born.」

The Kim Dokja who was denied himself. The Kim Dokja who could not properly remember 'Ways of Survival'—that Kim Dokja was 'discovered' on that day.

「Thus the owner of the story thought, 'What if I had not noticed that fact on that day.'」

A sentence imbued with deep regret and sadness. Neither Yoo Joonghyuk nor I could say anything at that moment as we read that sentence. A power that makes anyone into merely a reader. Such a power was inside that story.

「'If I had not cut Kim Dokja on that day, what would have happened to this story.'」

That was the birth story that created the 49% Kim Dokja.

[Story, 'Fake Kim Dokja', continues its storytelling.]

That story was neither my story nor Snowfield Kim Dokja's story. Yoo Joonghyuk spoke.

「"That is Han Sooyoung's story."」

The owner of that story was Han Sooyoung. The person who had noticed the 'Avatar Kim Dokja' before anyone else. The person who had doubted Kim Dokja first at the Han River on that day.

「Her story, which had been like that, was now protecting Snowfield Kim Dokja.」

As if telling them not to repeat any more mistakes, the story cried fiercely. Before the story, <Kim Dokja Company> was seen collapsing.

Yoo Joonghyuk muttered.

「"Why."」

Snowfield Kim Dokja laughed.

「"Do you really not know? Why this story is protecting me."」

Along with those words, once again a story flickered from Snowfield Kim Dokja's entire body.

[Story, 'Fake Kim Dokja', continues its storytelling.]

Han Sooyoung's story was harbored in Snowfield Kim Dokja and grew together with him. Turned away by companions time and again, the story grew and grew.

「I'll be abandoned anyway. Because I'm not the 'Kim Dokja' you want.」

The history that created the him of today was recorded there. <Kim Dokja Company> wandering while searching for the 'real Kim Dokja', leaving him behind. Even among them, there was one related to the 'third Kim Dokja'.

「Despite the calling of Snowfield Kim Dokja, <Kim Dokja Company> did not descend upon the world of the third.」

Only then did I fully understand what the 'Snowfield Fragment' had said to me. To strengthen that story, Snowfield Kim Dokja had not hesitated to be hurt all along. Moreover, it was not only <Kim Dokja Company> that hurt him.

「"You don't seem to be the Kim Dokja I knew."」

The readers who loved this story more than anyone. Even the readers who cleared scenarios together with him did not accept Snowfield as the 'Kim Dokja' they knew.

Hurt like that and accepting those wounds, Snowfield Kim Dokja came all the way here. Waiting solely for this moment to use this 'story' against <Kim Dokja Company>.

「"I can't go to 'that house' anyway. Because what you want isn't me. Even if I go, you will live longing for Kim Dokja once again. Longing forever for the Kim Dokja you couldn't find, the Kim Dokja you wanted to find."」

As if denying those words, Yoo Joonghyuk moved his sword once again. However, his [Black Heavenly Demon Sword] did not budge on top of Kim Dokja's shoulder.

Something was sealing Yoo Joonghyuk's movements. It was Snowfield's story.

「Can a mere single story block the sword of the Supreme King feared by all stars.」

No star whatsoever would fear that story. However, Yoo Joonghyuk was different. Looking at Yoo Joonghyuk's trembling hand, Snowfield Kim Dokja slowly rose from his spot. Then, pushing away Yoo Joonghyuk's blade with the back of his hand, he spoke.

「"So stop talking about home now. Instead, go to the conclusion of this world together with me."」

Along with Snowfield Kim Dokja's voice, stories overflowed from within him. Inside the storm of raging stories, Snowfield Kim Dokja seemed to say something. Or perhaps he seemed to show something he possessed. However, because the storm was too fierce, that scene could not be properly verified from Surya's location. What was heard was the shock of <Kim Dokja Company>.

「"How, this—"」

「"■■■, how, no!—"」

「"Stop! ■■■!"」

Surya's story was up to there. Having fulfilled its duty, Surya's butterfly lost its strength and scattered in the air. Me, the other Kings, and Cha Yerin as well. We silently gazed at the spot where the butterfly had disappeared.

Amidst countless emotions crossing, I opened my mouth first.

"Is this all?"

Surya nodded.

"What happened to <Kim Dokja Company> after that? The Master of the Erased Blank Space..."

Surya frowned with a solemn face, then answered slowly.

['The Master of the Erased Blank Space' disappeared from the battlefield together with the Outer Gods he bound. And...]

Surya clenched his fist tightly once more. Then this time, a moth with pitch-black wings appeared.

[The war between the 'disasters' following him and the stars began.]

Following the dust scattered by the moth that took flight, the story of that day unfolded. A story where stars were dying and disasters were screaming. A horrific scenery forged by the main battlefield of 'Ragnarok'. However, nowhere on that battlefield were the appearances of Snowfield Kim Dokja or <Kim Dokja Company> to be seen.

The moth soon fulfilled its lifespan and scattered. Looking at the disappearing moth, I asked once again.

"What about the other Myth-grade constellations? What were they doing?"

Something suddenly came to mind. When first entering the 'Main Battlefield', I had briefly encountered the constellations of <Emperor> who had turned into anomalous entities.

"<Olympus>, <Asgard>, <Vedas>, and <Emperor>. They wouldn't have been just watching everything, right?"

Surya nodded. Especially when mentioning the name of <Vedas>, his expression looked a bit painful.

[They too challenged the 'Master of the Erased Blank Space' in their own ways. They...]

Surya ultimately could not convey the remaining words. With a tzzzt spark sound, his incarnation body collapsed. It was because he revealed too much of his story while his wounds were not properly healed yet.

"You can stop speaking. You overexerted yourself too much."

Cha Yerin supported the stumbling Surya. Medics were seen running from afar. As Cha Yerin said, sending Surya to rest at this point was right. However, I could not stop asking questions. Because I had not heard an important fact.

"Are there stars among them who are still alive?"

Whether Surya was in a state of fading consciousness, there was no response. The one who answered instead was Cha Yerin.

"There are."

"Who is it?"

After entrusting Surya to the medics, Cha Yerin spoke in a calm voice.

"'One-eyed Father' or 'Spear that Draws the Boundary of the Sea'... The representative constellations of each nebula are still alive in some way."

"Are they in this camp right now?"

Cha Yerin nodded heavily. Frankly speaking, after hearing up to that point, my head felt dizzy.

[No, to think the battlefield is in this state even though those bastards are alive!]

As if venting anger on my behalf, Meihouwang erupted with a rough True Voice.

[Where are those fellows!]

"By now, they must all be in the situation room."

We headed straight for the situation room. The situation room Cha Yerin mentioned was in an open area inside the inner castle that had become ruins after receiving shellings. However, when opening the tent of the situation room and entering, what was waiting for us was an empty scene.

[These damn fellows...]

Traces of someone having been there until a moment ago remained everywhere. Peels of discarded sacred fruits, broken recorder pieces, and implements carved with who-knows-what.

I quietly raised my energy sensing. However, nowhere in the vicinity could the presence of a 'Myth-grade constellation' be felt. Knowing that the Kings and I were coming, those fellows had already turned tail and fled.

Letting out a light sigh, I shook my head.

"What about other forces? Surely these aren't all of them."

Even if the fight of the 'Main Battlefield' was arduous, there should still be quite a few stars remaining. No matter how many stars had set, no matter how powerful the disasters over there were—there was no way every single star I knew had truly set.

"What about Goryeo's First Sword? There should be other constellations of the Korean Peninsula as well."

Cheok Jungyeong. A star more upright than any constellation I knew, and a master who had also taught me in the Fear Realm. There was no way he died here.

"Where is the God of Wine and Ecstasy? Surely there must be other representative constellations of the 'Constellation Camp'."

I recalled the judges of the Underworld and Baccarinne who had come to see me in the 'preliminary battle'. They said they were following the new ruler of the Underworld, the 'God of Wine and Ecstasy'—Dionysus.

"Surely the Transcendents fought together as well?"

I recalled the Transcendents I knew. Although Breaking the Sky Sword Saint Namgung Minyoung was caught in the constellations' scheme in the 'New Murim District', many powerful Transcendents still remained. The constellation met in the preliminary battle—Sun Hunter 'Hou Yi' must have also come up to this battlefield to find his friends.

"Where is Master Kyrgios?"

Cha Yerin was silent for a moment. Looking at me with pupils whose emotion could not be read, she spoke in a small voice.

"Follow me."

All throughout following Cha Yerin, I felt an unidentifiable ominousness. Cha Yerin's footsteps exited the inner castle and headed toward the outer edge of the outer castle. I felt incarnations who occasionally discovered us blankly gazing over here. Many of them were missing an arm or a leg. Empty pupils where neither hope nor despair could be felt. Those gazes were following us.

How long did we walk like that? We finally arrived in front of a white building on the outer edge of the outer castle.

"Are they in here?"

Cha Yerin nodded slightly. Without hesitating, I entered inside the building. Was it because of the color of the building? I initially thought that place was a sort of ward. However, the moment I entered inside the building, I realized.

「This place is not a ward.」

In that place, small tombstones were erected in numbers beyond counting.

「The charnel house of stars was there.」

Tombstones so numerous as to be dizzying. In front of the tombstones engraved with modifiers were the star relics used by the tombstones' owners.

I stood in front of a broken sword whose shape was familiar among them. On the tombstone placed next to the sword, it was written like this.

「The great star of the Korean Peninsula, Goryeo's First Sword Cheok Jungyeong—rests in this scenario.」

I read that sentence again several times. Goryeo's First Sword Cheok Jungyeong. Goryeo's First Sword... Cheok Jungyeong.

「I remembered him.」

The sight of him laughing boisterously, the moment he came to save me, the way he brandished his sword—I remembered it all.

I continued walking. In the charnel house, there were not only the remains of stars.

「King of the North, Magician Jacob Martinez—rests in this scenario.」

「Castle Lord of Paradise, Reinheit von Dserba—rests in this scenario.」

The names of incarnations I knew were written in that place.

「Indomitable Fighter, Eternal Emperor Fei Hu—rests in this scenario.」

Incarnations who struggled until the end without giving up against disasters. And at the end of that long list, a sentence I knew well was written.

「The smallest is the greatest.」

It felt as if my breath was suffocating. Nevertheless, I had to read that sentence. Without reading that sentence—

「The one who proved his beliefs with his life. The Transcendent who protected the final defensive line longer than anyone else.」

Because I could never move on to the next sentence.

「Paradox of White Purity, Kyrgios Rodgraim—rests in this scenario.」

1049 Episode 64. Eternal Night (8)

I read the sentence written on Kyrgios's tombstone again and again. I kept reading it until the words almost lost their meaning.

「Kyrgios Rodgraim has died.」

When I blinked, the form of the record floating before my eyes shifted.

「Goryeo's First Sword Cheok Jungyeong has died.」

As if forcing me to accept that reality before I could move forward, the records continued to surface in front of me.

I left Kyrgios's monument and examined the other tombstones. Among the gravestones of the Transcendents were those I knew well—beings I had met in the 'Realm of Fear'.

「The Strongest Transcendent, Unrivaled One-Fist Yu Hoseong — rests in this scenario.」

The Commander of the 0th Division of the Transcendent Alliance. The master of both Kyrgios and the Saint of Breaking the Sky, Unrivaled One-Fist Yu Hoseong. He, too, had met his end on this battlefield.

Cha Yerin, who had been watching me from the side, spoke softly.

"Everyone is dead."

It felt as though the air in this world was rapidly thinning. The ceiling of the ossuary was wide open, like the colosseum from the preliminary battle. Looking up at the open sky, I felt acutely that stars were not the only things that had vanished from this world.

「That overwhelming sorrow made me oddly calm instead.」

Perhaps it was at that very moment that I realized the role I was truly meant to play in this story. Looking endlessly up at the vast blank space stretching out before me, I listened to her voice.

"Everyone... they're all dead."

Turning my head, my remaining reader was looking at me.

"Writer-nim."

"Yes."

I knew what Cha Yerin's desperate expression meant. I knew what she expected of me. There are people who spend their lives reading a story, loving and cherishing its characters. And readers who have lost those characters usually wear the exact same expression.

"As you know, it's impossible for dead characters to come back to life."

"But this is the <Star Stream>."

That was true. Fortunately, this world was the <Star Stream>. A world where resurrection was possible. A world where, as long as the soul remained intact, one could somehow push through sheer impossibility. Running various possibilities through my mind, I asked calmly:

"Does the <Underworld> still exist in this world? I heard the God of Wine and Ecstasy became the new master of the <Underworld>."

At the mention of the <Underworld>, Cha Yerin's complexion darkened slightly.

"The <Underworld> has become so ruined that its very existence can no longer be sustained. <Olympus> drew probability through the <Underworld> for their final battle."

As expected, damn <Olympus> is never helpful.

"And the God of Wine and Ecstasy went missing in a battle a few weeks ago."

It was truly the worst possible situation. The <Underworld> was destroyed, and its master was missing. Yet, something about Cha Yerin's story left a lingering question in my mind. Could the <Underworld> really fall so easily? It had the Gigantes, and those formidable figures Hades and Persephone. In the first place, how had Dionysus inherited the <Underworld>? Where had Hades and Persephone disappeared to?

"It's probably not just <Olympus>—the underworlds belonging to other nebulae are likely in a similar state."

I nodded in agreement. If <Olympus>'s <Underworld> was destroyed, the netherworlds of other nebulae had surely met a similar fate. Even the Three Sovereigns and Five Emperors of <Emperor> had fallen into such a state; no nebula could remain unscathed.

"I see."

Without an underworld, souls could not be retrieved. In other words, resurrection through the netherworld was impossible.

"Um—"

"It's alright, Yerin-ssi."

Even so, I answered composedly.

"I'll figure something out. Don't worry."

Cha Yerin's eyes trembled at my words. I offered her a faint smile and turned back to look at my masters' tombstones one last time. Then, together with Cha Yerin, I left the ossuary. As we stepped out and looked back at the entrance, a thought suddenly crossed my mind.

"Who built this ossuary?"

"I heard it was one of the Recorders of Fear."

I checked the small sign hanging at the entrance of the ossuary.

「Eternal Night」

That was the name of this ossuary.

---

Night fell. That was merely a way of expressing the passage of time—in truth, the world had been in perpetual night all day. Because even the 'God of Supreme Light' Surya was too heavily injured, there was no star left to bring forth the day.

I sat alone inside the command tent. The command tent also had an open ceiling. Both here and the ossuary—most of the structures in this city had open roofs. Whether they were built that way from the beginning or deliberately opened later, I couldn't tell.

Perhaps someone had designed them like this to count the stars in the night sky. If so, it was a terrible, morbid taste. Because right now, the night sky of the <Star Stream> was nothing more than a death register. The stars recorded in that sky were bound to fall. That was the preordained end of this world.

Unable to sleep, Jung Heewon poked her head carefully through the tent flap.

"May I come in?"

"Of course."

Offering a faint smile, Jung Heewon pulled up a chair beside me. We sat quietly, staring at the table between us. On the table lay pieces carved by Odin. At first, they were hard to recognize, but looking closely, the pieces were miniature carvings representing the symbols of various constellations.

I picked up a carved piece shaped like a lightning hammer. This one clearly represented Thor. Thor's piece was broken. It didn't look like someone had smashed it—it seemed to have been carved broken from the start. Realizing that, the other pieces on the table looked completely different. Perhaps all these carvings were tombstones of constellations created by Odin.

Staring at the broken handle of Thor's hammer, Jung Heewon asked:

"Will Yerin-ssi be alright?"

When we entered the ossuary, Jung Heewon and the other Kings had stepped aside to give Cha Yerin and me some privacy.

"She won't be."

"I thought so..."

Jung Heewon's expression wasn't bright either. She too must have found names she recognized in the ossuary. After all, she was the disciple of the Saint of Breaking the Sky, one of the leaders of the Transcendent Alliance.

"The Transcendent commanders... are they really all dead?"

"As of now, yes."

Hearing my response, Jung Heewon blinked blankly before asking again:

"Pardon?"

"It means there might be a way."

There is no <Underworld> left in this world. But just because there is no <Underworld> doesn't mean resurrection is impossible. Above all, I had once stayed in a world under similar circumstances.

'Demon King of Salvation.'

The moment I summoned the eldest in my mind, a reply came back instantly.

- Yeah.

'Have you tried contacting the Lump-bearing King?'

Right after leaving the ossuary, I called upon my brothers inside the [Fourth Wall] and asked them for a few favors.

- I'm still trying. But there's no answer yet.

'Have you reviewed the method I mentioned?'

- Reviewed it? Can I be honest with you?

'Of course.'

- I think it's a completely insane method.

I let out a dry laugh and replied:

'Has Kim Dokja ever cleared a scenario using a normal method?'

I threw it out as a joke, but the Demon King of Salvation's response was dead serious.

- It's going to cost a truly monstrous amount of probability. You know that, right?

'Probability doesn't matter. But it's worth considering, right?'

- You're probably the only one who could ever think of a method like this.

'Let me know when you're ready.'

- Until then, don't die.

That was the end of the conversation. Letting out a light sigh, I checked the system messages I had put off reviewing. Although we were lucky to win the first defense battle without major losses, the real problem started now.

[You are currently the 'Commander' of this fortress.]

The commander of a fortress is automatically appointed as the 'highest-status existence' within the fortress. My becoming the commander meant there was currently no Myth-grade constellation with higher status than me inside this fortress.

It was then that a small noise came from the entrance of the command tent.

[Hmm, you're already here?]

The worn tent entrance rustled as the 'Mass-Production Maker', the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon', and 'Meihouwang' appeared. Judging by their expressions, the three hadn't exactly planned this visit together. Likely, they had all become lost in thought, just like Jung Heewon.

They each took a seat around the table. The Mass-Production Maker spoke first.

[I couldn't sleep, so I thought I'd drop by.]

"Don't constellations usually not sleep?"

[Nonsense! Even I sleep from time to time. As you get older, getting enough sleep is the only way to slow down the aging of your Fable.]

I let out a small chuckle. The Mass-Production Maker's reason for coming was clear. He was worried about the heavy responsibility I must be feeling alone. And the other constellations were likely here for similar reasons.

Meihouwang, who had been glaring at me with dissatisfied eyes, spoke up as if he had been waiting.

[When tomorrow comes, the next battlefield will open.]

"Presumably."

[Now that they know we've joined this side, the Disaster Camp won't attempt a reckless siege with small forces anymore.]

I nodded. But Meihouwang, thinking I hadn't fully grasped the gravity of it, continued:

[I'm saying we won't be as lucky next time. It would be fortunate if only one 'Interstellar Devourer' comes, but in all likelihood—]

[At least five or six Interstellar Devourers. Or something even worse.]

At the Mass-Production Maker's words, a deep silence fell over the table. It was clear who 'something even worse' referred to.

"The Aberration of the Emperor."

At my words, Meihouwang's lips twitched as he said:

[If that monster comes, even I won't be able to stop it. Honestly, I don't think the four of us combined could win against it. And in the worst-case scenario...]

"If it's the 'Master of the Erased Blank Space', I will handle him somehow."

[You truly intend to fight him.]

"That's why I came all the way here, isn't it?"

Did they sense a certain conviction in my tone? For a moment, the three Kings wore peculiar expressions and looked at one another. The Mass-Production Maker smiled faintly and spoke:

[According to intelligence received by the flagship, even excluding the Aberration of the Emperor, the identified number of Interstellar Devourers is at least twenty.]

Interstellar Devourers were Outer Gods equivalent to 'Natural Catastrophe Class' in the Recorder of Fear's classification. The enemy side had at least twenty such Outer Gods. Considering that each of them was a monster on par with a Myth-grade constellation, the power imbalance was utterly despairing.

[And there's one more thing. Aside from the 'Aberration of the Emperor', there is another concern.]

I felt like I already knew what the Mass-Production Maker was going to say.

"<Kim Dokja Company>."

The Mass-Production Maker nodded heavily. Currently, <Kim Dokja Company> had been abducted by Snowfield Kim Dokja. While Snowfield Kim Dokja certainly possessed counter-Fables against <Kim Dokja Company>, if <Kim Dokja Company> had truly intended to resist, escaping that place would have been possible. Yet <Kim Dokja Company> had chosen to be bound by Snowfield Kim Dokja instead of escaping.

[If by any chance those Outer Gods take the side of the 'Master of the Erased Blank Space', frankly speaking, we have zero chance of victory.]

It was true. If <Kim Dokja Company> stood on Snowfield Kim Dokja's side, it would create a situation just as despairing as all 999th regression disasters siding with the 'Dokkaebi King' in the main novel.

[We came all this way because we believe in you, but frankly, the situation is grim. Even if you miraculously hold off the 'Master of the Erased Blank Space', we lack the military strength to face the remaining forces.]

"You don't need to worry too much about that part."

[Hmm? Do you have another ally?]

"It's about time they arrived."

[Who?]

"The constellations who don't want to die."

Along with my words, the sound of approaching footsteps echoed outside the tent. Meihouwang, who had his senses heightened, abruptly stood up from his seat.

[You bastards—]

Opening the tent, two Myth-grade constellations appeared. 'Poseidon', the Spear Drawing the Boundary of Seas from <Olympus>, and 'Odin', the One-Eyed Father from <Asgard>.

Poseidon spoke first.

[I heard reinforcements arrived. Are you lot all of them?]

He looked flushed, as though he had been drinking somewhere. Drunk out of his mind, he tipped another gulp of alcohol into his mouth and spoke mockingly:

[Nothing but half-baked runts.]

[You bastard... Do you want to be eternally extinguished?]

Meihouwang released his status, his voice booming with true command, but Poseidon didn't pay him the slightest attention.

[So you are the adversary of the 'Master of the Erased Blank Space'.]

Slumping down before the table like a ruffian, Poseidon stared fixedly at me. Looking at his intoxicated face, the fragment of Poseidon I had met in the Third's world came to mind.

[You are too late. No matter what you do now, the stars can no longer defeat the disaster.]

[Did you come all the way here just to say such trash? Aren't you the ones who caused this situation in the first place?]

At Poseidon's shameless demeanor, Meihouwang was on the verge of exploding. Glancing at Meihouwang, Poseidon chuckled bitterly and replied:

[That's right. It's all my fault. Everything is due to the greed of us damn Myth-grade constellations. I have no intention of denying it.]

His face showed neither the overbearing aura of one who carved out the boundaries of the ocean at will, nor the arrogance of refusing to allow any star above his horizon. All that could be felt from him was powerlessness—an intensely deep and heavy sense of helplessness.

Disliking Poseidon's attitude, Meihouwang frowned and spat out:

[With what nerve does a guy who ran away without even putting up a proper fight show up here?]

Instead of answering Meihouwang, Poseidon looked at me.

[You must know. The reason I came here.]

Instead of answering, I looked back at Poseidon.

「Constellations. Beings who wish to witness the end of the story they love, even if it means burning away everything they possess.」

Perhaps this star had come to witness the end of everything—including himself.

[A message arrived from the terminal left behind by Hermes.]

As if pronouncing the time of doom for this worldline, Poseidon's lips slowly parted.

[Tomorrow, the 'Master of the Erased Blank Space' will descend here.]

1050 Episode 65. The Last Banquet (1)

---

[He's coming here tomorrow? Is that true?]

Meihouwang, who had previously shown nothing but hatred toward Poseidon, expressed a completely different emotion for the first time. The Mass-Production Maker, who immediately verified the source of the information beside him, nodded meaningfully.

[Has Hermes's network still been functioning? Upon checking, the information seems to be true.]

At the Mass-Production Maker's confirmation, Jung Heewon composed her breathing as if tense, and Meihouwang's expression turned far more serious. On the other hand, there was one fellow who was inexplicably triumphant all by himself.

[Good. Is it finally time for me to spread my wings?]

As the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon puffed out his chest and muttered, Meihouwang snapped at him in disbelief:

[You stupid demon dragon! If the 'Master of the Erased Blank Space' descends here tomorrow, your damn wings will be torn off before you can even spread them!]

[What are you talking about? I just need to become the Apocalypse Dragon.]

[Do you think becoming the Apocalypse Dragon is that easy? And this is 'Ragnarok', you idiot!]

The Abyssal Black Flame Dragon glared lightly at the growling Meihouwang, then looked toward me as if feeling wronged. Come to think of it, I had promised to make the 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon' into the Apocalypse Dragon.

[A banquet before doom, and nothing but fools have gathered.]

Chuckling softly, Poseidon shook his head in amusement and spread his palm over the table. Instantly, the scent of the sea wafted in, and the scenery on the table changed.

[Eat and drink. For this will be your last banquet.]

The table was filled with a lavish feast fit for constellations. There were dishes made from rare elixirs like Sacred Fruit, Thousand-Year Snow Ginseng, and Ten-Thousand-

Year Fleeceflower, as well as ingredients representing each nebula like 'Soma' and 'Amrita'. And that wasn't all.

「Terrine of Minotaur Front Hoof」

「Steamed Thick Hydra Cheeks」

「Siren Fin Soup」

Looking at dishes prepared from parts of mythical creatures, the Kings let out small groans. Terrine made from Minotaur meat and steamed Hydra cheeks. On top of that, soup topped with crispy fried Siren fins... These were dishes that could only be prepared in <Olympus>.

[What kind of scheme is this?]

When Meihouwang asked with a scowl, Poseidon chuckled and replied:

[Literally. Enjoy your last supper.]

I stared down silently at the food Poseidon had brought out. Perhaps these were dishes meant to be served at the table of the <Round Table>. Poseidon's intention was clear. Like the final meal given to condemned prisoners, since these dishes would be useless by tomorrow anyway, he was dumping them on us instead.

I picked up a piece of the Minotaur terrine in front of me and put it in my mouth.

"It's delicious."

At my reaction, Meihouwang opened his mouth in disbelief. Regardless, I continued eating. I ate the Hydra cheeks and the Siren fins. Mythical creatures that had likely been farmed by constellations. I ate while faithfully imagining their Fables.

Staring at me eating casually, Poseidon's eyes flickered. I offered a faint smile and asked:

"What? You said it's the last supper, didn't you? We have to eat well to fight well."

Hearing my words, Jung Heewon also picked up her chopsticks, as if coming to a realization. Taking a slice of the terrine and tasting it, she exclaimed in admiration:

"It really is delicious."

"Right?"

"It's completely different from the terrine eaten at funerals."

"I suppose that's because it's a funeral for stars."

At that, the Mass-Production Maker beside us also poked at the food with his fork.

[Hmm, where was this Hydra farmed? The marbling level seems quite high.]

Meihouwang also seemed to come to a decision, tearing wildly at the Minotaur front leg in front of him while muttering:

[Crazy bastards.]

For someone spouting rough curses, his appetite was remarkably vigorous. Following him, the Abyssal Black Flame Dragon also nibbled on the dessert made of Sacred Fruit in front of him.

Watching us actually enjoying the banquet, Poseidon narrowed his eyes and spat out:

[Have you all lost your minds right before the final act? Tomorrow, the <Star Stream> ends. Every Fable in this world could reach its conclusion.]

With the last supper laid out before them, how many condemned prisoners could truly enjoy the feast? But the five gathered here were precisely the kind of lunatics capable of doing such a thing.

"So what?"

[What?]

"We've always come this far thinking we might die today."

The scenarios were always hell. Ever since the very first scenario. Suddenly, every human's remaining lifespan became 30 minutes, which soon shrank to 10 minutes. During those 10 minutes, all who failed to prove their worth died. Kim Dokja—and I—had lived through such a story every single time.

"If destruction is tomorrow, we actually have plenty of time. Don't we?"

Poseidon sat blankly without replying, watching us eat the food. Seeing me scoop up Hydra cheek meat over red soup and eat it, Jung Heewon made a comment:

"Eating it like that makes it look like gukbap."

"Ah, gukbap calls for a glass of soju. Right?"

"Exactly. Hey, fish mister over there. Pass us any leftover alcohol if you have some."

Having even his drink snatched away unexpectedly, Poseidon stared at us with dazed eyes.

Jung Heewon, I, and the three Kings ate and drank until we were full. The dishes served by high-ranking constellations at their own banquets naturally couldn't be anything less than delicious. Until we finished our meal, Poseidon remained silent.

Looking at Poseidon, who was blankly staring at a corner of the table, I spoke:

"It's pitiful."

Snapping his head up, Poseidon glared at me as if asking what I meant.

"I find it pitiful that you can't put anything in your mouth because you're too worried about tomorrow's destruction, even with a feast right in front of you."

[You punk, are you mocking me now—]

"Why did you drink? You can't even get drunk anyway. No matter how much your status has fallen, there's no alcohol capable of getting a Myth-grade constellation drunk."

It wasn't just Poseidon; the same applied to me and the other Kings. We drank, but with status at our level, there was no way alcohol would get us drunk.

"Why? Now that it's time to die, did you feel like playing human?"

Poseidon looking intoxicated wasn't because of alcohol. The only thing that can intoxicate a star is a story. He was merely drunk on the overwhelming Fable of the approaching final act.

[Yeah. It seems so.]

At his unexpectedly honest answer, I let out a dry laugh. It felt like I might actually be able to talk to the current Poseidon.

"You were like that in that world, too."

[That world?]

Poseidon asked back reflexively before his expression stiffened. Even without my explanation, he realized on his own. Which world I was referring to.

"Having lost everything, you were just like an ordinary old man."

Poseidon opened his eyes wide in slight surprise, then grimaced and avoided my gaze.

[It must have been an eyesore of a pathetic sight.]

I remembered Poseidon trapped in the 'Third's World'. Holding a recorder in his hand, wearing a marine cap.

"No, it wasn't. Above all, you in that world never gave up until the very end. Even while captured by the Great Sage Heaven's Equal, you kept watching for a chance to escape. Even after losing all your status and becoming a ordinary old man, you never lost your pride as a once-great star."

The Poseidon of that world had spirit. Even while being mocked by enemies with status far lower than his, when the only miracle he could perform was spouting strong water from his mouth, he never gave up resisting until the very end.

[What are you trying to say?]

"There must be a reason why you were the last to survive among the stars of damn <Olympus>."

[What do you know—]

"You definitely fought hard, didn't you?"

[.....]

"Because an arrogant constellation like you, a 'Spear Drawing the Boundary of Seas' whose pride would rather choose death over defeat, survived even in that state because you still had stories left that you wanted to see."

Now I could see it. What dwelt in his intoxicated eyes wasn't despair.

"You are still dreaming of a miracle. That's why you play human every day and drink alcohol. To forget despair. To survive even one day longer and resist the conclusion until the very end."

Poseidon remained silent for a long time. Bit by bit, as if refusing to admit it, he bit his lip several times before barely opening his mouth.

[Why did you come here?]

"You already know why I came."

Poseidon looked at me as if I were a strange creature.

[It seems my mind has gone weird now that it's time to die.]

"You were never quite normal to begin with."

A Myth-grade constellation who used to barge into scenarios at every opportunity to cause chaos. A strange feeling washed over me once again. Right now, I had become allies with a star that had been an enemy for the longest time.

Noticing my gaze, Poseidon spoke:

[I'm sorry, but current me won't be of much help. I am no longer the 'Spear Drawing the Boundary of Seas' you knew.]

Pressing his temple firmly with one hand, he continued:

[My status has fallen, and since a few weeks ago, a strange recorder sound keeps ringing in my head.]

A recorder sound.

"Looking at it, it seems you're not the only one."

Smiling faintly, I stood up from my seat and stared into a corner of the command tent. Crouched in that corner was the constellation who had entered the tent alongside Poseidon.

Poseidon said:

[That damn old geezer has been in that state continuously lately.]

A star taking the incarnation body of a frail old man was curled up in the corner, carving something. Scattered around him were various carvings. Divine relics of constellations. I recognized who each of those relics symbolized.

The one who lost an arm to the Wolf of Destruction, Tyr.

The guardian of the Bifröst Great Horned Bridge, Heimdall.

He was currently carving the dead constellations of <Asgard>.

"Odin."

Now, calling his true name right before him produced no sparks. Whether it was because this was the final phase of the scenario or because his status had fallen, I couldn't tell.

"You haven't forgotten, right? This scenario is the 'Great Destruction Scenario' of your <Asgard>. And the real 'destruction' hasn't arrived yet."

Odin continued carving without any reply. I spoke once more:

"You know, don't you? What the 'true conclusion' of Ragnarok looks like."

At my words, Poseidon and the four Kings held their breath.

「The true conclusion of Ragnarok.」

In truth, this 'Ragnarok' hadn't properly built up to its true 'conclusion' yet. And as long as Odin remained alive, we still had a chance to write that conclusion.

"Odin."

Releasing the status of my entire body, I spoke to him:

"If you still have one eye left, count clearly the number of stars remaining in this sky."

Only then did Odin slowly raise his head to look at me. Staring into his eyes, which reflected the ruined <Asgard>, I said:

"In 'Ragnarok', there are core battles that construct its epic."

[.....]

"The real Ragnarok isn't a flag-capturing war like this. It doesn't matter how many fortresses we lose. As long as we win the key battles, we can change the conclusion of 'Ragnarok'."

The core narrative of the Giant Story 'Ragnarok' wasn't merely a war between disasters and constellations. The primary narrative of 'Ragnarok' was slaying the disasters born to destroy the world—especially the core 'Great Disasters'.

Coincidentally, the first Great Disaster of 'Ragnarok' had already been awakened directly by Odin and <Asgard>.

「The King of Hell.」

Currently, that role was being performed by 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'. <Asgard> had fielded Heimdall as its adversary to face him, but unfortunately, they ended up losing the battle.

"Although the first battle was a defeat, other disasters remain. We just need to awaken all the other disasters and fight them."

The foundation of this 'scenario' was the Giant Story of 'Ragnarok'. As long as a 'stage' capable of overturning the scenario was created, reversing the tide of battle was possible at any time.

[Hold on, are you in your right mind?]

However, at my claim, the other 'Kings' seemed somewhat flustered. Meihouwang in particular wore an expression as if he had heard something absurd.

[We ended up like this because we couldn't handle the 'Master of the Erased Blank Space' alone, and you want to awaken the remaining disasters too?]

At that moment, Odin, who had remained silent all along, opened his mouth.

[Not long ago, an incarnation who came to see me said the exact same thing as you.]

With those words, Odin placed a newly made carving onto the ground. I looked down at the carving. It wasn't Thor's relic, nor was it Tyr's or Heimdall's. It was the weapon of a man I knew very well.

[That fellow also babbled nonsense that if we awaken and defeat all the remaining disasters, we might be able to win.]

Naturally, there was only one person in this world capable of spouting such nonsense. I picked up Odin's carving in my hand.

「Dark Heavenly Moon Spear.」

Forged like a pitch-black moon, the exclusive weapon of the 41st regression Yoo Joonghyuk.

At that moment, a chilling sensation brushed through my mind.

「Odin only carves the weapons of 'the dead'.」

1051 Episode 65. The Last Banquet (2)

I paused for a moment. As if denying the record floating before my eyes, I slowly inhaled and declared:

"Yoo Joonghyuk doesn't die. Even if he's a guy who dies a lot, he's never someone who dies easily."

As proof of my words, the state of the 'Dark Heavenly Moon Spear' carving in my hand was quite different from the other carvings.

「The 'Dark Heavenly Moon Spear' carved by Odin has not broken yet.」

The divine relic carvings of the other constellations were all broken or heavily damaged. In contrast, the 'Dark Heavenly Moon Spear' showed no flaws or cracks. In other words,

Yoo Joonghyuk was not dead yet. Wherever he was and whatever he was doing right now, that guy hadn't died yet.

Yet Odin's expression wasn't bright.

[He dies.]

A voice closer to a calm statement of fact. Suppressing my inner turmoil deeply, I glared into his eye.

"Did you carve this beforehand because he looked like a guy about to die soon? So you could break it when he dies?"

[.....]

"I'm sorry, but that guy doesn't die. This carving will never break. So—"

Saying that, I tucked the carving into my breast pocket.

"I'll keep this as a souvenir."

It was to prevent Odin from accidentally snapping it. But as if all my efforts were meaningless, Odin slowly shook his head and said:

[He dies.]

Staring into his calm eye, I asked back:

"Did you see it with your one eye?"

Odin was a constellation who sacrificed one of his eyes to Mímir's Well to gain the truth of the world and foresight into the future. I knew all too well that his single eye reached into [Foresight], much like the 'Lump-bearing King' or 'Anna Croft'.

[I saw it.]

Even without using [Lie Detection], I could tell. Those words were true.

"When and how does Yoo Joonghyuk die?"

[That I do not know. But he will surely die. That is all I know.]

"Yoo Joonghyuk is a Regressor. As the incarnation of the 'Oldest Dream', there's no way he would die. Even if he dies, it's not a real death. What dies will be this world."

Odin also knew that the 'puppet of the Oldest Dream' repeated his life. So he couldn't deny my words. He shouldn't have been able to.

[He will finally gain peace through death.]

For a moment, I was rendered speechless. The 41st regression was the final turn Yoo Joonghyuk could reach before the proper 'Ways of Survival' began. His experiences and wisdom gathered up to this point would be passed to the 2nd regression, forming the foundation for the start of 'Ways of Survival' and the eventual birth of the 'Secretive Plotter'.

What became of the 41st regression's Yoo Joonghyuk afterward was never revealed.

「The Yoo Joonghyuk of this regression line will regress no more.」

I knew this too. It was information I had known from the very beginning. For a certain reason in this regression line, Yoo Joonghyuk meets a death without regression.

"Yeah, I suppose so. Humans all die eventually."

I had stayed too long in a scenario world where constellations, transcendents, and systems ran rampant, forgetting for a moment. It's normal for humans to die. What mattered was the manner of death.

"Maybe Yoo Joonghyuk will die too. But at least he won't die here. Because I'm going to make it so."

Wondering if I had ever had so many words inside me, I kept muttering continuously:

"That bastard will see the conclusion he wants."

Were these my words, or Kim Dokja's words? I couldn't tell. Perhaps they were Han Sooyoung's words. Or maybe another Kim Dokja fragment's words. They could have been Cha Seongwoo's, Lee Dansoo's, or Gyeong Sein's words. Or perhaps the words of an unnamed recorder reading this story right now.

"He will finally learn what happiness is, and what the reason for his existence was. He will surely be compensated for this long tragedy, for the life he has endured."

Whose words were they anyway? No matter whose words they were, in the end, this was my true heart.

"And he will die as a human."

[As a human?]

"Yeah, as a human."

After saying that, I paused. For some reason, my stomach felt turned. It felt as though the clumsily mixed Kim Dokjas inside me were shouting all at once.

「I wish Yoo Joonghyuk wouldn't die.」

I barely managed to stop those words from bursting out of my mouth.

「I wish he would remain the protagonist of this story forever. I wish this story would never end.」

One side of my heart constricted insanely.

[The Fable, 'Successor of the Eternal Name', chuckles and looks at you.]

[The influence of the Fable, 'Successor of the Eternal Name', grows stronger!]

Clutching my chest lightly, I took several deep breaths, forcing down the thoughts surging within me. Then I looked at Odin.

"Anyway, I need your help."

Setting down his carving knife, Odin slowly shook his head.

[I can do nothing.]

Knowing full well he would spout weak nonsense right off the bat, I didn't panic and picked up his words:

"Why? Because you lost to the Master of the Erased Blank Space?"

[The stars capable of ending 'Ragnarok' are all dead. Even one of them...]

Odin looked at me with a somewhat resentful gaze, concluding with a deep sigh:

[Did he not die at your hands?]

I quickly realized what Odin was talking about.

「The stars capable of ending Ragnarok.」

In the giant nebula <Asgard>, there were several stars representing the major events of 'Ragnarok'.

Thor, Thunder of Thursday.

Tyr, the One Who Lost an Arm to the Wolf of Destruction.

Heimdall, Guardian of the Great Horned Bridge.

Vidar, Terminator of War.

They were each fated to face their matching 'Great Disaster'.

「'Thor' who fights against the 'World Serpent' encircling the universe.」

「'Tyr' who fights against the netherworld gatekeeper 'Garm'.」

「'Heimdall' who fights against the King of Hell 'Loki'.」

「'Vidar' who fights against 'Fenrir', the Wolf That Swallowed a God.」

However, those four stars were not in this scenario right now. Heimdall died at the hands of Snowfield Kim Dokja right at the start of the scenario, while Thor and Tyr seemed to have met their end on the battlefield. Lastly, in Vidar's case—

"Ah."

Right. That bastard got killed by me back in 'New Martial Arts Earth'.

[It seems you finally remember.]

Technically, it was Yoo Joonghyuk who killed him, not me. Still, since he was a Fable-grade constellation, I thought he would have barely clung to life... Did he really die? Well, having his Fable entirely absorbed by Apollo, there was no way he could have survived.

I offered a faint smile toward Odin, who was glaring at me in disbelief.

"Well, there are plenty of actors who can perform the story, aren't there?"

[What—]

"Because stars are merely 'Fable-machines' existing solely to inherit stories. Right?"

At my words, Odin's shoulders twitched violently. Because what I had just said was also the long-cherished belief of Odin, the 'One-Eyed Father'.

「Every star is merely a small word to record a great Fable.」

In fact, adhering to that belief, Odin had resurrected dead constellations time and time again. Heimdall was such a case. Continuously passing down <Asgard>'s Fables, Odin had maintained his nebula by repeatedly reviving constellations destined to be sacrificed in the Great Destruction.

"You can just revive them again. Like you've always done."

[That is no longer possible. Because even the netherworld has vanished.]

"Who said anything about reviving them?"

[.....?]

"The stage doesn't remember who the 'actors' are. It merely remembers the 'roles'."

Realizing the meaning behind my words late, Odin's single eye widened.

[Don't tell me you...]

"That's right."

Reaching out my open palm toward Odin, I said:

"I'll be the one to revive the 'roles'. You just hand over the core Fable of 'Ragnarok' you possess."

Odin couldn't say a word, staring foolishly at my empty palm. I only regretted that the sky was pitch-black right now. If the stars could hear my proposal right now, they would have showered me with sponsorships.

[The constellation, 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon', is amazed by your absurd proposal.]

Ah, right, these guys were watching.

[The constellation, 'Mass-Production Maker', nods saying it is just like you.]

[The constellation, 'Demon-like Judge of Fire', feels a deep longing from your appearance.]

Meihouwang was staring at me with his mouth wide open, having forgotten to even use indirect messages. In truth, it was a situation worthy of that. Because my proposal right now—

[Are you... telling me to hand over all of <Asgard> right now?]

Odin's lips trembled violently at my sheer brazenness. I shrugged my shoulders at Odin and asked back:

"The nebula is ruined anyway, so what's there that you can't give up?"

[.....]

"If you leave it like this, you're finished anyway. So hand it over."

[Receiving the Fable... do you plan to create 'roles'?]

"Yeah."

[You should know the price of 'roles'.]

"I'll take care of that myself, so just hand over the Fable."

Odin was silent for a while, lost in thought. He parted his lips several times before looking at me with eyes cast in deep darkness.

[Do you know your own future?]

I wondered why he was suddenly talking about the future, but looking closely, his single eye was shining brightly.

"Can you see my future?"

Odin slowly shook his head.

[I cannot see it. But I can feel it.]

"Really? How is it? Do I die too?"

I let out a self-deprecating laugh after saying that. Odin stared into me for a moment before answering:

[Death is rather an easy salvation. In contrast, your future is...]

Beyond his single eye, a pitch-black darkness surged for a moment.

[So distant that even death cannot be seen.]

In the past, hearing those words would have plunged me into serious reflection. But not now. I didn't have the time for that.

"So, are you giving it to me or not?"

Looking at me with a somewhat dazed face, Odin answered hesitantly:

[Give me thirty minutes.]

With those final words, Odin curled back up in the corner. Staring down at Odin for a moment, I stepped out of the tent. Since he needed time, it seemed better for me not to be there.

Either way, Odin was in a situation where he had to hand over his Fable by betting his entire nebula. It wouldn't be an easy decision for him either. Well, if he didn't give it to me, I planned to take it by force anyway.

[You careless fool! Are you really planning to give that guy time?]

Turning around, I saw Meihouwang poking his head out from the tent.

"Yes."

[What if he suddenly runs away?]

"You'll just catch him and bring him right back, so what's there to worry about?"

At my words, Meihouwang's eyes flickered lightly. Twitching his lips with a dissatisfied expression, he added:

[I'll keep watch.]

"Thank you."

However, just as he was about to enter the tent, Meihouwang paused and asked:

[By the way, you fool, do you actually know what kind of Fable 'Ragnarok' is?]

"Of course."

[Then...]

Meihouwang scrutinized my face for a moment as if gauging my intentions, then let out a sigh.

[Never mind. Forget it. Come in quickly.]

With those words, Meihouwang disappeared back into the tent. Staring at the space where he disappeared for a moment, I raised my head and looked at the sky. Whether viewed from inside or outside the tent, the sky was still pitch-black. Far away, a star that looked like Uriel twinkled a faint light toward me.

「Snowfield Kim Dokja will descend here tomorrow.」

Now, the unavoidable final fight will truly begin. Yet strangely, I felt neither nervous nor scared. Perhaps it was because I, too, had endured a time that was far from easy.

[The Fable, 'Successor of the Eternal Name', nods.]

Still, that didn't mean I could greet him without any preparation. So, to prepare for the final stage, the first person I had to find was—

['Midday Tryst' has received a new message.]

The protagonist of this story, whose whereabouts were currently unknown.

1052 Episode 65. The Last Banquet (3)

I immediately activated 'Midday Tryst'. As expected, a message from Yoo Joonghyuk had arrived.

- ■■■ ■■ entrust ■■·····.

What was this? This message was also in a filtered state. To be precise, rather than filtered, the record was corrupted.

[The probability density of the current area is too high!]

[Currently, the use of 'Midday Tryst' in this area is not smooth.]

It wasn't even outside the scenario, but inside a main scenario area, yet this was the first time 'Midday Tryst' hadn't functioned smoothly. The record was so scrambled that it was hard to tell properly, but it roughly seemed to say to leave this to him and get out.

I immediately sent a message using 'Midday Tryst'.

- Are you alive?

Seeing the message transmit, he definitely seemed to be within the same scenario area.

「"Yoo Joonghyuk went to rescue the other companions. There are people held captive in the Disaster Camp's fortress."」

Cha Yerin had left those words for me as she went to treat her injuries after coming out of the ossuary.

「"I told you just in case you were curious."」

Not just any Yoo Joonghyuk, but the 41st regression Yoo Joonghyuk charging into the heart of enemy territory to rescue companions. Before coming into this regression line, I wouldn't have believed it. But right now, my thoughts were different. The 41st regression Yoo Joonghyuk wasn't a monster who had lost his humanity as I once knew. At least, that was true based on what I had confirmed so far.

"Dokja-ssi."

Turning around, Jung Heewon was poking her head out from the tent.

"Why did you come out when you should be resting?"

"Because it's no fun inside."

Indeed, inside were only constellations right now. The other Kings didn't seem like they would match well with Jung Heewon's personality either.

Jung Heewon shook a bottle of alcohol and asked:

"Want another drink?"

"Sounds great."

The alcohol was what Poseidon had provided. Looking at it, it seemed to be a type of sacred liquor like 'Soma' or 'Amrita'. Jung Heewon took a few gulps straight from the bottle first before handing it to me. Feeling somewhat like I had returned to my early twenties, I grabbed the liquor bottle and drank.

"It's delicious."

"Right?"

Was it just my imagination? Sharing the drink, Jung Heewon looked to be in a slightly better mood. Come to think of it, I had never spent a time like this with Jung Heewon.

Thus, we took turns sipping the alcohol one gulp at a time. Watching the drink diminish, the thought suddenly crossed my mind that this moment was precious. Stories flow, and every moment passes. Ultimately, the world moves toward its conclusion. Had I read all these moments sufficiently before the conclusion arrived?

"Shall we run away?"

As if reading my state of mind, Jung Heewon asked in a voice touched slightly by intoxication.

"Just leave the scenario behind like this, and go far, far away together."

"The scenario would cause everything to end in destruction before long anyway."

"Would destruction really come so easily? And who knows? If we hide well, maybe we can survive. At least we might be able to live out the remaining lifespan we have left. Humans don't live that long originally anyway."

I let out a dry laugh. Both she who spoke and I who listened knew. We couldn't run away. Because both she and I were people who couldn't do such a thing.

"Heewon-ssi, is there something you want to do?"

"Something I want to do."

Only upon reaching the final scenario, on the tiny handful of blank space we had barely reached, were we asking each other about what we 'wanted to do'.

"What I want to do is something that can't come true."

"How do you know without trying?"

"Should I just try it?"

Staring at me blankly, Jung Heewon giggled softly and added:

"What I wish for is something impossible now."

Curious about what it was, I asked several more times, but in the end, Jung Heewon wouldn't tell me what she wanted to do. I spoke in a slightly exaggerated tone:

"That's cold."

"Who's the one really being cold to people here?"

"When was I ever cold?"

"You're not really asking because you don't know, are you?"

Looking slightly angry, Jung Heewon held the liquor bottle and tipped all the remaining drink down her throat.

"Heewon-ssi."

"What."

In truth, I knew. What she was upset with me about. But I am that kind of person. And Kim Dokja was that kind of human.

"We will win in the end, and the scenario will be resolved well. I can do it well. Don't worry too much."

At my words, Jung Heewon glared at me with narrowed eyes and said:

"Aren't you thinking that you have to do it, rather than that you can do it?"

"Yes. I have to."

Tapping the empty liquor bottle as if dissatisfied with my answer, Jung Heewon said:

"You're going to use an absurd method again, aren't you?"

"There might be times when I have to."

"Even if I tell you not to, you'll put your life on the line again."

I hesitated for a moment before nodding. Because I felt I had to be honest with her.

Jung Heewon bit her lip tightly.

"Can't we really just run away? What meaning is there in protecting this world to that extent? What even is this world?"

"I am responsible for this story."

I didn't think she would be able to understand this answer. However, everyone has a job they must accomplish, and for me, that was the conclusion of this story.

[The influence of the Fable, 'Successor of the Eternal Name', grows stronger.]

That was also the reason why I was currently being called Kim Dokja.

Jung Heewon stared at me for a long while before asking:

"If you save all these worlds by going that far, who is going to save you?"

"Pardon?"

"You... who on earth is going to save you?"

For a moment, I was rendered speechless. To be precise, I didn't know what answer to give. Was it because it was a question I had never thought about even once? Jung Heewon was looking at me quietly. Why was that? At that moment, it felt as if Jung Heewon was looking into a story inside me that I couldn't even look into myself.

[This crazy old geezer—]

At that moment, a small commotion echoed from inside the command tent. We immediately exchanged glances and pushed past the tent flap.

Entering the inner area of the command tent, we saw Meihouwang pinning Odin down with both hands.

"What's happening?"

[This old geezer suddenly started burning his own Fable!]

Burning his Fable? I rushed over to Odin. As Meihouwang backed off, I confirmed the Fable fragments scattering from Odin's grip.

[The Fable fragment, 'Fur of the Wolf That Swallowed a God', is destroyed.]

[The Fable fragment, 'Claws of the Netherworld Gatekeeper', is destroyed.]

It was true. The Fable fragments Odin possessed were scattering away. Moreover, they were all related to the 'Great Disasters'.

「To summon a Great Disaster, Fables related to them are required.」

Just like when <Asgard> and the constellations used their authority to designate 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' as the 'King of Hell', granting a role to a specific entity required the corresponding 'Fable fragments'. Odin's purpose in destroying the Fable fragments was clear. He was refusing to summon a new 'Great Disaster'.

[No, I told you! If you give this old geezer time, he'll definitely pull off something reckless!]

"Didn't you say you were keeping watch?"

[How was I supposed to know he would suddenly burn his own Fable? Smoke was coming out, so I thought he was just smoking a cigarette!]

Odin laughed like a madman looking at us.

[The Great Disasters must not be summoned. If even those are called forth, this world will surely be destroyed.]

Having been beaten up by Meihouwang, Odin had bruises scattered across his face. Grabbing the chin of the old Odin who was avoiding my gaze, I asked:

"You saw something, didn't you? With that 'single eye'."

[.....]

"What did you see? Tell me."

Odin kept his mouth firmly shut and didn't answer. For a certain reason, he had judged that I shouldn't awaken the 'Great Disasters'. Perhaps through his single eye, he had glimpsed something even more terrible than the Great Destruction.

However, I didn't panic. Because I had already anticipated that Odin might act like this.

It was then that a message floated into the air.

[The aura of a 'Great Disaster' has been sensed somewhere!]

[A new 'Great Disaster' will soon awaken!]

Panicking, Odin looked around the empty air and muttering:

[This—this makes no sense—]

What had happened was clear. Someone other than Odin had just awakened a 'Great Disaster' in this scenario.

"It seems even your single eye can't see everything."

With his single eye wide open, Odin glared at me and muttered:

[This cannot be. A 'Great Disaster' can only be called by one possessing the Giant Story of 'Ragnarok'...]

It was just as Odin said. However, there were hardly any stars left in <Asgard> right now, and Odin, having just burned his Fable, could no longer designate a 'Great Disaster' either.

"No, there is one more. An entity capable of doing that."

Realizing who I was talking about, Odin's shoulders twitched violently.

[If he has committed such an act, we have zero chance of victory.]

"You were even calculating our chances of victory amidst all this?"

Offering a faint smile, I looked up at the night sky. The surviving stars could be seen moving busily beyond the heavens. The Mass-Production Maker spoke:

[If it isn't a Great Disaster awakened by Odin, then it must indeed be that fellow's doing.]

I nodded. Excluding Odin, an absolute entity possessing the Fable of 'Ragnarok'. Surely he too was looking down at us from somewhere in this sky.

"It's actually better this way. Since we have to defeat another 'Great Disaster' anyway to create a stage advantageous to our side."

[Hmm, it doesn't look quite that positive to me, but if you say so, then so be it.]

"Can you tell us the location where the new 'Great Disaster' appeared?"

[The full scan of the 'Main Battlefield' region isn't quite finished yet.]

[If it's that, I can tell you.]

Unexpectedly, Poseidon, who had kept silent all along, stepped forward to help us. Appearing to still be in communication with Hermes's terminal, he closed his eyes briefly before opening his mouth:

[It seems to have appeared at the fortress in the east of the battlefield, a place called the 'Altar of Storms'. It's quite a distance from here.]

Altar of Storms. I repeated the name of the fortress in my mind. To increase even a sliver of victory for our side, we had to defeat the newly appeared Great Disaster before facing 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

[A new 'Great Disaster' begins to descend upon the battlefield!]

[A new 'Hidden Scenario' has started!]

A hidden scenario. It triggered as expected.

[The content of the 'Main Scenario' will soon be updated!]

Having checked the system messages, someone pushed past the command tent flap and entered just in time.

"What on earth happened?"

It was Cha Yerin. Having rushed over while receiving treatment, bandages were wrapped around various parts of her body. Calming her down, I conveyed the situation.

"A Great Disaster has been resurrected."

"Pardon?"

Despite the shocking news, Cha Yerin didn't seem greatly shaken. Perhaps she was too exhausted to be flustered any longer.

"Where is it? Did you find out the location?"

"It's a place called the Altar of Storms."

Hearing my words, Cha Yerin's eyes trembled violently.

"We have to go there right now."

I realized what Cha Yerin was about to say.

"Is that the place Yoo Joonghyuk went to?"

Cha Yerin nodded. I let out a groan. Of all places, a new 'Great Disaster' had resurrected at the very fortress Yoo Joonghyuk had gone to. But fortunately, we had an immediate means of transportation.

"Mass-Production Maker. Can we warp to that fortress using the flagship?"

[That can only be used once the scan of that region is complete.]

"How long will it take?"

[It will require about thirty minutes.]

Thirty minutes. Could Yoo Joonghyuk hold out for thirty minutes against a Great Disaster? He had become surprisingly strong, but if the opponent was a 'Great Disaster', there was no certainty.

"Heewon-ssi."

"Yes."

"May I ask you for one favor?"

"You want me to hit you hard enough to knock you out, right?"

Looking at her clenching her fist so naturally, I asked:

"...Have I asked you for such a favor before?"

Looking flustered, Jung Heewon tilted her head and said:

"I don't remember well, but I felt like I had to... Aren't you trying to use an ability that can only be used when unconscious?"

"That's correct, but..."

Come to think of it, Jung Heewon had made contact with the 1,864th regression Jung Heewon in the Third's worldline. Perhaps the memories of both existences had become tangled back then.

"I'll handle knocking myself out. What I need you to do is—"

The ability I was going to use this time wasn't [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint]. Because that required Yoo Joonghyuk to be thinking of this side for it to trigger.

"If anything happens, hit me hard enough not to kill me to wake me up."

[You are currently in a state where you can use the authority of the 'Recorder of Fear'.]

[Manifesting the authority of the 'Recorder of Fear'!]

Looking at Jung Heewon who nodded with a tightly clenched fist, I closed my eyes with a somewhat anxious heart.

[Entering the 'Archives of Records' of the corresponding region.]

The Archives of Records. Originally a place one could only enter at set times, but once status rose as high as mine, such restrictions vanished. If it was the 'Archives of Records' where all records could be checked in real time, I would be able to observe Yoo Joonghyuk's current state as well.

Within the blurring surroundings, the sentences flowing out of the 'Archives of Records' began to invade my mind.

「There are two conditions for a 'Great Disaster' to descend. One is the existence of Fable fragments related to the 'Great Disaster'. The second is a powerful entity capable of bearing the role of the 'Great Disaster'.」

Come to think of it, the reason 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' could take on the role of a 'Great Disaster' was because <Asgard> used their Fable fragments to designate him as the 'King of Hell'. A question suddenly arose. Currently, in the Disaster Camp, excluding Snowfield Kim Dokja, who else could take on the role of a 'Great Disaster'? Interstellar Devourers or Outer Gods? Or perhaps constellations who had entered under his command, or the actual owners of that role like Odin or Thor.

[The Great Disaster, 'Wolf That Swallowed a God', is awakening!]

Likely, the disaster descending this time was 'Fenrir', the Wolf That Swallowed a God. Since Fenrir was a star standing on the side of 'disaster' even in actual mythology, it wouldn't be strange if he descended as this Great Disaster.

Following that, the Fable sentences possessed by the descending Great Disaster surfaced. And the moment I confirmed the first sentence of that Fable, I felt as if I had fallen into a deep abyss.

「"By the way, Captain, when is your birthday?"」

That was not Fenrir's Fable. Someone else had taken on the role of the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' in place of Fenrir.

「"Ah, found it. Here it is. August 3rd."」

I knew who the owner of this Fable was. It felt like the gears in my mind were grinding to a halt.

「That's right. He was born in summer.」

If by any chance the 'Great Disaster' descending in place of Fenrir over there was that entity—

「In a summer when a hellishly hot and terrible storm blew.」

Yoo Joonghyuk will die today.

1053 Episode 66. The Wolf That Swallowed a God (1)

---

The first time Yoo Joonghyuk witnessed someone's death was when he was fifteen years old.

「"You can't do it? Even like this? Even like this?"」

Under relentless, indiscriminate kicks, blood streamed continuously from the foreigner's nose and mouth.

「"Right, if you can't do it, you croak. There are plenty of people to replace you anyway."」

The one who said that was President Park, who ran an illegal gaming workshop. Yoo Joonghyuk couldn't quite remember why President Park had beaten the man. What Yoo Joonghyuk remembered was the scene after President Park left after kicking him for a long time.

「"...Joonghyuk."」

At the foreigner's call, Yoo Joonghyuk walked closer as if possessed. The man reached out and grabbed Yoo Joonghyuk's ankle.

Yoo Joonghyuk didn't know what the foreigner's name was. He only knew that he was someone working alongside him, scraping by on the game money earned in the illegal workshop. In the first place, there were many such people in President Park's workshop.

「"....."」

The foreigner kept muttering something. Since he knew basic Korean, if he had something to say to Yoo Joonghyuk, he would have used Korean. But the man only repeated words in his native language.

「"....."」

Yoo Joonghyuk listened silently to the man's words. Even though he couldn't understand what it meant, he listened. For an hour, for two hours, he listened. Until the man's breathing finally ceased and President Park's voice calling for Yoo Joonghyuk could be heard from inside the workshop. Young Yoo Joonghyuk remained there, listening to his words. In the end, he never learned what the man had said while clutching his ankle.

The man's corpse was carried away somewhere the next day. Looking at the empty seat where the man used to work, Yoo Joonghyuk recalled the words he had muttered.

Yoo Joonghyuk suddenly wondered if his words had been a prayer toward God.

「"God? Where on earth is there a God?"」

Hearing Yoo Joonghyuk's words, President Park laughed at him mockingly:

「"Luck and talent are everything in this world. Joonghyuk, as it happens, you have both."」

Just as President Park said, Yoo Joonghyuk was lucky. The unlucky part was that President Park was also lucky. Realizing Yoo Joonghyuk's talent, President Park leaped into the esports industry with the money earned through the workshop. Thus, President Park became Coach Park.

「"Joonghyuk, this is our ground now. Hyung trusts only you. You know, right?"」

Just as Coach Park said, Yoo Joonghyuk possessed talent. Strangely, he quickly saw the rules of every game he touched. Yoo Joonghyuk built up proficiency at an abnormally rapid pace, overwhelming other pro gamers. His talent soon converted into money.

Yoo Joonghyuk won matches and earned money. He became able to feed his younger sister. They acquired a small house to live in together. While cooking meals for Yu Mia when she threw food tantrums, Yoo Joonghyuk held an expectation that perhaps God really might exist in this world.

「And then, the scenario began.」

President Park was right. There was no God in this world. Instead, blinding stars taking the place of God were there.

Yoo Joonghyuk performed scenarios. His life soon flowed into regressions. 1st regression, 2nd, 5th, 10th. Yoo Joonghyuk adapted quickly, but this game wasn't a form where one could win simply by adapting.

It felt as though he had become the foreigner beaten up by President Park. Fighting against absurd levels of violence and unreasonableness, Yoo Joonghyuk finally reached beneath the night sky of the 41st regression.

"As expected, there really is no God."

Looking up at the sky of the <Star Stream>, darker than ever before, Yoo Joonghyuk slowly composed his breathing. As he stood up, nursing his body that felt on the verge of breaking, Anna Croft spoke up as if waiting:

"What do you mean by there being no God?"

Without answering, Yoo Joonghyuk recalled the battle that had transpired until recently. Inside the ruined fortress—the inner castle of the 'Altar of Storms', the corpses of Outer Gods lay stretched out. There were as many as two corpses of Interstellar Devourers.

[You have achieved an unbelievable feat!]

[The siege of the fortress, 'Altar of Storms', has ended!]

[The corresponding fortress is now subordinated to the 'Constellation Camp'!]

[You have become the 'Commander' of the corresponding fortress!]

[Some Recorders are filled with awe at your incomprehensible combat strength.]

Gazing at the messages floating before his eyes for a moment, Yoo Joonghyuk spoke:

"What happened to the mission? Was everyone rescued?"

"Ren-ssi is moving. She says it's almost in the final stage."

"What is the condition of the rescue targets?"

"They all seem lacking in vigor, but they are said to be in good condition."

The core targets of this rescue operation were four in total. Lee Jihye, Shin Yoosung, Lee Hyunsung, and Lee Seolhwa. They had become prisoners of the enemy during the previous siege battle, and Yoo Joonghyuk had currently infiltrated to rescue them.

"What do you mean by lacking in vigor? Were they starved?"

"I'm not sure. However, it's said they looked like people whose energy had been drained by something."

Drained of energy? Thinking for a moment, Yoo Joonghyuk replied:

"I've prepared Sacred Fruit at headquarters, so have them consume it as soon as they return."

"I'll instruct them as such. By the way... you've really grown strong, Supreme King."

Anna Croft muttered in an awestruck voice, looking down at the fallen corpses of the Outer Gods.

"Infiltrating the fortress alone and wiping out the core warlords was not enough, but to even defeat the commander, an 'Interstellar Devourer'..."

On top of that, having dealt with a total of two 'Interstellar Devourers', including another summoned as reinforcements. In a sense, it was equivalent to defeating two 'Myth-grade constellations' simultaneously.

"Now, no star in that sky will be able to look down on you."

"Presumably. Since there are hardly any stars left in the sky now."

At Yoo Joonghyuk's words, Anna Croft opened her eyes wide in surprise.

"Were you someone who knew how to make such jokes?"

"I merely stated a fact."

Frowning quietly, Yoo Joonghyuk wiped clean the 'Dark Heavenly Moon Spear' stained with the Outer Gods' Fables. Watching him, Anna Croft spoke:

"This time, we might truly be able to see the world's conclusion."

"Did you see something with [Foresight]?"

"It's just my opinion."

About to mutter 'nonsense', Yoo Joonghyuk snapped his head up and looked at Anna Croft. If anyone else had said that, it would have been nonsense. But the one who spoke just now was the 'Prophet'. An Incarnation who overtrusted her [Foresight] more than anyone and never rashly asserted any future.

"I have such a premonition."

Such a Prophet was speaking her own hope—without any [Foresight]. Yoo Joonghyuk looked at Anna Croft silently. Then Anna Croft looked back at Yoo Joonghyuk as well. Neither said a word, but at that moment, both knew they were recalling the exact same name.

It was then that an explosion echoed.

"What happened?"

The fortress commander was dead, and the Outer Gods who had lost their leader had completely fled the fortress. There had been no intelligence about reinforcements coming from the Disaster side. Being quite a distance from other fortresses, there was no reason for a battle producing explosions to occur.

"Prophet."

Anna Croft's eyes were already glowing red. Her 'Great Demon's Eyes' had activated [Foresight]. But something was wrong. Her expression paled rapidly in real time, and blood-red Fables began streaming from her mouth.

"Anna Croft."

Yoo Joonghyuk supported the staggering Anna Croft. Anna Croft spoke in a trembling voice:

"How could this..."

At that moment, Yoo Joonghyuk recalled a memory from a very long time ago.

"Yoo Joonghyuk."

Once upon a time, the foreigner who had grabbed his ankle. Just like that man back then, the Prophet was clutching his wrist. Looking at Anna Croft's slowly moving lips, Yoo

Joonghyuk thought about the foreigner who had prayed to God.

Even now, having endured through 41 regressions, Yoo Joonghyuk believed that man's words that day had been a 'prayer to God'. But only now, looking at Anna Croft's expression, did Yoo Joonghyuk realize. The words that foreigner had spoken to him that day were not a prayer. What he really wanted to say to him was—

"Run away."

"What?"

"You must not fight that thing. No matter if it's you, you cannot stand against a thing like that."

Like a person helplessly thrown before an utterly irresistible violence, Anna Croft continued as if screaming:

"Not you, nor any 'star' in this universe can face..."

She vomited red Fable just like that and passed out. It was strange. Even if she was a mere Incarnation, Anna Croft was a powerful Incarnation. Even if she had seen a future where Myth-grade constellations descended in swarms, she shouldn't have suffered enough shock to pass out merely from using [Foresight].

[The 'Great Disaster' prepares to descend!]

Only after checking the system message floating before his eyes did Yoo Joonghyuk realize what was about to happen. Though he didn't know the reason, a Great Disaster was attempting to descend here right now. Perhaps Anna Croft had seen the true identity of the 'Great Disaster' descending here in advance.

Thinking for a moment, Yoo Joonghyuk composed his breathing, calmly evaluated his full strength, and reached a conclusion.

「I will dispose of the 'Great Disaster' right here and now.」

Though the Prophet's warning weighed on his mind, if a 'Great Disaster' was truly descending, this was an unprecedented opportunity. Because hunting the Great Disaster was mandatory for a normal clear of this scenario.

「Slaying at least three 'Great Disasters' will secure victory in the final battlefield.」

The condition to fully reproduce the stage of 'Ragnarok'. Moving Anna Croft to a safe place, Yoo Joonghyuk used [Way of the Wind] to float above the fortress. He then declared to every being inside the fortress:

[Anyone who can hear my voice, get the hell out of this fortress right now.]

As his booming lion's roar echoed, busy movements were felt nearby. The 'Nameless Ones' hiding to preserve their lives. And Asuka Ren, who had rescued their companions, was seen carrying the collapsed Anna Croft away with the operational team.

- Yoo Joonghyuk, as for reinforcements...

To Asuka Ren's telepathic message echoing in his mind, Yoo Joonghyuk replied with a shake of his head:

"Unnecessary. It's an obstruction."

And in the next moment, the center of the pitch-black night sky began to swirl. Something was crossing over from beyond the vortex.

[The Great Disaster, 'Wolf That Swallowed a God', begins descending!]

The Wolf That Swallowed a God. Yoo Joonghyuk knew the owner of that modifier.

"Fenrir."

One of the Great Disasters of 'Ragnarok'. Considering the scenario difficulty up to now, the status of the descending 'Fenrir' would likely exceed that of a Myth-grade constellation. Yet Yoo Joonghyuk did not back down. He thought that level was actually worth fighting.

'An opportunity to verify the results of my training.'

Ever since finishing his training in the time fault, Yoo Joonghyuk had not met a proper opponent. Though he had dealt with two Interstellar Devourers, that had not required his full power either.

It was then that fine hairs stood up on the back of his hand. Though he composed his breathing several times, strangely, the goosebumps that had risen refused to settle down again.

「Overwhelmed merely by the presence. And by an entity still 'beyond'.」

It was unbelievable. Only once before had his body felt this degree of intimidation. The man who had taught him stabbing. Only he possessed such a presence.

'It's not Fenrir.'

He could tell instinctively. Though descending under the guise of the Fable of the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God', what lay beyond that vortex was not Fenrir. His instincts were warning him. The entity descending right now was incomparably more dangerous than the likes of 'Fenrir'.

'Strike before full descent.'

Drawing the 'Dark Heavenly Moon Spear', Yoo Joonghyuk aimed at the sky. Immediately, the 5th stage of Transcendence activated.

Soul-Slaying Divine Spear (滅魂神槍). Absolute Technique (絕技). The technique that had once shattered Poseidon's waves. Soul-Slaying Meteor Halberd (滅魂流星戟). A bundle of qi resembling a meteor shower soared into the firmament from his spear point.

A terrifying spear strike feared even by Myth-grade constellations. No matter how powerful the entity descending, it was an attack bound to suffer damage right now.

As the meteor shower drawing a brilliant trajectory was finally sucked into the vortex—

「That's right. He was born in summer.」

A somewhat familiar Fable echoed.

「In a summer when a hellishly hot and terrible storm blew.」

Beyond that Fable, someone was standing.

Kugugugugu!

Along with a brilliant explosion, the surging bundles of qi were seen scattering away.
Yoo Joonghyuk looked up at the sky with eyes filled with disbelief.

「Standing there was a man wearing the exact same black coat as him.」

However, what surprised Yoo Joonghyuk was neither that the man wore the exact same coat as him, nor that he possessed the exact same face as him.

「Perhaps 'God' really did exist in the world once.」

The extreme reachable by being born as a single existence. Martial power having reached the absolute end, unable to advance even a single step further. The wolf that had swallowed up all the stars in that sky was standing right there.

「Until that man killed 'God'.」

1054 Episode 66. The Wolf That Swallowed a God (2)

It felt as if his spine was creaking. He had met many threatening enemies so far, but this was the first time he felt this way. Was that why? Yoo Joonghyuk instinctively activated a skill.

[Exclusive skill, 'Sage's Eyes Lv.?' is activated!]

In the next moment, along with fierce sparks, a portion of the descending existence's information rose before his eyes. Perhaps because the information was not yet unfiltered, he could not see the entire content, but at least one thing was clearly visible.

[Exclusive Attribute: Regressor <1,864th round>]

Yoo Joonghyuk doubted his eyes. With blank eyes, as if such a number could not possibly exist in the world, Yoo Joonghyuk read the number.

1,864.

It felt as if his head was going crazy.

"...Which round did you say?"

Without even realizing that he had blurted out a foolish soliloquy like Kim Namwoon, Yoo Joonghyuk read and reread that number. Throughout his repeated regressions, Yoo Joonghyuk had wondered just how many regressions he would have to undergo to see the conclusion. However, he had never once imagined such a number.

「"Right, since it's a scenario that can't be cleared even after regressing over a thousand times."」

The words he had heard in passing revived in his mind all at once. The words exchanged casually by Kang Ilhun, Ye Hyunwoo, and Kyung Sein.

「"It's only the 41st round, but can we really go all the way to the end?"」

「"It is indeed a pity. If that Yoo Joonghyuk were here, the scenario would have been much easier."」

'That Yoo Joonghyuk.' As his pounding heart calmed down, a memory resurfaced. He already knew the existence before his eyes.

"I think I know who you are."

Since arriving at 'Ragnarok', Yoo Joonghyuk had heard rumors about certain Outer Gods. The story of the Outer Gods who called themselves <Kim Dokja's Company>.

「"They are Outer Gods who came from another worldline."」

Lee Seyeon had introduced them that way.

「"Among them is you. He—"」

A monster who single-handedly repelled the Myth-grade Constellations of the night sky, and drove that 'Snow White' to the brink of death.

「"An existence who has already seen the end of the scenario."」

Yoo Joonghyuk gripped his spear tighter and stared at the disaster before his eyes.

Rumbleeee.

Wind, rain, and storms raged in the sky. In the midst of the storm, the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' could be seen slowly opening its eyes.

The moment his eyes met its, Yoo Joonghyuk experienced an illusion as if complete darkness was swallowing him. The terrible tragedies that took place in the distant universe were churning blackly inside the disaster's eyes.

Could he win? No, was a 'fight' even possible with such a thing in the first place?

「"Did you ask for my teachings with only that level of resolve?"」

Even amidst the rising doubts, Yoo Joonghyuk did not back down. Instead, the absurd words left by his new teacher filled his ears.

「"Any enemy will die if you stab them a hundred times. If a hundred times doesn't work, a thousand times; if a thousand times doesn't work, ten thousand times. If you stab them, they will surely die."」

Yoo Joonghyuk repeated the stabbing hundreds of millions of times inside the time fault. Throughout the repeated stabs, countless realizations rose and faded in his mind. He had experienced leaping to the transcendent state with overwhelming time density several times in previous rounds. However, this time, the level was different. In the terrifyingly consistent repetition, Yoo Joonghyuk spent more time in the 'time fault' than all his past rounds combined.

Thus, Yoo Joonghyuk caught a glimpse of a state he had never reached before. Although it was not enough to tear space-time apart with a stab like his teacher—

「At least enough to pierce this night sky.」

Soul-Slaying Divine Spear. Secret Technique. A formidable status began to swirl from Yoo Joonghyuk's spear. A dazzling golden spear force. The light rays wrapped around the tip of the spear were just like the starlight in that night sky.

Star Carving.

Yoo Joonghyuk's triceps, which he had pulled back with all his might, contracted, and a massive explosion occurred. With a feeling as if space-time was slowing down, Yoo Joonghyuk's figure vanished on the spot. If a chronicler had seen that scene, they would have described it as follows:

「A star twinkled in a very distant place.」

A body that had reached its limit. Becoming a single star with the explosive power of his quadriceps and gluteus maximus, Yoo Joonghyuk shot like a flash of light toward the great disaster in the sky.

「The moment of witnessing the starlight on the spear point would be the last sight his opponent would ever see.」

The technique Yoo Joonghyuk created by shaping his past realizations. Finally, at the moment when the starlight spearhead pierced the firmament and carved a star in the night sky—

Crack.

The spearhead was caught in a hand flowing with pitch-black status. The starlight scattered in the night sky like a faint light sucked into a black hole.

It was impossible. His teacher had said that there were no more than five people in the <Star Stream> capable of catching 'Star Carving'. Yet the guy before his eyes—

「Caught 'Star Carving' with just one hand.」

Yoo Joonghyuk felt the hand holding the spear tremble.

"Indeed, if it is the 'me' of the 1,864th round, it should at least be at that level."

As if responding to those words, the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' let out a roar. Subsequently, an unusual change occurred throughout his body.

「The story of the great disaster was wrapping around him.」

As the muscles of the great disaster swelled, the already large man's physique transformed into an even more imposing figure. His hair grew long, and his coat changed into the shape of a fur coat. Covered in long, flowing black hair, the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' slowly opened its mouth.

The great disaster that looked down on the world. The first word he uttered was— someone's name.

Frowning, Yoo Joonghyuk tried with all his might to pull the spearhead caught in the guy's right hand. But the spear would not budge. An absurd grip strength. Rather, the more he tried to pull the spear, the stronger the force holding his spear became.

"Why are you looking for that guy?"

Yoo Joonghyuk knew the owner of that name. There were several owners of that name, but to Yoo Joonghyuk, there was only one existence that name pointed to.

「For just a brief moment, a face with narrow eyes flashed through Yoo Joonghyuk's mind.」

An unknown sense of threat. In that instant, Yoo Joonghyuk felt like he knew who the 'disaster' before him was looking for. Perhaps because of that, Yoo Joonghyuk muttered words he wouldn't normally say.

"The guy you are looking for is not in this world."

In the next moment, Yoo Joonghyuk felt his field of vision spin. A terrible nausea, followed by a pain in his jaw. When he came to his senses, he was stuck upside down in the ground.

「He didn't see the strike at all.」

He barely raised his status to pull himself out of the ground, but the disaster was not visible in the night sky. With a chilling sensation on the back of his neck, Yoo Joonghyuk reflexively ducked.

Kwaaaaa!

A crushing sound, as if space itself was breaking, echoed from the fist the guy swung. Did his words provoke the disaster? The disaster's two eyes, briefly visible, were half-rolled back.

[The energy of the great disaster, 'Wolf That Swallowed a God', becomes even stronger!]

The guy's fist struck once again at a speed invisible to the eye.

"Keo-heok."

With the sensation of a hole being pierced in his stomach, Yoo Joonghyuk flew straight through the air. The disaster pursued Yoo Joonghyuk, who was flying at a phenomenal speed. The immense status imbued in the disaster's fist slammed down toward him once more.

「He will die.」

He thought he had strengthened his body to the limit. But a monster far worse was right in front of him. Now that it had come to this, he also had to exert his full strength.

「"You, you've engraved a special imprint on your body."」

Yoo Joonghyuk recalled his teacher's words.

「"If you rely on such expedients, you will end up dead."」

He knew. But there was no other way right now. If he couldn't overwhelm the guy even with a body that had reached its limit—"You are not the only one who can transform into such a form." He had no choice but to face him, even if it meant releasing the limit.

「Restraint of Truth」

'Restraint of Truth.' A 'story imprint' that manifests power at the cost of sealing a portion of memories from past rounds.

「"Joonghyuk-ssi, don't forget. Even if you are left alone in this world, never forget that you did your best, and that there were surely people who cheered you on."」

As the first story imprint was released at the cost of memories, a fierce vitality surged from Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body.

「Restraint of Emotions」

'Restraint of Emotions.' An imprint paid for at the cost of one's emotions. A 'story imprint' where the more it is used, the more reason is lost, and one's identity as a human is gradually eroded.

['Beastification' is activated!]

Tzztzztzz.

The muscles of his entire body expanded, swelling like those of a beast. The body that he thought had reached his limit was evolving once again. Soon, his appearance became similar to the 'great disaster' before him.

Perhaps having felt interested in Yoo Joonghyuk's transformation, the gaze of the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' changed for the first time.

「Two beasts, looking identical like twins, faced each other.」

A tension that froze even their breathing. In the moment a breath of white steam rose, Yoo Joonghyuk moved first. As Yoo Joonghyuk instantly narrowed the distance and swung his fist, the great disaster also swung a fist in response. Two fists containing the essence of [Breaking the Sky Force Punch] clashed in midair, generating a gale.

Rumbleeee!

Like two beasts fighting for territory, the two Yoo Joonghyuks fought, entangled with each other. They swung their forepaws at each other and growled as if to bite each other's throats.

In an instant, hundreds of exchanges of attack and defense followed. They struck each other's faces and beat each other's abdomens. Every single blow was a strike capable of instantly killing a Historical-grade Constellation. However, neither of them backed down.

Even while stories, instead of blood, bubbled up, Yoo Joonghyuk swung his fists again and again. The joy of being able to test his strength to the limit. The pleasure of clashing with someone with all his might.

「It is fun.」

Did that guy feel the same way right now? Yoo Joonghyuk suddenly looked into the disaster's eyes. However, what was reflected in the disaster's pupils was not his face. It was simply a gaze that searched for something beyond with empty pupils.

'Was I the only one fighting with everything I had?'

Yoo Joonghyuk somehow felt his pride hurt. Perhaps that was why he used that 'story'.

[Giant Story, 'Forest of Stars and Humans', begins its storytelling.]

A story obtained by defeating 'Apollo', who had reached the Myth-grade, in the 'New Murim District' together with Kim Dokja. Imbuing his fist with the blessing of that story, Yoo Joonghyuk punched the abdomen of the great disaster with all his might. Along with a roaring sound like a drum bursting, there was a clear feeling of a solid hit.

The great disaster, which staggered for a moment, caught the wrist of Yoo Joonghyuk who had struck his abdomen. And—

【Kim Dok ja】

The expression of the great disaster that verified the story changed strangely. Soon, a storm of stories began to rage from his entire body. At the point where the two people's statuses clashed, sparks of Probability burst out.

[A probability aftermath is rushing in!]

[The 'Disconnected Film Theory' is activated!]

Yoo Joonghyuk hurriedly tried to pull out his captured hand. However, the disaster did not let go of his hand. As if it had no intention of letting go of the story he showed.

「Stories and stories began to entangle.」

With an encroaching sense of crisis, Yoo Joonghyuk raised his status to protect himself. However, a tidal wave of stories stronger than that was rushing in before his eyes. It was the story possessed by the 'great disaster'.

[Great Disaster, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint' begins its storytelling.]

"Keuk—"

Yoo Joonghyuk felt his breath get stuck in his throat. A truly massive story, unbelievable to be the history of a single person, was creating an immense story pressure.

「The 1,864th round that he had experienced was before his eyes.」

In the storm of stories, Yoo Joonghyuk clearly saw the story experienced by the great disaster before him.

「"It is an odd name."」

That story began by meeting one person,

「"Kim Dokja! No!"」

and led to the death of one person,

「"Kim Dokja!"」

and to reclaim that person, it has continued until now. At the end of the long journey solely to reclaim his companion, the being who eventually became a great disaster was right before his eyes.

Tzztzztzztzz!

Yoo Joonghyuk suddenly felt his presence weakening. The reason was clear.

[The 'Disconnected Film Theory' is activated!]

As if refusing to acknowledge that two Yoo Joonghyuks existed in this world, or like a larger star sucking in the starlight of a smaller star—the 'great disaster' before him was absorbing his story.

Belatedly, Anna Croft's words came to his mind.

「"They said they looked like people whose energy had been stolen by somewhere."」

In front of the distant history of the 1,864th round, the time of the 41st round he had lived was a mere instant. The larger history was eating the smaller history.

Yoo Joonghyuk muttered as if resisting it.

"I am—"

However, his muttering was quickly crushed in the storm of stories blowing before him.

「I am Yoo Joonghyuk.」

Only then could he see the disaster's face properly. And Yoo Joonghyuk realized.

「Yoo Joonghyuk was right before him.」

The real Yoo Joonghyuk was there. The Yoo Joonghyuk who had crossed a grand history spanning 1,864 rounds to come here. The Yoo Joonghyuk who descended upon this world to save someone, to fulfill all of his duties, was right there.

「In front of him, no Yoo Joonghyuk could dare to falsely call himself 'Yoo Joonghyuk'.」

Yoo Joonghyuk's soul was fading. As if his history was surrendering to the history lived by the existence before him, it was collapsing.

"I am..."

Yoo Joonghyuk blankly parted his lips. If he disappeared here, if he gave up everything and closed his eyes, wouldn't it be easier that way? If he returned to that existence and became 'one Yoo Joonghyuk'...

At that moment, like a buoy floating on a raging tidal wave, a single sentence surfaced.

「...is.」

Yoo Joonghyuk instinctively looked at that sentence.

「...You are Yoo Joonghyuk.」

The moment he read that sentence, Yoo Joonghyuk regained his senses along with the feeling of someone hitting the back of his head hard.

「No matter what anyone says, you are the only Yoo Joonghyuk of this worldline.」

There was a person who remembered him there. An existence who recognized his history of living only 41 rounds.

[The Recorder of Fear, 'One Who Rewrites Eternity', is looking at you.]

1055 Episode 66. The Wolf That Swallowed a God (3)

---

Fortunately, Yoo Joonghyuk was not dead yet. I let out a sigh of relief as I checked Yoo Joonghyuk's appearance reflected on the screen of the 'Record Archive'.

Tzztzztzztzz!

Yoo Joonghyuk was looking up at the sky in the midst of the raging sparks. He probably saw the sentence I wrote.

"Why are you standing there blankly, Yoo Joonghyuk! Pull yourself together!"

The situation was clear.

「Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company> descended as the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God'.」

The worst-case scenario I could imagine became reality. I thought, biting my lower lip.

「Why did Yoo Joonghyuk choose to become a 'disaster'?」

Yoo Joonghyuk was someone who knew the danger of a 'disaster' better than anyone. He, who had faced the Outer Gods of the 999th round and the 'Secretive Plotter' in the main story, and who knew better than anyone what a 'disaster' meant to another worldline, would never choose to become a 'disaster' of another worldline. Especially if it was the great disaster of 'Ragnarok' that finalized destruction.

「Is this also the plan of 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'?」

No matter how much I thought, no other reason came to mind. However, I still couldn't understand. He was none other than the Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company>. Even if it was 'Snowfield Kim Dokja', would he have the power to turn that Yoo Joonghyuk into a 'disaster' without any persuasion?

Tzztzztzztzz!

Even to me beyond the screen, the pressure of the aftermath occurring there was palpable. Though I couldn't know for sure, Yoo Joonghyuk at the center of the storm must feel like his entire body is being disassembled by now.

"Yoo Joonghyuk!"

Despite my call, Yoo Joonghyuk did not answer. I kept watching Yoo Joonghyuk and quickly scanned the before and after records causing the aftermath.

[Currently, the 'Disconnected Film Theory' is active!]

Since the two Yoo Joonghyuks clashed head-on, it was self-evident that the 'Disconnected Film Theory' would activate. The problem was the very form in which the 'Disconnected Film Theory' activated.

「Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st round was being disassembled.」

When the story fusion of two existences—that is, 'film pasting'—occurs, the 'larger history' inevitably eats the 'smaller history'. Furthermore, even more so in a situation where they are clearly hostile to each other like now.

"Yoo Joonghyuk!"

Whether he heard my shout, the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st round raised his head again.

「You are Yoo Joonghyuk.」

Relying on the insignificant record I wrote, the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st round stood there.

Yoo Joonghyuk, the Supreme King of the <Star Stream>. The man who looks down on the world, destroys stars, and proves himself solely by the life he has lived. It was the first time I saw that Yoo Joonghyuk make such an expression.

"Pull yourself together! Damn it!"

I didn't want to see such a face. A lack of confidence in Yoo Joonghyuk of all people. I didn't come all the way here to see such a sight.

"Yoo Joonghyuk!"

Yoo Joonghyuk's figure swayed precariously. Amidst the raging history of the main story, the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st round was poised to sink like a paper boat in a rough sea.

Clenching my fists tight, I opened my mouth.

"You, too."

I know, too. If the opponent is the Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company>—if the history we have to fight is that 『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint』, then naturally, our probability of winning is almost zero.

"You didn't just live for nothing either."

But even so, it didn't mean that the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st round had endured a history that deserved to be ignored.

"Have you forgotten everything! What events happened in this round! What kind of time we went through to get here!"

Even if everyone else forgets, I know. What kind of person he is. What he lost, and what he protected to survive up to this point.

[Giant Story, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint' continues its storytelling.]

The history of the main story crashed before Yoo Joonghyuk's eyes like a panorama. A story that could not be resisted alone. A part of that history flickered, evoking a familiar sentence like an illusion.

「"Why are you here?"」

The figures of Yoo Joonghyuk and Kim Dokja, invited to the Constellations' Banquet, were there.

「"Probably for a similar reason as you."」

The Banquet of Constellations. Of all things, it was an episode I liked. Raising his hand in the screen, Kim Dokja said:

「"If you want to sell stories to me and Yoo Joonghyuk, trade with our 'Nebula'."」

The story I loved approached as if to swallow the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st round. As the story came right before him, Yoo Joonghyuk unconsciously reached out his hand. Even though the back of his hand was cut to pieces, Yoo Joonghyuk did not take his eyes off the story. It was not simply because he was fascinated by the story.

Perhaps right now, Yoo Joonghyuk—

"Do you remember?"

He must be thinking of the same story as me.

"We were also invited to a banquet once. Though no one welcomed us."

Along with my words, stories rose from Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body.

[Story, 'Recycling Center' begins its storytelling!]

The Recycling Center. There, we attended the 'Zodiac Ball' and went to a strange school together. In the end, the scenario ended up in a mess due to the Constellations' interference.

"I haven't forgotten that you came to save me when I was exiled from the scenario."

More than eight years have passed since then, but I still remember the Yoo Joonghyuk of that day. Carrying me, who was kicked out to the non-scenario region, and running through the void for three days straight to escape the pursuit of distant constellations. I remembered us on that day, running desperately and finally meeting the 'Monarch Slayer', clearer than anyone else.

Whether he heard my shout, I saw a bit of light return to Yoo Joonghyuk's pupils. But meanwhile, the story over there also changed.

「"I'm thinking of going to the 'First Murim'."」

The figures of Yoo Joonghyuk and Kim Dokja walking in Murim were there.

「"Your eyes are burning hot. Do you perhaps adore me?"」

The encounter with the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, Yoo Joonghyuk getting hit on his butt. Following that, the Great Destruction Scenario that visited Murim.

「[I am the god of this Murim, the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint.]」

Just by looking at it for a brief moment, it felt like being sucked into the story. This was the power of a completed story. The power of a story that stole the eyes of the stars and even absorbed the soul of the viewer.

"We also went to Murim."

Perhaps our story was not as glamorous as the main story.

"There, we also ate 'Murim Dumplings'. We even got dragged to the Namgung Clan while criticizing franchise dumplings. Is that all? We also met the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint."

The meeting with the 41st round's Breaking the Sky Sword Saint was not as pleasant as the main story.

「"You are an interesting child. Just who is the 'Breaking the Sky Sword Saint' you know?"」

Because immediately after meeting her, the Outer Gods' invasion began, and the 'Fear Realm' opened right after.

"Thinking about it, we almost died there, too."

We almost died there, too. Chased by Outer Gods, chased by the fears of the Fear Realm.

"But."

Surviving through all the ups and downs every time, we came all the way here.

"I had fun."

Experiencing those ups and downs together, we became each other's companions.

"To be able to live through this story together, I was really happy."

To Yoo Joonghyuk who had lived through dozens of rounds, this brief bond might be nothing. Perhaps there wasn't even an emotion worthy of being called a bond. Nevertheless—

"It is filled with nothing but memories of almost dying."

When I suddenly raised my head, Yoo Joonghyuk was looking at me. Light had returned to his previously blurry eyes.

"Yoo Joonghyuk!"

Fortunately, Yoo Joonghyuk's complexion seemed to be returning little by little. Although he was still at the center of the raging aftermath, unlike before, his status was enduring the aftermath. His story, firmer than before, began to protect his incarnation body.

"Have we entered the 'Main Battlefield'?"

"Yes. We are a bit late."

"It would have been useless even if you came early."

I understood what Yoo Joonghyuk meant. He meant that against such a 'great disaster', it would have been the same whether he was alone or together. However, Yoo Joonghyuk, who said those words, did not look particularly discouraged. If anything, his eyes looked strangely relieved.

"Why do you have an expression as if everything is over?"

Tzztzztzz, once again the aftermath raged inside the screen. Was it because of the influence of the 'Disconnected Film Theory'? The 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' was frowning, clutching his head where stories spilled out. A fierce story was raging at his base, making it impossible to approach, but it was clear that he was in pain.

Watching him, Yoo Joonghyuk opened his mouth.

"You must know. That the 'me' who lives the 1,864th round exists somewhere in this universe."

I inhaled sharply. Come to think of it, the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st round was meeting the Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company> for the first time right now.

"I heard that the 'me' of that round saw the end of the scenario."

I hesitated for a moment, then nodded.

"That's right."

Hearing my words, Yoo Joonghyuk silently stared at the great disaster, the Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company>, the self of another world. Only then did I feel like I knew what Yoo Joonghyuk was thinking.

"Are you relieved?"

Perhaps Yoo Joonghyuk was finally rejoicing at the future he had reached. Penetrating through those distant years—was he finally facing himself, who had ultimately reached the conclusion of all stories?

"I thought that it would surely exist somewhere in another universe."

I knew what emotion he would feel. On one hand, I wanted to share the deep emotion he was feeling.

"But that is not you."

But that is not you.

"It is you, but it is not the you of this place."

Perhaps I was afraid that Yoo Joonghyuk might think otherwise.

"We can also see the conclusion. I know that you lived harder than any other Yoo Joonghyuk."

I might have been afraid that he would give up the conclusion of this round just because the conclusion he wanted existed somewhere in a distant universe.

"I know."

"Of course. That's not me."

As if my concern was laughable, Yoo Joonghyuk, who found me accurately in the empty sky, wore a somewhat self-deprecating smile.

"Because if it were me, there is no way I would ever regress 1,864 times."

At those words, I also ended up chuckling.

"Indeed. If it were you—"

It was at that moment that I felt a sense of incongruity. It was a strange feeling. A sensation as if the back of my neck was creaking again. I felt like I was missing something.

I saw the aftermath of Probability slowly diminishing inside the screen. As the sparks faded, the Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company>, who had transformed into the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God', became clearer.

"Yoo Joonghyuk."

The moment I met his empty eyes, I realized what I had missed.

"How did you know that he is from the '1,864th round'?"

"I saw it with [Sage's Eyes]."

I expected as much. But.

"That shouldn't be possible."

That was impossible. Certainly, that 'Yoo Joonghyuk' was the Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company> that I knew, and the round he lived was the 3rd round as well as the 1,864th round. But that was only the story of the 'round' he lived. If that Yoo Joonghyuk was truly the Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company>, there was no way such information would appear in [Sage's Eyes]. It shouldn't have appeared. Because—

「"Now, I am no longer a regressor."」

Because he was no longer a 'regressor'.

「With the disappearance of the single reader, his story came to an end. And so did his final regression.」

At the conclusion of the main story, he finished his final regression and lost the [Regression] attribute he possessed.

"No, he is without a doubt the 'regressor' of the 1,864th round."

Yoo Joonghyuk was right. Because now, it was visible to my eyes as well.

[Exclusive Attribute: Regressor <1,864th round>]

My heart felt like it was freezing cold. There was no way that Yoo Joonghyuk would have become a 'regressor' again. If so, there was only one answer.

「Just what on earth did you do to Yoo Joonghyuk?」

Snowfield Kim Dokja.

1056 Episode 66. The Wolf That Swallowed a God (4)

Poseidon stared at the fierce battle unfolding before his eyes. The vision visible through the terminal left by the Master of Sky Walk—'Hermes'. Two wolves with scattering beast fur were stretching their fists toward each other.

Boom—!

Every time their fists crossed, it felt like the universe was undergoing an earthquake.

Rumbleeee!

A battle of attack and defense that made even Myth-grade Constellations hold their breath. Poseidon unconsciously gripped the trident stuck in the floor. His story was wavering. The heart of the ancient sea was beating with a tremor.

「In this world, such a story still remains.」

A landscape that only those who can risk all their stories solely to reach ■■ can paint. If it were in the past, he also would have jumped into that landscape. Engaging in a life-and-death struggle by risking all his stories, he would have entrusted his incarnation body to the blood-splattered festival of stories.

But now, he was old. The spear that draws the boundary of the sea. That was the modifier calling him today. Thus, all he could do now was childishly draw a line of his own and vent his anger at the enemies crossing that boundary.

As if deeply resentful of that fact, Poseidon picked up the cup containing soma and moistened his throat. Although he drank a holy fluid sweeter than any alcohol in the world, the aftertaste lingering in his mouth was bitter.

[Odin, it must be visible to your single eye as well.]

His only consolation was that he was not the only 'Myth-grade Constellation' watching that landscape. Not only he and Odin, but there were still Constellations of the Round Table surviving in this world. Stars hiding like parasites somewhere in this battlefield, waiting for the Great Destruction to arrive.

[Will you just keep watching like this?]

At Poseidon's question, Odin slowly raised his head. His single eye flashed with a sharper blue light than usual.

[What do you want from me, Spear that Draws the Boundary of the Sea.]

[This stage is your 'Giant Story'.]

Ragnarok. The world's Great Destruction. The final battlefield of <Asgard>.

[And right there now is the great disaster you must fight against.]

Even at Poseidon's words, which were strangely mocking, Odin made no reply. Perhaps displeased with such an attitude, Poseidon opened his mouth again.

[Surely you haven't forgotten your own story. The 'great disaster' that incarnation is fighting right now is originally the 'adversary' you should face.]

Indeed, even now, faint sparks were flying from Odin's incarnation body. Just by staring at the landscape, Odin was being drawn to that story.

Odin stared blankly at the landscape, then slowly blinked his eye and retorted.

[I thought you had no interest in what lies beyond the boundary you drew.]

[Didn't you want to remain as a great record? Isn't that why you taught your children the same worldview?]

Poseidon knew well what the heads of each 'Great Nebula' had been doing. The repeating and reproducing of 'Giant Stories' solely to maintain the power of Myth-grade Constellations. For that purpose, highest-tier gods like Odin resurrected Constellations to be used as scapegoats time and time again. And they let those stars die on the 'fake stage' they created.

「Only to make sure their stories are not forgotten in this universe.」

Odin glared at Poseidon for a moment, then spoke.

[In this world, my children are no longer here.]

[That must be so. Since your children are all dead.]

[Just what on earth do you want to say?]

[Are you afraid of death?]

Death. Watching Odin's expression stiffen, Poseidon continued to ask.

[Does the great 'All-Father' abandon the holy war before his eyes for only that reason?]

[.....]

[If this stage were 'Gigantomachia', I would have jumped in without hesitation.]

Putting down his cup before he knew it, Poseidon stood up from his seat, grasping his trident. Then, he spoke to Odin, who was still sitting down, as if shouting at him.

[If you are just going to keep watching like that, hand over your story to me. I would rather directly—]

It was then that a roaring sound was heard. The Monkey King, who was quietly sitting cross-legged and meditating; the Black Flame Dragon, who was closing his eyes as if bored; and the Mass Production Maker, who was listening to the argument between the two Myth-grade Constellations with interest, all looked at the same empty space at once. The same system message popped up before their eyes.

[A new great disaster is preparing to descend!]

The 'Mass Production Maker' opened his mouth.

[It seems another great disaster has appeared.]

When dawn comes, 'King of Hell' Snow White will visit this place. In addition, the great disaster 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' appeared just a moment ago. But was that not enough? This time, a 'third great disaster' had announced its appearance.

The Mass Production Maker looked back at their fallen commander. The blonde man embraced in Jung Heewon's arms had a grim expression, perhaps because he was fighting a hard battle.

[Someone must buy time until he returns.]

It was impossible to know what kind of existence the new great disaster was. Only one thing was certain.

「The star that leaves this place to face that great disaster will surely disappear from this sky.」

As if that fact was strangely exciting, the Mass Production Maker sneered and looked around at the stars in the situation room.

[Now, it's time to decide who among us will die first.]

*

"It's coming."

Along with Yoo Joonghyuk's warning, an explosion erupted before his eyes. In the midst of the raging story of the 1,864th round, the great disaster's fist flew in.

Boom!

Yoo Joonghyuk was pushed back with a massive impact. The story of the 1,864th round overflowed into the air as fragments. Looking at that story, I was certain.

「There was no mistake. Snowfield Kim Dokja did something to Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company>.」

Yoo Joonghyuk said, releasing his arms that barely blocked the great disaster's fist.

"It seems the guy has come to his senses."

"No, he's still not in his right mind."

"How do you know that?"

"Would Yoo Joonghyuk in his right mind be muttering only 'Kim Dokja' like that?"

"....."

"It seems his story has been manipulated."

I calmly examined the great disaster's story once again. No matter how much it was Snowfield Kim Dokja, he could not turn the Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company>, who had already lost his stigma, back into a 'regressor'. It was natural. Just because Snowfield Kim Dokja could use the authority of the 'Oldest Dream' did not mean he had truly become the 'Oldest Dream'.

Probably, that Yoo Joonghyuk is currently in a state where he believes himself to be the 'regressor of the 1,864th round' due to the authority of Snowfield Kim Dokja.

「"I am Yoo Joonghyuk, who was a regressor."」

I didn't know why Snowfield Kim Dokja did such a thing, but for us right now, it was a rather troublesome situation.

Hearing my words, Yoo Joonghyuk nodded and said.

"I don't quite understand what you mean, but if he's out of his mind, it'll be easier to deal with him instead."

"Well, perhaps that 'Yoo Joonghyuk'—"

The Yoo Joonghyuk of the '1,864th round'. I clearly remembered when his attribute was first marked as the '1,864th round' in the main story.

「The decisive battle with the 'Secretive Plotter'.」

He had lived as the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 3rd round throughout the main story, only to awaken in the battle with the 'Secretive Plotter' and obtain the memories of the '1,864th round'. Although in that battle, the 'Secretive Plotter' held back to some extent, and there was the effect of 'Stage Transformation'—he was the only Yoo Joonghyuk who had ever defeated the 'Secretive Plotter', who could be called the strongest in all this universe.

"He is probably almost the strongest Yoo Joonghyuk in the entire universe."

And right now, the ones opposing him are merely the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st round and a half-baked Kim Dokja.

"If I defeat him, I will become the strongest now."

"Are you confident?"

"If I keep stabbing, we'll get through it somehow."

"That sounds like something Mr. Jaehwan would say."

"If a hundred stabs don't work, a thousand; if a thousand stabs don't work, ten thousand."

"Has even your brain become identical to Mr. Jaehwan's now?"

Of course, if it were the 'Monarch Slayer' Jaehwan, he might deal with the Yoo Joonghyuk before him in that manner. But that was only possible for a crazy Mr. Jaehwan.

"First, we must buy some time."

I looked at the great disaster pressing his temples in the midst of the aftermath. No matter what kind of Yoo Joonghyuk he was, his role on this stage right now was the 'great disaster'.

[The influence of the great disaster, 'Wolf That Swallowed a God', becomes even stronger!]

The important thing is to use the effect of this stage. And for the effect of the stage to be maximized, a prerequisite was needed.

「The condition will be met soon.」

Call it the intuition of a writer, or a reader. The event that will satisfy the condition will occur soon. Because that is the 'Ragnarok' I know. The important thing is for Yoo Joonghyuk and me to survive until that condition is satisfied.

"From now on, it's up to you."

I spoke while picking up and quickly processing records discarded throughout the battlefield, like scooping soil from the ground.

"Only one blow is needed. Can you land a clean hit on the disaster?"

The opponent was indeed the worst adversary we could ever meet. Nevertheless, Yoo Joonghyuk nodded calmly.

"It is possible."

Yoo Joonghyuk gripped his Dark Heavenly Moon Spear. A powerful story was condensing on his spearhead. Subsequently, the moment the great disaster noticed our existence and revealed his status toward this side—

"Then let's begin."

Yoo Joonghyuk ran. And my record accompanied his running steps. With every step he took, our story was loaded.

Suddenly, the moment I first met the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st round came to mind.

「"Why are you here?"」

At that time, Yoo Joonghyuk had called me 'Cheon Inho'.

Rumbleeee!

As if instinctively sensing danger, stories streamed incessantly from the disaster's entire body. The 'Black Heavenly Demon Sword'. The weapon that accompanied him through the scenarios of the 1,864th round roared violently in his grip. A technique known to both me and Yoo Joonghyuk was unfolding from his sword tip.

Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship. Absolute Technique. Breaking the Sky Meteor Strike.

Sword qi that tore the sky flew toward Yoo Joonghyuk with a fearsome momentum. Yoo Joonghyuk avoided the baptism of sword qi by a hair's breadth. Our history flowed from his shoulder, which the sword qi grazed.

「"When that bastard Cheon Inho returns, deliver this to him."」

It was not a grand history. It was not the history of <Kim Dokja's Company> loved by countless Kim Dokjas, nor the story of 'Ways of Survival'. Nevertheless—

「"Are you truly Cheon Inho?"」

This was our story.

["How does it look to you?"]

It was purely the story of the 41st round.

「"I ask that Cheon Inho. Just who is 'Kim Dokja'?"」

The story of a world that was not written, and thus could not be read.

「"Could it be that you are 'Kim Dokja'?"」

We started from a snowfield where there was nothing and finally came all the way here.

「"■■■. That is his real name."」

[Your 'Super Giant Story' reacts to the character 'Yoo Joonghyuk'!]

As if to destroy that history, the great disaster's sword moved.

Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship (破天劍道). Secret Absolute Technique (秘傳奧義). Meteor Slash (流星斬).

The secret technique that killed Indra, the Lokapala of <Vedas>, unfolded from the great disaster's sword tip. Against the great disaster's sword strike that brought down the stars of the sky, Yoo Joonghyuk also thrust his spear.

Soul-Slaying Divine Spear (滅魂神槍). Secret Absolute Technique (秘傳奧義). Fall of Ten Thousand Stars (萬星墜落).

Two techniques created to bring down the stars of the night sky clashed. The moment the two stories collided with a dazzling flash of light, I saw the face of the great disaster.

Why was it, at that moment, the great disaster looking at us—

「had a gaze that seemed to miss something ancient.」

Perhaps because of that. I suddenly felt that I should not use this method on the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God'. But it was already too late.

The moment the flash of light flickered in the air, the left arm of the 41st round's Yoo Joonghyuk, severed by the Meteor Slash, flew through the air.

"Yoo Joonghyuk!"

But Yoo Joonghyuk did not back down. As if he had known from the start that his arm would be severed, he charged forward, penetrating the trajectory of the Meteor Slash to the end. Finally, the Dark Heavenly Moon Spear—pierced the disaster's flank.

「Thus, the record contained in the spearhead was realized.」

As if a predetermined poison was spreading, the record I crafted was infiltrating the great disaster's story.

「This is a poison effective only against 'regressors'.」

The great disaster, pierced by the spearhead, staggered and clutched his head. I was also hearing the voice echoing inside his head.

「"Yoo Joonghyuk. Did you protect everything you wanted to protect?"」

As the keyword of 'Regression Depression' activated, Yoo Joonghyuk's expression began to crumble. His story, carrying a distant history, began to weigh him down like a broken dam.

「A drowning human sinks deeper below the water's surface due to the weight of just a single feather.」

The knees of that noble great disaster slowly began to buckle.

「The only thing that can bring the Supreme King to his knees is the history he has lived.」

He stared blankly at the sky for a moment, then reached out with empty eyes. And in the next moment, stories exploded from his entire body.

"Yoo Joonghyuk!"

I shouted that name without even knowing which one I was calling. In the next moment, the screen shattered, and something pierced through the space-time of the Record Archive and popped out.

「It was a hand.」

The hand of a regressor who had repeated scenarios for a very long time. I struggled, caught in that strong hand. The character who had always been described in the story was speaking to me.

【Kim Dok ja】

The owner of the hand pulled me as I was. Along with a feeling as if the world was being erased, I was sucked straight to the outside of the 'Record Archive'.

Tzztzztzztzz!

I could not tell what was happening. Along with a feeling as if the surroundings were turned upside down, I gasped and opened my eyes. As if everything had been an illusion, the hand that had choked my neck was nowhere to be found.

Instead, what was visible before my eyes was a room so white it made my eyes smart. As I slowly raised my head—

「The Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,864th round was there.」

Yoo Joonghyuk was looking toward this side with his characteristic cold gaze, but he was not looking at me. In that instant, I realized something and turned back. There stood my brother, whom I knew well.

「"You've woken up, Yoo Joonghyuk."」

Snowfield Kim Dokja.

「"You bastard."」

Yoo Joonghyuk glared at Snowfield Kim Dokja with burning eyes, then looked back at the empty 'coffin' lying behind him. Only then did I realize. This was the memory of the 1,864th round's Yoo Joonghyuk.

「"Why did you release me?"」

This was the first proper conversation between the 1,864th round's Yoo Joonghyuk and Snowfield Kim Dokja.

1057 Episode 66. The Wolf That Swallowed a God (5)

Yoo Joonghyuk's voice toward Snowfield Kim Dokja carried a strange hostility. I examined the coffin where Yoo Joonghyuk had been lying until just now. Chills ran down my spine. This bastard Kim Dokja—don't tell me he was keeping Yoo Joonghyuk locked up here all this time.

「"He isn't someone who can be locked up just because you want to lock him up, is he?"」

As if reacting to my thoughts, Snowfield Kim Dokja spoke.

「"Would you like to have a cup of tea for a moment?"」

Snowfield Kim Dokja abruptly turned his back and walked toward the table in the center of the room. Looking at his defenelessly exposed back, Yoo Joonghyuk slowly raised his story. Did he feel that murderous intent? Snowfield Kim Dokja, who was walking ahead, stopped dead in his tracks and spoke.

「"I know you can cut me down right now. You have the power to do so."」

As if daring him to cut him down, he continued to speak without looking back.

「"But before that, aren't you also curious? Why I went out of my way to release you, and..."」

Yoo Joonghyuk approached Snowfield Kim Dokja step by step. Hearing the sound of his footsteps, Snowfield Kim Dokja added:

「"Why I drew you all in at the end of this worldline."」

The sound of Yoo Joonghyuk's footsteps stopped. Standing right behind Snowfield Kim Dokja, he was silent for a moment. Very slowly, Yoo Joonghyuk's murderous intent began to dissipate. Staring at Snowfield Kim Dokja with burning eyes, he soon passed by him and stepped into the empty room.

「He is right.」

Perhaps because I was inside Yoo Joonghyuk's memory, I could hear Yoo Joonghyuk's inner thoughts in real time.

「I can cut him down at any time.」

In the desolate white room, there were indeed a white tea table and two chairs. Yoo Joonghyuk stared down at the tea table.

「A tea table I have seen somewhere before.」

I also felt a strange sense of déjà vu as I looked down at the table. Snowfield Kim Dokja spoke.

「"It seems you recognize it. It's a product of the 73rd Demon Realm."」

The '73rd Demon Realm'. I heard that in this worldline, Snowfield Kim Dokja had already visited that Demon Realm. He must have liberated the Demon Realm in his own way there, and obtained a story fitting for it.

Snowfield Kim Dokja passed by the blankly standing Yoo Joonghyuk and sat in a chair.

「"It brings back old memories. Doesn't it?"」

「"Old memories?"」

As Kim Dokja lightly flicked his finger, two teacups appeared on the tea table. They were teacups I had also seen before.

「"Back then, we also drank tea like this in the Demon Realm. Have you forgotten?"」

I immediately realized what story Snowfield Kim Dokja was trying to tell. Once, when Kim Dokja fell into the 73rd Demon Realm, Yoo Joonghyuk had visited the 73rd Demon Realm to save him.

「Yoo Joonghyuk also remembered it.」

Immediately after defeating the Dukes of the Demon Realm and finishing the battle with Asmodeus, Yoo Joonghyuk visited Kim Dokja's hospital room. That day, Yoo Joonghyuk spoke a lot, which was unlike him. It was about the well-being of their companions after Kim Dokja left. He spoke about Lee Hyunsung, about Jung Heewon and Lee Jihye, about Yoo Sangah and Han Sooyoung, and about Gong Pildu, Shin Yoosung, and Lee Gilyoung.

「"Everyone is talking about you. You said so."」

Yoo Joonghyuk was silent for a moment. Very old memories were flowing through his mind.

「"Do they still talk about me a lot?"」

Yoo Joonghyuk did not answer. Then Snowfield Kim Dokja spoke once again.

「"Even back then, you said 'let's go back to Earth'. Just like not too long ago."」

Watching Snowfield Kim Dokja lightly sip the tea, I felt an indescribable sadness.

「"Are you still planning to take me 'home'?"」

Yoo Joonghyuk fell silent for a moment, then asked back instead of answering:

「"Where are our companions?"」

Yoo Joonghyuk slowly looked around. Faintly but surely, he could feel their companions' stories in his sensory perception.

「Our companions are definitely somewhere here.」

Yoo Joonghyuk clearly remembered the fierce battle with 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' not long ago. That they lost to Snowfield Kim Dokja was by no means because they were pushed back in status.

「They lost because of a certain story Snowfield Kim Dokja showed.」

The moment they saw that story, everyone in <Kim Dokja's Company> trembled, despaired, and at the same time, resigned.

「"They are in a safe place."」

「"Bring them here."」

「"That is difficult."」

Yoo Joonghyuk raised his status without a word. The tea in the cup trembled violently.

「"At least, the Kim Dokja I know doesn't do things like this."」

「"Things like this?"」

「"That guy—"」

「"A person who can use the party members as tools to achieve the purpose he wants."」

In a voice imbued with a subtle twist, Snowfield Kim Dokja continued.

「"A person who doesn't care about the wounds his companions will receive just to complete the conclusion of the story he wants to see. The 'Kim Dokja' I know is that kind of person."」

Yoo Joonghyuk could not reply. Perhaps it was because Snowfield Kim Dokja's words were true to some extent. Kim Dokja's gaze is lonely. Even when he is with his companions, he ultimately sees the conclusion of this world alone. Yoo Joonghyuk had also felt that fact all along. In fact, in that sense, the 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' before his eyes resembled the Kim Dokja he knew.

「"You have no right to say such words."」

Yoo Joonghyuk cut him off with a cold expression, as if he had no intention of listening further. Then Kim Dokja asked:

「"Why do I have no right?"」

「"You—"」

「"So you also know. That the 'Kim Dokja' you were looking for is not me."」

「"I will count to three. Bring our companions within that time."」

Before he knew it, the 'Black Heavenly Demon Sword' was held in Yoo Joonghyuk's right hand. Staring at the story dwelling in that 'Black Heavenly Demon Sword', Snowfield Kim Dokja spoke.

「"I will also count to three."」

「"What?"」

「"If you don't sit in that chair within three counts, you will lose your companions forever."」

There was no way the Yoo Joonghyuk I knew would yield to such a threat. Nevertheless, Snowfield Kim Dokja counted.

"Three."

Yoo Joonghyuk stared silently at that Kim Dokja.

"Two."

Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body was becoming even more fierce.

"One."

An explosive status surged from Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body as if he would tear the Kim Dokja before him to pieces right away. And in the next moment, all of Yoo Joonghyuk's murderous intent scattered like magic. Watching Yoo Joonghyuk collapse into the chair, Snowfield Kim Dokja laughed.

「"Are you afraid of losing your companions?"」

「"I know you won't do such a thing."」

「"How do you know that? I am—"」

「"Because you are also 'Kim Dokja'."」

Snowfield Kim Dokja was silent for a moment. Picking up the teacup with his long fingers, he drank down the remaining tea. Then, frowning as if displeased, he retorted:

「"Did you think I would be touched if you said that?"」

「"What is it that you want?"」

Yoo Joonghyuk asked straightforwardly, as if he would drag time no longer. However, I could tell that his question was a sort of smokescreen. Because even while they conversed, Yoo Joonghyuk's sensory perception was expanding in real time. He was searching for his companions by tracing back the story of Snowfield Kim Dokja that dominated this entire area.

Snowfield Kim Dokja spoke.

「"You already know what I want. Because what I want resembles what you once wanted."」

「"I remember the story you showed."」

The reason Yoo Joonghyuk and the party members had no choice but to be captured helplessly. Recalling the story he saw that day, Yoo Joonghyuk asked:

「"Just what on earth was that?"」

What Yoo Joonghyuk witnessed that day was the essence of this world. The 'certain conclusion' shaped by the 41st round—no, perhaps by all the universes of this <Star Stream>.

「"That is—"」

「"Shh. That story is not written yet."」

As if someone might listen, Snowfield Kim Dokja said, bringing a finger to his lips.

「"That story is what the writer who wrote the first sentence of this story left for me."」

The writer who wrote the first sentence of the story. Yoo Joonghyuk also knew who that was.

「"If you saw that story, you would know that in the end, it is not bad for you either. Because when that story is completed, the 'single Kim Dokja' you search for so much will also return."」

「"The single Kim Dokja."」

Yoo Joonghyuk muttered, as if speaking the name of an old ghost.

「"We also know that is impossible—"」

「"Do not lie."」

'Snowfield Kim Dokja' shot back sharply.

「"If you really thought that was impossible, you wouldn't have come here."」

Yoo Joonghyuk did not answer his anger. Satisfied with that silence, Snowfield Kim Dokja spoke.

「"What I want is simple. You drinking the tea placed before you. That is all I want."」

Yoo Joonghyuk looked down at his teacup shimmering on the tea table.

「"Drink that tea, and save me just as you saved Kim Dokja in the Demon Realm."」

It was at that moment that the presence of the party members was felt by Yoo Joonghyuk's sensory perception. Surprisingly, their companions had already been released just like him. And with a somewhat dazed appearance, they were waiting for something in a room that looked identical to this space.

Yoo Joonghyuk asked, gritting his teeth:

「"Just what on earth did you do to our companions?"」

「"I only fed them tea."」

「"What does that—"」

「"None of them drank that tea by force. And now you are the last."」

Along with his words, stories began to cry inside the teacup. A very old wolf's roar heard from somewhere. Yoo Joonghyuk realized what was contained in the tea. The moment he sprang up from his seat, Snowfield Kim Dokja spoke.

「"Swallow it, Yoo Joonghyuk."」

Like a modifier commanding its incarnation, 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' was speaking. Along with a tzztzztzz sound, a certain binding force began to control Yoo Joonghyuk's body.

「"Become the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' for me—"」

As if possessed by something, Yoo Joonghyuk's right hand moved toward the teacup.

「"And destroy this worldline."」

At the moment his hand finally grasped the teacup, Yoo Joonghyuk opened his mouth.

「"I."」

Yoo Joonghyuk's burning eyes stared at 'Snowfield Kim Dokja'.

「"Will not drink the tea."」

A voice as firm as the day he first refused 'regression'. But as if mocking such a regressor's will, Snowfield Kim Dokja spoke.

「"If you don't drink that tea, you will never reclaim 'Kim Dokja'."」

Along with a tzztzztzz sound, Yoo Joonghyuk's right hand began to tremble once again.

「"The memories of his old companions were calling him."」

What was contained in the teacup was not just the story of the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God'.

「Inside that teacup was the 'Kim Dokja' he remembered.」

Why did Kim Dokja have to choose to become the 'Oldest Dream'? Why didn't Kim Dokja give them a choice until the very end? Why did Kim Dokja have to start all these stories once again even though he knew the consequences the scenario would bring?

「"I—"」

Yoo Joonghyuk only then realized the reason why the party members had no choice but to drink this tea. All the history they had accumulated soon became a [Fate], binding them.

「Ultimately, all stories are already written, and at the same time, are being written.」

Yoo Joonghyuk muttered the name of the writer who wrote their records.

「"Han Sooyoung."」

As if his body refused his control, his right hand moved.

「"Just why."」

That was the end. At the moment the tea was sucked into Yoo Joonghyuk's mouth as if swirling, the light in Yoo Joonghyuk's eyes went out.

I even knew that I could not change this memory, but I reached out my hand toward Yoo Joonghyuk. Of course, my hand did not reach him. And Snowfield Kim Dokja simply looked on at all those moments with silent eyes. And he spoke:

"There's no need to feel so sorry. It's already a written story. There is nothing you can do in this memory."

I started, turning to look at Snowfield Kim Dokja.

「Snowfield Kim Dokja is here.」

The 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' in the memory was looking at me. Only then did I also realize. The moment I entered this 'memory', Snowfield Kim Dokja had also entered here.

I spoke to Snowfield Kim Dokja.

"But the story that will unfold from now on is a story that has not been written yet."

At my words, Snowfield Kim Dokja laughed.

"Yeah."

My heart beat loudly, and Yoo Joonghyuk's memory began to scatter. In the faintly rising scenery of the battlefield, only two people knew what would happen from now on.

「There were two Yoo Joonghyuks there, and two Kim Dokjas watching them.」

1058 Episode 66. The Wolf That Swallowed a God (6)

Along with dazzling sparks, the surroundings began to undulate.

[Activation conditions for exclusive skill, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint' have been met!]

Fortunately, I was in a state where I had satisfied all the core activation conditions for [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint]. One was for me to pass out. And two was for the caster and the target of the skill to think of each other at the same time.

[Your level of understanding of the target character is extremely high!]

['1st Person Protagonist's Point of View' is activated!]

However, even though the conditions were successfully met, I could not lower my guard. Because this [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint] was just that special.

「Never in history had 'two Kim Dokjas' possessed 'two Yoo Joonghyuks' at the same time.」

An event that could not happen in the original story because the premise itself was impossible. That event was unfolding right before my eyes.

「Which 'Yoo Joonghyuk' will I possess?」

Gradually, the body's senses began to revive. They were not the senses of my own physical body.

「I felt the incarnation body of the protagonist of this vibrant world—a Transcendent—assimilating with my senses.」

The moment I felt the sleeve of my left arm was empty, I realized which Yoo Joonghyuk I had possessed.

The 41st round. I thought it would be troublesome if the possession went wrong, but thankfully it didn't.

As I blinked, I saw Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,864th round standing at a distance with a hardened expression. Leaking stories from one shoulder, he was still sweeping through the aftermath while frowning.

"Did you return?"

Along with 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk's voice, I nodded and asked.

- Yes. Did you happen to see it as well?

"Vaguely."

It seemed 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk also caught a glimpse of the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God's memories with me. Clenching and unclenching his single remaining right hand, he briefly inspected his incarnation body.

"You possessed me. Is it the same state as back then?"

- That's right. You remember.

Just once, I had used [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint] on 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk to trigger the '1st Person Protagonist's Point of View'.

「During the final battle of the 40th round inside the Realm of Fear's time fault.」

Fighting against the Constellations there, I had briefly possessed Yoo Joonghyuk's incarnation body.

[The target character is rejecting your control.]

As expected, just like back then, Yoo Joonghyuk was rejecting my control this time as well. Honestly, it didn't matter. Right now Yoo Joonghyuk's mind was clear, and I wasn't used to fighting with Yoo Joonghyuk's body anyway. The important thing was that from now on, I could manifest the stories I possessed through Yoo Joonghyuk's incarnation body.

"Is the other side in the same state?"

I answered while looking at Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,864th round, who was still engulfed in sparks a dozen steps away.

- We don't know yet.

Just as I possessed 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk, Snowfield Kim Dokja must have also tried to possess 1,864th round Yoo Joonghyuk. But would it really go as smoothly as he thought?

「'1st Person Protagonist's Point of View' requires a certain level of understanding of the target character.」

What does it truly mean for one person to understand another? Even I, who had overcome scenarios alongside 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk, wouldn't dare say I fully understood Yoo Joonghyuk—so could Snowfield Kim Dokja properly possess a sufficient level of understanding toward 1,864th round Yoo Joonghyuk?

Kugugugugu.

In the distance, 1,864th round Yoo Joonghyuk was seen slowly opening his eyes. The moment I read the pale story swirling in his eyes, both Yoo Joonghyuk and I realized at the same time.

"That is—"

From his entire body, the stories of 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' were flowing out.

「"Regression changes nothing. It took a very long time to realize that."」

To be precise, it was the story regarding Yoo Joonghyuk that 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' had read.

「"Because in this turn, there are companions who will not betray me."」

Understanding is one-way. All understanding is granted without the other person's consent.

「"I am Yoo Joonghyuk. The regressor, Yoo Joonghyuk."」

That was the product of reading and re-reading a single story over and over again.

「"Joonghyuk-ah, we can save the world. You know that, right?"」

Pung! With a popping sound, the surrounding sparks disappeared all at once. The facial muscles of 1,864th round Yoo Joonghyuk moved grotesquely, and soon his lips slowly opened.

【Ah—】

The moment I heard that voice, I knew.

「It is not Yoo Joonghyuk.」

My brother, who had completely dominated a soul through ruthless reading and finally stood in the place closest to the 'Oldest Dream', was right there.

【Finally, this moment has come.】

Snowfield Kim Dokja dwelling in the strongest incarnation body was speaking through Yoo Joonghyuk's mouth. Judging from his state, he seemed to have forcefully put Yoo Joonghyuk's soul to sleep before descending here. Probably for that reason, he fed tea to Yoo Joonghyuk and manipulated his stories.

【My brother.】

As if extremely delighted by this confrontation, Snowfield Kim Dokja smiled brightly with Yoo Joonghyuk's face. In the midst of a stomach-churning sense of incongruity, just as I was about to reply something, his expression suddenly changed.

【Wait.】

It was at that moment that thunderbolts struck out of the clear sky. Lightning plunging from somewhere struck 1,864th round Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body. Fierce electric shocks repeating several times. It strongly resembled—Breaking the Sky Sword Lightning (破天劍雷).

The sword lightning fell from the sky again and again, driving into 1,864th round Yoo Joonghyuk. I stared blankly at the sword lightning scorching Yoo Joonghyuk black. Listening to the roaring sound of the 'Black Heavenly Demon Sword' held in his hand, I realized what had happened late.

「That sword lightning was driven into himself directly by Yoo Joonghyuk himself.」

*

Snowfield Kim Dokja opened his eyes with a blank expression.

"Ah."

Was it due to the shock of electrocution? His vision did not brighten clearly. Along with a faint headache, looking around, the scenery of the familiar white room came into view at a glance. An empty chair placed forlornly opposite, and a tea table with cooled tea.

He stared blankly down at the teacup on the table, then reached into his chest like a person who suddenly remembered something. A moment later, a book was held in his hand.

『Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint.』

The story that was now completely worn out from being read over and over again was right there. He grew up reading that story continuously in the lonely snowfield.

"As expected, it doesn't work."

A hollow, bitter smile. A system message floating before his eyes was seen.

[Exclusive skill, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint' has been forcibly deactivated!]

[Your level of understanding of the target character is insufficient.]

In the end, he could not understand 1,864th round Yoo Joonghyuk. Perhaps it was because 'Yoo Joonghyuk' had now become an existence that could no longer be caught up to solely through his reading.

Even after manipulating stories, feeding the disaster's story, and even using Kim Dokja's story—

「1,864th round Yoo Joonghyuk did not allow his 'viewpoint'.」

Snowfield Kim Dokja drank the cooled tea with a bitter smile. And he muttered.

"Understood, Yoo Joonghyuk. If that is your will."

As his long fingers flipped the pages, the last page of the book opened in an instant. A blank page with nothing written on it. Soon, stories began to rise above the page. On top of that blank page, the final battle of Supreme King Yoo Joonghyuk was beginning.

"However, whatever choice you make."

Snowfield Kim Dokja reached his finger out over the page and said.

"You cannot change the conclusion of this story."

*

Even after the Probability aftermath vanished, 1,864th round Yoo Joonghyuk stood motionless as if frozen.

"An opportunity."

The one who moved instead was 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk. Grasping the 'Dark Heavenly Moon Spear' with his single remaining right hand, he immediately launched a strike of the Soul Extinguishing Divine Spear. If someone saw it, they might have called it a cowardly attack. But Yoo Joonghyuk didn't think so.

41st round Yoo Joonghyuk was instinctively realizing it.

「If we don't pour out all our strength right now, there will be no chance to kill him again.」

Soul Extinguishing Divine Spear. Secret esoteric technique. The moment Yoo Joonghyuk's spear strike concentrating stories shot out like lightning—the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' who bounded forward using [Red Phoenix Shunpo] grabbed the tip of the Dark Heavenly Moon Spear.

Kugugugugu!

The stories of the two Yoo Joonghyuks collided at the spear tip, causing a thunderous roar. Clearly, the Probability aftermath was no longer raging. The momentum of 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' was also not felt from the disaster's incarnation body. That made it clear.

「Snowfield Kim Dokja failed to activate 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint'.」

The one right before our eyes right now was the pure 1,864th round Yoo Joonghyuk himself. If so, the situation was not bad for us.

"What—"

Clearly, it shouldn't have been bad. Frowning while letting out a groan, 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk raised his status. But no matter how much he raised his status, it was difficult to withstand the story pressure that 1,864th round Yoo Joonghyuk continuously spewed out before his eyes.

Looking at the confrontation between those two existences, I recalled a conversation from long ago.

「Who is the strongest Yoo Joonghyuk?」

I don't remember exactly when it was. Probably in the early scenarios. Cha Sungwoo, Cha Yerin, Yehyeonwoo, and the other readers—back when we didn't fully realize what kind of tragedy we had entered. The readers once engaged in a conversation on such a topic as an icebreaker.

「"As expected, the strongest is the 'Secretive Plotter'."」

Perhaps those were Cha Sungwoo's words.

「"What are you talking about? The strongest is the 1,864th round. That side won in the end."」

Then Yehyeonwoo said,

「"Could the 999th round unexpectedly be strong as well?"」

And Kyung Sein raised a question,

「"According to my daughter, in terms of sheer talent alone, the 0th round is the most outstanding."」

Uncle Dansu also added a word. The one who ended that debate was Cha Yerin, who had been listening to their conversation in silence. As Cha Yerin, who rarely opened her mouth, began to state her opinion, the surrounding attention focused on her.

「"The strongest Yoo Joonghyuk is..."」

Slowly opening his eyes, the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' was looking at me.

[Great disaster, 'Wolf That Swallowed a God', reveals its status!]

Without anyone's help, purely with his own specs alone, he was surpassing the status of 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk and me using [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint].

It was an impossible thing. I had gathered nearly half of the 'Kim Dokja fragments', and 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk had also become strong enough to kill a Myth-grade Constellation. Even if it was 1,864th round Yoo Joonghyuk, how could he be more than our combined status—

"Kim Dokja."

For the first time, tension was felt in the voice of the 41st round, who had been confident all along.

"You said that guy saw the end of the scenario in the 1,864th round."

- Yes.

The moment I answered that question, I recalled Cha Yerin's answer regarding the 'strongest Yoo Joonghyuk'.

「"'Yoo Joonghyuk who restarted the regression that had stopped'."」

I felt as if someone pressed the switch of the world with a click sound.

"If so, why—"

I understood the doubt possessed by 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk. Because I too was seeing the exact same scenery through his eyes.

Yoo Joonghyuk's regression turn had changed.

1059 Episode 66. The Wolf That Swallowed a God (7)

---

Why was the notation '1,865th round' written in the attribute window of Yoo Joonghyuk, who saw the end of the scenario in the 1,864th round? Unable to bring myself to answer Yoo Joonghyuk's question, I read that number with a bewildered heart.

「Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,865th round.」

I remembered the appearance of that Yoo Joonghyuk.

「"Do you think that if you run once more, you will be able to see it clearly?"」

The man who, even after witnessing the conclusion of such a terrible scenario, walked into tragedy once again.

"Because he is the only Yoo Joonghyuk in this universe who has seen the end of the scenario 'twice'."

[Constellations hiding all over the battlefield reveal their starlight!]

The stars that had been hiding in the battlefield until now revealed themselves in the sky. It was inevitable. Any Constellation who saw the Yoo Joonghyuk before their eyes right now would have no choice but to shine their starlight upon him.

[Outer Gods across the scenario feel a solemn thrill at the descent of that existence!]

The disasters following him were also paying homage to him from all over.

[Some 'Gods of Other Worlds' wish to offer their stories and take refuge in him!]

It was not just the great disasters of Ragnarok.

【O o o o o o o】

The 'Gods of Other Worlds' who remembered him from participating in the Great War of Saints and Demons and Journey to the West were roaring simultaneously.

【The existence closest to the Secretive Plotter than anyone else】

The colors of the sky changed several times, and a massive storm of Probability aftermath swept the area.

「All these universes were expressing awe to him.」

Gods from all over the universe looked into Yoo Joonghyuk and paid respect to his tragedy. He had the right to be so.

"He saw the end twice?"

At Yoo Joonghyuk's question, I nodded. Two conclusions. I could write that sentence, but I did not know exactly what that sentence meant. However, just as Kim Dokja did, I simply transcribed the life he had lived and came all the way here.

"Yes."

Without that Yoo Joonghyuk, without the stories of the 1,865th round that he showed, I wouldn't have reached the final scenario of the 41st round.

"Why did he do such a thing?"

"Because he had to save someone."

In the end, he reached the conclusion of a world once again. Solely with the single heart to save just one person. And now he is here.

[The great disaster, 'Wolf That Swallowed a God', reveals its true status!]

Just existing in the same space gave a feeling as if the heart was stopping. An existence that saw the end twice. On top of that, Yoo Joonghyuk, who obtained the stage effect of a 'great disaster', was literally a monster.

"You must know that there is almost no chance of winning on our side."

At Yoo Joonghyuk's groaning voice, I could not hide my tension either. Until now, I thought 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' was our greatest adversary. But the moment I saw that Yoo Joonghyuk, I thought that perhaps I had misjudged. Right now, we might be facing an existence in all these worlds that should never be made an enemy.

"We don't know yet."

If so, there was only one way.

"Yoo Joonghyuk. Please let me speak through your mouth for a moment."

"What?"

Perhaps this might be the last chance.

「Right now, that Yoo Joonghyuk is in a state of rejecting the Snowfield's control.」

Judging from past memories, the Yoo Joonghyuk before our eyes right now was not in a favorable state toward Snowfield Kim Dokja. In such a situation, what if we could turn him to our side?

"No—"

"I am Yoo Joonghyuk."

[Exclusive skill, 'Incite Lv.?' is activated!]

I forcibly seized Yoo Joonghyuk's right to speak. Though I could hear Yoo Joonghyuk pouring curses at me inside my head, now was not the time to care about that.

"Yoo Joonghyuk."

When I called that name, the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' looked at me. I could see his eyes wavering faintly. I opened my mouth again.

"Do you know who I am?"

The Wolf That Swallowed a God looked at me with a strange gaze, then moved his head ever so slightly. It was a small gesture, but even that alone made my heart beat loudly. He was definitely aware of my existence.

"We don't need to fight."

The gaze of the Wolf That Swallowed a God was extremely unstable. To reassure him, I opened my mouth repeatedly.

"I know what you came here for."

The purpose of <Kim Dokja's Company>, including Yoo Joonghyuk, was clear.

「Their purpose is to reclaim their 'Kim Dokja'.」

A hundred percent Kim Dokja. To reclaim that existence, which now sounds like an illusion, they have endured all time.

"The single Kim Dokja definitely exists. I believe so."

I do not know what kind of world conclusion 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' showed to <Kim Dokja's Company>. But whatever he saw, I could not let the conclusion flow as my brother wanted.

"I will help you."

I knew that a normal request would not turn his heart. Also, if I used a clumsy [Incite], it would incur great anger instead. If so.

"I will somehow rewrite your conclusion 'again'."

[The Recorder of Fear, 'One Who Rewrites Eternity', declares!]

At my oath, the disaster's gaze looking at me changed. He looked into me with serious eyes as if reading the story dwelling inside me. And he spoke.

【Kim Dokja.】

When he called my name, it felt strange. Was it because I was facing a great existence I had never met face-to-face before? Barely enduring a faint dizziness, I listened to his words.

【This story cannot be stopped.】

I could not understand. Why was that 'Yoo Joonghyuk' of all people saying such a thing? I retorted as if resisting [Fate].

"I know why you are standing there. Probably Snowfield Kim Dokja—'Snow White' persuaded you. But—"

Right now, the presence of 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' was not felt from Yoo Joonghyuk. Even if 'Snowfield Kim Dokja' intervened, if it was Yoo Joonghyuk who could use the power of the 1,865th round, he would be able to shake off that dominance. If so, the Yoo Joonghyuk over there right now was standing there of his own pure will.

"You also know what will happen if Snowfield Kim Dokja becomes the 'single Kim Dokja', don't you?"

I spoke with earnestness.

"If he becomes the 'single Kim Dokja', this worldline will be destroyed."

【It is a history already written.】

The sentiment of Yoo Joonghyuk returning was colder than expected. Did a feeling of backlash arise at that response? Words blurted out of me involuntarily.

"Didn't you guys already twist the history that was written?"

Perhaps those words were something that should never have been said to Yoo Joonghyuk who experienced the 1,865th round.

「Y o u g u y s r u i n e d t h e e n d i n g a n d w i l l b e c o m e u n h a p p y」

A story echoing emptily in his memory. Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,865th round spoke.

【That is why everything went wrong.】

A voice like a very old sigh. At the feeling of despair dwelling in that voice, I bit my lower lip several times. Was Yoo Joonghyuk regretting it? Having undergone a 'group regression' once again with his companions. Jumping into the 1,865th round. Repeating all that history to save Kim Dokja—was he perhaps regretting it?

"You were not wrong."

I spoke, staring into his sadly distorted eyes.

"Just because you reached an unwanted conclusion doesn't mean that the entire process was wrong. You did your best. You..."

Even if Kim Dokja could not return to them, Kim Dokja must have read their story. He must have read and reread that history of struggle, the stories of the people who loved him. And he would have been happy. But the current me could not fully prove that story.

「Because I was not the 'single Kim Dokja' who could fully convey those words.」

Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,865th round looked at me with dark eyes and spoke.

【If you are right.】

As if further conversation was useless, his hand grasped the 'Black Heavenly Demon Sword'.

【You just have to prove it.】

When the great disaster's sword moved, for an instant, it felt as if the world was being crushed. If the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st round had not reclaimed control of his body in time, I would have fainted on the spot, unable to withstand the shock.

Kuddddeuk!

A strike as if bending space-time. For a moment, the curved Dark Heavenly Moon Spear barely blocked that strike.

"Now you must know. He is a guy who cannot be communicated with through conversation."

Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st round spoke, gritting his teeth. Toward us, the great disaster was walking.

「I thought conversation might not work.」

I simply wanted to pin my hopes on it. I wanted to find a way to avoid the scheduled tragedy. But as always, scenarios usually flow only in the worst direction. Perhaps because this is the story this world wants.

Rumbleeee!

The great disaster slowly raising his status. Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st round nervously called me.

"Kim Dokja—"

"It can't be helped."

"What?"

I hoped that this development alone would not come to pass. Hoping a miracle unwritten anywhere would occur, so that this 'stage' alone would not unfold.

"The time has come now."

The gloomy sky brightened radiantly. Then, along with a roaring sound, thunderbolts fell from the sky. A story of pure electric lightning with a brightness equal to, or perhaps greater than, Yoo Joonghyuk's Breaking the Sky Sword Lightning. It was a strike that even the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' had to raise his sword to defend against.

「I thought he would definitely come.」

He was an existence possessing the core story of this 'Ragnarok'. And one of the protagonists of this 'Ragnarok'.

[The Master of the Giant Nebula, <Asgard>, reveals his story!]

Even though he was a star I disliked so much, his appearance was welcome this time.

"You—"

Seeing the star that descended beside us with thunderbolts, Yoo Joonghyuk opened his eyes wide.

[Constellation, 'All-Father' has descended upon the area!]

'All-Father' Odin.

[Stand back, Einherjar. That wolf's opponent is me.]

Stories rising softly from his entire body began to cover the surrounding battlefield. Like flowers blooming enchantingly, the entire night sky transformed into a cluster blooming flowers of lightning.

[Giant Story, 'Ragnarok' begins its storytelling.]

A landscape that even I, who had already witnessed the stories of countless Myth-grade Constellations, could not help but admire.

「This is the first story of 'Ragnarok'.」

Finally, the time had come to recreate the stage of 'Ragnarok'.

「A storm of lightning was raging in the surrounding space-time.」

Every time Odin walked forward step by step, his body grew larger and larger. A Myth-grade Constellation. His true body, claiming to be the strongest in the <Star Stream> alongside Zeus of <Olympus>, was revealing itself on the battlefield.

At that moment, Odin's transmission pierced into my ears.

[I have one request.]

As I looked at his back, a transmission came once again.

[Please keep the items on the table safe for me.]

A voice as if foreseeing the end of this story. I nodded and replied.

"Understood."

As if that was enough, Odin stood in front of the 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk.

「Finally, the 'All-Father' looked at the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God'.」

In response to his story, a wolf-shaped aura was wavering from Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body.

[Fighting with you is the second time now.]

This was the scheduled battlefield of myth. Recognizing him, Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,865th round frowned.

【Did you crawl here on your own feet because you want to die?】

It seemed the two existences had already engaged in a fierce battle once. As the lightning-shaped scar remaining on Yoo Joonghyuk's neck emitted a pure white light, a red glow hovered over the sword scars covering Odin's upper body. The wounds inflicted on each other's incarnation bodies were resonating with each other's stories.

[It is time to settle the match from back then.]

---

As if mocking Odin's declaration, Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,865th regression swung the 'Black Heavenly Demon Sword'. The moment the regressor's sword, perfected through endless training, touched the god's neck, Odin's single eye flared with light.

「He is the one who killed the primordial giant.」

The space around us warped, and Yoo Joonghyuk's slash vanished somewhere. I was startled by that astonishing power.

「Together with his brothers he claimed the first void and opened a myth with the corpse of that giant.」

Others might not know, but I alone knew what that power was.

[The Giant Story 'Ginnungagap' has begun its storytelling.]

Ginnungagap. The primordial power that <Asgard> had once used to deal with me and the 'Demon King of Salvation'. That powerful force was now being manifested by Odin alone.

Yoo Joonghyuk paid no mind to the disappearing slash and continued pouring out attacks.

[It is useless. O 'Outer God who searches for the Oldest Dream'!]

Every time a slash flew in, the void space of 'Ginnungagap' opened and closed repeatedly.

A power that nullified every single terrifying slash of the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,865th regression.

I knew Odin was a strong constellation. I had experienced it in the 40th regression, read about it in the main story, and even witnessed his battle against the Great Sage Heaven's Equal with my own eyes.

But the moment I looked at the Odin before me, I felt that I still did not truly know him.

「Only he would understand both the beginning and the end of a single myth.」

He was the existence who had killed Ymir, the master of <Asgard>'s Primordial Void (太虛) — 'Ginnungagap' — and become a god himself.

An unusual and ominous aura flickered in both of his hands as he wielded the void dimension of 'Ginnungagap'.

Black and white stories resided in Odin's hands. The right hand resembled pitch black darkness, and the left hand resembled pure white light. Those two hands that grasped the void were precisely the power that differentiated him from other 'Myth-grade Constellations'.

「Odin's right hand — the 'Primordial Will', Vili.」

I sensed the immense power of the stories dwelling in those two hands.

「Odin's left hand — the 'Divider of Order', Vé.」

The power of those two stars was also the source that had placed Odin upon the throne of <Asgard>.

「He devoured his own brothers and claimed the title of Master of the Primordial Void.」

The Trinity of Will, Order, and Wisdom.

Faced with Odin's might, who alone exercised a status equivalent to the combined power of three 'Myth-grade Constellations', I forgot even to breathe as I became absorbed in the battlefield.

Goosebumps continuously rose along my spine. There were two reasons. The first was pure astonishment at Odin's status, and the second was—

"Even a monster that powerful fled from 'Snow White', huh."

Hearing Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st regression's voice, I nodded.

The enemy we would have to fight from now on was a monster that made even that Myth-grade Constellation tremble in fear.

And another monster who did not fear such an Odin stood right before our eyes.

【What a vulgar story.】

The Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,865th regression. Using [Red Phoenix Shunpo] that had reached its absolute limit, he closed the distance and began unleashing slashes from a range far closer than before.

Odin moved both hands in a flurry and absorbed the slashes into the void dimension.

Yet Yoo Joonghyuk seemed not to care about such minor issues and began swinging his sword at an even greater speed. In the chain of slashes that had become fast enough to distort even space and time, suddenly Yoo Joonghyuk's sword momentum changed, and Odin's expression, previously composed, began to twist little by little.

Shooting Star Slash.

A trajectory of death that no star could evade flew toward Odin's neck. But Odin, as if he had anticipated even that, unleashed a story.

「He stood before endless destruction and never ceased his obsession with infinite knowledge and martial power.」

His single eye that saw the future was reading the trajectory of the Shooting Star Slash.

A strike he barely managed to dodge. But the attack did not end there.

Shooting Star Slash — Two Consecutive Strikes.

The slash that could cut down even Myth-grade Constellations increased to two. Toward the flying slashes, Odin blew a long whistle. Then a flock of crows that covered the sky appeared from somewhere.

Kkaaaaawww!

The crows soon melted like black paint and poured down onto the ground. The black paint erased the entire landscape of the area and even swallowed the Shooting Star Slashes. Within that metaphysical landscape, Odin spoke in his true voice.

[This is my stage! No matter who you are, here you cannot defeat m—]

Shooting Star Slash — Three Consecutive Strikes.

As a slash several times larger than before came crashing down, a look of bewilderment appeared on Odin's face as well.

Perhaps blocking the attacks was gradually becoming overwhelming. He avoided the first slash, barely blocked the second, but the third slash grazed his shoulder. Yoo Joonghyuk did not miss that opening.

Shooting Star Slash — Four Consecutive Strikes.

Odin's single eye trembled violently. He urgently waved both hands and summoned a massive void dimension.

As the void dimension that absorbed even starlight swirled like a black hole, every single one of Yoo Joonghyuk's furiously flying slashes vanished beyond 'Ginnungagap'. Since Ginnungagap was a 'Dimension Before Records', any slash that entered it inevitably lost its power and was dismantled.

Yet even knowing that fact, Yoo Joonghyuk did not stop attacking. And something unbelievable occurred.

Shooting Star Slash — Five Consecutive Strikes.

The moment the five trajectories were sucked into the void dimension, a crack appeared for the first time at the entrance of 'Ginnungagap'.

[What—]

The void dimension that had absorbed the slashes was suffering.

「There is no tragedy that Ginnungagap cannot digest.」

The history of a regressor who had turned back time again and again. The slash carrying that story was advancing while shattering even the void itself.

Shooting Star Slash — Six Consecutive Strikes.

The collapse of Ginnungagap's entrance and Odin's scream occurred at almost the same time.

[How dare you—]

The slashes continued, deeply cutting his right hand and left hand, his abdomen, both of his legs, and then his chest.

[GHAAAAHHH!]

Odin's incarnation body was being torn to pieces. Even after mercilessly severing Vili dwelling in Odin's right hand and Vé in his left, the Shooting Star Slash did not stop.

Shooting Star Slash — Seven Consecutive Strikes.

As if determined to shred every story of that star to pieces, the Shooting Star Slash carved out even Odin's scream. Odin's empty eyes blinked. The moment the tattered Odin slowly sank to his knees, Yoo Joonghyuk's 'Black Heavenly Demon Sword' pierced through Odin's heart.

「A great myth was collapsing right before their eyes.」

The strange thing, however, was Odin's expression. Even in the moment facing his end, Odin was smiling while gripping the blade of Yoo Joonghyuk's 'Black Heavenly Demon Sword'.

「He is the god who offered nine lives over nine nights while pierced by a spear.」

In that instant, Odin's story flashed through my mind.

「He offered himself as a sacrifice upon the World Tree 'Yggdrasil' and glimpsed the 'First Record'.」

Odin's incarnation body was enveloped in dazzling rays of light. The moment the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,865th regression hesitated, the story that flowed from Odin's entire body grew like chains and bound Yoo Joonghyuk's whole body. Frowning, Yoo Joonghyuk tried to shake them off. But he could not cut the story chains.

「The magical chain Gleipnir.」

It was a star relic that Odin possessed. Yet no matter how great a star relic it was, it should not have been able to control Yoo Joonghyuk. Under normal circumstances, that should have been the case.

「There are three ways to survive in a ruined world.」

If only it had not been for the story dwelling in the Disaster.

「I have already forgotten some of them by now.」

It was the story of 'Ways of Survival'.

Odin, resurrected within the rays of light, gripped the chain that bound Yoo Joonghyuk as if holding a leash.

[You foolish Disaster. Did you truly think I would be defeated?]

Yoo Joonghyuk unleashed an even more powerful status to try to release the story chains, but the chains only tightened more strongly around his entire body.

「It was a leash created solely to control a single disaster.」

Odin spoke with a faint smile.

[Give up. This is the leash meant to bind the Wolf of Disaster.]

Within the story of 'Ragnarok', 'Gleipnir' was the star relic that bound the disaster Fenrir.

As long as Yoo Joonghyuk from the 1,865th regression had descended as the 'Wolf That Swallowed God', he could not escape this restraint.

[This is the great 'Ragnarok'. No matter what you do, you cannot undo this lea—]

Accompanied by fierce sparks, a Probability storm began raging from Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body.

【Do you—】

Part of Gleipnir was composed of the story of 'Ways of Survival' that Odin had obtained. And 'Ways of Survival' was the birth story that constituted Yoo Joonghyuk himself. Therefore, it should have been impossible for Yoo Joonghyuk to sever that 'Story' with his own power.

【—think this is the first time I face you?】

That would have been the case only if he had been the Yoo Joonghyuk of 'Ways of Survival'.

Gleipnir's binding, which should never have been broken, began to snap.

「He was the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,865th regression. The protagonist of the story who had gone beyond 'Ways of Survival' and finally walked out of that stage.」

Odin's eyes began to widen as he confirmed the story flowing throughout Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body.

The Myth-grade Constellation who had witnessed a story he had never seen before shook his head and stepped backward instinctively.

[The Story 'Terror of Asgard' has begun its storytelling.]

It was the exclusive story of Yoo Joonghyuk who cleared the scenarios of the 1,865th regression.

[How can you possess that story—]

Throwing the powerless, broken chains onto the ground, Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,865th regression slowly rose to his feet.

【This is not the first time I'm going to kill you.】

The moment the 'Wolf That Swallowed God' unleashed his status, Odin also prepared for the final battle.

As the statuses of the two beings collided, a pitch black night descended upon the area.

「This was an event whose ending was already predetermined.」

Suffocating silence covered the battlefield. The 'Nameless Ones' that had been lingering nearby, drawn by Yoo Joonghyuk's story, could not endure the story pressure of the two existences that suddenly crashed down and exploded. Within that horrific feast, only I and the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st regression foresaw the conclusion of this story.

"We have to help Odin."

— No.

Without taking my eyes off Odin and the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,865th regression, I spoke.

— You know it too, don't you? How this battle ends.

Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st regression did not answer. He also knew.

— This is the only way we can win.

A story was boiling within the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st regression. It was the story of 'Vidar, the Ender of Wars', whom he had once killed.

「The myth of 'Ragnarok' was being reenacted.」

Within the pitch black night sky, Odin's beloved steed 'Sleipnir' could be seen galloping across space. Odin mounted his steed and gripped his exclusive weapon. A spear that spat flames of light (光炎).

The Divine Spear Gungnir.

Containing the story of <Asgard>, it was the spear that had tormented Yoo Joonghyuk and <Kim Dokja Company> again and again in the past.

Facing that spear, Yoo Joonghyuk also drew his Black Heavenly Demon Sword.

If he had been the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,865th regression, it would have been difficult to overwhelm Odin with pure martial power alone. But the current him was different.

Right now he was an incarnation who had seen the conclusion twice, a regressor who had reached the final point of regression. And—

Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship (破天劍道).

Secret Technique: Inner Mystery Transmission (超越奧義).

—the disaster that swallows stars.

Galaxy Slash (銀河斬).

Before the blade that cut down an entire myth, the strongest constellation who had ruled the primordial void smiled.

[With this—]

The final chapter of the grand 'Ragnarok' was at last raising its curtain.

[Asgard is eternal.]

---

Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,865th regression exhaled roughly and withdrew his story.

His vision was hazy. It was probably because he had exerted excessive power.

【Kim Dokja.】

A name he called without thinking. The sound of his own voice calling that name felt unfamiliar.

At some point it had come to resemble the voice of an Outer God.

His ominous face was reflected on the blade of the Black Heavenly Demon Sword stained with story.

「The story of the dead Odin was scattering across the world.」

The fragments of Odin that scattered like pure white starlight soon became part of the 'Stage'. Upon that stage stood another Yoo Joonghyuk blocking his path.

[A Giant Story is being realized!]

Odin had probably already foreseen his own death.

「This was the only method that could kill the 'Wolf That Swallowed God'.」

As the stage of 'Ragnarok' strengthened, an astonishing story power began surging throughout the entire body of Yoo Joonghyuk from the 41st regression.

「He was the great star that hunted the final wolf.」

Through his own death, Odin had passed the [Fate] of 'Ragnarok' to the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st regression.

Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,865th regression watched that sight with indifferent eyes and asked.

【Is the thing you trusted merely the power of that 'stage'?】

As if looking down upon the stage of 'Ragnarok', the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,865th regression raised his status.

[The Giant Story 'Ragnarok' is swaying dangerously!]

Certainly the Giant Story of 'Ragnarok' was powerful. But he was an existence who had already seen the ending twice. No story of this world could completely bind him to a 'Stage'. Yet at that moment the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st regression opened his mouth.

"You—"

The moment he heard that voice, he realized it was not the voice of the '41st regression'.

「Kim Dokja.」

Another Kim Dokja dwelling within the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st regression was asking him.

"Does this place still look like 'Ragnarok' to you?"

Clad in Odin's starlight, the coat that Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st regression was wearing shone pure white and took on a white hue.

For a moment, Yoo Joonghyuk from the 1,865th regression looked down at his own pitch black coat.

「Only then did Yoo Joonghyuk realize the meaning of this battlefield.」

This was a confrontation between Yoo Joonghyuk and Yoo Joonghyuk.

Two Yoo Joonghyuks wearing coats of different colors faced each other.

One on the ground, and the other in the sky. The moment he realized that he himself was within that landscape, Yoo Joonghyuk of the 1,865th regression recalled a very old story.

「Once, he had stood in their place.」

In the days when he firmly believed himself to be the Yoo Joonghyuk of the 3rd regression. He had stood there together with Kim Dokja. Standing there, he had faced a certain Outer God that seemed absolutely impossible to defeat.

'So this is how you felt, you bastard.'

In the sky, where that Outer God had once stood, he now stood alone.

[The Great Disaster 'Wolf That Swallowed God' is roaring.]

Perhaps it was only at that moment that Yoo Joonghyuk understood another version of himself from a very long time ago. The moment understanding was established, accompanied by the sound of an old page turning, the landscape of the surrounding area began to ripple.

[The 'Stage' is resonating.]

The distant sound of water from the Tongtian River covered the battlefield of 'Ragnarok'.

[A new Story has been born.]

The two Yoo Joonghyuks pointed spear and sword at each other, and at last an old story began to be reenacted.

[The Story 'Qualification of the Protagonist' has begun its storytelling.]

1061 Episode 66. The Wolf That Swallowed a God (9)

---

*

「Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company> could become an enemy.」

First making that assumption was something that happened before obtaining a Myth-grade status.

「What if, in the worst case scenario, Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company> tries to destroy this worldline?」

Since Han Sooyoung also visited this worldline for such a purpose, it was not an impossible assumption. But back then, even if I made such an assumption, no way to deal with Yoo Joonghyuk came to mind. It was even more so after accumulating stories and rising to the status of 'Myth-grade'.

Literally a sky beyond the sky. Yoo Joonghyuk, who saw two conclusions, was an enemy I could not deal with no matter what I did right now.

「Perhaps Yoo Joonghyuk of the 41st round also felt a despair similar to mine.」

Was the sentiment of the stars facing the 'Final Wall' right before their eyes like this? The Yoo Joonghyuk we are facing right now was an existence that filled the surface of that distant wall and completed two 'conclusions'.

「He cannot be defeated through ordinary methods.」

So what I prepared was 'stage transformation'.

「However, in order to complete this stage, several conditions were necessary.」

This scenario is the stage of 'Ragnarok'. Since he descended as the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God', our side also needed preparation fitting for it.

「Odin's stories scattered across the world were strengthening the 'stage' of Ragnarok.」

The original myth of Ragnarok begins with 'All-Father' Odin being killed by the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' Fenrir. Therefore, to deal with Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company> summoned as the proxy of the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God', Odin's death was essential.

「The son of an old myth shall execute revenge.」

Executing revenge for Odin who died in the original myth is Vidar, the 'Concluder of War'. But in this round, Vidar the 'Concluder of War' was already dead. Thus, the one who could act as his proxy was 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk who killed him and took his story.

Rumbleeee!

The blessing of the 'Concluder of War' was granted to 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body, and his body sparkled radiantly with the story of 'Ragnarok'.

Rumbleeee!

A baptism of thrusts from the Soul Extinguishing Divine Spear rising like flash lightning. 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk floating in the firmament frowned and struck back at the spear strikes.

【Trivial skills.】

Despite the storm of formidable status, 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk was unshaken. He even gradually approached this way through the storm of spear strikes.

[The great disaster, 'Wolf That Swallowed a God', directly resists the Probability of 'Ragnarok'!]

As expected. I did not expect to be able to defeat him with just the Giant Story of 'Ragnarok'. Because the opponent is that 'Yoo Joonghyuk' of <Kim Dokja's Company>. To break him, a stronger 'role' was needed. So what was prepared was precisely this second stage.

[Story, 'Inheritor of Eternal Name', wriggles!]

I activated the story inside me and called my brothers.

'Second brother. Third brother.'

Because to fully recreate this stage, the help of the other two Kim Dokjas was necessary.

Tap.

And from beyond the wall, the sound of my brothers responding was heard. The one who reacted first was the second brother.

[Giant Story, 'Season of Light and Darkness', begins its storytelling.]

That was the Giant Story of 'Great War of Saints and Demons' in which <Kim Dokja's Company> participated. In that battlefield, Kim Dokja faced Constellations of Good and Evil, and awakened the Dragon of the Apocalypse.

「【Puppet of the Oldest Dream. You know nothing about 'Kim Dokja'.】」

And there, the 'Two Yoo Joonghyuks' met for the first time.

「That is the hell of eternal immortality.」

That day, Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company> was defeated. It could not be helped. Because his enemy was a distant Outer God that could not be dealt with even by dedicating all his history—the 'Secretive Plotter'.

「Yoo Joonghyuk could not fathom the depth of that vast emotion.」

That day, the 'Secretive Plotter' took Kim Dokja and vanished to his residence, and Yoo Joonghyuk fell from the sky like a bird that lost its wings.

「A coat turned to rags. The unconscious Yoo Joonghyuk was falling to the ground.」

However, because there was that day's defeat, there was also subsequent victory.

[Giant Story, 'Liberator of the Forgotten', begins its storytelling!]

The 'Giant Story' that the third brother possessed. On the stage of 'Journey to the West'—above the battlefield of Tongtian River, the two Yoo Joonghyuks clashed once again. However, this time it was the exact opposite position.

「A man in a white coat was looking up at the firmament. Then a man in a black coat met that gaze.」

Before my eyes, that day at Tongtian River was being recreated. To me and 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk, the story accumulated by that day's Kim Dokja and Yoo Joonghyuk dwelt.

「Light and darkness were colliding. And only a single watcher observed all those stories.」

The Dark Heavenly Moon Spear and the Black Heavenly Demon Sword crossed, causing a sharp friction sound. An offense and defense so fast that the black and white coats turned to rags. Countless slashes and thrusts collided, causing a storm of stories.

「This is a history that Yoo Joonghyuk can never reject.」

On that stage, Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company> whom I knew was fighting. Desperately swinging his sword.

【You guys cannot win.】

Now in a voice resembling the 'Secretive Plotter', he was speaking.

「【Is a story that failed to reach a proper 'conclusion' a failed story?】」

The two stages created an overlapping effect, bringing about an even stronger synergy. Although it was an evenly matched duel, it felt like the balance of victory was tipping ever so slightly.

「【Do you really think a 'proper conclusion' exists in this world?】」

Every time the story continued, 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk staggered noticeably. I looked at Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company>, at his two eyes gradually growing empty.

「This is the most cowardly method to deal with the 'protagonist' of a story.」

He was looking at us, but at the same time he was not looking at us. Perhaps he was currently in the past.

「The story currently making him up was not 'Ways of Survival'.」

Once, he was an existence made up of the story of 'Ways of Survival'. But now it was not so. Currently, the story making up his body was—

[Exclusive skill, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint' is activated even more strongly!]

The story written by Han Sooyoung, read by Kim Dokja, and lived by him.

「【There is only one difference between you and me.】」

Therefore, he can neither resist this story nor break this stage. Because he endured his remaining life solely through this story. Just as Kim Dokja once did.

「【You were lucky, and I was unlucky.】」

Along with a roaring sound, rays of light burst forth. In the collapsing surroundings, for the first time, one leg of the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' buckled. 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk did not miss that open gap in his spear stance. The thrust learned from Master Jaewhan. Imbued into the essence of long refinement.

Soul Extinguishing Divine Spear and Breaking the Sky Sword Style. Spear and sword. Divine strike and slash collided, and a wild wind of stories blew before our eyes. A feast of sword techniques so intense it blinded the eyes and burst the ears. Deflecting the flying slashes, the moment 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk pierced through the pure white light and launched the final thrust—

「The sound of something falling from the sky was heard.」

Victory was right before our eyes. That regressor possessing supreme status was finally falling.

「He was by no means an existence that would collapse so easily.」

In the recreated stage, the soul of the falling Yoo Joonghyuk was vividly felt.

「He simply gave up fighting before this story.」

The brilliant storm of stories settled down, and the surroundings gradually began to clear up. 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk advanced through the dust without hesitation and leveled his spear.

Soon, when the dust vanished, Yoo Joonghyuk's spear tip was touching precisely the throat of the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God'. Collapsed onto the ground, the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' was looking up at the sky where stars had gone out.

「He had an expression as if accepting his own ■■.」

In that vast universe he looked up at endlessly, the star he searched for no longer existed. At the distant emotion welling up, I spoke involuntarily.

"You must not kill him."

I wanted to run over right away and raise him up. I wanted to tell him that this was not your end. But I could not do so. What I had to do was stop the destruction of this worldline and stop 'Snowfield Kim Dokja's conclusion. For that, I had to defeat him here.

"This is... enough."

According to the original myth of 'Ragnarok', the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' must die here. But there was no need to strictly follow that original myth. Because just incapacitating him was sufficient to achieve the goal.

Tzztzz.

It was at that moment that stories wavered from 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body.

[Giant Story, 'Ragnarok' continues its storytelling.]

The will of the Giant Story trying to realize itself.

"Yoo Joonghyuk?"

The stopped spear tip of 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk began to move.

「Thus finally, the end of the 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' approached.」

I hurriedly strengthened [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint]. Fortunately, the timing was not late. The moment [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint] activated to the limit was about to seize 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk's body—

"Wait a moment, Yoo Joong—!"

My shout could not continue to the end. In the next moment, along with a feeling as if striking the back of my head hard, something bounced my soul out.

['1st Person Protagonist's Point of View' is deactivated!]

The last thing I saw was the two empty eyes of Yoo Joonghyuk deeply despaired at the story.

[Exclusive skill, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint' is forcibly deactivated!]

*

Yoo Joonghyuk felt Kim Dokja's soul leaving his body. As expected, it seemed this possession skill would not persist if he, the master of the body, strongly rejected it.

[Giant Story, 'Ragnarok' forces your action.]

Yoo Joonghyuk felt the power of the 'Giant Story' dwelling in his right hand. The story of Vidar, the 'Concluder of War' who granted him power, reacted and commanded him.

「Killthe disaster killthe disaster killthe disaster killthe disaster killthe disaster killthe disaster killthe disaster killthe disaster」

If it were an ordinary incarnation, it was a terrible story that would dominate the mind just by listening to it.

'Noisy.'

However, Yoo Joonghyuk calmly stared at that story and muttered.

'If you keep blabbering, I will cut off the arm.'

In an instant, with a tzztzztzz sound, the power of the story forcing Yoo Joonghyuk's right arm weakened.

[Giant Story, 'Ragnarok' is amazed by the proxy's will.]

[Giant Story, 'Ragnarok' temporarily pauses its storytelling.]

Perhaps the Giant Story realized instinctively. If the incarnation before its eyes truly intended to refuse, it could not truly be realized on this stage.

In the place where the quieted story paused its storytelling, a emaciated disaster was sitting collapsed. Yoo Joonghyuk stared quietly down at that 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk. The moment he looked into his eyes, Yoo Joonghyuk could tell. Only he, as a regressor, could understand those eyes.

Right now he is here, but at the same time he is not here. Perhaps he was having a terrible dream. In the landscape created by the story he lived, he was living through moments flowing like a revolving lantern.

"Is that the history you lived through?"

Through the story shown by Kim Dokja, Yoo Joonghyuk also came to know that day's stories. He came to know well what story they experienced in the 1,864th round and what tragedy they endured.

"Are you going to give up there?"

Yoo Joonghyuk kept silent for a moment, staring at the disaster that looked identical to him. Then, with an expression as if unwilling to admit it, he spoke gritting his teeth.

"You are 'Yoo Joonghyuk'."

Perhaps that was respect toward the regressor who returned to the world of scenarios once again even after seeing the conclusion of a world.

At the name calling him, the disaster slowly raised his head.

【You know nothing.】

"Did you not come to destroy this world?"

【None of your business—】

"Stand up. There are no interlopers now."

Only at the moment he heard those words did 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk raise his head once again. Intense wavering was flowing in his eyes. He too realized late.

Tzztzztzz...

The power of the Giant Story weighing down on him was gradually weakening. Before long, the river water of Tongtian River and the night sky of the Great War of Saints and Demons vanished. All the stages pressuring Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja's Company> vanished, and only two Yoo Joonghyuks remained in that place.

【...What are you doing?】

"Let me settle the match again."

As if unable to understand those words, Yoo Joonghyuk frowned and spoke.

【The match is already decided.】

Clearly the fight was over, and history repeated itself. One Yoo Joonghyuk lost, and another Yoo Joonghyuk won. Nevertheless, the winning Yoo Joonghyuk did not have a happy expression at all.

"This is the 41st round."

Rather, he had a face as if enduring terrible humiliation. He looked down at the traces of the 'stage' floating around the area—the story fragments of the 1,864th round that allowed him to win—and added:

"It is my 'worldline'."

The moment he heard those words, 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk's eyes widened.

[Story, 'Qualifications of a Protagonist', continues its storytelling.]

Only then did Yoo Joonghyuk realize what the Yoo Joonghyuk before his eyes was saying. Right now, the 41st round was speaking. For the conclusion of this round, the history of another worldline was not needed.

Slowly taking a deep breath, 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk stood up from his seat.

【You are showing useless pride.】

Now an immense status that could not be forced by anything began to flow out from his entire body once again.

【You will regret it.】

This is Yoo Joonghyuk's final desperate battle that will decide the final chapter of the worldline. Transcendent status flowed from 41st round's entire body.

"I will not regret anything."

A supreme spirit (霸氣) that never backs down even before an enemy that seems impossible to defeat. Therefore this <Star Stream>—

"I am Yoo Joonghyuk."

Calls him the Supreme King (霸王).

1062 Episode 66. The Wolf That Swallowed a God (10)

---

There, Yoo Joonghyuk and Yoo Joonghyuk stood. One had lived through scenarios spanning 1,865 rounds, and the other had lived through scenarios reaching the 41st round. Though the histories they lived through differed, the two pointing spear and sword at each other knew. The existence before their eyes right now was unmistakably the 'Supreme King Yoo Joonghyuk'.

【I will not use stories.】

1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk spoke. At the same time, the aura of stories subsided from his entire body. The stories of <Kim Dokja Company>, the Giant Stories he built himself, and even the Giant Story of 'Ragnarok' calmed down. Standing there was simply the pure Yoo Joonghyuk who endured two conclusions.

"It seems you are the one showing useless pride."

As if matching him, 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk also put his stories to rest. However, putting stories to sleep did not mean they were truly not using stories at all.

「The flesh they lived in was itself their story.」

Stories accumulated over long ages soon become part of the soul. Difficult memories, sorrowful memories, every moment of overcoming despair and frustration to stand again became their very selves, turning into swinging fists and trajectories of sword and spear. Therefore, the two were clashing with all their stories while not actively using them.

The moment rays of light flashed, the two existences vanished from the air at the same time.

Kudududuk!

As spear tip and sword blade met, fierce sparks flew. Strikes containing the pinnacle of martial arts spoken of by Transcendents. At a glance, they were merely cutting and thrusting movements, but within each simple trajectory lay the story of the life they had lived.

Kugugugu!

At the impact, the Dark Heavenly Moon Spear wavered, and the Black Heavenly Demon Sword creaked. 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk narrowed his eyes and spoke.

【I did not know you could reach such a realm in a mere 41st round.】

"You seem weak for someone who lived through 1,865 rounds."

In that moment, the movement of the sword changed. Breaking the Sky Meteor Strike (破天流星決). A cluster of meteors pouring from the firmament to the ground. In response, the secret technique of the Soul Extinguishing Divine Spear was fired from the spear tip. Ten Thousand Stars Falling (萬星墜落). Two martial arts created to kill stars collided, and once again the trajectories of the two men crossed.

First exchange, second exchange, third exchange. In the offensive and defensive exchange in the blink of an eye, the one pushed back first was 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk.

'He is strong.'

Even while suppressing Giant Stories, the 'Great Disaster' before his eyes was a monster. 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk could not know what kind of time 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk had endured to reach that realm. He could only gauge his story through the faintly seen fragments.

「A story of deep regret was carried in every trajectory of the Black Heavenly Demon Sword.」

A regressor lives powered by regret. Yet the Yoo Joonghyuk before his eyes was one who had seen the end of a world twice. Even after seeing the landscape he wished to reach, why did he shudder in such profound regret?

"Were you not satisfied even after seeing the end of the scenarios?"

Dodging the slashes slicing through the air, 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk asked.

"Why were you not content with the story given to you? Did you not already prevent the destruction of the world?"

After a slight pause, 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk answered.

【You cannot understand.】

The pouring sword strikes grew fiercer. 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk parried the slashes with all his might and spoke.

"You must have already experienced enough deaths of companions. Don't you know by now? There are things in this world that cannot be undone. Even with our [Regression], we cannot save everything."

【.....】

"If you lived through 1,865 rounds, you should know that fact better than anyone—"

【You, in a mere 41st round, cannot understand anything.】

As two convictions collided, a roaring sound erupted once more.

「Yoo Joonghyuk's goal was to prevent the destruction of this world. To clear all scenarios and liberate Earth from the <Star Stream>.」

Certainly, at one time Yoo Joonghyuk lived through scenarios solely for that purpose. He endured all those years to destroy this 'damned Star Stream'.

"Did you meet the 'Oldest Dream'?"

The Oldest Dream. At those words, 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk's expression hardened for the first time.

【I met him.】

41st round Yoo Joonghyuk still did not know much about his sponsor. He only knew that the existence was called the 'Oldest Dream', and that he was regressing through that existence's power. And now, he had vaguely come to know that his sponsor was deeply related to the existence named 'Kim Dokja'.

"My sponsor—"

Perhaps that was a question the original Yoo Joonghyuk would never have asked.

"What did he look like?"

Even so, just this once, he wanted to hear it. His opponent was the 1,865th round. In the eyes of another self who lived through that distant time, what did his sponsor look like?

【That guy was.】

The moment he uttered those words, there was a story brushing past 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk's retina. 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk read a fragment of that story. He read the pure emptiness contained within that tale, and the complicated heart that no story could unravel.

【Small.】

With that single word, an illusion wavered over 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk's retina. It was the figure of a child disappearing together with a man.

"He was small?"

Without answering, 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk brandished his sword again. As if that was all he could tell him.

Shooting Star Slash. 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk's main technique unfolded. Explosive energy so powerful that not even a Myth-grade Constellation could survive. 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk leveled his spear toward the incoming sword aura. A technique that the current him could not properly withstand. Even so, 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk did not back down. The sound of dull chains snapping echoed from his entire body.

「Restriction of Life」

This was the 'final imprint' among the 'three story imprints' he possessed.

「He had activated this story imprint only once before. When escaping the Recycling Center and being chased by Nebulae, encountering his master Jaewhan.」

If 'Restriction of Truth' touched his memories and 'Restriction of Emotion' touched his humanity, the final imprint, 'Restriction of Life', was literally a story imprint that staked his life force. Like a moth burning its own life, 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk's entire body began to shine like a bright sun.

Tukwang!

His tightly condensed spear aura deflected the flying beams of Shooting Star Slash.

【You bastard.】

Recognizing the identity of the 'story imprint', 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk frowned.

【Do you wish to die?】

"No."

41st round Yoo Joonghyuk answered in a voice devoid of falsehood.

"I intend to survive."

And once again, the two Yoo Joonghyuks clashed. The Black Heavenly Demon Sword spewed fire once more, followed by a sequence of slashes far greater than before.

Shooting Star Slash — Two Consecutive Strikes.

The very technique that defeated Odin poured from 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk's sword.

Shooting Star Slash — Three Consecutive Strikes.

And surprisingly, 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk was continuing the fight by dodging or deflecting the Shooting Star Slashes.

「He could feel his life rapidly running out.」

It was truly a desperate life-and-death battle. The pinnacle of martial power an incarnation body could reach. Controlling the martial prowess that reached its absolute limit in an instant, 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk continued his thrusts. His entire history exceeded even the trajectories of meteors and surged toward the 1,865th round.

Tzztzztzz!

And for the first time, 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk was pushed back a step. A razor-thin match. Every time sword and spear collided, ripples spread across the universe. Before long, both Yoo Joonghyuks were completely absorbed in battle. And ever so slightly, the scale of victory began to tip once more. The one who noticed the omen first was 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk.

"You—"

Stories were flowing from 1,865th round's entire body. No, to be precise, between the two of them—

['Stage Transformation' is activated!]

A new stage was opening. Subsequently, 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk spoke in a bewildered voice.

【It is not my will.】

Clearly, neither 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk nor 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk had used stories. Yet between the two, a 'stage' crafted by stories was opening. It was neither the 'Season of Light and Darkness' nor the 'Liberator of the Forgotten'. This was simply their history.

"This is—"

It was the 'history' of the 1,864th round.

「The two existences had already faced each other once before.」

41st round Yoo Joonghyuk glared at the stories drifting chaotically before his eyes.

「Can one become this strong after going through 41 rounds?」

「To be precise, it is merely this much.」

Within the chaotically floating stories was him, and the Yoo Joonghyuk before his eyes. The two men were fighting. 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk opened his mouth as if groaning.

【I have already met you before.】

As if refusing to receive something like stage transformation effects, 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk spoke in a resentful voice.

【In my worldline.】

The contents of the story were simple. In that story, 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk possessed Kim Dokja and fought against the 1,864th round Yoo Joonghyuk. And he lost. But the reason 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk was shocked was not because of the victory or defeat recorded in that story.

"I see."

A worldline in the far distant future. The stage of the 1,864th round. The fact that the '41st round Yoo Joonghyuk' existed on that stage.

"As expected, was this a fight whose end was predetermined from the beginning?"

41st round Yoo Joonghyuk muttered bitterly.

「The worldline of the 41st round will be destroyed.」

Only after his world is destroyed will other worldlines begin. The 1,864th round and the 1,865th round before his eyes. And the stories of worlds he does not know.

「Only when his world is completely destroyed will all those stories begin.」

Predetermined despair weighed heavily upon his shoulders. All these worlds, all these stories, were urging a single conclusion upon him.

【You did your best.】

Toward such a 41st round, the 1,865th round was speaking.

【Just because you failed does not mean that entire life was wrong.】

That was advice only Yoo Joonghyuk could give to another Yoo Joonghyuk. The problem was that the one listening to that advice was also Yoo Joonghyuk.

"Don't blabber so haughtily when you failed in the end as well."

【...What?】

Hearing those words, 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk felt a strange deja vu. Perhaps once before, they had shared a similar conversation.

"I have no intention of listening to the advice of a failure."

With those words, 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk took a step forward.

[Giant Story, 'Ragnarok' resumes its storytelling!]

It was then that the 'Giant Story' which held its breath abruptly resumed its storytelling. The stage of 'Ragnarok' and the stage of the '1,864th round' overlapped, offsetting the stage transformation in an instant. Beyond the offset stage, spear and sword crossed.

「Only one 'Yoo Joonghyuk' will survive here.」

Both the 41st round and the 1,865th round knew. This was a battle deciding the end of a story.

Was it coincidence, or was it intention? For a moment, 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk staggered once again. 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk did not miss that opening.

[The influence of Giant Story, 'Ragnarok' grows stronger!]

If he thrust into that opening, he could win. Even so, 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk could not thrust his spear. Even while watching the blade falling right before his nose.

While time flowed slowly like a revolving lantern, the two empty eyes of 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk were visible.

「If that existence dies here, what would that bastard say?」

Strangely, at the final moment, 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk thought of his companion. The guy once called Cheon Inho, and now called Kim Dokja.

Now 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk's sword was right in front of him. He had to thrust even now. Only then could he kill him.

「And Yoo Joonghyuk made up his mind.」

Beyond the lingering silence, over the blank space that no story could fill, the sound of flesh tearing echoed.

[The first 'stage' of Giant Story, 'Ragnarok' has ended.]

---

With a gasp, when I came to my senses, I was back in my own body. The recoil from [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint] being deactivated ached and rang through my head.

What happened? What about Yoo Joonghyuk? That bastard, what on earth did he—

[Have you awakened?]

Turning my head, Mass Production Maker was looking at me. For some reason, his face was full of worry. There was no need to ask why.

[Dawn is coming.]

Beyond the sky where starlight had disappeared, dawn broke. No, strictly speaking, it was not the sun. Pure white stories wavering beyond the horizon. Disasters following him while emitting pure white light were dyeing the battlefield in a white night.

「Master of the Erased Blank — Snow White.」

At last, my brother had arrived at this battlefield.

1063 Episode 67. The World Serpent (1)

【O o o o o o o o】

In the distance, the sorrowful cries of the 'Gods of Other Worlds' could be heard. Not intending to march this way immediately, they halted their movements and repeatedly let out cries toward somewhere.

「They seemed to be waiting for something.」

I didn't know what they were thinking, but for our side, a useful intermission had been created.

Amidst the wavering air of the battlefield, I quickly took stock of the recent situation.

[Exclusive skill, 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint' cannot be activated.]

[Reactivating 'Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint' on the target is impossible.]

Was it because the skill was forcibly deactivated? [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint] did not activate again on 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk.

「Yoo Joonghyuk is in danger.」

The deactivation of [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint] was not by my will, but by 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk's. I recalled the final scene I had witnessed just before the skill deactivated.

「Why did 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk make such a choice?」

Victory was practically assured. The overlapping stage transformation produced brilliant synergy, and 1,865th round Yoo Joonghyuk was sinking deeply into the surging stories like the 'Secretive Plotter' of the past. Yet at the final moment, 41st round Yoo Joonghyuk shook off my help and chose to face him alone.

「Yoo Joonghyuk's presence cannot be felt.」

I hurriedly checked the entry status of the 'Archive of Records'.

[You are currently unable to enter the 'Archive of Records'.]

[The 'Archive of Records' in this area is severely damaged!]

Perhaps the moment the stories of the 1,864th round flooded in, the interior of the 'Archive of Records' suffered massive damage. A situation where neither as a reader nor as a writer could I assist Yoo Joonghyuk.

「Right now, the only existence capable of changing that story was the 'protagonist'.」

Do I have no choice but to trust Yoo Joonghyuk for now? Inhaling softly, I slowly stood up. As if waiting, the surrounding Constellations looked at me.

[It seems Odin did well.]

The one who spoke first was Poseidon, who was fiddling with a broken piece of a recorder.

"Yes."

[How was his end?]

I recalled Odin's final moments. The strongest star of <Asgard> who sacrificed all his stories to become the offering for 'Ragnarok'.

"It was an end fitting of his modifier."

One-Eyed Father Odin. In the end, though I expected him to appear on the stage of 'Ragnarok', actually seeing that landscape firsthand gave a completely different dimension of impression.

「A star that illuminates the beginning of a story while prepared for death.」

Solely to record the stories of <Asgard> into the <Star Stream>, he sacrificed everything he had to become this very 'stage'. Until now, I had seen countless Constellations intoxicated by stories or consumed by them to death, but seeing even a Myth-grade Constellation like Odin unable to escape that yoke gave me a strange feeling.

「How am I any different?」

In the end, all beings live by stories, and die by stories once again. It was the same for Kim Dokja, and for Yoo Joonghyuk. In the end, the ■■ they all desire exists, and every character dies toward that finale. And whether we reach that concluding landscape or not, everything remains as a story.

In doing so, we become part of the <Star Stream> that the 'Oldest Dream' loves.

[Is it my turn to step up now?]

The 'Abyssal Black Flame Dragon', who had remained silent all along, rose to his feet as well. As if waiting, the story of the Dragon of the Apocalypse flowed from his entire body.

[It will be the final war of the <Star Stream>.]

The Handsome Monkey King, sitting cross-legged, opened his eyes as well. Within his pupils, the harmonized stories of multiple Sun Wukongs were churning.

It was then that a commotion was heard outside the inner castle.

"Writer-nim."

Along with Cha Yerin's voice, the tent of the situation room fluttered. Outside the tent, incarnations being urgently transported somewhere were visible. And among those incarnations was a welcome face turned toward this direction.

"Kim Dokja."

Anna Croft, who had been dispatched to the 'Altar of Storms' to assist Yoo Joonghyuk, had finally arrived on the battlefield. She wasn't the only one.

"Kim Anna-ssi."

"It has been a while."

Incarnations of the Japanese side, including Asuka Ren. The powerhouses remaining in the inner castle sensed the emergence of the Outer Gods and gathered toward the situation room one by one.

"It seems it will finally begin."

Anna Croft spoke in a tense voice. Her 'Great Demon's Eye' emitting [Future Sight] shone with bright light.

"Dionysus's side also said they will join soon."

Fortunately, the surviving Constellations also seemed to have decided to take our side. Since the situation was dire enough that we'd take even little Yoo Joonghyuk's hand, any help was deeply appreciated.

I slowly examined the forces we currently had. What caught my eye first were the 'Kings'.

Abyssal Black Flame Dragon.

Mass Production Maker.

Handsome Monkey King.

And behind them was a Myth-grade Constellation of Olympus clutching a broken trident.

Poseidon.

Just as Odin had resolved, his gaze showed he too foresaw the final battle here. Once an enemy, and a Constellation treated as a Myth-grade 'power-scaling benchmark' in the main story, his help would nonetheless be of immense aid.

Just as I was about to ask Poseidon if there were any other Myth-grade Constellations—an unknown sense of incongruity struck me. Looking around calmly at the companions again, I asked the 'Mass Production Maker'.

"Where is Heewon-ssi?"

It was then that a roaring boom sounded in the distance. I hurriedly examined the battlefield scenery on the screen floating in front of 'Mass Production Maker'.

[A 'Great Disaster' reveals its status!]

A system message ringing in my ears. But there were no particular signs of disturbance on this battlefield. In other words, the 'Great Disaster' indicated by the 'system message' was not present on this 'battlefield'.

「All the Outer Gods on the battlefield were staring in a single direction in unison.」

I could tell instinctively. In the direction they were looking, the most important battle of this battlefield was currently taking place. Watching that scenery together, the 'Mass Production Maker' spoke.

[She left alone to stop the 'Great Disaster'.]

"Alone? Why—"

[With the battle against 'Snow White' ahead, we could not afford to deplete our forces any further.]

I bit my lower lip hard. No matter how strong Jung Heewon had become, and even if Uriel of the 1,864th round was with her, Jung Heewon alone could not stop a Great Disaster.

In the distant sky, with a kudududuk sound, cracks began to form. A sound as if something massive from the outside of this world was constricting the entire outer wall.

Kwakwakwakwa!

As the landscape of the sky shattered, the shadow of a gigantic serpent was revealed beyond the scenery. I recognized immediately what that serpent was. It was the second 'Great Disaster' of this 'Ragnarok'.

"The World Serpent."

There was no doubt. The 'Great Disaster' Jung Heewon went to stop was that 'World Serpent'.

「Thus shall the 'Serpent Who Remembers the End and Beginning of the World' proclaim the destruction of the Nine Worlds.」

Along with the Giant Story echoing through the firmament, the status of the World Serpent was clearly felt even from afar. Biting my lip tightly, I glared at that scenery.

「The 'Wolf That Swallowed a God' was Yoo Joonghyuk of <Kim Dokja Company>.」

Then who was the 'World Serpent' descended over there right now?

Just as I was about to say that we had to go help Jung Heewon right this second, movements were detected on this battlefield as well.

[They are moving.]

Along with the 'Mass Production Maker's' warning, the ground heaved violently.

Thump.

One step, and another step.

Thump.

The sound of Outer Gods approaching was heard. Countless disasters following Snow White. And—

「At their center was a loyal retainer following 'Snow White'.」

It felt as if time came to a standstill. Abyssal Black Flame Dragon, Mass Production Maker, and even the Myth-grade Constellation Poseidon stiffened in their expressions.

【Ah ah ah ah ah ah ah ah ah ah ah ah ah ah ah ah ah ah】

Pain, sorrow, despair, frustration, discouragement—a terrible cry was echoing, as if gathering all the negative emotions of the <Star Stream> and vomiting them out.

[A new 'Great Disaster' reveals its status!]

I knew who the owner of this cry was. Because upon entering 'Ragnarok', I had already encountered that existence.

[Emperor.]

With the Handsome Monkey King's gritted voice, dazzling sparks began to strike across the surrounding sky. Mass Production Maker spoke with a wry smile.

[It seems that existence took on the role of a 'Great Disaster' as well.]

The anomalous form of Nebula <Emperor>.

Fuxi (伏羲).

Shennong (神農).

Nüwa (女媧).

Yellow Emperor (黃帝).

Zhuanxu (顓頊).

As many as five Myth-grade Constellations were howling, fused into a single mass. Unlike when we encountered them in space before, their spinning heads were attached to the torso of a giant dog.

[Great Disaster, 'Watchdog Guarding the Path of the End' lets out a long howl!]

Watchdog Guarding the Path of the End — Garmr.

「At last, the 'Watchdog Guarding the Path of the End' opened the gates of hell.」

Along with the stories blanketing the battlefield, the stars of the inner castle stirred violently. They were all stars who had ascended from the hall alongside the 'Kings'.

[H-Hyaaaaaah!]

[Insane—are they telling us to fight that kind of monster?]

[I-I shouldn't have come after all.]

[Is this place to become the graveyard of stars...]

When the anomalous form of Emperor alone was overwhelming to handle, that anomaly had transformed into a disaster of 'Ragnarok'. All the stars here knew. Even if all remaining Constellations joined forces, defeating that monster was impossible.

Yet even knowing that fact, there were those who did not give up until the end.

"Let us do our best."

Standing at the center of the incarnations, Kim Anna-ssi spoke, looking around with a calm expression.

"We knew from the beginning who our enemy would be, did we not?"

When she who possessed [Future Sight] said so, the light of hope returned to the eyes of the trembling incarnations. Within them lay stories as well. The stories of incarnations striving to realize their own tales even amidst terrible terror. Watching them, the story within me wriggled vigorously as well.

[Story, 'Successor of the Eternal Name' wishes to realize itself!]

Judging from the fact that he sent the watchdog forward first, my brother seemingly had no intention of entering the battlefield immediately. If so, I still had a choice.

「Although [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint] did not work on Yoo Joonghyuk, it might be different with Jung Heewon.」

However, if I leave this place now, could the remaining Constellations hold out against that Great Disaster?

[Kim Dokja.]

Standing beside me before I knew it, Mass Production Maker asked with a faint smile.

[Do you still dream of 'a conclusion that protects everything you loved'?]

A conclusion that protects everything loved. That was right. Kim Dokja had continuously run toward that conclusion, and in return, failed to protect himself in the end.

"I..."

Watching the approaching horde of Outer Gods, I imagined the conclusion of this world gradually becoming clearer.

"I simply wish for the people who have loved that story to become happy."

As I slowly drew in a breath, the story within me began its storytelling.

「And Kim Dokja made his choice.」

---

Jung Heewon ran through the ruins of the battlefield.

「Her condition was at its absolute best. She feared no enemy whatsoever.」

Running through the rapidly receding landscape, Jung Heewon recalled her last conversation with Kim Dokja. Kim Dokja had said: if something happens, hit him hard to wake him up.

'I couldn't fulfill that request. Sorry.'

When the Great Disaster 'World Serpent' appeared, she did not wake the sleeping Kim Dokja.

「Perhaps it was because it was the first time she had seen him sleep so soundly.」

Though only for a moment, the face of Kim Dokja dreaming was peaceful. Even at the center of this terrible battlefield, he alone looked like someone having a happy dream.

[Someone must stop the 'World Serpent'.]

Jung Heewon wondered about the landscape of the dream he was having.

[We just need to buy time until Kim Dokja wakes up.]

What kind of beings were in that dream? Would that pitch-black man or the companions who followed him appear?

[Buying time in words, but it basically means going to die.]

What kind of adventures were there? What kinds of stories was he living through with people there?

「Would she be in that dream as well?」

Jung Heewon watched the sleeping Kim Dokja for a long time. Even if it was just a brief sweet slumber, Jung Heewon wished for Kim Dokja to remain in that dream just a little longer.

"I will go."

Instead of waking the sleeping Kim Dokja, she quietly stood up.

"I will deal with the World Serpent."

It wasn't merely stubborn pride.

[Constellation, 'Demon-like Judge of Fire' nods her head.]

Moreover, right now she was not alone. Her sponsor from another worldline. Uriel.

[Constellation, 'Demon-like Judge of Fire' tells you to trust only her.]

All throughout running toward the World Serpent, Uriel constantly spoke to her.

[Constellation, 'Demon-like Judge of Fire' admires your growth rate!]

[Constellation, 'Demon-like Judge of Fire' says no Transcendent could wield a sword like you!]

A star sparkling with boundlessly beautiful light. If there were only Constellations like this in the sky, she felt she might even become friends with beings called Constellations.

[Constellation, 'Demon-like Judge of Fire' says she is glad to fight together again!]

Jung Heewon knew that the 'Jung Heewon' spoken of by that archangel was not herself. The 1,864th round. Jung Heewon had also seen the history of that worldline.

「The self of that world had already seen the end of all these scenarios alongside companions.」

In that worldline, she was there, and the pitch-black man—Yoo Joonghyuk—was there. And 'Kim Dokja' was there. In that story she knew nothing about, Kim Dokja laughed and cried with them, fought, won, and created stories.

When thinking about that fact, Jung Heewon often found herself engulfed in a confused feeling.

「Who is the 'Jung Heewon' that Kim Dokja remembers?」

Jung Heewon knew that the sleeping Kim Dokja was connected to that world. So even if 'Jung Heewon' appeared in his dream, perhaps that 'Jung Heewon' might not be herself.

'Even so, it is fine.'

Truly, she thought it was completely fine. If solely by that he could have a happy dream —

[Your '■■' is approaching!]

And if by doing so she could be involved in his story even a little.

「The receding scenery began to slow down.」

Jung Heewon slowly came to a halt. Inhaling a breath and looking up at the sky, the Great Disaster she was looking for was coiled there.

「There, the 'World Serpent' was present.」

A monster capable of wrapping around an entire planet and crushing it. A cosmic-scale Great Disaster, the serpent leading the end of 'Ragnarok'. Even though she could not even perceive the entirety of that disaster, Jung Heewon realized.

「It was an enemy she could not contend with.」

A sensation just as dizzying as when facing the anomalous form of Emperor beside 'Snow White'. Even so, she neither feared nor backed down.

Oooooooo!

The firmament distorted as the 'World Serpent' let out a cry. A howl that seemed somehow sorrowful rather than threatening.

[Great Disaster, 'Serpent Who Remembers the End and Beginning of the World' warns you.]

Strangely, the serpent didn't even seem to show hostility toward her. But this was a battle established regardless of malice. For one was a disaster born to destroy the world, and the other was a human of a world that would be destroyed if she did not stop it.

Kugugugugu.

As if warning that further approach would not be forgiven, two gigantic pupils rose in the distant firmament. Jung Heewon gripped her sword. Drawing in a deep breath, all sword paths of [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship] gathered at the tips of her fingers.

"I don't lose to monsters."

No matter how much the opponent was a 'disaster', as long as that existence was a 'monster', she would not be defeated.

[Exclusive attribute, 'Judge of Destruction' is activated!]

The strongest judge attribute—'Judge of Destruction' finally radiated light against the Great Disaster. Activating [Red Phoenix Shunpo], Jung Heewon closed the distance in an instant and advanced toward the 'World Serpent'.

Just as she was about to plunge a single strike of Breaking the Sky Sword path into that colossal hide—

【...Heewon unnie?】

Beyond the shadow of the World Serpent, someone called her.

---

...Unnie?

At the voice faintly heard, Jung Heewon frowned.

「Is it an illusion? I definitely heard something like a girl's voice just now.」

Moreover, that voice was something she had heard before. While the senses of a Transcendent differentiated time into extreme fractions, Jung Heewon gripped her sword even tighter. As expected, she must have misheard. Above all, there was no way this 'Great Disaster' could speak.

Kagagagak!

Her 'Mikazuki Munechika' struck the hide of the World Serpent and bounced straight off. Formidable recoil slammed into her grip. Jung Heewon frowned slightly.

'Is this not enough?'

Perhaps it was only natural. According to myth, the 'World Serpent' was an entity capable of crushing the entire space-time of this world.

'Once more.'

Jung Heewon concentrated the stories throughout her entire body. The history she had built upright was dwelling in her sword. Running atop the serpent's body, Jung Heewon slashed her sword. Cutting again and again, she ran across the abnormally gigantic 'World Serpent'.

Oooooooo!

As if such sword strikes were nowhere near enough, the body of the 'World Serpent' vibrated violently. The sword blade shook precariously as if about to snap at any second. The more it did, the tighter Jung Heewon gripped the hilt.

[Item, 'Mikazuki Munechika' resonates with you!]

Her sword was an A-grade item obtained from the Theater Dungeon in the early stages of the scenarios. It was a replica of a Star Relic.

「"Why do you insist on such an old sword? It's not even genuine in the first place."」

Those who saw her sword used to ask that.

「"I'd rather forge you a new sword."」

There were blacksmiths who offered to make her a new sword.

「"It is a sword that can no longer be used. Must you insist on using this sword?"」

However, she had never once changed her sword until now.

「"Just repair it somehow. This is enough for me."」

When roaming the scenarios, when walking through the Fear Realm, and when traveling through the New Murim District—she was always together with this sword.

「While holding and swinging this sword, she felt as if she was protecting Kim Dokja.」

A sword that had broken several times while coming all the way here.

「Even if far away, even if unable to see in the end, even if this conviction cannot be completed.」

Stories were condensing at the tip of Jung Heewon's sword.

「Until the moment she drew her last breath, she would not let go of this sword from her hand.」

Holding dazzling rays of light, the sword sliced through the serpent's hide following her will.

Formless Sword Qi (無形劍氣).

Jung Heewon's specialty that elevated her to a new Transcendent realm. A baptism of invisible sword qi began to lacerate the World Serpent.

Tzztzztzz!

And for the first time, a crack appeared in the hide of the 'World Serpent'. Jung Heewon did not miss that gap and continued her sword strikes.

Intent-Formed Sword (意形劍).

The Transcendent realm capable of finally severing even one's own [Fate].

「Incarnation Jung Heewon shall kill the existence she most wanted to protect.」

Her sword stance, tempered to sever that [Fate], transformed into twelve translucent formless swords. The supreme realm called 'Telekinetic Sword Control' by martial artists was at last realized within the scenario.

Obeying her will, the twelve formless swords struck a single concentrated point on the World Serpent. One blade, two blades, three blades. Finally, at the spot struck by all twelve formless swords, the trajectory of the Intent-Formed Sword was added.

Pushushushut!

And at last, the hide of the 'World Serpent' was sliced off. Stories reminiscent of thick poisonous mist burst like fireworks. Jung Heewon held her breath and retreated. Yet she could not control even the poisonous mist seeping into her skin.

[The protection of Constellation, 'Eight-Headed Lord' is with you!]

Just in time, the story of Yamata no Orochi she possessed activated. As Orochi's story repelled the encroaching poisonous fog, her breathing became much easier.

'I can do this.'

No matter how great a disaster, in the end, if she cut and cut again, it would eventually die. Furthermore, she had already killed a 'World Serpent' in the 'Hall'. Even though what she killed was not the genuine 'World Serpent', but 'Yamata no Orochi' who had descended as a degraded version.

[The protection of stories dwells within you!]

Jung Heewon raised her Formless Sword Qi once more and cut into the World Serpent.

Tzztzztzz.

Unable to withstand her stories, 'Mikazuki Munechika' let out a precarious sword ring.

「"You've been using this until now?"」

Kim Dokja, whom she met again after so long, looked at her sword and fell into deep silence for a while. He peered into that blade for a long time. Just from him gazing at that sword, Jung Heewon felt as if he recognized her history. As if he understood how she had fought, and for what purpose she had come all the way here.

「"Thank you, Heewon-ssi."」

Kim Dokja dripped a few drops of his own story onto her sword. Then, her sword, which had been enhanced with D-Coins, mixed with Kim Dokja's story and underwent repeated evolution.

[Item, 'Mikazuki Munechika' transcends its own limits!]

Her sword, born as a replica. That sword, reinforced once again by Kim Dokja's story, exceeded its limits to realize her story.

「"Do you know how large a trajectory a human must draw to cut down the sky?"」

Once, her master, the Breaking the Sky Sword Saint, had asked such a question.

「"I have no idea."」

It was too difficult a question for Jung Heewon. Cutting the sky. In the first place, humans didn't even know from where to where the sky extended. That was why Jung Heewon's answer was simple.

「"Wouldn't it work if I just cut as long an area as possible?"」

That answer was certainly not what her master wanted. Even so, she had walked the path of the sword faithful to that answer until now.

「To humans, the sky is the size of the universe they can perceive.」

Even if she could not cut down all the sky, what if she drew a trajectory to slaughter all of the sky visible to her eyes?

Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship (破天劍道). Secret Technique (秘傳奧義). Breaking the Sky Sword Lightning began to grow from her deep blue sword tip. The sword lightning that grew and grew soon exceeded one hundred meters, then two hundred meters. A sword aura easily surpassing several hundred meters. As if to sever the entire horizon, Jung Heewon lifted that heavy history. And—

Single Sword Cleaving the Sky (一劍劈天). She brought down her sword.

Kwakwakwakwa!

Along with a terrifying detonation, stories of the disaster sprayed in all directions. Looking at the haze of stories, Jung Heewon believed that this time she had landed a proper blow.

And in that instant, Jung Heewon vaguely sensed the entirety of the 'World Serpent' extending beyond this planet.

「A single cosmic entity was present there.」

With a stomach-churning shock, Jung Heewon staggered backward.

「For that serpent encircled the world and bit its own tail once again.」

A size more than enough to fully wrap around an entire planet. Exactly how massive that was, Jung Heewon had not been able to properly gauge until now. Only after slicing down all the surrounding sky could Jung Heewon vaguely perceive the scale of this disaster. A serpent embracing this world in its coils.

Was it an illusion? The disaster she glimpsed was a form closer to a dragon rather than a serpent.

「Could that be called a 'monster'?」

She had killed countless monsters until now, but she had never faced such an existence before.

It was then that a strange sensation brushed down her spine.

[Exclusive skill, 'Hour of Judgment' is pending activation.]

'Hour of Judgment' was still not activating. Why? She had clearly activated her exclusive attribute earlier. Jung Heewon activated the skill again.

[Exclusive skill, 'Hour of Judgment' is activated!]

However, the skill was not immediately activated. A belated memory surfaced.

「Her 'Hour of Judgment' activates only when at least one Constellation shares the Probability.」

She had fought relying solely on Transcendent abilities for so long that she had forgotten the activation condition of this skill. To make matters worse, with the Constellations in the channel all dead, she hadn't had the chance to use this skill for quite a while.

If Kim Dokja were here, he would have exercised the authority of 'Acting Constellation' to support her, but Kim Dokja was still in a deep sleep. Fortunately, she had a star that could assist the activation of this skill right now.

"Demon-like Judge of Fire!"

Uriel of the 1,864th round.

[Constellation, 'Demon-like Judge of Fire' is greatly agitated.]

Yet why? Instead of agreeing to the activation of [Hour of Judgment], Uriel was staring up into the air as if dazed.

"Uriel?"

Was she overwhelmed by the size of the World Serpent? The archangel gave no answer to her call.

It was then that a voice was heard once again from beyond the distant firmament.

【Heewon unnie... you're Heewon unnie, right?】

A girl's voice that had no reason to be heard in a place like this. Thinking it might be the sophisticated bewitchment of an Outer God, Jung Heewon shook her head.

【See, I told you it's Heewon unnie!】

【It's really Heewon noona?】

Subsequently, a boy's voice was heard as well. Jung Heewon could not understand. Why on earth were the voices of a boy and a girl coming from inside this terrible World Serpent?

【Did noona also cross over to this world?】

【I think so? I can feel Uriel unnie too.】

Listening to the chattering voices of the two, Jung Heewon felt dizzy. What confused her even more was the deep warmth contained in their voices.

【Heewon unnie!】

The voice of someone deeply cherishing another.

【Please answer! It's unnie, right?】

Jung Heewon stiffened her expression and replied in a harsh voice.

"I don't know who you are."

【What are you talking about? Unnie, didn't you cross over to this worldline? When we parted at the portal back then—】

Only then did the pieces of the puzzle come together in her head.

"I am not the Jung Heewon you are looking for."

Jung Heewon gripped her hilt and spoke.

"I am."

It didn't matter even if the archangel didn't help. She didn't know who they were, but what she had to do was clear.

"The Mad Sword Emperor who will kill you."

She swung her sword. At the Formless Sword Qi she unleashed, the sound of the 'World Serpent's' hide peeling off was heard. Along with the sensation of the World Serpent's massive body writhing, true words were heard from atop the serpent.

【She's right. She's not the Heewon noona we know.】

At the same time, the movement of the 'World Serpent' began to change. As if stopping it, the girl's voice was heard.

【Lee Gilyoung, don't. That unnie is Heewon unnie too.】

【What are you talking about? We have to do this.】

Jung Heewon reflexively retreated several steps.

【You saw it too. How the end of this world turns out. This is the only way to reach the conclusion.】

Unusual stories were flowing from the World Serpent's entire body.

【Chimera Dragon.】

And in the next moment, Jung Heewon collapsed on the spot feeling a headache as if her skull was splitting.

「The World Serpent was crying.」

It was vomiting out a profoundly deep cry containing the stories they had lived through.

「A distant story that had seen two 'ends' was present there.」

The story of those who fought solely to reclaim a single existence. Under the overwhelming pressure of stories flooding in as a whole, Jung Heewon felt as if her mind would shatter.

「"Dokja ahjussi!"」

「"Dokja hyung!"」

The universe they had fought through to reclaim one person. That universe seemed to be speaking to her.

「This is not a 'stage' someone like you can interfere with.」

Noticing her condition, the boy spoke.

【Noona, just stay still. If you faint for a little while, everything will be over.】

Clutching her bursting heart, Jung Heewon resisted.

"Cut the... bullshit."

The history before her eyes was forcefully crushing her. As if the scenarios she experienced were nothing. As if only the story they lived was the sole existence in all this universe.

'I too—'

Jung Heewon wanted to say it. She understood what kind of tragedy they had experienced. But—

With a crushing sound, unable to bear the pressure, one of her knees broke. Amidst her crumbling vision, Jung Heewon looked up at the World Serpent.

She wanted to reach them. She wanted to prove it. That she was just as desperate as they were. That her desire to protect someone fell short to no one.

[Story, 'Regret, Ruin, Obsession' continues its storytelling.]

Yet she possessed no story to slay such a mythical existence, nor a stage to borrow. All she possessed was a single line of history lived relying solely on a single sword.

「If only I had another history as well.」

She was envious. Envious of the history of other worldlines, and envious of the tragedies they had experienced.

'Even if just once.'

She also wanted to reach that story. She wanted to surpass that world blanketed in stories.

「At that moment, her history began to move.」

A breeze blew in from somewhere.

「With a mere single sentence.」

Her collapsed vision began to rise again. Jung Heewon realized that someone was supporting her.

"Yoosung-ah, Gilyoung-ah."

At first, she wondered if it was Kim Dokja. But he was not Kim Dokja.

"Heewon-ssi is not someone who should be treated like that by you two."

A gentle and firm voice. A voice she also knew. Tall stature and strong muscles. The man who stood her back up on her feet stepped in front of her and spoke.

"Do not kneel. Even if you are not the 'Heewon-ssi' I know—"

A back reminiscent of a sturdy shield.

"You too are 'Jung Heewon', are you not?"

Slowly turning his head, the man looked at her. It was a face she knew.

"This is the second time seeing you in person."

Looking at her with somewhat sorrowful eyes, a story vast as a great mountain flowed from the man's entire body.

「He was the shield who protected Kim Dokja closer than anyone else.」

As if introducing himself to someone he was meeting for the first time, the man looked forward again and spoke.

"Former member of <Kim Dokja Company>. Special Monster Warfare Command—Colonel..."

He was about to say his name, but closed his mouth as if swallowing something deep. Subsequently, silver armor covered the man's entire body. Covered in radiant armor, the man stood by her side looking up at the disaster.

"From now on, we shall commence the subjugation of the 'World Serpent'."

1065 Episode 67. The World Serpent (3)

---

Jung Heewon stared blankly at the man's side profile.

"You are—"

Having possessed the flesh of the 1,864th round in the world of the 'Third Kim Dokja', Jung Heewon had met him before.

「His name was 'Lee Hyunsung'. The 'Lee Hyunsung of the 1,864th round'.」

There were things she remembered vividly. Things like the somewhat burdensome goodwill and the warm gaze. But the emotion felt from him right now was not the warmth of back then.

「The man standing by her side right now stood here solely to protect a single person.」

From a person who has built an upright history, their sincerity is vividly felt even without words. This man also belonged to that kind.

"I roughly heard the story from Dokja-ssi."

"Dokja-ssi?"

Only upon seeing Lee Hyunsung nodding faintly did Jung Heewon realize that he had come here under Kim Dokja's secret order. Kim Dokja probably knew things would turn out like this.

"Why did he send you? You're not very strong."

"Pardon?"

"I saw everything back then. You passed out limp after using just a bit of strength."

Jung Heewon had already seen Lee Hyunsung fight in the world of the 'Third Kim Dokja'. In truth, he had been beaten up by ordinary men in suits there and lost consciousness.

"That was... that world was a place where I couldn't exert my strength."

Lee Hyunsung abruptly coughed dryly and pointed at his forearm. His forearm, glowing silver, certainly looked thicker than back then. Glaring intently at those muscles, Jung Heewon spoke.

"Aren't those balloon muscles?"

"Pardon? No, they aren't! From now on, I will prove—"

"In this world, such bulky muscles aren't needed. Lean muscles are far more advantageous. It's also more convenient to utilize stories or skills. And simple differences in strength can be resolved in many other ways."

Every time Jung Heewon said a word, Lee Hyunsung's neck retracted like a turtle's.

"Everything Heewon-ssi said is correct, but even so—"

"I'm grateful you came to help, but just stay back. You'll only get in the way."

"No, wait..."

The moment the flustered Lee Hyunsung tried to stop Jung Heewon as she stepped forward, a distant true voice resonated from the head of the 'World Serpent'.

【Hyunsungie hyung?】

Jung Heewon and Lee Hyunsung raised their heads at the same time.

【It's Hyunsungie hyung, right!】

【Hyunsung ahjussi!】

Voices that seemed to hold the emotion called yearning deep in the mouth, rolling it on the tip of the tongue over and over again. Just by hearing those voices, Jung Heewon could realize what kind of meaning this man held to their owners.

Lee Hyunsung drew in a deep breath along with a low sigh, then slowly blinked his eyes. Accompanied by a pitch-black glint in his eyes, a sound like iron forged in deep darkness came from his voice.

【Yes, it is me.】

Startled, Jung Heewon looked back at him. The man's expression, which had felt purely naive until just now, had vanished somewhere, replaced by the face of an Outer God who had weathered a long tragedy.

【Please step back. I will handle those children.】

The overwhelming status radiating from his entire body proved the years he had lived and his martial prowess. Even so, Jung Heewon did not back down.

"This isn't a stage for you to step forward."

Rather, that appearance of his, and the joy dwelling in those voices, stirred opposition within her.

【No, this is a stage I must take responsibility for.】

"What are you?"

【The person responsible for all these tragedies.】

The emotion contained in that grave voice was undoubtedly true. But truth could not always persuade everyone.

"Do you think you're any different from that disaster?"

At Jung Heewon's sharp voice, Lee Hyunsung looked back at her once more.

"What do you know about this world's stories?"

Jung Heewon knew she shouldn't say that. She too was feeling the poignant stories emanating from the man before her eyes. She could also gauge to some degree how terrible a life he had endured to reach this place.

"Without even knowing what kind of history I lived here, or what kind of life I lived."

Yet even so, she could not help but speak like that. Perhaps it was because she was frustrated. Because in the most important scenario, facing an insurmountable obstacle that could not possibly be overcome with her power made her so immensely frustrated.

"Without even knowing properly what happened, doing whatever you want—"

【Yes, I do not know.】

Lee Hyunsung nodded obediently.

【Because I do not know, I came here wanting to understand even a little.】

He advanced forward like a great mountain. With momentum that seemed unyielding to anything, he stood right before the World Serpent.

【Step down, children. I do not wish to fight.】

Before his ringing true voice, the disaster fell silent for a moment. A feeling as if the air was churning heavily. Soon, an answer returned from the top of the World Serpent.

【Why are you trying to stop us?】

A boy's voice that sounded somewhat wronged.

【Hyung knows too, doesn't he? This worldline was originally fated to perish. This place is—】

The 41st round was a world whose outcome was already determined. Words she had heard several times from various people already. The moment Jung Heewon bit her lower lip hard and was about to say something.

【That is not important.】

With a somewhat surprised expression, Jung Heewon looked at Lee Hyunsung.

【Dokja-ssi asked me, so I merely follow his wish. Therefore, this time, you two must give up.】

At his calm warning, the body of the 'World Serpent' trembled faintly. A vibration containing deep sorrow. As if measuring Lee Hyunsung's sincerity, the disaster silently gazed down at him from a dizzying height, then asked back.

【And if we don't give up?】

Lee Hyunsung silently raised both hands. Jung Heewon was purely astonished by that action. He had merely raised his hands, yet there was a force as if an entire mountain range were moving.

【Ah...】

Did she realize the man was serious? The girl groaned as if sighing. Subsequently, the boy sharply asked back.

【Aren't you underestimating us too much?】

The colossal body of the World Serpent vibrated once more. Beyond that faint tremor, the boy's agitated voice was heard.

【No matter how strong hyung is, do you think you can stop us alone?】

At first, she thought the color of the sky had reversed. The pitch-black sky turning deep bluish-green. But looking closely, it was not merely the sky being colored.

「The sky was melting entirely.」

Would it look like that if a story of poison were condensed to its limit? The pitch-black night sky was melting and flowing down from the poison. Soon, the speed at which the sky melted gradually accelerated. Jung Heewon instinctively perceived it. That poison could not be withstood.

A wave of poison on a different dimension from the poisonous fog Yamata no Orochi had used poured over their heads, melting the world. In an instant, all sorts of simulations ran through her mind.

「What if I use Intent-Formed Sword?」

「What if I counter with Breaking the Sky Meteor Strike?」

「What if I cleave the sky once more with [Single Sword Cleaving the Sky]?」

Yet no matter what she did, it didn't seem possible to cut through that tidal wave of poison surging down after melting the entire firmament.

【Lee Gilyoung! Don't!】

The girl's breathless cry. But the tidal wave of poison had already surged to several tens of meters above. Finally, the moment the resolved Jung Heewon gripped her sword hilt, Lee Hyunsung quietly held her back with his right hand. And without any change in expression, he serenely spread his left palm toward the firmament.

「Wall of Steel.」

A translucent curtain of steel manifested around him and her. Jung Heewon was flustered. Normally, she would have shouted that this was not an attack that could be blocked by such a barrier. But the moment she confirmed the barrier's durability, Jung Heewon was startled out of her wits.

「Jung Heewon had never seen a story metal of such immense hardness.」

Subsequently, the tidal wave of poison poured over their heads. Yet even the poison that melted the sky could not melt the man's steel wall. A story that inspired overwhelming awe, making one feel as if nothing in this world could break the protective wall created by this man.

Just how much history did this man endure to obtain this story?

「"Excuse me for a moment."」

A wall where faint warmth lingered. What she could read was merely the remnants of the story dimly left on this wall. Standing tall atop those remnants, the man answered toward the firmament.

【It seems it is not me, but you who are underestimating.】

As the movement of the poison pouring from midair grew sluggish, Lee Hyunsung dispelled the barrier while simultaneously clapping his hands loudly. A massive gale was generated by the clap, completely scattering all the remaining poisonous fog in the area. Then, a voice was heard from above once again.

【We went easy on you this time! No matter if you're hyung, if you interfere any further —】

Instead of listening to those words, Lee Hyunsung took a stride forward and spoke.

【Stand down.】

With that, both of Lee Hyunsung's hands made contact with the outer hide of the World Serpent. In ordinary circumstances, just because both hands touched it didn't mean anything could be done. For the 'World Serpent' was large enough to wrap around an entire planet. But the one who grasped that serpent in his hands this time was none other than 'Lee Hyunsung'. He was the Steel Sword Emperor, the incarnation of the 'Master of Steel'. The sturdiest shield of <Kim Dokja Company>. And this was the first 'stigma' he had ever learned—

「Great Mountain Push.」

Noticing Lee Hyunsung's intention, the boy shouted from midair.

【No matter how strong hyung is, with that technique—】

The boy's voice vanished along with the vibration that spread immediately after.

「The entire world was trembling.」

[Great Mountain Push]. Initially a stigma that had only amounted to prying open locked subway doors.

「Across the 1,864th round and the 1,865th round, Lee Hyunsung had relentlessly trained this stigma.」

What did it mean to 'push'? Pushing and pushing again, Lee Hyunsung thought about what 'pushing' was.

「To push is, at the same time, to be pushed by it.」

As he firmly planted both legs into the ground, his stories churned.

「To push is to invade another existence's space, and through the felt resistance, to confirm that existence once more.」

Along with Lee Hyunsung's battle cry, the earth, the sky, and the surrounding universe were shaking violently.

「And so, 'to push' is.」

As if pushing the entire 'frame' of the space-time to which a matter belonged, the universe was being pushed away by Lee Hyunsung's strength.

「The act of completely colliding the history one has lived against the opponent.」

The World Serpent that wrapped around the world of the scenario writhed in agony.

Kugugugugu.

The history a man had collided with was pushing back a single ruin.

【If you do not give up.】

Lee Hyunsung's body, which had gradually grown in volume, looked as if he had lifted the 'World Serpent' in its entirety. He added with a true voice carrying terrifying ambition.

【I could throw you to the edge of the universe just like this.】

No one could deny that those words were the truth. That was how strong Lee Hyunsung was, and he possessed the power to realize his story.

It was then that a clicking sound was heard from somewhere.

【Load.】

A voice carrying a bone-chilling coolness.

【Fire.】

Subsequently, along with an explosion that blanketed the earth, a volley of fire poured toward Lee Hyunsung and Jung Heewon.

「Since when had it been there? A single battleship was floating in that place.」

The pale dust cleared, revealing the steel barrier Lee Hyunsung had created. Even though it was a light warning shot, a faint hairline crack had formed on the exterior of the barrier. It meant the existence that had poured out the attack just now was an Outer God possessing an equally powerful status.

【I knew this would happen.】

A voice carrying a sense of déjà vu. Jung Heewon felt her hands trembling. That 'World Serpent', and the Lee Hyunsung beside her. At her current level, they were opponents too daunting to handle. Yet another monster on that level had appeared before her eyes.

【I told you, didn't I? That in the end, it might turn out like this.】

Taking the melted sky as an ocean, a colossal battleship was floating as if suspended. Atop that battleship was a woman radiating an immense status. A ponytail fluttering pitch-black in the wind. Jung Heewon's eyes widened.

【Jihye-ya. Stand down. This time, even I cannot concede.】

When Lee Hyunsung warned first, Lee Jihye frowned.

【Hyunsung ahjussi. We have a conclusion we want.】

Spitting out the bubble gum she had been chewing, Lee Jihye spoke.

【And ahjussi has no right to stop us. Because—】

It was an ancient resentment. As if unraveling the end of long-harbored emotions, Lee Jihye, who had now grown from a girl into a warrior, grasped her Twin Dragon Swords.

【Because at the end of that story, you chose a 'conclusion' different from ours.】

---

【Jihye-ya.】

Lee Hyunsung looked up at Lee Jihye with a hardened expression. In the eyes of the girl who had now become an adult, a cold resolve dwelled.

【I did not come to fight.】

【You came to stop us anyway. Then you should've been prepared to fight.】

Lee Jihye finished speaking with a frigid expression and promptly extended her right hand. At that, the cannons of her battleship reminiscent of a turtle ship—Turtle Dragon—aimed at the ground all at once.

【I'm not joking, ahjussi. If you don't back down now, I won't go easy on you.】

【Jihye-ya, I—】

【Load.】

The moment Lee Jihye's hand was about to move downward once more, a shadow wavering beside Lee Hyunsung entered her field of vision. Accompanied by slowly dilating pupils, Lee Jihye's voice trembled faintly.

【Heewon unnie?】

Jung Heewon, who had been awkwardly gripping her sword hilt beside Lee Hyunsung, also looked at her. The moment the two gazes met, memories rose.

「"Unnie!"」

Jung Heewon remembered Lee Jihye. Because in this world, she had fought alongside Lee Jihye several times. Yet the memories that surfaced were not just one.

「"Uh..... I'm a bit weak to cool unnies."」

Along with sparks of tzztzztzz, memories from a time she had never lived rose in her mind. Jung Heewon realized that this was a memory of the 1,864th round. A faintly welling dizziness and an emotion of yearning that densely filled her heart. Even though they were not her own emotions, Jung Heewon stumbled for a moment, intoxicated by that story.

After gazing at Jung Heewon for a moment, Lee Jihye slowly turned her head and asked.

【Doesn't seem to be the unnie I know. Where is Heewon unnie?】

Just by looking past Jung Heewon, Lee Jihye seemed to have noticed that she was not the Jung Heewon she remembered.

【Unnie chose that conclusion together with ahjussi, didn't she? So why is ahjussi alone? Where's unnie?】

【Heewon-ssi is.....】

【Well, whatever. It doesn't matter. Seems unnie had a bit of conscience left at least.】

At Lee Jihye's sharp tone, Lee Hyunsung let out a soft sigh.

「He knew that this was not Lee Jihye's true feelings.」

Though Lee Jihye was sometimes aggressive, she was not someone who would say such words to her companions. If she gave such a retort, there was only one reason.

【Go back even now. It is still not too late.】

No one here wanted to point swords at each other. They were once companions, and people who wanted to see the end of the same story. Even though the conclusion they chose was different, perhaps even that conclusion ultimately originated from their feelings toward a single person.

[The influence of Giant Story, 'Ragnarok' grows stronger.]

Along with the churning of the Giant Story, flames flickered over Lee Jihye's eyes. Lee Jihye was not a Great Disaster like the 'World Serpent', but she had been summoned as a kind of guardian protecting that serpent.

「Giant of the Sea, Aegir.」

As her Twin Dragon Swords pointed to the ground, an ocean began to churn above the melted sky.

【Final warning. If you don't go back—】

The next moment, Jung Heewon's figure vanished. [Red Phoenix Shunpo] narrowing the distance in an instant. Startled, Lee Jihye countered with [Ghost Walk].

Accompanied by a sharp screeching friction, the two swords let out a violent cry. A strong story pressure felt in her grip. Lee Jihye opened her mouth in a voice mixed with pure admiration.

【What's this? How did you train to this extent in a mere 41st round?】

"A mere 41st round. I really want to stop hearing that."

【Why? I only said the truth.】

Instead of answering, Jung Heewon swung her sword. Watching that sword trajectory, Lee Jihye activated a skill as if intrigued.

[Ghost Slayer].

Brilliant ghostly flames bloomed in Lee Jihye's pupils. Jung Heewon countered with the same [Ghost Slayer]. If Lee Jihye's [Ghost Slayer] was a skill trained to its limit, Jung Heewon's [Ghost Slayer] was slightly different. Even if its proficiency fell short, it was because she had the attribute effect of 'Butcher of Madness'.

Kagagagak!

Receiving the synergy of the attribute effect, Jung Heewon's physical capabilities were on par with Lee Jihye's for a moment. After pure sword strikes collided several times, the first to step back was Lee Jihye.

【You wield a sword this well? In a mere 41st round?】

Subsequently, Lee Jihye's Twin Dragon Swords changed their position. Lee Hyunsung, as well as Shin Yoosung and Lee Gilyoung watching the fierce battle from the firmament, recognized that technique of Lee Jihye's.

「Instant Kill (瞬殺)」

Lee Jihye's fatal technique that sent the heads of even the stars in that sky flying in a single strike.

【Jihye-ya! No!】

When Lee Hyunsung's roar echoed, her Twin Dragon Swords had already approached Jung Heewon's throat. A strike that could not be handled with reflexes. Almost instinctively, Jung Heewon swung her sword.

「Formless Sword Qi.」

Dozens of strands of Formless Sword Qi unleashed from her entire body subtly bent the sword tip of Instant Kill. Subsequently, her reflexes, reacting a beat late, barely dragged her body out from the domain of Instant Kill.

Spat.

Seeing Jung Heewon dodge the attack by a split-second interval, a smile bloomed on Lee Jihye's lips.

【You dodged it? Then how about this?】

A chain of strikes of [Instant Kill] unfolded. A barrage of blows that could not be dodged by mere luck alone. Gritting her teeth, Jung Heewon unleashed Formless Sword Qi to deflect the trajectory of [Instant Kill] somehow. Realizing the situation was turning urgent, as Lee Hyunsung ran over, Lee Jihye spread her left hand.

【Fire.】

At the bombardment pouring from the battleship, Lee Hyunsung could not dare approach, shouting Lee Jihye's name.

「This was the power of the 'Monarch of the Great Sea' who had seen the conclusion twice.」

The martial power to pin down Lee Hyunsung with bombardment and overwhelm the 41st round's Jung Heewon, who could compete with a Myth-grade Constellation.

【Not bad, 41st round's Heewon unnie.】

Yet the 41st round's Jung Heewon did not collapse easily either. She had a reason why she must not collapse. As if already knowing that reason, Lee Jihye changed her stance once more.

[Giant Story, 'Next City' begins its storytelling.]

The Giant Story possessed by Lee Jihye moved.

【Let's see you take this too.】

Blessed by the 'Giant Story', the cannon barrels of Turtle Dragon began to glow red.

【Unnie! No!】

Belatedly, Shin Yoosung moved the 'World Serpent'.

[Giant Story, 'Ragnarok' continues its storytelling.]

However, bound by the Giant Story, the 'World Serpent' rejected her control. Not missing that opening, Lee Jihye's Twin Dragon Swords pointed at Jung Heewon.

【Fire.】

Pouring bombardment. In the distance, Lee Hyunsung, having used Steel Transformation, was rushing over, but the bombardment had already arrived right before Jung Heewon's eyes.

Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship. Secret Absolute Technique. Single Sword Cleaving the Sky.

Heavy sword gang cleaved the sky. Bombardment exploded like fireworks in the firmament. Yet even with the Secret Absolute Technique containing all her power, she could not block that bombardment. The sound of blood splashing and bones breaking. In an instant, her vision wavered, and one of Jung Heewon's knees buckled under the bombardment.

【Fire.】

As if attempting to utterly break Jung Heewon's will, Lee Jihye's second bombardment poured down. Jung Heewon unleashed Single Sword Cleaving the Sky once again. The sword gang had noticeably decreased in size. More than half of the bombardment was offset by the sword gang, but the remaining bombardment grazed past Jung Heewon's arms and legs.

"What is so proud about experiencing the scenarios twice?"

One step. And then another step. Jung Heewon continued to advance through the artillery fire.

"So what did you gain after seeing the end twice?"

As another round of bombardment passed, Jung Heewon noticed that sensation had vanished from her left shoulder.

【Fire.】

The third bombardment began. Now, the sword gang of Single Sword Cleaving the Sky did not even reach a few meters. Even so, her sword gang shone brightly amidst the thick artillery fire. In a voice as vivid as that sword gang, Jung Heewon spoke.

"All you're doing is coming all the way here to destroy someone else's worldline."

Was it because of the resentment dwelling in that vividness? In a somewhat agitated voice, Lee Jihye pushed back.

【You cannot speak so carelessly. We—】

Jung Heewon's other knee, which had been barely enduring, buckled as well.

【We merely—】

Toward Jung Heewon collapsing to the ground, Lee Jihye's final bombardment flew in.

【Unnie! No!】

Along with Shin Yoosung's voice, the 'World Serpent' burst into a cry. With an expression of 'ah', Lee Jihye hurriedly withdrew the Giant Story. But some of the bombardment had already reached Jung Heewon's proximity. Arriving at a razor-thin timing, Lee Hyunsung deployed Steel Transformation to take the brunt of the shelling.

Kugugugugu!

The moment Lee Jihye, barely catching her breath, was about to open her mouth again.

Crash!

A deafening roar that tore the eardrums was heard from behind. Looking back, explosive smoke was soaring from Lee Jihye's Turtle Dragon that had been dominating the firmament. It was not something Lee Hyunsung or Shin Yoosung had done. Shells flying from somewhere. Someone was pouring artillery fire toward Turtle Dragon.

【What bastard—】

"Unnie!"

A voice full of déjà vu heard from somewhere. Hurriedly swinging her Twin Dragon Swords to deflect the incoming artillery shells, Lee Jihye looked in that direction.

Kwakwakwakwakwa!

Though not as powerful as that of 'Turtle Dragon', it was nevertheless a bombardment of a sufficiently bothersome degree. Frowning, Lee Jihye released her status to clear the dust, and beyond the undulating night sky, she saw a fleet aimed toward this direction.

「There was a 'Ghost Fleet (幽靈艦隊)'.」

Lee Jihye's eyes slowly widened. Without a doubt, the Ghost Fleet. But it was not her Ghost Fleet.

「The Ghost Fleet of the 41st round.」

In the distant sky, a single battleship appearing in midair was seen dropping off two incarnations before vanishing. Familiar faces disembarking from the ship were running toward Jung Heewon.

"Unnie! We're here!"

「The 41st round's Lee Jihye and the 41st round's Shin Yoosung were there.」

Hurriedly supporting Jung Heewon, the two could be seen glaring this way and shouting.

"Did that person make unnie like this? I'll teach her a—"

The 41st round's Lee Jihye, who had not yet seen the end of the scenarios, glared this way with smoldering eyes. And a moment later, bewilderment surfaced in her pupils.

"Uh?"

Did she see the woman with a face identical to her own? The 41st round's Lee Jihye blankly opened her mouth.

Receiving that still-innocent gaze, the 1,864th round's Lee Jihye—the 'Monarch of the Great Sea'—tightly shut her eyes.

「In the ending shown by 'Snowfield Kim Dokja', there was no story like this.」

【That ahjussi really is cruel. Isn't he?】

The one who sent the 41st round's Lee Jihye and Shin Yoosung here was probably that 'Kim Dokja'. The Kim Dokja who had possessed Cheon Inho's face and briefly visited their world.

Opening her eyes again, she saw the figures of the 41st round's Lee Jihye, Shin Yoosung, and Jung Heewon still looking this way.

「Once, she was in that place. Together with companions.」

Memories surged like waves. The Great Disasters from the '999th round' that had appeared as the end of the world. To block them, she too had stood in that spot.

「And now, she had become a disaster raiding a worldline.」

Lee Jihye looked down at her palms. Atop those palms, the stories she had plundered to come all the way here opened their mouths as if shrieking.

「Outer God (外神).」

The term referring to evil gods existing outside the scenarios, plundering the stories of those who live the scenarios. Only then did Lee Jihye realize what she had become.

【Jihye-ya.】

Lee Hyunsung, who had raised his body from amidst the shelling, spoke.

【Our story already ended long ago.】

She had known that kind of thing from the start. And it was not words she wanted to hear from Lee Hyunsung's mouth.

【I know that too.】

Perhaps the 41st round's Jung Heewon was right. She was merely a 'disaster' to this worldline. Whatever circumstances she had, whatever tragedy she had experienced, from the perspective of this world, it was none of their concern.

【But Dokja ahjussi said it.】

Even so, she had come all the way here.

That story written by Han Sooyoung, lived by Yoo Joonghyuk, and read by Kim Dokja—she too had read it as she came here.

【That all we have to do is read it 'again'. If you read it again and again, sometimes the story changes.】

Slowly curling her hands into fists, Lee Jihye spoke.

【So there is only one way for you all to win in this fight.】

She was a disaster of this worldline. Her purpose was to destroy this world and seize the 'conclusion' granted to it.

【Kill me, and try to take this story from me.】

1067 Episode 67. The World Serpent (5)

This world is composed of Kim Dokja's lies.

「"You want me to drink this tea?"」

When she first heard that proposal from 'Snowfield Kim Dokja', Lee Jihye had asked sharply.

「"What on earth is your intention? Putting us in coffins, and what is this tea?"」

Probably not only her, but most of <Kim Dokja Company> would have felt similar emotions. However, even if feeling the same emotion, they would have all shown different reactions. Some would have gotten angry at such a Kim Dokja, and others would have silently watched him.

And some,

「"There, satisfied?"」

Would have drunk the tea in a single gulp, like her.

「"What happens to me now? Do I die?"」

To Lee Jihye asking with a smile, Snowfield Kim Dokja shook his head.

「"It's just coarse green tea that I like."」

「"What?"」

「"I offered it so you could rest a bit."」

The moment she heard those words, Lee Jihye was swept by a deep sense of lethargy and collapsed onto the chair.

「"You know, don't you? Even if ahjussi put something in this tea, we'd have no choice but to drink it."」

Kim Dokja did not answer. Even that silence was quintessentially Kim Dokja.

「"Ahjussi really is 'the Kim Dokja from back then', right?"」

The Kim Dokja from back then. The '49% Kim Dokja' who lived in the world after the conclusion together with them, even if only briefly. Snowfield Kim Dokja answered.

「"A part of me is."」

An ambiguous answer as always. Narrowing her eyes, Lee Jihye asked.

「"What on earth do you want, ahjussi?"」

「"You have already seen the conclusion I want."」

Startled by those words, Lee Jihye's hand holding the teacup trembled faintly.

「"Is that really the 'conclusion'?"」

Perhaps because she had seen that conclusion, she was here now. Clinging to a thread of hope at that single scene. Yet Kim Dokja, who had handed her that thread of hope, wore a rather frigid expression.

「"Yes. You will eventually reach that story."」

The inside of the room was endlessly quiet, but the inside of Lee Jihye was chaotic. Calming the swirling emotions, Lee Jihye bit her lip tightly and asked.

「"The price of that conclusion?"」

Snowfield Kim Dokja looked down at the empty teacup she had set down. Stories swirled atop the teacup, soon forming a miniature landscape.

Lee Jihye looked down at that landscape as well. The characters of the 41st round. The world they lived in was there.

「A world different from the landscape she knew.」

And now, she was seeing the vivid landscape that had been reflected inside that teacup right before her eyes.

【Come at me. Prove your stories.】

Watching the bombardment of the Ghost Fleet pouring down, Lee Jihye swung her Twin Dragon Swords. As if confronting the landscape before her eyes, she too swung her swords to protect her own landscape.

On the front line of the landscape she knew, Yoo Joonghyuk was always there.

There was Han Sooyoung always pointing her finger at him, Jung Heewon shaking her head while watching them, and Lee Hyunsung wearing a faint smile. There was Yoo Sangah giving gentle advice, and Lee Seolhwa always anxious that her companions might get hurt. Lowering her gaze slightly, Lee Gilyoung and Shin Yoosung could be seen bickering as well.

People who could be called peculiar if peculiar, strange if strange, and ordinary if ordinary. Lee Jihye was together with them.

Now, it was all a story like a lie.

「She had definitely lived inside that sweet lie created by Kim Dokja.」

And now, before her eyes was another lie of Kim Dokja. The characters of the 41st round. The three people standing while supporting each other against the disaster trying to destroy their world. Perhaps Lee Jihye resented Kim Dokja a little.

【Why did ahjussi have to continue the story.】

As if asking Kim Dokja, she questioned the landscape before her eyes.

【Why—】

The answer returned with sharp blades. The history they had lived was answering her.

[Story, 'Butcher of Madness' continues its storytelling!]

Those were 'different answers' to the stories she had experienced.

[Story, 'Survivor of Chungmuro' continues its storytelling!]

Another possibility that all the history they had lived could have reached.

[Story, 'Savior of Murim' continues its storytelling!]

Therefore, in truth, she knew without needing to hear an answer.

「Kim Dokja is a being who loved stories more than anyone in this universe.」

That god, who could not favor merely a single story because he loved all stories, must have ultimately cherished the characters of all other worldlines—the 'Lee Jihye' and 'Jung Heewon' of this world as well.

"Unnie! Run!"

As the 41st round's Lee Jihye poured out bombardment, Lee Jihye's defense wavered for a moment. Not missing that gap, Jung Heewon penetrated her distance.

「That blade is the proof that Kim Dokja loved this world.」

Where on earth did such power still remain? Parrying Jung Heewon's sword that exploded heavily, Lee Jihye thought of Kim Dokja once again.

「He was a person who lived to see the conclusion of the story he loved.」

During the '73rd Demon King', and when 'The Nameless Mist' appeared in the Demon Realm. Each time, Kim Dokja sacrificed himself to continue the stories.

Within her vision undulating as if drunk, Lee Jihye felt for the first time that she might understand the Kim Dokja of back then.

「"Lee Jihye! Remember who you were!"」

An ancient story surged, and a stage wavered beside her. The figure of Kim Dokja holding a white flag beside her, desperately trying to persuade the '999th round's Lee Jihye', was drawn like a hallucination.

「"Do not destroy this 'worldline'! This place is the same as the world you lived in! Yoo Joonghyuk is here, Lee Hyunsung is here, and Lee Jihye is here!"」

Those words from back then now returned to her of today.

【I know too, ahjussi.】

She was no longer the 'Wounded Sword Demon' alone. The seventeen-year-old girl who embraced only her own wounds and looked at the world through the cracks of those wounds was gone now.

「She had now reached the age where she could understand Kim Dokja.」

The Wounded Sword Demon had now become a person who could read other people's wounds beyond her own.

「It was thanks to the story he gave.」

Because of that, because she understood such a Kim Dokja, Lee Jihye—

「Felt for the first time that at the end of this story, the time had come to let him go.」

A new 'stage' was unfolding atop the stage of 'Ragnarok'. A thick scent of the sea. The 'stage' where <Kim Dokja Company> had confronted the disaster of the 999th round.

【Good, keep going.】

Under Jung Heewon's sword strikes driving in desperately, wounds were increasing on Lee Jihye's entire body as well before she knew it. How did the end of this story go? A story she had reminisced hundreds, thousands of times. A story she had reread several times in the version written by Han Sooyoung.

Yet why was it, strangely, at this moment, Lee Jihye could not remember the conclusion of this 'stage' very well. What happened to her 999th round self? Was it because the tea Snowfield Kim Dokja gave was too bitter, or because she lost a portion of her stories while crossing over to this worldline? The memory would not easily surface.

Lee Jihye saw Jung Heewon's sword flying toward her. A story shining purely, attained through earnest, repeated training. If she met her end by being struck by such a desperate sword, that too wouldn't be bad.

「And all stories move along the blank spaces.」

And so, the moment the blade of the realized stage was about to reach her heart.

"Do it properly."

Jung Heewon, who had stopped her sword, growled.

[Incarnation 'Jung Heewon' rejects the blessing of 'Stage Transformation'!]

Astonishingly, the blessing of the 'stage' was vanishing from Jung Heewon's entire body.

"I don't need a 'stage' like this."

As if casting away the role clinging to her, Jung Heewon shouted.

"Just as you said, my world is for me to prove. Even if I fail, even if I'm broken, even if the conclusion is already decided—this is 'my story'."

Blankly, Lee Jihye stared at that Jung Heewon.

「Perhaps what is needed to confront a god is not a grandiose story.」

She didn't want to admit it. Yet this time, she had no choice but to admit it.

「Over the 41st round's Jung Heewon swinging her sword, the figure of Kim Dokja overlapped.」

This world had the qualification to receive Kim Dokja's choice. At the center of the pitch-black night sky, several stars twinkled. Even amidst the ruins, stars that had not given up on the story were watching this story.

「This was the reason Kim Dokja could fight the masters of those great mythologies.」

This world loves a protagonist who struggles while betting their everything. Starlight granted to the 'protagonist' who ultimately does not give up on the story even amidst scheduled destruction.

【Right.】

Why does this world show hope only at the moment one lays down the answer?

【Now I can see it too.】

Watching the incoming sword strike, Lee Jihye,

「Only now could she finally see the disappeared Kim Dokja.」

Everywhere in the scenarios was the Kim Dokja she had liked. In Jung Heewon's sword, in the shouts of the 41st round's Shin Yoosung and Lee Jihye, in Lee Hyunsung's hands, in the cries of the writhing World Serpent, in the handful of starlight still illuminating this night sky—Kim Dokja was in all of them.

Oooooooo!

As if reacting to the stories of the two people, the World Serpent burst into a roar.

[Instant Kill].

As if drawing the final stroke of the story, Lee Jihye drew her sword. Embedding all her stories, she swung her sword as if making this world remember her. That was Lee Jihye's own story. Neither a Giant Story nor anything else, but merely the total sum of the history lived by the human 'Lee Jihye'.

Toward that Lee Jihye, Jung Heewon swung her sword as well.

「The 41st round and the 1,864th round collided.」

In the extreme split-second, the sound of worlds overlapping was heard.

「Thus, only a single incarnation with an unyielding will shall obtain the sword that will change fate.」

That was a story that did not exist in the original 'Ragnarok'. A shred of blessing toward an incarnation who confronted a god purely with the power of a human.

[Item, 'Mikazuki Munechika' gains a new possibility!]

An item that had been an A-grade replica. The sword of Jung Heewon, which had severed incarnations, severed monsters, and even severed stars, was blooming upon receiving Jung Heewon's stories. The symbol of a story holding starlight—a Star Relic (星遺物).

[Star Relic, 'Sword That Protects the Epilogue' has been born!]

Jung Heewon gripped her new sword with both hands and slashed horizontally.

[Exclusive skill, 'Time of Judgment' has been activated.]

As the skill possessed solely by Jung Heewon in this world radiated light.

[A single star has consented to the activation of 'Time of Judgment'.]

A single star assisted that probability.

'Uriel.'

Lee Jihye saw the archangel wings sprouting from Jung Heewon's shoulder blades.

'You were reading all along as well.'

Lee Jihye saw the sword flying toward her. [Instant Kill] was fast, but Jung Heewon's sword was a bit faster. Lee Jihye slowly blinked her eyes.

「I'm dying.」

Yet the moment Jung Heewon's sword was about to penetrate her heart, the sword tip abruptly bent its trajectory. The tip aiming for her heart accurately struck Lee Jihye's sword hilt.

Pachichit!

And almost at the same time, Lee Jihye's [Instant Kill] grazed past Jung Heewon's forearm.

【Ah.】

Lee Jihye watched her Twin Dragon Swords flying away emptily. A truly perfect sword path. Even without using Giant Stories or the power of an Outer God—

「The Jung Heewon before her eyes had surpassed her, who had seen the conclusion twice, purely with swordsmanship alone.」

Still scattering transcendental energy waves, Jung Heewon was catching her breath as if about to collapse, oblivious to the stories pouring from her entire body.

"Heewon unnie!"

Subsequently, the 41st round's Shin Yoosung appearing from somewhere grabbed Jung Heewon's hand. As if agreed upon, the two mounted the 3rd-grade monster species 'Wyvern King' and soared into the sky above.

Their objective was clear. They were soaring toward the 'World Serpent'. Unable to chase after that Jung Heewon, Lee Jihye blankly looked up. Then, something suddenly came to mind.

Kugugugugu.

The stories of 'Ragnarok' were churning. Lee Jihye looked at the droplets of Jung Heewon's blood smeared on the back of her hand. In those blood droplets, a story she knew well was contained.

「Thor's story.」

Why was it? The story of the dead Thor was seeping out from Jung Heewon's stories. Suddenly, the lore of 'Ragnarok' flashed through Lee Jihye's mind.

「In the end, the 'World Serpent' will be killed by 'Thor'.」

The moment Lee Jihye, rising while staggering, was about to take flight into the air again.

【Jihye-ya.】

Lee Hyunsung, appearing from behind, held her shoulder.

【Let go, ahjussi.】

【Trust in Heewon-ssi.】

To trust someone. Hearing those sweet yet anxious words, Lee Jihye felt her resolve weakening continuously.

【Even the Heewon-ssi we do not know is still Heewon-ssi.】

Raising her head once more, Lee Jihye looked up at the two people vanishing toward the World Serpent. A story nearing its conclusion mobilizes all its capabilities to realize that epilogue. Gazing at the scenery flowing toward an unstoppable conclusion, Lee Jihye imagined once more that 'Kim Dokja's lie' she had so longed to see.

「She already knows the end of this story.」

Was Kim Dokja still reading this story?

【Ahjussi, I did my best.】

Now, that was the only thing to lean on. That he would still be reading this story. So that at the end of this stage radiant with tragedy—

【Yes, Dokja-ssi will know as well.】

Still, hoping an epilogue they had not yet read remained.

[The final stars of the <Star Stream> begin their storytelling.]

The eastern sky could be seen brightening brilliantly as if the sun were rising. Both Lee Hyunsung and Lee Jihye looked at that sky. Stars shining as if filling the empty darkness. The starlight pouring here and there looked like endlessly falling snow. The final stage of this story illuminated by that starlight.

「In a place far away, a snowfield was opening.」

1068 Episode 67. The World Serpent (6)

Jung Heewon looked up at the endless sky road. Even with the acceleration of the 'Wyvern King' moving at sonic speed, the head of the World Serpent was still nowhere in sight.

"Unnie, are you alright?"

At Shin Yoosung's worried inquiry, Jung Heewon forced herself to nod.

"I'm fine."

She was not fine. Jung Heewon was well aware of her own condition.

「She had fought by exploding all of her stories.」

In Jung Heewon's pupils where the Ring of Chaos had surfaced, a strange light was gleaming. This was the secret art of [Breaking the Sky Swordsmanship] she had created.

「Mad Sky (狂天)」

It was a technique that drew out energy several times her inherent potential by condensing and exploding all her stories in a single instant. The story veins throughout her entire body were shattered, and the overflowing stories were eating away at her life in real-time. Currently, she was somehow maintaining consciousness by sustaining the explosive flow of stories, but it would not be for very long.

「Once this flow of stories was cut, she would die or become a cripple.」

It was a technique she had saved all along to use in the final decisive battle, but to face the 1,864th round's Lee Jihye, there was no other choice. The pain of her flesh burning from the fiery stories. If the attribute effect of 'Butcher of Madness' had not attenuated the pain, Jung Heewon would have lost her senses long ago. Even now, stories that had broken free from her story veins were running wild throughout her entire body in real-time.

Yet what frustrated her more than such pain was that even after using her cherished [Mad Sky], she could not achieve a particularly satisfying match.

—You know, right? If that kid had gone all out, you wouldn't have won.

A voice echoing in her mind as if waiting. It was the voice of the 1,864th round's Jung Heewon.

'I know.'

Jung Heewon recalled the 1,864th round's Lee Jihye. Strong and dazzling stories. Swordsmanship that reached its pinnacle by completing two endings. If Lee Jihye had used even a portion of her 'Giant Story', the one who lost would have been this side. Lee Jihye was that strong, and Jung Heewon had no choice but to acknowledge their stories.

「They lived a history that could not be broken by anything.」

Paradoxically, because she had endured such history, Lee Jihye could not kill Jung Heewon. For beautiful and powerful stories hold equally noble convictions.

'I didn't want to receive something like sympathy.'

—It's not sympathy. Jihye merely acknowledged your story.

Acknowledgment handed over from an entirely different worldline. It was a difficult emotion, but Jung Heewon also faintly sensed what kind of feeling that was. Because at the final moment of collision, Jung Heewon too had caught the shadow of a familiar man in Lee Jihye's stories.

The man she had so desperately wanted to protect. The story of that man existed in the stories of the other worldline as well.

「That was why Jung Heewon could not cut down Lee Jihye.」

Even while knowing Lee Jihye was a disaster who had come to destroy this world, even while knowing well that if she did not strike her down this worldline could perish, in the end, she could not cut her down.

"Over there!"

Along with Shin Yoosung's shout, the summit of the World Serpent was visible in the distance. Above the dizzying night sky, the enormous, translucent head of the World Serpent hung suspended. The World Serpent was in a deep slumber as if hypnotized. And atop that head, a young man and woman were seated. They too kept their eyes closed as if communing with the World Serpent.

Dismounting from the 'Wyvern King', Jung Heewon looked up at the World Serpent.

「Is that truly the 'Great Disaster'?」

It felt strange. Despite being an overwhelmingly scaled disaster, they did not feel like a disaster at all. Perhaps it was because of the stories of the 1,864th round she had encountered earlier.

Drawing in light breaths repeatedly, Jung Heewon gripped her sword hilt. It was something that had to be done. No matter who they were, it didn't matter. Even if she could not cut down the 1,864th round's Lee Jihye, she could not simply pass by this 'World Serpent' all the same.

[Story, 'Courage of the Thunder of Thursday' begins its storytelling!]

The relic received from Odin before coming here shone brightly in her bosom.

「[It will be of help in confronting the disaster.]」

Thor's story. The blessing of the Constellation who had perished together while confronting that World Serpent was with her. Yet strangely, Thor's story did not embolden her. Rather, at the moment she faced the World Serpent, what came to her mind was Lee Jihye's voice.

「【Right, now I can see it too.】」

Jung Heewon did not know what the landscape she claimed to have seen was. Even so, at that moment, Jung Heewon was undoubtedly connected to another worldline for an instant. A tragedy that did not guarantee a conclusion. The moment two worldlines standing at the forefront of different tragedies met, Jung Heewon suddenly arrived before a certain question.

「Why do 'stories' exist in this world, and what are we searching for at the end of this empty tragedy?」

A question faced by the stars standing before their own ■■. She too stood here right now to answer that question.

It was then that a portion of the pitch-black sky rippled.

【Hmph, you have already reached this far? Dealing with the 'Monarch of the Great Sea' couldn't have been easy...】

Demonic qi blanketing the sky. Jung Heewon knew who he was. He was one of this world's Great Recorders.

【Surprisingly, it seems things might truly go according to that person's thoughts.】

Confirming that presence, the 1,864th round's Jung Heewon muttered as if grinding her teeth.

—Asmodeus.

Judging by his tone, he had no intention of stepping aside obediently.

「The 'Demon King of the Cinema' had sided with 'Snow White'.」

From this side's perspective, it was unwelcome news. Just facing the 'World Serpent' alone was daunting, yet a Great Recorder had turned into an enemy as well.

"Unnie, I—"

"Step back."

He was not an opponent the 41st round's Shin Yoosung could contend with. Therefore, she had to do it. While even a shred of [Mad Sky]'s effect remained, even if she had to melt this entire body, she had to kill that Recorder and slay the World Serpent.

Yet at that moment.

—I have a favor.

The 1,864th round's Jung Heewon spoke.

—Save those children.

Save the children? Reflexively, Jung Heewon looked up at the head of the World Serpent. There were still a young man and woman communing with the 'World Serpent'. She could tell instinctively. The 'children' she spoke of were them.

[Giant Story, 'Ragnarok' continues its storytelling!]

Blessed by the Giant Story, the serpent's head shone brilliantly.

[Great Disaster, 'World Serpent' prepares 'Planet Shattering'!]

Planet Shattering. If that serpent was left as it was, what would happen was self-evident. Yet her other self, even after seeing such a catastrophe, was saying strange words.

—With who you are now, you can do it.

Without hearing any explanation, the moment Jung Heewon heard those words, she realized what her 1,864th round self wanted from her.

「Across all these rounds, the realm reached solely by the Jung Heewon of the 41st round.」

Intent-Formed Sword (意形劍).

「The essence of the Intent-Formed Sword is the power to sever given fate.」

In short, the 1,864th round's Jung Heewon was pleading with her right now.

—Sever those children's [Fate].

As the power of [Intent-Formed Sword] dwelled in her hands, the trajectory of [Fate] became visible to Jung Heewon's eyes as well. Endlessly dense records engraved. She could see 'Asmodeus' who oversaw those records, and the context of the Giant Story wrapping around him.

'I cannot use [Intent-Formed Sword] right now. This power is—'

The [Intent-Formed Sword] that severs [Fate] cannot be used recklessly. This power had another place where it must be used. Even so, the 1,864th round's Jung Heewon was earnest.

—Please.

After a brief pause, Jung Heewon asked.

'Did you teach me [Intent-Formed Sword] from the beginning just to ask me this?'

—Yes, that's right.

Jung Heewon let out a soft breath. Repaying what was received. That was her iron rule.

'But I can't face the Recorder while using [Intent-Formed Sword].'

—Don't worry about that.

And the next moment, Jung Heewon felt a pain as if her entire back were being torn off. Even with the attribute of 'Butcher of Madness' active, an indescribable agony set in. A sensation as if another life were pupating from within her. And the next moment, along with a sound like tearing film, something surged out from her. Emitting an endlessly dazzling brilliance, it floated up and soon stood by Jung Heewon's side.

【Ho-oh.】

There stood another Jung Heewon, looking identical to Jung Heewon herself.

「She is the Jung Heewon of the 1,864th round.」

The 'Judge of Destruction' who had chosen another path of judgment from her.

【A remarkable authority. An 'artificial body' made purely of stories.】

Asmodeus's eyes glinted white.

【But do you think you can face me with such a toy?】

【Go. Save the children.】

The moment the 1,864th round's Jung Heewon unleashed her status, Jung Heewon also kicked off the ground.

Oooooooo!

As if trying to block her approach, the World Serpent let out a rough roar. But just like when she first confronted the serpent, no malice toward her could be felt from the serpent.

「The heart that did not want to harm.」

Clearly, this serpent and those 'children' had no intention of being hostile toward her.

「Shin Yoosung, we have to.」

「We can't.」

Children's voices heard hummingly.

「We have to do this. That way... he will return! ...Otherwise—」

Hearing that voice, Jung Heewon gripped the 'Sword That Protects the Epilogue' with both hands. Atop that blade, Jung Heewon's [Intent-Formed Sword] dwelled.

「Sever 'Fate'.」

She had no confidence. The skein of [Fate] surrounding them was so thick and dense that even daring to bring a blade close felt as if it would not be permitted.

[Giant Story, 'Ragnarok' glares at you.]

As if noticing her will, the Giant Story reacted to her. A single world was looking down upon her. As if questioning how a mere thing like her could dare interfere with this stage, the records of the story seized the stage.

「Thus 'Thor' and the 'World Serpent' met.」

An ordinary incarnation would have been dominated by those records and sacrificed themselves to realize the story. But Jung Heewon, who had used [Mad Sky], could temporarily defy the domination of the Giant Story.

「Just as no story can be heard by the ears of a madman.」

Her body, reaching its limit, wavered as if about to shatter. The remaining time of [Mad Sky] was now less than a single minute. The opportunity would probably be only once.

「Can a single human resist fate?」

The Transcendent who had first created the Intent-Formed Sword had posed such a question.

「This is the answer of a human confronting the story called 'Fate'.」

The moment the World Serpent roared, Jung Heewon's [Intent-Formed Sword] moved.

---

I gazed for a moment at the starlight twinkling in the distant sky. Probably around now, the final showdown with the 'World Serpent' was taking place.

Beside me, the Mass Production Maker, watching the same landscape together, spoke.

[You made an unexpected decision. I thought you would go yourself.]

"What happened to Lee Jihye and Shin Yoosung?"

[Transported via battleship. But those children alone won't be enough, will they?]

I was the one who deployed the 41st round's Lee Jihye and Shin Yoosung to that battlefield. Naturally, it was to see even a little effect of the 'stage'.

"It will be fine. I sent dependable reinforcements as well."

Just before using [Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint], I had asked the Third Kim Dokja to convey a short message to '1,864th round Lee Hyunsung'. Probably by now, he had also arrived at that battlefield. If it was him, I could trust him. And if Lee Hyunsung stepped forward, the 1,864th round's Jung Heewon wouldn't stay still either.

Somehow it had turned into a family feud among <Kim Dokja Company>, but even so, that was the best option right now. Because the only ones who could stop monsters like <Kim Dokja Company> was <Kim Dokja Company> themselves.

[Do you think the Mad Sword Emperor can stand against a Great Disaster?]

"The current Heewon-ssi will be able to."

The 41st round's Jung Heewon was the person with the most outstanding talent among the 'Jung Heewons' I knew. If it was her, who had lived a history different from other rounds, she might truly be able to accomplish something no one else could on that battlefield. Right now, there was nothing I could do other than believe so.

[They are coming.]

Along with the Handsome Monkey King's true voice, a colossal wave of disaster began to surge from the front. The wave of disaster approaching right before our eyes was utterly catastrophic.

「No great star would dare block the front of that army.」

As if leading them, extinguishing all nearby Constellations, a Great Disaster was approaching.

【O o o o o o o o o o o o o o】

It was the anomalous form of Emperor. And behind him, I saw my brother walking forward.

「It felt as if a pure white snowfield that would erase everything was sweeping toward this place.」

Along the path where my brother walked, the stars he broke turned to ash and fluttered like snow.

「Whoever saw that landscape could not take their eyes off that existence.」

The closer my brother got, the louder my heartbeat pounded. Clearly, I had lived my best to reach this place. I thought I had grown strong enough to contend with any Myth-grade Constellation.

Yet the moment I saw the figure of my brother walking atop the pure white snowfield over there right now, a bizarre sensation came over me. Because right now, the brother over there truly—

「Looked like the 'Oldest Dream' of this story.」

Overwhelmed by that landscape, the Mass Production Maker asked once more.

[Do you really believe you can win?]

To say it again, the me of the past would not have been able to answer that question. No matter what stories I built, no matter what hardships I overcame to reach this place, I wouldn't have been able to guarantee that I could dare confront such an existence and emerge victorious.

"Yes."

Yet even so, I answered like that. It was neither an answer to overcome tension, nor stubbornness to drive away despair. Even after facing the true body of such an overwhelming brother, my heart was strangely peaceful.

"I can win."

Perhaps that was.

[You have collected almost all of the 'Losses' scattered across this world.]

Proof that I too, at least in terms of 'status', had reached the same eye-level as my brother.

[Story, 'Successor of the Eternal Name' roars toward the battlefield!]

Subsequently, the stars illuminating us in the firmament became visible. Constellations illuminating the battlefield while radiating blindingly bright light. The Constellations of the Round Table, who had been hiding somewhere on this battlefield, were finally shining upon the final chapter of this story.

「Thus, all the stars in the universe gazed upon a single battlefield.」

Now, it was time to record the final chapter of this world.

Author's Note

Hello, this is Sing Shong.

Before we knew it, the side story has reached chapter 516.

At this point where really only the final chapter and epilogue remain, deeply apologetically, we will be entering a temporary hiatus.

The final chapter and the stories after it have already been decided, and we have sprinted until now for that conclusion, but as it is the final episode across all of Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint, our desire to inspect every story from beginning to end and meet readers with sufficient completeness came first.

We only have gratitude for everyone who stayed with this lacking author. Especially while writing the side story, very difficult personal circumstances overlapped, causing many moments of wavering throughout writing. The reason we were able to not give up on the story was because there were readers who loved this story.

The hiatus is scheduled to last about two months, and if we return sooner, we will make an announcement in advance.

We will do our best until the very end. Thank you as always for loving Omniscient Reader's Viewpoint.
